Tokyo, Thursday, Dec. 20 (AP)—Robert Cochrane, of the Baltimore Sun, was elected president of the Foreign Correspondents Club today. He succeeds Howard Handleman, of the International News Service, who was temporary president.

Other officers elected: Frank Robertson, INS, first vice president; Morrie Landsberg, Associated Press, second vice president; Guthrie Janssen, NBC, secretary, and Ralph Teatsorth, United Press, treasurer.

May Bar Some Politicians

TOKYO, Dec. 19 (AP).—Allied officials will set the date of Japan's next election after they have taken all possible precautions to insure its fairness—possibly even declaring the more notorious of old-line Japanese politicians ineligible for office—authoritative American sources declared today.

Japanese sources said the cabinet of Premier Kijuro Shidehara decided today upon Jan. 22 as the election date, but Allied headquarters ordered the announcement withheld pending its final approval. It must be approved not only by headquarters here but by Washington, American officials explained.

Yank's Beating Described

Yokohama, Dec. 19 (AP)—Japanese guards invaded a prison camp hospital to administer a fatal beating to an American prisoner of war, a United States military commission trying the first war-criminal case in Japan—that of Guard Tatsuo Tsuchiya—was told today.

Pfc. Robert Gordon Teas, of Streator, Ill., had been accused by his captors of taking American Red Cross supplies which the Japanese had hidden in the Mitsushima camp, said a deposition from Pfc. Charles B. Gavord, of Deming, New Mexico.

Gavord's testimony was read at the trial of Tsuchiya, charged with implication in the murder of Teas, who was captured on Bataan in April, 1942.

Used Canes, He Said

"Sergeant Mushmouth (another of the more than 300 Japanese underlings who will stand trial) and "Little Glass Eye" (as Tsuchiya was known) took Teas into the open yard, threw water on him and beat him with hardwood canes shaped like swords," Gavord testified.

"Then they put him in the guard house. But each day they took him out and beat him some more. The day before he died, they put him in the hospital and I personally saw these same Japs beat him just before he died."

Gavord fixed the date of the incident as in March, 1943, one of the coldest months in Japan.

Another Deposition Read

A deposition by First Sergeant Clifton Otto Snodgrass, of Junction City, Kan., said one beating given Teas by Tsuchiya and another guard, whom the prisoners called "Rivet Tooth," lasted 45 minutes.

"They took a rope about an inch thick, which they doubled several times, and beat Teas around the face and head—and each time he fell down they made him get up again," Snodgrass testified. "When Teas was too weak to stand up, they picked him up and continued the beating for 30 minutes."

Defense Counsel Overruled

Lieut. Col. John Dickinson, of St. Petersburg, Fla., defense counsel, earlier had protested against the admission of the depositions, but he was over-ruled by the commission.

"An enemy belligerent," said the commission, "is without the protection of constitutional guarantees and the Articles of War do not apply to a commission such as this."

The trial dragged along in its second day because of the necessity of translating each sentence of testimony for Tsuchiya, who sat blankfaced through the proceedings.

JAP REPATRIATES HAD $46,000

Yokohama, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—Japanese repatriates returning recently from the United States brought with them $46,000—a headache for the Army finance officer, Col. Joseph C. Kovarik of Chattanooga, Tenn.

The Colonel had to set up an impromptu water-front bank to exchange their currency and checks into yen. They had drawn $19 a month in America for work as internees.

Homma Trial To Get Affidavit By Wainwright

General to Tell of Bataan Death March; Japanese to Conduct Case in English

MANILA, Dec. 19 (AP).—The man who won't be there is likely to be the most damaging witness against Lieutenant General Masaharu Homma when the former commander of Japanese forces in the Philippines goes on trial charged with responsibility for atrocities involving the deaths of 67,000 American and Filipino prisoners of war.

General Homma, who pleaded not guilty at his arraignment here today, heard the date of his war-crime trial set for Jan. 3. He also heard that General Jonothan M. Wainwright, who was forced to surrender to him after a heroic but hopeless defense of Bataan and Corregidor, would be—by deposition—one of the prosecution's chief witnesses on the death march of Bataan and other barbarities.

[At Dallas General Wainwright said he was "relieved" to know he would not have to go to the Philippines to testify in person, but added: "I can give definite evidence to show that General Homma, as commander of all Japanese forces in the Philippines, was most certainly responsible for the atrocities of Bataan. General Homma has said that he didn't know anything about the death march and the sadistic actions of his troops in dealing with captives. As commander in chief of the Philippines, it was his business to know and he is directly responsible for the actions of his men."]

Lieutenant Colonel Frank E. Meek, chief prosecutor in the Homma case, said the death march of Bataan would dominate testimony at the trial and that he expected presentation of the prosecution's evidence would require ten days.

General Homma appeared for arraignment in a shabby gray civilian suit. He addressed the military commission in fluent English and agreed to dispense with translation of the proceedings into Japanese. Nevertheless, an Oxford-educated Japanese was assigned to him as personal interpreter.

Homma Accusers Are To Include Wainwright

Manila, Dec. 19 (AP)—Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright, by deposition, will be one of the principal witnesses at the war-crimes trial of Lieut. Gen. Masa Haru Homma, to whom he was forced to surrender, but to whom he never bowed even as a captive.

Wainwright's deposition will be one of the principal documents submitted to the military commission which on January 3 will try Homma on charges including responsibility for the Bataan Death March, Lieut. Col. Frank E. Meek, the chief prosecutor, said today.

Arraigned In Mansion

A fidgety Homma was returned in disgrace today to the palatial residence from which in 1942 he had watched Corregidor captives forced to march in humiliation. There, where he once lived as a conqueror, he pleaded innocent at his arraignment on charges of responsibility for the Death March and for 67,000 deaths among American and Filipino prisoners of war, internees and civilians.

Maj. Gen. Leo B. Donovan, president of the military trial commission, ordered Homma to report for trial January 3, despite his counsel's protests that at least a month was needed to prepare his defense.

Baltimorean Aids Defense

Defense counsel includes Major John H. Skeen, Jr., of Baltimore.

Meek said he hoped to complete prosecution testimony in ten days, although he plans "to introduce all the live witnesses we can get." One defense contention for delay, supported by Meek, was that many witnesses are in Japan, Korea and China.

Donovan, who will preside, was a member of the five-general commission which two weeks ago convicted Lieut. Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita of condoning wholesale atrocities by his troops in the Philippines and sentenced him to be hanged. Yamashita has two appeals pending, one before the United States Supreme Court and the other before General MacArthur.

General Valdes On Commission

Maj. Gen. Basilio J. Valdés, chief of staff of the Philippine Army during the war, who testified at the Yamashita trial that Japanese murdered his brother and nephew and tried to rape his niece, also is a member of the trial commission.

There were many familiar faces in the courtroom at Homma's arraignment, including all members of the Yamashita prosecution and defense staffs still in Manila.

After the arraignment, Meek said that Homma left the Philippines on August 15, 1942, in disgrace because Wainwright's strong defense of Bataan and Corregidor consumed so much time and so many of Homma's men that Japan's southward push was thrown out of gear.

He said Homma's knowledge that he had won a hollow victory doubtless influenced his attitude toward his captives. The General never again held an important command. Relieved here, he became head of the Philippines' Japan Society briefly and in 1944 was the Osaka garrison commander.

Wainwright Holds Homma Responsible

Dallas, Dec. 19 (AP)—Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright said here today he "can give definite evidence to show that Gen. Massa Haru Homma was most certainly responsible for the atrocities of Bataan."

Wainwright, by deposition, will be one of the principal witnesses at Homma's war crimes trial.

Wainwright said he was "relieved" that he will be permitted to testify by deposition and not be required to return to the Philippines.

He said in an interview:

"I can give definite evidence to show that General Homma, as commander of all Japanese forces in the Philippines, was most certainly responsible for the atrocities of Bataan.

"Was His Business To Know"

"General Homma said that he didn't know anything about the Death March and the sadistic actions of his troops in dealing with captives. As commander in chief in the Philippines, it was his business to know and he is directly responsible for the actions of his men."

Wainwright said he may have to cut his Texas visit short and return to Washington to make the deposition.

Marshall Calls On Osmena

Manila, Dec. 19 (AP)—General Marshall, visiting Manila en route to China, paid a courtesy call on President Sergio Osmena today at Maclacanan Palace but returned early to his own quarters. He will leave for Shanghai aboard a C-54 transport plane tomorrow morning. He made no statement to the press.

New Philippine Chief of Staff

MANILA, Dec. 19 (AP)—President Sergio Osmena today appointed Brig. Gen. Rafael Jalandoni to be Chief of Staff of the Philippine Army, succeeding Maj. Gen. Basilio J. Valdes, now serving on the military commission trying Japanese Lieut. Gen. Masaharu Homma on war crimes charges.

Half Of Pacific Veterans To Be Back By Christmas

Pearl Harbor, Dec. 19 (AP)—About half of all service men in the Pacific when Japan surrendered will have returned to the United States by Christmas, the Navy announced today.

Replacements, however, will leave a service total in the Pacific areas of more than half the 3,500,000 soldiers, sailors and Marines who were here and points west on V-J day.

Rear Admiral Henry S. Kendall's Pacific transport fleet is engaged in a "C-Day" operation in which about 90,000 veterans will be delivered to the West Coast of the United States by Christmas Day.

Navy Surplus In Hawaii

Pearl Harbor, Dec. 19 (AP)—Navy property in the 14th Naval District, valued at $7,283,000, has been declared surplus, Vice Admiral S. A. Taffiner, commandant of the district, said today.

U.S. Sailors In Riot; Brazilians Say They Molested Girls

Rio de Janeiro, Dec. 19 (AP)—American sailors were ordered to remain aboard the United States cruiser Little Rock at Santos today as police investigated clashes between about 350 seamen and angry Brazilians last night at Sao Paulo, 60 miles northwest of Santos.

United States Consul Roland Welch said the sailors left Sao Paulo by special trains and busses under guard of police, who said the rioting began when some of the celebrating seamen were accused of annoying Brazilian women in the streets.

Fire Hose Used

Six Brazilians and several navy men were injured in the fighting, in which firemen brought hose into play to hold back the crowds.

Describing the beginning of the riot, dispatches from Sao Paulo said that some of the sailors apparently had been drinking and began lifting the skirts of young women waiting in line for a bus.

Angry Brazilians charged the sailors, the reports said.

Smiles Disappear Suddenly

The Sao Paulo dispatches said that other sailors emerging from a movie were met by crowds whistling in anger. The seamen took the whistling as a friendly gesture and responded with smiles, but soon learned their mistake when citizens rushed to slap their faces.

The Sao Paulo disturbances were the first reported in several stops at Brazilian ports by the U.S.S. Little Rock, which is making a good-will tour of South America.

Australia Invites G. Is

CANBERRA, Australia, Dec. 19 (AP).—American war veterans who served in the Southwest Pacific are being encouraged by the Australian government to settle in this country, Minister for Immigration Arthur Calwell said today.

Truman Urges Full Unity Of Armed Forces

Presents Detailed Message To Congress — Vinson Comments Caustically.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19. (AP)—President Truman, the constitutional commander-in-chief, laid out a course for complete unification of the Army and Navy today to a divided Congress and wrangling service chiefs.

He told them, in a detailed message to the Congress, that "further studies of the general problem would serve no useful purpose. There is enough evidence now."

Bitterest comment came from Rep. Vinson (D Ga), chairman of the House Naval Committee. It would "sink the Navy," Vinson's statement said; it "smacks of the Germany of the Kaiser and of Hitler; of Japanese militarism." "I am shocked."

What the President recommended was largely what the Army has favored and the Navy has opposed:

Single Defense Department

A single "department of national defense" headed by one cabinet member in place of the present War and Navy Departments;

An equal footing in this department for the Army, the Navy and an air force, with a civilian assistant secretary for each;

A single chief of staff to be the top military commander of all three branches of the service, with individual military commanders of the Army, Navy and Air Forces;

Broad discretion for the President and the new defense secretary to set up such coordinated bureaus for the three services as they see fit.

Clerks read the long-awaited message in the Senate and House at noon and congressmen who commented to reporters indicated there would be no rush to give the President the bill he wants. Those who had favored the merger applauded; those who had opposed it gave no evidence of changing their views. Chairman Manasco (D-Ala) of the House expenditures committee said his group would start hearings next month and that he has "an open mind." The Senate military committee has been studying the matter for some time.

Department Orders Issued

At the Navy department, orders were issued immediately directing Navy and Marine officers "to refrain from opposition" to the President's stand "in their public utterances, except that when called as witnesses before committees of Congress they will, of course, give frankly and freely their views."

Secretary of the Navy Forrestal has been expected, for some time, to resign soon. Whether the White House pronouncement now would hasten this development was not apparent immediately.

Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, recently named chief of naval operations, originally favored unification but later reversed his stand. But Mr. Truman, when he announced the appointments of Nimitz and General Dwight D. Eisenhower as Army chief of staff, told a news conference he expected the two would be found in the same boat when he finally said his say.

The President wrote that "of course the Marine Corps should be considered as an integral part of the Navy."

He also recommended that "the Navy should, of course, retain its own carrier-, ship-, and water-based aviation." But it was noticed immediately that he did not specify the Navy's extensive land-based air activities in this connection. Official Army Air Forces spokesmen have indicated they believe that any separate air force setup should include all land-based aviation.

Unity of Command

Without specific reference to the current Pearl Harbor investigation, the President noted that merging the armed forces would provide "unity of command in outlying bases." He said that "all military authority at each base "should be placed under a single commander who will have clear responsibility for security, who can be held clearly accountable, and whose orders come from a single authority in Washington."

Eight additional arguments were advanced by Mr. Truman for his plan:

1. It would make for coordinated strategic planning and budgeting;

2. Economies would be achieved in supply and other functions;

3. "Inter - service differences" would be minimized and the armed forces would be better coordinated with the rest of the government;

4. "Civilian control of the military establishment" would be strengthened "if the President and the Congress had but one cabinet member" to deal with;

5. It would "provide parity for air power." Mr. Truman held that this could not be done with the present two departments, and that to do it through a third department for air "would complicate tremendously every problem of coordination that now exists;"

6. It would best coordinate training for combined land, sea and air operations. The President said that combined operations in the Pacific in the recent war, despite their success, "proved that there is not adequate understanding among the officers and men of any service of the capabilities, the uses, the procedures, aand the limitations of the other services;"

7. It would use "our limited resources for scientific research" to the best advantage;

8. It would remove "highly undesirable" differences between Army and Navy personnel policies. The President cited differing Army and Navy policies on promotions, discharges, awards and officer selection.

Armed-Forces Merger Is Recommended By President

Washington, Dec. 19 (AP)—President Truman called today for merger of the Army and Navy into a single department of national defense, with the Air Forces fully equal to the land and sea branches

Stepping squarely into the middle of the long and bitter struggle between the army and navy top commands, Mr. Truman followed in virtually every detail the official War Department plan for unification.

And he dashed one prime navy hope by declaring in a special message to Congress:

"Further studies of the general problem would serve no useful purpose."

Navy Asked No Hasty Action

Navy witnesses appearing at Senate Military Committee hearings on the merger proposal have pleaded against hasty action and urged additional studies of all phases of unification.

Declaring that "I urge this as the best means of keeping the peace," Mr. Truman proposed that the new defense department be headed by a single Cabinet member operating with one under secretary and several assistant secretaries, all civilians. There would be a departmental chief of staff, with a commander for each of the three component branches—army, navy and air.

Either the President or the secretary of defense could take up directly with the separate commanders matters of basic military strategy and policy and the division of the department's budget.

No-Domination Suggestion

Key staff positions in department, Mr. Truman said, should be filled with officers drawn from all the services, "so that the thinking of the department would not be dominated by any one or two of the services."

"As an additional precaution," he added, "it would be wise if the post of chief of staff were rotated among the several services, whenever practicable and advisable. . . ."

Predicts Co-Operation

Taking note of strong opposition from Secretary Forrestal and other high-ranking navy officials, the President said:

"However strong the opposition that has been expressed by some of our outstanding senior officers and civilians, I can assure the Congress that once unification has been determined upon as the policy of this nation, there is no officer or civilian in any service who will not contribute his utmost to make the unification a success."

Asks Compulsory Training

In his 5,500-word message, Mr. Truman called again for congressional approval of universal military training, asserting it has met "with the overwhelming approval of the people of the United States."

Referring repeatedly to the possibility of future inroads upon world peace, the Chief Executive declared that "a grave responsibility will rest upon the Congress if it continues to delay this urgent and most important measure."

"Essential For Safety"

He termed unification legislation "another essential step—along with universal training—in the development of a comprehensive and continuous program for our future safety and for the peace and security of the world.

"One of the lessons which have most clearly come from the costly and dangerous experience of this war is that there must be unified direction of land, sea and air forces at home as well as in all other parts of the world where our armed forces are serving," Mr. Truman continued.

Price Of Omission

"We did not have that kind of direction when we were attacked four years ago—and we certainly paid a high price for not having it. . . .

"We would be taking a grave we did not move now to overcome permanently the present imperfections in our defense organizations."

The President said there is no basis for fear that an over-all organization would lodge too much power in a single individual—"that the concentration of so much military power would lead to militarism.

"There is no basis for such fear as long as the traditional policy of risk with the national security if the United States is followed that a civilian, subject to the President, the Congress and the will of the people, be placed at the head of this department.

"The safety of the democracy of the United States lies in the solid good sense and unshakable conviction of the American people. They need have no fear that their democratic liberties will be imperiled as long as they continue fulfilling their duties of citizenship."

"Most Important Reasons"

Citing what he termed "the most important reasons for combining the two existing departments," Mr. Truman said such a step would:

Strengthen facilities for integrated strategic plans, programs and budgets.

Achieve economies through control of supply and service functions.

Foster co-ordination between the military and civilian branches of the Government and

Foster civilian control of the military.

Air-Power Parity Plea

In support of parity for air power, the Chief Executive said it has been developed to the point where its responsibilities are equal to those of land and sea power "and its contribution to our strategic planning is as great.

"Parity for air power can be achieved in one department or in three, but not in two," he said. "As between one department and three, the former is infinitely to be preferred. The advantages of a single department are, indeed, much clearer when the department is seen to be three departments, rather than the present two. The existence of the three departments would complicate tremendously every problem of co-ordination that now exists between the War and Navy departments and between the services and the rest of the Government."

In his message Mr. Truman said "the Navy should, of course, retain its own carrier, ship and water based aviation, which has proved so necessary for efficient fleet operation."

Marine Corps Under Navy

Of the Marine Corps, the President said that "of course," it "should be continued as an intregal part of the Navy."

Emphasizing throughout his message that, despite its work for peace, this country must never relax its preparations for war, Mr. Truman said at one point:

"Whatever the form which any future war may take, we know that the men of our separate services will have to work together in many kinds of combinations for many purposes. The Pacific campaign of the recent war is an outstanding example of common and joint effort among land, sea and air forces.

Understanding Lacking

"Despite its successes, the campaign proved that there is no adequate understanding among the officers and men of any service of the capabilities, the uses, the procedures and the limitations of the other services."

As a further argument for unification, the President said that all military authority and all outlying bases should be under a single commander with clear responsibility.

And he added that there should be an end to such different army and navy policies as rates of promotion, ways of selecting officers, granting awards and decorations and point allowances for discharge systems.

Conclusions On 1941

Mr. Truman told Congress that in 1941 the nation had two completely independent organizations "with no well-established habit of collaboration and co-operation between them," and that the air power was not organized on a par with the ground and sea forces.

The joint chiefs of staff, on which the President's chief of staff and the chiefs of the land, sea and air forces sat, was better than no co-ordination at all, he said, but he added that "the joint chiefs of staff are not a unified command."

During the war, he declared, the principle of unified command went far in the direction of unity in the field, "but we never had comparable unified direction or command in Washington."

It is now time, the Chief Executive went on, "to discard obsolete organizational forms and to provide for the surest, the soundest, the most effective and the most economical kind of structure as the best means of keeping the peace."

Asserting that unification must be looked upon as a long-term job, the President said it is much more than a matter of organization.

TRUMAN PLAN IS ASSAILED

Vinson Likens It To 'Militarism We Fought To Destroy'

Washington, Dec. 19 (AP)—While some congressmen of both parties praised President Truman's plan for unifying the armed forces today, Representative Vinson (D., Ga.), chairman of the House Naval Committee, protested that "it would sink the Navy."

Senator Walsh (D., Mass.), chairman of the Senate Naval Committee, declined to comment at present, but friends said he was planning a fight. He has consistently opposed any merger of the Army and Navy.

Senator Thomas (D., Utah), chairman of the Senate Military Committee, which has been holding hearings on merger proposals, told reporters the President's message was an "argument for what we've started to do." He added that the committee should be ready with a bill "carrying out the President's ideas" after the holiday recess.

Backs Up Marshall's Plan

Senator Johnson (D., Col.), of the committee, author of a unification measure, said Mr. Truman's plan "could not have been better if I had written if myself." He told newsmen that it "completely backs up the Marshall plan," referring to the War Department proposal introduced when Gen. George C. Marshall was chief of staff.

Representatives May (D., Ky.), chairman of the House Military Committee, and Vinson introduced legislation last week proposing a separate air force, under a third department, and opposing unification.

After asserting unification would "sink the Navy," Vinson's statement today said, in part:

"And, furthermore, it would concentrate the greatest military power in the world today—in the hands of one man—a man not responsible to the electorate or Congress—a military chief of staff of the combined forces that includes the National Guard of the sovereign states.

"I Am Shocked"

"This plan has deeper implication than the lumping under one man's command all of our military forces. To this military autocracy, the President binds the enactment of universal military training.

"The hand of this supreme chief of staff would be on the latch string of every home in the nation and, by his control of the largest item in the national budget, it would rest also on every purse string.

"His authority would not only extend to every ship, every fieldpiece and every airplane in the nation's service, but to every ablebodied young man in the United States.

"This scheme, urged upon us today is so completely a violation of the fundamentals of representative, responsible, civil government that I am shocked at all its implication.

Smacks Of Kaiserism

"The history of the recent past is too vivid in my mind to inspire a gentle estimate of a plan that embodies all the aspects of militarism we fought to destroy in 1917 and in the last four years. 'General staff—supreme chief of staff—conscription'—the very phraseology of the scheme smacks of the Germany of the Kaiser and of Hitler, of Japanese militarism.

"I know the American people will never knowingly approve of anything resembling a military dictatorship. I also know that military dictatorships are never sold to a people under that name. They come in different packages with delightfully misleading labels advertising the contents as 'efficiency' and 'economy' but the poison within is always the same."

Representative Bates (R., Mass.), of the Naval Committee, said he is "very much opposed to the merger, unless I can be shown efficiency will result."

"Jealousies . . . Inexcusable"

Representative Thomas (D., Texas), acting chairman of the House Military Committee, remarked, "I'm for it. I think the present duplication, and especially the jealousies between the two departments, is inexcusable and indefensible."

Another member of this group, Representative Arends (R., Ill.), said he is "inclined to believe the departments should be consolidated."

Representative Wadsworth (R., N.Y.) commented, "I think unification would promote both efficiency and economy."

Military, Diplomatic Co-Ordination Asked

Washington, Dec. 19 (AP)—President Truman told Congress today the nation's military policy should be geared to its efforts in diplomacy.

He enunciated his views in a terse but significant paragraph contained in his message recommending unification of the armed forces.

Consistent With Foreign Policy

Asserting that military policy should be completely consistent with foreign policy, Mr. Truman then specified:

"It should be designed to support and reflect our commitments to the United Nations Organization. It should be adjusted according to the success or lack of success of our diplomacy. It should reflect our fullest knowledge of the capabilities and intentions of other powers.

Likewise, our foreign policy should take into account our military capabilities and the strategic power of our armed forces."

Mr. Truman recalled that he had urged adoption of a universal military training program and said that unification was another essential step in developing "a comprehensive and continuous program for our future safety and for the peace and security of the world."

Rate Of Discharges

He also said: "We are discharging our armed forces now at the rate of 1,500,000 a month. We can with fairness no longer look to the veterans of this war for any future military service."

The situation arising out of this swift demobilization pace is a matter of grave concern among military commanders charged with maintaining a fighting force capable of occupation duties in two hemispheres, guarding American installations overseas and operating the pipelines returning men home. Like the President, they are not disposed to ask that the citizen-soldier who fought World War II be held in service.

For the time, they are relying on the hope that the recruiting program, plus manpower acquired through induction and old-line army regulars will make possible an army of 1,600,000 by next July.

Problem In Organization

The critical situation which has developed is not a problem of manpower but of organization. In sheer numbers, the manpower situation is satisfactory. The Army had an estimated 5,100,000 on December 1.

But many of its keymen—the sergeants and other noncommissioned experts who knew how to run an outfit—have been discharged and more are going all the time. Units are being disorganized all the way up through divisions by the loss of experienced personnel.

One general discussing the situation on the understanding he would not be quoted by name said he doubted that a single division with the effectiveness of war days could be put into the field.

AAF Also Hard Hit

The problem is not alone one of ground armies. An air commander has said that because of the discharge of experienced ground crew and air crew members it would be possible to put up not more than one squadron out of every group of the AAF. A group averages about three squadrons.

War Department officials say the recruiting program is moving along satisfactorily so far—but they decline to make predictions.

Recruiting Progress

In the first two months of the intensive recruiting campaign, through November 30, the Army had 262,953 enlistments. Of these, 67.23 per cent were men who had been inducted and had become eligible for discharge; 10.70 per cent were youngsters never in the Army before; 22.07 were re-enlistments of old, regular army men whose tours of duty had expired.

Some men, a substantial number, are signing up overseas. In the Pacific 29,544 enlisted through November 30; in Europe, 23,108. The rest of the recruits, about 210,000, signed up in the nine service commands in the United States.

Navy 'Shushes' Its Officers

Washington, Dec. 19 (AP)—The Navy, which has put up a strenuous fight against a merger with the Army, acted quickly today to prevent any individual "public utterances" by its commissioned personnel against the single-department plan which President Truman has now indorsed.

An exception was made in the case of those "called as witnesses before committees of Congress."

Issued Quickly

Even while Mr. Truman's message recommending armed forces consolidation was being read in the House and Senate ,the Navy Department issued a memorandum to all navy and marine officers which said:

DEC 20 1945

"In view of the President's message to Congress urging the passing of legislation for department of national defense, officers of the Navy and Marine Corps are expected to refrain from opposition thereto in their public utterances except that, when called as witnesses before committees of Congress, they will, of course, give frankly and freely their views and will respond to any questions."

ROW ON MERGER 'FREE DISCUSSION'

Washington, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—President Truman achieved an understatement in his unification message to Congress.

In referring to the bitterest feud between two departments in the memory of the capital, the President described it as the free discussion which has taken place within the services and before the committees of the Senate and House of Representatives."

Chief Arguments Advanced by Truman For Merger of Army and Navy Forces

Washington, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—President Truman underlined nine arguments for combining the War and Navy departments into one single department of national defense in his message to Congress today.

In his own words they were:

1. We should have integrated strategic plans and a unified military program and budget.
2. We should realize the economies that can be achieved through unified control of supply and service functions.
3. We should adopt the organizational structure best suited to fostering co-ordination between the military and the remainder of the Government.
4. We should provide the strongest means for civilian control of the military.
5. We should organize to provide parity for air power.
6. We should establish the most advantageous framework for a unified system of training for combined operations of land, sea and air.
7. We should allocate systematically our limited resources for scientific research.
8. We should have unity of command in outlying bases.
9. We should have consistent and equitable personnel policies.

SPECIFIES CONSOLIDATION DETAILS.

The President specified seven details for the unification:

1. There should be a single department of national defense.
2. The head of this department should be a civilian. Under him there should be a civilian under-secretary and several civilian assistant secretaries.
3. There should be three co-ordinated branches of the department: One for the land forces, one for the naval forces, and one for the air forces, each under an assistant secretary.
4. The under-secretary and the remaining assistant secretaries should be available for assignment to whatever duties the President and the secretary may determine.
5. The President and the secretary should be provided with ample authority to establish central co-ordinating and service organizations.
6. There should be a chief of staff. There should also be a commander for each of the three component branches—Army, Navy and Air.
7. The chief of staff and commanders of the three co-ordinate branches should together constitute an advisory body to the secretary and to the President. It would be wise if the post of chief of staff were rotated among the several services, whenever practicable and advisable.

TRUMAN AND LEAHY DIFFER ON MERGER

Washington, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—President Truman, in urging a merger of the Army and Navy today, differed with the expressed views of his personal Chief of Staff.

Admiral William D. Leahy, who has acted as top military adviser to both President Truman and President Roosevelt, testified at congressional hearings on merger legislation that he considered the proposal for a single defense agency "radical" and "revolutionary." Emphasizing that he was only voicing his own personal views, Leahy said such unification would seriously reduce naval efficiency.

MERGER MESSAGE EMBITTERS VINSON

Washington, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—Adoption of President Truman's recommendation for unification of the armed forces would "sink the Navy," Representative Vinson (D.-Ga.), chairman of the House Naval Committee, declared today.

"The very phraseology of the scheme," Vinson said in a prepared statement, "smacks of the Germany of the Kaiser and of Hitler—of Japanese militarism. It is a frightening manifestation of military power-politics which we would view with suspicion and dismay if it were introduced in any of our sister democracies.

"If the burdens of watching over our national security establishment are too much for the President as Commander in Chief—and that is the suggestion in the President's message—I prefer an elected, rather than an appointed deputy commander in chief. I am unwilling to risk the future of this country without some voice in the selection of the man to make the decisions."

The veteran chairman of the naval committee previously had supported official Navy opposition to the proposed merger.

Text of Merger Message

Washington, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—The text of President Truman's message to Congress today on unification of the War and Navy departments follows:

To the Congress of the United States:

In my message of September 6, 1945, I stated that I would communicate with the Congress from time to time during the current session with respect to comprehensive and continuous program of national security. I pointed out the necessity of making timely preparation for the nation's long-range security now—while we are still mindful of what it has cost us in this war to have been unprepared.

On October 23, 1945, as part of that program, there was presented for your consideration a proposal for universal military training. It was based upon the necessities of maintaining a well-trained citizenry which could be quickly mobilized in time of need in support of a small professional military establishment. Long and extensive hearings have now been held by the Congress on this recommendation. I think that the proposal, in principle, has met with the overwhelming approval of the people of the United States.

We are discharging our armed forces now at the rate of 1,500,000 a month. We can with fairness no longer look to the veterans of this war for any future military service. It is essential therefore that universal training be instituted at the earliest possible moment to provide a reserve upon which we can draw if, unhappily, it should become necessary. A grave responsibility will rest upon the Congress if it continues to delay this most important and urgent measure.

Today, again in the interest of national security and world peace, I make this further recommendation to you. I recommend that the Congress adopt legislation combining the War and Navy departments into one single department of national defense. Such unification is another essential step—along with universal training—in the development of a comprehensive and continuous program for our future safety and for the peace and security of the world.

One of the lessons which have most clearly come from the costly and dangerous experience of this war is that there must be unified direction of land, sea and air forces at home as well as in all other parts of the world where our armed forces are serving.

Cites Price Paid Four Years Ago.

We did not have that kind of direction when we were attacked four years ago—and we certainly paid a high place for not having it.

In 1941 we had two completely independent organizations with no well-established habits of collaboration and co-operation between them. If disputes arose, if there was failure to agree on a question of planning or a question of action, only the President of the United States could make a decision effective on both. Besides, in 1941, the air power of the United States was not organized on a par with the ground and sea forces.

Our expedient for meeting these defects was the creation of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. On this committee sat the President's Chief of Staff and the chiefs of the land forces, the naval forces, and the air forces. Under the joint chiefs were organized a number of committees bringing together personnel of the three services for joint strategic planning and for co-ordination of operations. This kind of co-ordination was better than no co-ordination at all, but it was in no sense a unified command.

In the theaters of operation, meanwhile, we went further in the direction of unity by establishing unified commands. We came to the conclusion—soon confirmed by experience—that any extended military effort required over-all co-ordinated control in order to get the most out of the three armed forces. Had we not early in the war adopted this principle of a unified command for operations, our efforts, no matter how heroic, might have failed.

But we never had comparable unified direction or command in Washington. And even in the field, our unity of operations was greatly impaired by the differences in training, in doctrine, in communication systems, and in supply and distribution systems, that stemmed from the division of leadership in Washington.

Plan Called a Peace Weapon.

It is true, we were able to win in spite of these handicaps. But it is now time to take stock, to discard obsolete organizational forms and to provide for the future the soundest, the most effective and the most economical kind of structure for our armed forces of which this most powerful nation is capable.

I urge this as the best means of keeping the peace.

No nation now doubts the good will of the United States for the maintenance of a lasting peace in the world. Our purpose is shown by our efforts to establish an effective United Nations Organization. But all nations—and particularly those unfortunate nations which have felt the heel of the Nazis, the Fascists or the Japs—know that desire for peace is futile unless there is also enough strength ready and willing to enforce that desire in any emergency. Among the things that have encouraged aggression and the spread of war in the past have been the unwillingness of the United States realistically to face this fact, and her refusal to fortify her aims of peace before the forces of aggression could gather in strength.

Now that our enemies have surrendered it has again become all too apparent that a portion of the American people are anxious to forget all about the war, and particularly to forget all the unpleasant factors which are required to prevent future wars.

Whether we like it or not, we must all recognize that the victory which we have won has placed upon the American people the continuing burden of responsibility for world leadership. The future peace of the world will depend in large part upon whether or not the United States shows that it is really determined to continue in its role as a leader among nations. It will depend upon whether or not the United States is willing to maintain the physical strength necessary to act as a safeguard against any future aggressor. Together with the other United Nations, we must be willing to make the sacrifices necessary to protect the world from future aggressive warfare. In short, we must be prepared to maintain in constant and immediate readiness sufficient military strength to convince any future potential aggressor that this nation, in its determination for a lasting peace, means business.

Service Boundaries Erased.

We would be taking a grave risk with the national security if we did not move now to overcome permanently the present imperfections in our defense organization. However great was the need for co-ordination and unified command in world war II, it is sure to be greater if there is any future aggression against world peace. Technological developments have made the armed services much more dependent upon each other than ever before. The boundaries that once separated the Army's battlefield from the Navy's battlefield have been virtually erased. If there is ever going to be another global conflict, it is sure to take place simultaneously on land and sea and in the air, with weapons of ever greater speed and range. Our combat forces must work together in one team as they have never been required to work together in the past.

We must assume, further, that another war would strike much more suddenly than the last, and that it would strike directly at the United States. We cannot expect to be given the opportunity again to experiment in organization and in ways of teamwork while the fighting proceeds. True preparedness now means preparedness not alone in armaments and numbers of men, but preparedness in organization also. It means establishing in peacetime the kind of military organization which will be able to meet the test of sudden attack quickly and without having to improvise radical readjustment in structure and habits.

The basic question is what organization will provide the most effective employment of our military resources in time of war and the most effective means for maintaining peace. The manner in which we make this transition in the size, composition, and organization of the armed forces will determine the efficiency and cost of our national defense for many years to come.

Improvements have been made since 1941 by the President in the organization of the War and Navy departments, under the war powers act. Unless the Congress acts before these powers lapse, these departments will revert to their prewar organizational status. This would be a grevious mistake.

The Joint Chiefs of Staff are not a unified command. It is a committee which must depend for its success upon the voluntary co-operation of its member agencies. During the war period of extreme national danger there was, of course, a high degree of co-operation. In peacetime the situation will be different. It must not be taken for granted that the Joint Chiefs of Staff as now constituted will be as effective in the apportionment of peacetime resources as they have been in the determination of war plans and in their execution. As national defense appropriations grow tighter, and conflicting interests make themselves felt in major issues of policy and strategy, unanimous agreements will become more difficult to reach.

It was obviously impossible in the midst of conflict to reorganize the armed forces of the United States along the lines here suggested. Now that our enemies have surrendered, I urge the Congress to proceed to bring about a reorganization of the management of the armed forces.

Gives 9 Reasons for Merger.

Further studies of the general problem would serve no useful purpose. There is enough evidence now at hand to demonstrate beyond question the need for a unified department. A great many of the reasons for establishing a single department have been brought out already in public discussion and in congressional committee hearings. To me the most important reasons for combining the two existing departments are these:

1. We should have integrated strategic plans and a unified military program and budget.

With the coming of peace it is clear that we must not only continue, but strengthen, our present facilities for integrated planning. We cannot have the sea, land and air members of our defense team working at what may turn out to be cross purposes, planning their programs on different assumptions as to the nature of the military establishment we need, and engaging in an open competition for funds.

Strategy, program and budget are all aspects of the same basic decisions. Using the advice of our scientists and our intelligence officers, we must make the wisest estimate as to the probable nature of any future attack upon us, determine accordingly how to organize and deploy our military forces, and allocate the available man power, material and financial resources in a manner connsistent with the over-all plan.

Up to the present time the make-up and balance of our armed forces have not been planned as a whole. Programs and budget requests from the Army and Navy have been formulated separately, on the basis of independent concepts of mission and function. These separate programs and budgets have not been considered together until after they have passed out of military hands and even out of the hands of the Secretaries of War and the Navy. The whole job of reconciling the divergent claims of the departments has been thrust upon the President and the Congress.

This war has demonstrated completely that the resources of this nation in man power and in raw materials are not unlimited. To realize this is to comprehend the urgent need for finding a way to allocate these resources intelligently among the competing services. Considered apportionment of responsibility among the services for the performance of a joint mission.

From experience as a member of the Congress I know the great difficulty of appraising properly the over-all security needs of the nation from piecemeal presentations by separate departments appearing before separate congressional committees at different times. It is only by combining the armed forces into a single department that the Congress can have the advantage of considering a single co-ordinated and comprehensive security program.

Duplication of Procurement.

2. We should realize the economies that can be achieved through unified control of supply and service functions.

Instances of duplication among Army and Navy activities and facilities have been brought to the attention of the Congress on many occasions. The degree of unity that was accomplished during the war in strategic planning and in theater command is in striking contrast with the separatism that prevailed in the whole range of supply and service functions.

It will never be possible to achieve absolute co-ordination of the supply and service functions of all services. Neither the War Department nor the Navy Department has been able to eliminate all duplication even within its own organization. But there is no question that the extent of waste through lack of co-ordination between the two departments is very much greater than the waste resulting from faulty co-ordination within each. If we can attain as much co-ordination among all the services as now exists within each department, we shall realize extensive savings.

Consolidation of the departments will, for example, reduce the volume of supplies that need to be produced. Supply requirements, for example, begin with a calculation of so many items per man to be supplied. But to this basic figure must be added margins of safety, to account for items in storage, transportation lags, breakdowns in delivery, emergency demands, and so forth. In these margins, savings can be made through unified systems of supply. As the volume handled in any supply system grows, the percentage factor which has to be added for reserves is reduced.

In the same way, both the Army and the Navy must add a margin of safety to their requirements for production plants, depots, hospitals, air training fields, and other types of construction common to both services. When the requirements are pooled, the total amount of margin may be reduced. The same is true of personnel. Each service must add a margin of safety in estimating its requirements for doctors, nurses, skilled mechanics, and other types of specialists. The total margin is greater if the computations are made separately. Another source of economy will be the pooling of facilities and personnel in localities where at present both services have to operate, but where from the nature of the circumstances, facilities and personnel are not fully used.

Other examples of duplication could be cited. Business men have to deal with separate buyers, who may use separate specifications for items which could as well have the same specifications. Separate inspectors are stationed in their plants. During this war, instances occurred where the purchase of all available quantities of certain items by one service resulted in acute shortages in the other service. Parallel transportation and storage system required extra overhead.

As the war progressed, it is true that increased co-operation reduced the extent of waste and conflict. But voluntary co-operation in such matters can never be expected to be full effective. A single authority at the top would inevitably achieve a greater degree of economy than would be obtained under divided direction.

Must Link With Foreign Policy.

3. We should adopt the organizational structure best suited to fostering co-ordination between the military and the remainder of the Government.

Our military policy and program are only a part of a total national program aimed at achieving our national objectives of security and peace. This total program has many aspects, and many agencies of the Government must participate in its execution.

Our military policy, for example, should be completely consistent with our foreign policy. It should be designed to support and reflect our commitments to the United Nations Organization. It should be adjusted according to the success or lack of success of our diplomacy. It should reflect our fullest knowledge of the capabilities and intentions of other Powers. Likewise, our foreign policy should take into account our military capabilities and the strategic power of our armed forces.

A total security program has still other major aspects. A military program, standing alone, is useless. It must be supported in peacetime by planning for industrial mobilization and for development of industrial and raw material resources where these are insufficient. Programs of scientific research must be developed for military purposes, and their results woven into the defense program. The findings of our intelligence service must be applied to all of these.

Formulation and execution of a comprehensive and consistent national program embracing all these activities are extremely difficult tasks. They are made more difficult the greater the number of departments and agencies whose policies and programs have to be co-ordinated at the top level of the executive branch. They are simplified as the number of these agencies can be reduced.

The consolidation of the War and Navy departments would greatly facilitate the ease and speed with which the armed forces and the other departments could exchange views and come to agreement on matters of common concern. It would minimize the extent to which inter-service differences have to be discussed and settled by the civilian leaders whose main concern should be the more fundamental job of building over-all national policy.

Civilian Control Need Stressed.

4. We should provide the strongest means for civilian control of the military.

Civilian control of the military establishment—one of the most fundamental of our democratic concepts—would be strengthened if the President and the Congress had but one Cabinet member with clear and primary responsibility for the exercise of that control. When the military establishment is divided between two civilian secretaries, each is limited necessarily to a restricted view of the military establishment. Consequently, on many fundamental issues where the civilian point of view should be controling, the secretaries of the two departments are cast in the role of partisans of their respective services, and real civilian control can be exercised by no one except the President or the Congress.

During and since the war, the need for joint action by the services and for objective recommendations on military matters has led inevitably to increasing the authority of the only joint organization and the most nearly objective organization that exists—the Joint Chiefs of Staff. But the Joint Chiefs of Staff are a strictly military body. Responsibility for civilian control should be clearly fixed in a single full-time civilian below the President. This requires a secretary for the entire military establishment, aided by a strong staff of civilian assistants.

There is no basis for the fear that such an organization would lodge too much power in a single individual—that the concentration of so much military power would lead to militarism. There is no basis for such fear as long as the traditional policy of the United States is followed that a civilian, subject to the President, the Congress and the will of the people, be placed at the head of this department. The safety of the democracy of the United States lies in the solid good sense and unshakable conviction of the American people. They need have no fear that their democratic liberties will be imperiled so long as they continue fulfilling their duties of citizenship.

Parity for Air Power Asked.

5. We should organize to provide parity for air power.

Air power has been developed to a point where its responsibilities are equal to those of land and sea power, and its contribution to our strategic planning is as great. In operation, air power receives its separate assignment in the execution of an over-all plan. These facts were finally recognized in this war in the organizational parity which was granted to air power within our principal unified commands.

Parity for air power can be achieved in one department or in three, but not in two. As between one department and three, the former is infinitely to be preferred. The advantages of a single department are indeed much clearer when the alternative is seen to be three departments rather than the present two. The existence of three departments would complicate tremendously every problem of co-ordination that now exists between the War and Navy departments, and between the services and the rest of the Government.

The Cabinet is not merely a collection of executives administering different governmental functions. It is a body whose combined judgment the President uses to formulate the fundamental policies of the administration. In such a group, which is designed to develop teamwork wisdom on all subjects that affect the political life of the country, it would be inappropriate and unbalanced to have three members representing three different instruments of national defense.

The President, as Commander in Chief, should not personally have to co-ordinate the Army and Navy and Air Force. With all the other problems before him, the President cannot be expected to balance either the organization, the training or the practice of the several branches of national defense. He should be able to rely for that co-ordination upon civilian hands at the Cabinet level.

For Unified Training System.

6. We should establish the most advantageous framework for a unified system of training for combined operations of land, sea and air.

Whatever the form which any future war may take, we know that the men of our separate services will have to work together in many kinds of combinations for many purposes. The Pacific campaign of the recent war is an outstanding example of common and joint effort among land, sea and air forces. Despite its successes, that campaign proved that there is not adequate understanding among the officers and men of any services of the capabilities, the uses, the procedures, and the limitations of the other services.

This understanding is not something that can be created overnight whenever a combined operation is planned and a task force organized. The way men act in combat is determined by the sum total of all their previous training, indoctrination, and experience.

What we seek is a structure which can best produce an integrated training program, carry on merged training activities where that is appropriate, and permit officers to be assigned in such a way that an individual officer will learn first-hand of other services besides the one in which he has specialized. The organizational framework most conducive to this kind of unified training and doctrine is a unified department.

Allocation of Research.

7. He should allocate systematically our limited resources for scientific research.

No aspect of military preparedness is more important than scientific research. Given the limited amount of scientific talent that will be available for military purposes, we must systematically apply that talent to research in the most promising lines and on the weapons with the greatest potentiality, regardless of the service in which these weapons will be used. We cannot afford to waste any of our scientific resources in duplication of effort.

This does not mean that all Army and Navy laboratories would be immediately or even ultimately consolidated. The objectives should be to preserve initiatives and enterprise while eliminating duplication and misdirected effort. This can be accomplished only if we have an organizational structure which will permit fixing responsibility at the top for co-ordination among the services.

8. We should have unity of command in outlying bases.

All military authority at each of our outlying bases should be placed under a single commander who will have clear responsibility for security, who can be held clearly accountable, and whose orders come from a single authority in Washington. Reconnaissance planes, radar sets, and intelligence and counter-intelligence measures at a United States outpost are not intended to serve separate services for different purposes. Unification of the services offers a far greater guaranty of continued unity in the field than does our present organization.

9. We should have consistent and equitable personnel policies.

There have been differences in personnel policies between the Army and the Navy during the war. They began with competitive recruitment for certain types of persons, and continued in almost every phase of personnel administration. In rates of promotion, in ways of selecting officers, in the utilization of reserve officers, in awards and decorations, in allowances and in point systems for discharge, the two services have followed different policies.

This inconsistency is highly undesirable. It will be reduced to a minimum under a unified organization.

Reorganization Proposals.

Any bill which is enacted to carry out these recommendations cannot provide immediately the ultimate organization plan to accomplish unification. It can only prescribe the general organization of the authorities at the top levels of the unified department.

I recommend that the reorganization of the armed services be along the following broad lines.

1. There should be a single Department of National Defense. This department should be charged with the full responsibility for armed national security. It should consist of the armed and civilian forces that are now included within the War and Navy departments.

2. The head of this department should be a civilian, a member of the President's Cabinet, to be designated as the Secretary of National Defense. Under him there should be a civilian under-secretary and several assistant secretaries.

3. There should be three co-ordinated branches of the Department of National Defense: One for the land forces, one for the naval forces, and one for the air forces, each under an assistant secretary. The Navy should, of course, retain its own carrier-, ship-, and water-based aviation. And, of course, the Marine Corps should be continued as an integral part of the Navy.

4. The Under-Secretary and the remaining assistant secretaries should be available for assignment to whatever duties the President and the Secretary may determine from time to time.

5. The President and the Secretary should be provided with ample authority to establish central co-ordinating and service organizations, military and civilian, where these are found to be necessary. Some of these might be placed under assistant secretaries, some might be organized as central service organizations, and some might be organized in a top military staff to integrate the military leadership of the department. I do not believe that we can specify at this time the exact nature of these organizations. They must be developed over a period of time by the President and the Secretary as a normal part of their executive responsibilities. Sufficient strength in these department-wide elements of the department, as opposed to the separate service elements, will insure that real unification is ultimately obtained. The President and the Secretary should not be limited in their authority to establish department-wide co-ordinating and service organizations.

For Single Chief of Staff.

6. There should be a Chief of Staff of the Department of National Defense. There should also be a commander for each of the three component branches—Army, Navy and Air.

7. The Chief of Staff and the commanders of the three co-ordinate branches of the department should together constitute an advisory body to the Secretary of National Defense and to the President. There should be nothing to prevent the President, the Secretary and other civilian authorities from communicating with the commanders of any of the components of the department on such vital matters as basic military strategy and policy and the division of the budget. Furthermore, the key staff positions in the department should be filled with officers drawn from all the services, so that the thinking of the department would not be dominated by any one or two of the services.

As an additional precaution, it would be wise if the post of Chief of Staff were rotated among the several services, whenever practicable and advisable, at least during the period of evolution of the new unified department. The tenure of the individual officer designated to serve as Chief of Staff should be relatively short—two or three years—and should not, except in time of a war emergency declared by the Congress, be extended beyond that period.

Unification of the services must be looked upon as a long-term job. We all recognize that there will be many complications and difficulties. Legislation of the character outlined will provide us with the objective and with the initial means whereby forward-looking leadership in the department, both military and civilian, can bring real unification into being. Unification is much more than a matter of organization. It will require new viewpoints, new doctrine and new habits of thinking throughout the departmental structure. But in the comparative leisure of peacetime, and utilizing the skill and experience of our staff and field commanders who brought us victory, we should start at once to achieve the most efficient instrument of national safety.

Research and Intelligence.

Once a unified department has been established, other steps necessary to the formulation of a comprehensive national security program can be taken with greater ease. Much more than a beginning has already been made in achieving consistent political and military policy through the establishment of the State-War-Navy Co-ordinating Committee. With respect to military research, I have in a previous message to the Congress proposed the establishment of a Federal Research Agency, among whose responsibilities should be the promotion and co-ordination of fundamental research pertaining to the defense and security of the nation. The development of a co-ordinated, government-wide intelligence system is in process. As the advisability of additional action to insure a broad and co-ordinated program of national security becomes clear, I shall make appropriate recommendations or take the necessary action to that end.

The American people have all been enlightened and gratified by the free discussion which has taken place within the services and before the committees of the Senate and the House of Representatives. The Congress, the people, and the President have benefited from a clarification of the issues that could have been provided in no other way. But however strong the opposition that has been expressed by some of our outstanding senior officers and civilians, I can assure the Congress that once unification has been determined upon as the policy of this nation, there is no officer or civilian in any service who will not contribute his utmost to make the unification a success.

I make these recommendations in the full realization that we are undertaking a task of greatest difficulty. But I am certain that when the task is accomplished, we shall have a military establishment far better adapted to carrying out its share of our national program for achieving peace and security.

30 P.C. Raise Demand Reiterated By UAW

Detroit, Dec. 19 (AP)—A determination to stand firm in its wage demands was voiced by the CIO United Automobile Workers today as President Truman's fact-finding board began work on the month-old General Motors strike.

After rejecting a Ford Motor Company offer to raise wages 12.4 per cent, the union declared it was "sticking to its guns" for a 30 per cent increase from G.M. "unless the corporation can produce facts and figures to prove its inability to pay that much."

The union's stand was reaffirmed in a letter from the strike strategy committee to all local unions.

Representing General Motors at the fact-finding proceedings in Washington were President C. E. Wilson and Vice President Harry W. Anderson. R. J. Thomas and Walter P. Reuther, holding corresponding positions in the union, led the UAW delegation.

The strategy committee's letter, signed by Thomas, Reuther and other union officials, said the G.M. strikers have voted by a 99 per cent majority "to remain on strike until their demands are met."

The balloting was conducted on President Truman's appeal for a resumption of work pending a report by his fact-finders. The union's national General Motors conference, whose 200 delegates from G.M. locals met here December 8 to consider the appeal, recommended a continuation of the strike.

"Strike Is Effective"

Asserting that "economic pressure" resulting from the strike and General Motors' competitive position had caused the corporation to "move from zero to 13½ cents an hour," the strategy committee said, "that is the answer to whether or not the strike is effective."

The union's reference was to G.M.'s latest wage offer, which was 1½ cents an hour less than Ford's. The Ford offer was termed "completely unacceptable" by Richard T. Leonard, the union's national Ford director.

Ford's Conditions

Union officials were believed to be opposed to the Ford proposal partly because of the conditions attached. The 15-cent-an-hour wage increase, if accepted, would have become effective only when production reaches 80,000 units a month.

The highest rate of output since the war ended was 22,508 cars and trucks during November, the difference between this and prewar production being attributed to a shortage of materials and parts.

Ford's wage proposal also was for a two-year period and was dependent on satisfactory agreement on the problem of curbing unauthorized strikes. It also stipulated that any increase in OPA ceiling prices of cars would not subject the pay issue to further negotiations.

The Ford company estimated that wage increases under its offer would cost $33,000,000 annually and said that amount would be added to the $35,000,000 it predicted would be lost in 1946 under present auto price ceilings without any pay raises. The deficit, a company spokesman said, would have to come out of capital.

General Motors officials made no immediate comment on the strike strategy committee's letter, which accused them of "attempts to sabotage the great and unselfish job the G.M. workers are doing."

"To rumors about the timeliness and effectiveness of the strike are added other rumors that the leadership of the union is divided and split as to the strategy we are following," the committee told the local unions.

"The Most Vicious Lie"

"This is the most vicious lie of all," it continued, asserting that every decision on strategy since it was mapped in September has been unanimous.

Commending the 175,000 G.M. strikers for their "courage and determination," the top union officials said: "Let us hold our picket lines, strong, and we shall win."

The union is scheduled to resume negotiations tomorrow with Ford and also with the newly formed Kaiser-Frazier corporation, to which it presented a "standard" contract proposal at the first meeting Monday."

G.M. Fact-Finding To Begin Tomorrow

Washington, Dec. 19 (AP)—Chairman Lloyd K. Garrison said today the General Motors fact-finding board would begin hearings tomorrow without awaiting a decision as to whether prices and profits can be related to fact-finding wage recommendations.

Representatives of General Motors Corporation and the CIO United Automobile Workers conferred separately with members of the board and will meet jointly with it later today to determine procedure for the hearings.

Leaving the UAW conference, Walter Reuther, union vice president and director of its G.M. division, said no decision had been reached on continuation of collective bargaining with the company while the fact finding progresses.

Garrison said no commitments had been obtained from the disputants concerning the prices and profits issue that yesterday stalled the oil wage fact-finding board. A decision from top Administration officials is expected on the question Friday.

PROFITS, PRICES STALL G.M. UNIT

Fact-Finders To Rule On Allowing Testimony As Evidence

Washington, Dec. 19 (AP)—The question of profits and prices and their relation to wage increases stalled the General Motors fact-finding board today.

Following the pattern already set by the oil wage fact-finding body, Lloyd K. Garrison, chairman of the G.M. panel, told a news conference that, after preliminary arguments tomorrow, the G.M. board would recess until it decides whether testimony on profits and possible price increases will be allowed in evidence.

Hearings will resume Saturday if the board has made up its mind, he added.

UAW Insistent

Garrison said that at conferences today the CIO-United Automobile Workers insisted that the board study the profit-price phase of the dispute, involving union demands for a 30 per cent wage increase. On the other hand, the company flatly opposed raising the issue.

Asked whether, when the question is decided, either company or union might withdraw from the hearings, Garrison said he would "rather not discuss" this possibility. He added, however, there was "some risk" of such a withdrawal.

The oil panel now is in recess pending a statement of White House policy on whether Federal fact-finding boards should take possible price increases into consideration when recommending a wage increase.

'Pretty Fundamental'

However, Garrison emphasized that, unlike the oil panel, the G.M. board would decide the price-profits question on its own.

He described the decision as "pretty fundamental" and said it would determine definitely the extent to which information on company profits and prices would be based by the board in its final recommendations to President Truman.

Garrison explained the company had taken the position that, since it was not pleading "inability to pay," its profits and prices were irrelevant.

The union, he said, did not wish to precipitate price increases and had declared that, if its 30 per cent demand would force G.M. to raise prices, the demand would be modified.

Separate Conferences

Tomorrow's arguments, he continued, would bring into public hearings the gist of today's talks in executive session. These conferences were held with the disputants separately to get their points of view, Garrison said.

Late today, the panel called both company and union into joint session and announced its decision to recess after the issue of profits and prices had been publicly stated by spokesmen for each side tomorrow.

C. E. Wilson, president of General Motors Corporation, other G.M. officials and leaders of the UAW met with the board in separate sessions most of the day.

The union spokesmen, headed by R. J. Thomas, president, and Walter P. Reuther, vice president, were called in twice, once before and once after the board conferred with company officials.

UAW Formal Rejection Of Ford Offer Is Due

Detroit, Dec. 19 (AP)—The CIO-United Automobile Workers Union probably will formally reject the Ford Motor Company's 12.4 per cent wage-rate increase offer at tomorrow's meeting of management and union representatives.

The union, demanding a 30 per cent increase from the nation's car makers, already has informally turned down the Ford offer, made yesterday.

Highest increase yet proposed by management in the current wage fight in the industry, the offer was described by Richard T. Leonard, UAW-CIO Ford director, as "completely unacceptable."

Ford offered what company officials termed a 15-cents-an-hour increase.

Stipulations On Ford Offer

Union leaders have said their formal reply to the proposal will take up in detail the various stipulations accompanying it.

These included conditions concerning management prerogatives, an agreement that the increase would not become effective until Ford production reaches 80,000 units monthly, and that it continue in force for two years, during which no further increase would be sought, even if the OPA authorized a rise in Ford vehicle prices.

In Pontiac, Mich., today three Circuit Court judges declined General Motors requests for injunctions to restrain picket activities of UAW-CIO strikers. The judges, however, set December 26 for a hearing on company charges that the pickets had committed illegal acts in their picketing of G.M. plants.

Office workers at General Motors' AC spark-plug plant in Flint, Mich., kept out of the plant by augmented picket lines yesterday, made no attempt to go through the lines today.

FACT FINDERS OPEN SESSIONS ON G. M. ROW

Conferences Today Will Be Followed by Formal Hearings Tomorrow.

PRICE QUESTION UNSETTLED

Truman May Rule on Bringing Issue of Profits Into Wage Rise Discussions.

Washington, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—Chairman Lloyd K. Garrison said today the General Motors fact finding board would begin hearings tomorrow without awaiting a decision as to whether prices and profits can be related to fact finding wage recommendations.

Representatives of the General Motors Corporation and the C. I. O. United Automobile Workers conferred separately with members of the board and were to meet jointly with the fact finders late today to determine procedure for the hearings.

Leaving the U. A. W. conference, Walter Reuther, union vice-president and director of U. A. W.'s G. M. division, said that no decision had been reached on continuation of collective bargaining with the company while the fact finding progresses. He indicated the union and G. M. will decide this point probably later today.

Garrison told reporters that it seemed certain that both sides would be too busy to renew bargaining sessions during the next day or so.

The chairman said that no commitments had been obtained from the disputants concerning the prices and profits issue which yesterday stalled the oil wage-fact-finding board. A decision from top administration levels is expected on the question Friday.

Asked by reporters if the union would make a point of G. M. profits and prices in connection with the U. A. W. demand for a 30 per cent wage increase, Reuther replied merely:

"You know our position."

In bargaining thus far the U. A. W. has steadfastly maintained that the company's profits were a major factor in determining wage increases and has held that the company can grant the wage demand without increasing prices.

Holds to 30 Per Cent.

Detroit, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—Determination to stand firm in its wage demands on two major fronts was voiced by the C. I. O. United Automobile Workers today as President Truman's fact-finding board called its first hearing on the month-old General Motors strike.

After rejecting a Ford Motor Company offer to raise wages 12.4 per cent, the union declared it was sticking to its guns for a 30 per cent increase from G. M. unless the corporation can produce facts and figures to prove its inability to pay that much.

The U. A. W.-C. I. O.'s stand was reaffirmed in a letter from the top strike strategy committee to all local unions on the eve of the first Government panel's session in Washington.

Fact-Finding Board Is Named To Study Greyhound Dispute

Question of profits and prices stalls fact-finding board in G.M.-UAW dispute.....Page 11

Washington, Dec. 19 (AP)—Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach sought tonight to end the 49-day strike of Pennsylvania and Central Greyhound Bus Lines by appointing a fact-finding board to investigate the wage dispute.

The Secretary conditioned his appointment of a five-man panel on resumption of operations, without penalties to the 4,000 strikers, and with the proviso that any wage concessions would be retroactive to midnight October 31, when the strike began in eighteen Eastern states.

The offer was not immediately picked up by the companies or the union, however, despite an official statement from the Labor Department quoting Edgar L. Warren, conciliation chief, as saying that he had verbal agreement from the parties on "substantially" the conditions stipulated by Schwellenbach.

Members Of Fact-Finding Panel

The company presidents, in Cleveland, said they wanted to study the Labor Secretary's order setting up the panel.

Schwellenbach named as public representatives on the panel William Simkin, former chairman of the War Labor Board shipbuilding commission and an impartial umpire in the hosiery industry, as chairman; Saul Wallen, former Boston WLB director, and Jo[illegible]idin, New York attorney as [illegible]er public member of the WLB.

The Secretary appointed David O. Zimring, Chicago attorney for the union, to represent the union, and Earl Cannon, industry member of the WLB and a trucker in private life, to represent the companies.

"Strike Not Called Off"

Samuel P. Berrong, secretary-treasurer of the AFL-Amalgamated Street Railway and Motor Coach Employés, said in Milwaukee that after he received the Schwellenbach order he would submit it to the chairmen of the union's joint executive council in Chicago.

"At this meeting we will make a decision as to our future action," said Berrong.

In the meantime, he emphasized, "the strike has not been called off."

"It can be terminated only by the union's joint executive council or by a membership referendum vote," he said. "The council has not acted, as yet, and there has been no membership vote."

The chance for settlement of the strike in time for the expected heavy travel of furloughed service personnel and civilians next week end lessened but was not necessarily ruled out by either side.

CONTROL OF PRICES DECLARED VITAL

Washington, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—Secretary of Labor Lewis B. Schwellenbach said today that the cost of living could go through the roof within six months if price controls were removed.

The price control act will expire on June 30 next unless Congress extends it. Schwellenbach, in a statement read to the Senate Small Business Committee by Ford Hinrichs, acting commissioner of labor statistics, said the OPA should be continued until:

Reconversion has brought an ample supply of goods back onto retailers shelves.

The reconstruction industry has been able to provide housing "for at least a good share of the millions of families who today are looking for a place to live."

"If American labor is faced with a rise in prices month after month just as the war ends, industrial unrest will inevitably increase," Schwellenbach said.

Schwellenbach said the most serious potential situation—and one he described as requiring strictest control—is rent.

WESTERN UNION'S TELEGRAPHERS ARE TO STRIKE ON JAN. 7

48,000 Workers Get Order to Quit to Enforce Pay Rise Demand.

Washington, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—The general committee of the Western Union Commercial Telegraphers Union today ordered a strike for January 7 to begin at 8 A. M. in each time zone.

The A. F. of L. union, which claims 48,000 members in the nation, has demanded a 25 per cent increase in pay and concessions on twelve other issues. Negotiations with the company have been deadlocked since last August, and a vote to strike was returned in balloting conducted by the National Labor Relations Board on December 1.

The strike date was fixed at a general committee meeting here. All locals were advised by telegrams from J. A. Payne, the general chairman.

"This action will take place unless these issues are resolved to the satisfaction of the union," the messages said. Locals and their officers were cautioned against "fomenting or conspiring to strike before this date" under penalty of expulsion.

Union officials said that Western Union employees in New York city are C. I. O.-affiliated and will not be affected by the strike call.

The A. F. of L. union involved in the proposed walkout is the Commercial Telegraphers Union. The C. I. O. union is the American Communication Association.

Points Of Discharge Reduced

837,000 Made Eligible For Release In Army, Navy.

NAVY PROGRAM AFFECTS 237,000

Wacs Eligible For Discharge If They Have Served Two Years, Six Months.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19. (AP)—All fathers were made draft-exempt today and the Army and Navy announced further reductions in discharge requirements which would make 837,000 more persons eligible for release.

Selective Service instructed local draft boards not to induct any more fathers and not accept on a volunteer basis any father having three or more children.

Fathers of one or two children may continue to volunteer.

When the war ended, the drafting of fathers was restricted to men under 26 and today's order removed that one remaining category from the draft.

Army Point Score Cut

On Dec. 31, the Army point score will be cut from 55 to 50 for enlisted men and from 73 to 70 for officers. Six hundred thousand men and women will become eligible for separation in that branch.

The Navy program will affect 237,000 more persons between now and Feb. 2. Critical scores in the Navy drop Jan. 1 to 36 for enlisted men and 43 for officers; to 23 for enlisted Waves and 29 for Wave officers. These are one-point reductions from the present scores.

Further one-point reductions go into effect Jan. 15 and Feb. 2 for most enlisted men, and for Wave personnel on Feb. 2.

The Navy's schedule calls for release by Feb. 1 of half the 3,000,000 subject to demobilization, and by April 1 of two-thirds. One-third are out now.

Reduction In Army

In the Army the length of service required after Dec. 31 for separation of enlisted men will be reduced from 48 to 42 months and from 51 to 48 months for male officers except medical department officers.

Length of service will be computed for the first time in the case of WAC personnel, although the critical score will not be reduced. Enlisted WACs will be eligible if they have had two years and six months of honorable service, and WAC officers after three years and three months.

Length of service includes total active commissioned duty since Sept. 16, 1940. The adjusted service rating point score is computed as of last Sept. 2.

The age criteria for all Army medical and dental officers, except plastic surgeons, will be reduced from 48 to 45 years.

The Army said it would continue to discharge personnel in this country who are no longer needed and who do not qualify for overseas duty, even though they lack sufficient points or service.

For dental and veterinary corps officers and all medical officers except certain specialists the Army critical score will be reduced from 70 to 65 points. The factors for release of sanitary corps officers, medical administrative corps officers, nurses, physiotherapists, and dietitians remains unchanged.

WAC enlisted and officer personnel married to discharged veterans of World War II may be released on their own application, regardless of when they enlisted. Other married WAC personnel who enlisted before last May 12 also will be released on application irrespective of their marriage dates.

Jap 1940 Attack 'Not Unlikely,' Probe Hears

Washington, Dec. 19 (AP) — The Army in June, 1940, considered a Japanese attack on Hawaii as "not unlikely" and also anticipated sabotage in the Panama Canal, the Pearl Harbor investigating committee was told today.

The information came to Representative Keefe (R., Wis.) from the War Department and was intended to clear up questions about a 1940 alert in Hawaii that Chief of Staff George C. Marshall was unable to answer during his personal testimony.

Situation Outlined

The document described the "feeling" of the War Plans Division at that time this way:

The British had evacuated Dunkirk.

Russia reached an agreement with Japan about the Manchurian border.

Germany had a good chance to get the French fleet.

A "hostile move" on South America by Axis forces was possible, if the British Isles fell.

The "inference was that Japan and Russia had composed their differences, leaving the Japanese free for any adventure."

Sabotage Evidence

There was evidence of "sabotage plans"—Brazilian sailors said they were told by Japanese that Nippon vessels going through the Panama Canal were to scuttle themselves.

"A diversionary attack on Hawaii was not unlikely."

Accordingly, Lieut. Gen. George V. Strong, then assistant to Marshall, recommended the army alert at Panama and in Hawaii. The alert was reduced after several weeks.

Chairman Barkley (D., Ky.) announced that the committee would meet in a closed session late today to go over "two or three matters," including a decision on how long the 5-week-old inquiry should continue.

Hot Fight Expected

Barkley said it was his own idea that a one-month extension beyond January 3, the original termination date, would be about right. However, Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.) wants an unlimited extension and has estimated that 60 or 90 days extra might be necessary.

The committee session may be a prelude to a hot fight in the Senate and House on extension of the investigation.

Committee Counsel William D. Mitchell and his staff have served notice they intend to quit early in January. Senator Lucas (D., Ill.) said there was little chance of persuading the legal staff to continue beyond that time.

Mitchell read into the record today copies of intercepted messages between Tokyo and Berlin and between Tokyo and Washington. These showed:

On May 3, 1941, Berlin advised Tokyo that the German intelligence service had fairly reliably established that the United States was reading Japanese Ambassador Nomura's code messages from Washington to Tokyo.

The Japanese Embassy here reported to Tokyo on May 5, 1941, that the "most stringent precautions" were being taken.

Discovery By Embassy

On May 20, the embassy reported the discovery that the United States is "reading some of our codes." As to how, the embassy said it would inform Tokyo by courier "or some other safe means."

Another message about the same time reported that the Japanese Navy "S" code had been seized from one of its ships "in a foregin port."

All these messages were long before the Pearl Harbor attack of December 7, 1941. Other evidence in the committee's files shows that the Japanese either did not change their codes, or if they did, that the United States managed to break new ones.

Wilkinson Requestioned

Then Senator Ferguson resumed his questioning of Vice Admiral Theodore S. Wilkinson, chief of naval intelligence at the time of the Pearl Harbor attack.

Wilkson told him once more that he had no idea that the Japanese planned to attack Hawaii, although he was fully aware of Nipponese movements into the South China Sea area by December 1, 1941.

He said he thought the Japanese may have been going into Indo-China or Thailand, or may even have been planning a direct assault on British territory in the Malay Peninsula.

U.S. Codes Destroyed

Wilkinson disclosed that he had sent instructions to United States naval attaches in Tokyo and elsewhere to destroy our codes before the war began.

He did this, he said, because he had learned that the Japanese had instructed their offices to destroy their codes, and he felt that if the Japanese expected developments which might result in seizure of their codes, the United States should be prepared similarly.

Ferguson asked whether Wilkinson knew that Admiral Thomas Hart, then commander of the Asiatic Fleet, had means of getting diplomatic information that was not available to Rear Admiral Husband E. Kimmel, Pacific Fleet commander at Pearl Harbor. Wilkinson said he didn't know that.

"Sub Attack More Likely"

Giving his judgment as a naval officer of 40 years' experience, Wilkinson said he believed in prewar days that a submarine attack on Pearl Harbor was more likely than one from the air. He explained that submarines could move in close with less danger of detection. He anticipated, he added, that an attacking force would be detected.

DEC 2 - 1945

Ferguson brought up an intercepted Japanese message from Honolulu to Tokyo on December, 3, 1941, which was not translated until December 11. This arranged a system of light signals on the United States Fleet movements in the harbor.

But Wilkinson said that even if he had seen it before Pearl Harbor day he doubted that it would have prompted any message to Kimmel at Pearl Harbor. He told Ferguson it "did not give any information except as to whether ships have left or not."

Mitchell Admits Error

Mitchell told the committee he erred previously in telling Ferguson that the Navy had reported there was no evidence pointing to Japanese knowledge of the United States' cod-breaking activity.

In reporting that "all information was to the contrary," Mitchell explained, he had not consulted the Navy Department, but was summarizing information he had.

Mitchell noted that there had been questions as to the Navy's good faith on this point and he wanted to clear up the matter. He added he was "quite willing to be open to criticism."

Keefe (R-Wis.).

The committee authorized Barkley—as he put it—"to cruise around in legal circles" for new counsel.

—William D. Mitchell, former attorney general, and his staff have resigned effective Jan. 3. on the ground that the committee was taking too much time in its cross-examination of witnesses.

Hopes to Complete Testimony

Barkley said also that the committee hopes to complete the testimony of Admiral R. K. Turner, former Chief of Navy War Plans, by Friday night. If unable to do this Turner will return to the stand for a Saturday session. After that the committee will adjourn until Dec. 31 for the Christmas holidays.

The chairman said he had not yet decided whether he himself would ask to be excused from the committee to devote more time to his other duties.

The committee received evidence today that the Army feared a German-Japanese move into South America in June, 1940, screened by a naval raid on Pearl Harbor and sabotage of the Panama Canal.

The Army went on an immediate alert in Hawaii and Panama, then reduced it after several weeks when nothing unusual happened.

Army documents submitted in response to queries from Rep. Frank Keefe (R-Wis) explained the reasons for alerting Hawaii and Panama a year and a half before the Japanese actually struck. The information was provided by Lieut. Gen. George V. Strong in behalf of Gen. George C. Marshall who was unable to give it from memory when he was a witness.

Strong, chief of war plans five years ago, recalled that the Army had these factors in mind at that time:

The British had evacuated Dunkirk June 4, the French fleet was in danger of falling to the Germans.

Japan and Russia had "composed" their differences" over the Manchurian border with a new agreement, June 10, "leaving the Japanese free for any adventure."

Brazilian sailors had tipped off U. S. authorities that Japanese sailors were talking about orders from Tokyo to sabotage the Panama Canal when their vessels passed through the Atlantic-Pacific link.

Strong conferred with Marshall, then chief of staff, and other high officers. They concluded that if the British Isles fell to the Nazis "a hostile move" on South America was immediately possible.

"A diversionary attack on Hawaii was not unlikely," Strong added.

Thus, in Marshall's name, Strong put the Pacific garrisons on war alert, June 17.

The fleet made a feint toward the Canal, hoping to draw any saboteurs there out of hiding by such an overt move toward the Atlantic.

But nothing untoward happened. So the alert was reduced.

After this information was developed, Rep. Keefe questioned Vice Admiral Theodore S. Wilkinson sharply about the Navy's knowledge at that time. Wilkinson, former chief of naval intelligence, said he thought the alert was simply "a practice maneuver, and very well carried out."

Wilkinson told the committee that he never thought the Japanese would be bold enough to "strike direct" at the United States.

They were evidently bent on some kind of conquest in 1941, Wilkinson said, but all of his naval intelligence pointed to a move into Indo-China, Thailand, or perhaps the Malay peninsula.

Attack Investigators Ask Time Extension

Senate-House Group Wants Authority To Continue Pearl Harbor Hearings Until Feb. 15 —Ferguson Dissents.

By Tom Reedy

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19. (AP)—The joint Senate-House committee investigating Pearl Harbor decided tonight to ask Congress for authority to continue its inquiry and complete hearings by Feb. 15.

Report by Jan. 3 Required

The committee now is operating under a resolution requiring a report and conclusions by Jan. 3.

The extension of time was decided in an executive session and announced by Chairman Barkley (D-Ky.).

Senator Ferguson (R-Mich.) voted against the Feb. 15 extension, contending that more time than that would be needed.

Senator Brewster (R-Me.) was recorded as voting present. Barkley said three other Republicans and five Democrats approved the motion which was put by Rep.

FIGHT DEVELOPS OVER EXTENDING HAWAII HEARING

Committee Meets Today to Set Limit—Democrats Favor 30 Days.

FERGUSON WANTS 60 TO 90

Tokyo Intercepts Disclose Japs Knew in Spring of 1941 U. S. Had Broken Code.

Washington, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—The Pearl Harbor congressional investigating committee called an executive session for late today to consider how much longer the five-week-old inquiry shall continue—a question that may eventually bring on a hot fight in Congress.

This was disclosed by Chairman Barkley (D.-Ky.), as the Senate-House investigators received records showing that in the spring of 1941 the Japanese were convinced that the United States was reading some of their secret codes.

Barkley, who returned to the committee after several days illness, did not confirm reports that Democrats will favor only a thirty-day extension of the hearing beyond January 3, the date originally set for its conclusion, but told reporters he thought a one-month extension would be about right. Senator Ferguson (R.-Mich.) is opposed to such a limitation, saying the inquiry should go on as long as necessary. He has estimated this may take an additional sixty or ninety days.

Committee counsel William D. Mitchell and his staff have served notice they intend to quit early in January. Senator Lucas (D.-Ill.) told reporters there was little chance of persuading the legal staff to continue beyond that time.

Mitchell read into the record today copies of intercepted messages between Tokyo and Berlin and between Tokyo and Washington. These showed:

On May 3, 1941, Berlin advised Tokyo that the German intelligence service had fairly reliably established that the United States Government was reading Japanese Ambassador Nomura's code messages from Washington to Tokyo. The Japanese embassy here reported to Toyko on May 5, 1941 that the "most stringent precautions" were being taken.

On May 20, the embassy reported the discovery that the United States is "reading some of our codes." As to how, the embassy said it would inform Tokyo by courier "or some other safe means."

Another message about the same time reported that the Japanese Navy "S" code had been seized from one of its ships "in a foreign port."

All these messages were long before the Pearl Harbor attack of December 7, 1941. Other evidence in the committee's files shows that the Japanese either did not change their codes, or if they did, that the United States managed to break new ones.

Wilkinson Back on Stand.

Then Ferguson resumed his questioning of Vice-Admiral Theodore S. Wilkinson, Chief of Naval Intelligence at the time of the Pearl Harbor attack.

Wilkinson disclosed he had sent instructions to United States naval attaches in Tokyo and elsewhere to destroy our codes before the war began. He did this, he said, because he had learned the Japanese had instructed their offices to destroy their codes and he felt that if the Japanese expected developments which might result in seizure of their codes, the United States should be prepared similarly.

Ferguson asked if Wilkinson knew that Admiral Thomas Hart, then commander of the Asiatic Fleet, had means of getting diplomatic information that was not available to Rear-Admiral Husband E. Kimmel, Pacific Fleet commander at Pearl Harbor. Wilkinson said he didn't know that.

Giving his judgment as a naval officer of forty years' experience, Wilkinson said he believed in prewar days a submarine attack on Pearl Harbor was more likely than one from the air. He explained that submarines could move in close with less danger of detection. He anticipated, he added, that an attacking force would be detected.

Ferguson brought up an intercepted Japanese message from Honolulu to Tokyo on December 3, 1941 which was not translated until December 11. This arrenged a system of light signals on fleet movements in the harbor. But Wilkinson said that even if he had seen it before Pearl Harbor day, he doubted it would have prompted any message to Kimmel at Pearl Harbor. He told Ferguson it "did not give any information except as to whether ships have left or not."

Wilkinson testified he knew of no reason why Kimmel did not relay war warnings from Washington to a task force which left Pearl Harbor for Midway Island two days before the Japanese attacked Hawaii.

Representative Murphy(D.-Pa.) brought up the matter as the committee appeared to be approaching an end to the questioning of Wilkinson. Murphy noted testimony before a Naval inquiry, conducted by Hart, that a task force under Admiral John H. Newton left Pearl Harbor on December 5, 1941. A Navy summation which Murphy read into the record added "Even up to and at the time of his (Newton's) sailing, and thereafter, he remained in ignorance of the existence of the 'war warning' message of November 27, 1941, as well as similar warning messages of November 24 and October 16, 1941."

Murphy asked Wilkinson: "Do you know of any reason in the world why Admiral Kimmel did not tell Newton, who was going in the direction of Japan, of these warnings when he had those messages?"

Wilkinson replied: "I know of no reason, but I'm not the judge."

Asked whether, if he were in Newton's position, he would have wanted to have that information, Wilkinson replied, "Yes, sir."

The Army in June, 1940, considered a Japanese attack on Hawaii as "not unlikely" and also anticipated sabotage in the Panama Canal, according to information which came to Representative Keefe (R.-Wis.) today from the War Department. This information was intended to clear up questions about a 1940 alert in Hawaii that Gen. George C. Marshall was unable to answer during his testimony.

Lieut.-Gen. George V. Strong, then assistant to Marshall, recommended Army alerts at Panama and in Hawaii. The alert was reduced after several weeks.

BYRNES WILL HEAD DELEGATES TO UNO

Washington, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—President Truman informed the Senate today that Secretary of State James F. Byrnes will head the United States delegates to the United Nations session in London on January 10.

Former Secretary of State Edward R. Stettinius Jr., was designated this nation's principal representative with the rank of ambassador.

Mrs. Truman nominated Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, Senator Connally (D.-Tex.), chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and Senator Vandenberg (R.-Mich.) as the other three principal delegates.

Connally asked immediate Senate confirmation of the slate but Senator Langer (R.-S. D.) objected to consideration of Stettinius, and Senator Taft (R.-Ohio) said that he believed the confirmation should be delayed at least one day.

Alternates to the UNO, selected by Mr. Truman, are Representative Sol Bloom (D.-N. Y.), chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee; Representative Charles A. Eaton (R.-N. J.), ranking minority member of that committee; John Foster Dulles of New York, one-time advisor on international affairs to Gov. Dewey; former Senator John G. Townsend (R.-Del.) and Frank C. Walker, former Postmaster-General.

SENATE SENDS UNO BILL TO THE WHITE HOUSE

Accepts Compromise on U. S. Participation in World Group.

TRUMAN EXPECTED TO SIGN

And Name Delegates to London Meeting on Jan. 10—Britain Asks Small Town for Headquarters.

Washington, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—The Senate completed congressional action today on legislation for the active participation of the United States in the United Nations Organization.

30 24 - 32507

Senator Connally (D.-Tex.), chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, obtained approval of a Senate-House conference compromise on a voice vote. This sent the measure to the White House, where President Truman was expected to sign it and soon appoint this nation's representatives to a UNO meeting in London on January 10. The House had approved the compromise version of the legislation about a half hour before the Senate acted.

The legislation included a provision, requested by Senate conferees, that Senate confirmation be required for any American representatives to a UNO commission on atomic energy or similar commissions.

HOUSE PASSES UNRRA BILL

Compromise Measure Now Goes to Senate.

Washington, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—A compromise $2,400,000,000 deficiency appropriation bill carrying $750,000,000 in new funds for the UNRRA was passed today by the House and sent to a waiting Senate.

The funds for the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, first installment on a new authorization of $1,350,000 for that agency, were added to the bill by the Senate after it had passed the House without them. Also accepted by the House was the Senate's addition of new funds for temporary housing for distressed war veterans.

On scores of smaller items on which the two branches had been in disagreement, the compromise followed generally the usual procedure of splitting the difference.

Items Added.

In addition to the UNRRA and veterans' housing funds, the bill carries almost $1,000,000,000 for the national service life insurance fund.

The bill as originally passed by the House carried $1,435,000,000 and the Senate added more than a hundred items. The compromise bill drafted by a committee of Senate House conferees included these Senate increases: $191,900,000 for emergency veterans housing; $1,000,000 for public health services in the Philippines, and $5,575,000 for a Federal Post Office Building in Nashville, Tenn.

A Senate addition of $15,000,000 to continue the school-lunch program was reduced to $7,500,000 and accepted by the House.

Figures On Export Of Grain

Washington, Dec. 19 (AP)—The Agriculture Department announced today it has authorized commercial export of about 17,169,000 bushels of wheat and wheat flour equivalent to Europe, North Africa and South America during January.

This is in addition to an unannounced quantity to be made available to the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration for shipment to European countries receiving relief. UNRRA needs will be supplied from Government-owned stocks.

10,753,000 Bushels

About 10,753,000 bushels were authorized for shipment through regular trade channels to Europe, North Africa and South America. Buying countries must deal with private traders.

An additional 6,415,000 bushels will be shipped to France and French North Africa under previous arrangements made with the United States Government.

The department specified that not more than about 8,728,800 bushels of the January commercial export authorization may be in the form of wheat. The balance must be flour.

Officials estimated that exports of American wheat from July 1 to January 1 will total about 175,000,000 bushels.

Figures By Countries

They expect exports the first half of 1946 to run between 175,000,000 and 225,000,000.

The authorizations for exports during January through regular trade channels included:

France, 4,189,500 bushels; Belgium, 1,293,600; the Netherlands, 883,300; United Kingdom, 2,387,200; Norway, 112,900; Spain, 338,700; Tangier, 149,...00; Portugal, 373,000; Switzerland, 309,590; Finland, 298,400, and Brazil, 522,000.

HOUSE VOTES PLEA ON OPEN PALESTINE

Senate-Passed Resolution Is Approved, Calling for Appeal for British Action

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19 (AP)—The House approved today a Senate-passed resolution calling on the Government to "use its good offices" with Britain to permit free entry of Jews into Palestine. Action was on a voice vote, after members refused, 133 to 36, to send the measure back to committee.

The legislation represents an expression of Congressional opinion, and is not binding on the President.

Passage came despite member arguments that the bill "is a slap at the President, State Department and Great Britain," that it would provoke trouble with Arabs in the Far East and that it would promote anti-Semitism by aiding the creation of a Jewish State in Palestine.

Supporters said neither the President nor the State Department had expressed opposition to House leaders or the foreign affairs group. Critics quoted Senator Tom Connally of Texas as saying President Truman did not want the measure.

Mrs. Luce for Measure

Speaking for the legislation, Representative Clare Booth Luce of Connecticut said:

"It is time to be brutally honest about the Jewish problem and realize there are only three steps we can take."

She listed these as to open the doors of immigration in the United States to "our quota of suffering Jewry," to find a place of refuge for the Jews in Europe or Africa or the "place they prefer, Palestine, and guarantee this by force of arms, if necessary," or "let them die while we weep crocodile tears over their graves."

Representative James W. Wadsworth of New York said he opposed the measure because "its riginal motive ha. been superseded by a political objective, the establishment in Palestine of a Jewish state." He continued:

"The thing I dread about this political objective is that it will tend to segregate the people of Jewish faith away from their n..ghbors and furnish fuel to that stupid, horrible thing known as anti-Semitism."

Democratic Leader John W. McCormack of Massachusetts and Republican Leader Joseph W. Martin Jr. of Massachusetts spoke for the bill. They argued that it could "do no harm and might be helpful in solving a difficult question."

NEW GI RIGHTS BILL PASSED

Compromise Measure Sent To The White House

Washington, Dec. 19 (AP)—Congress passed a broad revision of the GI Bill of Rights today, liberalizing rules on loans and education for veterans. The measure now goes to the White House.

The House adopted it, 134 to 23, on a standing vote, and the Senate shouted its approval a short time later.

The New Features

New features include:

1. Removal of a requirement that tuition fees, unemployment compensation and defaults on loans be deducted from any future Federal bonus.

2. Increase in subsistence allowance for GI students from $50 to $65 monthly to those unmarried and $75 to $90 for those married.

3. Expense-paid correspondence courses and short technical courses.

4. Removal of a requirement that men over 25 must show their education was interfered with to be eligible for educational benefits.

5. Increase in maximum Government loan guarantee from $2,000 to $4,000 on real estate, plus permitting a maximum $8,000 loan, with the Government guaranteeing half.

6. Real-estate loans to be arranged by recognized lending agencies, the veteran and the local appraiser of the Veterans Administration, an agreement of the three to be binding on the administration. Business loans still would require administration approval.

7. Easing up on loans by substituting "reasonable value" of property as the basic consideration instead of "normally reasonable value."

8. Additional purposes for which a loan may be obtained and more time to pay back a real-estate loan.

9. Americans who fought for allied governments would come under the bill.

The revision was a compromise after weeks of heated controversy.

Churchill To Visit U.S. For His Health

Washington, Dec. 19 (AP)—The White House disclosed today that Winston Churchill, former British Prime Minister, is coming to the United States early next year.

The White House said Churchill would leave England by ship for New York about the middle of January. The announcement, made simultaneously in Washington and London, added that Churchill's medical adviser, Lord Moran, has sugested he spend "a month o. more in a warm climate to have a complete rest."

Will Speak At College

Churchill will discuss "World Affairs" in an address at Westminster College, Fulton, Mo., on March 5.

The former premier will be introduced there by President Truman. The White House said the President had indorsed the invitation extended by the college.

Churchill has accepted the invitation of Col. Frank Clarke of Quebec, to stay at his house in Florida during February, the announcement added.

Wife, Daughter To Make Trip

The announcement continued: "Mr. Churchill does not contemplate any other public engagement in the United States at the present time. He will be accompanied on his visit to Florida by Mrs. Churchill and his daughter, Mrs. Saran Oliver."

Churchill And Truman Will Receive Degrees

Fulton, Mo., Dec. 19 (AP)—The announcement today that Winston Churchill will speak on "World Affairs" at Westminster College here March 5, 1946, caused a deep stir, and immediately started Fulton citizens preparing for the biggest day in the town's history.

Churchill was invited last October through the White House by F. L. McCleur, Westminster College president.

McCleur announced that honorary degrees of doctors of law will be presented to Churchill and Truman during their visit.

Senate Votes Cut In Rationing Act To 6-Month Life

Washington, Dec. 19 (AP)—Six Southern Democratic senators teamed with a solid Republican bloc today to vote a six-month rather than a full year's extension for the Second War Powers Act under which rationing is carried out.

The thin margin of one vote—the roll call was 31 to 30—assured the six-months-only extension previously approved by the House.

Tydings, of Maryland, and Byrd, of Virginia, were among the six Democrats voting for the six-month extension.

Senate Republicans argued successfully for the six-month limit, pointing out that OPA's price control power runs out next June and declaring the ration and price authority should be considered together.

Housing-Chance Plea By U.S.

Washington, Dec. 19 (AP)—Bitter industry criticism of the Government's new housing program brought a plea from Federal officials today to "give it a chance."

They contended that there is no basis for assertions by building material producers that the program is unworkable and unrealistic, and they expressed confidence that it will speed relief of the housing shortage.

The OPA, a principal target of industry at the conclusion of a Government-sponsored housing conference, said a number of price increases to spur production have already been granted.

To industry contentions that the Government had its mind made up about the program when it called this week's advisory conference of labor and management representatives, Civilian Production Administrator John D. Small replied:

"President Truman has outlined a critical housing problem, and he has instructed us to get homes built for veterans as quickly as possible. We are consulting with the industry to the fullest extent possible under the emergency circumstances. If management and labor and each community will co-operate wholeheartedly, I think this program can be far more successful than anyone expects."

U.S. Aid Held Needed In Any Atomic Plant

Washington, Dec. 19 (AP)—An engineer told the Senate Atomic Committee today he doubted if any foreign country could build an atomic bomb plant like that at Oak Ridge, Tenn., without the aid of the United States.

The witness was Frank R. Creedon, former resident manager for Stone and Webster Engineering Corporation at Oak Ridge.

Any foreign country's main difficulties, Creedon told the committee, would be lack of the United States caliber of engineering technique and mass-production facilities.

McVay Is Partly Cleared; Negligence Charge Remains

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19. (AP)—Capt. Charles B. McVay, 3rd, was acquitted on a charge of inefficiency today in the loss of the cruiser Indianapolis but no immediate report was filed on an additional charge of negligence.

Announcements Restricted

Under general court martial procedure, a finding of guilty on any count is not announced immediately. It is withheld pending review by the judge advocate general of the Navy. Immediate announcements are restricted to allegations which the court finds "not proved."

Capt. McVay was pale and obviously shaken as the court martial failed to announce acquittal on the negligence charge. There were tears in the eyes of Mrs. McVay, who has attended all the proceedings.

McVay's close friend, Capt. Thomas J. Ryan, Jr., who was the judge advocate prosecutor, tried in vain to control his voice as he said, "I'm sorry," to McVay.

The latter replied:

"It's for the good of the service, whatever the findings."

The final verdict will be announced by the secretary of the navy, who may lessen or revoke any recommended punishment, but may not increase it.

Presidential Review Necessary

A sentence involving dismissal or death must be reviewed by the President. Court officials estimated the time required for review at about a month.

The inefficiency charge, found not proved, was based on an allegation that McVay neglected to issue "timely" abandon ship orders, as a result of which many lives were lost. The other charge, negligence, grew out of his asserted failure to order a zigzag course through possibly dangerous waters.

The seven man court, headed by Rear Admiral Wilder D. Baker, announced its finding after more than two hours deliberation, following final arguments of the prosecution and defense.

Capt. McVay made no comment on the outcome.

Possible sentences under wartime conditions range from a maximum of death or dismissal down to a reduction of a few numbers in grade, which would have the effect of delaying future promotions.

After announcing its finding, the court invited any further arguments in "aggravation, mitigation or extenuation."

The defense then called the judge advocate, Capt. Thomas J. Ryan, Jr., to testify on Capt. McVay's official record, which was offered in evidence. Capt. Ryan testified that the "only unfavorable entry" in the record pertained to the loss of the Indianapolis, and in general it deserved the classification of "outstanding."

In strict confidence to the Judge Advocate General of the Navy who will review it for legality.

The record may also go to the chief of the Bureau of Personnel for recommendations on the basis of McVay's record. Then it will go to the Secretary of the Navy, who may announce the final verdict.

McVay said he had no statement to make on the court's action.

Before the officers of the court retired at 11:45 A. M., to deliberate on their verdict, they heard summations by prosecution and defense counsel.

General Somervell Plans Retirement Next April

Washington, Dec. 19 (AP)—Gen. Brehon Somervell, Chief of Army Service Forces, will retire on April 29.

The War Department said today he is beginning a 120-day terminal leave. Somervell, ASF chief since its formation in 1942, will retire at his permanent rank of major general. He was promoted to four-star rank early this year.

McVay Cleared of One Charge

Court Finds Indianapolis Skipper Not Guilty of Inefficiency—Silent on Zigzag.

Washington, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—A Navy general court-martial today acquitted Capt. Charles B. McVay 3d of inefficiency in the loss of the heavy cruiser Indianapolis, but withheld announcement of findings on the charge that his negligence contributed to the disaster.

Under Navy regulations, a general court finding involving any degree of guilt is withheld from publication pending a review by higher naval authorities.

The negligence specification charges that McVay failed to have the Indianapolis on a zigzag course in waters where enemy submarine contacts had been plotted.

The Indianapolis went down last July 30 between Guam and Leyte, with the loss of 880 lives, after it had been torn by two heavy explosions.

The court deliberated more than two hours before announcing its findings on the charge of inefficiency.

Under court-martial procedure, the record affecting the charge of negligence will be forwarded

Army Names Parks Head Of Public Relations

1st Air-borne Army Chief to Serve Under Collins

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19 (AP).—Major General Floyd L. Parks was appointed director of the War Department's Bureau of Public Relations today.

General Parks, a native of Louisville, succeeds Colonel R. Ernest Dupuy, who has been serving as acting director. He was commander of the 1st Allied Air-Borne Army in Europe.

Colonel Dupuy was acting chief of public relations for the supreme Allied command from May, 1944, to September, 1944, a period which included the invasion of the Continent. He is a resident of Washington and a veteran of Army service.

To Serve Under Collins

General aPrks will serve under Lieutenant General J. Lawton Collins, who was appointed yesterday as director of information for the War Department, in charge of the information and education division and the legislative and liaison division, as well as the bureau of public relations.

War Powers Act Extension Rejected

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19 (AP)—The Senate declined today to extend the second war powers act more than six months, rejecting, 31 to 30, the judiciary committee's recommendation that the extension cover all next year.

Then by a voice vote, the Senate sent the six-month extension bill back to the House for consideration of minor amendments.

The second war powers act includes authority to ration scarce articles.

The House had voted the extension only until next June 30, and the Senate backed this up by a one-vote margin.

Officer Who Gave Life Beyond Duty Voted Medal

Observer, He Rallied Infantry Which Lost Its Leaders

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19 (AP).—A lieutenant whose regular assignment was an artillery observer, but who rallied and led a commanderless infantry company through two assaults has been awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor posthumously. The hero, First Lieutenant James E. Robinson, of Waco, Tex., died of wounds received in the second assault.

Lieutenant Robinson took over the 63d Infantry Division company when its commander and most of the key personnel were killed by German fire near Untergriesheim, last April. In the first attack he led, he killed ten Germans who challenged the advance of the advance of the company. After this action, the company was ordered to take a nearby town. The mission was accomplished, but in the battle Lieutenant Robinson was shot through the throat. Although he knew failure to receive medical aid would cost him his life, he remained with the company until the objective was taken. Then he walked nearly two miles to an aid station, where he died.

His widow will receive the medal.

Senate Sets Hearings On Anglo-U.S. Oil Pact

Washington, Dec. 19 (AP) — The Senate Foreign Relations Committee today announced public hearings would begin January 21 on ratification of the pending Anglo-American oil treaty.

Signed several weeks ago in London, the pact provides for collaboration of American and British interests in developing their oil resources throughout the world.

House Votes For Sale Of Silver To Industry

Washington, Dec. 19 (AP) — The House passed and sent to the Senate today legislation authorizing the Treasury to sell or lease Government-held silver for industrial use for the next two years.

Passage was by voice vote after Representative White (R., Idaho) had sought unsuccessfully to boost from 71.11 cents to $1.29 an ounce the minimum price at which the metal could be sold.

U. S. Praise For Negrin Seen As Dig At Franco

Washington, Dec. 19 (AP)—The United States took an indirect dig at Generalissimo Franco today by speaking kind words about Dr. Juan Negrin, Spanish Republican leader.

Dean Acheson, Acting Secretary of State, told his news conference he had high admiration for Negrin's ability and that he had enjoyed a long and very helpful talk with the last Premier of Republican Spain on Saturday.

In response to a question, however, Acheson said the fact he had conferred with Negrin at the latter's request did not indicate any new development in United States policy toward Franco.

Senate Passes GI Wives Bill

Washington, Dec. 19 (AP)—The Senate today unanimously approved a measure to cut red tape for the entry into this country of the wives of service men married overseas and their children. The bill, already passed by the House, now goes to the White House.

'Inflationary Situation' Blamed On Subsidies

Washington, Dec. 19 (AP)—Representative Phillips (R., Cal.) contends that wartime consumer food subsidies have "created an inflationary situation for which the Administration has yet no answer."

A member of the Republican Congressional Food Study Committee, Phillips declared that the situation he complained of "will increase in seriousness when subsidies are removed next spring."

Removal of subsidies, he said, will result in an overall increase in food prices.

"One doesn't need to be a prophet to predict the effect that such a drastic increase in food prices next summer will have upon our economy," he added.

Washington, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—President Truman, his face crinkled in smiles, received today his first Christmas present—an oil portrait of his mother, Mrs. Martha Truman.

Told by Frank S. Land, who made the presentation, that his 93-year-old mother had sat from five to six hours a day for six days during the painting, the President commented: "They don't make them like her any more."

Land, secretary-general of the Order of Demolay, presented the portrait on behalf of that organization in a brief ceremony at the President's office.

Land said that when he talked last with the President's mother at Grandview, Mo., she told him: "You tell him to come when he can, but you tell him, 'Harry, you behave yourself!'"

"She's been telling me that for sixty years," the President remarked with a laugh, adding that he intended to hang the portrait in the White House study "where I can see it all the time."

Jerry Farnsworth, Cape Cod artist, painted the portrait.

Truman Given Etching, Book

Washington, Dec. 19 (AP)—President Truman today received the first copy of an etching the city of Baltimore plans to present to distinguished visitors to Baltimore. Mayor Theodore McKeldin took it to the White House, where he also presented the President with an autographed copy of "The Perilous Fight."

This book, by Neil H. Swanson, executive editor of the Baltimore Sunpapers, deals with the battle of Fort McHenry and North Point in the War of 1812. It is in the nature of a biography of Gen. Sam Smith.

The etching, an original work showing the famous Washington Monument in Baltimore, is the work of Don Swann, Baltimore artist. Swann, City Solicitor Simon Sobeloff and Senator Radcliffe accompanied the Mayor to the White House.

LOW PAY CITED BY RAMSPECK

Two Others Leaving Congress For Higher-Salary Jobs

Washington, Dec. 19 (AP)—Representative Robert Ramspeck (D., Ga.), the House majority whip, joined two departing colleagues today in giving poor pay as his reason for quitting Congress.

Ramspeck counseled House members in a "swan song" speech that they not only should up their $10,000 a year salaries but also should vote funds for establishing offices for themselves in their home districts.

Representatives Woodrum (D., Va.) and Weiss (D., Pa.) already have announced they are leaving for more lucrative jobs.

Elaborating on his proposal for "home offices" for congressmen, Ramspeck said:

"We must do something to give the people better service in the things they want, and at the same time remove some of the tremendous burden of work from the members.

"We ought to provide funds for well-staffed offices in each district, and also allow more money for larger and better staffs in our offices and committees in Washington."

DEC 20 1945

30.24 - 32509

Ramspeck termed the present salary scale "a shame and a disgrace." He said that of the $10,000 "the average congressman gets less than $5,000 for his living expenses, because of taxes and the money which must be spent in connection with our work."

Retirement Insurance

Ramspeck also pleaded for "an adequate system of retirement insurance" for congressmen, asserting:

"The principal reason I am leaving is because I must look to the economic future of myself and my family."

The Georgian is to become executive vice president of the Air Transport Association of America at a reported salary of more than $25,000 a year. Woodrum is to become president of the American Plant Food Council at a similarly reported figure. Weiss is to be a judge in the Allegheny county (Pa.) Common Pleas Court. This will pay him $14,000 but he figures he will save a lot of his present expenses.

S.S. Belgian Sailor Sends Distress Signal

New York, Dec. 19 (AP)—The Navy reported tonight that the S.S. Belgian Sailor was in distress in the North Atlantic with a damaged rudder.

The ship sent an SOS at 5 P.M., giving its position as 45-40 north and 41-05 west.

The 7,000-ton Belgian-owned ship was bound from Cardiff, Wales, to New Yorw city and carried no troops.

Several ships were in contact with the damaged vessel, the Navy reported, and were expected to proceed to the scene. Named among the rescue ships was the S.S. George E. Carlisle.

Fitzpatrick Belittles Dewey's Dec. 7 Silence

Says Revelation About Code Might Have Been Treason

GENEVA, N. Y., Dec. 19 (AP).—Governor Thomas E. Dewey would have committed "political suicide" and risked prosecution for treason if he had revealed the cracking of Japan's military code during the war, Paul E. Fitzpatrick, Democratic State Chairman, asserted tonight.

"For the last few months," as a prelude to the 1946 and 1948 campaigns, Mr. Fitzpatrick said in a speech prepared for delivery at a dinner in honor of Mayor Charles F. Neider, "Republican masterminds have been giving Governor Dewey a build-up as a super-patriot—a man who threw away his chances to become President by not making public during the 1944 campaign the fact that the United States had broken the Japs' top military code."

"The truth of the matter is that Dewey had no choice," Mr. Fitzpatrick maintained. "To begin with, he had knowledge to which he had no right. General (George C.) Marshall has declared that the breaking of the code was a vital military secret.

"Had Dewey refused to keep that secret, many fighting men, now home for Christmas, would have paid with their lives. Had he revealed this secret he would have committed political suicide and possibly subjected himself to prosecution for treason."

General Marshall testified at the Pearl Harbor Congressional investigation that he had urged Mr. Dewey not to reveal that the code had been cracked. Governor Dewey kept the secret.

New Year's after the war at the Book-Cadillac Hotel in Detroit.

Later In 9th Air Force

"We picked Detroit because it was centrally located for Americans and Canadians and because we had had so much fun there during our training in Ontario," Parker, a flying officer in the RCAF and later a captain in a fighter group of the American 9th Air Force, continued.

The 26-year-old flyer, who was discharged from the Air Forces last September, is only certain that one other of his classmates is alive. He is Paul Forcey, of Woodland, Pa.

"Besides the two of us there might be others. I am afraid that wherever they may be they may hesitate to come to Detroit for fear they'll be alone at our get-together. I want those others—if there are any more—to know that at least two of us will be there," Parker said.

Rooms Promised

"The manager of the Book-Cadillac Hotel has offered to hold rooms for as many of us as he hears from."

The others who Parker believes may be alive include Jack Beers, Brooklyn, N.Y.; Ed Rylands, Ontario; Grant Aitchison, Ontario; Jack Doyle, Elizabeth, N.J.; Joe Mordheimer, Brooklyn; Dick DeBourke, Newtonville, Mass.; Bob Hendricks, Cleveland, Ohio; Vic Thagard, Winnipeg, Manitoba; Pete Peterson, Winnipeg, Manitoba; Mac McNicholas, West Virginia (town unavailable), and Donat LaPointe, Dalhousie, Quebec.

Parker, who attended the University of North Carolina, is from Garyburg, N.C., where his mother, Mrs. S. C. Parker, lives. He and his wife now live in Richmond.

50 Flyers Pledged To Meet After War; Only 2 May Do So

Richmond, Va., Dec. 19 (AP)—In the fall of 1941 50 young officers of the Royal Canadian Air Force, en route to England, realizing that they would become separated and lose contnact with another, made a pledge to meet on the first New Year's Day after the war in Detroit.

But only two of that group of 50 may be able to keep the promise.

"During the war, I kept close watch on the casualty lists. I've checked off about 80 per cent of our number either 'killed in action,' 'missing in action,' or prisoners of war," said Seth T. Parker, of Richmond, one of the 50 who agreed to the postwar meeting.

"It was hopeless for 50 of us to try to keep in contact by mail, so we agreed to meet on the first

ATC Demonstrates Safety Equipment For Planes

Morrison Army Air Field, Fla., Dec. 19 (AP)—Radar and radio instruments which were kept highly secret during the war were unveiled today by the Army Air Transport Command as "additional safeties and comforts for the commercial operation of airplanes."

Before an assemblage of Civil Aeronautics Authority officials, airline representatives and newspaper men, the ATC displayed its radio and radar facilities which were used to bring hundreds of airplanes safely across the Atlantic.

Aboard A C-54 Plane

Gen. Haywood S. Hansell, Jr., commanding general, Caribbean wing, Atlantic Division, ATC, said the purpose of the demonstration "is to convince you gentlemen of the CAA and civil airline companies that we earnestly desire to help in the development of American transport aviation, and that we can really be useful."

The radar scope was demonstrated as a landing aid when employed with a ground beacon, and in flight as equipment which enables a crew to spot storms and to steer aircraft away from centers of turbulence.

Aboard a C54 plane flying over Miami, the guests were able to get aradar picture of breaks in the contour of the land, to note where land met water, pick up the bridges of the causeways joining Miami and Miami Beach, and to detect ships at sea.

Stassen Talks On Labor Field

Cincinnati, Dec. 19 (AP)—Harold E. Stassen, former governor of Minnesota, tonight called for "new answers in the science of government of free men."

"Government has not kept pace," he said in an address before the American Bar Association's sixty-eighth annual convention, in a world which "in a single generation," has witnessed two world wars and a world-wide depression.

"Extreme industrial strife at the very time production is most needed, and the shortage of millions of houses, are two of the most striking examples of the inadequacies of the machinery of government in the domestic field," he declared.

"The current scene of industrial strife and the very grave effect which continued major stoppages of production can have upon our entire economy and living standards," Stassen declared, "clearly indicate the need for new answers in the field of labor relations."

Stassen, a United States delegate to the San Francisco charter meeting of the United Nations Organization, declared that although "we knew that banding together . . . as a continuing organization for peace was of fundamental importance, first priority must be that of making a start, rather than seeking too much and failing to start at all."

Need Of Fertilizer In Germany Stressed

Chicago, Dec. 19 (AP)—Importing into Germany of 284,000 metric tons of nitrogen and 300,000 metric tons of phosphate fertilizers is "urgently needed" before the 1947 spring planting of crops, Dr. Albert Newman reported to the American Institute of Chemical Engineers today.

Dr. Newman, on leave as dean of engineering, City College of New York, is in Berlin with the Four-Power occupation force's industry branch, economics division, and his address was read by Dr. L. W. Bass, New York, retiring president of the institute, at the closing session of the group's thirty-eighth annual meeting.

Coal, Coke And Electricity

Discussing problems of starting production in Germany of urgently needed products, Dr. Newman said the foremost requirements were coal, coke and electric energy. Using synthetic nitrogen, needed for fertilizing 1946 crops, as an example, he said "the highest British, Russian, French and American authorities have authorized that everything possible be done to get the nitrogen plants in their respective zones operating at their maximum capacities."

Nevertheless," he continued, "it has not been possible to deliver to these plants anything like their complete requirements of coal and coke. The United States zone has only one nitrogen plant, a cyanamid plant in "Bavaria, with electrical requirements normally furnished by water power."

Higgins Drafts Bill Revising Labor Act

New Orleans, Dec. 19 (AP)—Andrew J. Higgins, the boat manufacturer who closed his plants here after disputes with labor unions, today proposed amendments to the Wagner Act which he said would put management and labor "on an equal footing in the eyes of the law."

Higgins spokesmen said copies of his proposed bill, which is a development of ideas he expressed recently in a speech, had been mailed to every member of Congress.

The Proposals

The bill would require a 75 per cent vote of the employés covered by a labor agreement before a closed shop provision could be adopted; define refusal by a union to carry on collective bargaining with an employer as an unfair labor practice; provide machinery under which the National Labor Relations Board could withdraw bargaining recognition from unions; and make unions liable for back pay to compensate employés for time lost in strikes subsequently declared "unfair labor practice."

Higgins proposed writing into the law a definition of collective bargaining to include "the making of every reasonable effort to settle matters in dispute by peaceful and lawful negotiation, including compliance with the provisions of existing agreements."

TRAINS RUSHED FOR VETERANS

Navy Hopes To Move 25,000 Daily From West Coast

San Francisco, Dec. 19 (AP)—The Navy today voiced hopes that at least 25,000 service men could be moved homeward daily by rail from West Coast ports between now and Christmas.

Movement of 25,000 daily would at least put all of the 125,000 wistful men now in port on trains by Christmas Day, but the Pacific transport fleet expects to deliver an additional 90,000 men to the mainland in the next six days.

Several thousand additional service men, however, are moving out of the ports daily by plane, bus and automobile, 12th Naval District headquarters reported.

Rail Equipment Moved

The 25,000 figure, a navy spokesman said, represents a substantial increase and is expected to result from transfer of additional railway equipment for movement of homeward-bound sailors, soldiers and Marines.

An allotment of railway equipment along the West Coast will bring about 40 per cent of the travel space to San Francisco, 35 per cent to the Portland-Seattle area and 25 per cent to Los Angeles and San Diego.

San Francisco's total of service men looking for a ride soared to 50,243 and officials were pressed for lodgings for them.

Six ships were used as floating barracks for 13,500 of the soldiers, and Camp Knight, at Oakland, with barracks for 5,000, and Camp Kohler, at Sacramento, with room for the same number, were added for the emergency to the two existing staging areas near the port.

20,000 May Be Stranded

The Army ordered post exchanges, telegraph officers and an army bus route established at San Francisco piers for the "barracks" ships.

San Francisco port of embarkation officials expect between 20,000 and 30,000 soldiers to be stranded here on Christmas Day.

In Los Angeles, Brig. Gen. James K. Herbert, commanding general of the port of embarkation, expressed hope that most, if not all, of the service men now there would be off their ships by Christmas.

In the Seattle and Portland areas the backlog reached 44,384.

A case of smallpox will delay the debarking of 1,861 men from one ship, the Gruney, due to dock tomorrow at Portland.

1,000 Homeless After Blast

San Diego, Cal., Dec. 19 (AP)—Seven persons were hospitalized, one of them with serious injuries, and approximately 1,000 others left homeless when a flaming navy ammunition truck and trailer exploded with a terrific blast on a highway 15 miles north of here yesterday afternoon.

Six of the injured, all Marines, were taken to the near-by naval hospital. One is being treated for a skull fracture and the others for lacerations from broken glass. One woman, cut about the face, also was given hospital treatment.

Camp Matthews, near the site of the explosion, reported sixteen Marines were cut by flying glass.

All of the homeless were residents of the Torrey Pines Federal Housing Project, close by. John Arvin, Federal Housing Administrator, estimated 85 per cent of the 214 units in the projects were seriously damaged, with windows shattered, partitions knocked down and ends of buildings blown out.

The damaged project was of temporary construction, and officials indicated it might not be rebuilt.

The blast dug a crater 50 feet wide in United States Highway 101, chief coastwise traffic artery, forcing diversion of all travel to parallel routes.

Navy officials reported the truck was en route from San Diego to Fallbrook, Cal., with a load of 57 rocket motors, 24 depth-charge extenders, 49 depth-charge pistols, 29 depth-charge boosters and .40-millimeter shells.

Possible loss of life was averted when the driver, John Ayala, of Fallbrook, discovered his gasoline tank afire, jumped out and warned authorities at La Jolla Junction, 150 yards away, of the danger.

NAZI CASUALTIES (275)
BY DANIEL DE LUCE

NUERNBERG, DEC 19-(AP)-A CAPTURED NAZI DOCUMENT SHOWS THAT THE GERMAN ARMY HIGH COMMAND ADMITTED JUST BEFORE THE ARDENNES COUNTER-OFFENSIVE IN DECEMBER, 1944, THAT GERMANY HAD LOST 3,544,284 MEN KILLED OR MISSING DURING MORE THAN FIVE YEARS OF WAR.

THE REPORT, PREPARED FOR ADOLF HITLER'S HEADQUARTERS, DID NOT INCLUDE WOUNDED, BUT AN ATTACHED NOTE STATED THAT 729,031 WEHRMACHT WOUNDED AND SICK WERE HOSPITALIZED IN THE REICH AT THE TIME THE DOCUMENT WAS COMPILED.

HITLER TOLD THE TRUTH ABOUT THE LOW NUMBER OF GERMAN CASUALTIES IN THE POLAND CAMPAIGN, BUT WAS AN INVETERATE LIAR IN HIS ACCOUNTINGS OF CASUALTIES IN SUBSEQUENT BATTLES, THE REPORT INDICATED.

CASUALTIES ON THE EASTERN FRONT UP TO NOV.30, 1944, WERE LISTED IN THE DOCUMENT AS 1,410,728 DEAD AND 907,050 MISSING. ACCEPTING THE USUAL MILITARY RATIO OF FOUR MEN WOUNDED FOR EACH MAN KILLED, THESE FIGURES WOULD PLACE TOTAL GERMAN CASUALTIES ON THE EASTERN FRONT THROUGH NOV.30, 1944 AT APPROXIMATELY 8,000,000.

SOVIET ESTIMATES PLACED GERMAN CASUALTIES IN THE EAST AT 12,000,000.

THE WEHRMACHT STATISTICS SHOWED 701,734 ARMY, NAVY AND AIR FORCE DEAD AS OF AUG.11, 1942. ON THAT SAME DATE, HITLER ANNOUNCED THAT ONLY 350,000 GERMANS HAD BEEN KILLED.

THE REPORT ALSO LISTED THESE CASUALTIES:

POLISH CAMPAIGN--16,343 DEAD, 320 MISSING.

AFRICA--10,013 DEAD (THIS FIGURE IS BLURRED ON THE PHOOOGRAPHIC COPY OF THE GERMAN RECORDS, 90,052 MISSING.

WESTERN FRONT--UP TO JUNE 1, 1944, SIX DAYS BEFORE D-DAY, 66,106 DEAD, 3,218 MISSING. FROM JUNE TO DEC.1, 1944, 54,764 DEAD, 338,033 MISSING.

ITALY AND SICILY--47,873 DEAD, 97,153 MISSING.

THE BALKANS AND VREEK ISLANDS--24,207 DEAD, 12,060 MISSING.

DR. CONANT, WHO WAS SAID TO HAVE A SLIGHT COLD, DID NOT ATTEND YESTERDAY'S SESSION, BUT IT WAS RECALLED THAT BEVIN HAD DECLARED DISCUSSIONS OF THE ATOMIC QUESTION SHOULD BE ON A POLICY BASIS AND NOT ON A SCIENTIFIC BASIS. PERSONS AT SPERIDOMIFKA PALACE FOR THE SESSION SAID BYRNES AND HIS ADVISORS WERE THE FIRST TO LEAVE. THEY EMERGED FROM THE CONFERENCE ROOM ENGAGED IN A SERIOUS, ANIMATED CONVERSATION. BEVIN AND HIS STAFF CAME NEXT. BEVIN WAS SAID TO HAVE BEEN IN A SOLEMN MOOD.

OBSERVERS BELIEVED THIS MERELY MEANT THE FOREIGN MINISTERS WERE NOW DOWN TO WORK ON THE REAL BUSINESS OF THE MEETING AND THAT THEY CAME AWAY FROM THE CONFERENCE TABLE WITH THE SUBJECTS ON THEIR MINDS. THERE WAS NO CHANGE IN THE ATMOSPHERE OF CORDIALITY WHICH HAS BEEN PRESENT THROUGHOUT THE TALKS.

MOSCOW, DEC. 19-(AP)-PRAVDA WRITER N.SOKOLOVSKY SAID TODAY "THE EXISTENCE OF BIG AMERICAN ARMED FORCES IN CHINA X X X RIGHTFULLY ALARMS THE DEMOCRATIC PUBLIC NOT ONLY OF CHINA AND THE UNITED STATES, BUT OF THE WHOLE WORLD."

"THIS ALARM," SOKOLOVSKY WROTE, "DOES NOT BECOME ANY LESS IN THE LIGHT OF THE NUMEROUS STATEMENTS OF OPINION BY FORMER U.S. AMBASSADOR HURLEY.

"HE HAS DEVELOPED OUTSPOKENLY AN IMPERIALISTIC PROGRAM FOR AMERICAN PENETRATION TO CHINA WITH AN AIM OF COUNTERACTING 'ENGLISH IMPERIALISM' AND 'SOVIET IMPERIALISM'--INVENTED BY HIMSELF."

SOKOLOVSKY SAID PRESIDENT TRUMAN HAD EXPLAINED THAT, FOR ONE THING, U.S. FORCES WERE HELPING TO DISARM THE JAPANESE.

THE WRITER COMMENTED THAT THIS "CANNOT SERVE AS SUFFICIENT REASON FOR THE TRANSFER OF LARGE AMERICAN ARMED FORCES TO THE NORTH OF CHINA," AND THAT CHINA'S ARMED FORCES SHOULD BE ABLE TO HANDLE THAT DETAIL.

"THE BROADER TASKS MENTIONED IN PRESIDENT TRUMAN'S EXPLANATION CANNOT FAIL TO CAUSE PERPLEXITY BECAUSE THIS EXPLANATION NOT ONLY TALKS ABOUT THE FULL REMOVAL OF JAPANESE INFLUENCE IN CHINA BUT EVEN ABOUT ACHIEVING SUCH AN AIM AS THE CREATION OF A UNITED, DEMOCRATIC AND PEACEFUL CHINA," THE ARTICLE SAID.

"HOW ARE SUCH TAKS SOLVED WITH THE AID OF FOREIGN TROOPS? IN ANY CASE, ONE THING IS CLEAR. IF ONE DOES SPEAK OF ROOTING OUT JAPANESE INFLUENCE, ONE CANNOT FAIL TO AGREE THAT THE TASK IS MORE IMPORTANT IN MANCHURIA, WHERE THERE WERE AN ESPECIALLY LARGE NUMBER OF JAPANESE TROOPS."

TIENTSIN, DEC.19-(AP)-BEARDED BUT NONE THE WORSE FOR THEIR 35-DAY ORDEAL, SIX U.S. MARINE FLIERS RETURNED HERE SAFELY TODAY AFTER BEING IN CHINESE COMMUNIST HANDS IN A VILLAGE 90 MILES SOUTH OF PEIPING SINCE NOV.10.

THEY ARE: LT.ROBERT A.HOLBROK, THREE RIVERS, TEX.; WARRANT OFFICER JOHN BIELER, JR., SEDGWICK, COLO.; TECH.SGT. CHARLES CARINO LEONE, ANNANDALE-ON-HUDSON, N.Y.; SGT. [illegible] J.MURPHY, 44 ALLEN ST., HUDSON FALLS, N.Y.; PFC [illegible] POAGE, EVANSVILLE, IND.; AND PFC.ROY VANTILE CURTIS, [illegible] SPRINGS, TENN.

THE FLIERS BECAME LOST IN BAD WEATHER BETWEEN PEIPING AND TIENTSIN IN A TORPEDO BOMBER NOV.10 AND CRASH-LANDED NEAR THE VILLAGE OF HOCHIN.

THE MEN SAID COMMUNISTS AND BANDITS LOOTED THEM OF PERSONAL EFFECTS AND MENACED THEM FREQUENTLY WITH GUNS.

HOLBROOK SAID WHEN HE DEMANDED RELEASE, COMMUNIST OFFICERS REPLIED THE AFFAIR WAS "A POLITICAL PROBLEM" WHICH HAD TO BE HANDLED THROUGH CHANNELS.

(CHINESE COMMUNISTS ARMIES HOLD SOME SECTORS, CHIEFLY IN NORTH CHINA, IN OPPOSITION TO FORCES OF THE CHINESE CENTRAL GOVERNMENT).

HOLBROOK TOLD THE COMPLETE STORY THIS MORNING TO MAJ.GEN. KELLER E.ROCKEY OF THE THIRD AMPHIBIOUS FORCE. HE SAID MOST OF THE TIME THE SIX WERE FED GOOD CHINESE FOOD.

THE COMMUNISTS KEPT THE FLIERS OUT OF SIGHT WHEN MARINE PLANES FLEW OVERHEAD ALTHOUGH THE COMMUNISTS INSISTED THE SIX WERE OT PRISONERS.

THE COMMUNISTS TRIED CONSTANTLY TO INDOCTRINATE THE FLIERS, AND ONCE ASKED HOLBROOK AND LEONE FOR STATEMENTS OF PRAISE FOR THEIR TREATMENT. BOTH REFUSED. THEY ALSO REFUSED TO POSE FOR PHOTOGRAPHS WHICH THE COMMUNISTS SAID WERE WANTED AS SOUVENIRS.

THEY SAID THE COMMUNISTS WANTED TO KNOW WHY THE MARINES WERE IN CHINA AND ASSERTED THEY OUGHT TO GET OUT BECAUSE THE COMMUNISTS COULD DISARM THE JAPANESE. SOME COMMUNISTS SAID AMERICAN PLANES WERE STRAFING VILLAGES AND THAT THERE HAD BEEN SOME FIGHTING BETWEEN COMMUNISTS AND AMERICANS.

A125KX

FINALLY, THE SIX WERE TRANSFERRED TO JENCHIU VILLAGE, WHERE THEY WERE HELD IN A STOCKADE UNDER GUARD. ON NOV.25 THEY ESCAPED IN A HEAVY FOG AND WALKED ABOUT 40 MILES. CURTIS AND LEONE ENTERED A VILLAGE IN SEARCH OF FOOD AND WATER WHILE THE OTHER FOUR HID. THEY GOT WATER BUT NO FOOD. EN ROUTE BACK TO THEIR COMRADES' HIDING PLACE THEY WERE BESET BY SOLDIERS. THEY FOUGHT OFF THE SOLDERS AFTER LEONE WAS STRUCK BY ONE SOLDIER WITH A RIFLE BUTT. AS THEY FLED, THE SOLDIERS FIRED SEVERAL SHOTS INTO THE GROUND NEAR THEIR FEET

THE OTHER FOUR MARINES, PERCEIVING THE PLIGHT OF CURTIS AND LEONE, CAME TO THEIR RESCUE AND DROVE OFF THE PURSUING SOLDIERS.

THE FLIERS WALKED UNTIL LATE AT NIGHT, FOUND THEIR WAY BARRICADED BY MARSHLAND AND SOUGHT REFUGE IN A HUT. THERE THEY WERE RECAPTURED BY THE COMMUNISTS. THIS TIME THEY WERE ROBBED OF THEIR WATCHES, WEDDING RINGS, LIGHTERS AND OTHER PERSONAL EFFECTS.

THE NEXT DAY, A COMMUNIST OFFICER OBTAINED MOST OF THEIR STOLEN POSSESSIONS FOR THEM BUT UNIDENTIFIED CHINESE KEPT THEM AWAKE NIGHTS BY FLAILING THEM ON THE SHINS WITH ANTIQUATED HAND GRENADES AND RIFLE BARRELS.

EVENTUALLY THE COMMUNISTS TOOK THEM TO SINCHIEN VILLAGE IN AN OXCART AND LATER RETURNED THEM TO JENCHIU WHERE THE COMMUNISTS TREATED THEM KINDLY AND FED THEM GOOD FOOD. ONCE THE COMMUNISTS TRIED TO PERSUADE THEM TO WEAR COMMUNIST 18TH GROUP ARMY UNIFORMS BUT THE MEN REFUSED.

A DAY LATER, THE COMMUNISTS STARTED THEM TOWARD SINCHIEN VILLAGE ON THE FIRST LEG OF THEIR LIBERATION JOURNEY, BUT TURNED BACK BECAUSE OF "A BIG BATTLE UP AHEAD BETWEEN THE COMMUNISTS AND CHINESE NATIONALISTS."

LATER WHEN THEIR LOCATION BECAME KNOWN, CLOTHING WAS DROPPED FROM MARINE PLANES AND TURNED OVER TO THEM BY THE COMMUNISTS.

ON THE 35TH DAY OF CAPTIVITY, THEY STARTED AGAIN AND WERE TAKEN TO WITHIN SEVEN MILES OF CENTRAL GOVERNMENT TROOP LINES.

A MARINE CAPTAIN AND ANOTHER OFFICER MET THEM AND ESCORTED THEM TO TIENTSIN. A PHYSICAL CHECKUP SHOWS ALL ARE IN GOOD CONDITION.

WHEN THE SIX ENTERED THE PRESENCE OF GENERAL ROCKEY, HE EXCLAIMED: "THIS IS THE BEST CHRISTMAS PRESENT I COULD GET."

VTOKYO, DEC.19-(AP)-GERMANY DOUBLECROSSED JAPAN TWICE WHILE NEGOTIATING THE TRIPARTITE PACT, PRINCE FUMIMARO KONOYE ASSERTED IN A DOCUMENT MADE PUBLIC BY HIS FAMILY AFTER HIS SUICIDE SUNDAY. BUT TOKYO, HE ADDED, NEVER SERIOUSLY CONSIDERED DENOUNCING THE PACT.

THE TRIPARTITE PACT WAS INTENDED BY GERMANY TO CHECKMATE THE UNITED STATES AND PREVENT ITS ENTERING THE WAR, WHILE JAPAN EXPECTED TO USE THE ALLIANCE AS A CLINCHER FOR BETTER RELATIONS WITH BOTH AMERICA AND THE SOVIET UNION, KONOYE WROTE.

THE STATEMENT QUOTED HEINRICH STAHMER, NOW HELD AS A WAR CRIMINAL SUSPECT, AND THEN A SPECIAL ENVOY TO TOKYO, AS PROMISING GERMAN HELP IN PROMOTING JAANESE-RUSSIAN FRIENDSHIP, AND AS INSISTING THAT "IN CONTRAST TO BRITISH PROPAGANDA, RELATIONS BETWEEN GERMANY AND THE SOVIET ARE GOOD."

THEN GERMANY, "IGNORING OUR URGINGS, STARTED A WAR WITH THE SOVIET UNION."

SECOND NIGHT LEAD WAR CRIMES (260)

BY MORRIE LANDSBERG

YOKOHAMA, THURSDAY, DEC. 10-(AP)-AN AFFIDAVIT DETAILING ABUSE AND MURDER OF AN AMERICAN PRISONER OF WAR WAS STRICKEN FROM THE RECORDS TODAY AT THE TRIAL OF THE JAPANESE CHARGED WITH HIS DEATH. THE PROSECUTION PROTESTED THE RULING "WILL CAUSE MANY OF OUR CASES TO FALL."

THE AFFIDAVIT, OF PFC.CHARLES B.GAVORD, DEMING, N.M., WAS RULED OUT BY THE U.S. MILITARY COMMISSION BECAUSE THE PROSECUTION COULD NOT PRODUCE THE ORIGINAL AND ATTEMPTED TO INTRODUCE A MIMEOGRAPHED COPY AS A CERTIFICED DUPLICATE.

MAJ.GEN.LOUIS GEFFEN, CHIEF OF STAFF PROSECUTING TATSUO TSUCHIYA, ALIAS "LITTLE GLASS EYE," FOR THE DEATH OF PFC.ROBERT GORDON TEAS, OF STREATOR, ILL., SOUGHT TO CONVINCE THE COMMISSION THAT THE ORIGINAL HAD BEEN MISPLACED IN ONE OF THE MANY ARMY SECTIONS THAT INVESTIGATE WAR CRIMES.

OVER CONTINUED DEFENSE OBJECTIONS, OTHER AFFIDAVITS PILED UP THE EVIDENCE. ONE BY STAFF SGT.ROBERT DORRIS PRATT, OF SHERMAN, TEX., TOLD OF SEEING TEAS BEATEN WITH A CLUB BY A GUARD KNOWN AS "MUSHMOUTH" AND HAMMERED WITH FISTS IN A HOSPITAL BY "SPEEDO" AND "RIVET TOOTH."

PRATT, WHO WAS ON BURIAL DETAIL, CREMATED TEAS AND BURIED THE ASHES IN THE MOUNTAINS.

PFC.WAYNE M.WATSON, OF REGINA, N.M., WHO WAS TAKEN PRISONER ON BATAAN IN THE PHILIPPINES, DEPOSED THAT TEAS WAS BEATEN WITH HEAVY STICKS FOR THREE DAYS BUT DID NOT NAME THE JAPANESE GUILTY.

LT.COL.ALLAN M.CORY, TULSA, OKLA., TOLD OF BRUTALITIES AND MISUSE OF RED CROSS SUPPLIES BY JAPANESE CAMP OFFICIALS. HE SAID THE JAPANESE PUT CANDY, SOAP AND CIGARETS ON SHELVES FOR RED CROSS INSPECTION, THEN HID THEM AGAIN.

TSUCHIYA SHOWED NO SIGN OF INTEREST AS THE ACCUSATION AGAINST HIM WAS DETAILED BY THE PROSECUTION.

HE WAS EQUALLY DISINTERESTED WHEN HIS AMERICAN COUNSEL TRIED TO KEEP OUT OF EVIDENCE THE DEPOSITIONS BY WHICH HE WAS ACCUSED. HIS COUNSEL SAID SUCH EVIDENCE WAS CONTRARY TO THE AMERICAN CONSTITUTION.

THE COMMISSION RULED THAT AN ENEMY BELLIGERENT WAS WITHOUT PROTECTION OF AMERICAN CONSTITUTIONAL GUARANTEES, SUCH AS THAT WHICH HOLDS THE DEPOSITIONS ARE INADMISSIBLE IN CAPITAL CASES.

WITH THAT OUT OF THE WAY, THE STORY OF TEAS, WHO SURVIVE THE HORRORS OF BATAAN ONLY TO DIE IN MITSUSHIMA PRISON CAMP, WAS UNFOLDED.

PFC CHARLES B. GAVORD, DEMING N.M., SAID IN A DEPOSITION THAT HE SAW TSUCHIYA AND A JAPANESE SERGEANT LEAD TEAS INTO THE PRISON CAMP YARD "THROW WATER ON HIM AND BEAT HIM WITH HARDWOOD CANES SHAPED LIKE SWORDS."

THERE WAS SNOW ON THE GROUND AND THE TEMPERATURE STOOD AT ABOUT 20 DEGREES, HIS DEPOSITION CHARGED.

GAVORD SAID THE BEATINGS CONTINUED FOR SEVERAL DAYS, THAT TEAS WENT TO A HOSPITAL ONE DAY BEFORE HIS DEATH "AND I PERSONALLY SAW THESE SAME JAPS BEAT HIM JUST BEFORE HE DIED."

"SUCH A SETTLEMENT CAN BE ATTAINED ONLY THROUGH A REALISTIC, BROAD-MINDED AND COOPERATIVE APPROACH ON THE PART OF ALL CONCERNED AND A WILL TO RECONCILE DIFFERENCES BY PEACEFUL MEANS."

THE STATEMENT EXPRESSED HOPE THAT A SETTLEMENT WOULD BE REACHED "IN HARMONY WITH THE PRINCIPLE AND IDEALS" OF THE UNITED NATIONS DECLARATION AND CHARTER.

ALTHOUGH ACKNOWLEDGING THAT THE U.S. SHARED RESPONSIBILITY FOR THE DECISION TO SEND TROOPS OF LORD LOUIS MOUNTBATTEN'S SOUTHEAST ASIA COMMAND INTO INDONESIA, THE STATEMENT SAID THIS MOVE WAS ONLY FOR THE PURPOSE OF ACCEPTING SURRENDER OF JAPANESE FORCES AND THEIR EQUIPMENT; OF DISARMING AND REMOVING THEM; OF LIBERATING ALLIED WAR PRISONERS AND ASSURING SAFETY OF MORE THAN 100,000 CIVILIANS, MOSTLY WOMEN AND CHILDREN, WHO HAD BEEN INTERNED BY THE JAPS.

THERE WAS, THE STATEMENT SAID, "NO THOUGHT SO FAR AS THE UNITED STATES WAS CONCERNED OF EXTENDING THE ALLIED MANDATE BEYOND THESE SPECIFIC RESPONSIBILITIES."

AT THE SAME TIME, HOWEVER, THE STATEMENT SAID IT HAD BEEN NECESSARY IN CONNECTION WITH THE ALLIED OBJECTIVES FOR THE BRITISH TROOPS "TO ASSURE SUCH ORDER AS IS NECESSARY FOR THEIR EXECUTION."

NOTING THAT DISCUSSIONS BETWEEN THE DUTCH AND INDONESIAN LEADERS, LOOKING TOWARD A PEACEFUL SETTLEMENT OF THEIR DIFFERENCES, APPARENTLY HAD BROKEN DOWN, THE STATEMENT APPEALED FOR "AN EARLY RESUMPTION" OF THE CONFERENCES.

WASHINGTON,DEC. 19-(AP)-THIS IS THE WAY THE NATION'S ARMED SERVICES WOULD BE ORGANIZED UNDER PRESIDENT TRUMAN'S UNIFICATION PLAN.

-CIVILIAN-

INSTEAD OF THE PRESENT WAR AND NAVY DEPARTMENTS, THERE WOULD BE JUST ONE--A "DEPARTMENT OF NATIONAL DEFENSE", WHICH PROBABLY WOULD BECOME KNOWN AS THE "DEFENSE DEPARTMENT".

ITS HEAD WOULD BE A CABINET MEMBER--THE SECRETARY OF DEFENSE. ASSISTING HIM, AND ACTING AS SECRETARY IN HIS ABSENCE, WOULD BE AN UNDERSECRETARY OF DEFENSE.

THERE WOULD BE SEVERAL ASSISTANT SECRETARIES, THE EXACT NUMBER UNSPECIFIED. ONE OF THESE WOULD BE SPECIFICALLY CONCERNED WITH THE ARMY, ANOTHER WITH THE NAVY AND A THIRD WITH THE AIR FORCE. THE OTHERS WOULD HAVE SUCH ASSIGNMENTS AS THE PRESIDENT OR SECRETARY MIGHT GIVE THEM.

-MILITARY-

THE TOP MILITARY COMMANDER WOULD BE ONE MAN DESIGNATED AS "CHIEF OF STAFF". ACTUALLY HE WOULD HAVE TO BE AN ADMIRAL OR AN ARMY OR AIR FORCE GENERAL, BUT HE WOULD REPRESENT ALL THREE SERVICES. NORMALLY HE WOULD HOLD OFFICE ONLY FOR TWO OR THREE YEARS AT A TIME, AND THE POST WOULD ROTATE AMONG THE THREE SERVICES. (PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT BY EXECUTIVE ORDER SET UP ADMIRAL WILLIAM D.LEAHY AS A CHIEF OF STAFF TO THE PRESIDENT BUT HIS DUTIES WERE ONLY TO ADVISE AND COORDINATE AND HE PRESUMABLY COULD ISSUE NO DIRECT ORDERS TO THE ARMY OR NAVY).

THERE ALSO WOULD BE INDIVIDUAL TOP COMMANDERS OF THE ARMY, NAVY AND AIR FORCE, SUCH AS THE ARMY NOW HAS IN ITS CHIEF OF STAFF (EISENHOWER) AND THE NAVY IN ITS CHIEF OF NAVAL OPERATIONS (NIMITZ).

THE FOUR TOGETHER WOULD FORM AN ADVISORY BODY FOR THE PRESIDENT AND SECRETARY. BUT THE PRESIDENT OR ANY OTHER CIVILIAN AUTHORITY COULD GO DIRECT TO THE COMMANDER OF AN INDIVIDUAL SERVICE ON MATTERS AFFECTING THAT SERVICE, AND EVEN ON POLICY AND STRATEGY MATTERS.

WHERE THE ARMY AND NAVY NOW HAVE SEPARATE BUREAUS HEADED BY THEIR OWN OFFICERS TO DEAL WITH CERTAIN MATTERS, SUCH AS SUPPLIES OR PERSONNEL, THERE WOULD IN SOME CASES BE SINGLE BUREAUS TO SERVE ALL THREE FORCES.

Drachma Hits New Low In Athens Black Bourse

ATHENS, Dec. 19 (AP).—Greece's economic position became worse today as the value of the failing drachma plummeted, provoking Premier Sophoulis to announce the government soon will inaugurate a new program and "you will then see results." 32.26-1

The value of the drachma in relation to the gold sovereign reached a new low of 110,000 in the black bourse last night, and commodity prices soared when markets opened this morning.

Experts attributed the deterioration to a growing feeling that Britain will not grant financial assistance to Greece, to the increase from 66,000,000,000 to 83,000,000,000 drachmas the number of bank notes in circulation since the overthrow of the Canellopoulos government and to a lack of confidence in the future of the country.

RUSSIANS ADVANCE CLAIMS ON TURKEY

Moscow Press Prints Demand for Strategic Area Along Black Sea.

MOSCOW, Dec. 20. — (AP) Demands that Turkey cede a strategic 180-mile stretch of her Black sea coast to Russia were published prominently today as the Big Three foreign ministers conferred again on problems vital to world peace.

U. S. Secretary James F. Byrnes, British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin and Foreign Commissar V. M. Molotov met for two hours and 20 minutes today, starting an hour earlier than usual at 3 p.m. and adjourning at 5:20 p.m.

Reception for Diplomats

After the meeting Byrnes and U. S. Ambassador W. Averell Harriman hurried to Spasso house to dress for the 6 p.m. reception at Speridonifka palace at which Mr. and Mrs. Molotov were hosts.

The demands for the Turkish area, reaching 180 miles southwest of the Russian oil port of Batumi to Giresun, and stretching inland as deep as 75 miles, were made in a letter from two intellectuals of the Georgian Soviet Socialist republic, where Generalissimo Stalin was born.

The writers, S. R. Djanashia, doctor of historical science, and N. Berdzenishvili, both members of the Science Academy of the Georgian Republic, declared:

"We appeal to world opinion about the situation of our ancient land, taken by Turkey.

"We are not talking about some small territorial dispute. This concerns the seized cradle of our people—a crime which has cut in two our living national body. The Georgian people must get back their land."

Demands Return of Land

The letter demanded that Turkey turn over to the Georgians the districts of Artvin, Ardahan, Oltu, Tortrum, Ispir, Bayburt, Guemuesane, Giresun and Trabzon.

Trabzon, an important port 110 miles southwest of Batumi, has a population of approximately 33,000, and is the largest city in the area named. The Vilayet or administrative district of Trabzon has a population of some 391,000.

The newspapers Izvestia, Red Star and Pravda published the letter, and said it had been printed earlier in a Communist newspaper at Tiflis, the Georgian capital.

Farther east of the territory mentioned lie sections of Armenia and 16,945 foot Mount Ararat, where Noah's Ark was said to have rested after the great deluge. Beyond that is northern Iran, and Azerbaijan province, where an autonomous government has been set up against opposition from the Iranian government.

The letter traced the history of the Georgian peoples for 2,000 years, declaring that "in far antiquity the Georgian people lived, toiled and struggled on this territory x x x creating new centers of civilization and government.

"The Georgian people have shown amazingly vital and creative ability and stubborn attachment to their dear land and an unshakable will to defend it."

Seized in 16th Century

In the 16th century, the letter said, the Turks seized southern Georgia after a bitter fight.

"Georgia has seen many conquerors," it added. "By rights the Turks have deserved the title of the worst of them. They brought only death and destruction."

In 1921, the letter said, the Turks invaded southern Georgia and occupied the southern section of Batumi. It charged that under Turkish rule geographical names were changed and historical monuments ruined.

"Again the Georgian population resettled in masses to the far off districts—sent away from their native place," the letter asserted. "The Georgian people, who have made a considerable contribution in the cause of the defeat of Fascism, deserve a right to submit their rightful demands."

Problems arising out of relations between Turkey and Russia had been brought to the attention of the recent Council of Foreign Ministers in London.

These included demands from Soviet Armenia that the provinces of Kars and Ardagan, which lie south of the territory mentioned in today's letter, be returned to Armenia. These demands also have been carried in the Soviet press.

The Dardanelles controlled by Turkey were mentioned as among subjects for consideration at the current conference of the three foreign ministers. Revision of the Montreaux convention governing passage of ships through that entrance to the Black sea has been propcsed by the United States.

Meanwhile, strict secrecy continued to surround the discussions at the current session of U. S. Secretary of State James F. Byrnes, British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin and Soviet Foreign Commissar V. M. Molotov, who met for the fifth time today. The meetings were said to be progressing, however, in an atmosphere of cordiality.

BIG THREE SAID TO BE MAKING STEADY GAINS

Conference Expected to Continue After Christmas.

MANY PROBLEMS ON AGENDA

Byrnes and Bevin Visit Stalin —Subject of Talks Is Not Disclosed.

Moscow, Dec. 20 (A. P.).—The Foreign Ministers of Soviet Russia, Great Britain and the United States were reported making steady progress as they went into the fifth day of their conference today, but there were indications they did not expect to finish by Christmas.

The first intimation t' meeting might go over ' week and possibly con' Christmas was a disclosure by informed quarters that United States Secretary of State James F. Byrnes planned to attend the annual Christmas eve dinner of the American colony Monday.

So far there has been no official estimate as to how long the conference would last, but observers pointed out that the ministers had before them a multiplicity of problems, some of which were extremely complicated, and that disposition of these issues would naturally require time.

British Experts Delayed.

It also was pointed out that three plane-loads of British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin's technical experts and advisers had been delayed in Berlin, where they were grounded by bad weather. The weather also delayed the dispatch of conference documents to London by plane.

Byrnes and Bevin conferred with Soviet Foreign Commissar V. M. Molotov only an hour and fifteen minutes yesterday and today's meeting, scheduled to start at 4 P. M. (9 A. M. Eastern standard time), also was expected to be short because of a reception which Molotov planned for 6 P. M.

There was no definite information as to which of the numerous problems on the agenda had been under discussion or just how far the ministers had gone toward disposing of any of them. Strict secrecy continued to surround the discussions.

Good Humor Noted.

Observers said, however, that the talks were proceeding smoothly and in an atmosphere of cordiality and good humor. This spirit was reflected yesterday at a luncheon which Molotov gave for his two guests and their advisers. A large amount of joking was said to have gone on and Molotov toasted both Byrnes and Bevin, while they in turn toasted the Soviet Foreign Commissar. Toasts also were proposed to Generalissimo Stalin, President Truman and Prime Minister Attlee.

Stalin, just returned to Moscow after a sixty-eight-day vacation, received both Byrnes and Bevin yesterday and the Russian leader was reported looking "well and rested." Byrnes, accompanied by United States Ambassador W. Averell Harriman, talked with the Generalissimo an hour and one-half, but the nature of the conversation was not disclosed. Bevin and British Ambassador Sir Archibald Clark Kerr were received by Stalin at a later meeting.

Harriman said Stalin "looks very well." "Even better," he added, "than when I saw him at the end of October. He has a fine tan." Harriman visited Stalin while the Generalissimo was vacationing near Sochi in the Black Sea area, and at that time denied rumors abroad that he was ill.

Georgians Eye Areas Of Turkey

Moscow, Dec. 20 (AP)—Leading Russian newspapers today published a 4,000-word letter from two Georgian republic leaders who demanded that Turkey give up areas near the Turkish-Soviet frontier.

"We appeal to world opinion about the situation of our ancient land taken by Turkey," said the letter, written by S. D. Janashia and N. Berdzenishvili, both members of the Academy of Science of the Georgian Soviet Socialist Republic.

"We are not talking about some small territorial dispute," the writers continued. "This concerns the seized cradle of our people—a crime that has cut in two our living national body. The people must get back their land."

British-Siamese Pact Predicted

London, Dec. 20 (AP)—Informed quarters predicted today that Great Britain would sign a peace agreement with Siam before Christmas, despite a United States request for delay until its views have been made known.

A Foreign Office spokesman said the Government was "puzzled" by Under Secretary of State Dean Acheson's statement yesterday that the State Department had requested a delay "while discussions with the United States are proceeding."

U.S. Reported Notified

The British were reported to have notified the United States of its demands for "security facilities" in Siam, but no question of naval or air bases was reported involved.

Hector McNeil, Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, told Commons that Great Brfitain will require Siam to make restitution for damage and loss caused to British and Allied interests. The Foreign Office said British terms were aimed chiefly at the disarmed Japanese troops remaining in Siam and at arranging for Siam to share its rice stocks with near-by areas.

RIDGEFIELD HOME FOR UNO OFFERED

Formal Bid Entered as Committee Is Designated to Make Selection.

LONDON, Dec. 20—(AP) The United Nations Preparatory commission decided tonight to set up a committee with representatives from 12 nations which will tour the United States and selected a maximum of six cities as candidates for a world capital.

Cities which presented formal bids today included New Orleans, La., Ridgefield, Conn., St. Louis, Mo., and Cincinnati, Ohio.

The committee will fix a deadline for new offers and for hearings from representatives of prospective sites for headquarters of the United Nations organization.

Its members will be appointed from Australia, China, Cuba, France, the Netherlands, Iran, Iraq, the Soviet Union, the United Kingdom, Uruguay, Yugoslavia and Poland. It was proposed that the United States be added to the committee, but U. S. Delegate Wilder Foote declined the nomination.

Tomorrow the Preparatory commission will discuss qualifications that the site for UNO headquarters should have, and these will provide a basis for first eliminations to be made by the 12-man committee. The committee will decide what places to visit, then narrow down the field to a half dozen to be presented to the General Assembly for final choice.

Four Cities Present Bids For UNO Home

London, Dec. 20 (AP)—Representatives of New Orleans, St. Louis, Cincinnati and Bridgeport, Conn., presented their formal bids to become the home of the United Nations Organization today to the UNO preparatory commission's subcommittee.

The delegations from the four American cities were the last scheduled to be heard by the subcommittee, which planned to report its tabulations to the preparatory commission tomorrow.

Fred Oechsner spoke for New Orleans and said the city would be glad to receive any investigating commission the UNO might send. He did not go into details of the New Orleans proposals, which had previously been sent to the UNO.

Repairs To Augusta To Be Made In England

Portsmouth, England, Dec. 20 (AP)—The United States cruiser Augusta arrived here today and will be taken into the dockyard for repairs. The cruiser was damaged in an Atlantic gale while taking troops back to the United States from Le Havre.

The Augusta, which was forced to turn back two days ago, is the vessel on which the late President Roosevelt and Winston Churchill drafted the Atlantic Charter and on which President Truman greeted King George VI after the Potsdam conference.

Earlier reports said there were no casualties aboard during the storm.

Dominick met Rita when he was stationed at Nottingham in July, 1944. He last saw her March 17 in an English hospital where he was recovering from wounds suffered in Germany.

Reaching her home early today for a "surprise" visit, he found the family and the entire neighborhood forewarned by newspapers and ready to greet him.

Dominick brought along an engagement ring, a wedding ring, a pair of nylon stockings and two tickets to the United States, one in the name of "Mrs. Casciari."

He said his visa was good for three months but that he would stay in England no longer than necessary.

Rita said she hated to leave England but that "wherever Dom wants to be I'll go."

This morning the couple went window shopping in Nottingham, inquired about a marriage license, and visited the blouse machinist's shop where Rita worked.

After their marriage they will live with Dominick's parents in Neighborhood Waiting

Casciari's only disappointment was that his visit did not come as a surprise.

Warned by a newspaper story, the whole neighborhood in Bulwell, Nottingham suburb, was waiting when the American rapped at Rita's door at 1 A.M. today.

Rita's sister called, "is that you, Dom?"

"He was so surprised himself that he couldn't answer," the mother laughed.

To Wed After Christmas

Rita and Gasciari later vistied Rita's employer at a blouse machinist's shop, then checked the marriage registration requirements, while Mrs. Blankley cooked luncheon.

The veteran's return tickets to the United States are good for three months, and the couple will not be married until after Christmas.

The father indicated he was now ready to give the bride away.

"He must be all right, to have come all the way to fetch her," Blankley said.

Field Marshal Sports A 'Wild Tie'

Berlin, Dec. 20 (AP)—Field Marshal Sir Bernard L. Montgomery has a new tie.

The famous British commander wore it last night in all its brown, red and green splendor at an American press-camp party. It was the emblem of the Tanks Corps. The brown represented the mud in which tanks are mired, the red was for British blood and the green was for the field of victory.

Sir Bernard told the reporters they too should adopt a tie, but he had no idea for a color scheme. He broke his own rule by staying out after 9 P.M., but he refused wines and cigarettes. He left also before the dancing girls took the floor.

SEVEN GERMANS HANGED FOR SMOLENSK CRIMES

LONDON, Dec. 20 — (AP) The Moscow radio said tonight that seven German storm troopers (SS) convicted of war crimes were hanged at noon today in a Smolensk square before 50,000 onlookers.

The low-ranking defendants were sentenced last night at Smolensk by a Russian military tribunal. Three others drew prison terms of 20, 15 and 12 years, respectively.

The prosecution contended thousands of Smolensk residents, including women and children, had been "mercilessly exterminated" during the German occupation, some in medical experiments.

New Canaan Veteran Will Wed British Girl 'after Christmas'

NOTTINGHAM, England, Dec. 20.—(AP) Major objectives fell quickly today to Dominick Casciari, 22-year-old former paratrooper from New Canaan, Conn., whose first post-war mission was to fly to England from the states with "purpose matrimony" on his passport.

Soon after landing, Dominick won the consent of Ferdinand Blankley, a public works employe, to marry Blankley's pretty, dark-haired daughter, Rita, 17. And Rita was wearing the diamond engagement ring that Dominick brought with him.

"Come all that way, I can't very well send him away empty-handed, can I?" said Blankley, who had told the paratrooper to "come and see me after the war" when Dominick asked for Rita's hand in 1944.

Rita's mother, Florence Blankley, cooked "Dom's favorite fruit"—onions—for lunch.

The wedding was set for "some time after Christmas" in a Catholic church.

Ex-GI Goes Back To Girl He Left Behind In England

Nottingham, England, Dec. 20 (AP)—Dominick Casciari, 22-year-old ex-paratrooper from New Canaan, Conn., arrived in Nottingham today bearing an engagemen tring, a wedding ring, a pair of Nylon stockings and two tickets to the United States.

He had come by air from Boston to get the girl—Rita Blankley, 17, whose father had told him to "come and see me after the war" when he asked for her hand in 1944.

"He didn't waste any time, did he?" said the fa ther, Ferdinand Blankley, a public works employé.

Herisau, Switzerland, Dec. 20 (AP). Van Albert, the Dutch giant, had a hard time during the Nazi occupation of Holland.

Although granted a double ration book, he lost 70 pounds because the food was not always available, he said today.

The giant, billed in show business as "the tallest man in the world," measures 8 feet 9.8 inhces. He is here visiting his brother-in-law, Sepp Faessler, who is 27 inches tall.

BORDER INCIDENTS FAKED BY GESTAPO

Nazi Official Describes Raid on Radio Station Near Polish Line.

NUERNBERG, Dec. 20—(AP) The German Gestapo engineered the border incidents setting up the invasion of Poland with faked raids which even supplied dead "Polish" soldiers as "evidence," an affidavit given to the international war crimes tribunal said today.

The affidavit was from Alfred Naujocks, Gestapo official who said he led an attack on a German border radio station at 8 p. m., on Aug. 31, 1939—just a few hours before Hitler's panzer divisions swept into Poland. He said concentration camp prisoners were drugged, dressed in Polish army uniforms, and then shot by the Gestapo to "prove" violation of the German frontier.

12-Day Recess

The U. S. prosecution, attempting to show that six large Nazi organizations share the guilt of war crimes along with the 22 leaders on trial, had just begun its case against the Gestapo when the tribunal adjourned for 12 days over the Christmas holidays.

Col. Robert G. Storey, on the staff of U. S. Chief Prosecutor Justice Robert H. Jackson, told of the creation of the Gestapo by Hermann Goering in 1933, and charged that it finally covered the Reich and most of Europe with 40,000 to 50,000 agents, whose task it was to terrorize all opposition to the Nazis.

When the tribunal convenes again on Jan. 2, Jackson's case will have at least one more week to run before the Russians and French have a chance to present evidence.

Heydrich Planned Coup

Naujocks' affidavit, obtained from him when he was taken prisoner by American forces, named "Hangman" Reinhard Heydrich as the man who planned the coup against the German radio station near Gleiwitz, on the border, and thus enabled Hitler to cry that Germany had been attacked first.

The raid leader said he was instructed by Heydrich to get "practical proof" of the attack "for the foreign press, as well as for German propaganda purposes."

He said 12 or 13 condemned criminals were provided for the border "incidents," which included an attack on a German train, and that one of these men was given to him by Heinrich Mueller, head of the Gestapo, on the night of the radio station raid.

"My instructions were to seize the radio station and hold it long enough to permit a Polish-speaking German x x x to broadcast a speech in Polish x x x that the time had come for conflict between the Germans and Poles, and that Poles should get together and smash any Germans from whom they met resistance."

Naujocks said Heydrich told him at the same time to expect an attack on Poland "in a few days."

SS Members Accused

Assistant Prosecutor Maj. Warren Farr earlier in the day completed the American case against the SS (schutzstaffel), in which a letter from Heinrich Himmler disclosed that the SS picked women inmates for concentration camp brothels.

Other documents showed Hfmmler commanded that women prisoners be used to beat other inmates of the women's camps, and that similar policies were carried out among the men.

Also on Himmler's orders, women were stripped naked to lie with half frozen men who had been used in medical experiments. Medical reports later said "rewarming by animal bodies or women's bodies" was inferior to "rapid rewarming in all cases of severely chilled persons."

The shooting of 64 Allied prisoners of war by the 12th SS Panzer division was charged in a SHAEF report. The prisoners, shot shortly after the Normandy invasion, included 62 Canadians, one American and one Briton.

As the first five weeks of the trial ended, most of the leading figures of the tribunal and prosecution staffs prepared to leave Nuernberg for the holidays. Jackson planned to spend Christmas in Palestine, Justice Francis Biddle, United States Judge on the tribunal, was to fly to England and Judge John Parker, United States Alternate Judge, had a plane ticket to his home in Charlotte, N. C.

of Prisoner Camps.

Nuernberg, Dec. 20 (A. P.).—The first full story of the spark that set off world war II—a fake attack on a German radio station staged by Gestapo agents dressed in Polish Army uniforms—was unfolded today before the International Military Tribunal.

As the war crimes trial was recessed for the Christmas holidays, American prosecutors submitted a Gestapo official's story of the raid, naming the assassinated hangman, Reinhard Heydrich, as the man who engineered the group which Hitler used as the excuse for the Polish invasion—crying to the world that Germany had been attacked first.

The story was told in the affidavit of Alfred Naujocks who said he led a company of Gestapo agents dressed in Polish uniforms in a raid on the German radio station at Gleiwitz on August 31, 1939, the day before the invasion. The raiders broadcast incendiary remarks in Polish and then left behind the bullet-riddled bodies of drugged German concentration camp prisoners, also dressed in Polish uniforms, as "evidence," Naujocks said.

Trial Is Recessed.

The affidavit was presented near the end of the session, when the tribunal recessed the trial until January 2 over the protest of Justice Robert H. Jackson, chief United States prosecutor, who said another week will be needed after the holiday to complete the American case against the twenty-two Nazi leaders and six organizations.

Naujocks in his affidavit, said the fake attack with a company of disguised Gestapo men "should make it appear that Polish soldiers were attacking German troops."

"Mueller (another Gestapo official) stated he had twelve or thirteen condemned criminals who were to be dressed in Polish uniforms and left dead on the ground of the scene of the incident to show they had been killed while attacking. For this purpose they were to be given fatal injections by a doctor employed by Heydrich. Then they were also to be given gunshot wounds. After the incident, members of the press and other persons were to be taken to the spot."

Details of the notorious activities of the black-shirted Elite Guard were unfolded before the International Military Tribunal by American prosecutors to support their charges that the SS and five once-powerful Nazi organizations should be convicted as criminal groups.

The poisoned-bullet experiments resulted in the deaths of three out of five prisoners selected, SS records disclosed.

Rewarming Experiments

The prosecution also recounted the experiments, previously reported at the Dachau war-crimes trial, in which women prisoners were used to rewarm frozen men with the heat of their naked bodies.

The scientists eventually reported that the experiments, conducted for the air force and navy, disclosed that the practice of rewarming with women's bodies was inferior to "rapid rewarming" by artificial means.

As the court session headed toward a Christmas fortnight adjournment late today, only 20 of the 22 accused Nazi leaders were in the prisoners' box.

Kaltenbrunner Improved

Security Police Chief Ernst Kaltenbrunner, suffering from a recurrence of a cranial hemorrhage, was reported in somewhat improved condition, but army hospital physicians were still concerned for his life. The twenty-second defendant, Martin Bormann, is still missing and is being tried in absentia.

Human beings used in the deadly experiments by the SS were to have been selected from the "mentally sick," according to an order by Heinrich Himmler, chief of the SS and Gestapo, read to the court. "Bedridden prisoners are to be drafted for desirable work which they can perform in bed," Himmler decreed.

By Himmler's command, women prisoners were used to beat other women's-camp inmates and a similar policy was followed in men's camps.

SS men, according to another Himmler order, were enjoined to sire children—legitimate or otherwise—at every opportunity.

Another Himmler letter, only part of which was read in court, disclosed that the SS chose women from enemy concentration camp inmates for camp brothels.

"Old-Age Security"

"Some madmen in the women's concentration camp had told the feminine prisoners that those who volunteered for the brothel would be released after half a year," complained Himmler. He added: "The money they earn in the camp brothel shall be an old-age security for them."

Assistant United States Prosecutor Warren Farr submitted the SHAEF report on the shooting of Canadian prisoners of war by SS troops in Normandy as further evidence of Elite Guard war crimes. SS Major Gen. Kurt Meyer is now on trial at Aurich, Germany, charged with ordering the executions.

Man Hitler Sent To 'Save' Duce Tells Of Feat

Nuernberg, Dec. 20 (AP)—Details of the Mussolini kidnapping were disclosed today by Lieut. Col. Otto Skorzeny, Gestapo "hatchetman," who was assigned personally by Adolf Hitler to abduct his Axis partner from the forces of Marshal Pietro Badoglio.

Skorzeny, a 6-foot 4-inch giant, who is a prisoner here and may be a defense witness at the war-crime trial, told Allied interrogators he was "very much surprised" when he was ordered to Hitler's headquarters and given the assignment.

Fifty paratroopers were assigned to him by Col. Gen. Kurt Student, he said, and they took off from Rome September 12, 1943, in a number of planes during an Allied air attack. Three of the planes were lost because of the bombing attack, he said.

Hotel In Apennines

Their destination was the Sports Hotel, 6,500 feet above sea level, on Gran Sasso Mountain, highest peak in the Apennines, where il Duce was being held prisoner.

"A parachute jump from such heights on such a small target seemed not feasible," Skorzeny said. "Although this was against strict orders from General Student, we decided that a crash landing was the only possible solution. We landed, partly damaged, fifteen meters from the hotel. Two more planes followed our example.

Resistance Was Slight

"The guards were overcome. More of our planes landed, with the loss of two lives and several wounded. A few shots were fired, but the Italian colonel in command realized our numerical superiority and did not put up much resistance."

Mussolini was taken to a nearby airport, Skorzeny said, and they took off in a plane which had been sent to pick them up. He added that the next day he took Il Duce to Hitler's headquarters and "my task was completed."

Nuernberg Defendants Invited to Sing Carols

NUERNBERG, Dec. 20 (AP).—Hermann Wilhelm Goering and the twenty other Nazi defendants at the war-crimes trials will be invited to sing carols on Christmas Day. There will be no special Christmas dinner, no gift boxes and no concessions for the accused Nazis, however.

Chaplain Captain Henry F. Gerecke, of St. Louis, will conduct in a double cell a special service for Lutherans. An organ will be brought in for the caroling. Chaplain Captain Sixtus R. O'Connor, of Oxford, N. Y., will sing mass for Catholic prisoners.

GEN. PATTON ILL, CONDITION POORER

HEIDELBERG, Germany, Dec. 20—(AP) Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., today contracted a respiratory infection, taking a turn for the worse, and tonight's medical bulletin declared "his general condition is not satisfactory."

Army sources at the 130th station hospital, however, said "there is no cause for alarm" and no immediate indication that the partly-paralyzed Patton might be contracting pneumonia.

The evening medical bulletin said Patton's "general condition is not satisfactory due to excessive bronchial secretions which embarrass respiration and make feeding difficult."

An earlier bulletin said the cause of the bronchial secretions had not yet been determined, and that Patton spent an uncomfortable night.

Hospital authorities described the bronchial secretions as "respiratory infections," and said the general had neither a heavy cold nor bronchitis.

Patton's neck was broken in an automobile accident a week ago Sunday. His temperature was below normal at 6 p. m. standing at 97.6 degrees, his pulse was 58, and respiration 26.

GEN. PATTON TAKES TURN FOR WORSE

Heidelberg, Dec. 20 (A. P.).—Gen. George S. Patton Jr. took a slight turn for the worse today when he contracted a respiratory infection which was reported delaying his recovery from paralysis and a broken neck sustained in an automobile accident.

The latest official bulletin from the hospital said: "His general condition is not satisfactory due to excessive bronchial secretions which embarrass respirations and make feeding difficult."

Army information at the hospital said, however, "there is no cause for alarm" and there was no immediate indication that the commander of the United States Fifteenth Army might be contracting pneumonia.

The earlier bulletin said that Patton had spent an uncomfortable night.

German 'Suicide' Flyers Revealed

Oberursel, Germany, Dec. 20 (AP). Plans for a "suicide squadron" of fanatical German glider pilots, conceived in a last desperate attempt to make the Allies sue for peace, were revealed today.

Hanna Reitsch, ace Nazi aviatrix, told the story to American counter-intelligence investigators at the internment camp here where she is officially described as a "guest."

Special Plane

A specially designed Messerschmitt 328, originally intended for a fighter or fighter-bomber plane, was to be used as a piloted glider bomb, she said.

Tests killed some ace German pilots and disclosed many faults in the plan, the aviatrix said, leading top-flight Nazis like Hitler, Himmler and Goering to discount the idea time after time until it was too late to put it into practice.

Pledge Taken

A 2,000-pound bomb-torpedo was to be attached, with the pilot fully aware a hit meant death, she said. All volunteers took this pledge:

"I hereby volunteer as pilot of a manned glider bomb. I am convinced that this action will end with my death."

The aviatrix said Hitler took a negative view of the plan on hearing it in February, 1944, on the ground "it is not in keeping with the character of the German people." Hitler even argued, she said, that the situation was then "not precarious, and the time for such unusual measures has not yet come."

Renner Elected Head Of Austria

Vienna, Dec. 20 (AP)—Dr. Karl Renner, a peasant's son, was elected Federal President of Austria by the new Parliament of the second Austrian republic today.

The result of the secret ballot was announced as unanimous, with 165 members of the National Council and 40 members of the Federal Council participating.

Dr. Renner took the oath immediately. He will swear in Leopold Figl, his successor in the chancellorship, and members of Figl's new Government.

Dr. Renner held various governmental positions during the time of the Austro-Hungarian monarchy, and the provisional Government set up after the Russians captured Vienna.

Eisenhower Gets Highest Award Of Denmark

Copenhagen, Denmark, Dec. 20 (AP)—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower today was made "Knight of the Elephant," Denmark's highest honor usually reserved for royalty.

General Eisenhower, the first American to get the award, and Field Marshal Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, who received it a few months ago, are the only persons outside royalty to receive the honor.

The award will be presented formally by King Christian next spring, when the American General visits Denmark.

Edda Ciano Gets Two-Year Sentence

By The Associated Press.

ROME, Dec. 20—Edda Mussolini Ciano, daughter of Benito Mussolini and widow of Count Galeazzo Ciano, Fascist Foreign Minister, has been sentenced by an Italian provincial commission to two years' confinement for her efforts in behalf of fascism, a dispatch from Messina to the newspaper Tempo said today.

She did not attend her trial, the dispatch said, refusing to leave the tiny island of Lipari, north of Sicily, where she has been interned since the end of the war.

The Tempo said she was specifically charged with conducting herself in a Fascist manner, aiding the foreign policy that led to the alliance with Germany and to war, maintaining friendly relations with German political leaders, and selling abroad—for personal profit—the diary of her late husband.

All But One Or Two On Ill-Fated Ship Safe

Rome, Dec. 20 (AP)—Preliminary reports indicate all but one or two of approximately 50 men aboard the Liberty ship Nathaniel Bacon, which struck two mines off Civitavecchia on Tuesday night, have been saved, War Shipping Administration officials here said today.

The ship, headed for Civitavecchia with UNRRA supplies, burst into flames after striking the mines and was beached in heavy seas about 35 miles north of the port. The crew took to boats and rafts. Several of the survivors were reported badly injured.

Chester Muszaleski, of Chauncey, Ohio, UNRRA liaison officer who boarded the Bacon at Genoa, was reported safe. The ship was still burning today.

Cargo included 4,600 tons of flour, 4,750 cases of medical supplies and other UNRRA goods, officials said.

MARSHALL MEETS CHIANG TODAY IN NANKING PARLEY

U. S. Envoy Confers with Gen. Wedemeyer on China Situation.

REDS SUE FOR PEACE

Communists Ready to Halt Fighting, Strive for Unity.

SHANGHAI, Dec. 20—(AP) General Marshall arrived today on his mission of peace for China as Communists in Chungking spurred hopes for unity by asking for an immediate halt to all hostilities.

Hardly had Marshall's plane landed after a flight from Manila than word came from Chungking that the Communists not only were ready to stop fighting but were prepared to make concessions for permanent peace.

Goes to Nanking Today

It furnished an auspicious start for the general, who will fly to Nanking tomorrow for the opening of talks with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek.

The Presidential envoy stepped smiling from his big Army transport plane. He was driven through flag-draped streets jammed with thousands of waving, cheering Chinese who see in the lately-retired U. S. Army chief of staff a hope for a quick and satisfactory end to China's civil strife.

Almost immediately Marshall held a conference with Lt. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer, commander-in-chief of American forces in China who, as Chiang's chief of staff, filled him in on background.

Marshall arranged to leave tomorrow afternoon for Nanking and the initial talks with Chiang, it was announced after a reception for members of the press and military and civic dignitaries at the exclusive Cathay hotel.

First Meeting in 2 Years

It will be Marshall's first meeting with Chiang since the Cairo conference two years ago. It was taken for granted here that the talks would be concerned primarily with Truman's strongly-worded statement of Dec. 15 calling for an immediate halt to hostilities in China.

Almost simultaneously with Marshall's arrival, a Communist peace parley delegate in Chungking declared his side was ready with concessions for unity and handed the national government a request for an immediate cessation of the sporadic fighting.

The Communist delegate, Lu Ting-Yi, told Associated Press Correspondent Spencer Moosa that the Communist no longer would insist that national forces withdraw to positions they occupied before Japan's surrender but would agree that both sides stay where they are now.

Marshall was believed prepared to exert every effort to bring the Chinese Communists into a unity government. He will go on to Chungking with Chiang, who is expected to set the date for the peace talks of the political consultant council.

In that manner, Marshall will have on hand, in the form of delegates from the camps of the Communists, the government and, independent Chinese political groups, the instruments to implement American policy for peace in China.

Marshall also may learn in Nanking the latest information on the progress of Chinese-Russian negotiations over Manchuria.

A dispatch from Spencer Davis, Associated Press correspondent at Peiping, said negotiations for the return of National troops to the vast territory apparently had hit another snag.

Davis reported that Chiang Chung-Kuo, special representative for Manchuria, had gone to Nanking to obtain further instructions from his father, the generalissimo.

The younger Chiang was to return to Peiping some time today and proceed tomorrow to Changchun, the Manchurian capital for further talks with the Russians.

The Chinese press in Peiping hinted that the Russians were asking for more concessions, including joint management of Manchurian heavy industries, but these reports were without confirmation.

Marshall Lands In China; Set Foe Talks

Shanghai, Dec. 20 (AP)—Gen. George C. Marshall arrived today on his mission to end internal strife in China—and as he stepped from his plane, Chinese Communists asked the Government to agree to an immediate, unconditional cessation of hostilities, Lu Ting-yi, Communist peace-parely delegate, told the Associated Press.

Marshall is expected to meet with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek at Nanking tomorrow. The meeting will be their first since the Cairo conference.

Reds Want To See Him

Associated Press Correspondent Spencer Moosa, at Chungking, reported [illegible] move toward a cease-fire agreement, and said Lu also informed him that Red Leader Chou En-lai would seek an audience to present the Communist case to Marshall.

The American special envoy stepped from a C-54 transport plane from Manila at Shanghai's Kiangwan airfield this afternoon and proceeded to the Cathay Hotel for conference with Lieut. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer, United States commander in China.

In Chungking yesterday, Central Government and Communist leaders alike were reported ready to "go the limit" in making peace concessions to impress General Marshall. The date of the forthcoming peace parley between the two parties has not been announced.

Chiang In Nanking

Marshall and Chiang are expected to fly together to Chungking later in the week for conferences. Chiang arrived in Nanking yesterday to await the United States envoy.

From Yenan, Communist stronghold in Manchuria, Associated Press Correspondent John Roderick quoted a party spokesman as expressing "sincere hopes to reach a compromise with the Kuomintang party.

The spokesman for the powerful Red Central Committee recalled that there had been many American diplomats and army officers who had been "extremely fair in their dealings with Communists and, by their impartial reports, had made invaluable contributions toward the growth of Sino-American friendship."

He expressed the belief that President Truman and General Marshall were aware of "the fact there had been others who had been less helpful."

Conference Date Awaited

In Chungking, it was generally expected that Chiang would announced a date for the unity conference upon his return there from Nanking.

The Communist request for an immediate cessation of hostilities left the next move to the Central Government, which observers said might ask safeguards, such as a halting of Communist troop movements during the proposed truce.

A Government dispatch alleged that a detachment of Japanese-supported Communist forces in an attack December 14 against the port of Tsingtao in northeast Shantung province.

Battle Report Unconfirmed

The unconfirmed story said that, after a night-long battle, the Communists were replused and their dead included three Japanese. It was alleged also that more than 80 Japanese rifles and two mortars were recovered by Government troops.

Meanwhile, a Communist dispatch dated December 15 reported that five government division commanded by Gen. Liu Chih had been engaged for six days in a campaign avowedly designed to wipe out all Communist new 4th Army troops in the Honon-Hupeh border area between the Han River and the Peiping-Hankow railroad.

M'Nutt In Shanghai For Trade Talks

Shanghai, Dec. 20 (AP)—Paul V. McNutt arrived from Tokyo late today for talks with Gen. George C. Marshall, Lieut. Gen Albert C. Wedemeyer and Chinese financiers regarding Philippines-China trade.

McNutt, United States high commissioner to the islands, expects to return to Manila Sunday.

NEW POLICY ON CHINA KEEPS TROOPS ABROAD

SHANGHAI, Dec. 21 — (AP) Lt. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer told American troops in China today that in view of President Truman's recent Chinese policy statement their return home would be delayed.

"As a matter of fact," he said in a radio address to his troops shortly after a conference with General Marshall, "I have had to cancel two ships this month as a result of changes in our evacuation plan."

The general said that until recently United States policy would have permitted the withdrawal of practically all American forces in China by the first of the year or by early spring but this was not now possible in line with the President's statement Dec. 15.

Koreans In Shanghai Seek Repatriation

Shanghai, Dec. 20 (AP)—Leaders of Shanghai's more than 8,000 Koreans pleaded today for immediate relief and repatriation, warning that demonstrations and riots might break out soon.

Some 1,300 are members of the national army of the Korean provisional government of Kim Koo; they were ordered by Chinese yesterday to evacuate the Shanghai College campus where they have been living, and they have nowhere to go, their leaders asserted.

UNRRA Food Moved Off Clogged Docks

Shanghai, Dec. 20 (AP)—United Nations foodstuffs, clothing and other supplies which for a time clogged Shanghai docks and warehouses now are starting toward critically short inland and coastal areas.

United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration Director Roy F. Hendrickson said two weeks ago that unless the Chinese relief administration got the supplies moving, UNRRA aid to China would be terminated. Supplies at that time jammed the wharves here.

The Chinese administration has unloaded nine UNRRA ships, and two other vessels are being unloaded. A total of 76,000 tons of supplies, primarily food, has been moved from the wharves, and most of it dispatched to Hankow, Tientsin, Chinwangtao and Kowloon distribution depots.

Hooked For Turkeys? Not These GI's

Shanghai, Dec. 20 (AP)—Army quartermaster troops searched most of China for Christmas turkeys—reaching at last, via landing barges, an island 100 miles south of Shanghai.

Rumors proved true. Turkeys, indeed, were plentiful—but word of inflation had preceded the GI's. Residents asked $2 a pound, in good United States money, for their birds.

The Yanks in China will eat chicken this Christmas.

Haiphong Seen A Free Port

Chungking, Dec. 20 (AP)—The China Times, in a dispatch unconfirmed by other sources, reported today France had agreed to a Chinese proposal to convert Haiphong, Indo-China, into a free port but had rejected a request to place the Kunming-Haiphong railroad under joint Sino-French ownership and operation.

Two Planes Down

Yenan, China, Dec. 20 (AP)—Two American planes were forced down south of Weihaiwei December 13, Communist 8th Route Army Headquarters reported here. None of the occupants was hurt. All were being rescued by Communist troops, Red headquarters said, and would be returned to their base at Tsingtao.

MARINES BRING HOLIDAY TO CHINESE ORPHANS

DAVIS

PEIPING, Dec. 20.—(AP) The Fifth Marines, far from their loved ones, will have a chance to be a daddy for a day on Christmas.

Chinese orphans from the institution founded by Madame Sun Yat-Sen, widow of the founder of the Chinese republic, will be brought to the Red Cross Embassy club in the former Italian legation here where Marine enlisted men will show them a real Christmas. There will be toys, candy and a turkey dinner.

At their own barracks the Marines will have Christmas trees and decorations, tinsel made to order and traditional holiday chow—turkey, fruit cake and cranberries of the dehydrated variety.

6 Marines Tell Of Harsh Treatment By China Reds

Tientsin, Dec. 20 (AP)—Six heavily bearded Marines, who said they had been the guests—under armed guard—of Chinese Communists for 38 days and once clashed with rifle-firing soldiers in a frustrated escape, returned yesterday to their posts at this Marine headquarters.

Maj. Gen. Keller E. Rockey, commander of the 3d Marine Amphibious Force, heard their story first hand from Lieut. Robert A. Holbrook, of Three Rivers, Texas, pilot of the small bomber in which the sextet crash-landed November 10 near the village of Hochin in bad weather. The General said their return was "the best Christmas present we could get."

Others Freed

Finally freed with Holbrook without explanation by the Communists were Warrant Officer John Bieber, Jr., of Sedgwick, Col.; Tech. Sergt. Charles Carino Leone, Annandale-on-Hudson, N.Y.; Sergt. Robert J. Murphy, Hudson Falls, N.Y.; Pfc. Jack Leon Poage, Evansville, Ind., and Pfc. Roy Vantile Curtis, Ethel Springs, Tenn.

Holbrook's story:

Communists and bandits took all of their personal possessions and personally menaced them with guns, but Communist officers recovered and returned most of their belongings. Although they were told they were not prisoners, they were kept under guard. Their "hosts" said their release was a "political problem."

Plane Camouflaged

The Communists camouflaged their plane and kept them out of sight to try to prevent searching aircraft from spotting them, but after they were located, they were given food parachuted by their buddies. They were asked to don Communist army uniforms and to pose for photographs, but refused. They were asked for statements of praise of their treatment. They refused.

They were told the Marines had no business in North China.

Transferred to Jenchiu village, they were placed under guard in a stockade. On November 25 they escaped in a heavy fog and made 40 miles. Then Curtis and Leone obtained water, but no food, in a village. Returning to their four buddies who were hiding they were halted by soldiers. One struck Leone with a rifle butt but Leone and Curtis fled, drawing rifle fire near their feet.

Were Recaptured

That night, the six took refuge in a hut, but were recaptured and again robbed of watches, rings and other personal effects, which later were returned. They were prevented from sleeping by flailing on the shins with rifle butts.

Communists took them to Sinchein village, then back to Jenchui, where they were fed well. They were eventually liberated.

All were reported to be in good condition.

MORE MARINE FLYERS RETURN

Snipers Fire On Rescuers Of Yanks From Communists

Tientsin, China, Dec. 20 (AP)—Three more survivors of United States Marine plane crashes were brought here today by a rescue team which was fired upon three times by unidentified snipers.

The rescuers persuaded the Chinese Communists to accept a reward of $2,000,000 in virtually worthless Japanese puppet currency for the safe deliverance of the airmen.

In contrast with six Marine flyers who arrived here yesterday and reported they were robbed and kept prisoner by Communist forces, the three who returned today said they were wined and dined by the Communists.

Crashed December 11

Today's arrivals were: Second Lieutenant Wesley Sizoo, Chicago; his mechanic, Tech. Sergt. Norbert J. Krolicki, Detroit, and Second Lieutenant Robert E. Blount, Independence, Kan.

Sizoo's plane was one of three which crashed December 11 en route from Okinawa to Tsingtao.

Blount was one of two survivors of six marine planes which crashed in a snowstorm December 8 over the Shantung peninsula.

Blount said the other survivor who previously was reported to have suffered a broken leg, actually had only a gashed knee. He was being given medical treatment by the Communists, who insisted it was their responsibility to return him here when he could travel.

Parting Gift Of Brandy

Sizoo said the Communists had given him a case of brandy and a toothbrush as parting gifts, while the Communist commander at Laiyang gave a banquet for all three.

Members of the rescue party said they had difficulty persuading the Communist commander to accept the reward. He finally took it, however, as a good-will token.

The rescue party made the trip into the interior by jeep and on horseback.

Freed Japs Tell Of Chinese Reds

CLEMENTS

Tientsin, Dec. 20 (AP)—Eighteen Japanese soldiers captured by Chinese Communists near Tangshan and held for 47 days have been released and returned to their forces near Yutien, in eastern Shantung province of North China.

A spokesman for the Japanese detachment, Okana Susma, said the Communists asserted they were being supplied by Russians, but that most of the arms of the 4,000 Red regulars and 1,000 irregulars were of Japanese make. He said he also saw some Czechoslovakian and Russian weapons.

Propagandized

The Japanese said the Communists subjected them to a vigorous propaganda campaign, urging them to return to Japan and help communize the country. Susma said the Communists urged the soldiers to join an organization known as the "Freedom for Japan Association."

The Communist forces in the Yutien area, said the Japanese, appeared to have little organization and—in their opinion—were incapable of participating in a sustained battle.

Some Chose To Stay

Susma said the Japanese were permitted to return to their units after promising they would spread propaganda among their comrades. He added that seventeen other Japanese enlisted men and two officers chose to remain with the Communists.

Marine Shot In China

Tientsin, Dec. 20 (AP)—An unidentified marksman shot and wounded a United States Marine of the 1st Division while the American was inside his company compound at Lwahsien, 50 miles southwest of Chinwangtao, last Monday, it was reported here today.

Efforts to locate the gunman were unsuccessful.

10 Yank Flyers Killed, Chinese Says

Tsingtao, China, Dec. 20 (AP)—Chiu Chin-liang, Chinese who lives near the Shantung Peninsula village of Hu Chuang Kou, brought parts of wrecked United States Marine planes to Tsingtao today and said that ten of the twelve Marine flyers who crashed in a snowstorm December 8 had been killed.

Chiu said one man with a broken leg was being treated by Communist medical officers and that another was in the custody of Communists. The others, he said, were killed in the crashes of their dive-bombers.

American officers previously had reported seven killed, three missing and two believed safe.

BRITISH ARTILLERY USED IN ATTACK ON JAVA STRONGHOLD

BATAVIA, Java, Dec. 20—(AP) Trouble spots in northwest Bandoeng were hammered for an hour by British artillery today and then infantrymen advanced into that sector of the Java summer capital.

The Dutch government information service said a subsequent three-pronged infantry push into the sector to search for hidden weapons was virtually unopposed. Yesterday the British recovered "many arms," when their forces occupied the strongly-defended Isola hotel in northern Bandoeng.

Netherlands Indies army troops cleared and occupied Pasarminggoe, not far from Batavia, the information service said, while a battalion of NEI troops arrived at Tjimahi, four miles northwest of Bandoeng, without incident.

A Netherlands navy communique reported the capture of a 60-ton Indonesian motorship on Dec. 14 after it had fired on a Dutch landing party from the destroyer Kortenaer. It was the first mention of Indonesians possessing naval craft.

Fighting in Indonesia has cost the British almost 1,200 casualties, an official British casualty list disclosed. It listed 196 British and Indian troops and officers killed, 789 wounded and 188 missing up to Dec. 14.

(A dispatch from the Hague said that Dr. Hubertus Van Mook, acting governor-general of the Netherlands East Indies, would confer in London soon on the Indonesian situation. He has been participating in discussions in the Netherlands capital since his arrival there from Batavia on Tuesday).

Fresh Outbreaks Occur In Many Java Areas

Batavia, Java, Dec. 20 (AP)—British artillery pounded trouble spots in northwestern Bandoeng for an hour today, as fighting which has already cost British and Indian troops almost 1,200 casualties continued in Indonesia.

Meanwhile, a Netherlands navy communiqué announced the first naval action in the Java disturbances—the capture of what was described as a 60-ton motorship. The communiqué said the ship was seized December 14 after she fired on a Dutch landing party from the destroyer Kortenaer.

Blunderbusses Seized

The Dutch Government Information Service said British troops made a three-pronged advance following their shelling of Bandoeng, in a virtually unopposed search for weapons. A British announcement yesterday said "many arms," including blunderbusses, were seized when the northern sector of Bandoeng was occupied without casualties.

An official British casualty list reported 196 British and Indian troops killed, 789 wounded and 188 missing, up to December 14.

Fighting broke out yesterday at Buitzenzorg, 30 miles south of here. Mortar bombs fired by Indonesians fell in the center of the city.

Emperor Too Passive, Prince Konoye Wrote

SPENCER

Tokyo, Dec. 20 (AP)—Prince Fumimaro Konoye, who took poison rather than be tried for his diplomatic blunders, said in his memoirs that only Emperor Hirohito could have controlled the hell-bent-for-war militarists—but the Emperor took no positive steps.

Looking back on his long but futile peace negotiations with the United States, the former Premier said the Emperor's hands-off policy not only with the army and navy but also with diplomats and members of Government "was felt deeply."

The Emperor's Wish

Konoye said, however, there was no doubt of the Emperor's sincere wish for peace at all times. The memoirs were obtained by the Associated Press three days before Konoye committed suicide.

While Konoye's factual account of his second and third cabinets was not an attempt to fix blame for his failures, he condemned Japan's system of government which allowed the army to have a free rein.

"While the Government was carrying on negotiations with all its might, the military was pushing ahead its preparations for war just in case negotiations failed," he wrote.

Caused Doubt In U.S.

"Not only that, we (in the cabinet) did not know what these preparations were. Ships were moved and mobilization was pushed and the United States learned this.

"It caused the United States, with whom we were negotiating for peace, to doubt our sincerity."

Konoye said that in the tense days following September, 1941, when the question was whether Japan and the United States would begin war, the Emperor's cousin, Prince Naruhiko Higashi-Kuni, "who was one of those who advocated restraint, said there was no other way but for the Emperor boldly to make a decision."

The Army's Stand

The army was convinced that negotiations were hopeless and wanted war. The navy, while fearful of the consequences of war, would not or could not take a stand for peace in opposition to the army.

Possibly the Emperor, by ordering the army to maintain peace, might have prevailed, although the Lord Keeper of the Privy Seal, Marquis Kido, recently told Russell Brines, of the Associated Press, that the Emperor could not have stood against the army.

Konoye said he heard that "the Emperor told Prince Higashi-Kuni several times—he told me too—that it was regrettable about the army."

"Black Sheep" View

The Japanese, in discussing the "black sheep" son of some family, say "it is regrettable about him" in much the same way the Emperor spoke about the army.

At that time, Konoye wrote, Higashi-Kuni asked the Emperor why he remained aloof and that if he thought the situation was bad why didn't he come out and say so?

Konoye sought to explain "the fact the Emperor rarely voiced an opinion, to the degree in which it might be thought he was too hesitant."

Tried To Emulate King George VI

He said the late Prince Saionju, an elder statesman, and Count Makino, former Lord Keeper of the Privy Seal, had influenced the Emperor to the point where the Mikado attempted to emulate the position of the King of England.

Konoye wrote, however, that the Japanese constitution differs from the British constitution in that it is built around personal rule of the Emperor.

Konoye agreed it was proper in peacetime for the Emperor to be passive but contended that when the country was standing at crossroads leading either to peace or war such passivity led to extreme difficulties.

Emperor's Efforts "Touching"

"However, I would like to say this at the end," he wrote.

". . . The way he deeply hoped and tried to prevent Japan from entering a great war, whose future could not be forseen, and maintain unmarred the national structure of 2,600 years, was seen even as itaitashii (touching)."

'Tomb Of Unknown Warriors'

Tokyo, Dec. 20 (AP)—The grave of an unidentified United States bomber crew shot down last April, located near Tokorozawa, bears a simple wooden cross with the words:

"Tomb of Unknown Warriors of a U. S. War Plane."

MERRY CHRISTMAS FROM MACARTHUR

Tokyo, Dec. 20 (A. P.).—A huge, lighted "Merry Christmas" sign blazed tonight from Gen. MacArthur's headquarters. Emperor Hirohito could see it easily by looking from his palace grounds.

50 of Hirohito's Guards Strike

TOKYO, Dec. 20 (AP).—The Kyodo News Agency reported today that fifty members of the imperial palace guard had struck and the remaining 550 threatened to walk out unless a key official were dismissed and other "democratization" measures were taken. Palace officials, confused, wondered how to "apologize to his majesty" for the strike.

To Urge Jap Co-Operatives

Tokyo, Dec. 20 (AP)—Dr. Toyohimo Kagawa, Christian and labor leader, will lecture imperial princes tomorrow on his plans to improve Japan's economy through establishment of employer-employé co-operatives on the Scandinavian pattern.

Japan's Teachers Ask Pay Rise

TOKYO, Dec. 20 (AP).—Three hundred thousand Japanese school teachers filed a petition today, through the Japan Education Society, asking the government for a 500 per cent increase in salaries.

35-Mile Speed Rule Frightens Japs

With United States 32d Infantry Division, Japan, Dec. 20 (AP)—Complaints deluged the provost marshal as Japanese citizens leaped for their lives. Newspapers screamed with editorial alarm about "insane" American speed laws.

Quickly division officers explained: 35 miles an hour is a maximum—it doesn't mean every Japanese driver must go that fast everywhere.

Japanese Christians Plan 2 Universities

Tokyo, Dec. 20 (AP)—Japanese Christians are planning to found two universities, in Korea and Japan, to promote friendship between the two nations, Kyodo news agency reported today.

The agency reported the Korean university would be founded at or near Seoul, and the Japanese in Tokyo.

Peaceful Cult Status Asked For Shintoism

Tokyo, Dec. 20 (AP)—The Japanese press today reported that a plan to give Shintoism (reverence of ancestors) the status of a peaceful cult has been formulated by the Board of Shrines of the Home Ministry. General MacArthur earlier ordered state-supported, militaristic Shintoism abolished.

It said the plan would be submitted to the Cabinet shortly.

Its provisions include: Suspension of Shinto priests as government officials; suspension of government subsidies to Shinto shrines; abolition of group worship and mass drilling at shrines; abolition of the office of great shrines in charge of management of a great national shrines, and abolition of the Board of Shrines of the Home Ministry.

Can't Recall Yank Dying, Jap Says

Yokohama, Dec. 20 (AP)—A Japanese medical officer, Inroyashi Ohara, testifying at the trial of a prison guard charged with the fatal beating of an American prisoner of war, said today that he signed 20 to 30 prisoners' death certificates, but saw only two or three of the bodies.

The prosecution presented the witness in suggesting that the Japanese faked the death certificate of Pfc. Robert Gordon Teas, of Streator, Ill., survivor of the Bataan death march, who died at the Mitsushima prison camp.

Called "Little Glass Eye"

Charged with slaying Teas is Tatsuo Tsuchiya, dubbed by American prisoners as "Little Glass Eye."

Ohara testified that at the time of Teas death, March 5, 1943, he didn't recall the American prisoner nor remember signing the death certificate giving the cause as acute entertitis—intestinal inflamation. The Japanese said he was forced to sign certificates by a general order from Tokyo.

Another prosecution witness, Capt. Max Weiner, of Buffalo, N.Y., testified the certificate had no value and that various ailments and beatings may have caused the American prisoner's death.

Affidavit Ruled Out

Earlier, the commission struck from the record an affidavit detailing frequent beatings of the Illinois soldier. The testimony, by Pfc. Charles B. Gavord, of Deming, N.M., was ruled out because of the inability of the prosecution to produce the original, instead of a mimeographed copy.

But Major Louis Geffen, chief prosecutor, introduced other affidavits taken from former prisoners of the camp. The prosecution was expected to complete its case tomorrow against "Little Glass Eye," who may take the stand in his own behalf Saturday.

They Don't See Eye To Eye

Yokohama, Dec. 20 (AP)—Does "Little Glass Eye" have a glass eye?

One former prisoner's affidavit insisted that the left eye of former guard, Tatsuo Tsuchiya, charged with killing an American, was glass. Another, however, declared it was the right which was glass. Tsuchiya can see, so they cannot both be correct.

Tsuchiya sits between opposing attorneys, but the defense said it was withholding all comment on glass eyes and the prosecution said it did not know.

Tsuchiya just sits.

8th Army to Lose 16,000 on Points

Yokohama, Dec. 20 (A. P.).—Lowering of discharge requirements for enlisted men to 50 points, or three and one-half years' service, and of officers to 70 points, or four years' service, makes approximately 16,000 more Eighth Army troops eligible to return home by January 1, headquarters estimated today. They probably will begin moving homeward within a few days thereafter, a spokesman said.

CHARGES WIDENED AGAINST HOMMA

MANILA, Dec. 20.—(AP) Broadened charges against Lt. Gen. Masaharu Homma accused him today of having been a personal and idolent witness to the savage Bataan death march and of responsibility for a second death march of American prisoners in the Luzon mountains in 1942.

Lt. Col. Frank E. Meek of Caldwell, Idaho, who will prosecute Homma before an American military commission starting Jan. 3, said five new specifications had been filed against the once-arrogant conqueror of the Philippines.

They state that Homma, lolling in his automobile, actually watched the march of the starving, thirsting prisoners on Bataan while his soldiery slaughtered those unable to keep the pace;

That later more than 100 sick American prisoners were forced to serve as pack animals for Japanese supplies in northern Luzon and were pushed over cliffs when they wavered;

That Homma was "utterly unscrupulous" in the surrender of Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright, using the American commander as a hostage to try to force other units to surrender;

That Homma was responsible for the cold-blooded murder May 7, 1942, of Jose Abad Santos, former chief justice of the Philippines, for refusing to form a puppet government; and for the similar death Dec. 10, 1941, of Buenaventura Bello, Luzon rural school teacher, for refusing to haul down the American flag above his school.

Takuma Higashiji, Philippines-born Japanese who was an interpreter for the Japanese army, was arraigned today on 54 counts charging the death of 50 persons, while Tostimatsu Miyagi was arraigned in the killing of an entire family of Filipinos. Their trials are due to start Dec. 27.

Second 'Death March' Laid To Homma

Manila, Dec. 20 (AP)—A second "death march" in the precipitous mountains of northern Luzon, in which exhausted and emaciated American prisoners of war were pushed over cliffs, was charged today against Japanese Lieut. Gen. Masaharu Homma.

More than 100 sick prisoners were made to haul Japanese arms and supplies into the rugged country to fight guerrillas, said the formal charges against the former commander in the Philippines.

Lieut. Col. Frank E. Meek, of Caldwell, Idaho, chief prosecutor in Homma's trial slated for January 3, announced the additional charge.

Deposition Arrives

Meek said he would introduce evidence to show that Homma witnessed the first Death March from Bataan, while lolling in an automobile. Homma is accused of responsibility for atrocities involving the death of 67,000 American and Filipino prisoners.

A twelve-page deposition from Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright, just received in Manila, will show that Homma was "utterly unscrupulous" in his dealings with the American commander, Meek added.

The prosecutor said Homma even used Wainwright as a hostage, after refusing to grant quarter to American forces, in an effort to effect the surrender of other Allied units.

New Procedure

Meek asked correspondents and the American public to realize the necessity for "an entirely new legal procedure to try war criminals since no previous international legal code covers actions of men like Homma and Yamashita" (Lieut. Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita, who appealed from a military commission sentence to the gallows).

"We can't wrap these men in an American flag," said Meek. "They're not entitled to a court-martial since this type of trial is not applicable under enemy terms of the Geneva Convention."

"Torture Mills"

To be arraigned tomorrow is Lieut. Col. Sinichio Ohta, gendarmerie commander accused of establishing "torture mills" in the Philippines immediately after the Japanese landed. Two other Japanese charged with torturing Filipinos in Tacloban, Leyte, also will face the United States military commission.

Twenty-five other cases are expected to be brought before the commission soon. To be tried December 27 are Takuma Higashiji, Philippine-born Japanese interpreter charged with killing 50 Filipinos and torturing others, and Tostimatsu Miyagi, accused of slaying an entire family in Cebu province.

GI's In Mid-Pacific Will Get Turkey

Honolulu, Dec. 20 (AP)—Brig. Gen. H. R. McKenzie, quartermaster of the mid-Pacific area, says turkey and all the trimmings are on order for the Christmas dinner of every soldier in the mid-Pacific.

The menu will include quick-frozen turkey, cranberries, fruit cake, mince pies and, where available, ice cream.

ARGENTINA ORDERS REVISION OF WAGES

BUENOS AIRES, Dec. 20.—(AP) Argentina's military government today created a national institute to fix all workers' wages, ordered an annual bonus of one month's pay for all employes, and immediate raises for persons earning less than 1,000 pesos ($247) monthly.

The government agency, known as the National Institute of Salaries, ordered all employers to start the annual bonus system Dec. 31, but to make the salary and wage adjustments, covering the rise in cost of living, retroactive to Dec. 1.

The long awaited decree, while it does not carry out former Vice President Juan Peron's promise to get workers a 25 per cent share in annual profits, was regarded by political observers as likely to have a profound effect in the February election, in which Peron will be a candidate for the presidency.

A sliding scale of salary adjustments gives workers earning 200 pesos a month an increase of about 25 per cent; from 200 to 400 a month, an increase of about 20 per cent; from 400 to 600, 10 per cent; from 600 to 800, about five per cent, while salaries above 800 would be raised to about 920 pesos. Household servants are excepted from the rulings.

Meanwhile, the Nationalist Liberty Alliance, a union of all Argentine nationalist groups, has requested recognition as a political party. The nationalists are supporting the candidacy of Peron, but were believed planning to enter their own candidates for lesser offices. The union favors a community of South American nations, closer links with old Spain, and a clear understanding with the United States on the sovereign rights of both nations.

5 Years In Battle Zone—Only One Point

Honolulu, Dec. 20 (AP)—Private William G. Pickett, stationed at Bellows Field, has accumulated exactly one point toward discharge, yet his record includes:

Bahamas To Extend Invitation To Churchill

Nassau, Bahamas, Dec. 20 (AP)—The Bahamas Government stated today that Winston Churchill and his family will be invited to visit the colony while the former Prime Minister is in Florida.

Churchill, with his wife and daughter, Diana, visited the Bahamas in January, 1932. He is expected to reside at Miami Beach.

Battleship Picking Up Speed As Gales Ease

Aboard the U.S.S. Washington, Dec. 19 [AP—Delayed]—The battleship Washington picked up speed today as gales of hurricane force subsided in the mid-Atlantic.

During the height of the storms, the vessel was battered by winds which reached a velocity of almost 90 miles per hour. This cut the ship's speed to a little more than one knot. Some equipment was smashed by waves which climbed more than 100 feet, topping the ship.

The Washington originally was scheduled to dock tomorrow at New York, but present indications are that she will not make port until late Saturday or early Sunday.

British And U.S. Ships In Distress Off Canada

Halifax, N.S., Dec. 20 (AP)—The British escort carrier Begum and the American freighter Mary Pickersgill were in distress today off the Canadian shore, where a swirling snowstorm was swept into the Atlantic by winds of gale force.

Three other ships, driven ashore earlier, were buffeted by the sea. The fate of two others was undetermined.

The Begum bucked heavy seas in an effort to reach Newfoundland. The 7,210-ton Mary Pickersgill fought toward Halifax at nine knots.

Breakers continued to slam against the decommissioned Canadian corvette Sorel, aground off the Cape Breton Island. The small St. Pierre freighter Cap Bleu still was aground near the Strait of Canso, and the trawler Gale was grounded on Sable Island.

Halifax shipping officials had no further information on an SOS reported by the Navy from an unidentified American freighter, a call relayed by the United States freighter Aiken Victory.

Shipping circles still did not know the whereabouts of the United States freighter Pierre L'Enfant, reported by Boston a week ago to have sent out a plea for assistance. The ship was bound for Europe.

The Greek freighter Dimitrios Chandris, which relayed an SOS Tuesday, was reported taken in tow by an American vessel.

PRESIDENT HOLDS ABILITY TO PAY IS RELEVANT ISSUE

Believes Fact Finders Should Have Right to Examine Company Books.

FORD OFFER REJECTED

Union Requests Discussion of Pay Be Separated from Other Questions.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20—(AP) In the face of management protests before his two fact-finding boards, President Truman declared flatly today that the question of a company's earnings is "relevant" in wage disputes.

He asserted that "ability to pay is always one of the facts relevant to the issue of an increase in wages" and that fact-finding boards must have authority to examine an employer's books whenever this ability is in question.

G-M Threatens to Withdraw

The President read his statement to a news conference after counsel for General Motors corporation had served notice that the company "will withdraw from the proceedings" if the fact-finding board went into the question of its profits and prices.

Previously the Pure Oil company had indicated to a fact-finding panel for the oil industry that it would not participate if the profit factor is considered.

"In view of the public interest involved," the President said, "it would be highly unfortunate if any party to a dispute should refuse to cooperate with a fact-finding board."

In the absence of the legislation which the President asked Congress to pass before its Christmas recess, there is no legal compulsion for the companies to open their books. Mr. Truman said that this was "one of the things I meant" in urging the act.

"The detailed information obtained from the books of an employer should not be made public," the chief executive added. "Such a disclosure would place the employer at a disadvantage with respect to his competitor.

"But the fact-finding board should unquestionably have the right to examine the employer's books where it deems it necessary in order to make up its own mind as to whether a demand for an increase is justified, and to make public all findings based on such information that it deems relevant x x x.

Decision Not New

"This is nothing new. There are many instances where the books of corporations are opened for inspection to representatives of state and federal governments and where the information so obtained is used solely by such officials x x x."

The President said that giving a fact-finding board authority to examine books "does not mean that the government or its fact-finding board is gong to endeavor to fix a rate of return for the employer. It does mean, however, that since wages are paid out of earnings, the question of earnings is relevant."

The Presidential statement, handed to the General Motors board while it was in session, proved a dramatic surprise to the board members and the disputing parties alike. Chairman Lloyd K. Garrison prefaced his reading of it with the statement that the board had been completely unaware of Mr. Truman's intention to issue it.

A wide grin spread across the face of Walter P. Reuther, director of the C.I.O. United Auto Workers strike, as the reading proceeded

Charles E. Wilson, General Motors president, said it would not alter the company's stand

The board had not actually decided that the price and profits question should be considered. Walter Gordon Merritt of New York, counsel for the company, contended that the President apparently was seeking to authorize the board to go into the matter but that the decision whether to do so still rested with the panel. The board recessed until tomorrow at 2:30 p.m. to make up its mind.

To Confer Today

Meanwhile, at the board's request, the company and union agreed to confer tomorrow morning to try to lay a basis for resuming collective bargaining on the issues in the month-old strike.

Merritt had opposed the union's demand that the company submit its books on the ground that the information which was sought would involve figures necessarily based on speculation and predictions of future conditions.

"I assure you," he said, "that if this board brings out a recommendation, the company will not reject it on the ground of inability to pay."

The union's demand is for a flat 30 per cent wage increase.

Reuther contended that the company refused to accept the "economic arithmetic" of the dispute. He added that the union would "back down" if the board could show that its demand would justify price increases but that otherwise "we're not going to surrender or compromise."

The impact of the President's statement on the oil industry panel was not apparent immediately. It had been in recess until tomorrow morning when it is scheduled to announce its decision on whether to consider profits and prices. Ten companies besides Pure Oil are involved in a dispute with the C.I.O. Oil Workers union which demands a 30 per cent wage increase.

Mr. Truman read his statement at the outset of his news conference. To a reporter's question, he said that fact-finding boards also should have power to examine a union's books if they believe such a step will help them in deciding issues.

Any idea of using profit and loss statements as a yardstick for fixing wages was attacked today by Senator Moore (R.-Okla.) who said in a statement:

"The proposal is unadorned socialism and only a short step behind Communism. It is as unsound from labor's standpoint as it is from the investor's."

Offer is 'Mockery,' Ford Union Says

DETROIT, Dec. 20 — (AP) The C.I.O. United Automobile Workers today told the Ford Motor Co. its 12.4 per cent wage increase offer was a "mockery" and in Washington President Truman declared that it is essential in labor disputes that fact-finding boards have authority to examine employers' and unions' books if deemed advisable.

In formally rejecting Ford's offer, amounting to 15 cents an hour, the union asked that discussion of the wage problem be separated entirely from other issues. The union took exception to virtually every condition Ford coupled with its proposal and challenged several company contentions.

Questions Prediction of Loss

The union's rejection of the Ford offer said bluntly "We do not believe the company faces loss of $35,000,000 in 1946," and that Ford "stands to profit by many millions of dollars" in the market ahead. The company claims it stands to lose that amount without a wage increase and under established retail prices Ford's proposed wage increase would cost an additional $32,000,000 annually, the company said.

An increase of 30 per cent has been demanded of both Ford and General Motors by the union. Richard T. Leonard, U.A.W.-C.I.O. Ford director, said the union was "standing firm" on this demand.

The U.A.W.-Ford negotiations were adjourned until January 8 after a half hour meeting today. John Bugas, Ford industrial relations director, said the session "was another step forward in our negotiations since it clarified completely the union's position. It looks as though when we resume on January 8, there will be some very serious negotiating.

"We made it clear again this morning that any final settlement of the wage issue must depend upon our ability to increase employe productivity and reach volume production."

U.A.W.'s Leonard emphasized that the union position at the next meeting would be that wages alone should be discussed. He said both parties has agreed to "think over their problems during the Christmas holidays."

In Windsor, Ont., the Ford Motor Co., of Canada prepared to resume operations after a 99-day strike that idled 10,000 U.A.W.-C.I.O. members in a dispute over wages, a closed shop and dues checkoff. The strikers voted to accept a government-sponsored arbitration proposal.

Assails 2-Year Check

The union letter to the Ford company in the Detroit negotiations assailed a management proposal that the union agree to seek no further wage increase for two years even if OPA permitted higher car prices.

The U.A.W.-C.I.O. described the offer as "totally inadequate" adding:

"It would not raise wages to a point where Ford workers could meet the present high cost of living. Nor would it contribute sufficiently to the increase in purchasing power that is required if we are to avoid a disastrous breakdown of American economy."

"As you know," it continued, "the union has fought very hard against price increases because we already have too much inflation and any further rise in prices threatens a breakdown of our economy."

"Suppose the powerful manufacturers lobby does succeed in destroying OPA controls. x x x Such success, or even partial success, by the high price lobby would inevitably bring a fearful rise in the cost of living. x x x We obviously cannot undertake to shackle our membership so that they are bound not to seek relief in such an eventuality."

At another point the union asserted:

"Even the 12.4 per cent increase you offer contingent upon production reaching 80,000 units a month would not come in the form of a blanket raise. A great many workers might receive little or nothing at all.

"You state that out of the 12.4 per cent must come all other economic concessions sought by the union. We refer to elimination of interplant and intra-plant inequalities, increased vacation pay, increased overtime benefits, increased shift premiums, pensions for the aged, and others.

"These factors could eat up a large part of the 12.4 per cent present offer, perhaps practically all. There would, in all probability, be very little left to distribute as a raise in the basic hourly rate of the great bulk of Ford workers."

The letter said Ford assets had increased more than $300,000,000 during the war and added:

Ford Profits Cut

"During the years before the war, Ford profits were reduced by the fact that the company operated under the disadvantage of low volume and very heavy overhead. The company's share of the auto market slipped from 50 per cent in the early 1920s to 20 per cent just before the war. Idle machines and idle equipment caused reduction in profits. x x x

"An assured market, capacity production and managerial efficiency promise to bring the company greater profits in 1946 and subsequent years that it has enjoyed since the days of the Model T. This means conclusively that, for the foreseeable future at least, the company can well afford to pay the wages sought by the union."

Truman and GM Texts

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20—Here is the statement of President Truman calling for examination by fact-finding boards of company books, and part of a statement by Walter Gordon Merritt, GM counsel, in opposition to use of profit data in Government fact-finding:

Truman's Statement

In appointing a fact-finding board in an industrial dispute where one of the questions at issue is wages, it is essential to a fulfillment of its duty that the board have the authority, whenever it deems it necessary, to examine the books of the employer. That authority is essential to enable the board to determine the ability of the employer to pay an increase in wages where such ability is in question. Ability to pay is always one of the facts relevant to the issue of an increase in wages.

This does not mean that the Government or its fact-finding board is going to endeavor to fix a rate of return for the employer. It does mean, however, that since wages are paid out of earnings, the question of earnings is relevant.

The detailed information obtained from the books of an employer should not be made public. Such a disclosure would place the employer at a disadvantage with respect to his competitors. But the fact-finding board should unquestionably have the right to examine the employer's books where it deems it necessary in order to make up its own mind as to whether a demand for increase is justified and to make public all findings based on such information that it deems relevant to the controversy.

Former Message Recalled

That is one of the things I meant when I stated in my message of Dec. 3, 1945, to the Congress:

"The board should be * * * directed to make a thorough investigation of all the facts which it deems relevant in the controversy."

This is nothing new. There are many instances where the books of corporations are opened for inspection to representatives of the State and Federal Governments and where the information so obtained is used solely by such officials to carry out their functions.

To confer the right to examine books is one of the main purposes of granting subpoena power to the fact-finding boards. I trust that the Congress, which is the only body authorized to grant such power, will do so quickly.

In view of the public interest involved it would be highly unfortunate if any party to a dispute should refuse to cooperate with a fact-finding board.

Merritt's Statement

That leads UAW to this insupportable contention and dilemma.

That General Motors should place on the table here for the hungry eyes of its competitors those very figures and estimates which will be the basis of private hearings between management and OPA pursuant to the laws of the United States.

That data must necessarily include forecasts, projections, guesses at the cost of raw materials where future prices are speculative because of strikes actual or potential. These facts—if they be facts—these computations, which involve the gift of prophecy, the General Motors Company does not propose to lay on the bargaining table with a monopoly union that also, to an important extent, controls the operations of its competitors.

Nor does it propose to submit any issue within the jurisdiction of OPA to this fact-finding board.

The people of the United States, acting through their elected representatives, have lodged the responsibility for such questions as profits and prices, and the protection of the rights of the people in respect thereto, with the OPA, and I am aware of no public clamor that this responsibility be transferred to the UAW or the General Motors Corporation, as the self-appointed guardian of the public interests.

If, as claimed by the union, there is ample margin or profit here such as would permit wages to be paid out of line with other wages in this or other industries, the correction, if any, is to be furnished by OPA in fixing prices which would permit the benefit to the entire public instead of a small group.

"Traps and Pitfalls" Seen

That certainly is the logic of a controlled economy under which we have adopted a price-wage national policy. If the fact-finding board rules otherwise on this vital problem General Motors will withdraw from the proceedings.

There may be those who feel that we should venture into these uncharted seas with labor having a voice in price or profits—there may be those who feel that this is the primrose way; but this corporation believes that such a course is beset with traps and pitfalls and would constitute an impairment of those management functions which made it possible for this country to out-produce its enemies in the war now happily ended.

When the people, through Congress, declare a policy, this company will comply, but it will not voluntarily lead American industry down a trail which it believes should not be followed.

And in this connection we say to this board that in the light of national wage price policy, in the light of our anti-trust policies, which forbid alliances between capital and labor in respect to prices or market controls, we should not be pressed to acquiesce in any other position than we have taken. What this country needs is an understanding of our position, and not a distortion of it.

Union, G.M. Converse

Washington, Dec. 20 (AP)—Here are excerpts from a verbal exchange between Charles E. Wilson, head of the nation's largest manufacturing corporation—General Motors—and Walter P. Reuther, redheaded vice president of the striking CIO-auto workers, America's largest union, before the President's fact-finding panel, several hundred newspaper correspondents and spectators:

Reuther—We asked for a horse and you offered us a rabbit.

Wilson—Thirteen and a half cents is not exactly a rabbit.

Reuther—Compared with what you people are keeping it is less than a rabbit.

Insist On Seeing Books

Wilson—I don't see how we can get anywhere, Walter, when you insist on seeing the corporation books.

Reuther—You don't know what I've said, you haven't been there in the negotiations.

Wilson—I read the blame things.

Reuther—We've got to get the first team back in there and sit down and talk about it. Let's try to get some of that good will back in our collective bargaining. Come back in there like you used to do and put your feet on the table and get down to negotiating.

Wilson—It's our heads that are on the table.

Reuther—Bring in the first team and let's go to work.

A Brief Statement

Wilson—I want to make just a brief statement (gripping a yellow paper before him). The union representatives and the corporation representatives have agreed that that is not an ordinary collective-bargaining matter. Looking back through the years I have felt that relations between General Motors and the union had been steadily improved. If this had been just an ordinary collective-bargaining matter, we would have been able to settle this ourselves. I personally feel very bad about this strike. I don't like the idea of 175,000 General Motors men and women walking the streets in the snow before Christmas. Nor do I like General Motors being singled out as a guinea pig. I didn't think we had it coming to us on the basis of our past relations.

Reuther—We don't like the strike either. Our people are not receiving unemployment compensation or strike benefits. They are making a tremendous sacrifice. You wouldn't conciliate. You wouldn't arbitrate.

"Get Your Feet Wet"

Wilson—If you can pull it down to the basis of a matter between the General Motors Corporation and the union we can settle it. But I don't know how we can handle the problems of the whole country.

Reuther—Come in and get your feet wet.

Wilson—I don't think I could possibly contribute anything.

Reuther—I think you're far too modest.

The white-haired corporation president leaned across the shiny walnut conference table which separated the company side and the union's side in the fact-finding hearing, watching Reuther.

The great green-walled conference room was still, the audience aware of the weighty issues affected by the interchange. Reporters scribbled feverishly.

Meeting Set For 10 A.M.

Wilson's eyes widened at times during the exchange and occasionally he turned to Loyd K. Garrison, board chairman, with a grin, expostulating.

Finally Wilson's right-hand personnel chief, Harry W. Anderson, blurted in Reuther's direction: "I can be there at 10 A.M."

Thus the groundwork for possible resumption of negotiations was laid. The meeting tomorrow at 10 had been suggested by Reuther, who said he would submit a list of local union demands, requested by the company, at that time.

But the union was prepared, too, to talk wages on a national scale as well, the 38-year-old strike general said.

Truce Ends Ford Windsor Strike

Detroit, Dec. 20 (AP)—The Ford Motor Company of Canada today made its big Windsor (Ont.) plant ready to resume production following termination of the longest and most widespread strike in the history of the Canadian automobile industry.

Ninety-nine days after the strike of 10,000 Ford workers began, the CIO United Automobile Workers announced last night that members of its Local 200 had voted to accept a Dominion Government proposal for negotiation and, if necessary, arbitration of the dispute.

Officials of Local 200 promptly notified the Government of the result and ordered the withdrawal of picket lines.

15-Day Negotiating Limit

The company, which had previously agreed to the plan, announced that it would call its employés back as soon as possible after receiving official notification of the union's decision.

The Government proposal, similar to one rejected by a narrow margin several weeks ago, provides for ten days of negotiations after work is resumed. Any issues still unsolved after that time would be submitted to an arbitrator selected from the Canadian Supreme Court, for a final ruling within five days.

Union's Demands

The major issues are the union's demands for a closed shop and dues checkoff.

Several weeks after the strike began, 8,000 UAW-CIO members in other Windsor area plants walked out in sympathy; later these returned to their jobs. The strike also was marked by an automobile blockade that clogged the city's streets for two days.

Detroit Talks Resumed

Here in Detroit, meanwhile, Ford officials again met with UAW-CIO representatives to discuss wage demands of more than 100,000 Ford workers in this country.

Ford's offer of a 15-cent-an-hour, or 12.4 per cent, increase was turned down by the union Tuesday as "completely unacceptable." Union leaders prepared a detailed rejection, outlining their stand on several conditions attached to the Ford offer, for presentation at today's session.

Negotiations between the union and the Kaiser-Frazer Corporation had been scheduled to resume today but were postponed to December 27. A Kaiser-Frazer spokesman said more time was required to study the contract proposal submitted by the union on Tuesday. The UAW was reported to have demanded a union shop, checkoff of dues and wage rates 30 per cent above those now in effect at the Ford Rouge plant.

Board Opening G.M. Strike Hearings

Washington, Dec. 20 (AP)—Government fact-finding to settle labor disputes met crucial tests today in three far-reaching wage controversies. The outcome may influence congressional action on Mr. Truman's request for authority to set up similar boards for all major disputes, with power to subpœna documents.

Boards dependent upon voluntary co-operation of all parties are going into action in the General Motors strike and the oil industry wage case. Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach has offered to appoint a third such board in the Greyhound Bus Lines strike, now 50 days old, if the transportation tieup is ended.

The Profit-Price Issue

The decisions that have to be made in the General Motors and oil controversies are classed as fundamental: whether to consider a company's profits and prices in recommending a possible wage increase.

The General Motors panel, headed by Chairman Lloyd K. Garrison of the War Labor Board, opens public hearings on this and other points today. Then it will recess at least until Saturday, to make its decision on the issue.

Garrison told a news conference that General Motors had made its position clear: It thinks profits should not be taken into account, and it will not show its books to answer the CIO United Auto Workers' claim that it could absorb a 30 per cent wage increase. The corporation also says prices are of no concern to the union or to the fact-finding board but are a matter to be discussed with the OPA.

Oil Ruling Due Tomorrow

The oil panel, headed by Dr. Frank P. Graham, public member of the War Labor Board, is scheduled to announce its decision on the profit and price issue tomorrow.

One of the eleven companies involved, the Pure Oil Company, has already indicated that it will not participate in the fact-finding if the profit factor is considered in weighing the CIO-oil workers' demand for a 30 per cent wage increase. Another, the Sinclair Refining Company, has agreed to pay eighteen per cent higher wages with the return to a 40-hour week.

The Bus Proposal

Labor Secretary Schwellenbach offered yesterday to establish a tripartite fact-finding board—different from the G.M. and oil panels of public representatives only—if the 4,000 AFL strikers return to work.

Neither the union nor the strike-bound Pennsylvania and Central Greyhound companies accepted immediately. The companies were asked to reinstate the strikers without penalties, and to make any wage increases finally granted retroactive to November 1, when the strike began.

Accept Mediation Terms

Two Greyhound Lines Promise to Reinstate Employees

CHICAGO, Dec. 20 (AP).—The Pennsylvania and Central Greyhound Lines have wired their acceptance of proposed terms preliminary to deliberations by a fact-finding panel to study the eighteen-state bus strike, Ralph Bogan, vice-president of the Greyhound Corporation, said today.

Samuel P. Berrong, secretary-treasurer of the Amalgamated Street Railway and Motor Coach Employees, American Federation of Labor, and other union officials had Secretary of Labor Lewis Schwellenbach's proposition under study.

Mr. Bogan said the two affected lines have informed Secretary Schwellenbach they "stand ready to reinstate employees . . . without discrimination" and to stipulate the contract in effect Oct. 31 shall "be continued until replaced by a new contract."

Strike Benefits Sought

Washington, Dec. 20 (AP)—Legislation entitling unemployed war veterans to unemployment compensation benefits even though unemployment is due to work stoppages caused by labor disputes has been introduced by Representative Green (D., Pa.).

UAW RIDICULES FORD'S OFFER

Asks Wage Problem Be Separated From Other Issues

Detroit, Dec. 20 (AP)—The CIO-United Automobile Workers today told the Ford Motor Company its 12.4 per cent wage-rate increase offer was a "mockery" and asked that discussion of the wage problem be separated entirely from other issues in the current dispute.

Formally rejecting the Ford offer, amounting to 15 cents an hour, the union took exception to virtually every condition the company coupled with its proposal and challenged several management contentions.

It said bluntly that "we do not believe the company faces loss of $35,000,000 in 1946," and that Ford "stands to profit by many millions of dollars" in the market ahead.

Management's Claim

Management had claimed that without a wage increase and under established retail prices it stood to lose $35,000,000 next year. The proffered wage rise would cost an additional $33,000,000, the company said.

Negotiations between management and union were adjourned until January 8 following a half-hour meeting today. Richard T. Leonard, UAW-CIO Ford director, said both parties had agreed to "think over their problems during the Christmas holidays" and that the union position at the next meeting would be that wages alone should be discussed.

He said the union was "standing firm" on its demand for a 30 per cent wage-rate increase. Company officials had no immediate comment.

The union letter assailed a management proposal that the union agree to seek no further wage increase for two years even if OPA permitted higher car prices.

"Totally Inadequate"

The UAW-CIO described the offer as "totally inadequate," adding:

"It would not raise wages to a point where Ford workers could meet the present high cost of living. Nor would it contribute sufficiently to the increase in purchasing power that is required if we are to avoid a disastrous breakdown of American economy."

"As you know," it continued, "the union has fought very hard against price increases because we already have too much inflation and any further rise in prices threatens a breakdown of our economy."

"Suppose the powerful manufacturers' lobby does succeed in destroying OPA controls. . . . Such success, or even partial success, by the high-price lobby would inevitably bring a fearful rise in the cost of living. . . . We obviously cannot undertake to shackle our membership so that they are bound not to seek relief in such an eventuality."

Raise Offer Analyzed

At another point the union asserted:

"Even the 12.4 per cent increase you offer contingent upon production reaching 80,000 units a month would not come in the form of a blanket raise. A great many workers might receive little or nothing at all.

"You state that out of the 12.4 per cent must come all other economic concessions sought by the union. We refer to elimination of interplant and intraplant inequalities, increased vacation pay, increased overtime benefits, increased shift premiums, pensions for the aged, and others.

"These factors could eat up a large part of the 12.4 per cent present offer, perhaps practically all. There would, in all probability, be very little left to distribute as a raise in the basic hourly rate of the great bulk of Ford workers."

Assets Reported Up

The letter said Ford assets had increased more than $300,000,000 during the war, and added:

"During the years before the war, Ford profits were reduced by the fact that the company operated under the disadvantage of low volume and very heavy overhead.

"The company's share of the auto market slipped from 50 per cent in the early 1920's to twenty per cent just before the war. Idle machines and idle equipment caused reduction in profits . . .

"An assured market, capacity production and managerial efficiency promise to bring the company greater profits in 1946 and subsequent years that it has enjoyed since the days of the Model T.

Security Proposal

"This means conclusively that, for the foreseeable future at least, the company can well afford to pay the wages sought by the union."

The union described the management's "company security" proposal as "unacceptable," declaring it entirely eliminated all company responsibility.

The UAW-CIO proposal contained a provision that the company and its supervisors be subject to penalties if guilty of provoking illegal work stoppages.

"The company has admitted that its supervision has provoked stoppages and yet it now asks that the union and its members take all responsibility for any trouble which might happen," the union said. "This is neither realistic nor fair. . . .

"The company must realize that it simply is not human nature for things always to go smoothly among 80,000 to 90,000 people in a single plant. Both sides must assume responsibility if we are to hope for success in this respect."

Congressman Fears Hasty Labor Laws

Washington, Dec. 20 (AP) — The House's decision not to end its Christmas recess until the day set for the start of a nation-wide steel strike was deplored today by Representative Shafer (R., Mich.).

"If the steel strike continues for only a few weeks," he said in a statement, "most American industry will be paralyzed. Then Congress will face the sort of crisis in which, unprepared to act wisely, it is likely to act hotly and hastily and enact an unworkable and dangerous law."

A resolution approved by the House yesterday calls for Congress to start the second session of the Seventy-ninth Congress on January 14, the day picked by the CIO steel workers to begin a strike. The Senate has yet to act on the resolution.

Shafer said: "Congress is being criticized, and rightly so, for its failure to act [before the Christmas recess] on any law designed to protect the nation against the disastrous strike wave."

In Washington, the State Department said it had never heard of the disagreement described by Tighe and that the reported protest from Gen. MacArthur to the State Department had not been received.

Correspondent Larry Tighe of the American Broadcasting company reported from Tokyo that MacArthur had sent a protest message to the State department threatening to resign.

Tighe said that the Russians "insisted that they are allowed to occupy Hokkaido, northernmost of the main islands." He added that MacArthur refused "with the implication that if the Russians ever got into Hokkaido they'd never be dislodged."

Government officials, declining to be quoted by name, said Moscow never had shown any interest in the occupation and expressed surprise at Tighe's report. They said that when the occupation began Russia had taken the position that the U. S. should handle the task alone.

About three weeks ago, the officials related, the U. S. invited Russia to send occupation forces because the same offer was being made to Australia but no Soviet reply had been received.

Tighe said that MacArthur had offered "to let the Russans into southernmost Kyushu, which would put American troops between the (Russians) homeland and the occupying force. Then the Russians said no. MacArthur's answer to that amounted to, "All right, don't send an occupation force; we don't need it anyway.' "

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20 — (AP) President Truman said today he knew nothing about a report that General Douglas MacArthur had threatened to resign over differences with the Russians on the occupation of Japan.

Russ-M'Arthur Split On Japan Seen

DEC 21 1945

San Francisco, Dec. 20 (AP)—American Broadcasting Company Correspondent Larry Tighe reported today from Tokyo that General MacArthur and the Russians had disagreed over which of the Japanese home islands Soviet forces would occupy, and that as a result Russians will not participate in the occupation at all.

Furthermore, Tighe said, MacArthur reportedly told the United States State Department yesterday that if he were not let alone, and if Russia were allowed any further participation in occupation affairs, he would resign.

"First, the Russians wanted to bring an army over here," the correspondent asserted. "MacArthur said no. He would permit them to bring one division. But they insisted that they be allowed to occupy Hokkaido, northernmost of the main islands. MacArthur again said no, with the implication that if the Russians ever get into Hokkaido they'd never be dislodged.

"MacArthur offered instead to let the Russians into southernmost Kyushu, which would put American troops between the [Russian] homeland and the occupying force. Then the Russians said no. MacArthur's answer to that amounted to, 'All right, don't send an occupation force; we don't need it anyway.' "

Fleet Leader Failed to Act On War Order

Warships Should Have Been at Sea Dec. 7, Says Admiral Turner.

BARES DEFENSE PLAN

Kimmel Had Instructions to Carry Out Pre-Arranged Deployment.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20—(AP) The Navy's 1941 war plans chief contended today that the Pacific fleet got specific orders 10 days before Pearl Harbor which should have sent it onto the high seas ready to fight.

Admiral Richmond Kelly Turner told the Pearl Harbor committee that he had assumed for days, in fact, that the fleet was at sea until news came of Japan's disaster-dealing Dec. 7, 1941, raid on the anchored ships at Hawaii.

Ships Should be at Sea

At sea, he declared, was "the place for them under Admiral Kimmel's operating plan." Admiral Husband E. Kimmel was commander-in-chief of the Pacific fleet when the Japanese struck.

In brief, the Navy department's view here, as Turner presented it, was that Navy men had talked for 25 years of a possible attack on Hawaii, there was correspondence with Kimmel about air defense, and "splendid plans" were received from Hawaii.

Then, Nov. 27, 1941, Kimmel was sent a dispatch which advised it was to be considered "a war warning" and instructed that he "execute an appropriate defensive deployment preparatory to carrying out the tasks assigned in WPL 46."

The letters and figures stand for War Plan No. 46 which was part of "Rainbow 5," the general plan for operations in a war with Japan.

Describes Plan in Detail

Turner said defensive deployment under the plan had been worked out in detail and should have sent the fleet out ready to fight, extended reconnaissance, and dispatched submarines for surveillance and possible attack on an approaching enemy.

"Instead of being concentrated," Turner testified, "it (defensive deployment) meant that the commander in chief of the Pacific fleet could take operating stations for the most probable attack."

That, he asserted, would have sent fast ships northward, the direction from which the attack actually came, to cover an area in which there were no islands from which enemy could be reported.

Against such a fast force as might be expected to make any attack, he said, the American battleships would have been of "no use" except to combat landings. He added that the proper disposition for that sort of action would have been at sea, where they could move in on landing forces.

The fleet—six battleships, six cruisers and a dozen destroyers—was caught in the harbor.

Relating his expectations as to Japanese action, the Admiral testified that a drop around Nov. 25 or 26 in the volume of communication among Japanese fleet units caused him to conclude that the bulk of Japan's navy was at sea.

From other information, he said, it was apparent part of the fleet would be used in an amphibious movement into the South China sea. He declared the remainder of the Japanese units "could go only two places"—to defensive deployments in the Japanese mandated islands and to raid Hawaii.

Realized Possibility of Attack

Turner said it was his own opinion that there was about a "50-50 chance" as to which of those two places the Japanese would move and that "a lot of other officers felt that way too."

The quick-answering Admiral also testified:

He was told the Navy had intercepted Dec. 5, 1941, a Tokyo broadcast in the "winds" code indicating a Japanese attack on Russia. He concluded that was an error and knew of no other "winds" interception before the Pearl Harbor attack.

The question of when to attack was one in which the commander on the scene had wide discretion, but Turner believed approach of a Japanese task force to within 500 miles of Hawaii "certainly would have been an overt act" warranting an attack.

Under the war plans, it was contemplated that no attempt would be made to hold Guam, but military installations there were to be destroyed.

On Dec. 5, 1941, he discussed at length with Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, and Admiral Royall Ingersoll, deputy chief, the question whether additional warnings should be sent to the fleets. They came to the conclusion "that everything had been done that could be done."

He never saw until about noon on Sunday, Dec. 7, the decoded Japanese message indicating they would present an ultimatum to this country at 1 p.m. He asked Stark what had been done about warnings and was told one had been dispatched by Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief to staff, which was to be shown also to naval commanders overseas.

Sanctions Forced War

In another expression of opinion, Turner said he believed the economic sanctions the United States adopted against Japan in July, 1941, "made war certain."

But he said there was never any commitment prior to the Dec. 7 attack for this country to fight Japan.

"I know definitely that there was never such a commitment," he declared.

Explaining his view that the restrictions on Japanese trade with this country made war certain, the admiral said the economic sanctions imposed then "practically stopped" Japan's trade in oil, rice and cotton. They led, too, to the fall of the Konoye cabinet, he said.

Prince Fumimaro Konoye's cabinet fell in October, 1941, and he was succeeded as premier by Hideki Tojo. Turner said he thought Konoye had been "trying to keep out of the war with the United States but was not trying to keep out of war with Britain and the Dutch."

Probers Plan Recess

The Senate-House committee cut half an hour off its usual luncheon recess in an effort to assure that it can complete questioning of Turner by tomorrow or Saturday. Once his testimony is completed, it plans a Christmas recess until Dec. 31.

The House and Senate, meantime, voted the committee an extension to Feb. 15 for its inquiry. Chairman Barkley (D-Ky) told the Senate that the committee could not possibly report by Jan. 3 as instructed originally. Barkley said he believed all the evidence could be taken by Feb. 15, but that more time be asked in which to prepare a report.

Turner related that talks with the British were initiated in 1940 concerning what would be the best use of naval forces in event of war with Japan.

But he said no proposals ever received approval from top commanders in Washington until Admiral Thomas C. Hart, commander of the Asiatic fleet, radioed a report Dec. 6, 1941, on understandings reached with Admiral Tom S. V. Phillips, commander of Britain's Far Eastern Fleet.

Turner said that dispatch was not received here until the morning of Dec. 7 and a message of approval by Admiral Stark, was not dispatched until after the Japanese attack.

As it was, the furious Japanese drives of the war's opening weeks made waste paper of most of those understandings.

Hart advised, for instance, that he and Phillips were agreed that Singapore was too far away for "offensive operations" by British battleships based there.

Scheduled Truk Attack

The agreement also included a plan for a U. S. attack against Truk if the Japanese went to war.

In submitting the joint plan, Hart said:

"We consider it very important that action in the Far East area should be coordinated with the movements of the U. S. Pacific fleet and we hope we may be informed of the time table visualized for the movement of this fleet to Truk, in full accordance with plan 'Rainbow 4.' The release of cruisers from Australia and New Zealand is intimately connected with the movements of this fleet."

Hart and Phillips suggested that arrangements be made by April 15 for the British vessels to operate from Manila. By that date, only a handful of half-starved Americans were hanging on in the Philippines and two of the principal British warships, the Prince of Wales and the Repulse, were at the bottom of the China sea, Phillips with them.

Turner said earlier Singapore conference proposals were rejected here because the British wanted to draw a "deadline" in the South China sea which Japan must not cross.

Sharp Difference Over '41 Naval Duty Aired

Washington, Dec. 20 (AP)—A Congressional inquiry brought out today a sharp disagreement among top navy officers over responsibility for informing fleet commanders of international developments before the Pearl Harbor attack, December 7, 1941.

A long explanation by Admiral Richmond Kelly Turner about the 1941 assignments prompted this question from William D. Mitchell, counsel for the Senate-House committee investigating the attack:

"Don't you think, Admiral, that the division of authority between the Office of Naval Intelligence and the War Plans Division in the Navy was in a very fuzzy condition at that time?"

Replies In Negative

"No, sir," replied Turner, who was War Plans chief then.

Turner had cotnended that it was the Intelligence Division's duty to informe Admiral Tusband E. Kimmel, then commander of the Pacific fleet at Pearl Harbor, about the fourteen-part Japanese diplomatic message that arrived here a few hours before the Japanese struck. This has been described previously as a tipoff that war was imminent.

Mitchell immediately read into the record a statement by Vice Admiral T. S. Wilkinson, then Naval Intelligence chief, to the effect that Turner had insisted that the War Plans Division evaluate and interpret enemy intentions.

Statement By Kirk

Wilkinson's brief contained a statement by Vice Admiral A. B. Kirk, who headed Intelligence before Wilkinson, that Turner had argued and won this point in a conference which division heads had held with Admiral Harold R. Stark, former Chief of Naval Operations.

The committee, now in its sixth week of hearings, aims to end the inquiry February 15 by working longer each day and cutting short its Christmas recess. Chairman Barkley (D., Ky.) said some members were doubtful about reaching that goal, although all were "hopeful."

Barkley was ready to introduce in the Senate today an extension resolution agreed upon by the committee in a long private session late yesterday. He said he hoped for unanimous Senate consent and then for quick action by the House.

Ferguson Opposed

The original resolution creating the bipartisan committee called for it to report by January 3. Barkley said Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.) alone opposed the new February 15 date; Senator Brewster (R., Maine) did not vote. Representative Keefe (R., Wis.) made the February 15 motion.

Barkley described the closed-door session as "an earnest discussion, but no fireworks."

As the committee returned to questioning Turner there were these developments growing out of yesterday's executive session:

1. Nothing has been done about proposals to hasten the testimony of Kimmel and Lieut. Gen. Walter C. Short, Pearl Harbor commanders at the time the Japanese struck. Barkley said the committee thus far stands on the theory that it would be better for these men to hear first what other witnesses have to say.

Plans To Quit Unchanged

2. Mitchell and his staff are unchanged in their plans to quit the case January 3, or as soon as they can break in new legal help. Mitchell has predicted that the hearing would go on for months at the current rate of questioning by committee members.

3. Barkley is searching for new counsel—"a good lawyer who isn't hunting a job," as he expressed it.

4. The committee will quit tomorrow for the holidays if it finishes with Turner; otherwise, it will sit through Saturday. It will resume hearings on December 31.

5. After this week, the committee will sit six days a week from 10 A.M. until 12.30 P.M.—half an hour later than usual—and from 2 P.M. until 4 P.M. This figures out at a 12½ per cent boost in the working day, and Barkley said "that would help some."

Time To Report Findings

6. The committee plans, if hearings are finished by February 15, to take additional time to prepare the formal report on its findings.

Wilkinson, the tenth witness to be finished with by the committee, left the stand yesterday afternoon. There are about 60 left on the list.

U.S. AND BRITISH ADMIRALS MADE PACT ON DEC. 6

30-24-32535

1941 Agreement Called for U. S. Strike at Truk if Japs Attacked.

HAWAII INQUIRY IS EXTENDED

Sessions Will Last Till Feb. 15—Turner Says Fleet Was Ordered Deployed.

Washington, Dec. 20 (A. P.).—A Senate-House committee heard today that a British-American naval agreement—signed by Pacific fleet commanders on December 6, 1941—Envisioned an attack by the United States against Truk if the Japanese went to war.

Th agreement, signed by Admiral Thomas C. Hart, commander of the United States Asiatic Fleet, and Admiral Tom S. V. Phillips of the British Far Eastern Fleet went into the records of the committee investigating the Japanese assault on Pearl Harbor on December 7, 1941.

It was read by William D. Mitchell, committee counsel, after Admiral R. K. Turner had testified the United States High Command had refused to approve previous proposed Allied war plans in the Pacific because the British fixed a "deadline" the Japanese shouldn't cross. This deadline was a fixed spot which the British felt was a first line of defense and any overt move by Japan to go beyond it would mean aggression to them.

Meanwhile Congress agreed today to extend the investigation until February 15. Senate Majority Leader Barkley (D.-Ky.), who also is chairman of the investigating group, obtained Senate agreement to the extension beyond the original date of January 3, the House concurred. Barkley said he believed that at least all of the evidence could be taken by February 15, but it might be necessary to seek another extension of time in which to write a report on the investigation.

Fleet Ordered Deployed.

Today's committee session also drew from Turner the assertion that the Pacific fleet should have been spread out, not tied up at Pearl Harbor on December 7, under orders issued ten days before.

Turner, the 1941 chief of Navy war plans, told the committee that the warning sent to Rear Admiral Husband E. Kimmel on November 27, 1941, called for "appropriate defensive replyment" for possible war. Turner said that such defensive deployment should have meant this to Kimmel:

1. Sending planes to Midway and Wake Island (which was done).
2. Extend air reconnaissance.
3. Dispatching "fast" ships to the north which was the "danger spot," because there were no outpost islands that could be used for detection.
4. Sending submarines out for surveillance and possible attack of an approaching enemy.
5. Awareness that the Japanese would not send slow ships, therefore battleships would be of "no use" except to fend off landings. Thus they should have been at sea, to some extent, to move in and attack such landing forces.

"Instead of being concentrated, it (defensive deployment) meant, that the forces of the commander in chief of the Pacific Fleet could take stations for the most probable attack," Turner testified.

Six battleships, six cruisers and a dozen destroyers were tied up within the harbor when the Japanese struck—from the north.

Turner Explains Plan.

Turner further explained the naval interpretations he thought Kimmel should have reached from his orders:

"The battleships were of no use against fast ships. The proper deployment would be in the best positions to defend against actual landings. If they had been at sea to arrive during such landings they would have been most useful indeed.

"The danger was to the North. It would have meant sending some fast ships with seaplanes to the north to cover certain sectors against the approach of the enemy. Planes should have been on the operating fields throughout the islands. Submarines should have been sent into positions for surveillance or attack."

All these moves were contemplated in the Navy's war plan No. 46, which Kimmel was instructed to follow in that November 27 warning, Turner added.

Up to President.

Turner read into the record excerpts from war plan No. 46 which he said defined Kimmel's duties in connection with defensive deployment.

Chief of these, the witness said, was to protect Allied possessions and prevent any attack on the Western Hemisphere. This meant, he added, that protection of Hawaii was Kimmel's main defensive job.

Mitchell asked how the Navy would know when to start fighting. Turner replied that it was within President Roosevelt's province to decide when the Japanese were about to commit an overt act.

"The Navy couldn't afford, if it were possible to prevent it, to let an attack come in," Turner said. "If the Japanese had brought a task force within 500 miles of Hawaii, under the circumstances, that certainly would be an overt act."

The approach of the Japanese task force against Hawaii was not located, detected, nor was it intercepted after the successful attack.

Decoding Was Delayed.

Turner told the committee that the joint operations plan signed by Hart and Phillips arrived at the Navy Department here at 11 P. M. on December 6 and was not decoded until eight or nine hours later. He said the approval of Admiral Harold R. Stark, then Chief of Naval Operations, went back to Hart a few hours after the Japanese attack at Pearl Harbor.

In submitting the joint plan, which included the stationing of a cruiser force on Australia, Hart noted:

"We consider it very important that action in the Far East area should be co-ordinated with the movements of the United States Pacific fleet and we hope we may be informed of the timetable visualized for the movement of this fleet to Truk, in full accordance with plan 'Rainbow 4.' The release of cruisers from Australia and New Zealand is intimately connected with the movements of this fleet."

Hart and Phillips had agreed, subject to the approval of their governments and later by the Australians and the Dutch, for joint use of Singapore and Manila as naval bases.

The British were to base their battle fleet on Singapore, with four battleships stationed there—the Prince of Wales, Repulse, Revenge and Royal Sovereign. The United States was to supply four destroyers and the Dutch six, to operate with the British battleships and cruisers.

Hart said that offensive operations could not be carried on from Singapore and suggested that the Manila base be opened to the British. Stark approved this, "when practical."

Two Bad Features.

Turner told the committee there were "two objectionable features" to the previously proposed plans for Allied action against the Japanese, which were developed at a Singapore conference on April 19, 1941.

"First," he said, "there were political implications, a dead line in the South China Sea and the Gulf of Siam; second, it was not very realistic."

Earlier a long explanation by Turner about the 1941 assignments prompted the question from Mitchell: "Don't you think, Admiral, that the division of authority between the Office of Naval Intelligence and the War Plans Division in the Navy was in a very fuzzy condition at that time?"

"No sir," replied Turner.

Turner had contended that it was the intelligence division's duty to inform Kimmel about the fourteen-part Japanese diplomatic message that arrived here a few hours before the Japanese struck. This has been described previously as a tipoff that war was imminent.

Wilkinson Is Quoted.

Mitchell immediately read into the record a statement by Vice-Admiral T. S. Wilkinson, then Naval Intelligence chief, to the effect that Turner had insisted that the War Plans Division evaluate and interpret enemy intentions.

Wilkinson's brief contained a statement by Vice-Admiral A. B. Kirk, who headed intelligence before Wilkinson, that Turner had argued and won this point in a conference which division heads had held with Stark.

ATTACK ON TRUK SET IN U.S.-BRITISH PACT

Agreement Signed Dec. 6, '41, by Far East Chief Also Called for Joint Use of Bases

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20 (AP)—The Congressional committee investigating Pearl Harbor heard today that a British-American naval agreement, which was signed by fleet commanders in the Pacific Dec. 6, 1941, envisioned an American attack against Truk if the Japanese went to war.

The agreement, signed by Admiral Thomas C. Hart, commander of the United States Asiatic Fleet, and Admiral Tom S. V. Phillips of the British Far Eastern Fleet, was read by William D. Mitchell, committee counsel, after Admiral R. K. Turner, former Chief of Naval War Plans, had testified the American high command refused to approve previous proposed Allied war plans in the Pacific because the British fixed a "deadline" the Japanese should not cross.

This deadline was a fixed spot the British felt was a first line of defense and any overt move by Japan to go beyond it would mean aggression to them.

The Admiral told the committee that the joint operations plan signed by Admirals Hart and Phillips arrived at the Navy Department at 11 P. M., Dec. 6, and was not decoded until eight or nine hours later. He said the approval of Admiral Harold R. Stark, then Chief of Naval Operations, went back to Admiral Hart a few hours after the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor.

In submitting the plan, which included the stationing of a cruiser force on Australia, Admiral Hart said:

"We consider it very important that action in the Far East area should be coordinated with the movements of the United States Pacific Fleet, and we hope we may be informed of the time table vizualized for the movement of this fleet to Truk, in full accordance with plan, Rainbow 4. The release of cruisers from Australia and New Zealand is intimately connected with the movements of this fleet."

Admirals Hart and Phillips agreed, subject to the approval of their Governments and later by the Australians and Dutch, for joint use of Singapore and Manila as naval bases.

The British were to base their battle fleet on Singapore, with four battleships, the Prince of Wales, Repulse, Revenge and Royal Sovereign. The United States was to supply four destroyers and the Dutch six, to operate with the British battleships and cruisers.

Admiral Hart said that offensive operations could not be carried on from Singapore and suggested that the Manila base be opened to the British. Admiral Stark approved this, "when practical."

Admiral Turner told the committee that there were "two objectionable features" to the previously proposed plans for Allied action against the Japanese, which were developed at a Singapore conference April 19, 1941.

"First," he said, "there were political implications, a deadline in the South China Sea and the Gulf of Siam; second, it was not very realistic."

TRUMAN'S CHOICE OF UNO DELEGATES BACKED IN SENATE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20—(AP) President Truman's entire slate of nine American representatives to the first full session of the United Nations was confirmed by the Senate late today after spirited criticism of some of his selections.

There was never any doubt as to the outcome during the nearly two hours of debate. No roll-call votes were demanded on any of the nominees.

Nevertheless the nominations of Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, Frank C. Walker, John G. Townsend, Jr., and Senator Tom Connally drew oratorical attacks ranging from heavy to moderate.

Gets Double Appointment

Stettinius received a double appointment, as representative on the security council with rank of ambassador, and as representative to the first session of the United Nations assembly to be held in London early next month. As such he was the first target.

Senator Langer (R-N.D.) declared Stettinius' "associations with high finance and big business" rendered him unsuited to "any high office where his duties would have an immediate effect upon the material welfare of the people at large."

However, the North Dakota senator, who voted against the charter, said he was convinced the UNO was "a phony" destined to "fail even more miserably than the old League of Nations." Accordingly, in voting approval of the nomination, he said he merely would be making "a sort of honorary bestowal" in recognition of the nominee's qualifications as a citizen.

Senators Barkley (D-Ky.), Vandenberg (R-Mich.) and Capehart (R-Ind.) hastened to Stettinius' defense. Vandenberg said the former Secretary of State is "a seasoned veteran who already has done as much for the world's hope of organized peace as any living man."

No "nay" vote was audible when the nomination was called up for confirmation.

Opposes Mrs. Roosevelt

Senator Bilbo (D-Miss.) likewise drew counterfire when he criticized the nomination of Mrs. Roosevelt to an assembly post. "I care not what course others may take," Bilbo said, "but representing the sovereign state of Mississippi, I know I represent 98 or 99 per cent of my people in opposing the nomination."

He said he wouldn't take up the Senate's time giving his reasons, but said he was going to publish a book on the subject in March.

Senators Barkley, Chavez (D-N.M.) and Taylor (D-Idaho) stood up for the late President's widow as a capable and energetic choice.

Taylor, however, said that in voting to confirm Connally to a place on the assembly he wanted it understood he did not agree with a recent assertion by the Texan that the United States did not want a world government. Taylor himself has proposed legislation leading to such a government.

Senator Fulbright (D-Ark.) singled out the alternate nominations of Walker, former Democratic national chairman and ex-postmaster general, and of Townsend, former Delaware senator, farmer and banker, as indicating the advisability of selecting delegates experienced in the international field. Why not, he suggested, have picked an intelligent war veteran, or an atomic scientist.

Fulbright said he did not in any way attack the character or ability of Walker and Townsend as business men or politicians, but declared a sure way to kill UNO would be to pass out appointments to people who were not qualified to make it function.

Showing signs of heat, Senator O'Mahoney (D-Wyo.) told Fulbright his criticism of Walker was "utterly without basis."

There was no debate on the confirmations of Senator Vandenberg as one of the principal delegates to the assembly, or of Rep. Sol Bloom (D-N.Y.), Rep. Charles A. Eaton (R-N.J.) and John Foster Dulles of New York as alternates.

UNO Okays Seen Despite Fight By Langer

Washington, Dec. 20 (AP)—A single open challenge was raised today against Senate confirmation of President Truman's slate of delegates to the first full session of the United Nations Organization.

That protest, by Senator Langer (R., N.D.) against the choice of Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., was generally regarded among other Senators as more for the record than for actual effect. Langer opposed Stettinius's nomination as Secretary of State a year ago, and yesterday he blocked immediate confirmation of the UNO nominees by announcing that he opposed Stettinius.

Confirmation Forecast

A leader among Senate Democrats predicted that Langer's scheduled twenty-minute speech today would not prevent confirmation of all the nominees before nightfall.

Stettinius was named to two posts: United States Representative on the Security Council, with rank of ambassador, and one of the four principal representatives to the first session of the General Assembly.

The other principal representatives to the Assembly are Senator Tom Connally (D., Texas), chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee; Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.), who, like Connally, was a delegate to the San Francisco conference that wrote the United Nations Charter, and Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, widow of the President.

Byrnes To Attend

President Truman explained, in sending up the nominations yesterday, that he appointed only four principal assembly representatives because Secretary of State James F. Byrnes will attend at least part of the first session. The UNO implementing law, sent to the White House yesterday, calls for five representatives.

Alternate representatives are Chairman Sol Bloom (D., N.Y.) of the House Foreign Affairs Committee; Representative Charles A. Eaton of New Jersey, ranking Republican member of that committee; former Postmaster General Frank Walker, John Foster Dulles of New York and former Republican Senator John G. Townsend, Jr., of Delaware.

Meetings In January

The General Assembly is to convene in London early in January. The Security Council will meet there later that month.

Quick presidential signature is expected for the implementing legislation. It sets out the rules under which the United States will take part in the international peace preserving organization, and stipulates that after Congress assigns a quota of American fighting power to the security operations, the President may send it into operation without further consultation with Congress.

Against Naming Mrs. Roosevelt

Representative Vursell Opposes Her as a Delegate to UNO Conference.

Washington, Dec. 20 (A. P.).—The House heard both criticism and praise today of Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt's designation as one of the United States delegates to the United Nations Organization.

Representative Vursell (R.-Ill.) started the debate by declaring: "The appointment is a bad start toward international co-operation. I am profoundly disturbed that Mrs. Roosevelt, great woman though she is, has been named, because I don't believe it will help bring unity."

Representative Biemiller (D.-Wis.) jumped to his feet to take issue with Vursell, asserting: "No appointment made in recent weeks will meet with greater appreciation from the American people. Mrs. Roosevelt is a woman of broad social sympathies and understanding. I for one, want to commend President Truman for his foresight and intelligence in naming her."

Other representatives to the assembly are Edward R. Stettinius Jr., Senator Tom Connally (D.-Tex.), chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee and Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R.-Mich.).

Alternate representatives are Representative Sol Bloom (D.-N. Y.), chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee; Representative Charles A. Eaton of New Jersey, ranking Republican member of that committee; former Postmaster-General Frank Walker, John Foster Dulles of New York and former Republican Senator John G. Townsend Jr., of Delaware.

Mrs. Roosevelt to Accept.

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt said today that she would accept the nomination as a delegate to the United Nations Organization General Assembly if her nomination is approved by the Senate.

"Naturally, I will accept if confirmed," she said at a press conference to announce her acceptance of the honorary chairmanship of the American Committee for Yugoslav Relief, at the committee's national headquarters at 235 East 11th street, "but I was never one to count my chickens before they're hatched."

Asked if she anticipated any opposition to her nomination from the Senate, the wife of the late President said that she had received communications from President Truman and the Department of State about the appointment and added that she felt the President would not have named a woman to the post unless he felt that the delegation should include a woman and that her nomination would be approved.

In reply to a question asking if she in her capacity as a delegate, planned to push any particular program, Mrs. Roosevelt replied, "No, but I hope I will hear from the people in this country about the various things which will come up."

As her first act as the new honorary chairman, Mrs. Roosevelt announced the committee's baby food campaign to speed help to 1,200,000 Yugoslav children who are reported to be suffering from advanced malnutrition.

Asked if she felt that we should feed the children of Germany this winter, she declared, "I have no desire to starve any one. However, I feel strongly that our allies, who have suffered so much at the expense of the Germans should have first priority regarding relief."

CURBS ON GERMANY URGED IN REPORT

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20—(AP) The Foreign Economic administration today called upon the Allies to take quick control over all German assets outside the Reich, by force of sanctions against neutral countries if necessary.

Permanent separation of the Ruhr and the Rhineland from Germany to cripple its war-making power was a further recommendation in an FEA report to a Senate military subcommittee.

H. H. Fowler, director of FEA's enemy branch, said the report was advisory and its terms have not all been adopted as fixed American policy.

This country for instance, has opposed French efforts to arrange immediately for separation of the Ruhr-Rhineland from the rest of Germany, holding that a four-power agreement on a central administration for the Reich comes first.

FEA is out of business, its functions being taken over by the State department.

One official in that department, asking not to be quoted by name, said FEA was primarily concerned with disarmament of Germany and added that other factors "not considered too much by FEA" would be weighed in fixing the American position.

The report said the threat of Germans outside Germany making arms or conducting scientific research is "too dangerous" a prospect to let alone.

Chairman (Kilgore (D- W.Va.) of the subcommittee, said this government has learned that Germany before its surrender transferred whole science laboratories intact to neutral countries.

Two-thirds of German assets outside its borders, the report said, are in Turkey and Argentina but other countries also have German controlled industries, funds and laboratories.

Separate Ruhr Urged By U.S. Agency

Washington, Dec. 20 (AP)—An expiring Government war agency today proposed permanent separation of the Ruhr and Rhineland from Germany to prevent reconstruction of a war industry "capable of once again unhinging the security of Europe."

The Foreign Economic Administration, officially dissolved by President Truman September 27, put forth the suggestion as part of a detailed program for German economic and industrial disarmament.

H. H. Fowler, director of FEA's enemy branch, made the program public in an appearance before a Senate Military Affairs subcommittee.

It was the first time any Government agency had publicly recommended detachment of the two zones which provided Germany with much of its economic capacity for two world wars.

Like French Proposal

FEA recommended establishment of an international trusteeship to administer the separated areas—a proposal similar to that which France has vigorously endeavored to persuade the United States, Britain and Russia to adopt in recent months.

The FEA report was made public just eight days after the State Department had issued a policy statement charting a course for German economic recovery which was based on keeping the Ruhr and Rhineland in the Reich. When FEA was dissolved, its peacetime functions were transferred to the State Department.

Fowler emphasized to the Senate subcommittee that FEA's proposals were "purely advisory" and should not be termed an expression of United States policy.

"By controlling the Rhineland-Ruhr area and utilizing that control properly, the Allies could prevent an excessive war industries aggregate from developing in Germany," the FEA report explained.

Continuation Of Controls

"If the Rhineland-Ruhr area is left under German authority, a continuation of more extensive controls over German heavy industry may be necessary long after the occupation period."

In addition to permanent detachment, the FEA recommended the following moves in the Ruhr-Rhineland plan:

1. Removal of owners and managers of natural resources and productive facilities important to war and the substitution of a public authority, to be owned and directed by the United Nations.

2. Removal from the areas of all persons not known to be anti-Nazi and sympathetic with the Allied economic policy for Germany.

3. Establishment of the detached area under "a United Nations mandate responsible to the general international organization."

Tire Rationing Will End Jan. 1 Under OPA Rule

Steady Increase in Production Permits Lifting of Curb on Sales.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20—(AP) Tire rationing will end at 12:01 a.m. on Jan. 1, Price Administrator Chester Bowles announced tonight.

He said the rationing program can be terminated then "because production of tires, particularly passenger tires, the shortage of which has been most acute, has increased steadily during the past two months, reaching an output for this quarter of about 11,000,000."

Bowles said OPA and the civilian production administration had agreed that rationing could be lifted when production reached this level.

Certificates Good

Holders of tire purchase certificates will have through Dec. 31 to turn in ration coupons to dealers and obtain passenger car tires before unrationed sales begin.

After tomorrow, no additional ration certificates will be issued except in emergency cases.

Tire rationing began Jan. 5, 1942. Inventories have been frozen from the day after Pearl Harbor.

Civilian Production Administrator John D. Small advised Bowles that current weekly production of passenger tires will approximate 4,000,000 this month. Small estimated that 66,000,000 passenger tires will be made in 1946.

Bowles warned that termination of rationing does not mean there is an ample supply of tires to meet all requests.

Conservation Necessary

"For many months," he added, "it will remain important that motorists continue to do everything possible to avoid excessive wear and tear on tires. There will be many who will have to wait to get tires."

The OPA chief urged all motorists who can wait for a new tire until rationing ends to do so.

The prohibition on spare tires for new cars will be continued, along with restrictions on white side wall tires and tire exports.

OPA said price control over tires also would be continued and would be "closely checked."

Congress Sets Mark In World Affairs

Washington, Dec. 20 (AP) — The Seventy-ninth Congress, which spanned the transition from war to peace and from President Roosevelt to President Truman, was slated today to end the session it started last January 4. It will begin its second—and "election year"—session next January 14.

It leaves behind a record of stubbornness toward the man who last April moved from the Vice President's rostrum in the Senate to the White House office vacated by the death of Franklin D. Roosevelt.

It hasn't taken kindly, and certainly not eagerly, to many of the suggestions Harry S. Truman has made in almost a dozen special messages.

Heard Round The World

Although its tally of "things undone" is a long one, the Seventy-ninth Congress, perhaps more than any of its recent predecessors, made its voice heard round the world by the things it did.

It ratified the United Nations Charter; it overwhelmingly enacted a law to give effect to this country's participation in the United Nations; it appropriated new money to the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration; it extended the lend-lease program and the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act, and it wrote into law the Bretton Woods international monetary agreements.

In doing those things it followed the recommendations of both Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Truman.

Draft, Debt And Taxes

On the domestic front it:

Appropriated about $66,000,000,000 while a two-front war was in progress and then, after the last shots had been fired, took back some $52,000,000,000 of current and past-year allotments that had not been used.

Extended the draft law until May 15.

Raised the national debt limit to $300,000,000,000.

Extended price controls until the middle of 1946.

Rewrote the Bill of Rights.

Cut income taxes and ordered repeal of the excess-profits tax January 1, 1946.

Approved a Governmental reorganization plan in response to a request from President Truman.

Simplified administration of surplus-property dispotsal in accord with another presidential entreaty.

Compromised with the President on return of Employment Service offices to the states by ordering their return around next April 1 instead of retaining them under Federal control until mid-1947 as Mr. Truman wanted.

Voted its 435 House members annual expense allowances of $2,500 each, which the Senate declined to approve for itself.

Things Undone

But Congress put off until next year action on:

The multibillion British loan proposal.

Pensions and pay raises for congressmen.

Universal military training.

Merger of the armed services—which Mr. Truman asked in his tenth message yesterday.

So-called "full-employment" legislation.

Creation of fact-finding machinery to handle major labor disputes.

Liberalization of unemployment-compensation rates.

Establishment of a permanent Fair Employment Practice Committee.

Increases in current statutory minimum wages.

Disposal of war-created merchant shipping surpluses.

Legislation setting up domestic control over atomic energy.

Rebuffs To Truman

The lawmakers flatly rejected the President's bid for new labor legislation by Christmas; months earlier they refused to enact a work-or-fight law despite White House insistence; and they did not get out of committees a Truman request for repeal of the Johnson Act restricting loans to foreign nations in default on their debts.

The House passed but the Senate shelved a proposal that both branches of Congress, rather than two thirds of the Senate only, ratify treaties.

The same fate befell a suggestion of Mr. Truman's that the Speaker of the House rather than the Secretary of State become President should both the President and Vice President die.

The House refused to go along with the Senate and with the President on unemployment-compensation law revisions.

Variety Of Probes

In the matter of investigations, the Seventy-ninth Congress was in a class by itself. Through committees it undertook more or less extensive inquiries into the Pearl Harbor attack, the State Department program in China, food, the financial transactions of Elliott Roosevelt and the operation of veterans' hospitals.

On the very first day of the session the House made permanent its Committee on Un-American Activities.

The legislators were not backward in the matter of travel, either. The summer vacation cut short by Japan's surrender found scores of them visiting and investigating in scattered corners of the globe.

TRUMAN SIGNS BILL TO EFFECT BUREAU SAVINGS

Reorganization Measure Was a 'Must' on the President's Agenda.

IT AIMS AT SIMPLIFICATION

Executive Skeptical of Claim That Economies Will Run as High as 25 P. C.

Washington, Dec. 20 (A. P.).—President Truman signed today legislation giving him authority to reorganize executive branches of the Government.

The reorganization, which advocates say will bring economies and simplification of administration procedure, was one of the "must" proposals submitted to Congress by Mr. Truman last September.

After signing the measure, Mr. Truman said that while the act would result in some reduction of administrative expenditures in the agencies affected, "I do not consider it probable that we will generally save as much as 25 per cent as suggested in the act."

"The results of reorganization will be evident primarily in the increased effectiveness of government operations," he declared in a formal statement. It should also mean, he continued, "a simpler and clearer relation" between the Government and the public and a better service to the people.

Several legislators and Government officials attended the signing, including Senators Byrd (D., Va.), chairman of the joint committee on reduction of governmental expenditures; Murdock (D.-Utah) and McCarran (D. Nev.); Representatives Whittington (D.-Miss.) and Manasco (D. Ala.); Comptroller-General Lindsey C. Warren and Harold D Smith, director of the budget.

Six agencies are exempted from reorganization, except that additional duties, agencies and employees may be shifted to them. These are the Interstate Commerce Commission, Federal Trade Commission, Securities and Exchange Commission, National Mediation Board, National Railroad Adjustment Board and Railroad Retirement Board.

The civil functions of the Army's Engineers Corps, which includes such work as flood control, the General Accounting Office and the Comptroller-General, both direct agents of Congress, are completely exempt.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the Federal Communications Commission, the Tariff Commission and Veterans Administration must be dealt with separately and under plans which would affect no other agency if any effort is made to reorganize them.

Truman's Statement.

The text of the President's statement after signing the bill follows:

"I am pleased today to sign the reorganization act of 1945 for I believe that in this act the Congress has established a procedure which should lead to substantial improvements in the organization and management of the Government.

"Under the authority of the act, I shall undertake a systematic review of the Government agencies with a view to regrouping their functions in the most efficient and economical manner and abolishing such functions and agencies as may not be necessary.

"The director of the Bureau of the Budget has been instructed to obtain the recommendations of all departments and establishments covered by the act and to take the lead in preparing the necessary reorganization plans for my consideration. He will work with the Director of War Mobilization and Reconversion in so far as the reorganization proposals relate to the reconversion of the war agencies.

"While I anticipate that this act will result in some reduction of administrative expenditures in the agencies affected by reorganization plans, I do not consider it probable that we will generally save as much as 25 per cent, as suggested in the act. I wish to point out, also, that administrative expenditures are only a small proportion of the cost of government. Substantial savings in Government expenditures can come only from reductions in the Government programs themselves, and these are made as a rule through the normal budgetary and appropriations processes, not through reorganization action.

"The results of reorganization will be evident primarily in the increased effectiveness of Government operations. Regrouping and consolidation to bring together those agencies having related purposes will lead to greater consistency in the policies of the agencies and better co-ordination of their programs in operation. This should mean also a simpler and clearer relation between the agencies of the Government and the public. Through these means, the act will enable us better to adapt the Government for carrying out its responsibility of serving the people."

TO PROBE GI TRAVEL DELAY

Senate Group Orders Investigation On West Coast

Washington, Dec. 20 (AP)—An investigation of delays in homeward transportation for veterans landing at West Coast ports was ordered today by the Senate's War Investigating Committee.

It called public hearings for tomorrow and asked Col. J. Monroe Johnson, director of defense transportation, to appear as the first witness.

Chairman Mead (D., N.Y.), said the committee was concerned over "the bottleneck in transportation which will prevent returning service men and women who are being disembarked on the West Coast from reaching their homes promptly."

Earlier, Senator Shipstead (R., Minn.) had told the Senate that the Army was piling up "colossal" expense by its methods of discharging service men.

Seattle GI Discharged In N.Y.

He said he had been informed of a case where a service man from Seattle was ordered to New York city to receive his discharge. Other instances of unnecessary travel, he added, indicate "lack of foresight."

Secretary of War Patterson appealed to civilians to stay off trains and help the Army and railroads to get homeward-bound troops to their destinations.

In a statement on the West Coast rail traffic jam, Patterson said:

"The holiday season, severe weather and unprecedented numbers of travelers all tend to increase the load of the railroads. The time for the nonessential to stay off trains is now."

100,000 Veterans Stalled

San Francisco, Dec. 20 (AP)—Nearly 100,000 Pacific veterans appeared doomed today to spend Christmas at West Coast ports by lack of sufficient transportation eastward.

Port of embarkation officials said today troops were pouring into West Coast ports at an estimated rate of 15,000 a day, far faster than they are moving out. Nearly 120,000 were stranded at the ports today, many of them still aboard their ships.

Severe cold and snowstorms east of the Rocky Mountains slowed train schedules and delayed airplane flights.

Shortage Of Railway Cars

Army port officials here said they believed the bottleneck will continue until after the first of the year.

Shortage of railway cars continues to be critical because of a delay in construction of 1,200 Government troop sleepers, expected to be ready by December 1. C. E. Peterson, vice president in charge of Southern Pacific passenger traffic, said strike conditions were holding up delivery of the cars.

However, Peterson said the Southern Pacific had canceled coach space on eastbound trains for all civilians except members of service men's families.

Christmas Parties Arranged

Port officers in San Francisco arranged Christmas parties with Red Cross bags of gifts for stranded service men.

Los Angeles officers planned to build a huge theater on the dock for a Christmas Day show in the event service men have to remain aboard ship for lack of space in staging areas. Additional staging areas are to be opened.

The Army ordered Christmas in quarantine for 1,861 service men aboard the troopship Grundy, which debarked one man ill with smallpox at Astoria, Ore. The vessel was ordered to put in at Portland, where it will be under quarantine until December 26.

STRANDED TROOPS TO HAVE PARTIES

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 20—(AP) West coast port cities were planning Christmas parties today with more than 100,000 servicemen from the Pacific as guests because they can't get home.

Nearly 120,000 soldiers, sailors and Marines are looking for transportation from the western ports, and the pre-Christmas rush is bringing them in by ship at an average of about 15,000 a day.

Hopes of moving 25,000 by rail and a few thousand more by air, bus and automobiles daily were dampened by these developments:

Severe cold and snowstorms east of the Rocky mountains have slowed the train schedules, and delayed airplane flights.

Merger Opinions Seen Unchanged

Washington, Dec. 20 (AP)—Opposing congressional lines in the battle of the merger showed no signs of cracking today despite President Truman's flat request that Army, Navy and Air Forces be unified under a single civilian secretary.

First members of the House and Senate Military Committees to comment were for the plan, as they have been all along. Members of the naval committees were still against it.

May Deviates

Only committee member deviating from this lineup was Chairman May (D., Ky.) of the House military group. He already had joined with Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) of the House Naval Committee in proposing a separate air force with cabinet representation instead of a merger of the services.

Chairman Elbert Thomas (D., Utah) of the Senate Military Committee said, "We will have a good bill to carry out the President's ideas shortly after the holidays."

Senator Hill (D., Ala.), a Military Committee member and author of one unification bill, declared: "I favor closing hearings at once and starting to work on legislation. There are no material differences between the President's basic plan and the bills on which we have held hearings."

Modest Senator

Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D., Col.), who also has a merger bill in the legislative mill, commented jubilantly that Mr. Truman's plan "could not have been better if I had written it myself."

From House Military Committee members came these remarks:

Acting Chairman Thomason (D., Texas)—I'm for it. I think the present duplication, and especially the jealousies between the two departments, is inexcusable and indefensible.

Representative Arends (R., Ill.)—I'm inclined to believe the departments should be consolidated.

Blast By Vinson

Vinson loosed a bitter blast against the White House proposal.

"It would concentrate the greatest military power in the world today in the hands of one man, a man not responsible to the electorate or Congress, a military chief of staff of the combined forces that includes the National Guard of the sovereign states," the Naval Committee chairman said in a statement.

"The hand of this supreme chief of staff would be on the latch string of every home in the nation, and, by his cnotrol of the largest item in the national budget, it would rest also on every purse string."

FARM BUREAU HITS TRAINING

Peace Draft Opposed By Federation In Closing Session

Chicago, Dec. 20 (AP)—The American Farm Bureau Federation by resolution today opposed compulsory military training on the ground that it "is foreign to the American way of life" and that it leads to regimentation, a militaristic point of view and future wars."

In the same resolution delegates in the closing session of the federation's twenty-seventh annual meeting recommended an expanded program of physical training and education as part of the regular curricula of the upper grades and high schools, military training in municipal and publicly supported universities and colleges and additional inducements to encourage voluntary enlistment for limited service in the armed forces and National Guard.

Resolutions Adopted

By adopting a long list of other resolutions the delegates:

Supported the United Nations Organization, Bretton Woods monetary agreements, International Food and Agriculture Organization.

Recommended study of the maintenance of an international organization "for the effective enforcement of peace," with powers "adequate to cope with the threat of destruction by the use of atomic bombs," without surrendering sovereignty of respective nations.

Recommended study of the advisibility of an international police force supported by all nations as a means of insuring peace.

Long-Term Loans Favored

Favored long-term capital loans to other nations to increase productive and consumptive capacities of countries involved, to the largest practical extent by private capital with the Government supplementing only when private capital is not available. (However, this resolution said there are conditions, "such as the present loan to England, under which the long-time interest of this nation in promoting world trade, maintaining desirable forms of government and promoting our best international interest can be furthered by making direct governmental loans.")

Would Bolster Diplomatic Staff

The delegates also:

Asserted this nation should furnish goods and other necessities to devastated countries, with the cost considered as a war expenditure.

Recommended that the State Department and diplomatic staff be strengthened, with adequately trained personnel and policies designed to attract "outstanding ability into this important field."

Recommended that "this nation place great emphasis upon the development of a clear-cut foreign policy on a nonpartisan basis."

Favored gradual reduction of international trade barriers.

Supported international commodity agreements and recommended expansion of this program.

Stated that "we believe the development of an aggressive foreign trade policy is one of the 'musts' of our postwar program."

Stronger AAA Urged

Concerning labor-industrial relationships, the delegates said that reconversion demands that "all controversies and disagreements, instead of violence and open conflict, be settled by adjudication based upon statutes applicable to all individuals and groups."

On the national farm program itself, the delegates urged study of required improvements and modifications, including possible changes in commodity marketing; "unalterably opposed" unlimited production at ruinous prices which would "force the American farmer to depend permanently upon Government subsidies"; urged strengthening of the Agricultural Adjustment Act and related measures, and favored legislation to extent benefits of the Agricultural Marketing Agreements Act of 1937 to any agricultural commodity.

Bipartisan Tax Groups Urged

In another resolution the delegates said "we insist that steps be taken to develop immediately a plan for live stock, live-stock products, dairy products and any other agricultural commodity not fairly treated under the present parity formula that will give the respective commodities equitable treatment."

The delegates also recommended creation of two bipartisan Federal tax commissions, one dealing with tax collections and Federal-state-local tax relations, and the other with public expenditures and government efficiency.

Alabamian Renamed President

The federation, reiterating its stand in favor of "the principle of commodity identification," asked Congress for legislation extending "the benefits of the principle to producers and consumers of cotton and leather on a basis equivalent, in effect, to the law and regulation already provided for rayon and wool." The legislation referred to requires identification of wool and rayon, as such, in textiles.

Edward A. O'Neal, of Florence, Ala., was re-elected today to his eighth consecutive term as president of the federation.

The AFBF, at its closing session, named Allan B. Kline, of Vinton, Iowa, vice president to succeed Earl Smith, of Detroit, Ill., who recently announced his retirement.

COURT WILL SEEK EXPERT OPINION ON YAMASHITA PLEA

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20—(AP) The Supreme court today asked experts in military law for help in deciding what it should do about petitions sent here by Japanese General Tomoyuki Yamashita in his fight for life.

The court called for arguments Jan. 7 on petitions by "the Tiger of Malaya" that his case be taken out of the hands of the military and given to civil courts.

Yamashita was sentenced by an American military commission in Manila to death on the gallows. He was convicted of permitting brutal atrocities in the Philippines. The Supreme court last Monday granted him a stay of execution until it decided finally on his appeal.

U. S. Army lawyers defended him at the Manila trial. Army lawyers are expected to appear before the Supreme court to argue on his behalf. Other Army lawyers will oppose Yamashita's request.

The Justice department also is expected to be represented by attorneys who will oppose the Yamashita petitions. The department earlier filed a brief with the court urging it to keep hands off the case.

The Japanese general, first Pacific war leader to be convicted as a war criminal, in petitions airmailed to the high court asked:

1. Review of the action of the Philippines Supreme court in rejecting his argument that the military commission was illegal and asking that the Philippine civil courts take over his case.

2. That he be brought to Washington for a hearing before the Supreme court or one of its justices.

3. That he be given the status of prisoner of war, instead of that of war criminal.

4. That his trial be halted because the commission lacked authority to try him. (This request was mailed while the trial was underway).

The Supreme court in a formal order said that pending argument on the legal questions involved it will withhold all action on the requests.

The order was issued after a conference in which all members of the court except Justice Jackson participated. Jackson is chief U. S. prosecutor at the Nazi trials in Nuernberg.

One of the participants in the conference, Justice Murphy formerly was high commissioner to the Philippines.

TRUMAN DISLIKES EMPLOYMENT BILL PASSED BY HOUSE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20—(AP) President Truman set out today to rescue his so-called full-employment bill, terming a House substitute unacceptable.

He disclosed that he has made an appeal to a joint congressional committee for quick enactment of a measure passed by the Senate, which he said meets the essential characteristics of his program.

At the same time the chief executive disclosed he will speak out forcibly soon on a congressional proposal to transfer the U. S. Employment Service back to the states over his opposition.

Asks Forrestal to Stay

In his final news conference before Christmas, Mr. Truman also said he wants Navy Secretary Forrestal to remain at his post at least for the present, despite their differences over Army-Navy unification.

The President declared that despite his own commitment to a merger of the Army and Navy into a single department of national defense, no effort will be made to muzzle Navy officers who disagree.

His only insistence, he told questioners, is that naval officers opposing the merger make it clear that they are expressing their personal views are not those of the administration.

When a reporter asked if Forrestal is trying to resign, the President replied that he had been trying to resign ever since last April.

He hopes, he added, that Mr. Forrestal will not resign at an early date.

The President made public a letter to the chairman of a joint conference committee considering the much amended employment bill, expressing hope Congress will adopt legislation "substantially in the form passed by the Senate."

House Revised Measure

The House version stripped the measure of its goal of "full employment" and substituted a reference to a high level of employment.

This measure, the President told a questioner, is unacceptable, but the bill the Senate passed 71 to 10, did not remove the essential provisions of his own original suggestion.

What he wanted, he said, was set out in a message to Congress Sept. 6 asking a declaration of the "ultimate duty of government to use its own resources if all other methods should fail to prevent prolonged unemployment."

He addressed identical letters to Senator Robert F. Wagner (D-N.Y.) chairman of the Senate Banking committee, and Chairman Manasco (D-Ala.) of the House Committee on Expenditures in Government Departments.

Asked if he had anything to say about legislation returning the U. S. Employment Service to the states despite his request for its continuance under the Federal government until June, 1947, the President said not until it reached him and he had studied it.

When that time comes, he said, he will express himself forcibly.

Truman Orders Continuation Of FEPC Power Until June

Directive of President Assures Inquiry Into Charges of Race Bias in Reconversion Production.

Washington, Dec. 20 (A. P.).—President Truman issued an order today continuing until June 30, 1946, the authority of the fair employment practices committee to investigate and report on discriminations in employment occurring in private industry engaged in military or effective reconversion production.

FEPC officials said previous executive orders had continued its power in this respect only for the duration and since the end of the war its jurisdiction has been questioned. The President's order today, it was stated, removed this doubt.

At the same time the President directed heads of Government departments and agencies to a alyze personnel policies to se that no racial discrimination i practiced in rehiring of tempo rary war job workers.

"3It has come to my attention," said his directive, "that a consid erable number of loyal and quali fied employees have been refusec transfer and reemployment by employing agencies solely because of race and creed. This condition is a violation of civil service rules which have been issued by the President and in violation of an existing law."

The FEPC received $250,000 under the war agencies appropriation act to continue until June 30 next.

FEPC officials recently announced that it would hold hearings in February in the Mid-West to find out the extent of discrimination against Negroes and other minority groups in reconversion hiring. They said when this report is made to the President it will have completed its usefulness under existing orders.

Legislation is pending in both Senate and House to make FEPC permanent, but while the Senate Labor Committee has approved such a bill, the House Rules Committee has thus far blocked it.

FEPC officials said while today's executive order gives them continuing authority to investigate private industry discriminations, the committee no longer has the authority to issue directives in this respect except in Government work.

New Atomic Energy Control Bill Submitted to Senate by M'Mahon

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—(AP) A new program for control of atomic energy was submitted to the Senate today by Senator McMahon (D-Conn).

McMahon, chairman of the Senate special committee to deal with the subject, introduced a new bill with this preamble:

"It is declared to be the policy of the people of the United States that the development and utilization of atomic energy shall be directed towards improving the public welfare, increasing the standard of living, strengthening free competition among private enterprises so far as practicable, and cementing world peace."

The bill outlines these "major programs":

(1) To assist and foster independent private research and development; (2) the free dissemination of basic scientific information and "maximum liberality" in dissemination of related technical information; (3) federally conducted research; (4) government control of the production, ownership and use of fissionable materials; (5) study of the social, political and economic effects of the utilization of atomic energy and (6) a plan for administration which will be consistent with international agreements.

Control would be placed in the hands of a commission of presidential appointees, four to serve at $15,000 a year, the chairman at $20,000.

VETERANS GET HOME PRIORITY

They May Obtain 75% Of Houses Built In 1946

Washington, Dec. 20 (AP)—Veterans are expected to get the lion's share of homes built under the Government's new housing program.

Federal officials working out details of the program said today that this was just what President Truman had in mind when he ordered that veterans be given a preference in the sale or rental of new homes costing $10,000 or less.

These officials, who asked that they not be identified, said their best guess was that at least 75 per cent of all homes built next year may be purchased or rented by veterans.

They pointed out that veterans will have no priority on any homes built to sell at more than $10,000.

First Chance To Veterans

Under the new building materials priorities regulation to be disclosed tomorrow, about 50 per cent of all construction supplies will be earmarked for homes priced at $10,000 or under.

Veterans will get first chance to buy or rent these homes. Only after they have been offered to veterans for a stated period, probably 30 days, will a builder be permitted to dispose of such homes to other persons.

Officials said the maximum rent on these homes probably would be $80 a month.

Rent-Control Changes

Meanwhile the OPA announced changes in hotel and rooming house rent and eviction control regulations.

Effective immediately, the modifications bring these regulations into line with recent changes in provisions covering rental houses and apartments.

One revision provides an allowance for a general construction cost increase since 1939 in fixing rent ceilings on rooms in newly constructed hotels and rooming houses, and in buildings that are converted into hotels and rooming houses.

Another requires landlords desiring to remodel or demolish hotels or rooming houses to obtain eviction certificates from area-rent directors. These must be obtained before action is taken to dispossess permanent tenants.

Under a third change, area-rent directors issuing certificates of eviction are authorized to impose a waiting period up to either three or six months, whichever is the maximum in the area.

Colgate Faculty Urges Outlawing Atom Bombs

Hamilton, N.Y., Dec. 20 (AP)—Colgate University's faculty urged today that the United States "immediately cease" manufacture of atomic bombs, call a world conference to prevent their use, and offer reciprocal sharing of scientific research.

Naming the United States and Russia as the "chief powers" emerging from the war and stating "their mutual fears and contrasting systems constitute the greatest source of danger," the Colgate report asserted:

"The United States should conspicuously invite the USSR, along with other nations, to propose plans for preventing the use of atomic bombs by any power (including any world government)."

332,000 VETERANS ASK COLLEGE STUDY

125,000 Already Enrolled, and Official Predicts 600,000 or More Will Be In by Fall

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20 (AP)—The United States is headed for the greatest educational jam in history as thousands of returning war veterans swamp colleges and universities with enrollment applications.

Already 125,000 veterans, financed under the GI Bill of Rights, are in college classes and 207,000 more have applied for entrance.

Dr. Francis J. Brown, staff associate of the American Council on Education, predicted in an interview today that more than 600,000 would be in colleges and universities by next fall.

"This is creating a university crisis," said Dr. Brown. "Thirty per cent of veterans are married. Ten per cent have children. This is in sharp contrast to the situation before the war when the great majority of students were single.

"The housing problem is the greatest problem at present but we hope legislation now pending in Congress will be approved and will help the situation. It provides $167,000,000 for moving temporary war and defense housing to regions of greatest need."

Dr. Brown said that "big name" universities, and those in large urban areas were the first to be filled by returning service men, who now were entitled to $50 a month if single and $75 if married, while enrolled in schools or in training programs.

A bill to raise these allotments to $65 and $90, respectively, went to President Truman yesterday for his signature to make it law. The veteran, besides his subsistence allowance, receives his tuition and some other expenses.

Such institutions as Harvard, Yale, Dartmouth and Brown are nearing the limit of their normal capacity, but if additional housing becomes available normal capacities can be increased substantially. Yale joined with Columbia in declaring that they had no capacity limits where service men were concerned.

While some of the smaller colleges have not been affected by the rush of students and report subnormal enrollment, all probably will be filled by fall, educators agreed.

They expect the previous peak of American college enrollment of 1,400,000 students in 1930-40 to be exceeded by at least 25 per cent.

At the Veterans Administration it was reported that 9,591 veterans were taking on-the-job training under terms of the GI bill, in addition to those enrolled in school classes. The percentage of on-the-job trainees is expected to increase, a trend that followed the first World War.

ATOMIC RESEARCH MAY END LEUKEMIA

NEW HAVEN, Dec. 20—(AP) Donald "Butch" DiGiacomo, five-year-old leukemia sufferer whose Marine father was given special leave and air transportation from Saipan recently when his son's condition became critical, may go to New York after the holidays for treatment with radio-active phosphorus, his physician said today.

Donald's parents had reluctantly accepted the verdict that there was "no hope" for the boy when a family read a newspaper article reporting that one of the developments of atomic research had been the discovery that radio-active phosphorus might be used in treating leukemia cases.

The family, seeking further information, was advised to communicate with Memorial hospital in New York city, and Dr. Edward R. Johnson of West Haven, Donald's physician, said arrangements to treat the boy there were now being made.

"We don't know now exactly when we can go down. We hope it will be soon," he said.

Cautioning against too much hope, Dr. Johnson said:

"The first recorded leukemia case occurred in 1845, and since that time no authentic cure has ever been reported. The use of radio-active phosphorus is just in the consideration stage. The Memorial hospital has one adult case there whom I saw yesterday. The technique seems to be progressing, but no definite results can even be considered at this stage. We can, in Donald's case, simply hope for the best."

Medal of Honor Awarded To Dead Kingston Hero

Dietz Singlehandedly Killed Nazis Holding 2 Bridges

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20 (AP).—The War Department today announced the posthumous award of the Medal of Honor to Staff Sergeant Robert H. Dietz, of Kingston, N. Y., infantryman who singlehandedly destroyed the German defenders of two bridges.

After Sergeant Dietz had thus opened the way last March 29 for the capture of Kirchain, Germany, he was killed by a burst of enemy rifle fire as he signaled that the route was clear.

Sergeant Dietz was a squad leader with Company A, 38th Armored Infantry Battalion, 7th Armored Division. His force encountered stiff resistance in its advance on Kirchain. Between the town's outlying buildings 300 yards away and a stalled armored column lay a mine field and two bridges defended by German rocket-launching teams and riflemen.

According to the official citation of Sergeant Dietz's action: "On his own initiative he advanced alone, scorning the bullets which struck all around him, until he was able to kill the bazooka team defending the first bridge.

"He continued ahead and had killed another bazooka team, bayoneted an enemy soldier armed with a panzerfaust and shot two Germans when he was knocked to the ground by another blast of another panzerfaust. He quickly recovered, killed the man who had fired at him and then jumped waist deep into water under the second bridge to disconnect the demolition charges."

The award will be given to the hero's father, Herman O. Dietz, of Kingston.

Belgium Is Given $100,000,000 U.S. Loan

Washington, Dec. 20 (AP) — The Export Import Bank today announced two loans to Belgium totaling $100,000,000.

They provide for:

1. $55,000,000 for the purchase in the United States of items approved under lend-lease before V-J day. This credit, to be available until June 30, 1946, is to be repaid in 60 semi-annual installments beginning next July 1. Interest will be 2⅜ per cent.

2. $45,000,000 to buy farm and manufactured products in this country. Advances will be made against 2½ per cent Belgian notes that will mature March 31, 1951. At that time Belgium will have the right to tender new notes in exchange for the original notes. Under this funding arrangement the principal amount will mature in 30 semi-annual installments, the first ten installments at 2½ per cent, falling due beginning September 30, 1951; the second ten at 3 per cent, falling due beginning September 30, 1956, and the third ten at 3½ per cent and falling due beginning September 30, 1961.

M'Vay May Know Fate In Month

Washington, Dec. 20 (AP)—Acquitted on one charge, Navy Captain Charles B. McVay, 3d, waited today for the unhurried routine of court-martial procedure to run its course on a second count. Both grew out of the loss of his ship, the heavy cruiser Indianapolis, last July.

Acquitted Of Negligence

Navy legal authorities estimated the review process would require at least a month.

The military tribunal found "not proved" a charge of culpable inefficiency, but the court announced no report on the Navy's contention that McVay was negligent.

Prescribed Penalties

Under the rules of court-martial, any finding of guilt is withheld until the verdict can be reviewed by the Judge Advocate General, the Bureau of Personnel, the Chief of Naval Operations and finally by the Secretary of the Navy. The latter may lessen or vacate any sentence, but may not increase it.

Possible wartile sentences range from a maximum of death or dismissal—either of which requires presidential review—down to a reduction of specific "numbers in grade." The latter has the effect of delaying future promotions.

Called as a defense witness after the court announced its findings yesterday, the navy prosecutor, Capt. Thomas J. Ayan, testified that the "only unfavorable entry" in McVay's official record concerned the loss of the Indianapolis. He added that in general the officer's record deserved the classification of "outstanding."

NAVY CRITICIZED

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—(AP) Criticism of the Navy for allowing a Japanese naval officer to testify against Capt. Charles B. McVay at court martial proceedings here this week was voiced in the House today by Reps. Edith Nourse Rogers (R-Mass) and Larcade (D-La).

Mrs. Rogers said she was "profoundly shocked" by the Navy's action and added "I have not found a person yet who does not deplore it." She asked the House to consider immediately her resolution to strike the Japanese officer's testimony from records of the hearings.

Larcade told members that the procedure "was disgraceful."

CAROLS ACROSS THE SEA

Members of Congress and British Parliament Sing in Unison

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20 (AP)—Members of Congress and the British Parliament sang Christmas carols today in a two-way radio broadcast.

The program over the Mutual network was opened with a song by a group of Parliament members. Congressmen responded with another carol, and then the two groups sang "Silent Night" in unison.

Members of Congress participating were Representatives Hill of Colorado, Arends of Illinois, Towe of New Jersey, Tibott of Pennsylvania, Shafer of Michigan, and Fellows of Maine.

Byrnes Hints Shakeup In Foreign Service.

Washington, Dec. 20 (AP)—Secretary Byrnes today hinted at a "far-reaching" reorganization of the State Department's foreign service during 1946.

In a Christmas message published in the December issue of the American Foreign Service Journal, Byrnes praised the career diplomats for their wartime achievements and sacrifices but added:

"In the year to come there will be changes in the foreign service, some of which may be far reaching in consequence. These are necessary if the service is to function as it should."

He said foreign service personnel had demonstrated "a clear recognition of the need of strengthening and improving our machinery and a keen interest to see it done."

Posthumous Award To Siegfried Hero

Washington, Dec. 20 (AP)—The corporal who was a one-man spearhead for the 45th Infantry Division in its assault on the Siegfried Line has been awarded the Medal of Honor posthumously.

The Army announced the decoration today for Corporal Edward G. Wilkin, of Longmeadow, Mass.

He attacked a segment of the famed line with an automatic rifle and grenades and, unaided, knocked out six enemy pillboxes. In three days of fighting, he killed at least 9 Germans, wounded 13, took as many more prisoners and aided in the capture of 14 others—and helped out in his spare time as litter bearer.

He was killed last April 18, a month after the Siegfried battle, in the storming of the city of Nuernberg.

The War Department will give the medal to his grandmother, Mrs. Fannie M. Wilkin, of Longmeadow.

Bill Passed To Extend War Rationing Power

Washington, Dec. 20 (AP)—Legislation extending until July 1 the wartime rationing and priority powers given the President was sent to the White House today by Congress.

The House agreed by a voice vote to a Senate-House conference committee's final draft of the measure.

The legislation also continues until July 1 most of the other powers held by the Executive under the Second War Powers Act.

Chief among these was one waiving navigation laws to allow overloading of troopships returning veterans from overseas.

Administration leaders in the Senate had tried earlier to secure the extension until January 1, 1947, but the legislators rejected this proposal.

Congress Authorizes Boost In Army Officers

Washington, Dec. 20 (AP)—The Senate approved and sent to the White House today legislation authorizing an increase to 25,000 from the present authorized 16,719 officers in the regular Army.

The legislation, previously passed by the House, will allow appointment of reserve or temporary officers who served during the war to regular commissions.

Queries By Taber On Foreign Loans

Washington, Dec. 20 (AP)—Representative Taber (R., N.Y.) called on the House today for "special care" with reference to "foreign loans and gratuities."

Speaking specifically of the proposed $4,400,000,000 loan to Great Britain, which must win the approval of Congress before it can become effective, Taber said answers to five major questions must accompany the proposal if it were to be considered.

He listed these questions:

1. What is going to be done with the money?

2. If the things that it is proposed to do with the money are specifically enumerated, will that do Great Britain any good?

3. Is it going to do the United States any good?

4. Is it going to contribute to international good will or is it going to be like the debt after the last war and create ill will because the European countries were indebted to us?

5. What other loans to other countries are in contemplation by the Administration.

Taber added that if the money were to be used to rehabilitate private industry in Great Britain, it "certainly" should be a private loan from commercial banks.

Congress Reorganizes Veterans' Medical Group

Washington, Dec. 20 (AP)—The Senate passed and sent to the White House today a measure reorganizing the medical division of the Veterans Administration.

It establishes the office of chief medical examiner with a salary of $12,000 yearly, a deputy at $11,500, eight assistants at $11,000 and a director of nursing service at $8,000.

Truman Recalls Saying, Sees Healthy Christmas

Washington, Dec. 20 (AP)—President Truman observed today that a healthy Christmas lies just ahead.

Chatting informally with newsmen just prior to his pre-Christmas news conference, the Chief Executive recalled an old saying of his grandmother.

Grandmother used to say, he asserted, that a green Christmas makes a fat graveyard.

Taking cognizance of the heavy snow outside his office window, he hazarded a guess that this Christmas shouldn't fill up the graveyards.

GEOFFREY BAKER NAMED PRICE CONTROL CHIEF

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21—AP) OPA Administrator Chester Bowles today announced the appointment of Geoffrey Baker, of Westport, Conn., as deputy administrator for price control.

He will succeed Jerome M. Ney, who has resigned to return to private business in the southwest on Jan. 1.

Baker has been serving as associate deputy price administrator for the past five months. Prior to that he was director of the food price division.

Ney is president of the Boston store in Fort Smith and Fayetteville, Ark., and vice-president of Rosenthal's, Inc., Beaumont, Tex.

Quitting Of Service Grads Attacked

Washington, Dec. 20 (AP)—Legislation to prohibit any graduate of the United States Naval or Military Academies from resigning from the Navy or Army for ten years after leaving the schools is being drafted for introduction in Congress.

Representative Stigler (D., Okla.), a member of the House Veterans Legislation Committee, said he planned to introduce such a bill shortly after Congress reconvenes in January.

Wants Career Intentions

Stigler said that in making appointments of candidates for nomination to Annapolis and West Point, he has specified that one requirement be that the successful candidates declare their intention to make the Army or Navy their life career.

"I can see no good reason why the United States Government should spend thousands of dollars in putting a youth through the Naval or Military Academy, then have him resign after he has served a year or two or when a war comes along," said Stigler, former Oklahoma American Legion commander.

Truman's Family Back In Independence

Independence, Mo., Dec. 20 (AP)—The train carrying Mrs. Harry S. Truman, her daughter Margaret, and her mother, Mrs. D. W. Wallace, home for the Christmas holidays, arrived at the snow-crested railroad station here more than three hours late last night. Although it was almost midnight, relatives and friends were patiently waiting for them.

As soon as the conductor and the Secret Service escorts handed down their eleven pieces of baggage the three were whisked away to the summer White House.

As their car entered the drive, its headlights outlined a crated sixteen-foot Christmas tree setting in front of the garage. The tree, shipped from the Pike National Forest in Colorado, will have to be cut down to fit into the Truman living room.

82ND TO PARADE UP FIFTH AVENUE

NEW YORK, Dec. 20 — (AP) The famous 82nd Airborne division, which slugged its way through Sicily, Italy, Normandy, Holland and the Battle of the Bulge, will march up New York city's Fifth avenue Saturday, Jan. 12, in a mammoth victory parade, Grover A. Whalen, chairman of the mayor's reception committee, said today.

Maj. Gen. James M. Gavin, division commander, will fly to the United States Dec. 27 to help complete arrangements for the event, Whalen said. Until recently, the division occupied Berlin.

Participating in the parade will be Gen. Gavin, the army's youngest division commander, his staff, bands of the 82 and the 13th Airborne divisions and of the Fourth Infantry division, the Parachute Infantry regiment, glider infantry, field artillery, parachute field artillery, airborne artillery units and a detachment of heavy tanks and field artillery pieces.

The parade will be covered by an air arm of 40 C-47 tow planes, with gliders, and 48 fighting planes.

The bulk of the 82nd is expected to arrive in this country the first week in January aboard the Queen Mary. The troops will be quartered at Camp Shanks.

Water Famine Delays Cruiser

New York, Dec. 20 (AP) — The cruiser Portland, with 1,041 passengers aboard, reported by radio to the Navy today that she was putting into Horta, the Azores, to relieve a critical fresh water shortage and to test boiler leaks.

The Portland reported Tuesday that she was "riding out a gale at six knots" and that her evaporators were being used constantly in an effort to keep fresh water supplies normal.

The passengers aboard the cruiser include 947 Army and 50 Navy enlisted personnel, 36 Army and seven Navy officers, and one civilian.

The Navy here said the civilian was not identified.

1,100 Returned To Britain

Portsmouth, England, Dec. 20 (AP)—More than 1,100 United States troops arrived today on the storm-damaged cruiser Augusta glad to be out of one of the worst gales 'than anybody aboard ever saw,' but disappointed that they won't be home for Christmas.

The Augusta put into a Portsmouth dockyard for repairs to her damaged starboard bow. The storm was so bad the ship had to lay to for two days before she could be turned around.

The troops will be given a special Christmas party somewhere on shore.

Iwo Jima Veterans Return

San Diego, Cal., Dec. 20 (AP)—The 1st and 2d battalions of the 27th Regiment, first returning units of the 5th Marine Division, which wrote history in the taking of Iwo Jima, arrived in port today aboard the assault transport Pondera, from Sasebo, Japan.

Affected By Shortages

Newport News, Va., Dec. 20 (AP)—Thirteen ships, some of them loaded and waiting to sail for as long as two weeks was tied up at Norfolk and Newport News by crew shortages, it was reported here today.

Crew members, many of whom have worked three years without going home for Christmas, are taking off for the holidays, a local paper said, with serious effect on foreign shipping, which cannot move without a full complement of crew. Coastwise shipping, while hampered, is less affected, as each ship can move with curtailed crews, and some ships are moving out of Newport News with short crews, it was reported.

Loaded With Goods For Europe

The thirteen ships anchored at Hampton Roads, each carrying about 8,300 tons, are largely loaded with coal for Europe. One ship is loaded with pitch. Other vessels are carrying foodstuffs and clothes which, like the fuel, are destined for Italy and France for relief of shortages there.

One sailor was quoted by the paper as saying, "The heck with them; I haven't been home for Christmas in three years and I'm going home." He left for his West Coast home, and refused his captain's plea by long-distance phone to return to Norfolk and help move the vessel. Others are reported to have taken their pay on return from trips to foreign ports and left before scheduled sailings.

Three Destroyers Being Decommissioned

San Diego, Cal., Dec. 19 (AP)—The decommissioning of three destroyers tha sterved with Admiral Halsey's Pacific task force through nine major engagements—the Miller, Tingey and Stephen Potter—was started today at the naval repair base.

The Miller was tied to the aircraft carrier Franklin after she was hit and stood by more than an hour while exploding shells and fires raged.

Three Generals Flying To U.S. From Pacific

San Francisco, Dec. 20 (AP)—Three high-ranking generals from the Pacific and China theaters are due at Hamilton Field early tomorrow.

They are Lieut. Gen. Richard K. Sutherland, chief of staff to General MacArthur throughout the Pacific war; Maj. Gen. Ray T. Maddocks, chief of staff to General Wedemeyer in the China theater, and Maj. Gen. Robert B. McClure, commander of the Chinese Combat Command.

U.S. To Fly Vets Home From West Coast

Dayton, Ohio, Dec. 20 (AP)—The Army Air Force is sending two giant transports from Wright Field to the West Coast to fly returning Pacific war veterans back to their mid-Western homes in time for Christmas.

Maj. Gen. Benjamin W. Chidlaw, deputy commander of the Air Technical Service Command, announced that the first flight of two aircraft assigned to the troop-carrying venture would take off today for Seattle and probably would return tomorrow.

Other Flight Saturday

A second flight, to return veterans from San Francisco, is scheduled to leave Saturday, Chidlaw said.

The planes, C-97's or the transport version of the Superfort, can carry 100 to 125 men each. The planes are expected to make the nonstop flight to and from the coast in eight hours.

Col. George Smith, project officer, said the planes would carry food, candy, cigarettes, blankets and "anything else needed for the men's comfort."

Tugwell Is Appointed By Chicago University

Chicago, Dec. 20 (AP)—Rexford Guy Tugwell, Governor of Puerto Rico and former Cabinet member under the late President Roosevelt, today was appointed professor of political science at the University of Chicago.

The appointment was announced by Ernest B. Colwell, university president, who said Tugwell also would become director of a new program of education and research in planning July 1, 1946.

The new program will begin January 1, in co-operation with the Chicago chapter of the American Institute of Architects, the Public Administration Clearing House and other affiliated agencies.

Other Posts Held

Tugwell was Assistant Secretary of Agriculture in 1933, under secretary from 1934 to 1937, and chairman of the planning department of the New York City Planning Commission in 1938. He was appointed chancellor of the University of Puerto Rico in 1941, and later governor.

The new program, the university said, was instituted because "planning has become increasingly important in government . . . but planning agencies . . . have had no professionally trained personnel available."

"The program covers a broad fundamental field, including geography, history, economics, political science and sociology, and technical training in statistics, administration, law and other specialized fields."

Will Keep Puerto Rico Post

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20 (AP)—President Truman said today that Mr. Tugwell had requested that he be permitted to resign as Governor of Puerto Rico, but that he had prevailed upon Mr. Tugwell to stay on the job "a while" longer. Asked how long "a while" would be the President laughed but did not explain further.

Life Term For Father Of Saboteur Upheld

Chicago, Dec. 20 (AP)—The United States Circuit Court of Appeals upheld today the sentence of life imprisonment and a $10,000 fine against Hans Max Haupt, father of the executed Nazi saboteur, Herbert Haupt, for treason.

The elder Haupt once was convicted and sentenced to death for aiding his son in Chicago, but on appeal won a retrial. His present appeal was from a second conviction and the sentence of life, plus a $10,000 fine.

Haupt's attorney based his appeal on the ground the evidence was insufficient to support a conviction for treason. Haupt is now serving the life term.

Flying Vaccine To China

San Francisco, Dec. 20 (AP)—Four and a half tons of typhus and diphtheria vaccine will be flown by army plane from San Francisco to Shanghai, where it has been ordered by UNRRA officials as "a precautionary measure." The serum reached here yesterday from New York aboard a United Air Lines cargo plane.

SCHOOLS IN EUROPE BEING RESTORED

NEW HAVEN, Dec. 20 — (AP) University students throughout Europe are not only receiving aid from the United States and Great Britain, said the Rev. Sidney Lovett, chaplain of Yale university, today, but they are showing an "amazing disposition x x x to help each other."

Mr. Lovett recently completed a two-and-a-half-months trip during which he visited universities in Switzerlnad, France, Belgium and Holland in behalf of the World Student Service fund. He asserted that, although aid from the United States and Great Britain has been considerable, "countries like Switzerland have exhibited the utmost generosity in helping their neighbors."

Denmark, he said, has aided immeasurably in the restoration of facilities for study in Holland.

Mr. Lovett's itinerary included a visit to the Chalet des Etudiants at Combloux, France, where students in need of rest and recuperation, many of whom were actively associated in the resistance movements, are currently being housed; and to the international university sanitorium, Leysia, Switzerland, maintained for tubercular students.

"The primary needs of students in the liberated countries," he said, "are textbooks, laboratory equipment, library facilities, shelter, and food, in that order.

"Books and equipment are now trickling into the study centers, national and municipal committees are seeking to provide adequate shelter, and canteens are operating where students can procure at least one substantial meal each day at low cost."

"The patience, the courage, and the hope of these students is outstanding," Mr. Lovett continued. "They are all looking forward to the future and, meanwhile, are continuing the education which will fit them for the tasks which lie ahead.

"One of their greatest desires is to see in the future an even larger exchange of students than took place in the pre-war years, in the interests of intellectual stimulation and international understanding; for these students feel that student solidarity is one of the greatest bulwarks for future peace."

Mr. Lovett, who is on leave of absence from Yale until March 1, 1946, will visit schools and colleges throughout the country after Christmas in behalf of the World Student Service fund.

LONDON, DEC. 20--(AP)--A SPECIAL TRIBUNAL OF TWO SUPREME COURT JUSTICES AND AN ACCOUNTANT WILL DETERMINE COMPENSATION FOR COAL MINES WHICH WOULD BECOME PUBLIC PROPERTY UNDER BRITAIN'S PROPOSED NATIONALIZATION PROGRAM, IT WAS DISCLOSED TODAY.

DETAILS OF THE COAL MINE NATIONALIZATION BILL, INTRODUCED IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS YESTERDAY, SET FORTH ESTABLISHMENT OF A NATIONAL COAL BOARD TO GOVERN FUTURE COAL PRODUCTION AND A DOMESTIC COAL CONSUMERS' COUNCIL TO ADVISE THE [redacted] GOVERNMENT ON SUPPLY PROBLEMS AFFECTING THE GENERAL PUBLIC.

PROVISION OF A COMPENSATION TRIBUNAL FOLLOWS ACKNOWLEDGEMENT RECENTLY BY EMANUEL SHINWELL, MINISTER OF FUEL AND POWER, THAT ENACTMENT OF PUBLIC OWNERSHIP "IS NOT AS EASY AS IT LOOKS."

TO TAKE OVER MINING PROPERTY, MR. SHINWELL OBSERVED IN ADDRESSING REPRESENTATIVES OF THE COAL INDUSTRY, WOULD BE SIMPLE.

"BUT," HE CONTINUED, "WHEN YOU GET ON THE SLIPPERY SLOPE OF COMPENSATION, COMPLICATIONS--LEGAL, FINANCIAL AND OTHERWISE--COME ONE AFTER ANOTHER."

DEC 21 1945

IN A GOVERNMENT WHITE PAPER, ISSUED TODAY IN CONNECTION WITH THE NATIONALIZATION BILL, IT IS DISCLOSED THAT THE TRIBUNAL WILL "DETERMINE THE GLOBAL SUM REQUIRED TO PROVIDE FAIR COMPENSATION TO THE OWNERS OF THE ASSETS."

NO EXACT ACCOUNTING OF THE COAL INDUSTRY VALUATION HAS BEEN MADE, BUT IT IS GENERALLY ESTIMATED AT $1,200,000,000.

COMPENSATION WILL BE IN GOVERNMENT SECURITIES.

LONDON, DEC 20-(AP)-A RUSSIAN COMPROMISE ON THE TRUSTEESHIP ISSUE, ENDORSED BY A SUBCOMMITTEE OF THE UNITED NATIONS PREPARATORY COMMISSION, IS SLATED FOR CONSIDERATION BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF THE WORLD PEACE ORGANIZATION AT ITS MEETING STARTING JAN. 10.

UNDER THE COMPROMISE, WHICH WON SUBCOMMITTEE APPROVAL YESTERDAY AFTER ITS ACCEPTANCE BY UNITED STATES DELEGATES, MANDATORY POWERS WOULD "ACT IN CONCERT WITH OTHER STATES DIRECTLY CONCERNED" IN THE WRITING OF AGREEMENTS SHIFTING LEAGUE OF NATIONS MANDATED TERRITORY TO UNITED NATIONS TRUSTEESHIP CONTROL.

THE MANDATORY POWERS HAD DESIRED TO WRITE THE PROPOSED AGREEMENTS WITHOUT SUGGESTIONS FROM POWERS WHICH HAVE NO LEAGUE MANDATE TERRITORY. THE UNITED STATES HAD SOUGHT TO HAVE ALL COUNTRIES CONCERNED INVITED TO PARTICIPATE IN THE AGREEMENTS.

THE RUSSIAN COMPROMISE WOULD HAVE THE EFFECT OF PLACING THE UNITED STATES AND OTHER POWERS WHICH HAVE NO LEAGUE MANDATES IN A SECONDARY POSITION IN WRITING AGREEMENTS ON SUCH TERRITORIES AS PALESTINE AND PACIFIC ISLANDS MANDATED TO AUSTRALIA AND NEW ZEALAND.

OBSERVERS BELIEVED THE UNITED STATES POSITION IN RELATION TO ISLANDS MANDATED TO JAPAN PROBABLY WOULD NOT BE AFFECTED, HOWEVER, SINCE THESE ISLANDS ARE CONSIDERED "DETACHED FROM THE ENEMY."

Patton Dies in His Sleep 12 Days After Accident; Burial To Be in Europe

Blood Clot in Lung Fatal to 3d Army's Leader in Heidelberg Hospital

He Broke Nazi Drive In Bulge Year Ago

R. O'Regan

Truman and Eisenhower Pay Him Tribute; Wife by His Bedside at End

HEIDELBERG, Germany, Dec. 21.—(AP) America's great master of tank warfare, Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., died peacefully in his sloop today of a blood clot which developed gangrene in his lungs and weakened his warrior heart. Mrs. Patton, who was at his side, decided immediately that the general would be buried in Europe, along the storied route of the powerful Third Army he drove to victory.

"The exact place of burial has not been decided, but presumably it will be [illegible]," U. S. Headquarters announced. The service probably will be Monday.

Dies After Accident

The acid-tongued general, one of the greatest in American history, died at 5:50 p. m. (11:50 a. m. Eastern Standard Time) 12 days after a hunting trip accident.

"He went down fighting," said Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, commander of U. S. forces in Europe. Flags were ordered to half staff across the American-occupied zone of Germany.

"The cause of death was pulmonary (lung) embolism followed by cardiac failure," said the Army medical specialist who attended him.

Patton died almost a year to the day after one of the greatest military feats in history—the 78-mile plunge by his Third Army to the relief of the battered men of Bastogne, in last winter's "Battle of the Bulge."

Patton's neck was broken Sunday Dec. 9, and he suffered paralysis from the shoulders down. He was injured in a collision between a truck and the motor car in which he was going pheasant hunting.

"This is a hell of a way to die," Patton said then as he was lifted into an ambulance.

But his condition steadily improved, and last Wednesday he sat up in bed. Then, 48 hours ago, bronchial secretions brought on congestion of the lungs and today his heart became affected.

Change Comes Suddenly

Col. R. Glen Spurling, War department medical specialist, said the blood clot which caused death occurred when Patton was well on his way to recovery from partial paralysis. The clot developed early today.

The medical facts, said Spurling, were these:

"Until the morning of Dec. 19 Patton made very satisfactory progress. His general condition was good and he was confident he would recover.

"The first untoward sign was when he had difficulty raising secretions from his bronchial tubes.

"At approximately 2 a. m. yesterday he had an acute attack of breathlessness and pallor. The attack lasted about an hour and he was relieved by medication. At that time we felt relatively sure the general had pulmonary (lung) embolism."

Spurling explained the blood clot probably originated in his injured neck and was pumped by the heart to the right lung, causing "a spot" of gangrene in the lung.

"Anybody, particularly an older person and especially one who is paralyzed, is liable to develop such a 'spot'," Spurling said.

The specialist explained that the clot clogged up the vessels in Patton's lungs, and that though he recovered from the initial shock that morning, his lungs filled up with mucus.

All efforts to stop the increase in the flow of mucus were futile, Spurling said, and early this morning Patton showed signs of heart failure.

Condition Becomes Critical

"Late this afternoon Patton was in a very critical condition," Spurling said.

Doctors had hoped to fly Patton home within the next week or 10 days and the general was enthusiastic, Spurling said, adding:

"He had all the courage in the world and was confident he would pull through."

Spurling revealed that Patton had suffered two embolisms several years ago when he broke his leg, but had survived them.

Patton had been sleeping since 4 p. m., until the moment he died.

"When I talked to him just before he went to sleep he was bright and alert," Spurling said. "He said he felt better and very comfortable."

With the general just before he died were Capt. William Duane, Jr., neurosurgeon of the 97th General hospital, who had been in constant 24-hour attendance, and Nurse Lt. Margery Randell of Ashland, Wis.

McNarney told reporters:

"It is my painful duty to announce the death of a great fighter and [illegible] man.

"Gen. Patton died this evening at the 130th hospital in Heidelberg.

"His injuries were grave, but his fight to overcome them was gallant. He went down fighting. Patton would have died in no other way.

"And now, for us over here and all who applauded his bravery, there is a sudden empty feeling.

"He brought to us a large part of our magnificent victory and this, too well known to need description, belongs to history."

Kenner Rushes to Side

Earlier in the day the 130th station hospital issued a bulletin saying Patton's condition was considered serious, and Maj. Gen. Albert W. Kenner chief army surgeon in Europe, was rushed to his bedside.

The lung condition which weakened him was described as having been complicated by a partial paralysis of the diaphragm, directly due to injury to the General's spinal cord.

A week ago last Sunday, shortly before noon, the General's sedan collided with an Army truck on the superhighway on the outskirts of Mannheim. Patton was found splattered with blood from cuts about his face, reclining in the back seat of the wrecked vehicle.

An ambulance rushed him the 20 miles to Heidelberg in 25 minutes.

Brig. Hugh Carnes, neurosurgical consultant to the British army, sped to Heidelberg from England, while Mrs. Patton and a neurosurgical specialist, Col. R. G. Spurling of Louisville, Ky., boarded a plane at Washington to rush to the General's side.

After several days of observation the General was placed in a traction apparatus to realign the vertebrae, and his condition improved steadily. Early this week he was removed from the traction and a cast was applied, covering his neck and upper chest. He sat up to eat and read, and doctors called the speed of apparent recovery "amazing."

Then he took a turn for the worse from bronchial secretions, which led to congestion of the lungs.

As Patton neared death, Mrs. Patton was down the hospital corridor in the special room which was provided for her. A lieutenant ran from Patton's bedroom to disclose that her husband was dying.

Mrs. Patton Present

Mrs. Patton rushed to her husband's bed and was by his side when he drew his last breath. She later told Spurling she was "thoroughly satisfied" that everything possible had been done to save his life.

She decided her husband would be buried "over here," meaning in northwest Europe, an Army spokesman said. The grave probably will be in one of the battlefields on which the Third army fought, in France.

Lt. Gen. Lucian K. Truscott, who succeeded Patton as commander of the Third Army, ordered flags flown at half staff and instructed all military installations to hold memorial services.

"We personally lost a great friend and the country a great citizen and soldier, his family a true and devoted husband and father," Truscott said.

Patton's job was war, and he had looked at it with amazing success for more than 30 years. But he was a stranger to the world of diplomacy, and his remarks and actions off the field of battle kept him in hot water.

The first great criticism rose when Patton slapped a hospitalized soldier who was suffering from battle fatigue, during the Sicilian campaign. Gen. Eisenhower made Patton apologize publicly, but kept him for his assignment later to the Third Army.

Three months ago Patton was removed from command of his beloved Third army as a result of criticism of his actions in carrying out the denazification program in Bavaria. He was placed in command of the 15th army, which had become largely a "paper army" compiling a history of American campaigns in the war.

Just a year ago, on Dec. 22, German broadcasts announced that Patton's Third army had begun "fierce" attacks on the southern flanks of the great battle of the Bulge, and that the German advance, which Hitler promised would reach Paris by Christmas, had been slowed. The attack had broken through Luxembourg, had cut allied supply lines and was driving on Sedan, when Gen. Omar N. Bradley called Patton, and asked how long it would take to shift the Third army from the Saar to the Bulge.

"Sir," said Patton, "it won't take me as long as you would think."

Patton flew back to his headquarters at Nancy, and called in his staff.

"Gentlemen," he said, "I have called upon you before to do the difficult. This time I'm asking the impossible."

Men were pulled from their foxholes, loaded onto trucks and headed north over icy, treacherous roads, in an 80-mile-long column, bumper to bumper, hurried and harried by Patton who cajoled and swore as he bounced along in a jeep equipped with a blaring airhorn, loud as a steamboat whistle.

Plunged into Battle

Once into the Bulge battle zone, Patton's men and their tanks kept going right into battle without pausing for rest. They pushed on into the muzzles of German guns until they gripped with the Nazis.

Grim, hard, bitter cold, bloody days followed. But on New Year's Eve Patton strode into a briefing meeting, and told correspondents:

"When you're in a brawl with a guy and get him into a vital place, you squeeze. Today we began squeezing."

The thrusting, pinching blows of the First and Third armies knocked the Germans back for 12 miles at the western end of the salient into Belgium.

The Third army had pounded to the Reich border at three points in northeastern Luxembourg, had broken the enemy's Sure river line and dug in on new positions [illegible] miles north of Bastogne. And at the same time came the clear skies for which Patton had prayed at Christmas, and the air forces attacked in support.

Patton hammered along a 50-mile front of the German salient, sheared Nazi supply roads, threatened to cut off enemy armor which had pushed to within 23 miles of Sedan.

In 14 days the Third army changed the von Rundstedt offensive into a German defensive battle, and claimed a larg number of the 60,000 German casualties.

After three more weeks of toughest fighting, the Third was overrunning northern Luxembourg, and smashing at the tail of Germans racing for cover behind the Siegfried line. By Jan. 27 the Third army had rolled up to the Our river frontier, wiping out the last vestiges of the bloody Ardennes bulge.

Patton also is survived by his son, Lt. George S. Patton, 3rd, and two daughters, Mrs. James W. Totten and Mrs. James K. Waters, both of Washington, D. C.

Patton's Death Is Mourned In Washington

President Extends Deepest Sympathy To General's Widow.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—(AP)—This capital, where criticism once punctuated high praise of Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., was unanimous tonight in mourning the loss of a great fighting man.

President Truman set the tone in a message to Mrs. Patton, who was with her husband in Germany where he died:

"Mrs. Truman and I extend our deepest sympathy to you in the passing of your distinguished husband. The entire nation, to whom his brilliant career has been a constant inspiration, has suffered a great loss."

The ups and downs of the general's career were exemplified in the comment, which brought up two incidents of the Patton story—the soldier reportedly slapped in a Sicilian hospital and the crossing of the Sure river in Luxembourg.

Didn't Slap Soldier

Rep. Rankin (D-Miss.) told the House that Patton, by his own word, didn't slap the soldier and didn't swim the river.

The story had it that the General struck the G. I., a battle fatigue case, under the impression that he was malingering. There were numerous expressions of indignation in Congress at the time.

"I din't slap him," Rankin said Patton told him during the General's recent visit to this country.

The Congressman related that Patton said he only put his hands on the man's shoulders and told him to pull himself together.

On the other side of the book, the story has been that Patton, to encourage his men, plunged into the icy river in the spring of 1945 and swam across to show them it could be done.

Patton's own account, as related by Rankin, was that he didn't have to swim the 150 feet but waded up to his neck on a submerged walkway.

Compared with Stonewall Jackson

Rankin compared Patton with the Confederate Generals Nathan Bedford Forrest and Stonewall standing military leader developed Jackson and called him "the outin this war."

The up and down aspect of Patton's career was illustrated, too, in the comment of Rep. Edith Nourse Rogers (R-Mass.), who called him "a very great soldier and a very great man."

"He was the type of character," she said, "that would have his ups and downs in life. He had his, but all in all his was a great and serviceable life to his country."

Secretary of War Patterson sent Mrs. Patton a message saying the loss of her husband "is a heavy blow to all of us" which he added will be "felt severely by all ranks of the Army and by the millions of Americans who so highly admired his magnificent leadership and brilliant accomplishments throughout the war."

Praised by Eisenhower

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, chief of staff, issued a statement saying:

"He was one of those men born to be a soldier, an ideal combat leader whose gallantry and dramatic personality inspired all he commanded to great deeds of valor.

His presence gave me the certainty that the boldest plan could be even more daringly executed."

"It is not exaggeration to say that Patton's name struck terror at the heart of the enemy."

Senator Wiley (R-Wis.) recalled that earlier this week he had advocated permanent promotion of Patton to the rank of lieutenant general. He urged that the honor be given posthumously. Patton's four-star rank is temporary.

Other comment:

Senate Minority Leader White (R-Me.)—Patton "takes his place among the first three or four military leaders of our history."

Majority Leader Barkley, (D-Ky.), speaking to the Senate—"The whole country is saddened by the loss of one of the most gallant and heroic leaders. He did not send his men on—he led them."

Patton's two daughters, Mrs. James W. Totten and Mrs. John K. Waters, were both in Washington at the time their father's death became known. The General's son, George S. Patton, a West Point cadet, started by train for Washington soon after he had been notified.

The family will be taken to Heidelberg for the funeral, which probably will be held Monday.

He was commander of the United States 15th Army at the time of his death. He had served briefly as acting commander of all American forces in the European theater a few days before his automobile and an army truck collided near Mannheim on Sunday, December 9.

Patton himself, when his condition was critical after the accident, described it as "a hell of a way to die."

Unscratched, In Battle

Heidelberg, an old university town, was one of the thousands of places which the 3d Army captured.

By an ironic twist, Patton had gone unscratched through all his campaigns of war. The peacetime accident left him paralyzed from the shoulders down.

Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, United States commander in the European theater, commented that it was his "painful duty to announce the death of a great fighter and a great man."

The official announcement said: "General Patton died at 5.50 tonight, it was announced by Brig. Gen. John M. Willen, chief of staff of the 7th Army. The General died peacefully."

Ten minutes before the general died, the hospital issued this bulletin on his condition:

"General Patton's condition is considered serious. There has been a pulmonary complication which has resulted in an accumulation of secretions in the lungs thus embarrassing respiration. Paralysis of one side of the diaphragm in the intercoastal resulting from the spinal-cord injury has made it difficult to get rid of these secretions by cupping. Hobson was a close friend of General Patton.

"It was paradoxical that he should be on his way to the hunt when he met with his fatal accident," said Hobson, "there was never a man alive who loved all of the aspects of hunting as much as did George Patton."

General Patton was loved by soldiers in the ranks as well as by his fellow officers. Soldiers boasted "I was with Patton's Army," and you could tell it by the way they dressed and carried themselves.

Patton once wrote a poem, "God of Battles," which a national magazine claimed would take its place "with the world's greatest war literature." It was written during the heat of the North African campaign.

Patton lived a "dangerous" life and narrowly missed death on many occasions. General Hobson recalled that a 700-pound dud once landed eight feet from Patton in France, with the general escaping uninjured.

Statements from men here who have served with Patton included:

Maj. Gen. John W. O'Daniel, commandant of the infantry school—"I am very sorry that the General had to die that way. He contributed immeasurably to our victory. He inspired men to do the impossible thing."

Brig. Gen. Ogden J. Ross, commanding special troops — First Army — "I am very much taken aback."

Third Army Bore Trade-Marks Of Fiery, Restless Commander

(Editor's Note: Edward Ball, Associated Press correspondent, covered Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., and his swashbuckling Third Army, from Normandy to Austria and Czechoslovakia. Vacationing at his Eatonton, Ga., home, Ball tells this story of the campaign, including unpublished highlights in the career of the Army's colorful leader who died today).

By EDWARD BALL

EATONTON, Ga., Dec. 21—(AP) The hot summer sun, filtering through the bright green trees of a Normandy apple orchard, shone brilliantly on the highly lacquered helmet liner perched upon the close-cropped head of Lt. Gen. George S. Patton, Jr.

"Here are your jeeps and there is your war," Patton was saying with a sweep of his arm in the direction from which the sound of the guns came. It was his first and highly informal greeting to 48 correspondents, newly arrived from England to cover his Third army, about to go into action.

Wanted People to Know

"This is the people's war and I want them to know what's going on," he drawled. "As for the Germans," he added, fingering the needlesharp point of a French hand sword which he referred to fondly as his "Arab gooser,"—"I want them to know whom they are fighting. I want them to say, 'here comes that blankety, blankety blank Third and that son of a so and so Patton.'

"I'll tell you everything and leave it to the censors to tell you what you can't tell."

That was just before the St. Lo break-through. Eleven months later, when the war was over, the Germans—who had been beaten to a frazzle—had heard plenty about Patton and the Third army.

From start to finish, it was "Patton's army"—that famed Third which galloped across France and Germany to Austria and Czechoslovakia.

It was a hard-slugging, hell-raising army which didn't always fight by the books but every move of which bore the trade-marks of the fiery, restless commander whose stout heart gave way today in a Heidelberg hospital.

And covering the Third was a newspaperman's dream, no less than covering Patton himself, one of the greatest field commanders ever to wear a general's stars and one of the greatest actors ever to escape a Hollywood career.

Following Army Nightmare

Following the Third army at times was a nightmare because it moved so fast and communications could not keep up.

It was the same trying to keep up with Patton himself. When the action was heaviest he usually could be found up front calmly cajoling here, laying down the law there.

"Here he comes again, drawing fire," front line GI's would growl as his jeep came tearing along a particularly hot sector. It was not so much the presence of the Old Man himself that riled the GI's but the occasional blast of his specially built air horn which sounded like the Queen Mary taking off.

Last spring, down on the Danube, a German fighter jumped the tiny artillery spotter plane in which he was flying. Patton's pilot "hit the deck" and the German, coming in for the kill, swept too low, failed to pull and crashed.

"That crazy so and so, could have done better myself," Patton commented as he emerged with only a shaking-up in a rough landing.

A born actor, he packed the dramatic in everything he did—whether it was swearing over a field map in the middle of a critical campaign, whether he was administering a dressing down to a subordinate, or whether he was kneeling in the mud consoling a wounded GI.

It was this time last year that he pulled one of his most spectacular exploits and one of the greatest military operations of all time—wheeling his army from the Saar to the battle of the Bulge. Flying from a conference at Verdun, he returned to his headquarters at Nancy and announced:

"Gentlemen, I have asked you to do the difficult before. This time I ask the impossible."

He explained that he had committed the Third army to help stem von Rundstedt in the Ardennes.

Gen. Patton One Of Most Colorful And Audacious Allied Commanders

[By the Associated Press]

Gen. George Smith Patton, Jr., warrior for more than 30 years, poet with the tongue of a mule-skinner, elegant disciplinarian of the "spit-and-polish" school, was a legend long before his spectacular job was done in Europe.

His job was war, and he did it with a skill that often amazed his colleagues. But as a diplomat, the hell-for-leather cavalryman who brought tank warfare to a peak of perfection failed completely. He was constantly in hot water.

The story of Patton in World War II is the story of a lightning series of Allied victories from Africa through France and Germany to Austria and Czechoslovakia.

Flowering Of A Legend

The Patton legend flowered in the African campaign, when the roaring, cussing tankman, two pearl-handled six-shooters swinging from his hips, led American forces in the conquest of Tunisia.

To Patton, the showman, danger was the privilege of an officer, and he was constantly at the front.

His doctrine was expressed pithily: "We shall attack and attack until we are exhausted, and then we shall attack again."

He carried out this doctrine with spectacular success in Europe, when his 3d Army was born after the invasion. He led the 3d across the Seine, the Loire, the Moselle, the Saar, the Rhine, the Danube and a score of lesser rivers.

Stormed Siegfried Line

His men stormed the Siegfried Line at will, took Metz, Coblenz, Trier, Frankfurt and countless other cities. They alone liberated or conquered 80,000 square miles of territory. They fought in France, Belgium, Luxembourg, Germany, Czechoslovakia and Austria. They captured more than 750,000 Nazi soldiers, and killed or wounded at least a half million others.

Patton himself narrowly missed being a casualty on a number of occasions. Once, when a huge railway gun was being employed by the Germans, a 700-pound shell landed within eight feet of him. It was a dud.

Shell Landed Near

On another occasion, a German 11-inch shell landed 30 yards from a house in which Patton had taken shelter. The windows of the house were knocked out and a guard was injured, but Patton was unscathed.

Once Patton's little command plane was nicked by the bullets of a German craft, but Patton escaped then, too.

The 3d Army was about to cross the icy Sure River in Germany, into a hail of enemy gunfire. Patton himself, ignoring the enemy bullets leaped into the st ahead of his men and swam

"Get Shot At"

Once during the North Afr campaign he ordered a visit major general to "get to the t of the hill so you can get shot a a bit."

Patton's pomp made him the awe of native populations. Besi es the pearl-handled pistols, he often wore a leather-encased, needle-pointed French sword. He was garbed in fancy-cut riding breeches and puttees much of the time, and wore a shiny helmet.

Patton cussed out enlisted man and officer alike. But his soft side showed often. Once, informed of the death of an aide at the front, he broke into tears, mumbling: "I'm acting like an old fool."

Fierce Invective

But in his attempts to inspire a man to feats of bravery—or to bully him into it—he might lay him out for minutes at a time in fierce and often oratorical invective. Then, soft-voiced, he would add a few words of encouragement and pat the man on the back.

A sparkling success in war, Patton was constantly getting in difficulties because of his thunderous pronouncements, or his quick temper.

The first big wave of criticism was the soldier-slapping incident in Sicily. Then, in the Spring of 1944 in London he made a speech in which he said, "It is our destiny to rule the world—we Americans and British and, of course, the Russians."

In Congress representatives got hot under the collar. The War Department quickly disavowed the remark and said it was Patton's personal view. But later, after victory upon spectacular victory, Congress was to ring with Patton's praises.

Talk To Sunday School

Even home on leave, Patton exercised his facility for getting into hot water. His remarks to a Sunday-school class that there would always be wars drew bitter criticsm.

It was this facet of his personality that caused censorship to forbid publication of his statements from the time of the drive across France until V-E day. After V-E day, Patton made a statement, and he promptly got into trouble over it.

He was removed from the command of his beloved 3d Army and the Eastern Military District in Germany after this outbreak of September 22, 1945, in which he expressed impatience with the de-Nazification program. He was quoted as comparing "this Nazi thing" to the "Democratic and Republican fights back home."

The wrath at home was prompt. In its wake General Eisenhower ordered Patton to report personally on his administration and explain the statement. Subsequently Patton, on October 2, was relieved of his 3d Army command and took over the 15th, a paper army whose duty was to prepare reports on lessons learned during the war and recommendations for the future.

Patton took over briefly in November, 1945, as commander of United States forces in the European Theater in the interval between General Eisenhower's departure and the appointment of Gen Joseph T. McNarney to the post.

Intensely Religious

The softer side of Patton's nature displayed him as a poet and an intensely religious man. His poem, "God of Battles," has been set to music. He was fond of biblical quotations, liked to sing in church, and knew the Episcopal Order of Morning Prayer by heart.

Considered one of the wealthiest men in the Army, Patton could have retired to a life of ease after the European war ended. Instead he wanted intensely to fight the Japanese. He never had the opportunity.

Many military men believed Sicily would have taken much longer to conquer than 38 days without Patton's driving force.

Apologized To Army

The soldier-slapping incident occurred when he cuffed one soldier suffering from a nervous disorder and upbraided another in what Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower called "an unseemly and indefensible manner" during the Sicilian campaign. As a result of "corrective action" taken by Eisenhower, Patton became perhaps the only general in history who ever apologized to a whole army.

Eisenhower, in a report of the incidents to the Secretary of War, told how Patton "drove himself as hard as he did the members of his army during the campaign" in which he was the "mainspring of the effort during the sustained drive of the 7th Army from Gela all the way to Messina."

Eisenhower said he was faced with the problem whether the incidents were sufficiently damaging to Patton and to his standing in his army as to compel his being relieved, "thus losing to the United Nations his unquestioned value as commander of an assault force," or whether less drastic measures would be appropriate. He decided the "corrective action" taken was sufficient.

At the close of the Sicilian campaign, Patton told correspondents that "when things are happening a commanding general is under great nervous tension" and "may do things he may afterward regret."

"Pats On The Back"

He added:

"But I have patted five soldiers on the back for every one I have spoken a harsh word to. I dealt harshly with a couple of soldiers and was wrong. I am going to apologize to them."

Patton's "destiny" speech was made before an American and British audience at the opening of a United Kingdom service club to welcome American soldiers. He praised the efforts made to welcome the Yanks to Britain and added facetiously:

"The only welcoming I've done for some time has been welcoming Germans and Italians into hell. I've done quite a lot in that direction and have got about 177,000 there."

A short time later the Senate Military Affairs Committee pigeonholed the recommendation for Patton's promotion from the permanent rank of colonel of cavalry to the permanent rank of major general, though recommending confirmation of promotions for thirteen other high-ranking officers. Action on his nomination had been delayed several months earlier because of his upraiding of the two soldiers in Sicily.

But by mid-Summer of 1944, with General Patton leading the 3d Army and riding roughshod over the Germans in France, he again was a popular hero, justifying the conviction of General Eisenhower that "Old Blood and Guts" was one of America's finest field commanders.

The Military Affairs Committee unanimously recommended the promotion it had been delaying and the Senate unanimously confirmed it. President Franklin D. Roosevelt's nomination of Patton for the promotion had been pending for almost a year.

During the Battle of the Bulge in Belgium, Patton had an important part in pushing the enemy back. Praising his troops for their achievements all the way from the start of the 3d Army's operations in France, the General said their "record has been one of continuous victory."

"Not only have you invariably defeated a cunning and ruthless enemy," he told the men, "but also you have overcome by your indomitable fortitude every aspect of terrain and weather. Neither heat nor dust nor floods nor snow have stayed your progress.

He referred to a second Oak Leaf Cluster to the Distinguished Service Medal he had received for leading the 3d Army in its spectacular dash across France in the Summer of 1944. Patton told his men that "this award was bestowed on me not for what I have done but because of what you have achieved. From the bottom of my heart I thank you."

Metz Falls To Him

In the Autumn of 1944, General Eisenhower pinned on General Patton the Bronze Star for his part in the capture of Metz, the mighty fortress city that was crushed by the 3d Army driving toward Germany. Patton brought about the fall of Metz for the first time in its 1,500-year military history.

There was praise in Congress then. "Today we thank God we have General Patton at the head of the 3d Army," said a Democratic Representative, and a Republican echoed: "Heaven only knows what they'd have done without his fighting courage."

Early in 1944 Patton was decorated by order of King George VI for meritorious action in the Mediterranean. He was made a Companion of the Order of the Bath on recommendation of General Sir Harold Alexander, the Allied commander in Italy.

He managed to find time to write entertaining letters to his children back home—"Daddy's Communiqués," they called them.

His talented wife, the former Beatrice Ayer, of Boston, author of the historical novel, "Blood of the Sharks," once shyly told interviewers that she wished the press would not call him by his army nickname, because it really did not fit his character. She was a typical army wife who had seen her husband in three wars and had changed the family's home address 25 times in their many years of marriage.

A Versatile Warrior

For some thirty years General Patton's ears had been tuned to the thunder of war. He was equally at home within the nerve-shattering confines of a tank in the forefront of the fighting on a battlefield, on the back of a spirited pony on the polo field, behind the mast of a schooner dead-reckoning his way across the Pacific, or gracing some army social function.

Born In California

He was born on a ranch November 11, 1885, at San Gabriel, Cal. He attended school at Pasadena and Virginia Military Institute. His record as a student was not particularly good, but he was a good sailor, winning several championships.

Then he entered the Military Academy at West Point, where he was a class adjutant. After his graduation in 1909 he was commissioned a second lieutenant in the cavalry.

He participated in Pershing's punitive Mexican expedition. There he captured a Mexican bandit and brought him back to camp strapped to the hood of a battered automobile. With a broad smile, he recalled later that "this was the first motorized action in the United States Army."

First World War

In the first World War he served in France as a member of General Pershing's staff and was detailed to the tank corps. He was in command of the 304th Tank Brigade at the St. Mihiel offensive and later was transferred to the bloody Meuse-Argonne sector.

After the war he returned to his first love, the cavalry, heading the general staff school at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas. He was later stationed at the 1st Corps Area at Boston and in the Hawaiian Islands.

He developed his corps to one of the toughest outfits in the Army. He himself was up every morning at 5 o'clock and worked to the point of exhaustion every day, instilling the fighting spirit in his men.

When the invasion of Africa was in the planning stage, General Eisenhower placed him in command of the Task Force troops.

He was nominated lieutenant general in 1943. Besides being an expert on tanks, he was noted as an authority on military tactics. He knew the campaigns of Napoleon, Lee, Grant and Frederick the Great by heart. His library of military volumes was one of the greatest ever assembled by a private individual.

His son entered West Point and his two daughters married army men.

talls.

The Third did the impossible. Some of its units, attacking in the Saar in the morning, had withdrawn and were attacking the lower shoulder of the bulge in Luxemborg the midnight of that same day.

With all his well publicized profanity and swashbuckling ways, Patton had his soft side. When word reached his headquarters in Nancy that he had financed a chapel in North Africa as a memorial to doughboys who fell in the North African invasion, he was asked for a statement.

"Nothing will be said about that," he said sharply. "Absolutely nothing."

Hundreds of mothers whose sons fell fighting under him received his personal letters of condolence. At his own order, nothing was said about that either.

Sitting in his 15th Army headquarters at Bad Nauheim last month he fingered through a stack of letters, some 400 in all, which had been piling up since he was relieved of his Third army command. All expressed sympathy for him and wished him godspeed.

Loss of his Third army command mellowed Patton somewhat and during the interview at Bad Nauheim last month he said privately that he was retiring soon.

"I plan to go on an extended leave—I haven't had one in years except when I was home last summer," he said. "After that I hope to retire."

"When I do retire I am going to fish and hunt and sail—and I'll do plenty of eating.

"The past? I spent some 40 years in the Army and if I had my life to live over again I'd go right into the service. It's been fun, war and all."

McNarney's Announcement

FRANKFURT, Germany, Dec. 21 (AP).—General Joseph T. McNarney, commander of United States forces in the European theater, said tonight that General George S. Patton jr. died fighting.

"It is my painful duty to announce the death of a great fighter and a great man," General McNarney said. "General Patton died this evening at the 130th Hospital in Heidelberg.

"His injuries were grave, but his fight to overcome them was gallant. He went down fighting. Patton could have died in no other way. And now, for us over here and all who applauded his bravery, there is a sudden empty feeling.

"He brought to us a large part of our magnificent victory and this, too well known to need description, belongs to history."

MacArthur's Statement

TOKYO, Dec. 22 (Saturday) (AP).—General Douglas MacArthur said today the death of General Patton "fills me with the deepest regret."

"He was a gallant and romantic soldier of unquestioned greatness," MacArthur said in a statement. "All Army forces in the Pacific will mourn him."

Truman's Message

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21 (AP).—President Truman today sent the following message to Mrs. George S. Patton:

"Mrs. Truman and I extend our deepest sympathy to you in the passing of your distinguished husband.

"The entire nation, to whom his brilliant career has been a constant inspiration, has suffered a great loss."

ATTLEE WEIGHS JAVA PROBLEM

Reported Reviewing Plan to Use More Troops.

London, Dec. 21 (A. P.).—The British military decisions at Singapore to use additional armed forces in Java are being reviewed by Prime Minister Attlee and his Cabinet, an unofficial informant said today.

The final decision, according to available information, probably will be deferred until after impending conferences of British leaders in London with H. J. Van Mook, Acting Governor-General of the Netherlands East Indies.

An authoritative informant said the decision to shift more troops to the revolt-torn Dutch colony was implied when British commanders agreed at Singapore to restore law and order in Java. This decision was understood to have been reached on a purely military basis, but Government reaction in London was that such a movement could not be detached from political consequences.

The informant, who may not be identified by name, said the Singapore decision was referred to Attlee as Minister of Defense on account of the political reasonssons and because increased military commitments in Java would further involve the Royal Navy and the R. A. F., as well as the Army.

Dempsey Visits Batavia.

Batavia, Dec. 21 (A. P.).—British Lieut.-Gen. Sir Miles C. Dempsey and Air Chief Marshal Sir Keith Park made a flying visit to Batavia today as British forces campaigned against Indonesian troops east of Bandoeng, the summer capital. Dempsey is the Allied ground forces commander and Park the chief Allied air officer for the Southeast Asia theater. They took off again only a few hours later and nothing authoritative could be learned about the purpose of their trip.

The Dutch news agency Aneta speculated that they were to discuss with Lieut.-Gen. Sir Philip Christison, Allied commander in the Netherlands Indies, the decisions reached at the recent conference of British and Dutch leaders in Singapore.

Nine Batavia-based R. A. F. planes blasted road blocks and Nationalist strong points east of Bandoeng to clear the line of march for British ground troops.

[The Dutch news agency Aneta said in a dispatch from Singapore that several thousand Dutch Marines trained in the United States had arrived today off the Malayan coast aboard the Dutch steamship Noordam.]

A Netherlands naval communique said that Indonesians from Java had landed on Billiton Island, 200 miles north of Batavia. Other Indonesians were reported to have hoisted the red and white banner of the unrecognized Indonesian Republic in Dutch Borneo, about 150 miles inland from Balikpapan.

BRITISH, DANISH CLASH REPORTED

LONDON, Dec. 21—(AP) The Moscow radio tonight broadcast a Tass dispatch from Copenhagen saying "clashes" involving British and Danish frontier troops have occurred on the Danish-German frontier and that a German lieutenant who said he was attached to British troops was seriously wounded. No other casualties were given.

No comment was available immediately from the British war office nor from official sources in Copenhagen.

The broadcast, recorded by the Soviet monitor, said "a number of clashes took place x x x caused by the fact that the British do not permit the Danes to search the luggage of soldiers of the German army who are sent from Denmark to Germany.

"A former senior lieutenant of the Hitlerite army, Gerhardt Martin x x x categorically refused to open his (luggage) cases, maintaining that he was a signals officer attached to the British troops," the radio added. "The Danish frontier guards were compelled to use arms. The German was seriously wounded."

The broadcast said the Germans "considered themselves under a regime of special protection and do not wish to submit themselves to the Danish frontier troops."

"On Dec. 19 alone, Danish frontier troops confiscated several tons of Danish goods from German soldiers and officers," the radio added.

Frisco Gets New Backing In UNO

London, Dec. 21 (AP)—China and Ecuador began a campaign today to make San Francisco the home of the United Nations, citing climate and wine as points in its favor, after a British delegate had opposed the Golden Gate city.

C. K. Webster, the Briton, in a General Preparatory Commission debate intended to give guidance to a special twelve-man committee which will narrow the selection down to six cities, declared he would think "that sound judgment and chivalry are dead in the world if the organization is moved 3,000 miles farter from Europe," especially as Europe lost out in selection of the site "by such a narrow margin."

Britain Stickler For Europe

Britain has consistently held out for a headquarters in Europe.

Victor Hoo, for China, countered with emphasis on San Francisco's climate, which, he said, "is the one characteristic of a place which a man cannot change."

Parra Velasco, of Ecuador, had another point to make for the West Coast city.

"In San Francisco," he said, "there is wine. Where there is wine there is civilization, culture and the spirit of enthusiasm which we need."

His Opinion Of Wine

But Webster countered with: "In my opinion, the wines of the Hudson Valley are certainly equal to those of California and I've drunk a good deal of both."

Former British Navy Officer Gets Death

London, Dec. 21 (AP)—Walter Purdy, 27, former Royal Navy officer, was sentenced to death for high treason today after a jury at Old Bailey agreed on a verdict of guilty in seventeen minutes.

Purdy was charged with broadcasting and preparing leaflets for the Nazis after he had been made a prisoner of war, and with having disclosed to the Germans the details of a secret escape tunnel which British officers were digging at their prison camp.

Wasp Crew In London During Repairs To Ship

London, Dec. 21 (AP)—The crew of the United States aircraft carrier Wasp was brought to London by special trains today for sightseeing tours while the warship underwent repairs at Plymouth for storm damage.

The Wasp is to sail for Southampton December 24 to pick up 7,000 homeward-bound American troops.

Seaman A. W. Mikita, of Brooklyn, whose neck was broken during the storm, will be flown home for Christmas.

An Army spokesman said departure for the United States of the 353d Regiment of the 89th Infantry Division had been delayed by the storm damage to the Wasp, but would be "shoving off in a very few days." The regiment originally was scheduled to sail December 19.

before he went into the service, said several of the enlisted men were among the first to arrive at the Atsugi Airfield. All the men were air corps personnel formerly assigned to the 5th Air Force and most of them were from New York State. They were taken to Brookley Field here and from there will be sent to Fort Dix, N. J., and Fort Devens, Mass., for separation.

PARIS, Dec. 21—(AP)—The inter-Allied conftrence on reparations from Germany today awarded the United States and Britain ech 28 per cent of reparations not already assigned to Russia. France was allotted 16 per cent.

The United States, however, waived her rights to German ships and industrial equipment because she had not suffered losses in those fields. This will reduce the percentage of reparations which America will actually receive.

The reparations covered by today's agreement, to be divided among 18 countries, will come from western Germany, from German foreign assets, and from "current stock and production" in western Germany.

Russia was not covered in this agreement.

Civilian Curfew Lifted in Berlin

Berlin, Dec. 21 (A. P.).—Curfew restrictions upon civilians which had been from 11 P. M. to 5 A. M., were removed today by the military government. A senior American officer said the curfew would be renewed if crimes increased again.

A midnight-to-5 A. M. curfew is still imposed on military personnel.

Paris, Dec. 21 (AP)—The famous 2d Armored (Hell on Wheels) Division has started home, the Army announced today. An advance party reached Marseille to prepare for the unit's embarkation for the United States.

War-Trial Defense Case May Open In February

Nuernberg, Dec. 21 (AP)—Members of the Allied prosecution staff expressed hope today that war-crimes evidence against 21 leading Nazis and six Nazi organizations may be finished by the end of January, enabling the defense to begin its case early in February.

The International Military Tribunal trying the Nazis adjourned yesterday for a 13-day holiday recess.

In the month since the tribunal convened, American and British prosecutors have virtually completed their share of presentation of the evidence under general terms of the indictment.

When court reconvenes on January 2, United States Chief Prosecutor Robert H. Jackson's staff will first finish its case against the Gestapo and the Nazi Security Police and then proceed with evidence against the last of the six indicted organizations; the German high command and the general staff.

Individual Responsibility

With completion of cases against the organizations, the prosecution is scheduled to swing immediately to submission of briefs and evidence intended to show individual responsibility of the 21 defendants. That is slated to be followed by Russian and French evidence of war crimes and crimes against humanity, which constitute the final phase of the prosecution's case.

The attempt to have the tribunal brand the Nazi Leadership Corps, the SA (Storm Troopers), SS (Elite Guard), including its affiliated SD; the Gestapo, Reich Cabinet and German armed forces command and general staff as criminal groups has been strictly a United States affair so far.

The other prosecutors have shown a lack of interest in this phase of the case, and in some instances the idea of condemning entire organiaztions as criminal has drawn caustic criticism.

Others "Just As Guilty"

The American attitude was summed up in Jackson's declaration that the United States would not have participated in the present action without "this or some equivalent plan of reaching thousands of others who, if less conspicuous, are just as guilty of these crimes as the men in the dock."

A declaratory judgment that the six groups are criminal groups would enable other Allied military courts in Germany to start trying many thousands of organization members. In such trials, Jackson explained, "every defense will be open to the accused individual except that he may not deny findings made by this tribunal as to the character of the organization of which he was a member."

Members of the tribunal and prosecution staffs scattered to all parts of Europe, and a few returned to the United States for the holidays.

The defendants were returned to their cells to spend the Christmas season, which will be marked by special opportunities for them to participate in religious services.

225 COAL MINES IN REICH SEIZED BY BRITISH UNITS

ESSEN, Germany, Dec. 21.—(AP) The British military government today took actual possession of all 225 German coal mines and their assets in the British zone of occupation.

Representatives of the coal companies were called into the ballroom of the Krupp mansion and were read a proclamation dispossessing them without compensation.

The British already controlled production and distribution of the coal. At the meeting today a British official told the mine owners that the mines were left by the Nazis in a "serious financial situation" and that at present were running at "a substantial loss."

"Had this state of affairs been allowed to continue," he added, "it would have been necessary either to subsidize German owners or allow the mines to close with consequent loss of production and employment."

The meeting was attended by French, Dutch, Belgian and United States representatives, but none from the Soviet Union. A British spokesman pointed out that the dispossession order affected only the British zone and that other Allied government had been informed of the British move.

Several representatives of the mine owners said the British action came as no surprise.

The proclamation said the German coal industry had been in the hands of large and powerful joint stock companies which were closely linked with German warmaking industries.

Persons holding managerial positions in the companies, it added, will be required to place themselves at the disposal of the military government and continue their duties.

Suspicions Dispelled At Ministers Parley

"Positive Stage" Reached In Big 3 Discussions —Longest Session Held—Powers Believed In Closer Accord.

MOSCOW, Dec. 21. (AP)—Informed sources close to the Big Three foreign ministers said tonight a "positive stage" had been reached in their talks, and that Russia, the United States and Great Britain appeared closer now on vital international issues than before the conference opened.

No Experts Present

The ministers talked informally for four hours and 15 minutes in the longest discussion held since the conference began. Without benefit of experts and with only the translators present, the three began talking and never did call a formal meeting.

Considerable suspicion appears to have been dispelled on all sides, these informants said, as a result of the talks between U. S. Secretary of State James F. Byrnes, British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin and Soviet Foreign Commissar V. M. Molotov, who met for their sixth session today.

Observers said that this does not mean that all obstacles to understandings on international issues had been removed, but that there were good reasons for believing some agreements were going to be reached.

Both Byrnes and Bevin were said to be anxious not to raise the expectations of their people too much in regard to definite results from the conference.

No Official Word

There was no official word on progress of the ministers' conference, which had been slated to discuss control of atomic energy and other subjects held vital to the maintenance of world peace. Some sort of communique or announcement is anticipated when the conference closes.

In this connection it was suggested in American circles again that Byrnes still hoped to leave Moscow by Christmas, but observers said it was unlikely that the ministers would conclude their meetings by then. Byrnes plans to return to the United States before attending the general assembly of the United Nations in London scheduled to begin Jan. 10.

Foreign quarters said the foreign ministers of the Big Three have no intention of dominating the United Nations Organization, nor is there any move afoot to dissolve the Council of Foreign Ministers, which includes France and China in addition to Russia, Britain and the United States.

The United Nations Organization will soon begin to take over some of the functions of the Ministers' Council, however, and it may eventually be dissolved.

MOSCOW TALKS OF BIG THREE MAKE HEADWAY

Exploratory Conversations Bring Nations Closer to Agreement.

STALIN REACHES 66 TODAY

Marks Birthday at His Desk—Press Features Demands for Part of Turkey.

Moscow, Dec. 21 (A. P.).—The exploratory conversations of the Foreign Ministers of Britain, Russia and the United States appear to have brought the three countries closer together than they were before the meeting, it was stated in informed foreign quarters today. Certain suspicions are believed to have a good chance of being dispelled, it was reported.

Good Results Expected

On the sixth day of the Big Three foreign Ministers' meeting and the sixty-sixth birthday of Generlissimo Stalin, this appeared to be the situation on the basis of reports from informed foreign quarters:

There is a strong feeling that some results will come from the meeting and these results may be better than originally expected, but every difference among the three is not likely to be settled at this meeting.

Byrnes and Bevin are believed anxious not to raise the hopes and expectations of the American and British people too much.

No Desire To Dominate

The foreign ministers of the Big Three have no desire or intention of dominating the United Nations Organization or of bypassing it.

However, Big Three collaboration was applauded during the war and considerable good can be accomplished through such collaboration. If the United Nations Organization was expected to handle all matters there would be no need for the nations to have ambassadors and foreign ministers.

Four Mediums

Four mediums exist for trying to settle the peace and build a world safe from war as well as for exchanging opinions among nations, it was pointed out. These are:

1. The United Nations Organization for long-range matters.
2. The Council of Foreign Ministers, whose job it is to draft the peace treaties. This is the council that met in London in September and October, but got nowhere.
3. The Big Three foreign ministers.
4. Diplomatic channels which are used daily.

Council To Remain

It was suggested that no movement was afoot to dissolve the Council of Foreign Ministers, which includes the foreign ministers of China and France as well as the Big Three. But it appeared that the United Nations Organization should begin to take over some of its functions before long.

This may mean that the council eventually will die out, while the Big Three foreign ministers may keep on handling problems of vital interest among the United States, Britain and Russia.

The Big Three foreign ministers probably will meet in Washington in the spring, as suggested by Secretary of State James F. Byrnes.

Byrnes To See Press

As a result of protests by the French and other embassies when Byrnes held a press conference for American correspondents only, it was said today he would give a conference to any correspondent who wants it, regardless of the country he represents or the language he speaks.

The Chinese Ambassador Foo Peng-sheung called on Byrnes today for the second time since the foreign ministers met.

The Secretary of State plans to return to the United States before going to London for the United Nations meeting January 10.

Meet At 4 P.M.

As messages poured into the Kremlin from all over the world congratulating Stalin on his 66th birthday, the three foreign ministers got down to business again today at 4 P.M.

Stalin, tanned and rested after his long vacation, was reported to be spending the day at his desk in the Kremlin, according to his custom of pursuing his regular schedule on his birthday.

Big Three At Reception

The event, however, overshadowed the Big Three meeting, for Stalin in the eyes of millions of Soviet citizens is regarded as the greatest of all Russians.

The three Foreign Ministers turned back to their complicated problems after cutting short yesterday's session to attend a diplomatic reception given by the Soviet Foreign Commissar and Mme. Molotov.

REDS HANG 7 NAZIS

Moscow, Dec. 21 (A. P.).—Seven German SS (Elite Guard) members were hanged yesterday at Smolensk following their conviction as war criminals.

Three others received prison terms ranging from 12 to 20 years for atrocities committed against residents of Smolensk.

ALL KIN BUT UNCLE KILLED BY NAZIS

Warsaw, Dec. 13 (By Mail (A. P.).—Sgt. Meyer Klein of New York city came to Warsaw to find his father and mother and discovered that they and all his relatives in Poland except an uncle were killed during the German occupation.

Klein is a brother of Mrs. Naomi Warhaftag of 230 West 108th street. He was born in Warsaw in 1913 and lived here until the city fell in 1939. Then, with his sister, he fled into the part of Poland which Russia occupied, then to Lithuania, through Russia, Siberia and to the United States.

He joined the United States Army forty months ago and has been stationed recently in Germany. He said he had learned that his father, mother and grandparents were gassed in the Treblinka Concentration Camp. He said all other relatives on both sides of the family were wiped out except the uncle who escaped to Russia and joined the Polish Army. Klein will return soon to New York. He has seventy-five discharge points.

UNRRA Gives Oil to Poles.

Warsaw, Dec. 21 (A. P.).—The Polish Press Agency said today that UNRRA will ship 157,000 tons of oil products to Poland in 1946.

Honor for Air Force Unit

BRUSSELS, Belgium, Dec. 21 (AP).—The Belgian Croix de Guerre will be received tomorrow by the 9th Tactical Command of the 9th Air Force, constituting one of the largest mass decorations in history. The ceremony will commemorate the air attack last December on Nazi armored columns which had broken through the Ardennes.

Czechs See Two Of Neighbors After Land

Prague, Dec. 21 (AP)—Foreign Minister Jan Masaryk expressed impatience with Poland and Hungary before the Foreign Affairs Committee of Parliament today and declared emphatically that Czechoslovakia would cede no territory to either country.

He disclosed, however, that Czechoslovakia had sent a note to Poland November 5 suggesting readiness to discuss any subject except cession of territory.

Masaryk declared certain acts on the part of the Poles, including what he said was the terrorizing of the Czech population on former German territory, the distribution of inflammatory anti-Czech pamphlets and the continuing campaign of Katowice radio could only be regarded as an effort to force Czechoslovakia to negotiate on giving up Cieszyn (Teschen).

Hints At Czech Demands

He declared the Czech attitude was that the border fixed in 1920 was not to be changed in that area, but he intimated that Czechoslovakia might have some territorial demands of her own in the Glatz (Kladsko) and Hlubcicko areas. These indentations in the northern frontier are former German territory now occupied by Poland.

As to Hungary, Masaryk declared Hungary had not met a single obligation toward Czechoslovakia in the matter of reparations or restitution as adjusted by the Russian-Hungarian armistice.

Excluding unwanted Hungarians from Czechoslovakia is a definite policy that will not be solved by giving Hungary some Slovak territory on which these Hungarians live, he said.

Iran Crisis Deepens; Minister Hangs On

TEHRAN, Dec. 21 (AP).—Fale Fahimi refused today to accep dismissal from his post as Ministe of the Interior in Iran's politica crisis engendered by the recen declaration of Soviet-occupie Azerbaijan Province that it ha set itself up as an autonomou state.

Fahimi said in a statement that under the constitution he could not be replaced unless he resigned. Appointment of Allahy Saleh, a former embassy employee at Washington, in Fahimi's place had been announced by Premier Ebraham Hakimi yesterday.

The full political purport of the controversy was expected to become clearer when Parliament convenes tomorrow. Premier Hakimi's supporters yesterday shouted down a proposal for changes in the constitution to permit social reforms and negotiations with the Azerbaijan regime. The proposal, in effect, would have recognized the autonomy of Azerbaijan.

Two High British Officers Pay Batavia Brief Visit

BATAVIA, Java, Dec. 21.—(AP) Two British officers commanding the ground and air forces of the Southeast Asia command paid a brief visit to Batavia on an undisclosed mission today while nine British planes spearheaded continuing military action against Indonesian forces.

Lt. Gen. Sir Miles C. Dempsey, commanding ground forces in Southeast Asia, and Air Chief Marshal Keith Park, chief Allied air officer, flew here for a visit lasting several hours.

There was immediate speculation that they may have discussed with Lt. Gen. Sir Philip Christison, Allied commander in the Netherlands East Indies, the Singapore decisions by which the British reportedly would bring in all forces needed to restore order in Java.

(In London, an informed source said the project to use more armed forces in Java was being reviewed by Prime Minister Attlee and his cabinet. He said the Singapore decisions were understood to have been reached on a purely military basis, without regard to political consequences.

Plans London Conference

(Dr. Hubertus Van Hook, acting governor-general of the Netherlands East Indies, is scheduled to confer soon with British government officials in London, and a final decision on using more forces may be deferred until after that conference, he added.

(This source said that for political reasons, and because increased military commitments in Java would further involve the Royal Navy and air force, the whole matter was referred to Attlee. There has been criticism at home of British casualties in Java, last estimated at nearly 1,200.

(J.H.A. Logemann, minister of overseas territories, told the Dutch parliament today that "full use" would be made of Netherlands troops in the Netherlands Indies, the Dutch news agency Aneta said.

(Earlier Aneta reported from Singapore the arrival of several thousand Dutch marines off the Malayan coast. They were trained in the United States.)

Meanwhile, only scattered military action was reported in Java today.

Nine British planes based in Batavia blasted Indonesian roadblocks and strongpoints in the Bandoeng area in order to assist ground forces advancing along the road east of the Java summer capital, 75 miles southeast of Batavia.

Aneta said that representatives of 15,000 Chinese in the Bandoeng area complained that an average of six Chinese were being kidnaped daily by members of Pemoeda, an Indonesian youth organization.

The bodies of 12 persons, believed to have been Eurasians, were found in the Bandoeng area, it added.

One officer and one Indian soldier was killed and three Indians wounded while clearing roadblocks south of Semarang, mid-Java port city, a British statement said.

Dempsey, Java Field Leader Confer

Batavia, Java, Dec. 21 (AP)—British Lieut. Gen. Sir Miles C. Dempsey and Air Chief Marshal Sir Keith Park made a flying visit to Batavia today as British forces campaigned against Indonesian troops east of Bandoeng, the summer capital.

Dempsey is the Allied ground forces commander and Park the chief Allied air officer for the Southeast Asia theater. They took off again only a few hours later and nothing authoritative could be learned about the purpose of their trip.

Speculation In Press

The Dutch news agency Aneta speculated that they were to discuss with Lieut. Gen. Sir Philip Christison, Allied commander in the Netherlands Indies, the decisions reached at the recent conference of British and Dutch leaders in Singapore.

In London an unofficial source said that the British military decisions at Singapore are being reviewed by Prime Minister Attlee and his Cabinet.

[The final decision, according to available information, probably will be deferred until after conferences of British leaders in London with H. J. Van Mook, acting governor general of the Netherlands Indies.]

High sources in Batavia said December 8 that the British had decided to move in whatever reinforcements were necessary to restore order and guarantee Dutch sovereignty in the East Indies.

Roadblocks Blasted

[J. H. A. Logemann, Netherlands Minister for Overseas Territory, told the lower house of the Dutch Parliament at The Hague today that full use will be made of Netherlands troops in the islands.]

Meanwhile, nine Batavia-based RAF planes blasted roadblocks and Nationalist strongpoints east of Bandoeng to clear the line of march for British ground troops.

One pilot said that the planes fired rockets and dropped bombs which "obliterated" all trouble spots.

Two Are Killed

A British press release said that fighting continued south of Semarang, and that one officer and one Indian were killed. One man was wounded in a minor engagement during a routine search of houses in the area of Soerabaja, the release said.

(Aneta said in a dispatch from Singapore that several thousand Dutch marines trained in the United States had arrived today off the Malayan coast aboard the Dutch steamer Noordam.)

Landing Reported

A Netherlands naval communiqué said that Indonesians from Java had landed on Billiton Island, 200 miles north of Batavia. Other Indonesians were reported to have hoisted the red and white banner of the unrecognized Indonesian republic in Dutch Borneo, about 150 miles inland from Balikpapen.

Aneta said representatives of 15,000 Chinese in the Bandoeng area had protested to authorities that an average of six Chinese were being kidnapped daily by members of Pemoeda, the Indonesian extremist youth organization.

Written Offer Is Due From China Reds

Chungking, Dec. 21 (AP)—A Chinese Communist spokesman at Chungking today asserted that his party would put officially into writing its proposal for an immediate, unconditional armistice in China's internal war, with both sides "frozen" in their present positions.

His assertion followed by Government comments that the proposal was merely "propaganda" because it had been made verbally at a social function.

The Red spokesman, voicing surprise at this, declared that Gen. Chou En-lai, of the Chinese Red delegation, had formally requested that the truce proposal be forwarded to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek. Chou made the proposal to Shao Li-tzu, member of the Government delegation to the forthcoming unity conference.

"Want An Armistice"

"We want an armistice," the Communist spokesman said. "We considered our proposal as official and formal; but as the Government wants it in writing, we are going to oblige."

The verbal proposal was announced by Communists at the very moment General Marshall, the peacemaker, stepped from his plane at Shanghai yesterday, and there were indications that both sides are prepared to make genuine concessions in efforts to end the strife.

A Government spokesman acknowledged today that if the Reds' truce offer were put into writing "it would be consdiered in a different light," and recalled that as long ago as last October 31 the Government had proposed cessation of hostilities.

Reply Of November 8

Communists replied November 8, he said, asking that the Government order its forces to "cease attack," but not mentioning Communist operations.

Fighting currently is raging on, "particularly fierce and heavy," in the North China border region of Hopeh, Chahar and Jehol provinces, a Red spokesman asserted.

From Shanghai, Lieut. Albert C. Wedemeyer, United States commander in China, meanwhile issued a flat denial of Chinese Communist charges that American planes had strafed trains and villages in their sectors of North China in November and December.

Greetings To Stalin

Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, in Nanking to meet General Marshall, announced he had sent birthday greetings to Generalissimo Stalin:

"On this occasion of your birthday anniversary I extend your excellency on behalf of the Chinese Government and people my warmest congratulations and best wishes for your good health and happiness."

Chiang Greets Marshall Upon Arrival at Nanking

By Richard Cushing

NANKING, Dc. 21. (AP)—Gen. George C. Marshall arrived here today by plane from Shanghai and was warmly greeted at the airport by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, who cast protocol aside to welcome in person the special American envoy.

NANKING, Dec. 21.—(AP) Gen. George C. Marshall arrived here today by plane from Shanghai and was warmly greeted at the airport by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, who cast protocol aside to welcome in person the special American envoy.

The two men and Madame Chiang left at once for the Generalissimo's official residence, to begin talks which may vitally influence strife-torn China's hopes of internal peace and unity.

They clasped hands on Nanking's dusty, windswept airfield at a moment when all China and a large part of the Orient watched tensely for signs that Marshall's mission might bring an end to the country's undeclared civil war.

Gesture of Friendship

Chiang's presence at the airport in itself was regarded as a significant gesture of friendship for the United States. According to protocol in such matters the Generalissimo would have awaited Marshall at his official residence inside the walled city.

"Tell him I am deeply honored," Marshall said to Chiang's personal chief-of-staff, Gen. Shang Chen, who was acting as interpreter.

Chiang replied simply:

"I welcome you to Nanking."

The two men met for the first time since the Cairo conference in 1943.

The Chiang-Marshall talks were expected to cover a wide range of topics, most pressing of which were the question of halting internal hostilities and the possible formation of a coalition government taking in all major political groups.

A formal dinner in Marshall's honor was scheduled for tonight.

The American envoy's plane was trailed out of Shanghai by a transport carrying more than 30 correspondents and photographers.

Lull In Fighting

Meanwhile, Associated Press Correspondent Fred Hampson reported from Shanghai that the continued lull on the North China military situation was regarded as at least partly attributable to Marshall's arrival in the country. The conflicting factions in the undeclared civil war seemed to be marking time, he said, while wait-

...s to see what the American envoy might accomplish.

In Chungking a Chinese Communist spokesman reiterated his party's demand for an immediate cessation of fighting, and said the Communist proposal for an unconditional armistice, with both sides "frozen" in their present position, would be officially put into writing.

The proposal originally was announced yesterday, simultaneously with General Marshall's arrival in Shanghai, but drew a government retort that the offer was merely "propaganda," since it had been made verbally.

Today a government spokesman acknowledged that if the truce offer were put into writing "it would be considered in a different light."

The talk in Chungking of a truce, as well as the hopes expressed in both Communist and Central government quarters that Marshall's mission might result in peace, indicated both sides were inclined to make concessions for the sake of a genuine settlement.

urged him to help Choina solve the Manchurian problem.

More optimistically, the National Herald, mouthpiece of the Chinese Foreign Office, said that General Marshall is "marked out to be the harbinger of a new era of tranquility and peace in the Far East."

It expressed hope that the Foreign Ministers' Conference in Moscow would effect a mutually satisfactory "arrangement" concerning the Far East.

Communist Viewpoint

The Communist New China Daily News welcomed Marshall's arrival with the hope that American forces in China would complete promptly the disarmament and repatriation of Japanese. This has not been done "wholeheartedly" in the past, the paper added, asserting that some American forces have been "giving military assistance to the Kuomintang (National party)."

"This erroneous conduct of American troops has stained the honor of the United States and

U.S. Offers Australia Air Pact

Report Reciprocal Landing Rights Proposed for Pacific Lines

SYDNEY, Australia, Dec. 21 (AP).—"The Sydney Morning Herald" reported today that the United States has proposed to Australia an air transport agreement providing for reciprocal landing rights in trans-Pacific service. Under the proposal American commercial planes could land in Australia and its territories while Australian planes could use airports at San Francisco and Honolulu, the newspaper said.

The newspaper added that it was believed a similar offer had been made to New Zealand for a distinct service between New Zealand and the United States.

Hokkaido." He said he obtained his information "from a reliable and honest source and I still consider it both reliable and honest.")

MacArthur's denial of Tighe's reports that he did not want Russian troops in Hokkaido, and that he threatened to resign rather than permit it, was made in a statement issued by MacArthur's press relations office. The statement said Tighe's reports had "absolutely no basis in fact" and added:

To See Things Through

"For the second time in recent weeks it becomes necessary for me to deny the allegation that I have threatened to resign. I am here to serve and not hinder or obstruct the American government. It is my full purpose to see the thing through. The question of Russian participation in the occupation is a matter for other decision than my own."

Tighe's statement in a Thursday

With Russia

Tokyo, Dec. 21 (AP)—General MacArthur today denied a broadcast report that his headquarters had become embroiled in arguments with the Russians over assignment of Soviet occupation troops to Japan and that MacArthur had threatened to resign.

"I am here to serve and not to hinder or obstruct American Government," the supreme commander of the Allied powers said in a statement issued by his press relations office.

"It is my full purpose to see the thing through. The question of Russian participation in the occupation is a matter for other decision than my own."

"No Basis For Report"

The statement said that the broadcast report, "purported to have been made by Larry Tighe of the American Broadcasting Corporation, has absolutely no basis in fact."

It concluded:

"If Tighe made the statement he is alleged to have broadcast from Tokyo, someone must have been feeding him a funny type of 'hooch' being peddled around Tokyo on the black market."

(Taking to the air after issuance of the statement, Tighe said, "I reaffirm the story which I previously broadcast that the express desire of the commander of this area is that the Russian troops not be allowed to take over the Japanese island of Hokkaido.")

Reply Held Hardly Fitting

(Tighe's reply, monitored in San Francisco by ABC, added:

"Further, the supreme commander's claim that if I made such statements I must have been full of Tokyo black market hooch is inaccurate in the first place but—and this is more important—hardly fitting in a discussion of a subject that concerns the very life of the United Nations Organization." Tighe said he received his information "from a reliable and honest source and I still consider it both reliable and honest.")

Three Reports

Tighe, in the broadcast which drew the headquarters denial statement, set forth these reports:

1. Russia wanted to send in an army of occupation to Japan; MacArthur insisted on only a division.

2. Russia wanted to occupy the northern island of Hokkaido, which is nearest Sibera; MacArthur suggested Kyushu, leaving American forces on Honshu and Hokkaido in between the Russians and Siberia.

3. MacArthur reportedly told the United States State Department he would resign rather than allow Russia any further participation on occupation affairs.

No Word In D.C.

Yesterday in Washington, Tighe's broadcast report was called to the attention of President Truman, who told his news conference neither he nor the War Department had received any such word from MacArthur. The State Department said it had not heard of reported differences between MacArthur and the Russians.

MacArthur's officers implementing his occupation program came up today with two charges of deception against the Japanese.

Col. Crawford F. Sams, chief of the public health and welfare section, said Japanese Government officials had misrepresented the country's food problems in an attempt to obtain American supplies.

"No Danger Of Starvation"

Sams asserted the danger of starvation in Japan during this winter "does not now exist."

Meanwhile, United States 6th Army Headquarters said 24th Division patrols on the southern island of Shikoku have "discovered further evidence that Japanese military equipment is being concealed in spite of repeated demands that it be reported."

Huge concrete pillboxes, previously unreported, were found along the coast together with cleverly concealed gun emplacements and stores of war matériel.

Chinese Press Gloomy On What U.S. Can Do

Chungking, Dec. 21 (AP)—The first flash of enthusiasm with which the local Chinese press greeted news that General Marshall would come to China turned to melancholy reflection today, after his actual arrival.

Ta King Pao remarked gloomily that "our international position has sunk lower and lower. At Moscow, other powers are discussing our problems. We have been given 'friendly advice.' We should try to solve our own internal problems ourselves and thus preclude the possibility in the future of such friendly advice or even friendly intervention."

Wants No "Interference"

Said the World Daily News: "We hope that the United States won't interfere in China's internal affairs or act as judge. However, as America is going to have a say, we hope she will act as a wise friend and in a spirit of fair play urge both sides to walk on the road to peace and unity."

The Catholic newspaper Social Welfare expressed the hope that Marshall would not be influenced by "Communist propaganda." It

...the United States and jeopardized Sino-American friendship. We hope that General Marshall will stop this phenomenon at once," the News added.

BARBEY TRANSFERRED

Shanghai, Dec. 21 (A. P.).—Vice-Admiral Daniel E. Barbey, Commander of the United States Seventh Fleet, announced today that he has been named Commander of Atlantic Amphibious Forces and will leave Shanghai early in January. Admiral C. M. Cook will succeed him as Commander of the Seventh Fleet.

Barbey added that about December 22 the famed Seventh Amphibious Force, which, under his command, landed approximately 1,000,000 men in nearly sixty wartime invasions, will go out of existence. It will cease to exist, he said, when ships of the old Seventh Amphibious Force pass through the Panama Canal into the Atlantic Amphibious Force.

Triple Denial Issued By Gen. MacArthur

TOKYO, Dec. 21. (AP)—A triple denial was issued today by General MacArthur's headquarters to broadcast statements that he opposed use of Russian occupation troops, halted the sailing of Australian occupation force for Japan and threatened to resign.

Touched Off By Broadcasts

The denials were touched off by broadcasts made from Tokyo by Larry Tighe of the American Broadcasting Corporation.

MacArthur branded Tighe's statements as having "absolutely no basis in fact" and one was dismissed with the terse comment by a MacArthur spokesman that it was an "unmitigated falsehood."

(After issuance of the denials Tighe broadcast a reaffirmation of his previous statement that MacArthur's express desire is "that the Russian troops not be allowed to take over the Japanese island of

M'Arthur Denies Report Of Tiff

Fend For Themselves.

By Russell Brines

TOKYO, Dec. 21. (AP)—General MacArthur has completed the framework of a new Japan; there will be no more major Allied directives.

Must Assimilate Changes

Allied headquarters, announcing today the achievement of this goal, said that there would be no more basic constructive changes, adding: "The problem of the state" largely upon the ability of the fallen nation to assimilate the ordered changes.

A recent directive abolishing state shintoism completed the series of basic changes in Japan, said the statement, adding: "Further directives most probably will be limited to those necessary to secure full understanding and compliance with basic premises already set forth."

Observing that Japan's main obstacle is "a lack of sufficient quali fied leaders," the statement said political power in the future will be won by the party "which sponsors the greatest implementation to give effect to laws and constitutional changes," creating a government envisaged by the Potsdam declaration and MacArthur directives.

Average Jap Is Anxious

"The changes as directed are expected to be assimilated rapidly, because it has been shown that the average Japanese is very anxious to be out from under the yoke of militarism," headquarters said.

Directives issued thus far, the statement continued, "effect the removal of those restrictive laws and regulations which study has revealed have been a major means where—by control and direction—the Japanese people had been formed into an aggressor nation.

"The war criminal suspects who have been placed in custody constituted the directing genii that formerly guided, shaped and provided leadership to run the government. We now must provide leadership, to cultivate new leadership and direct education x x x."

That education and guidance "must be the main part of the program from here on, because people who have lived their lives by the sword need help and leadership to adjust themselves to freedom," the statement added.

The Japanese people "must digest the organic changes in their government structure as it has been ordered and make them effective in the framework of their new government."

MacArthur's headquarters said that development of new Japanese leaders was imperative because in the past "liberal leaders and educators have never been allowed to grow or live in the nation."

HOMESICKNESS HITS GI'S YULE IN TOKYO

Planned Feasts and Frolics Pale Before Thoughts of Real 'Stateside' Holiday

TOKYO, Dec. 21 (AP)—It is the traditional thing to write that everything is set to give the American soldier in foreign lands a real Stateside Christmas—but it isn't so.

In 1942 it was "just a touch" of Christmas at Buna, in New Guinea, where the Red Cross distributed candy, cigarettes and cookies. But whoever heard of a Christmas where the temperature was 100 degrees and it was a question whether one would live until night?

In 1943 it was Christmas on the way to Cape Gloucester, New Britain. There was roast beef, and a few of the boys tried singing Christmas carols—but it takes more than that to make a Stateside Christmas.

In 1944 it was on Leyte, in the Philippines, and Japanese bombers came over again and it rained. Mud was deep and Christmas presents did not come.

Today press relations officers and others are talking about that old "Stateside Christmas" in Japan. They issued a ten-page handout, and they told about all the trimmings for a real Christmas. Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters has a huge sign blazing forth "Merry Xmas," but on the other side is Emperor Hirohito's Palace.

The handout says that the once-great city of Osaka is ringing with "Jingle Bells" and "A White Christmas" from loudspeakers. They are the newest that science has contrived, and the Signal Company of the Ninety-eighth Division put them up. But back in Salt Lake City there's a little store that plays Christmas hymns from phonograph records—and it's ten times as Christmasy as anything here.

There will be church services everywhere in Japan. Religious services will be held on Christmas Eve and Christmas Day at the United States Eighth Army Headquarters chapel in Yokohama.

And there will be a big dinner. Col. L. E. Lichtenwalter, Quartermaster, promised one that would match anything back home, with one and a half pounds of turkey apiece, tomato juice, giblet gravy, dressing, cranberry sauce, whipped potatoes, string beans, Waldorf salad, biscuits, mince pie, cheese, fruit cake, figs, dates, candy, mixed nuts and coffee.

But there are a lot of new boys out here, and turkey can taste like sawdust in the mouth of a man who is homesick.

There will be plenty of shows—"Nippon Fantasies" at the Fourth Replacement Depot at Zama and the GI show "All for Fun" at the Meiji building in Tokyo for Far East Air Forces personnel. But there is not a man who wouldn't rather see the little Christmas play in his home-town church.

The handout says that the day will be unique, because for the first time in history vast numbers of American troops will celebrate the birth of Christ while they are at peace and before the wondering eyes of non-Christian people. That is true.

It also says that for the first time thousands of gay Christmas decorations like those which in years past adorned Christmas trees in the United States and bore the label "made in Japan" will be used this year in Japan. That's true too.

And it adds that the "thoughts of most will turn Stateside." That is understatement.

Yoshida Named To House of Peers

Tokyo, Dec. 21 (A. P.).—Foreign Minister Shigeru Yoshida heads eight commoners appointed today to the House of Peers by Imperial nomination for "outstanding service to the State." Tsunego Baba, new president of the newspaper Yomiuri Hocki, also was named.

The appointments carry a lifetime membership in the House of Peers.

Shinto Services Held For Konoye

Tokyo, Dec. 21 (AP)—Shinto funeral services were conducted today for Prince Fumimaro Konoye, pre-Pearl Harbor premier of Japan, with representatives of the Imperial household and several Cabinet ministers attending.

Konoye committed suicide Sunday to escape trial as a war criminal.

The newspaper Asahi commented that the funeral was smaller than normally would be expected for a former premier.

"It was a lonely one," the paper added.

Branches of "a sacred tree," granted by the Emperor, the Empress and the Empress Dowager, hung before the altar during the quiet ceremony in Tokyo's Arisugawa Park.

Konoye's Proposals Revealed

TOKYO, Dec. 21 (AP).—The newspaper "Mainichi" reported today that a constitutional revision plan submitted to the throne by the late Prince Fumimaro Konoye proposed maintaining the emperor's political authority, but with limitations.

The long draft suggested retention of the emperor's sovereignty and that it be exercised "with the assistance of all imperial subjects." Another suggestion was that "the rights to declare war, conclude peace and negotiate treaties should receive approval of the Diet," heretofore unnecessary.

Konoye submitted the outline Nov. 22, then resigned his temporary assignment with the office of lord keeper of the privy seal. He committed suicide Sunday.

Jap Shot In Mob Storming Yank Camp

Tokyo, Dec. 21 (AP)—Sixth Army headquarters said today a 24th Division guard had shot and fatally wounded a Japanese in halting 1,000 civilian men and women storming a bivouac area as American troops evacuated a camp site near Matsuyama.

The crowd, gathered to search for abandoned scraps, failed to observe warning signs or several shots fired into the ground.

The wounded man, shot in the leg, fled and bled to death before medical aid could be given.

Division officials said Japanese civilians repeatedly had been warned against entering military areas and that Yanks "will continue to protect American lives and property."

Enemy Officer Absolves Allies of Any Violation of Rules

TOKYO, Dec. 21 (AP).—Japan lost nineteen hospital ships during the war, but none through Allied violation of the rules of warfare, Major Kei Shinohara told the Kyodo News Agency today.

Shinohara, repatriated former chief of a hospital transport, said Japanese authorities failed to identify properly hospital ships, refused to transmit their names to the Allies, insisted upon stationing hospital ships among combat vessels in action, and often used them as armed transports.

Motion For Acquittal Of Tsuchiya Dismissed

Yokohama, Dec. 21 (AP)—A United States military commission trying "Little Glass Eye" Tatsuo Tsuchiya on charges of killing an American prisoner of war today denied a defense motion to acquit the former guard.

The commission refused also to dismiss the count on which the prosecution is basing its request for the death penalty.

Two other specifications filed against Tsuchiya were dismissed. They charged him with beating Lieut. Col. Allan M. Cory, of Tulsa, Okla., and of withholding and misusing Red Cross supplies. Hearsay evidence and lack of evidence brought the dismissals.

Allowed to stand was the charge that Tsuchiya beat to death Pfc. Robert Gordon Teas, of Streator, Illinois.

The defense moves followed completion of the prosecution's case earlier today.

New Witnesses Called

American attorneys defending the impassive Japanese called new witnesses to support his contention of innocence—among them Capt. Sukeo Nakajima, a war-crimes suspect himself.

Tsuchiya was described as "very gentle and considerate" with Allied prisoners by Nakajima, former commandant of Mitsushima prison camp where the guard was alleged to have participated in Teas's slaying.

Depositions Taken

Depositions from prosecution witnesses, former American prisoners of war at the camp, previously recounted repeated and merciless beatings of the Illinois soldier by Tsuchiya and a guard called "Mushmouth."

Nakajima bowed low before the commission before beginning his testimony, which was translated by Tsutomu Matsumoto, of Minneapolis, Minn. The defense witness kept his eyes down, answered questions loudly.

Nakajima said Tsuchiya lost an eye in battle.

Jap To Be Tried On Torture Charges

Manila, Dec. 21 (AP)—Lieut. Col. Seichi Ohta, former chief of the Japanese military police in the Philippines, was arraigned today on charges of permitting torture of Americans and Filipinos, and his trial was set for January 3.

Ohta is accused of responsibility for the slaying of Dr. Clarence Kuangson Young, Chinese consul general; Consul Kai Yien-mok, and six members of the consulate staff, and of permitting his command to subject civilians and prisoners of war to "the most inhuman conditions" at Fort Santiago in Manila.

PANAMA CITY, Dec. 22 (Saturday), (AP).—At least four persons were killed and one wounded early today in a short-lived revolutionary attempt, which a government statement charged was carried out by followers of former President Arnulfo Arias.

The attempt was made at Colon where a small band of armed men tried to seize the national police station in a midnight attack.

An official announcement said the dead included one police officer and "three or four of the attackers." Another police officer was wounded.

Mexico Charge Declared Unfounded

Mexico City, Dec. 21 (AP)—Foreign Minister Francisco Castillo Najera said yesterday that Labor Leader Vincente Lombardo Toledano had failed to substantiate his charges that United States "imperialists" were passing weapons across the border to foment a revolution.

As a result, the Foreign Minister said, the Mexican Government would take no further cognizance of the charges. The War Department also said Lombardo Toledano's assertion was apparently without foundation.

U.E.W. LEADERS DESCRIBE OFFER AS 'INADEQUATE'

Increase Stipulates Workers Agree to Ban Obstacles to Production.

REFUSAL IS PROMPT

Company Told Workers Are Ready to Resume Negotiations at Once.

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—(AP) The negotiating committee of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers Union of America, (C.I.O.) tonight rejected as "grossly inadequate" a proposal by the General Electric company for a 10 per cent wage increase for 89,000 U.E.W. members.

General Electric offered the increase in pay earlier today with the stipulation that the union agree not to impose limitations on or obstacles to increased production by its members.

Voted for Strike

The U.E.W. last week voted five to one to strike after Jan. 1 in plants of General Electric, Westinghouse and General Motors in support of a $2-a-day pay boost, approximately 30 per cent.

It recently turned down a General Motors offer of a 13 1-2 cent-an-hour pay increase.

Joseph Dermody, international representative of the U.E.W., said the negotiating committee for General Electric locals had notified E. D. Spicer, vice president of the company, of the rejection of the 10 per cent pay hike offer.

In notifying Spicer of the rejection, the union committee said the proposed boost was "grossly inadequate to the needs of GE employes, whose earnings have been cut as much as 50 per cent."

After asserting the offer was "substantially less than the offer of 13.5 cents an hour, with starting and minimum job rates for men and women of 80 and 90 cents," the committee declared:

"Your offer is deliberately inadequate. It is surrounded by conditions which you knew and intended should insure its rejection. You have not yet, after many months of negotiations and after a strike vote of your employes, commenced to bargain in good faith."

The committee, in the letter to Spicer rejecting the wage increase, said:

"Your offer was preceded by sudden notice of cancellation of the union contract. It is thus made subject to your unlimited and unqualified right to arbitrary hiring and firing and the complete destruction of the job security of your employes.

"Your offer is conditioned upon the acceptance by this union of arbitrary, unlimited speedup and cutting of wage rates.

"Your offer of a percentage increase would destroy the practice, established in this industry through collective bargaining, of straight cents per hour increases."

Called Abrupt Ultimatum

The union committee described the proposal as being "in the form of an abrupt ultimatum requiring unqualified acceptance within two weeks" and declared it would deprive the workers of the benefits of retroactivity.

The letter said the union was ready to resume negotiations "immediately upon the decision of your company to make an unconditional and adequate offer for a cents-per-hour wage and salary increase."

Charles E. Wilson, General Electric Co president, announced that the company had offered a 10 per cent wage increase to unionized employes; non-union employes will be given a 10 per cent increase Jan. 1 and that salaried employes earning between $3,000 and $5,000 would receive $300 annual increases.

Definite and proposed increases for the groups would total about $25,700,000 annually for approximately 124,000 employes.

The increase is conditioned upon agreement by the United Electric, Radio and Machine Workers Union (CIO) not to impose limitations on or obstables to increased production by its members, Wilson said.

G-M Showdown on Profits Avoided by Fact-Finders

Hearing Recesses Urging Company, Strikers Resume Collective Bargaining.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21—(AP) Governmental fact-finders averted any showdown with General Motors over examination of profits tonight by recessing hearings in the wage strike until Dec. 28 and urging the company and the union to renew collective bargaining immediately.

The company yesterday threatened to bolt the hearing if its profits were taken into consideration in connection with the C.I.O. union's demand for a 30 per cent wage increase. But President Truman ruled that ability to pay is a "relevant" factor in wages cases.

Session Is Short

Chairman Lloyd K. Garrison of the fact-finding board reconvened its hearing today only long enough to read a statement which said that, if and when the hearings are resumed, the board would regard the company's ability to pay as one factor in determining any wage adjustment. The statement said developments would determine whether the board would ask the company to submit its books.

Before reading the statement, Garrison announced that he was "not going to call upon" the union or company to make any comment on it. After reading it, he adjourned the session immediately.

Earlier in the day the oil-wage fact-finding board had recessed until Jan. 7 to permit direct negotiations between the oil companies and the C.I.O. Oil Workers union. There were indications that settlement of the union's 30 per cent wage increase demand on a plant-by-plant basis, might be imminent.

Both developments followed an administration announcement which made prices as well as profits a matter for fact-finding boards to consider and required the boards themselves to determine whether their wage increase recommendations would justify companies in seeking price increases.

A fact-finding board's decision that a wage increase would justify a price boost would not automatically win one for a manufacturer. He still would have to convince the stabilization board and then the OPA. But the board's findings could be expected to carry some weight with these agencies.

Not Necessarily Binding

A fact-finding board's recommendation for a wage increase without a higher price would not necessarily be binding on the manufacturer. Neither employer nor union is legally bound to accept any findings by such a board, and the legislation proposed by President Truman carries no legal compulsion on this score.

But once an employer and a union accept a board recommendation which vetoes any price increase, then the employer would be foreclosed from seeking any price relief for a six-month period—unless the wage boost was ok'd by the wage stabilization board.

Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach, implementing President Truman's statement yesterday that company earnings were relevant in wage disputes, issued a policy statement to fact-finders. He said they might propose:

1. Wage increases which meant no advance in prices;

2. Wage increases which employers could use as a basis for seeking price relief.

The board themselves, Schwellenbach declared, must determine on which basis any given wage decision is made.

He specifically charged the boards with satisfying themselves as to the ability of an employer to absorb recommended wage increases. Should an employer fail to submit evidence on his ability or inability to pay, the policy statement left a fact-finding board "free to draw such inferences as it may choose."

If price relief becomes a factor in the wage investigation, Schwellenbach directed that the fact-finders' wage decision first be approved by the government wage stabilization board. Where necessary, a board may recommend to the stabilization administrator that his standards for approving wage increases for price purposes be broadened, Schwellenbach said.

Urge Prompt Action

If wage increases are recommended without question of any price relief, the fact-finders may urge an employer to make them effective immediately.

In the "no-price-increases" cases, the policy specifies that:

"To the extent necessary to satisfy itself that the employers are in a position to absorb a recommended increase, the panel must necessarily inquire into the issue of the employers' ability to pay. Ability to pay is a limitation on and does not necessarily constitute a measure of the amount of a fair increase."

The policy would permit a board to inquire into the profits and earnings position of an employer, when necessary, as well as into production and other costs when relevant.

The statement by Schwellenbach resulted primarily from a dispute which developed in the oil hearing over property of using prices and profits in determining wage issues. Although it was handed to the oil board, it was regarded as establishing policy for all federal fact-finding panels.

'HOLIDAY' FOR GM PICKETS

Yuletide Cessation Is Backed in Ranks of Strikers

DETROIT, Dec. 21 (AP)—A "pickets holiday" proposal for General Motors strikers during the Christmas period was gathering support today in the ranks of the CIO-United Auto Workers Union.

One Detroit local announced that it was withdrawing its pickets from factory gates on the West Side until Jan. 3 and a similar movement was reported from Lansing.

The automobile union, with 175,000 members idle, has been on strike against General Motors for a month.

Withdrawal of pickets might preclude for the time being further disputes between General Motors and the union over the corporation's charge of "illegal picketing."

Rules for Fact-Finding Board Inquiries

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21—In response to questions by the fact-finding panel in the oil dispute, Secretary Schwellenbach issued this statement outlining (1) rules for the conduct of the fact-finding hearing and (2) matters of policy:

I—Rules for the Conduct of the Hearing

A. Hearing to be public—A public hearing shall be conducted on the merits of the dispute, unless the parties agree to present their case in writing. The record made at such hearing shall include all documents, statements, exhibits and briefs, which may be submitted, together with the stenographic record. The parties shall have the right to attend the hearing with such persons as they desire, and the hearing shall be open to any other person who wishes to attend, including representatives of the press and radio. The panel shall have authority to make whatever reasonable rules are necessary for the conduct of an orderly public hearing. The panel may, with the consent of the parties, exclude persons other than the parties at any time when the expeditious settlement of the dispute so requires.

B. Participation by panel in the hearing—The panel may, on its own initiative, at such hearing, call witnesses and introduce documentary or other evidence, and may participate in the examination of witnesses for the purpose of expediting the hearing or eliciting material facts.

Hearings to Be Informal

C. Participation by parties in hearing—(1) The interested parties or their representatives shall be given reasonable opportunity; (a) to be present in person at every stage of the hearing; (b) to be represented adequately; (c) to present orally or otherwise any material evidence relevant to the issues; (d) to ask questions of the opposing party or a witness relating to evidence offered or statements made by the party or witness at the hearing, unless it is clear that such questions have no material bearing on the credibility of that party or witness or on the issues in the case; (e) to present to the panel oral or written argument on the issues.

D. Stenographic records—An official stenographic record of the proceedings shall be made. A copy of such record shall be available for inspection by the parties.

E. Rules of evidence—The hearing may be conducted informally. The receipt of evidence at the hearing need not be governed by the common law rules of evidence.

F. Facilities available to panel—The panel may during the proceedings consult with the office of the Secretary of Labor or his designated agents for the purpose of obtaining information pertaining to any wage or salary issue. (Such information may include information in the possession of other governmental agencies.)

The personnel and facilities of the Department shall be available to the panel upon request.

Subpoena Power Not Provided

G. Requests for the production of evidence—The panel does not have the power of subpoena. It may request the parties to produce any evidence it deems relevant to the issues but such evidence must be obtained upon the voluntary compliance of the parties.

H. Adjournment of hearing to permit direct negotiation—where, in the opinion of the panel, the parties should make further efforts to settle an issue by collective bargaining or, where the parties agree to do so, the panel may recess the hearing to allow the parties to resume direct negotiations for as long a period as they may mutually agree upon or until a date specified by the panel for reconvening of the hearing. Whenever possible the panel shall, at the time of the recess, notify the parties of the date when the panel will reconvene with the parties. If it is not possible to give such notice at the time of recess the parties shall be given at least five days' advance notice of this date of reconvening, unless the exigencies of the situation require shorter notice.

I. Settlement of issue by agreement between parties—If during the proceedings an agreement is reached between the parties with respect to the issues in dispute, they shall be requested to execute a statement in writing to that effect.

J. If during the proceedings a question arises as to the extent of the authority of the panel to inquire into the facts, or as to the interpretation of the order of the Secretary setting up the panel, the panel may recess the hearing and consult with the Secretary or his designated agent for the purpose of obtaining clarification.

K. Findings of fact and recommendations by the panel—1. After the conclusion of the hearing the panel shall submit to the Secretary an original and six copies of its findings of fact and recommendations, unless the parties in the meantime have settled the dispute or agreed to submit it to arbitration.

2. The time for filing findings of fact and recommendations may not be extended except upon consent of the Secretary.

II—Statement of Policy

1. The panel will not limit itself to determining what wage increases, if any, are approvable under the criteria set forth in Executive Order 9651. It will consider also the propriety of wage increases in excess of the criteria under the Executive Order and the wage and salary regulations of the Stabilization Administrator.

2. The panel may recommend a wage increase on either of two bases:

(A) That the wage increase recommended is one which can be paid without any increase in existing price ceilings or in costs to the United States (irrespective as to whether it is approvable in part);

(B) That the wage increase recommended is, in its judgment, approvable under Executive Order 9651 and the wage and salary regulations of the Stabilization Administrator. That is, the increase is of a type which may be used as a basis for an increase in price ceilings or costs to the United States.

3. Increases under 2(A)—In excess of criteria in executive order

(A) If the panel recommends a wage increase on such a basis it may, without reference to governmental stabilization agencies, recommend that the employer place it into effect immediately. The acceptance of such a recommendation by an employer will amount to a waiver of any right to use the wage increase within a six-month period as a basis for seeking price relief so long as the increase has not been approved by the Wage Stabilization Board. An employer could, however, after putting the wage increase into effect still seek approval from the Wage Stabilization Board. If such approval were given, the employer could then use that approval as a basis for seeking price relief.

(B) If the panel recommends such an increase, it must satisfy itself that the employers are in a position to absorb the whole increase without any increase in price ceilings.

For example, if the panel should find that an increase of not more than 10 cents per hour could be absorbed without any increase in price ceilings and that a 5-cent increase would be approvable under Executive Order 9651, the panel may only recommend a 10-cent increase. It cannot properly recommend a 15-cent increase.

Panel May Inquire Into Profits

(C) To the extent necessary to satisfy itself that the employers are in a position to absorb a recommended increase, the panel must necessarily inquire into the issue of the employer's ability to pay. Ability to pay is a limitation on and does not necessarily constitute a measure of the amount of a fair increase.

(D) Evidence to be considered with regard to an employer's ability to pay—If employers do not contend that there is an inability to pay the requested wage increase, it is for the panel, nevertheless, to satisfy itself on the basis of evidence satisfactory to it whether any increase which it recommends is absorbable. The panel is free to draw such inferences as it may choose to draw from the employer's failure to produce evidence on this issue. It may, if it wishes, take the union's evidence and such evidence as the panel itself wishes to secure, or it may rely on the failure of the company to contest this issue as an establishment of the fact of ability to pay.

If the panel finds it necessary, in its judgment, to inquire into the issue of ability to pay wage increases without securing price increases, then it is to inquire into the profits and earnings position of the employer. Th panel may also inquire into production and other costs where relevant as well as other data bearing on the issue of ability to pay.

OPA Standards Not Sole Guide

In any such inquiry the panel should not be guided solely by the OPA's standards for authorizing price increases as a test of ability to pay. The OPA pricing standards were devised for a different purpose. Such standards may throw light on the question of the employer's ability to pay a wage increase under existing price ceilings, but they should not be used as a controlling test.

For example, the OPA price standards generally measure the need for price increases as a result of increased costs on the basis of whether or not the current earnings of the particular industry have fallen below its peacetime earnings position. If the pre-war position was very favorable, the industry may well be able to afford some temporary impairment of that position. If the peacetime earnings position protected by the pricing standards was a relatively unfavorable one, however, it might be unfair to require employers to absorb wage increases down to the point indicated by the applicable pricing standard.

The panel in recommending an increase in excess of the amount which would be approvable under the executive orders and the rules and regulations of the Stabilization Administrator may consider the fact that an employer is free after six months to seek price relief. It ought not, however, to recommend a wage increase which it believes will require the employer after six months to obtain price relief.

Limitations on Price Increases

4. Increases under 2 (B)—involving price relief—(A) If, during the proceeding, it appears that the question of an increase which may involve price relief is pertinent, the panel in recommending a wage increase on the basis that price relief may or will be necessary is limited to an increase not in excess of the amount approvable for price purposes by the Wage Stabilization Board or other designated wage or salary stabilization agency under the standards laid down in Executive Order 9651 and the wage and salary regulations of the Stabilization Administrator.

Any increase that may be recommended by the panel which is to be used as a basis for seeking price relief must receive the approval of the Wage Stabilization Board. The panel has two alternatives for dealing with this problem. It may secure informal advice through the Secretary's office as to the approvability of a proposed recommendation or the panel may condition its recommendation upon approval of the increase by the Wage Stabilization Board.

(B) If the panel limits its recommendation to a wage increase that is appropriate for price purposes, it may, but is not required to, recommend a wage increase up to the limit approvable under the criteria contained in Executive Order 9651.

(C) If the panel believes, after a consideration of the entire record, that the existing standards for approval of wage or salary increases for price purposes should be broadened, it is free to suggest to the Stabilization Administrator, through the Secretary of Labor, that he consider taking action in accordance with Section 302 (B) of the wage and salary stabilization regulations.

The panel would conform its final findings and recommendations with the action taken by the Stabilization Administrator.

STEEL WORKERS VOTE FOR STRIKE

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 21—(AP) Scattered returns from today's cleanup voting by 45,000 C.I.O. United Steelworkers showed more than five to one in favor of a strike to enforce demands for a $2-a-day pay boost.

Unofficial returns from the National Labor Relations board and other sources showed workers in 35 plants in four states voting 4,748 for and 910 against a strike.

Union leaders have already called a walkout of some 650,000 steelworkers for Jan. 14.

Today's votes, for employes of 145 firms in 15 states, were scheduled in response to petitions the union filed with the NLRB after the petitions for the gigantic steel vote of Nov. 28.

Returns from last month's balloting favored the strike by a five to one majority. The official NLRB tally showed 411,401 yes votes and 83,859 no votes.

The USW's 175-member wage policy committee met here subsequently and called a nationwide strike in the affected steel mills, aluminum plants and iron ore mines for next Jan. 14.

Apparently only two possibilities remained to avert a strike which would cut deep into the nation's reconversion schedules:

(1) Resumption of negotiations between the steel companies and the USW with eventual agreement on a new contract, or (2) Intervention by the government.

Lauded By Labor Dept. Aide, Ford Union Says

Detroit, Dec. 21 (AP)—The CIO United Auto Workers Union made public today a letter from a representative of the United States Department of Labor commending the union attitude in the contract negotiations with the Ford Motor Company.

Identity of the Labor Department correspondent was not divulged by the union, which demands a 30 per cent wage increase from Ford and other auto manufacturers, but he was reported close to Secretary Schwellenbach.

The letter, released through the union's public relations office, said the "national reaction" to the UAW-CIO's proposal for union responsibility to Ford was "very good."

"Fingers Crossed"

"I am keeping my fingers crossed in the hope that you can bring a rabbit out of the hat in the Ford situation," said the letter, addressed to Richard T. Leonard, the UAW-CIO's Ford director.

"I think I should tell you," it added, "that the national reaction to your proposal of union responsibility has been very good. Two or three people have informed me that it was well received in Congress and may have a substantial influence on pending anti-labor legislation dealing with that problem."

Secretary "Impressed"

The letter said Schwellenbach was "impressed by your able and statesmanlike approach to the problem he discussed with you." This presumably referred to Schwellenbach's recent visit to Detroit during which he met with UAW-CIO officials.

A major issue in the Ford-union negotiations, which have recessed until January 8, involves proposals from both sides for fines as penalties against leaders and participants in unauthorized strikes.

The UAW-CIO yesterday formally turned down a company wage increase offer based on a number of conditions, including a "company security" plan.

Phrases of "completely unacceptable" and totally inadequate" were typical of the union's latest reaction to the company's proposal that included an offer of a 12.4 wage rate increase.

Held Step Forward

In Washington, General Motors Corporation, which also is at loggerheads with the UAW over a 30 per cent increase, went into a huddle with the union to discuss resumption of collective bargaining on issues involved in the strike.

Leonard declared the union's position, when negotiations are resumed, will be that "we get down to the business of discussing the wage problem on its own merits and dispose of the subject before going into other matters."

The last Ford-UAW session until after the holidays was described by John Bugas, company industrial relations director, as "another step forward in our negotiations since it clarified completely the union's position."

Opposed By UAW

Bugas said the company had made it clear that any final settlement of the wage issue must depend upon "our ability to increase employé productivity and reach volume production."

Ford hinged its offer of a 15 cents-an-hour raise on production reaching 80,000 units monthly. This was coupled with other proposals and contentions, virtually all of which were opposed by the UAW.

GREYHOUND BALKS ON RETROACTIVITY

Rejects Condition Made by Schwellenbach to Start Work of Fact-Finders

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21 (AP)—The Pennsylvania and Central Greyhound bus companies refused today to make retroactive to Oct. 31 any pay increases that may be granted to their 4,000 striking employes.

This was one condition imposed by Secretary of Labor Lewis B. Schwellenbach as a prerequisite to the establishment of a fact-finding panel to investigate the fifty-one-day wage dispute that has affected bus transportation in eighteen eastern States.

Mr. Schwellenbach, in appointing a five-man fact-finding board in the dispute between the companies and the Amalgamated Street Railway and Motor Coach Employes, an affiliate of the American Federation of Labor, asked an immediate end of the strike, stipulated that any pay increases were to be made retroactive to Oct. 31 and requested the company to reinstate the strikers without penalty.

R. W. Budd, president of the Central Greyhound Lines, and S. R. Sundstrom, president of the Pennsylvania Greyhound Lines, accepted all of the Secretary's proposal except the retroactive condition.

The companies "cannot agree at this time" to that, they said in a telegram to Mr. Schwellenbach.

DEC 22 1945

The strike on the bus lines started on Oct. 31.

The union, in replying through A. L. Spradling, acting president, and Sam Berrong, secretary-treasurer, said: "It will be necessary for the employes to know, before they can reasonably be expected to resume work, that the companies have agreed to the conditions set forth in your order."

The union said that "as soon as these matters are cleared up, the question will be submitted at once to a vote of the membership with a recommendation that they accept the order and thereupon immediately terminate the work stoppage."

Conciliation Director Edgar L. Warren said he believed the difficulty over the retroactive provision could be overcome.

"Naturally, we're disappointed that we could not get this strike settled before Christmas to aid in transportating service men over the holidays," Mr. Warren added.

one, remarked that an "open break" existed between the President and Southern congressmen of his party. Others, who would not be quoted by name, said so too.

Republican senators, for their part, were "fairly well pleased" with the record of the session, both in what was and was not passed by congress." This was the report of Senator Taft (R-Ohio) after a meeting today of the Republican Steering committee which he heads.

Back in April on a warm day, congressmen had given thunderous applause to Mr. Truman when he first stood before his former colleagues as president and proposed to carry forward the policies of Franklin D. Roosevelt "with your help."

In the months that followed, congress ratified the United Nations charter and provided for this nation to play its part in the international organization. It enacted the Bretton Woods monetary pacts, and extended the reciprocal trade agreements. It continued the draft until May 15 and price controls until June. It cut income taxes. It empowered the President to reorganize federal agencies. It made new provisions for veterans.

of the session came he wrote congressmen that the bill they had framed could not "efficiently accomplish the purposes intended" and renewed his original request.

The President also asked for compulsory military training, for congressional pensions and pay rises, for a higher statutory minimum wage, and for an act by which the elected speaker of the house instead of the appointed secretary of state would succeed to the White House after the vice president in case of death.

Congress considered these proposals, some of them at length, but none was enacted.

Other presidential recommendations, on which congress perhaps did not have time to act at this session, included a compulsory "health insurance" program and machinery for domestic control of atomic energy. In addition there was the proposal to merge the War and Navy departments, on which the President officially spoke his mind only Wednesday in his tenth message to congress.

All these matters go over to the new session starting Jan. 14.

Congress Quits Until 1946 with Truman Proposals Pending

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21—(AP) The 79th congress closed its first session today—at 2:11 p. m. in the House and 3:47 p. m. in the Senate—with the summation of Speaker Rayburn that "we have a right to be proud of ourselves."

war and peace. But on many im-

The session wrote history in portant matters which President Truman urged, it did not write laws.

On one of these, in fact, the Senate was wrangling at the end. This was the proposal to make permanent the Fair Employment Practices Committee set up in wartime to police any discrimination against negroes and other minorities.

Senators Ball (R-Minn) and Chavez (D-NM) served notice that they would bring it up as soon as the second session opened Jan. 14. Senator Bilbo (D-Miss), who is ready to filibuster against it if necessary, said grimly: "The Lord willing, I'll be here."

In the absence of the legislation he had asked, Mr. Truman yesterday extended the committee's authority under the emergency wartime grant of power.

At the same time, the chief executive made plain his dissatisfaction with congress' handling of labor and employment bills.

Representative Gibson (D-Ga), for

It was a busy congress, and an inquiring one. It opened investigations of the Pearl Harbor attack, of atomic energy and many other matters. The Pearl Harbor inquiry, conducted by a joint committee of the Senate and House with all the stops out, continues into the second session—into the year of congressional elections.

But between the cherry buds of April and the snows now crusting the capitol, Mr. Truman recommended much other action which congress has not taken.

He wanted before Christmas a law which would authorize fact-finding boards to operate in vital labor disputes and empower them to dig out evidence by force of law, and which would forbid strikes while the boards deliberate. Only yesterday he emphasized again why he thought a law was necessary.

He wanted an act pledging the federal government to take steps for "full employment." As the end of June.

Blundered, Says Gibson

Mr. Truman's actions were termed " a political blunder by Representative Gibson (D., Ga.), who added:

"It was just like waving a red flag in our faces. He should have left well enough alone. Now we have an open break, just like with the late President Roosevelt."

Gibson and many other Southerners were aroused particularly by the FEPC directive. They have been constant critics of the agency and forced a cut in its funds last spring. They said the President's move to extend FEPC's wartime authority might prompt a new effort to abolish it. Bills are pending in both chambers to establish the agency on a permanent basis.

Wanted Control Till 1947

Large numbers of both Republicans and Democrats disagree with Mr. Truman about the employment service, which has been under Federal control since early in the war. The President first asked Congress to keep it under Government supervision until July, 1947, but later let it be known that July, 1946, would be acceptable.

Many Congressmen fought for an immediate return of the agency's administration to the states, but a compromise finally was included in a $52,000,000,000 "cutback" appropriations bill specifying the 100-day grace period.

The President maintained that too early a return of USES to the states would upset the Government's re-employment program for veterans and former war-plant workers.

Rayburn Disagrees

In the months-old fight over employment legislation, it became known that even House Speaker Raybrn (D., Texas) is at odds with the President over what type of a bill should be adopted.

Several legislators quoted the Speaker as saying he believed the House version to be "a good, workable measure which has meaning and will help prevent mass unemployment in the future."

The House bill, which Mr. Truman said "lacks essential features" of the legislation he wants, sets forth a Federal policy of maintaining "a high level of employment."

The Senate bill called for a government program of "full employment," and also specified that all able-bodied Americans wanting jobs have the right to an opportunity for them.

Truman Incurs Disfavor In Congress

Washington, Dec. 21 (AP)—President Truman's relations with Congress took on a new air of tension today, particularly among Southern Democrats.

One of the latter, Representative Gibson of Georgia, declared "an open break" now exists with the Chief Executive. Others, who preferred not to be quoted directly, echoed his remarks. Some of these sources also said they saw little hope for improvement in the situation when legislative work is resumed next year.

Actions They Dislike

A note of discord was prompted by these three White House developments yesterday as members began heading home for the holidays:

1. Mr. Truman's news conference assertion that he would express himself forcibly soon on legislation calling for returning of the United States Employment Service to the states within 100 days. Several Congressmen interpreted this as meaning either a veto or another verbal blast at Congress is in the offing.

2. Release of letters to key lawmakers in which the President termed "unacceptable" a House substitute for the so-called "full employment" bill the Senate has passed.

3. Issuance of an order authorizing the Fair Employment Practice Committee to investigate and report on employment practices in private industry until next

Kimmel Is Held To Blame

Admiral Turner Testifies Former Failed To Follow Orders.

CLEAR 'ACTION ORDERS' ISSUED

Pearl Harbor Disaster Might Have Been Averted, Japs Given Sharp Blow.

By William T. Peacock

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21. (AP)—The Pearl Harbor Committee laid aside its inquiry for a Christmas recess late today after hearing Admiral Richmond Kelly Turner contend the Washington top Navy command did all that was needed to avert the disaster.

The committee will reconvene Dec. 31 and go on with the Navy story of the Japanese attack.

Possible Blow Anticipated

Turner, 1941 Chief of Navy War Plans, asserted that the top officers here anticipated a possible Japanese blow in 1941, got the fleet "prepared for war" and issued "entirely clear" action orders. He added that Admiral Husband E. Kimmel, Pacific fleet commander, did not comply with those orders.

His attitude drew him into frequent tangles with some committee members.

In one sharp exchange Rep. Murphy (D-Pa.) remarked, "I've never seen a Monday morning quarterback go to the football game."

(Turner left his Washington post in June, 1942, and later took part in many of the amphibious operations in the Pacific war).

Odds of Attack

Murphy's remark came after he had demanded that Turner produce any written pre-Pearl Harbor expression of opinion that there was a "50-50 chance" for an attack there. Turner had testified yesterday he considered those the odds.

Turner said he never wrote such an opinion and he thought neither the Navy nor War Departments agreed there was a 50-50 chance. He named Admiral Harold R. Stark, then chief of naval operations, and Admiral Royall Ingersoll, Stark's deputy, as men who, he believed, thought there was a good possibility of an attack.

Might Have Changed Picture

Had Kimmel complied with instructions to take deployment measures, Turner contended, damage on Dec. 7, 1941, would have been "materially reduced."

"And there was a good chance we could have inflicted considerable damage on the Japanese fleet," he added.

Murphy noted that a Navy court of inquiry into Pearl Harbor reported that the effectiveness of Hawaii's defense plans "depended entirely upon advance knowledge that an attack was to be expected within narrow limits of time."

Should not some further warning been sent after that of Nov. 27, he asked?

"That was done with the code message," Turner replied. In early December, word was dispatched to Kimmel that the Japanese were burning their codes.

Rep. Gearhart (R-Calif.) drew from Turner these statements:

He did not know of a November 26, 1941, message from the State Department to the Japanese until he read it in intercepted Japanese messages.

No Chance of Acceptance

He was convinced that this message had "no possible chance of acceptance" and he personally thought it had no effect one way or the other on Japanese designs against the United States.

Turner had testified earlier he had understood from Admiral Leigh Noyes, chief of naval communications, on three occasions that Admiral Kimmel was getting at Pearl Harbor all the information Washington was getting from reading Japanese codes.

Turner also told of a number of conferences he held personally with Japanese Ambassador Kichisaburo Nomura. In one of these in July, 1941, he said, "I told the ambassador I believed Congress would declare war if they attacked either the British or Dutch in Malaya."

Turner explained that he had known Nomura's naval attache in Japan in 1939 and that the attache sought him out. The admiral said his personal talks with Nomura placed him "in a rather embarrassing position but I felt I should continue to get what I could." He said he sent memos to Admiral Stark concerning the discussions.

Japs Wanted to Pump Him

After the session Turner told reporters that the Japanese attache who sought him out "wanted to pump me."

"But I got more out of him than he did out of me," Turner said.

Senator Ferguson (R-Mich.) asked about the Navy's directing Admiral Thomas C. Hart, then Asiatic Fleet Commander, to put out scouting vessels in the South China Sea. This was done at the direction of President Roosevelt.

Didn't Turner think that something of the same sort should have been done around Hawaii?

"Admiral Kimmel was told on three occasions to use ships, as well as airplanes, to the north, as well as the south, for scouting purposes," the witness replied.

Senator Brewster (R-Me) remarked that the Navy court reported that Kimmel had issued orders for strange submarines to be depth-charged. Explosives were dropped on a submarine over an hour before the air attack.

Overt Act Question

The belief that the Navy should be free to take such action, Turner said, "might be the key" to why Kimmel was never instructed against committing "overt acts."

Brewster wanted to know what Turner thought Kimmel could have done in the way of long-range reconnaissance with the planes available to him.

Turner said that during the war he had been in spots where he had fewer planes than were available to Kimmel and had managed to get "one-fourth to one-third in the air daily."

He calculated that the available planes could have covered a 60-degree arc for a radius of 750 miles.

Ferguson brought up Japanese intercepts which he said made clear on November 29, 1941 that war was on its way.

"Why didn't you give them (Pearl Harbor commanders) more information then?" he demanded.

"Because it added nothing to the message of the 27th," Turner replied.

Rep. Murphy (D-Pa) observed that Turner had testified he believed from June or July, 1941, that war with Japan was "certain" and that this opinion was shared by many other naval officers, including Stark.

Did Not Expect Attack

How did it happen then, Murphy wanted to know, that Stark wrote Kimmel on Oct. 17:

"Personally, I do not believe the Japs are going to sail into us."

Turner replied that he was "astonished" when he read the letter.

Murphy noted that the records also disclosed a forecast by Turner in August, 191, that Japan would attack Russia.

Rep. Clark (D-NC) told Turner at one point that he had difficulty "reconciling" some of the admiral's testimony.

Turner had just testified that he expected a possible attack on Hawaii because the American fleet poised a "flank threat" against obvious Japanese plans to move southward in the China Sea.

He had also testified that the fleet could not move to the Philippines or directly threaten the South China movement "for months" because of Japanese-controlled islands lying between Hawaii and the Philippines.

Turner told Clark he meant the fleet was a "potential threat" to Japan's long-range plans.

Kimmel Not Present

Kimmel, who has attended most sessions, was not present for this testimony. He will get a chance later to tell his story.

The committee plans to recess tomorrow, after concluding with Turner, until Dec. 31.

It discovered, incidentally, that it was napping yesterday when it got Senate and House approval to continue work until Feb. 15. Yesterday's resolution failed to eliminate earlier instructions that a final report must be filed by Jan. 3. House and Senate adopted a corrective resolution today.

Turner differed with earlier testimony from Admiral J. O. Richardson that the fleet was as safe at Hawaii as it would have been on the continental west coast.

Richardson said a surprise raid could have been made on Puget Sound as easily as on Hawaii.

But Turner said the fleet would, of course, have been safer on the west coast or in the Atlantic. The question of its security had nothing to do with its being at Pearl Harbor, he said, adding:

For Security

"The reason was for the security of Hawaii and the security of the United States. Hawaii was, under war conditions, a dangerous place."

The fleet was in Hawaii to fight the Japanese, if necessary, he went on, and should have been on guard and ready to do just that.

Turner amended, however, testimony of yesterday that deployment orders should have taken the fleet to sea. He said the responsibility of what defensive positions to take was one for Kimel and that his (Turner's) opinion that "local safety would be greater at sea is open to challenge."

He explained there were advantages from being at sea and advantages from being in harbor, such as air patrols from flying fields and the anti-aircraft guns of the Army garrison.

Former President Mentioned

Other points in his testimony included:

So far as he knew, the late President Roosevelt never gave the Navy instructions to advise overseas commanders that Japan should be allowed to commit the first overt act. (Gen. George C. Marshall testified the Army received such instructions from the White House.)

He had believed and had so informed Stark that Kimmel and Admiral Thomas C. Hart, commander of the Asiatic fleet, were receiving locally the decoded Japanese messages available to Washington officers. He said he learned after the attack that neither had facilities to read the Japanese diplomatic code.

He had held "the utmost respect" for Kimmel's ability and believed that opinion was general in the Navy Department.

PROBERS RECESS FOR CHRISTMAS

Navy Heads Did All Needed to Avert Disaster, Says Turner.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21—(AP)—The Pearl Harbor committee laid aside its inquiry for a Christmas recess late today after hearing Admiral Richmond Kelly Turner contend Washington top Navy command did all that was needed to avert the disaster.

The committee will reconvene Dec. 31 and go on with the Navy story of the Japanese attack.

Turner, 1941 chief of Navy War Plans, asserted that the top officers here anticipated a possible Japanese blow in 1941, got the fleet "prepared for war" and issued "entirely clear" action orders. He added that Admiral Husband E. Kimmel, Pacific fleet commander, did not comply with those orders.

Frequent Tangle

His attitude drew him into frequent tangles with some committee members.

In one sharp exchange Representative Murphy (D-Pa) remarked, "I've never seen a Monday morning quarterback go to the football game."

Murphy's remark came after he had demanded that Turner produce any written pre-Pearl Harbor expression of opinion that there was a "50-50 chance" for an attack there. Turner had testified yesterday he considered those the odds.

Turner said he never wrote such an opinion and he thought neither the Navy nor War departments agreed there was a 50-50 chance. He named Admiral Harold R. Stark, then chief of naval operations, and Admiral Royall Ingersoll, Stark's deputy, as men who, he believed, thought there was a good possibility of an attack.

Had Kimmel complied with instructions to take deployment measures, Turner contended, damage on Dec. 7, 1941, would have been "materially reduced."

"And there was a good chance we could have inflicted considerable damage on the Japanese fleet," he added.

Murphy noted that a Navy court of inquiry into Pearl Harbor reported that the effectiveness of Hawaii's defense plans "depended entirely upon advance knowledge that an attack was to be expected within narrow limits of time."

Should not some further warning been sent after that of Nov. 27? he asked.

"That was done with the code message," Turner replied. In early December, word was dispatched to Kimmel that the Japanese were burning their codes.

Representative Gearhart (R-Cal) drew from Turner these statements:

He did not know of a Nov. 26, 1941 message from the State department to the Japanese until he read it in intercepted Japanese messages.

He was convinced that this message had "no possible chance of acceptance" and he personally thought it had no effect one way or the other on Japanese designs against the United States.

Turner had testified earlier he had understood from Admiral Leigh Noyes, chief of naval communications, on three occasions that Admiral Kimmel was getting at Pearl Harbor all the information Washington was getting from reading Japanese codes.

Turner also told of a number of conferences he held personally with Japanese Ambassador Kichisaburo Nomura. In one of these in July 1941, he said, "I told the ambassador I believed congress would declare war if they attacked either the British or Dutch in Malaya."

Knew Attache in Japan

Turner explained that he had known Nomura's naval attache in Japan in 1939 and that the attache sought him out. The admiral said his personal talks with Nomura placed him "in a rather embarrassing position but I felt I should continue to get what I could." He said he sent memos to Admiral Stark concerning the discussions.

After the session Turner told reporters that the Japanese attache who sought him out "wanted to pump me."

"But I got more out of him than he did out of me," Turner said.

Senator Ferguson (R-Mich) asked about the navy's directing Admiral Thomas C. Hart, then Asiatic fleet commander, to put out scouting vessels in the South China sea. This was done at the direction of President Roosevelt.

Didn't Turner think that something of the same sort should have been done around Hawaii?

"Admiral Kimmel was told on three occasions to use ships, as well as airplanes, to the north, as well as the south, for scouting purposes," the witness replied.

"Admiral Kimmel was told on three occasions to use ships, as well as airplanes, to the north, as well as the south, for scouting purposes," the witness replied.

Senator Brewster (R-Me.) remarked that the Navy court reported that Kimmel had issued orders for strange submarines to be depth-charged. Explosives were dropped on a submarine over an hour before the air attack.

The belief that the Navy should be free to take such action, Turner said, "might be the key" to why Kimmel was never instructed against committing "overt acts."

Brewster wanted to know what Turner thought Kimmel could have done in the way of long-range reconnaissance with the planes available to him.

Kept Planes in Air

Turner said that during the war he had been in spots where he had fewer planes than were available to Kimmel and had managed to get "one-fourth to one-third in the air daily."

He calculated that the available planes could have covered a 60-degree arc for a radius of 750 miles.

Ferguson brought up Japanese intercepts which he said made clear on Nov. 29, 1941 that war was on its way.

"Why didn't you give them (Pearl Harbor commanders) more information then?" he demanded.

"Because it added nothing to the message of the 27th," Turner replied.

Representative Murphy (D-Pa.) observed that Turner had testified he believed from June or July, 1941, that war with Japan was "certain" and that this opinion was shared by many other naval officers, including Stark.

How did it happen then, Murphy wanted to know, that Stark wrote Kimmel on Oct. 17:

"Personally, I do not believe the Japs are going to sail into us."

Turner replied that he was "astonished" when he read the letter.

Murphy noted that the records also disclosed a forecast by Turner in August, 1941, that Japan would attack Russia.

Representative Clark (D-N.C.) told Turner at one point that he had difficulty "reconciling" some of the Admiral's testimony.

Turner had just testified that he expected a possible attack on Hawaii because the American fleet poised a "flank threat" against obvious Japanese plans to move southward in the China sea.

He had also testified that the fleet could not move to the Philippines or directly threaten the South China movement "for months" because of Japanese-controlled islands lying between Hawaii and the Philippines.

Turner told Clark he meant the fleet was a "potential threat" to Japan's long-range plans.

Kimmel, who has attended most sessions, was not present for this testimony. He will get a chance later to tell his story.

The committee plans to recess tomorrow, after concluding with Turner, until Dec. 31.

Adopt Corrective Resolution

It discovered, incidentally, that it was napping yesterday when it got Senate and House approval to continue work until Feb. 15. Yesterday's resolution failed to eliminate earlier instructions that a final report must be filed by Jan. 3. House and Senate adopted a corrective resolution today.

A Balanced U.S. Budget Before Loan Urged

Washington, Dec. 21 (AP)—Representative Jones (R., Ohio) thinks President Truman should try budget balancing before any money is loaned to Britain.

Jones presented the idea in a House speech in which he observed that the per capita debt in Britain is smaller than in the United States.

He said the per capita debt of Great Britain increased $884 from 1941 to 1945, as compared with $1,498 in this country.

30.24-32561

"Therefore," Jones added, "I suggest that before Congress transfers $4,400,000,000 of Uncle Sam's assets by a loan that Britain does not expect to pay and Congress when it makes the loan does not expect Britain to pay, the President should present a genuine plan to balance the national budget."

"For Those Who Want To"

The Ohioan said further:

"I propose that Congress adopt legislation so that anybody who wants to subsidize British socialism and who wants to buy British bonds in America can do it. Those who buy will be the only ones hurt, if Great Britain cannot pay or British socialism fails.

"In case it is determined to give these dollars from the United States Treasury, I propose that Congress authorize a special bond issue, the proceeds of which shall be for the loan to Britain. I propose that the bonds provide the same maturity date, interest rate and other terms and conditions under which Congress is asked to loan $4,400,000,000 to Great Britain.

"When the loan-gift requires Britain to pay no interest, then those special issue state bonds should not require Uncle Sam to pay interest to the bondholders; then and in that event Uncle Sam will not be burning the candle at both ends. In other words, when Uncle Sam gets no interest in the bargain loan-gift to Britain, Uncle Sam pays no interest to the bondholders of this special issue."

Doubt On Vote

Meanwhile, doubt that the proposed $4,400,000,000 loan to Great Britain will ever be voted upon by Congress was expressed today by Representative Schwabe (R., Mo.).

Schwabe, preparing to leave for Missouri today, told a reporter that in his opinion "the more members of Congress discuss the loan, the less prospect there is of its passage."

UNO Group Okayed Over Opposition

Washington, Dec. 21 (AP)—The complete American delegation to the first formal session of the United Nations Organization bore Senate approval today—after a two-hour scrap.

Four of President Truman's selections underwent sharp criticism from various senators yesterday, but it was obvious from the start that the entire group was going to receive overwhelming approval. It came by voice votes, for:

Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., former Secretary of State, as representative on the Security Council and also to the first session of the General Assembly to be held in London early in January.

Mrs. Roosevelt Is One

Senators Tom Connally (D., Texas) and Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) and Mrs. Anna Eleanor Roosevelt, the late President's widow, as assembly representatives.

Representative Sol Bloom (D., N.Y.), Representative Charles A. Eaton (R., N.J.), former Postmaster General Frank C. Walker, John Foster Dulles, of New York, and former Republican Senator John G. Townsend, Jr., of Delaware, as alternate representatives to the first assembly session.

Senator Langer (R., N.D.) criticized Stettinius, member of a wealthy family, because of his associations with "high finance and big business." But he announced he would not vote against him, because "the United Nations Organization can never be placed into operation."

Senator Bilbo (D., Miss.) said he was certain 98 or 99 per cent of the people of "the sovereign State of Mississippi" would back him in opposing Mrs. Roosevelt's nomination. He said his reasons were based on her record "in the press and . . . from her services in recent years."

BAR HARBOR ENTERS UNO HOME RACE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21—(AP) The town of Bar Harbor, Me., today was offered for official consideration as a site for the permanent home of the United Nations Organization.

Senator Brewster (R-Me), in behalf of the community's citizens, the governor of Maine, and the state's congressional delegation, made the offer in a cable sent to the Gladwyn Jeb, executive secretary of the UNO Preparatory commission.

Bar Harbor is the principal community of Mount Deseret island which is the largest island off the coast of Maine.

The cable said: "The community is ready to offer spacious ground areas and buildings suitable for the conduct of business and capable of whatever expansion may be needed as the business of the United Nations Organization develops. x x x In many respects it offers an ideal location in contrast to the congestion experienced in metropolitan areas."

Peace Through UNO Is Predicted

Washington, Dec. 21 (AP)—Representative Burgin (D., N.C.) has predicted that the United Nations Organization will succeed as a vehicle of peace.

In one of his infrequent speeches to the House, the North Carolina member of the Foreign Affairs Committee said: "I feel very hopeful and very happy that at this season of the year, 2,000 years after the Prince of Peace came to this earth, we are now working out an international arrangement by which we will make an effort to keep the peace of the world."

"If American people and the peace-loving people around the world will put their hearts and souls into it, it is bound to succeed."

D.C. Palestine Hearings Set

Washington, Dec. 21 (AP)—The British-American Committee of Inquiry on Palestine will open its hearings in Washington January 7, Judge William Hutcheson, United States chairman, announced today.

Hutcheson said arrangements for the hearings were completed yesterday in a trans-Atlantic telephone conversation with Sir John Singleton, the British chairman.

It was decided that the British commissioners would come to Washington for the first sessions and that the whole committee then would go to London before starting a first-hand inspection tour.

Various Jewish, Arab and Christian groups interested in the Palestine and European problems are being invited to submit their views, Hutcheson said.

Minister Comments On Mrs. R.'s New Job

Washington, Dec. 21 (AP)—Representative Bennett (R., Mo.), emphasizing that he was not speaking sarcastically, remarked today that Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt apparently will be well taken care of by the Government.

Commenting on her selection to the United States delegation to the United Nations Organization, Bennett said that, like other delegates, she will draw a $12,000-a-year salary and receive expenses and allowances.

He said that Congress has given her the right to frank mail, postage free, and, in addition, predicted that Congress would approve a $5,000-a-year pension for her, as it had for widows of other Presidents in the last 40 years.

Bennett said that on the whole, he thought the UNO delegates were good appointments.

U. S.-BERLIN FLIGHTS WILL START ON FEB. 1

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21 (AP)—American Airlines System will start weekly flights from New York to Amsterdam and Berlin on Jan. 15 and to Copenhagen and Stockholm on Feb. 1, a company spokesman said today.

Service to the Scandinavian countries will include Oslo as soon as the necessary navigational and landing aids are installed at Gardermoen Airport, thirty miles from Oslo.

This will make nine flights weekly from the United States to Europe on the American Airlines System. It is now flying three times weekly from New York and once weekly from Washington and Chicago to London. Next week it will add a flight from New York and one from Washington.

The flight to the Netherlands and Germany will leave on Tuesdays and that to the Scandinavian countries on Fridays.

American said that its route to Berlin would include stops at Gander Airport, Newfoundland; Shannon Airport (Ireland); Amsterdam and Frankfort, Germany. The route to Stockholm will include stops at Gander, Goose Bay, Labrador, Iceland; and Copenhagen.

Pan American World Airways announced yesterday that it would start daily flights today from New York to London. Leaving La Guardia Field at 2 P. M., the huge planes will be due at 12:40 A. M. the following day at Hurn Airport, England. Bi-weekly flights from New York to Lisbon, Portugal, also were announced. The first trip will be made Christmas Day.

Ezra Pound Called Insane

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21—(AP)—Ezra Pound, the poet, charged with treason, today was pronounced "insane and mentally unfit for trial" by a board of four psychiatrists.

The board submitted its report to district court.

Pound, for many years an expatriate, was indicted for treason in connection with alleged propaganda broadcasts for Italy after that nation went to war with the United States. He was arrested after the occupation of Italy was completed and flown back here on Nov. 18 to stand trial.

The psychiatrists reported to Justice Bolitha J. Laws that they found Pound "mentally unfit to advise properly with counsel or to participate intelligently and reasonably in his own defense."

THREE SENATORS SEEK PERMANENT FEPC NEXT YEAR

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—(AP) Three senators urged today that Congress set up a permanent Fair Employment Practices committee as soon as it returns from its recess Jan. 14.

But Senator Bilbo (D-Miss.), inveterate foe of the agency designed to police discrimination against Negroes and other minorities in industry, renewed his threat of a filibuster.

"I would rather see my race destroyed by the atomic bomb," Bilbo said, "than to see it destroyed by a process of mongrelization."

Senator Ball (R-Minn), offering amendments to the pending FEPC bill, said that delay in passing it is "driving millions of Negroes into the arms of the Communist party which holds out hope of racial equality."

Senators Chavez (D-N.M.) and Morse (R-Ore.) likewise called for action as soon as Congress reconvenes. Morse said that "the Republicans are ready to debate and vote upon it at any time."

Ball's principal amendment would restrict FEPC action to labor unions of 25 members or more and employers of 25 persons or more. Now the bill fixes that at six persons.

Another amendment would require FEPC to provide "substantial evidence" in support of its rulings. This, Ball said, would give the courts greater scope in dealing with appeals.

Bilbo said the FEPC was responsible for knocking down partitions which had separated Negroes from whites in cafeterias and rest rooms of government buildings. He declared Negroes held 19 per cent of the federal jobs in Washington although they represent only nine per cent of the nation's population.

U. S. Controls On Newsprint To End Dec. 31

Inventory Restrictions to Remain, but Rationing Order Is Eliminated

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21 (AP).—Newsprint controls, excepting inventory restrictions, will be lifted Dec. 31, Civilian Production Administrator John D. Small announced tonight.

He said the decision to eliminate the newsprint ration order was based on recent recommendations of the special newsprint committee of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, the Newspaper Industry Advisory Committee, and the Boren Congressional Committee on Newsprint, as well as on the statement issued last Nov. 28 by the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

Mr. Small said the first two committees "represent a cross section of newspaper publishers and include representatives of both large and small newspapers."

Today's action means all government restrictions on use of newsprint will be lifted, but retention of inventory restrictions maintains a limit on the amount of paper publishers may stockpile.

Newsprint rationing went into effect Jan. 1, 1943, as the result of a world-wide shortage of paper.

Under the program publishers have been limited to a certain percentage of the newsprint they used during 1941.

The Nov. 28 statement of the American Newspaper Publishers association said:

"The newspapers of the United States will see that no newspaper suspends publication for lack of newsprint after government control on consumption ends on Dec. 31, 1945.

"This was the decision reached today at a conference in New York City of representatives of regional and state newspaper associations from all parts of the country.

"There was a unanimous expression that the publishers would meet problems of newspapers faced by suspension because of lack of newsprint through regional and state plans handled on what had been worked out by the New England Daily Newspaper Association."

J. Hale Steinman, director of the C. P. A.'s printing and publishing division, said that under the New England plan, indorsed by the A. N. P. A., publishers of each state and regional association would agree to set aside up to 3 per cent of their newsprint tonnage.

This reserve pool, Mr. Steinman explained, would be available to any papers threatened with suspension because of lack of newsprint.

Mr. Steinman said that under this plan the publication of an eight-page daily newspaper would be permitted.

Mr. Small emphasized that if the voluntary plan breaks down and newspapers are threatened with suspension of publication, O. P. A. "will act promptly to reinstitute newsprint controls, either through a general order or through the use of the priorities power in special cases."

The inventory controls will be embodied in an amendment to Priorities Regulation 22.

It will limit stocks to twenty-five days' consumption in the East and Central states and to forty-five days in the Western states, figured on the average consumption in the last six months of this year.

Any newspaper will be permitted to maintain an inventory of sixty tons.

The O. P. A. said the newsprint supply in 1946 is expected to be 98 per cent of 1941 supply.

The agency added that while this is not adequate to meet demands, "it is considered sufficient to warrant revocation of the order in view of the recommendations of the industry." The O. P. A. calculated newsprint supplies for the first six months of next year at approximately 1,935,000 tons. It added that approximately 1,500,000 tons of newsprint is expected from Canada, 335,000 tons from domestic porduction and 100,000 tons from Newfoundland.

Mr. Small said the newsprint order had operated with success during the war years "inasmuch as no newspaper was forced to suspend operations for lack of newsprint."

VETERANS TO GET FIRST BID TO BUY NEW DWELLINGS

'Fair Share' of 1946 Construction to Sell Under $10,000.

U. S. SETS RULES

Program Is Prepared to Stimulate Building of Homes.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21—(AP) Civilian Production Administrator John D. Small said today the government will see to it that "a fair share" of homes built next year will sell for less than $10,000.

He pledged this at a news conference in outlining how the administration's new program to stimulate home construction will work.

Highlights of Plan

Here are highlights of the plan which will go into effect Jan. 15:

1. Ten critically scarce kinds of building material will be restored to a priorities system designed to channel them to homes to sell at $10,000 or less or rent at no more than $80 a month. Officials have estimated that the plan will put an average of 50 per cent of the available materials into such houses.

2. During the period of construction and for 30 days thereafter, builders will be required to offer these homes exclusively to veterans. After that they may be offered to non-veterans but at no increase in the sale price or rent agreed upon before construction.

3. Applications for government aid in obtaining materials will be handled by the 52 field offices of the Federal Housing Administration which will issue so-called "HH" priority ratings to builders who qualify.

4. FHA will examine builders' specifications to make sure sales prices proposed are reasonably in line with the cost of the home. When they aren't, applications for priorities will be denied.

5. When these homes are resold, no more than the original price paid may be charged. Also, veterans have a 30-day option to buy in the case of resales.

Small predicted that 400,000 homes will be built under the program in 1946, and he said he believes a "substantial number" of them will sell for less than $10,000 or rent for under $80.

"If we find," Small said, "that a preponderance of priorities applications are for homes to sell at the $10,000 ceiling, we will establish quotas to see that a fair share of the homes built are in the lower price ranges."

Envisioning the possibility that applications for materials may outstrip supplies, Small said that if this happens the government will set up a quota system allocating materials to individual areas.

"This won't be necessary," he added, "if builders will avoid gobbling up more materials than they can use."

Small expressed the hope the second war powers act, from which authority for the new housing program is derived, will be extended for another six months when it expires next June 30. Congress has just approved a six months extension to that time.

Promise Veterans Homes

In a statement on the program as outlined by Small, the National Association of Home Builders said it will do everything possible "to translate the priority system into housing for veterans at the earliest possible moment."

"However, said Frank W. Cortwright, executive vice president of the association, "government and particularly OPA must do something immediately to stimulate the production of materials x x x."

Small emphasized that merchant seamen are entitled to all preferences under the program. He outlined these other provisions of the plan:

Builders will be required to demonstrate to FHA that they will be ready to start reconstruction within 60 days when they apply for materials. They also must show they have effective control of the land, that financing is assured, and that arrangements for building permits and utilities services have been completed.

Homes already under construction may be brought under the program if builders agree to all terms of the priorities plan, including a preference for veterans and sale at no more than $10,000.

In such cases, builders will be eligible for government aid in obtaining materials to complete construction.

Supplies also may be obtained for dormitories or other group housing for veterans at educational institutions.

Building materials covered by the priorities plan are:

Common and face brick, clay sewer pipe, structural tile, gypsum board, gypsum lath, cast iron soil pipe and fittings, cast iron radiation, bath tubs, lumber and millwork.

Crisis Held Near In Vet Hospitals

Washington, Dec. 21 (AP)—More veterans will spend this Christmas in hospital beds than ever before in American history and the capacity for caring for them has reached a near crisis.

Maj. Gen. Paul R. Hawley, acting surgeon general of the Veterans Administration, said today there are approximately 90,000 veterans, of all wars, under treatment in hospitals or at homes.

The peak of World War I veterans is expected within a year or two. The peak of World War II will not be reached until 1975, experts said. They say as many as 250,000 veterans may become patients.

DEC 22 1945

Record Set Daily

Meanwhile the influx of patients at veteran hospitals sets new records daily, with barely enough doctors, nurses and other attendants available.

Gen. Omar N. Bradley, veterans administrator, said the VA medical reorganization bill, now awaiting the President's signature, may help in staffing an additional 4,500 beds in veteran hospitals.

The VA soon will take over seven army hospitals, five of them on a temporary basis, with 6,000 beds, but more doctors are needed.

New Hospitals Sought

Forty-eight new hospitals have been requested in a long-term expansion program.

Of the 90,000 veterans now being treated, about one third are World War II soldiers. They are being admitted at the rate of about 1,000 per month, slightly more than one half of all the veterans applying for care.

Veterans Administration officials are attempting to obtain more space in army and navy hospitals.

SENATORS WILL VISIT WAR SURPLUS BASES

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21 (AP)—Three members of the Senate War Investigating Committee start Thursday for a trip around the world to see what is being done about disposing of surplus Government property.

They are Senators Tunnell of Delaware, Mitchell of Washington and Knowland of California. They expect to be back in Washington about Feb. 1.

Chairman Mead of New York, who announced their trip, said the three had been instructed to obtain some information which it had been impossible to gather in Washington.

They will check the quantity, character and location of Army and Navy supplies; estimates of supplies needed for future military use; programs for supplying allies; salvation and reclamation operations and reports of destruction of Government property; utilization of transportation facilities; disposal of surpluses abroad; permanent naval and military bases, and activities of American civilian agencies abroad.

Their itinerary includes Jeffersonville, Ind.; St. Louis, Granite City, Ill.; military and naval bases in the vicinity of Los Angeles and San Francisco; Hawaii, Johnston Island, Kwajalein and Guam; Tinian and Saipan; Manila (from where individual members will visit Okinawa, Tokyo and Shanghai), Singapore, Bangkok, Rangoon, Calcutta, Delhi, Karachi, Bahrein, Cairo, Athens, Rome, Leghorn, Frankfort, Paris and London.

Figures Put Cancer Deaths Above War's

Washington, Dec. 21 (A. P.).—The Census Bureau said today that nearly twice as many persons died of cancer in this country during 1942-43-44 as the armed services lost by enemy action in world war II.

Cancer deaths in the period totaled 501,419, the bureau said, while recent Army and Navy figures combat losses of 273,000.

SENATORS STRIVE TO SPEED CLOTHING

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—(AP) Demanding pants as well as plaudits for returning servicemen, the Senate Small Business committee today scissored out a five-piece patern for reconverting GI wardrobes.

Here is the plan to speed the tweeds, or at least keep the fighting men out of jail for indecent exposure in the face of a dire clothing shortage:

1. Alter the "product mix" at woolen and worsted mills, to get more men's-suit-weight cloth. Civilian production administration has agreed to issue the necessary regulations.

2. Extend CPA's veterans' preference program, calling upon retailers to set aside voluntarily some of their stocks for exclusive sale to discharged servicemen.

3. Urge civilians, through a broad publicity campaign, to refrain from buying suits and overcoats they don't absolutely need.

4. Initiate legislation to permit veterans to wear their uniforms indefinitely after being discharged.

5. Permit discharged men to take all clothing in their possession home with them. The quartermaster general has agreed to recommend this to the secretary of war.

Present law prohibits veterans from wearing their uniforms after they have reached their homes and in no event for longer than 90 days after their discharge.

Long Wait for New Tires Due

Pent-up Demands Won't Be Filled for Months Despite End of Rationing.

Washington, Dec. 21 (A. P.).—Tire rationing ends January 1 after four long years of thin treads, but it will be months before pent-up demand is met in full.

The decision of OPA and Civilian Production Administration to lift controls is based on their considered opinion that there no longer is any danger of a transportation breakdown.

Both agencies emphasized, however, that despite a big increase in tire production, all motorists will not be able to walk in and buy new casings for some time.

"A plentiful supply of tires is not in sight for several months, perhaps all of 1946," said CPA Administrator John D. Small.

OPA Chief Chester Bowles cautioned that "many motorists will have to wait for tires." He urged dealers not to sell complete sets "to those who can get along with one or two tires during the next several months."

Termination of tire rationing New Year's Day will leave only sugar on a ration list.

In announcing yesterday that tire output now warrants an end of the rationing program, Bowles said that production currently is at the rate of about 4,000,000 casings a month and that approximately 11,000,000 will be made this quarter.

This means 1945 production will total about 28,000,000 passenger tires, an increase of 64 per cent over 1944 output. Production next year is forecast at 66,000,000 passenger tires, or 13,000,000 more than e[illegible] made before in this co[illegible]ne year.

The o[illegible] production of truck an[illegible]tires was described as even brighter than for passenger tires. Tire rationing certificates in the hands of motorists will continue to be honored by dealers through December 31. CPA announced that "in order to increase the number of tires available in the immediate future" several non-rationing restrictions will remain in effect.

EGG MARKET GLUT EXPECTED BY SPRING

Government May Have to Spend 200 Million to Halt Collapse of Prices, Officials Say

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21 (AP)—Agriculture Department officials expect the country's egg markets to become glutted by spring and force the Government to spend about $200,000,000 to prevent a price collapse.

Under the law the department is required to support egg prices at not less than 90 per cent of parity.

That requirement means, officials say, that the department must support prices at levels which will reflect a national average farm price of 29 cents a dozen during the flush season.

The reason for predictions of surpluses is that laying flocks are at wartime levels, while the prospective demand for eggs is considerably less.

The department estimates 1946 egg requirements at 4,300,000,000 dozen, compared with this year's estimated production of 5,060,000,000 dozen.

The Department has not disclosed the details of the price support program for 1946, but a statement is expected from Secretary of Agriculture Anderson soon.

Under a program being considered, the department would buy sufficient eggs to assure farmers gauranteed levels. Government buying would include graded shell eggs, dried eggs, and frozen eggs. The amount it buys will depend on the excess of production over requirements.

None of the Government eggs would be dumped on the domestic market. The department would sell its eggs to other Government agencies, including the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, to foreign countries seeking supplies, and would transfer some to school lunch programs and to public institutions.

Officials say that unless producers take the precaution to bring egg production early in 1946 into line with indicated requirements, surpluses might mount to an average of 4,000,000 cases in March, April, May and June.

Production on such scale would mean, they said, that the cost of egg price support operations for the entire season of heavy production might exceed $200,000,000. Possibly $50,000,000 of this might be retrieved through export sales, they added.

Producer prices of chickens and turkeys will be supported by buying dressed birds at levels which will reflect a national average farm price of 90 per cent of parity, officials said.

This will mean, they added, an average farm price for all classes and weights subject to price support of about 18 cents a pound live weight for chickens and slightly under 23 cents a pound for turkeys.

General Electric Buys Plant

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21 (AP).—The Reconstruction Finance Corp announces the sale of the American Armorment portion of the government-owned aircraft plant at Allentown, Pa., to General Electric Co., Schenectady, N. Y., for $200,000. General Electric plans to convert the plant to the manufacture of electric sinks and estimates that employment may total 265 workers.

StateGovernmentCouncil Holds Session at Trenton

Discusses Proposed Act on Sale of Surplus Properties

TRENTON, N. J., Dec. 21 (AP).—New Jersey played host today to representatives of the Department of Justice, lawmakers and state officials of seven Northeastern states who met here to discuss suggested post-war legislation at the fifth annual pre-legislative conference of the Council of State Governments.

Discussion centered on a proposed act sponsored by the Surplus Property Administration to prohibit misrepresentation in the sale of surplus properties and other acts which the delegates will endeavor to place before the 194 legislative sessions in their respective states.

Harold C. Ostertag, of Attica N. Y., New York State Assemblyman and chairman of the council's committee on interstate co-operation, presided over the all-day session in the Statehouse, attended by approximately fifty delegates from Maine, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, Pennsylvania, Delaware and New Jersey.

Asks Truman Action on Butter

CHICAGO, Dec. 21 (AP).—The over-all butter industry committee today asked President Truman to take "immediate action to correct conditions causing extremely low butter production." In a telegram it declared that "unless inequalities depressing butter production are adjusted immediately consumers face exceedingly low supplies and more creameries may be forced to cease operation, thus eliminating a market for many hundred thousand dairy farmers."

Food Executive Proposes U.S. Aid To Europe

Chicago, Dec. 21 (AP)—Commercial commitments giving Europeans a year "to get on their feet" before repaying with their own food exports in equivalent dollar value—that is the solution to Europe's food shortage offered by the head of one of America's largest food-wholesaling firms.

Nathan Cummins, president of Consolidated Grocers Corporation, home from a month's tour of England, Norway and Sweden, told a news conference that food distributors there "have to be sold" a plan by which they can apply future exports of their own food products to pay for immediate imports offered by the United States.

Europe's greatest needs, he asserted, are high vitamin content foods, fruit and fruit juices, evaporated milk and canned meats. Its earliest available foods for export will be fish products, he said.

Loses 2 Flier Husbands in Year

LOGAN, W. Va., Dec. 21 (AP)—Mrs. Sue Haislip Jarrell Bonham, member of a prominent Logan County family, received notice from the War Department today of the death of her second Army flier husband within a year. Lieut. Col. Francis H. Bonham, to whom she was married last July, was one of four men killed in the crash of a bomber in Florida Tuesday. Mrs. Bonham's first husband, Lieut. Herschel Jarrell, was killed over Europe in February.

POLIO VICTIMS' FLIGHT

Hamilton Field, Cal., Dec. 21 (A. P.).—Two Army men suffering from polio and encased in iron lungs arrived by plane from Calcutta, India, last night en route to hospitals for special treatment.

A big C-54 carried Capt. George L. Bapit of Seattle, and Cpl. Walter H. Hargrave of Topeka, Kan., the entire distance.

The Army Air Transport Command said the 11,000-mile flight was the longest ever attempted by polio patients in iron lungs.

Their nurses said the patients had a comfortable trip. Bapit was cared for by Lieut. Mildred Herbstrett of St. Mary's, Pa., and Hargrave by Lieut. Peggy O'Neil of Bridgeport, Conn.

ORANGE, Tex., Dec. 21 (AP)—The destroyer Basilone, named in honor of the Marine Corps hero, Sgt. John J. Basilone of Raritan, N. J., was launched here today at the Consolidated Steel Corporation Yard.

The sponsor was his widow, Sgt. Lena Riggi Basilone of Portland, Ore., who is also a marine and is stationed in California.

Sergeant Basilone won the Congressional Medal of Honor for killing thirty-eight Japanese on Guadalcanal, and returned to combat duty at his own request. He was killed on D-Day at Iwo Island.

Miles of Nylon Cord Offered At Army Base

Many Thousand Yards of Silk and Rayon Cloth Also Put Up for Sale

MIDDLETOWN, Pa., Dec. 21 (AP).—Invitations to bid for nylon cord by the mile and silk and rayon cloth by the thousand square yards, for sale Jan. 8, were issued today by the Middletown Air Technical Service Command.

The cloth is part of the material comprising 20,000 parachutes, 340,000 square yards of green, Blue, red and yellow rayon parachute cloth; 800 miles of rayon shroudline and about 2,000 miles of nylon or silk shroudline.

Other materials include parachute harness, adaptable to use as harness, tow rope and tie-down straps; thirty-six-inch pilot 'chutes adaptable as toys, and the equivalent of several freight carloads of filing cabinets, office chairs, typewriter desks and wardrobe racks.

Civvies for GI's Tougher Than Discharges

PORT HURON, Mich. (U.P.)—Port Huron's GI Joes today faced a delay in their postwar dreams of loud sports shirts and overcoats with a drape shape.

The city's returning veterans were anxious to get into those "civvies," but the merchants were singing "No Can Do."

Shirts were scarce, and only veterans with 40-inch waists stood a chance of getting a new suit. Port Huron clothiers expected the situation to ease up after the first of the year, but they don't think supplies will be normal for another year or two.

Manufacturers were reported delivering stocks a little at a time, but one merchant pointed out that he had been able to meet only two per cent of the demand.

The manager of a local branch of a well-known men's clothing firm said his store's normal stock of suits was between 1,000 and 1,100. A recent count placed the total at 172.

Shirts, together with pajamas and underwear were as difficult to buy, if not more so, than suits. Men's hats also were on the scarcity list, and the overcoat and topcoat situation appeared only slightly less critical.

Shoe stores were being held to rigid quotas, and one retailer said his stock of mens' footwear was down from a normal supply of 1,900 to 600 pairs.

Meanwhile, the veterans are consoling themselves by wearing noisy-colored ties—with their khaki.

ARMY IS LOSING BATTLE TO MOVE MEN HOMEWARD

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—(AP) The Army reported today that it was fighting a losing battle in the attempt to move homeward bound troops out of Pacific ports and that "above 90,000" instead of a previously estimated 82,000 would spend Christmas in the staging areas.

The movement of troops eastward by rail increased almost 1,000 per day during the last week—but the numbers arriving by ship from the Pacific increased at an even greater rate.

"Few, if any, of the troops now on the West coast will be home for Christmas," said the War department in a statement.

The statement gave this account of the situation in various ports, both East and West coasts for the period Dec. 21 through 26:

San Francisco—Scheduled arrival of 24,483 men on 31 ships. Expected backlog for Christmas (the Joes sitting out the holiday still far from home) more than 40,000.

Los Angeles—Scheduled arrival of 12,239 men on 16 ships. Christmas backlog of about 20,000.

Seattle—Arrivals 24,361 men on 23 ships. Christmas backlog 40,000.

New York—77,244 on 66 ships (and "this total very probably will be increased materially by arrivals of ships delayed by storms"). No backlog.

Boston—22,902 on 23 ships. No backlog.

Hampton Roads—31,379 on 37 ships. No backlog.

ODT Says West Coast Vet Jam Will End Jan. 1

Washington, Dec. 21 (AP)—Col. J. Monroe Johnson, director of defense transportation, predicted today that a bottleneck in moving returning service men homeward from the West Coast would be broken by January 1.

"Nobody would fret about this if it weren't for Christmas," he told the Senate War Investigating Committee which is looking into the transportation situation.

"There is nothing that can be done that isn't being done to expedite the movement of these men."

More Men Than Expected

This is the situation as he explained it:

Troop arrivals were vastly larger in this and previous months than had been anticipated. Some days the railroads were called upon to move double the number of service men they had been told to expect. Ships came in unexpectedly, and this was unavoidable, "because ships can't be scheduled like trains."

More than 1,000,000 veterans are coming back to the United States in December. In addition, 500,000 internal moves are anticipated. Forty thousand prisoners of war are scheduled for repatriation, and 25,000 Mexican laborers must be returned.

Figures Are Given

More than 90 per cent of all Eastbound passenger traffic from the West Coast is military, Johnson said; 72 per cent of all sleeping cars are allocated to military service. Completion of 1,200 troop sleepers authorized last spring is held up by a strike. Johnson added wryly that he liked to see the boys comfortable, but that you could move more men in coaches than in sleeping cars.

He said he doubted that any more railroad equipment can be taken over for military use and still keep civilian life pulsing.

By January 1, he estimated, the backlog of troops in West Coast railheads will be about normal—10,000 men. He said a backlog of that size was desirable, because it assured that no equipment would stand idle.

HOLIDAY FURLOUGHS PROPOSED BY M'MAHON

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21—(AP) Senator McMahon (D-Conn.) today urged Secretary of War Patterson to give Christmas furloughs to soldiers who recently returned from overseas and were awaiting discharge.

McMahon's request was made in a telegram to Patterson. An aide said many servicemen in Connecticut had asked McMahon if he could arrange such a furlough for them.

150,000 GIs Stranded At Pacific Coast Ports

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 21. (AP)—The number of servicemen from the Pacific war stranded in west coast ports neared 150,000 today, and the Office of Defense Transportation said no improvements could be made in efforts to get them home.

Nothing Can Be Done

"There is nothing that can be done that isn't being done to expedite the movement of these men," Col. J. Monroe Johnson, director of defense transportation, told a senate committee in Washington.

He predicted the bottleneck in moving the men homeward from the West Coast would be broken by Jan. 1 and explained that 90 per cent of all east-bound passenger traffic from the West Coast now is military. He estimated the backlog on the Pacific coast would recede to a normal level of about 10,000 by Jan. 1.

Meanwhile, on the Atlantic the hopes of 70,000 soldiers for Christmas at home faded. Of all troops due in New York City between now and Dec. 25, only those docking today have a chance to be reunited with their families for the holiday.

For many of those who will not be home by Tuesday, weather was the villain. Buffeted by cold Atlantic gales ships were delayed which otherwise would have arrived in port in time.

Veterans Moved Ashore

San Francisco, with a backlog of 53,000 of whom 44,115 are soldiers, moved all of its incoming veterans ashore except for about 7,000 remaining on two vessels for lack of barracks space.

One of these ships, the transport Monterey, arrived today jammed with 4,300 soldiers, including men who failed to qualify for the passenger list at Manila but were crowded on anyway.

The group, composed of alternates for "scratches" on the list happily made the voyage although no "scratches" materialized. They forthwith formed "The Tail-Enders Club" and proclaimed they were:

"From sun-filled, cheer-laden home-for-Christmas glad-hearts dropped to gloomshocked bats of despair, to be left standing on the dock while the ship moved off for the promised land" and were "rescued from the depths of despair by being squeezed aboard the already overloaded SS Monterey."

Servicemen, Civilians Crowd Home-Bound Trains to Capacity

NEW YORK, Dec. 21—(AP) Soldiers, civilians and dischargees—trying to reach home for the gayest Christmas in five years—struggled into the nation's railroad trains today in what promised to become the greatest holiday rush of all time.

Railroads, staggering under an unprecedented crush of homing civilians, also had to contend with military travel which they said was heavier than at any time during the war.

And less railroad equipment was available to meet the holiday rush than in any other year, spokesmau said, because of deterioration and military demands.

Air lines reported such a demand for reservations that even waiting lists were discouraged because of prohibitive length.

New York's two great railroad stations, Pennsylvania and Grand Central, presented a kaleidoscopic picture of hurrying crowds. Thousands lined up at ticket windows, crowded into outbound trains, waited for telephones, vainly signaled for porters. Many were servicemen with discharge insignia.

Almost all trains carried standees, and the stations reported a telephone jam under a barrage of calls by those wanting to make reservations.

"The average rider thinks the war is over," said a spokesman for the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad. "For us—it's still on. We're carrying two and one half times as many troops as we did before the end of the war."

The Pennsylvania, with "every piece of available rolling stock pressed into service," reported a 10 per cent increase over the 1944 rush and a record military movement. Travel during the entire month of December has been the heaviest in the railroad's history, Pennsylvania representatives said.

About 25,000 telephone calls daily are being received by the Pennsylvania Railroad alone for reservations of all kinds, it was said.

Ship Battles Gale To Get Vets Home

Aboard the U.S.S. Randolph, Dec. 20 [Delayed] (AP)—Buffeted by mountainous seas and 70-mile winds, this converted aircraft carrier is striving valiantly to get 6,700 returning veterans of the Italian campaign home for Christmas.

Her speed cut at times to less than two knots by the same gale which damaged the cruiser Augusta and the carrier Wasp, the Randolph is driving ahead through the Azores squalls for New York.

For most of the men on board this is their first chance to spend the holidays at home in three years. Most of them spent last Christmas in the bitter cold of the high Appenines and many were fighting their way toward Cassino two years ago.

Originally scheduled to dock in New York on Sunday morning, the Randolph will now be lucky to make it by Christmas day.

The skipper, Capt. Jackson R. Tate, said that if the weather should break there still is a chance to reach the States by Christmas even. However, continued storms lie in the ship's path.

Among the 46 civilian passengers is Diomedes Arias Schreiber, Peruvian Ambassador to the Vatican, who is accompanied by his wife and three children.

42,700 More Vets Scheduled To Arrive

[By the Associated Press]

Twenty-four troop carriers, with 27,000 American service men, are scheduled to arrive today at three East Coast ports, while at Pacific points more than 15,700 troops are due to debark from 24 vessels.

Arriving at New York are 14 ships with about 10,700 men, at Boston, 4 with about 6,800, and at Newport News, Va., 6 with about 5,300.

LONDON, DEC. 21-(AP)-SUPPORT FOR AN EAST COAST HOME IN THE UNITED STATES FOR THE WORLD PEACE ORGAMIZATION INCREASED TODAY.

DELEGATES TO THE UNITED NATIONS PREPARATORY COMMISSION AGREED TO DECIDE TOMORROW WHETHER THEY WOULD VOTE ON CHOOSING AN EASTERN CITY OR A WESTERN CITY, TO NARROW DOWN THE AREA OF CHOICE.

FAVORING THE BRITISH SUGGESTION THAT THE UNITED NATIONS HAVE ITS HEADQUARTERS AS NEAR TO EUROPE AS POSSIBLE WERE CANADA, SOUTH AFRICA, TURKEY, DENMARK, NORWAY, BRAZIL AND BELGIUM.

MOST DELEGATES, ALTHOUGH THEY SHOWED NO MAJORITY PREFERENCE FOR ANY SPECIFIC U.S. COMMUNITY, AGREED THAT THE SITE SHOULD BE WELL REMOVED FROM WASHINGTON.

THE MOVE TO NARROW DOWN THE AREA WITHIN WHICH A SITE WILL BE CHOSEN CAME AFTER BRITISH DELEGATE C. K. WEBSTER SAID HE "WOULD CONSIDER THAT SOUND JUDGMENT AND CHIVALRY ARE DEAD IN THE WORLD" IF IN CHOOSING A WEST COAST SITE THE DELEGATES MOVED THE ORGANIZATION'S CAPITAL "3,000 MILES FARTHER" FROM EUROPE, WHOSE SUPPORTERS HAD BEEN "DEFEATED BY SUCH A NARROW MARGIN."

AUSTRALIA, CHINA, CHILE AND ECUADOR CONTINUED TO PLUMP FOR A SITE IN THE WEST, WITH SAN FRANCISCO AS TOP CHOICE.

THE DECISIONS OF THE COMMISSION WILL BE A BASIS FOR THE FIRST ELIMINATIONS BY A 12-MAN COMMITTEE, ESTABLISHED LAST NIGHT TO NARROW DOWN THE FIELD OF UNITED STATES COMMUNITIES WHICH HAVE OFFERED SITES FOR THE WORLD CAPITAL.

THE COMMITTEE WILL TOUR THE UNITED STATES AND THEN SELECT A MAXIMUM OF SIX CITIES AS CANDIDATES FOR THE CAPITAL. IT ALSO WILL SET A DEADLINE FOR NEW INVITATIONS FROM PROSPECTIVE SITES.

MEMBERS OF THE COMMITTEE WILL BE APPOINTED FROM AUSTRALIA, CHINA, CUBA, FRANCE, THE NETHERLANDS, IRAN, IRAQ, THE SOVIET UNION, THE UNITED KINGDOM, URUGUAY, YUGOSLAVIA AND POLAND. A PROPOSAL THAT THE UNITED STATES BE ADDED TO THE GROUP WAS DECLINED BY U.S. DELEGATE WILDER FOOTE.

THE COMMITTEE WILL START WORK AS SOON AS THE PREPARATORY COMMISSION ADJOURNS, PROBABLY SUNDAY. IT MUST COMPLETE THE JOB BEFORE THE END OF THE FIRST UNO ASSEMBLY, WHICH WILL CONVENE IN LONDON JAN. 10.

INVITATIONS WERE PRESENTED YESTERDAY BY NEW ORLEANS, RIDGEFIELD, CONN., ST. LOUIS, AND CINCINNATI.

MEANWHILE, THE TRUSTEESHIP COMMITTEE GAVE UNANIMOUS APPROVAL TO A SUBCOMMITTEE COMPROMISE ON THE TRANSFER OF LEAGUE OF NATIONS MANDATES INTO TRUST TERRITORIES. THE COMPROMISE PROVIDED THAT MANDATORY POWERS WOULD "ACT IN CONCERT WITH STATES DIRECTLY CONCERNED" IN WRITING AGREEMENTS TO TURN MANDATES OVER TO THE UNITED NATIONS.

THE AMERICAN EMBASSY EXPECTS BY JAN. 1 TO HAVE 6,500 APPLICATIONS FOR VISAS, THE MAXIMUM QUOTA ALLOTMENT. THE PENDING BILL WOULD ALLOW FROM 15,000 TO 20,000 DEPENDENTS OF SERVICE MEN TO ENTER THE UNITED STATES EACH MONTH.

FOUR HOSPITAL SHIPS HAVE BEEN ASSIGNED TENTATIVELY TO BEGIN TRANSPORTING SOME 25,000 WIVES AND 20,000 INFANTS OF SERVICEMEN, THE SPOKESMAN SAID. THE LIST OF VESSELS HAS NOT BEEN RELEASED.

"TO DO THE JOB QUICKLY, WE WILL NEED LARGER SHIPS LIKE THE EUROPA WHICH COULD HANDLE 2,500 BRIDES AND BABIES PLUS 2,000 SERVICE PERSONNEL," HE SAID.

PRIORITIES FOR BRIDES HAS BEEN ESTABLISHED ON THIS BASIS, THE SPOKESMAN SAID: "1. WOMEN TITH HUSBANDS IN UNITED STATES HOSPITALS; 2. THOSE WHOSE HUSBANDS HAVE BEEN DISCHARGED OR ARE STATIONED IN THE UNITED STATES; 3. ALL OTHERS."

AN ARMY SPOKESMAN SAID PREGNANT WIVES AND THOSE WITH YOUNG BABIES MIGHT BE DELAYED "BECAUSE FOR THEIR HEALTH, WE WILL NOT SHIP WOMEN WHO ARE MORE THAN SIX MONTHS PREGNANT OR UNTIL THEIR BABIES ARE THREE MONTHS OLD."

NIGHT LEAD REPARATIONS

DEC 22 1945

PARIS, DEC. 21--(AP)-- THE INTER-ALLIED CONFERENCE ON NON-RUSSIAN REPARATIONS FROM GERMANY ENDED TODAY WITH THE UNITED STATES WAIVING HER RIGHTS TO GERMAN SHIPS AND INDUSTRIAL EQUIPMENT ON THE GROUND THAT SHE HAD NOT SUFFERED DEPLETING LOSSES IN THESE FIELDS.

PROPOSALS SIGNED BY DELEGATES FROM 18 COUNTRIES FOR RATIFICATION BY THEIR GOVERNMENTS GAVE THE UNITED STATES AND BRITAIN "BASE QUOTAS" OF 28 PER CENT EACH AND FRANCE 16 PER CENT OF THE NON-RUSSIAN REPARATIONS.

PART OF THE VALUE OF THESE BASE QUOTAS WAS TO BE SUPPLIED, HOWEVER, OUT OF A SECOND SET OF QUOTAS FOR DIVIDING INDUSTRIAL AND SHIPPING MATERIEL ON THE BASIS OF EACH COUNTRY'S LOSSES. IN THESE THE UNITED STATES, CANADA AND SOUTH AFRICA VOLUNTARILY GAVE UP THE BULK OF THEIR SHARES.

THE EXTRA QUOTAS OF MATERIEL THUS MADE AVAILABLE WERE DISTRIBUTED AMONG ALL THE OTHER COUNTRIES EXCEPT BRITAIN, WHICH DID NOT ACCEPT THE SUPPLEMENT.

JAMES W. ANGELL, HEAD OF THE AMERICAN DELEGATION, SAID AT A PRESS CONFERENCE AFTER THE SESSION ENDED THAT THE OBJECT WAS "PRIMARILY SECURITY BY STRIPPING GERMANY RATHER THAN REPAYMENT OF LOSSES, WHICH IS IMPOSSIBLE."

HE SAID THE SETTING UP OF TWO CATEGORIES OF QUOTAS HAD BEEN MADE POSSIBLE BY THE "SENSIBLE" DECISION OF AMERICA, CANADA AND SOUTH AFRICA TO WAIVE CLAIMS TO MATERIEL.

IN ADDITION TO THE UNITED STATES, THE UNITED KINGDOM AND FRANCE, COUNTRIES AWARDED QUOTAS WERE YUGOSLAVIA, THE NETHERLANDS, CANADA, ZECHOSLOVAKIA, BELGIUM, GREECE, INDIA, NORWAY, AUSTRALIA, SOUTH AFRICA, NEW ZEALAND, DENMARK, LUXEMBOURG, EGYPT AND ALBANIA.

BY THE ARRANGEMENT ANNOUNCED BY THE INTER-ALLIED REPARATIONS COMMISSION, THE UNITED STATES GETS ONLY AN 11.8 PER CENT QUOTA IN THE "MATERIEL" OR "B" CATEGORY, CANADA GETS 1.5 PER CENT OF THIS CATEGORY AGAINST A 3.5 PER CENT BASE QUOTA AND SOUTH AFRICA GETS 0.1 PER CENT AGAINST A 0.7 BASE PERCENTAGE.

BRITAIN'S "B" PERCENTAGE IS VIRTUALLY THE SAME AS ITS BASE QUOTA--27.8. ALL OTHER COUNTRIES HAVE HIGHER PROPORTIONS OF MATERIEL THAN THEIR OVERALL QUOTAS. FRANCE, FOR INSTANCE, RECEIVED A "B" QUOTA OF 22.8 PER CENT.

THIS ARRANGEMENT DOES NOT AFFECT OTHER CLASSES OF REPARATIONS NOT UNDER THE HEADING MATERIEL. FOR THE MOMENT THESE

DEC 22 1945

CONSIST MAINLY OF GERMAN FOREIGN ASSETS. HOWEVER, THEY ALSO INCLUDE "CURRENT STOCK AND PRODUCTION", WHICH MEANS ANY SURPLUSES THAT GERMAN INDUSTRY MAY BE ABLE TO PRODUCE IN THE FUTURE. THIS ULTIMATELY MIGHT REPRESENT A LARGE PORTION OF REPARATIONS.

THE NON-RUSSIAN SHARE OF REPARATIONS FROM GERMANY CONSISTS OF THE EQUIVALENT OF 90 PER CENT OF INDEMNITIES TO BE EXACTED FROM THE WESTERN ZONES OF OCCUPATION.

RUSSIA AND POLAND WERE NOT REPRESENTED AT THE CONFERENCE BECAUSE OF ARRANGEMENTS MADE AT THE POTSDAM CONFERENCE.

DEC 22 1945

THE NON-RUSSIAN SHARE OF REPARATIONS IS TO BE COLLECTED FROM WESTERN GERMANY, FROM GERMAN ASSETS IN CERTAIN FOREIGN COUNTRIES, AND FROM RAW MATERIALS DELIVERED BY RUSSIA FROM EASTERN GERMANY. AT POTSDAM, IT WAS AGREED THAT RUSSIA SHOULD OBTAIN REPARATIONS FROM EASTERN GERMANY AND FROM

30. 24-32569

GERMAN ASSETS IN BULGARIA, FINLAND, HUNGARY, RUMANIA AND EASTERN AUSTRIA. IN ADDITION, THE POTSDAM AGREEMENT PROVIDED THAT SHE SHOULD TAKE 15 PER CENT OF THE [redacted] "UNNECESSARY" INDUSTRIAL CAPITAL EQUIPMENT FROM WESTERN GERMANY, IN EXCHANGE FOR AN EQUAL VALUE OF RAW MATERIALS FROM THE RUSSIAN-OCCUPIED ZONE, AND 10 PER CENT MORE OF THIS EQUIPMENT WITHOUT EXCHANGE. RUSSIA PLEDGED TO SETTLE POLISH INDUSTRIAL CLAIMS FROM ITS SHARE OF THE REPARATIONS.

RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE INTER-ALLIED COMMISSION DEALT WITH PERCENTAGES ONLY. THE ACTUAL VALUE OF AVAILABLE REPARATIONS HAS NOT BEEN ESTIMATED FINALLY BY THE ALLIED CONTROL COMMISSION AT BERLIN SINCE SOME OF IT, SUCH AS FUTURE SURPLUS PRODUCTION, MAY NOT BE TOTALED FOR A LONG TIME TO COME.

LATIN AMERICAN COUNTRIES WERE NOT REPRESENTED AT THE CONFERENCE. THEY ARE TO INDEMNIFY THEMSELVES OUT OF NATIONALIZED GERMAN ASSETS IN THEIR TERRITORIES.

TO THE REGRET OF FRANCE AND OTHER INVADED COUNTRIES, THE CONFERENCE DECIDED NOT TO DEAL WITH RESTITUTION OF GOODS STOLEN BY THE GERMANS.

IT VOTED TO PROPOSE CREATION OF A FUND TO TAKE CARE OF "UNREPATRIABLE" DISPLACED PERSONS WHO WERE VICTIMS OF GERMAN DEPORTATION MEASURES.

PATTON

LONDON, DEC. 21-(AP)-PRIME MINISTER CLEMENT ATTLEE TONIGHT SENT THE FOLLOWING MESSAGE OF CONDOLENCE TO MRS. GEORGE S.PATTON, JR.:

FOURTH LEAD PATTON

BY RICHARD A.O'REGAN

HEIDELBERG, DEC. 21-(AP)-HARD-FIGHTING GEN.GEORGE S.PATTON, JR., DIED PEACEFULLY IN A HOSPITAL BED TONIGHT FROM AN AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENT WHICH HE DESCRIBED AS "A HELL OF A WAY TO DIE."

HE DIED IN HIS SLEEP FROM A BLOOD CLOT.

THE 60-YEAR-OLD FORMER CAVALRY OFFICER WHO BECAME ONE OF THE MOST BRILLIANT EXPONENTS OF ARMORED WARFARE THE WORLD HAS KNOWN WAS INJURED 12 DAYS AGO WHEN HIS SEDAN COLLIDED WITH AN ARMY TRUCK ON ONE OF THE SUPERHIGHWAYS HITLER BUILT FOR CONQUEST. PATTON WAS GOING PHEASANT SHOOTING.

HE COMPLAINED AT THE TIME OF AN INJURED NECK AND TOLD SOLDIERS WHO LIFTED HIM INTO THE AMBULANCE:

"THIS IS A HELL OF A WAY TO DIE."

THE MOST SKILLED ARMY SURGEONS IN EUROPE FOUND THAT HIS NECK WAS BROKEN. HIS BODY WAS PARALYZED FROM THE WAIST DOWN. BUT THE SAME INDOMINABLE SPIRIT WHICH LED HIM AND HIS FAMOUS THIRD ARMY ON THE VICTORIOUS DASH FROM NORMANDY ACROSS THE RHINE AND GERMANY INTO CZECHOSLOVAKIA SEEMED AT FIRST TO BE BEATING AWAY THE DEATH THAT CAME AT 5:50 P.M.(11:50 A.M.EASTERN STANDARD TIME).

HIS WIFE WAS AT THE BEDSIDE WHEN DEATH CAME.

DEC 22 1945

IT WAS ONLY YESTERDAY THAT HE TOOK HIS FIRST TURN FOR THE WORSE. PULMONARY COMPLICATIONS DEVELOPED WHICH TODAY WEAKENED HIS HEART.

PATTON AT ONCE WAS ONE OF THE MOST SUCCESSFUL MILITARY LEADERS AND ONE OF THE MOST CONTROVERISAL. HIS SWASHBUCKLING CAMPAIGNS IN AFRICA AND SICILY FIRST BROUGHT HIM TO WORLD ATTENTION.

BUT IN THE HEART OF THE SICILIAN CAMPAIGN, HE SLAPPED A HOSPITALIZED SOLDIER, AND THEN PUBLICLY APOLOGIZED TO ALL UNITS IN HIS COMMAND.

A201

GEN.EISENHOWER STILL BELIEVED IN THE TWO-GUNNED COMMANDER, AND WHEN GEN.OMAR BRADLEY'S FIRST ARMY BROKE THROUGH GERMAN LINES IN NORMANDY, PATTON WAS PLACED IN COMMAND OF THE FAMOUS THIRD ARMY WHICH POURED THROUGH THE BREACH, SET UP THE CAPTURE OF PARIS AND THE LIBERATION OF FRANCE AND DROVE STRAIGHT UP TO THE SIEGFRIED LINE.

ONE OF PATTON'S GREATEST TRIUMPHS OCCURRED ALMOST EXACTLY A YEAR BEFORE HIS DEATH. WHEN THE GERMANS MADE THEIR LAST BID FOR VICTORY IN THE ARDENNES BREAKTHROUGH, PATTON'S ARMY WAS THROWN INTO THE GAP AND IT WAS LARGELY THIRD ARMY PRESSURE ON THE SOUTH SIDE OF THE BULGE WHICH DROVE THE GERMANS BACK.

WHEN THE FINAL CAMPAIGN OF THE WAR STARTED A FEW MONTHS LATER, HE LED HIS THIRD ARMY ACROSS THE RHINE AND ADVANCED VIRTUALLY AT WILL THROUGH THE DECAYING GERMAN ARMIES.

PLACED IN COMMAND OF OCCUPATION FORCES IN BAVARIA, PATTON RAN INTO DIFFICULTY AGAIN BY EXPRESSING IMPATIENCE WITH THE DENAZIFICATION. HE WAS RELIEVED OF COMMAND OF THE THIRD ARMY AND GIVEN THE COMMAND OF THE 15TH ARMY, LARGELY A PAPER ORGANIZATION OCCUPIED WITH WRITING A HISTORY OF THE CAMPAIGNS.

COL.R.G.SPURLING, WAR DEPARTMENT MEDICAL SPECIALIST, SAID THE MEDICAL FACTS OF THE CASE WERE THESE:

"UNTIL THE MORNING OF DEC. 19, PATTON MADE VERY SATISFACTORY PROGRESS HIS GENERAL CONDITION WAS GOOD AND HE WAS CONFIDENT HE WOULD RECOVER.

"THE FIRST UNTOWARD SIGN WAS WHEN HE HAD DIFFICULTY RAISING SECRETIONS FROM HIS BRONCHIAL TUBES.

"AT APPROXIMATELY 2 A.M.YESTERDAY, HE HAD AN ACUTE ATTACK OF BREATHLESSNESS AND PALLOR. THE ATTACK LASTED ABOUT AN HOUR AND WAS RELIEVED BY MEDICATION. AT THAT TIME, WE FELT RELATIVELY SURE THE GENERAL HAD PULMONARY EMBOLISM."

HAMILTON,MASS., DEC 21-(AP)-GREEN MEADOWS, THE RAMBLING COLONIAL HOME OF THE LATE GEN.GEORGE S.PATTON, JR., WAS UNTENANTED SAVE BY CARETAKERS WHEN THE NEWS OF HIS DEATH CAME TODAY BUT NEIGHBORS AND FRIENDS WERE SHOCKED AT THE NEWS FROM HEIDELBERG.

"HE WAS GETTING ALONG SO WELL, WE THOUGHT" WAS THE GENERAL COMMENT. "IT'S A GREAT BLOW TO EVERYONE HERE."

NONE OF THE PATTON FAMILY WAS AT GREEN MEADOWS WHERE, ONLY SIX MONTHS AGO, HE RETURNED JUNE 15 FOR HIS FIRST VACATION SINCE THE INVASION OF NORTH AFRICA AND WAS WELCOMED HOME BY 10,000 NEIGHBORS IN AN IMPROMPTU RECEPTION.

HIS CLOSE FRIEND, DR.PEER P.JOHNSON, CHIEF SURGEON OF THE NEARBY BEVERLY HOSPITAL, A FAVORITE CHARITY OF MRS.PATTON, HEARD THE SAD NEWS FROM HEIDELBERG JUST AS HE WENT INTO THE OPERATING ROOM. IT WAS A HEAVY LOSS TO THE SURGEON AS IT WAS TO ALL WHO KNEW THE PATTONS HERE.

WASHINGTON, DEC. 21-(AP)-THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES HEARD TODAY THAT GENERAL GEORGE S. PATTON, JR., NEITHER SLAPPED THE SOLDIER NOR SWAM THE RIVER. With Patton

IT HEARD THESE THINGS FROM REP. RANKIN (D-MISS), WHO SAID PATTON TOLD HIM ABOUT BOTH FAMOUS EPISODES DURING HIS RECENT VISIT TO THIS COUNTRY.

THE GENERAL, RANKIN SAID, MERELY LAID HIS HANDS ON THE SHOULDERS OF THE G. I. WHO WAS SUPPOSED TO HAVE BEEN SLAPPED AND TOLD HIM TO PULL HIMSELF TOGETHER.

"I DIDN'T SLAP HIM," RANKIN QUOTED PATTON AS SAYING.

AND, THE MISSISSIPPIAN ADDED, PATTON ALSO TOLD HIM:

" I DIDN'T SWIM THAT RIVER; I WADED IT."

THE TRUTH OF THE MATTER, RANKIN SAID, WAS THAT PATTON, SEKING TO ENCOURAGE HIS MEN AS THEY APPROACHED THE SURE RIVER IN LUXEMBURG IN THE SPRING OF 1945, WADED INTO IT AND WALKED ACROSS, IN ICE WATER UP TO HIS NECK, ON A SUBMERGED FOOTWALK. THE RIVER IS ABOUT 150 FEET WIDE AT THE POINT OF THE CROSSING.

RANKIN EULOGIZED PATTON AS "THE OUTSTANDING MILITARY LEADER DEVELOPED IN THIS WAR," AND COMPARED HIM WITH CONFEDERATE GENERALS NATHAN BEDFORD FORREST AND STONEWALL JACKSON.

THERE WERE MANY SIMILAR TRIBUTES IN BOTH HOUSE AND SENATE.

REP.EDITH NOURSE ROGERS (R-MASS) TOLD THE HOUSE SHE KNEW PATTON PERSONALLY AND REGARDED HIM AS A MAN WHO HAD DISCIPLINED HIMSELF PHYSICALLY AND MENTALLY IN BOYHOOD AND MANHOOD.

"HE WAS A VERY GREAT SOLDIER AND A VERY GREAT MAN," SAID SPEAKER RAYBURN (D-TEX). "HE WAS THE TYPE OF CHARACTER THAT WOULD HAVE HIS UPS AND DOWNS IN LIFE. HE HAD HIS. BUT ALL IN ALL HIS WAS A GREAT AND SERVICEABLE LIFE TO HIS COUNTRY."

SENATOR CARVILLE (D-NEV) PRESIDING IN THE SENATE, CALLED ATTENTION TO THE GENERAL'S DEATH AND SENATOR AUSTIN (R-VT) TOLD THE CHAMBER THAT THE NATION HAD LOST A "GREAT LEADER NOT ONLY OF OUR ARMED FORCES BUT ALSO OF THOUGHT," ADDING: "HE WAS A CHAMPION OF PEACE."

AT THE WAR DEPARTMENT, SECRETARY OF WAR PATTERSON SAID THAT GENERAL PATTON'S DEATH "WILL BE FELT SEVERELY BY ALL RANKS OF THE ARMY AND BY THE MILLIONS OF AMERICANS WHO SO HIGHLY ADMIRED HIS MAGNIFICENT LEADERSHIP AND BRILLIANT ACCOMPLISHMENTS THROUGHOUT THE WAR."

HE EXPRESSED THIS THOUGHT IN A MESSAGE TO MRS.PATTON IN WHICH HE TOLD HER THAT THE GENERAL'S "LOSS IS A HEAVY BLOW TO ALL OF US."

THE DEPRECIATION, EFFECTIVE LAST MIDNIGHT, AFFECTED THREE-FOURTHS OF HUNGARY'S INFLATED BANKNOTE CIRCULATION EXCEPTING THE NOTES ISSUED BY THE SOVIET ARMY OF OCCUPATION.

THE MEASURE IS EFFECTED BY MAKING THE NOTES WORTH BUT ONE-FOURTH THEIR DENOMINATIONAL VALUE UNTIL JAN. 1, AFTER THAT DATE THE NOTES WILL BE INVALIDATED UNLESS STAMPS ARE PURCHASED AND ATTACHED TO THEM. THE MEASURE THUS TAKES THE FORM OF A LEVY.

MANY FINANCIAL EXPERTS, HOWEVER, EXPRESSED BELIEF THE STEP WOULD NOT CHECK HUNGARY'S INFLATION BECAUSE THE MEASURE DOES NOT AFFECT WAGES AND DOES NOT CHANGE THE PURCHASING POWER OF THE WORKERS. IT ALSO DOES NOT CHANGE THE GOVERNMENT BUDGET.

FOR THE FIRST TIME IN MANY MONTHS, THE HUNGARIAN NATIONAL BANK MANAGED TO OBTAIN DOLLARS TODAY. THE RATE WAS 154,000 IN STAMPED PENGO TO THE DOLLAR.

TWO DAYS AGO THE BLACK MARKET RATE WAS 240,000 PENGO TO THE DOLLAR. (THE PENGO WAS WORTH 29 CENTS IN JUNE, 1941, AND .01 CENTS IN OCTOBER, 1945.)

TOKYO, SATURDAY, DEC. 22-(AP)-EX-Ppremier HIDEKI TOJO AND HIS ENTIRE CABINET WHO JOINTLY PLUNGED JAPAN INTO WAR WILL BE TRIED JOINTLY AS WAR CRIMINALS IN THE FIRST OF THE MAJOR WAR TRIALS DUE TO START IN FEBRUARY, IT WAS LEARNED AUTHORITATIVELY TODAY.

AT THE SAME TIME, IT WAS MADE KNOWN PRINCE MORIMASA NASHIMOTO AND SEVERAL OTHER JAPANESE NOW HELD IN SUGAMO PRISON AS ALLEGED WAR CRIMINALS SOON MAY BE FREED.

JOSEPH B. KEENAN, CHIEF WAR CRIMINAL PROSECUTOR, WOULD NOT SAY DEFINITELY ANY JAPANESE WILL BE RELEASED, BUT IN ANSWER TO A DIRECT

QUERY CONCERNING THE PRINCE HE ANSWERED:
"IF THE AVAILABLE EVIDENCE FAILS TO SHOW REASONABLE CAUSE TO BELIEVE THAT CERTAIN MEN ARE GUILTY, WE SHALL HAVE TO RELEASE THEM. I CAN SAY THAT WE ARE SCRUTINIZING THE CASE OF PRINCE NASHIMOTO FOR THIS PURPOSE."

PRINCE NASHIMOTO, WHO SURRENDERED AT SUGAMO PRISON DEC. 12, WAS THE FIRST JAPANESE OF ROYAL LINEAGE TO BE NAMED A WAR CRIMINAL SUSPECT. HE HELD A FIELD MARSHAL'S RANK IN THE JAPANESE ARMY AND HAD BEEN SUPREME WAR COUNCILOR AND LORD CUSTODIAN OF THE NATIONAL SHRINES. HIS DAUGHTER MARRIED PRINCE RI-GIN, DAUPHIN OF THE ONETIME ROYAL HOUSE OF KOREA.

ASKED WHETHER TOJO AND HIS CABINET WOULD BE CHARGED WITH THE DE OF A SPECIFIC SAILOR AT PEARL HARBOR, KEENAN SAID THE CHARGE WOULD BE PROMOTING, PLANNING AND DESIGNING A WAR AGGRESSION IN VIOLATION OF INTERNATIONAL COVENANTS.

"IF WE TRIED THESE MEN FOR MURDER, THE CASE WOULD GET BELOW THE LEVELS OF THE INTERNATIONAL OR GLOBAL CRIME OF WHICH THEY ARE CLEARLY GUILTY," HE CONTINUED. "IT IS NOT THE DEATH OF ONE SAILOR THAT IS INVOLVED, BUT RATHER THE DEATH AND DESTRUCTION THOUSANDS OF MILES FROM JAPAN, AFFECTING TENS OF THOUSANDS OF PEOPLE."

THE PROSECUTION URGED THAT IT BE MADE CLEAR THAT "WE MUST GO BACK BEYOND PEARL HARBOR A CONSIDERABLE DISTANCE TO FIX THE GUILT."

"IN SUMMARY," HE CONCLUDED, "WE ARE TRYING THESE JAPANESE WAR CRIMINALS AS OUR DUTY TO CIVILIZATION. WE HAVE NO CHOICE ANY MORE. WE MUST PREVENT WAR. ANY APPROACH OTHER THAN A PREVENTATIVE ONE IS A STUPID ONE."

JAPANESE SOURCES SAID THE SHIDEHARA CABINET HAS DECIDED TO CONDUCT A "PEOPLE'S TRIAL" TO DETERMINE PERSONS RESPONSIBLE FOR THE WAR, ON THE BASIS OF INVESTIGATIONS BY A FACT-FINDING BODY UNDER THE CABINET. SUCH A TRIAL WOULD BE APART FROM THE ALLIED WAR CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS.

QUERY CONCERNING THE PRINCE HE ANSWERED:
"IF THE AVAILABLE EVIDENCE FAILS TO SHOW REASONABLE CAUSE TO BELIEVE THAT CERTAIN MEN ARE GUILTY, WE SHALL HAVE TO RELEASE THEM. I CAN SAY THAT WE ARE SCRUTINIZING THE CASE OF PRINCE NASHIMOTO FOR THIS PURPOSE."

PRINCE NASHIMOTO, WHO SURRENDERED AT SUGAMO PRISON DEC. 12, WAS THE FIRST JAPANESE OF ROYAL LINEAGE TO BE NAMED A WAR CRIMINAL SUSPECT. HE HELD A FIELD MARSHAL'S RANK IN THE JAPANESE ARMY AND HAD BEEN SUPREME WAR COUNCILOR AND LORD CUSTODIAN OF THE NATIONAL SHRINES. HIS DAUGHTER MARRIED PRINCE RI-GIN, DAUPHIN OF THE ONETIME ROYAL HOUSE OF KOREA.

ASKED WHETHER TOJO AND HIS CABINET WOULD BE CHARGED WITH THE DE[ATH] OF A SPECIFIC SAILOR AT PEARL HARBOR, KEENAN SAID THE CHARGE WOUL[D] BE PROMOTING, PLANNING AND DESIGNING A WAR AGGRESSION IN VIOLATION OF INTERNATIONAL COVENANTS.

"IF WE TRIED THESE MEN FOR MURDER, THE CASE WOULD GET BELOW TH[E] LEVELS OF THE INTERNATIONAL OR GLOBAL CRIME OF WHICH THEY ARE CLE[AR] GUILTY," HE CONTINUED. "IT IS NOT THE DEATH OF ONE SAILOR THAT IS INVOLVED, BUT RATHER THE DEATH AND DESTRUCTION THOUSANDS OF MILES FROM JAPAN, AFFECTING TENS OF THOUSANDS OF PEOPLE."

THE PROSECUTION URGED THAT IT BE MADE CLEAR THAT "WE MUST GO BACK BEYOND PEARL HARBOR A CONSIDERABLE DISTANCE TO FIX THE GUILT."

"IN SUMMARY," HE CONCLUDED, "WE ARE TRYING THESE JAPANESE WAR CRIMINALS AS OUR DUTY TO CIVILIZATION. WE HAVE NO CHOICE ANY MORE. WE MUST PREVENT WAR. ANY APPROACH OTHER THAN A PREVENTATIVE ONE IS A STUPID ONE."

JAPANESE SOURCES SAID THE SHIDEHARA CABINET HAS DECIDED TO CONDUCT A "PEOPLE'S TRIAL" TO DETERMINE PERSONS RESPONSIBLE FOR THE WAR, ON THE BASIS OF INVESTIGATIONS BY A FACT-FINDING BODY UNDER THE CABINET. SUCH A TRIAL WOULD BE APART FROM THE ALLIED WAR CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS.

THE TWO DEFENDANTS, REAR ADM.SHIGEMATSU SAKAIDARA, FORMER COMMANDER AT WAKE, AND HIS EXECUTIVE OFFICER, LT.COMDR.HOICHI TACHIBANA, SAT SULLENLY IN THE PRISONER'S BOX AS WITNESSES CONTRADICTED THE ALIBI THE OFFICERS HAD GIVEN AMERICAN INVESTIGATORS.

THEY HAD SAID THE CIVILIAN PRISONERS WERE KILLED BY AMERICAN BOMBINGS OR WERE SHOT AS THEY TRIED TO ESCAPE.

WARRANT OFFICER TOUMIRO MIYAKI SAID THE ILL-FATED 98, WHO HAD BEEN FORCED TO WORK FOR 22 MONTHS FOR THE JAPANESE, WERE TAKEN FROM THEIR LIVING QUARTERS ABOUT 7 P.M. OCT. 7 AND MARCHED SINGLE FILE TO A LONELY BEACH. MIYAKI WITNESSED THE DEATH MARCH.

MIYAKI TOLD OF HEARING A VOLLEY OF SHOSTS. LATER WHEN HE VISITED THE SCENE WITH A BURIAL PARTY, HE SAW BODIES OF AMERICANS WHERE THEY HAD FALLEN, THEIR HANDS AND ANKLES BOUND, BLINDFOLDS COVERING THEIR EYES.

THE BODIES WERE BURIED HASTILY IN ANTI-TANK DITCHES.

THE WITNESS SAID THAT TWO WEEKS BEFORE THE SLAUGHTER, THE ADMIRAL BRIEFED HIS OFFICERS ON WHAT THEY MUST SAY IF THEY EVER WERE QUSTIONED ABOUT THE PRISONERS' FATE. FORTY OF THE PRISONERS, THEY WERE TO SAY, WERE KILLED BY BOMBINGS; THE OTHERS WERE SHOT WHEN THEY TRIED TO ESCAPE AND MADE A STAND WITH RIFLES AND HAND GRENADES.

Decision at London Is by Vote of 25 to 5—Britain and Russia Oppose West.

London, Dec. 22 (A. P.).—The United Nations Preparatory Commission's committee on sites voted today to establish the permanent headquarters of the world peace agency somewhere in the eastern part of the United States.

The decision, taken by a vote of twenty-five to five, with ten members abstaining, ruled out San Francisco, the birthplace of the United Nations Organization, as well as Denver and St. Louis.

Previously, a vote to establish the headquarters in the Western part of the United States had been lost by a vote of twenty-two to six, with twelve abstentions. Britain, backed by Russia and the southeastern European countries, led the fight to eliminate the West.

Australia led the fight for the West, favoring San Francisco. It was agreed that the Mississippi and Missouri rivers should serve as the dividing line between the East and West.

New Zealand for West.

J. V. Wilson of New Zealand opposed the action, saying "San Francisco will have reasonable cause for complaint if the east is chosen. We have established an interim commission to select six cities to present to the general assembly for final selection. Now, if we take this vote, we are cutting through the work of the commission. San Francisco should be among the six cities presented to the general assembly.

W. R. Hodgson of Australia also chided Britain's delegate, Philip Noel-Baker, for pressing for a vote between East and West.

"If you vote you will deliberately undo the work that you have done during the past four weeks,' he cried. "Suddenly you are going to impose an overriding ban—one criteria. That criteria is the nearness to Europe. It will be an insult to all delegations that have come from America to present their cases and offer sites for the Union Nations headquarters."

How the Votes Stacked Up.

The first vote on whether the site should be in the West was:

For the West—Australia, Chile, Ecuador, Honduras, Iran, Saudi, Arabia.

Against—Argentina, Belgium, Brazil, White Russia, Canada, China, Colombia, Czecho-Slovakia, Denmark, Ethiopia, France, India, Liberia, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Poland, Soviet Union, Turkey, Ukraine, Britain, Yugoslavia.

Abstentions — Bolivia, Cuba, Dominican Republic, Egypt, Haiti, Mexico, Nicaragua, Peru, Syria, United States, Uruguay, Venezuela.

To establish the site in the East the vote was:

For—Argentina, Belgium, Brazil, White-Russia, Canada, Colombia, Cuba, Czecho-Slovakia, Denmark, Ethiopia, India, Iran, Mexico, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Peru, Poland, Soviet Union, Turkey, Ukraine, United Kingdom, Uruguay, Venezuela and Yugoslavia.

Against — Australia, China, Ecuador, France, Liberia.

Abstentions — Bolivia, Chile, Dominican Republic, Egypt, Haiti, Honduras, Nicaragua, Saudi Arabia, Syria and United States.

This decision will establish one of the qualifications to guide the twelve-man committee which will tour the United States and then select a maximum of six cities as candidates for the headquarters.

Britain's Stand

Britain had led the unsuccessful fight to locate the capital in Europe and her delegate, C. K. Webster, said yesterday he "would consider that sound judgment and chivalry are dead in the world" if in choosing a west coast city the delegates moved the headquarters "3,000 miles farther" from Europe, whose supporters had been "defeated by such a narrow margin."

Supporting the British position were Canada, South Africa, Turkey, Denmark, Norway, Brazil and Belgium.

West coast advocates, with San Francisco the leading candidate, included Australia, China, Chile and Ecuador. Most delegates apparently agree that the city chosen should be some distance from Washington.

New York City Area Close Second in Running—Has Soviet Backing

London, Dec. 22—(AP)—Most delegates to the United Natons Preparatory Commission appeared tonight to favor some small New England community in the vicinity of Boston as the permanent home of the World Peace Agency.

The New York City area was considered a close second, but other areas still were in the running, and many delegates said they still had open minds.

The shift to New England developed in informal discussions after the commission voted 20 to five to establish the permanent headquarters of the United Nations organization in the Eastern United States, thus eliminating such bidders as Denver, San Francisco, and the Black Hills area.

British Like Boston Area

The British are understood to favor a small community in the Boston area. Others favored the area because of its distance from the District of Columbia, whose influence many delegates say they want to avoid.

However, the Russians are believed to favor a headquarters near New York, which they consider the most international of American cities.

Other places still being considered include Newport, R. I., and Hyde Park, N. Y., the home of the late President Roosevelt.

An interim committee of 12 members is charged with choosing a list of six possible sites for a final choice by the General Assembly which meets January 10. The committee was expected to report during the early sessions of the assembly.

The committee must decide who will visit the United States to tour the sites suggested, when the trip will be made and what areas will be visited.

Decide on Eastern Site

The vote in the preparatory commission to establish the headquarters in the east was forced by Britain and the Ukrainian Republic, supported by Czechoslovakia and Norway. A motion to choose the west previously had lost by 22 to 6, with 12 abstentions. It had been suggested that the Mississippi and Missouri Rivers be the dividing line between East and West. St. Louis was not definitely ruled out since it is on the border line.

New Zealand's delegate maintained that San Francisco, in any event, should be among the six cities to be presented for the approval of the General Assembly, and the Australian delegate, also backing San Francisco, criticized the British for forcing the vote.

Voting to establish the site in the east were Argentina, Belgium, Brazil, White-Russia, Canada, Colombia, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Ethiopia, India, Iran, Mexico, The Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Peru, Poland, the Soviet Union, Turkey, the Ukrainian Republic, the United Kingdom, Uruguay, Venezuela and Yugoslavia.

Against the east were Australia, China, Ecuador, France, and Liberia.

Ten delegates abstained.

The commission, after the vote, cabled a message of gratitude to the citizens of San Francisco, host city for the conference which brought the United Nations Organization into being.

San Francisco Regrets

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 22 (AP).—Expressions of regret came from city officials today as it appeared San Francisco had lost its bid to become the headquarters of the United Nations Organizations.

C. E. Baen, president of the San Francisco Convention and Tourist Bureau, commented: "If it is true that San Francisco is definitely eliminated . . . we offer our congratulations to the fortunate city finally selected. . . . It must be remembered that the odds against winning so great a prize are always great for any individual competitor. . . . Incalculable good has been done San Francisco by being the founding place of the United Nations."

British Ask Czechs To Pay Investors In Pounds Sterling

SlovakCrownsAreRegarded asAdequateCompensation From Nationalized Plants

LONDON, Dec. 22 (AP).—Great Britain has asked Czechoslovakia to compensate in pounds sterling British investors in nationalized Czech industries, a Foreign Office spokesman disclosed tonight. He said parallel representations may have been made by the United States.

In a note handed to the Czechoslovakian government by the British Ambassador at Prague, the British asked for assurance of "adequate compensation," and made it clear that Slovak crowns were not regarded as adequate, since they were not acceptable outside Czechoslovakia at the present exchange rate of 201 crowns to a pound ($4).

British investors have shares in the big Skoda plants, now turning out locomotives and other heavy equipment, and other industries.

The note, expressing hope that Czechoslovakia would find it convenient to pay in pounds sterling, suggested that a contrary decision might have adverse influence on future British credits and British purchase of Czech productions.

TURKS VOTE MORE FUNDS FOR ARMY

London, Dec. 22 (A. P.).—The Turkish National Assembly approved a defense budget calling for the strengthening of the Army, Ankara radio reported today, after Foreign Minister Hasan Saka made assurances that Turkey was ready to strengthen her friendship with Russia. The size of the budget was not announced.

"Not even failure on the part of the Soviet Union," Saka said, "to renew the pact of friendship and non-aggression which existed between us has lessened our desire for and aim of friendship."

he continued, "that the straits belong to the Turkish nation and that the Kars plain is the very backbone of the Turkish nation. x x x Should Turkey and Russia fail to remain friends, this state of affairs will give rise to great losses and agony for both nations. It is my heartfelt wish that the two governments act in wisdom, which is the only path leading to the reestablishment of the old order of cordial relations."

Foreign Minister Hasan Saka declared: "x x x We will continue to apply the same national policy which asks nothing of anyone and gives no one anything."

Saka concluded: "not even the failure of the Soviets to renew the friendship and non-agression pact which existed between us has lessened our desire for and aim of friendship x x x."

Russian newspapers the same day prominently displayed a letter by two intellectuals demanding a 180-mile stretch on Turkey's Black sea coast be ceded to Russia.

TURKEY TO KEEP PRESENT BORDERS

WASHINGTON. Dec. 22—(AP) Appeals for Russian-Turkish friendship were made by two high officials in the Grand National assembly at Angara Thursday. The press attache of the Turkish embassy today released a resume of the statements reflecting a firm intention to retain present frontiers.

"If we are to take at their face value information given out by foreign news agencies and press, it appears that our eastern neighbor has some demands on Turkey," said General Kiazim Karabekir, a prominent figure in reaching accord between the nations' more than two decades ago.

"The whole world should know,"

Lord Haw Haw to Die Jan. 3

LONDON, Dec. 22 (AP).—William Joyce, whose appeal from his death sentence for high treason was dismissed by the House of Lords this week, will be executed at Wandsworth prison on Jan 3, it was announced today. Joyce was convicted of broadcasting Nazi propaganda from Germany during the war.

SEAMAN FAILS IN 5 MILE SWIM

LIVERPOOL, Dec. 22 — (AP) Mrs. Veronica Lamoureux, whose husband, a former GI, nearly drowned when he dove off a Victory ship today and tried to swim five miles to reach her, said sadly tonight, "I did so hope he would be here for Christmas."

The Ad'lland Herbert John Lamoureux, 22, of Fitchburg, Mass., jumped from the deck of the Rushville Victory after being told by landing officials that he could not go ashore because he lacked an entrance visa. A naval launch rescued him.

"I just felt I must see my wife and baby before Christmas," Lamoureux, a ship's mess attendant, told immigration officials, who put him aboard the liner Argentina, which is taking him back to the United States.

Lamoureux and his 23-year-old wife, a former British land army girl, were married when he was stationed in England. Their baby, Elaine Marie, was born five weeks ago.

When Lamoureux left England, his wife said, his last words were: "'I shall be coming back as soon as I can.' But I can't understand this diving overboard business because my husband is very quiet and not given to impulses."

While still in England as a soldier, Lamoureux applied for passage to the United States for his wife, and hoped she soon would follow him. After he got home he heard she was going to have a baby and tried harder than ever to get her on a ship.

Then about a month ago, he heard about the birth of Elaine Marie.

"That was the climax," he said. "I got a job as mess man on the Rushville Victory which I heard was going to England."

But at Plymouth officials wouldn't let him go ashore, and he decided to take a chance. "As we were steaming out," he said, "I dived overboard. I thought it was only about a half mile to shore."

It was five, and he was fully clothed, in a rough, icy sea.

"I felt myself weakening," he said, "so when I saw lights on the breakwater I shouted for help."

Men on the breakwater saw Lamoureux bobbing in the moonlight and put out a naval launch to pick him up.

cessfully to swim five miles to shore to spend Christmas with his English wife and five week old daughter.

Fully dressed this ex-soldier Herbert John Lamoureux, 22, of Fitchburg, Mass., struggled for an hour in the rough, icy sea before he clambered [illegible] onto a rock three miles from shore.

A naval launch rescued him and British immigration officials regretfully deported him at once because he had no entrance visa. He was placed aboard the liner Argentina, which is taking him back to the United States.

After his attempt had failed, Lamoureux declared:

"This is awful tough. All I want is to see my wife and daughter. I've been counting the days. Why can't I have a break?

"Why should we be separted. We were so happy together."

Lamoureux had lived with his wife, a former member of Britain's Land Army, in Liverpool until he had to return to the United States for demobilization from the Army. For months, he said, he waited for her to join him, and then he heard about the baby.

Failing to get a visa to return to Britain, his eagerness became desperation. Finally he sailed from New York aboard the Rushville Victory as a mess attendant, deciding to take his chances on getting ashore when the ship reached England.

He dived overboard after landing officials told him he could not go down the gangway into a tender.

FRANCE AWAITS CABINET ACTION ON DEVALUATION

Paris, Dec. 22—(AP)—Widespread speculation that the cabinet would meet tomorrow in a special session to decide on devaluation of the franc appeared both in the press and financial circles today, but there was no official confirmation.

Members of the constituent assembly predicted that devaluation of the franc, a step regarded by proponents as leading towards full scale resumption of international trade, would be enacted before December 31.

The government is known to want to stabilize its money before ratification of the Bretton Woods monetary agreement, scheduled for debate in the constituent assembly the day after Christmas.

The press and financial circles said devaluation was "imminent," and predicted that the franc would probably be pegged at 125 to the dollar and 500 to the pound sterling.

French Postwar Army To Number 525,000 Men

Paris, Dec. 22 — (AP) — France's postwar "streamlined" army will be composed of 500,000 recruits and 25,000 officers, all highly-trained picked men, the Ministry of Information said today, while the Navy will have 65,000 men.

The total will include 105,000 in the French Home Army, 100,000 in North Africa, 120,000 in the French Army of Occupation in Germany, 120,000 in the colonies and Far East and 55,000 Gendarmes, Mobile Guardsmen and firemen.

Gen. Jean de Lattre de Tassigny, Inspector General of the French Army and chief of its general staff, said that military service would be reduced from two years to 13 or 14 months, and that troops from classes of 1939 through 1942 would be demobilized before February 1.

Army Planes Sold To Foreign Lines

Paris, Dec. 22 (A. P.).—The sale of five United States Army transport planes to Irish and Swedish airlines and of twenty-three trainer planes to the Norwegian Government for a total of almost $300,000 was announced today by the Office of the Foreign Liquidation Commissioner.

The Irish Airlines purchased three C-47 transports for $25,000 each. Swedish Aerotransport bought a C-47 for $25,000 and a C-53 for $60,000. The advanced trainers went for $138,000.

In addition, the Netherlands Government has leased fourteen C-54 transports for eighteen months at $15,000 each per year.

Army Reports Status Of ETO Units for Homeward Journey

Paris, Dec. 22—(AP)—The vanguard of homeward bound men of the U. S. 100th Infantry Division was at sea today, U. S. Army Headquarters announced, while the first elements of the Second Armored Division moved into the staging area at Marseille preparatory to departure.

The reported status of other divisions:

Seventy-ninth Infantry — Major portion at home.

Twenty-sixth, Thirty-sixth, Eighty-ninth and Ninetieth Infantry —on the high seas.

Eighty-second Airborne—Shuttling to the United Kingdom from Le Havre for shipment home.

Eightieth Infantry—In LeHavre, with 7,500 men to shuttle to the United Kingdom for shipment and the remainder to ship direct.

Twenty-ninth Infantry — Moving into Bremerhaven.

The Eighty-fourth and Ninety-fourth Infantry Divisions and Twentieth Corps Headquarters have been alerted for shipment home.

U. S. to Shift Army Prisoners

MARSEILLE, France, Dec. 22 (AP)—Four hundred soldier prisoners, serving sentences from short terms to life, will be returned to the United States under heavy guard next week, the newspaper Stars and Stripes said today. The men will go to Federal [illegible] to finish their sentences.

Funeral Rites Today For General Patton

Episcopalian Services to Be Conducted in Ancient Church at Heidelberg — Burial Will Take Place Tomorrow on Historic Battlefield at Hamm

Heidelberg, Germany, Dec. 22—(AP)—Past sorrowing lines of his comrades in arms, the body of Gen. George Smith Patton Jr., was borne tonight to ancient Villa Reiner, where the warrior will lie in state until funeral services tomorrow.

Patton, one of the most vivid figures in American military history, will be laid to rest Christmas Eve in a U. S. military cemetery at Hamm, Luxembourg, in soil hallowed by the blood of his fellow fighting men in the gallant U. S. Third Army.

Roses From France

The steel casket, draped with the banners of the U. S. Third, Seventh and 15th Armies, was placed in the oak-panelled drawing room of the villa. The spacious room was filled with fresh roses and carnations flown in from France.

The somber tones of an organ, played in an upstairs room by Sgt. Joseph Crosby of Corvallis, Ore., broke the solemn silence.

Fifty military policemen, commanded by Lieut. William Higgenbotham of Fairmont, W. Va., stood guard in relays of ten. One of the guards was Pfc. Henry Kozmbol of Chicago, who served under Patton in the 10th Armored Division.

"I'm proud to serve with General Patton for the last time," Kozmbol said.

As dusk descended over this old university city, a regulation army ambulance bearing the body moved out of the yard of the 130th Station Hospital, where Patton died late yesterday. A staff car and three military police jeeps flashing red lights escorted the machine.

Silent American soldiers stood stiffly at attention their arms raised in salute, as the procession wound through the twisting cobblestone streets. Stolid Germans watched unemotionally.

Grave On Battleground

The Third and Seventh Armies, both of which Patton had commanded with brilliant military success, will share responsibility for the services. Third Army soldiers will officiate at the final services at the grave Monday on a historic battleground where just a year ago Patton helped cut short the last major bid of the German Army—the bitter Battle of the Bulge.

Messages of tribute and sorrow poured in from all parts of the world. In the European Theater, American soldiers lowered all flags to half staff, and closed all soldier clubs and installations in mourning.

Patton's comrades will conduct Episcopalian services at 3 P. M. (9 A. M., EST) tomorrow in ancient Christ Church of Heidelberg.

Mrs. Patton, who flew to her husband's bedside after the automobile accident which paralyzed him, will attend the services with her brother, Frederick Ayer of Boston, Mass., who flew here several days ago. It was Mrs. Patton's wish that her husband be buried in the soil he did so much to liberate.

Dignitaries To Attend

High military and civilian dignitaries of Allied countries will attend the funeral. Lt. Gen. Thomas, a British armored corps commander, will represent the British Army. Lt. Gen. Joseph Pierre Koenig, commander of French Forces in Germany, or his deputy, will represent the French; Maj. Pospipi-Luhacouski will represent Czechoslovakia, and Col. Fiore Venazza will be present for Italy. General Eisenhower will be represented by Lt. Gen. Walton H. Walker, former commander of the 20th Corps.

Villa Reiner, where Patton's body will lie in state, is headquarters of the U. S. Seventh Army. Patton commanded the Seventh Army in its mighty 38-day sweep through Sicily, and took command of the Third Army in the invasion of Normandy and the massive tank drive across France and Germany. He was relieved of command of the Third Army several months ago, and took command of the U. S. 15th Army.

Civilian dignitaries, officers and enlisted men will file past Patton's bier from 8 A. M., until the time of the funeral tomorrow.

Veteran Honor Guard

An honor guard for the funeral was formed of 600 men who served under Patton in combat. The troops were chosen from the Fourth Armored Division, which spearheaded many of Patton's spectacular smashes across Europe, and from the First and Ninth Infantry Divisions, which fought under him in Africa and Sicily.

The theater chaplain will conduct the funeral service.

There will be 12 honorary pallbearers: Lt. Gen. John C. H. Lee, Deputy Commander of U. S. Forces in the European Theater; Lt. Gen. J. K. Cannon, Commander of U. S. Air Forces in Europe; Lt. Gen. Lucian K. Truscott Jr., present Third Army Commander who succeeded Patton; Maj. Gen. Everett Hughes, the theater's Inspector General; Maj. Gen. A. W. Kenner, Surgeon-General who attended Patton after the accident; Maj. Gen. Robert McG. Littlejohn, Theater Chief Quartermaster; Maj. Gen. Leven C. Allen; Brig. Gen. Walter J. Muller, Director of the Military Government in Bavaria; Brig. Gen. Ray T. Maddix, acting Chief of Staff, U. S. Third Army; Brig. Gen. John M. Willems; Col. Thomas H. Nixon, Theater Ordnance Officer, and Col. Paul D. Harkins, who was Patton's Chief of Staff throughout the war.

A troop of 15 cavalrymen who battled across a continent with the commander will escort the body to the Heidelberg railway station, where it will be placed aboard the special train of Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, U. S commander in the European Theater. McNarney himself will board a second special train for Luxembourg.

The route to the station will be lined by a composite company of soldiers from the Heidelberg area command. Another infantry company will be on guard at the station, and a battery from the First Armored Division will fire a salute as the train leaves for Luxembourg.

The train was expected to arrive at Hamm at 7 A. M., Monday, where the Third Army will receive the body before services at the American Military Cemetery.

Services At Grave

Tentative plans have been made for 10 A. M., services at the grave, but these are subject to change, since Third Army authorities intended to leave as much time as possible for the arrival of diplomats, military officials and high dignitaries from Allied capitals.

After the services at the grave, Mrs. Patton and her brother will leave on a special train for Paris, where she will board a plane for the United States.

Just before Christmas a year ago Patton launched his smash into the German left flank in Luxembourg during the bitter Battle of the Bulge. His invincible Third Army swept to Bastogne in Belgium, rescued Americans trapped at that vital road hub, and broke the back of the desperate German winter counteroffensive.

It was understood that Mrs. Patton and the U. S. War Department had considered both Metz and Luxembourg as Patton's final resting place. Patton's mechanized legions also liberated Metz, the French city never before taken by storm.

Patton died peacefully in his sleep from a blood clot followed by heart failure. He had been paralyzed by a broken neck sustained in the crash of his car Sunday, December 9, near Mannheim, with an Army truck, but up until Thursday had made excellent progress. Then bronchial and lung complications developed.

General Patton's Burial Set For Luxembourg

Heidelberg, Germany, Dec. 22 (AP)—Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., will be buried Monday in Luxembourg with the United States 3d Army men who died a year ago in his campaigning in the desperate Battle of the Bulge.

Funeral arrangements were announced today as American troops in Europe went into mourning and flags were moved to half-staff.

Patton's body will be laid to rest in an American military cemetery at Hamm, 4 miles east of Luxembourg city, on Monday, the day before the first Christmas of the peace he fought to bring.

Episcopalian Services

Episcopalian funeral services will be held in this old university town at the ancient Christ Church of Heidelberg at 3 P.M. tomorrow.

The 3d and 7th armies, both commanded by Patton at different stages in the European conflict, will share responsibility for the funeral under arrangements announced by Brig. Gen. John M. Willems.

A funeral train will carry the body to Luxembourg. The tentative hour for the burial on Monday is 10 A.M.

Yanks To View Body

Mrs. Patton, who was at her husband's bedside when he died late yesterday of complications from injuries in a traffic accident, agreed that he should be buried in the European soil he helped to liberate and with the soldier dead of the fighting which smashed down Germany's last-hope drive into the Ardennes.

The body of the great armored commander, who was transferred from the 3d Army to the skeletonized 15th Army October 2 after criticizing the denazification policy in Germany, was to lie in state at Villa Renier, 7th Army headquarters, from 6 to 10 o'clock tonight.

His body will be on view to both enlisted men and military and civilian dignitaries from 8 A.M. until the funeral hour tomorrow.

600 In Honor Guard

Six hundred men who served under Patton in combat left Nuernberg today to form an honor guard at the funeral. The troops were chosen from the 1st and 9th Infantry Divisions, which fought under Patton in Africa and Sicily, and the 4th Armored Division, which led the drive from Normandy.

Twelve honorary pallbearers were named:

Lieut. Gen. John C. H. Lee, Lieut. Gen. J. K. Cannon, Lieut. Gen. Lucian K. Truscott, Jr., Maj. Gen. Everett Hughes, Maj. Gen. A. W. Kenner, Brig. Gen. Walter J. Muller, Brig. Gen. Ray T. Maddix, Brig. Gen. John M. Willems, Maj. Gen. Robert McG. Littlejohn, Col. Paul D. Harkins, Col. Thomas H. Nixon and Maj. Gen. Leven C. Allen, deputy commander of the 15th Army.

Pallbearers Identified

Lee is deputy commander of United States forces in Europe; Cannon is commander of American air forces in Europe; Truscott is commander of the 3d Army, having succeeded Patton in that assignment; Hughes is the theater inspector-general; Kenner is the surgeon-general, who was with Patton during the invasion of Morocco and attended him after the motor accident; Muller is director of the military government for Bavaria; Maddix, on Patton's staff in Sicily, is now acting chief of staff for the 3d Army; Littlejohn is chief quartermaster in the theater; Harkins was Patton's chief of staff throughout the war; Nixon is theater ordnance officer.

Messages of tribute and sorrow were pouring in from around the world to the old German cavalry school, converted into the 130th [illegible] Military Hospital, where Patton died.

Soldier Clubs Closed

American soldier clubs throughout the theater closed.

It was announced in Frankfurt that Lieut. Gen. Joseph Pierre Koenig or his chief of staff would represent the French Army at the funeral and Lieutenant General Thomas of the British armored corps the British army.

Czechoslovakia, liberated by the combined work of the Red Army and Patton's men, will be represented by Major Pospisi-Luhachouski. Col. Fiore Venazza will be present for Italy.

15th Cavalry Escort

The theater chaplain will conduct the Heidelberg service which will be attended by Mrs. Patton and her brother, Frederick Ayer, of Boston, Mass., who flew to Heidelberg several days ago.

A troop of the 15th Cavalry which fought with Patton across Europe will escort the body to the railway station to be placed aboard the funeral train.

Soldiers To Line Route

The route to the station will be lined by a composite company of soldiers from the Heidelberg area command. Another infantry company will be on guard at the station and a battery from the 1st Armored Division will fire a salute as the train leaves for Luxembourg.

The train will leave Heidelberg at 3.30 P.M. and is expected at Luxembourg at 7 A.M. (1 A.M. E.S.T.) Monday.

Upon arrival in the capital of the grand duchy, the train will be met by a detachment from Patton's old 3d Army, which will take over responsibility for receiving the body before the burial services.

No Officials Due From U.S.

General Willems said the plans for the 10 A.M. services were only tentative and that 3d Army authorities would try to leave as much time as possible for the arrival of diplomats, military officials and high dignitaries from Allied capitals.

He said no officials were expected from the United States.

The special train of Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, United States theater commander, will be used to carry the body to Luxembourg.

Mrs. Patton To Return

General McNarney will motor to Heidelberg from Frankfurt for the funeral services and will leave on a second special train for Luxembourg. He will be accompanied by high ranking officers.

After the Luxembourg services, Mrs. Patton and her brother will leave on a special train for Paris, where she will depart by air for the United States.

Messages of sympathy flooded into the 130th Station Hospital, where Patton finally succumbed to pulmonary (lung) embolism followed by a cardiac failure after fighting for twelve days to recover from a broken neck.

Condolences From Attlee

Prime Minister Attlee of Great Britain, Belgian Minister of War Leo Mundeleer and the French Constituent Assembly were among the leading world figures and organizations offering their condolences.

Patton is survived by Mrs. Patton, one son, George S. Patton 3d, a West Point cadet, and two daughters, Mrs. James W. Totten and Mrs. James K. Waters, both of Washington, D.C.

Mrs. Patton, flew from the United States to be with her husband after he was injured. Other members of the family are expected here for the funeral.

Praised By Yanks

In the American zone, GI's and generals alike paid tribute to the man who spearheaded the Allied drive across western Europe from Normandy to Czechoslovakia and was regarded by many, including high German officers, as the ace field commander of World War II.

"He was a good Joe," said Pfc. Calvin W. Saunders, of Moultrie, Ga., one of the men who fought under him in the 3d Army. "He was a great fighter and I thought he was going to pull through."

Pfc. Walter Binder, of Elizabeth, N.J., called Patton "a great soldier," and Private William L. Hounihan, of Portageville, Mo., said: "We needed more men like Patton during the war."

General McNarney described him as "a great fighter and a great man" and said: "He went down fighting."

Lieut. Gen. John Cannon, commanding general of the United States Air Forces in Europe, said: "General Patton now belongs to history. His great exploits, his sharp victories, and his fame are now committed to become legendary."

Montgomery Says British Won't Forget Patton

Calls Him Great Soldier and Generous Commander

HERFORD, Germany, Dec. 22 (AP).—Field Marshal Sir Bernard L. Montgomery cabled condolences today on the death of General George S. Patton jr. on behalf of himself and the entire British Army, to General Dwight D. Eisenhower and General Joseph T. McNarney.

Marshal Montgomery asked to be represented at the funeral and to send a detachment of British troops.

His message to Washington to Eisenhower said: "On behalf of all British soldiers who served under me in this war I send the United States Army our deep sympathy at the death of George Patton. He was a great soldier and a generous commander, and his name will always be remembered by the British soldier. For myself I would like to say I am grieved beyond measure at his sudden death."

DRIVERS IN PATTON CRASH EXONERATED

Frankfurt, Germany, Dec. 22 (A. P.).—The two drivers involved in the collision which injured Gen. George S. Patton Jr., are on duty with their assigned units. United States Army headquarters said today that the death of the General had brought no change in the status of the two, Pfc. Horace Woodring, 19 years old, of Sturgis, Ky., and T/5 Robert Thompson, 20, of Camden, N. J. Woodring was Patton's chauffeur, Thompson was at the wheel of a truck in the crash on Sunday, December 9.

The 118th Military Police Company reported on December 13 that investigating officers had found that both were excellent drivers, though "the accident was caused by carelessness on the part of both." The police said that no reason was found to hold either and that they were returning to duty with no disciplinary action.

Message to Truman Revealed

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22 (AP)—General Patton's will to live was dogged until the last.

This was revealed today in a message President Truman received from the American general shortly before he died. It was in reply to a cablegram from Mr. Truman expressing hope for the former Third Army leader's recovery. The message, made public by the White House, said:

"Deeply appreciate your thoughtful message and report that the country prays for my recovery. I have never failed it yet, and will not now. May this season bring you all a happy Christmas."

Special Representative

Washington, Dec. 22—(AP)—Lt. Gen. Walton H. Walker, commander of the Eighth Service Headquarters at Dallas, Texas, will be a special representative of the War Department at the funeral of Gen. George S. Patton Jr.

Walker, who served with Patton as commander of the Twentieth Corps of the Third Army, will represent Secretary of War Patterson and Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Chief of Staff.

Walker is scheduled to reach Paris by air at 6 A. M. (Paris Time) Monday.

Medal Is Proposed

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22 (UP.)—Representative John E. Rankin, Democrat, of Mississippi, proposed tonight that the Medal of Honor be awarded posthumously to General Patton. Representative Rankin said he would introduce legislation proposing the award as soon as Congress reconvenes on Jan. 14.

The proposal appeared likely to win strong Congressional support. Senator Edwin C. Johnson, Democrat, of Colorado, said he "would expect Congress to look on it very favorably."

Another posthumous honor for General Patton has been recommended by Senator Alexander Wiley, Republican, of Wisconsin. Senator Wiley asked that the permanent three-star rank of lieutnant general be assigned to the general.

Patton Day Fete To Go On As Slated

Patton, Pa., Dec. 22 (AP)—Plans for a Patton day observance, to be held here next Labor Day, will be carried out despite the death of Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., who was to have been the honor guest, sponsors of the event announced today.

Citizens of this western Pennsylvania community of 3,000 said General Patton was a descendant of the town's founder.

The event, which will be held in the General's memory, will be changed to a homecoming celebration for the district's 980 service men.

Kin In U.S. Will Miss Patton Funeral

Washington, Dec. 22 (AP)—Lieut. Col. John K. Waters, son-in-law of Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., said today that no member of the family in this country would be able to attend the General's funeral.

Waters told a reporter that "at this late hour, we know of no possible way" to get there in time. The funeral service will be held tomorrow in Heidelberg, Germany and burial will be made early Monday in Hamm, Luxembourg.

Members of the family in the United States include General Patton's son, George 3d, a West Point cadet; and two daughters, Mrs. James W. Totten and Mrs. Waters, both of Washington.

Husband Of Beatrice Patton

Col. John Knight Waters, formerly of Lutherville, is married to the former Beatrice Patton.

former Beatrice Patton, daughter of the late General.

The General spent his last night in the United States at the home of Colonel and Mrs. Waters last summer.

Reunion In April

He and his son-in-law had a dramatic reunion in April when the General flew to visit Colonel Waters at the time of his liberation from a prison camp at Hammelburg, Germany. The Colonel had been shot by a Nazi guard.

He had set out from the prison camp, accompanied by a German officer and two other Americans, to seek out advancing units of General Patton's 4th Armored Division and advise the Americans that prison barracks were under hellfire. The Patton attempt at rescue of the Hammelburg prisoners failed, and another attack ten days later by the 7th Army liberated the group.

Captured In 1943

Colonel Waters had been captured by the Germans in February, 1943, at Faid Pass, Tunisia, after remaining at his post to cover the retirement of his troops.

General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower said of his action, "If there could be granted to me now an answer to just one prayer, it would be this: God let me in my post do my duty to my country as well as Johnny Waters did in his."

Patient At Walter Reed

Colonel Waters was awarded the Silver Star, the Oak Leaf Cluster and the Order of the Purple Heart.

He was in a hospital in Paris immediately following his liberation and later, convalesced in Walter Reed Hospital. His next assignment will be in Washington.

BritishZone Camps to Close

293,000 Former Wehrmacht Troops To Be Disbanded Jan. 31

BERLIN, Dec. 22 (AP).—Final disbandment by Jan. 31 of 293,000 former Wehrmacht troops held in British zone concentration areas has been approved by the Allied Control Council, an official announcement said last night.

Those to be disbanded do not include 363,000 former German armed service personnel outside Britain's six concentration areas and 126,000 non-Germans.

British Take Over German Coal Mines

Essen, Germany, Dec. 22 (AP)—All 225 German coal mines and their assets in the British zone of occupation were expropriated without compensation yesterday by the British military government.

Describing the mines as having been left by the Nazis in a "serious financial situation" and now running at "a substantial loss," a British official said:

"Had this state of affairs been allowed to continue, it would have been necessary either to subsidize German owners or allow the mines to close with the consequent loss of production and employment."

The proclamation dispossessing the coal companies was read to their representatives in the ballroom of the Krupp mansion. Several company officials said the British action had been expected for some time.

Previously the British had assumed control of production and distribution of the coal.

WAC MAJOR HONORED

FRANKFURT, Germany, Dec. 22 (AP) Major Ruth Briggs of Westerly, R.I., personal assistant and secretary to the European theater chief of staff, was awarded the Legion of Merit today for "exceptional devotion to duty, ability to work quickly and accurately under extreme pressure and display of marked tact and poise."

SUCCESS IS SEEN IN MOSCOW TALKS

Wartime Cooperative Spirit Reestablished, Observers Declare.

MOSCOW, Dec. 22—(AP) Conversations of the Big Three foreign ministers have achieved a measure of success, including a reestablishment of the wartime cooperative spirit, informed sources said today.

Secretary of State James F. Byrnes, Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin, and Foreign Commissar V. M. Molotov held their seventh conference today.

An American spokesman said the three met for two hours and 15 minutes in Molotov's Kremlin office and then adjourned for lunch, which each had separately. Later they went to Speridonifka palace to resume discussions.

This second meeting lasted about two hours, after which Bevin was host at a dinner for Byrnes and other members of the American party. Presumably they will meet again tomorrow, although no announcement was made. Apparently throughout both meetings today cordial relations prevailed.

But because the three ministers have agreed not to disclose anything on their discussions, there has been no official announcement on what progress they are making in solving such problems as control of atomic energy and other vital subjects slated for consideration.

However, through avenues of guidance available to newsmen, it was learned that Byrnes feels that the revival of a cooperative spirit among the Big Three in solving common problems is a major accomplishment.

Bevin, while said to be happy over the general cordial atmosphere of the talks and their general trend, was reported not so optimistic over the eventual results of the conference as the Americans. There was no indication of Molotov's views, but was said to have contributed to a spirit of comradeship in his role as chairman at the formal meetings.

Informal Big 3 Talk Seen As Effective

Moscow, Dec. 22 (AP)—The Big Three Foreign Ministers were understood today to have accomplished the greatest amount of work thus far in their conference when they dispensed with all formality and diplomatic procedure at a session yesterday lasting four hours and a quarter.

A similar informal meeting of United States Secretary of State James F. Byrnes, British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin and Soviet Foreign Commissar V. M. Molotov was scheduled for today, American informants said.

As the conference went into its seventh day, informed quarters declared there was good reason to believe that agreements would be reached on some of the critical world problems under discussion.

Talked "As Friends"

At yesterday's meeting, the longest yet held, the three men with their interpreters gathered around a small table in the Red Room of the Speridonifka Palace and talked in the informal manner of three friends. It was pointed out that this type of meeting was a "little easier" on the principals than the formal sessions.

United States Ambassador W. Averill Harriman, British Ambassador Sir Archibald Clark Kerr and Deputy Soviet Foreign Commissar A. Y. Vyshinsky sat in from time to time yesterday and presumably will do so again today.

The Red Room, a relatively low-ceilinged chamber of about 20 by 12 feet is some distance removed from the main white-and-gold conference room. Its most striking feature is the handsome red silk that covers its walls.

Byrnes Works Late

After yesterday's session Byrnes worked at Spasso House, residence of the American Ambassador, until 1 A.M. He was up early this morning.

If there is need for meetings tomorrow the fact that the day is Sunday will not interfere with the get-together, it was said.

The statement from informed quarters on the possibility that agreements would be reached by the Foreign Ministers constituted the most hopeful prediction yet to come from sources close to participants in the talks.

In this connection, it was recalled that when the conference opened last Sunday, Byrnes said he would not be surprised if no agreements were arrived at. Bevin has taken a similar view.

Better Than Anticipated

Both Byrnes and Bevin were still said to be anxious not to raise expectations of their people too high in regard to definite results from the discussions, but it was said there was a growing feeling that the outcome may be better than originally anticipated.

It is obvious, these sources said, that every difference between Soviet Russia, Great Britain and the United States will not be settled at this meeting, but they said much progress had been made toward dispelling suspicions on all sides.

Previous meetings had been attended by batteries of experts on such subjects as the atomic bomb, Japan and Iran.

An Echo in China.

Washington, Dec. 22 (A. P.).—The Army and Navy Journal said today that "as an initial result" of the conference of Foreign Ministers in Moscow, United States help in moving Nationalist troops from the south of China has been stopped.

Instructions have been received in Washington, the Journal said, "for Lieut.-Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer, our military commander in China, to cease assisting the reinforcement of Nationalist troops in the north by troop movements from the south, at least until Gen. George C. Marshall in his temporary role of Ambassador can have an opportunity to explore the situation and then give a definite ruling on policy." The Journal said these instructions "obviously" resulted from the discussions of the Big Three Foreign Ministers in Moscow.

Red Power Plants at Par by '48

MOSCOW, Dec. 22 (AP).—The Soviet Union will complete restoration of all war-damaged electric power stations by 1948, the Tass news agency said today. Before the war Russia ranked third among the nations in electric-power output.

GENERAL STRIKE FEARED IN GREECE

ATHENS, Dec. 22—(AP) The cabinet of Premier Themistokles Sophoulis met in emergency session today as a two-hour token work stoppage by government employes and threat of a general strike underscored an economic situation which some government officials said was verging on chaos.

The government employes, protesting soaring living costs, paralyzed cable and telegraphic communication with their two-hour strike, and heads of the government workers' union ordered the members to stand by for a general strike proclamation within the next few days.

Fear was expressed in some quarters that a strike of government employes would spread to other organized groups of workers.

Commodity prices continued to soar while the plunging Drachma hit a new low of 142,000 to one gold sovereign on the black market. The legal exchange rate is 4,000 drachma to the sovereign.

The Communist newspaper Rizospastis declared that living costs have increased 100 per cent during the last two weeks.

Before the cabinet meeting, Finance Minister Alexander Mulonas met with U. S. Ambassador Lincoln McVeagh. Earlier Mulonas had issued a statement saying negotiations with the Allied powers were in progress and expressing confidence that a "satisfactory conclusion" for providing economic stability would be reached.

Sophoulis was reported to have told British Foreign Undersecretary Hector McNeil when he assumed the premiership on Nov. 20 that he would resign unless immediate financial assistance was provided by Britain.

However, it was understood that no specific assistance had been pledged by McNeil or members of the British economic mission who left yesterday for London after a series of talks with Greek leaders.

Greek General Strike Threatened Over Prices

Athens, Dec. 22 (AP)—Faced with a threat of a general strike, Premier Themistokles Sophoulis's inner Cabinet was called into emergency session today. Government employés had already held a token two-hour work stoppage in protest against soaring living costs.

Some Government officials said Greece was verging on chaos, with commodity prices continuing to rocket. The plunging drachma reached a new low of 142,000 to one gold sovereign [approximately $4] on the black market, compared with the legal exchange rate of 4,000 drachma to the sovereign.

The work stoppage today paralyzed cable and telegraphic communication for a time. Heads of the Government Workers' Union ordered the members to stand by for a genearl strike proclamation within the next few days.

Rizospastis, a publication of the KKE [Communist party] asserted that living costs had increased 100 per cent in the last two weeks.

Red Army Returns Fifteen Airfields To Polish Air Lines

Move Is Hailed by Press in Warsaw as Step Toward Restoration of Normalcy

WARSAW, Dec. 22 (AP).—New advances in what the Warsaw press described as Poland's "return to normalcy" were disclosed today by the official announcement that fifteen airfields used by the Red Army now have been turned back to Polish airlines.

The newspaper "Kurjer Codzienny" pointed out that the Russians previously had handed control of Polish railways back to civilian authorities.

Russian forces are reported withdrawing from most of liberated Poland, with Polish public security agents undertaking to preserve law and order. Soviet supply lines are being guarded by the Red Army to insure the movement of westbound shipments to occupied Germany and of eastbound trains taking Soviet soldiers home.

Hungary Sees Famine Imminent

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Dec. 22 (AP)—Wholesale famine in Hungary this winter "seems unavoidable," the Food Minister said today, adding that the chief medical officer in Budapest had presented "terrifying statistics, with mortality exceeding birth more than 50 per cent and illnesses wholesale through malnutrition and starvation."

Nephew of Il Duce Convicted

MILAN, Italy, Dec. 22 (AP)—Vito Mussolini, nephew of the late Fascist leader and editor of the newspaper Popolo d'Italia, was convicted today of helping to maintain fascism and sentenced to fourteen years' imprisonment. He was absolved of a collaboration charge.

COURT CLEARS ASSASSIN OF ADM. DARLAN

Algiers, Dec. 22—(AP)—An Algiers court has annulled the death sentence imposed on Fernard Eugene Bonnier De La Chapelle, who was executed by the Vichy regime for the assassination of Admiral Jean Francois Darlan in Algiers on December 14, 1942, and the youth's father said today he had succeeded in clearing his son's name after a three-year fight.

30.24-32583

A "Chamber of Review," set up shortly after the liberation of North Africa to review sentences passed under the Vichy government, yesterday completely annulled the youth's court martial conviction of premediated homicide.

"The only question at issue," said presiding Magistrate Louis Verin," is whether young Fernand Bonnier De Chappelle acted in the interests of France. It appears from certain documents discovered since the liberation that Admiral Darlan was acting contrary to the interests of France."

Verin did not explain what the documents were, but documents were introduced as evidence during the trials of Marshal Philippe Petain and Pierre Laval in Paris to show that Darlan had negotiated the turning over to the Germans of France's North Africa ports.

Even before the execution of the 20-year-old youth, his father, Eugene Bonnier De La Chappele, began his fight to clear his son. He obtained letters from Resistance leaders, testifying that Fernard was a member of the underground patriot organizations, and he wrote to Gen. De Gaulle and other government and military leaders.

There was no indication as to the possibility that reparations would be sought or made to the youth's family.

Executed Youth's Sentence Annulled

Algiers, Dec. 2 (A. P.).—An Algiers court today annulled the death sentence upon Fernard Eugene Bonnier de la Chapelle, 20 years old, who assassinated Admiral Jean Darlan in Algiers on December 24, 1942 and who was executed by a firing squad on December 26 of that year. The action of the court was a complete annulment of the charge of crime on the grounds that documents found after the liberation of France showed Chapelle was acting in the interests of France.

Letters dated in November, 1943 in the name of Gen. de Gaulle, the late Gen. Henri Giraud, Gen. Georges Catroux and Gen. Pierre Weiss on behalf of Chapelle were read.

IRANIAN CAPITAL

GOODWIN

TEHRAN, Dec. 22—(AP)—A general staff officer of the Iranian government army asserted today that army intelligence reported the presesnce of armed civilians and an unusual concentration of Russian tanks and troops at Garmsar," rail junction 75 miles southeast of Tehran.

The rail line runs north to Shahi and the Caspian seacoast in Mazanderan province where "an outbreak of insurgency" within two weeks was predicted yesterday by Seyid Zia, Iranian parliament member. Manzanderan is east of Soviet-occupied Azerbaijan province, in which insurgents have set up a national government of Iranian Azerbaijan.

The new Azerbaijan government, meanwhile, claiming autonomy within the Iranian state, has announced it is willing to cooperate with the central government, but that it would insist upon conducting its own provincial affairs with its own cabinet. The insurgent government was willing to leave only such affairs as would be handled by a foreign ministry to the central government in Tehran.

Azerbaijan province has been occupied by Soviet troops since 1941, when Axis agents were reported active there, and the Russians later guarded the lend-lease lifeline. Earlier this week a traveler from Tabriz, now designated as the insurgents' capital, quoted the Azerbaijan premier, Jafar Pishehvari, as saying openly that the insurgent movement was aided by Soviet forces.

The general staff officer said he was not yet advised concerning the fate of the government army garrison at Rezaich, believed surrounded by insurgents, but he said other garrisons in the province had fallen.

Premier Ibrahim Hakimi conferred today with U. S. Ambassador Wallace Murray. An embassy spokesman said Murray asked the premier if he intended "to make further concessions to the democratic partisans in Azerbaijan."

Will Make Concession

Hakimi replied, the spokesman said, that one concession would be made. The insurgent government has demanded the right to teach the Turkish language in addition to Persian in the schools, and Hakimi said he has advised the Partisans through the former governor general of the province that he was agreeable to the teaching of Turkish.

Allahyar Saleh, the newly appointed interior minister, was received officially by the Shah. His first act has been to order provincial governors to conduct elections for provincial councils. Heretofore the central government has not authorized such elections.

Saleh was appointed Thursday by Premier Hakimi. But the man he was to replace in the office, Khalil Fahimi, has refused to resign, and under the constitution cannot be deprived of his post unless he does so. Thus Iran, technically, has two interior ministers. Parliament met today on budget matters, but took no action on the interior ministry tangle.

Russians Mass Men in Garmsar Below Tehran

Iranians Report Unusual Concentration and Fear Revolt in Mazanderan

TEHRAN, Iran, Dec. 22 (AP).—An Iranian general staff officer said today that army intelligence has reported the "presence of armed civilians and an unusual concentration of Russian tanks and troops at Garmsar," about seventy-five miles southeast of Tehran.

Garmsar is a railroad junction from which a line runs north to Shahi and the Caspian Sea coast in Mazanderan Province. Seyid Zia, a member of Parliament, declared yesterday he expected an "outbreak of insurgency in Manzanderan within two weeks."

Manzanderan Province is east of Soviet-occupied Azerbaijan Province, in which an insurgent parliament has demanded autonomy.

The general staff officer said he was not advised yet of the fate of the army garrison at Rezaich in Azerbaijan, reported surrounded for several days, but that other points in the insurgent-held province "have fallen."

The new Azerbaijan government has announced it is willing to cooperate with the central government at Tehran but that it would insist upon conducting its own provincial affairs with its own cabinet. The insurgents have said they are willing to leave only such affairs as would be handled by a foreign ministry to the central government.

Premier Ebrahim Hakimi conferred today with American Ambassador Wallace Murray. An embassy spokesman said Murray asked the Premier if he intended "to make further concessions to the democratic partisans in Azerbaijan."

Hakimi replied, the spokesman said, that one concession would be made. The insurgent government has demanded the right to teach the Turkish language in addition to Persian in the schools, and Hakimi said he has advised the partisans through the former Governor General of the province that he was agreeable to the teaching of Turkish.

Allahyar Saleh, newly appointed Interior Minister, was received officially by the Shah. His first act has been to order provincial governors to conduct elections for provincial councils. Heretofore the central government has not authorized such elections.

Saleh was appointed Thursday by Premier Hakimi. But the man he was to replace in the office, Khalil Fahimi, has refused to resign, and, under the constitution, cannot be deprived of his post unless he resigns. Thus Iran, technically, has two Interior Ministers.

Lebanese Demand Complete Withdrawal

Beirut, Lebanon, Dec. 22 (AP)—The Lebanese Government declared today it would oppose any exception to complete withdrawal of French and British troops from the Levant.

The communiqué followed publication of the text of the British-French agreement of December 13, which disclosed that France would withdraw her remaining troops from Syria immediately but keep them in Lebanon to guarantee security until the United Nations assumes responsibility for the area.

British and French military leaders met here yesterday to begin plans for the evacuation.

AT JAVA CAPITAL

HAUGHLAND

BATAVIA, Java, Dec. 22—(AP) British troops and tanks battled Indonesians in the troublesome Kramat area of Batavia tonight after five Allies had been killed in ambuscades there earlier.

Four men were killed and two wounded when an RAF truck was fired upon in the Kramat section, the British announced, and the Dutch news agency Aneta said that later a flight lieutenant was wounded fatally and his jeep driver hurt when they drove through the same area.

The British said one British officer and one Ghurka soldier were killed and four Ghurkas wounded yesterday in mopping up operations in Bandoeng, summer capital of Java.

The new clashes came as Premier Sutan Sjharir of the unrecognized Indonesian republic, making a tour of unity and pacification, announced that the Indonesian peace preservation corps (TKR) had agreed to undertake the job of moving Japanese troops in the interior of Java into British hands.

Sjahrir, in a news conference at Malang during a tour of Java, said that "if the plan works to British satisfaction, the Indonesian government is prepared also to guarantee the removal of Dutch internees to British areas for evacuation from Java."

The Indonesian leader estimated that two divisions of about 20,000 Japanese still remained in central and eastern Java, and said that details on their evacuation would be worked out through conferences with the British and the TKR.

The Netherlands cruiser Tromp and the gunnery training ship Van Kinsbergen arrived in Batavia harbor today, the Dutch news agency Aneta said.

The Hague, Dec. 22—(AP)—The Netherlands Government in an official statement tonight declared "nothing will be left undone to further the solution of the Indonesian problem in conformity with the principles of the United Nations Charter."

The news agency Aneta said the statement urged that Japanese forces in the Netherlands Indies be disarmed as quickly as possible, with the fullest protection given to Allied former prisoners of war and internees.

Aneta said the statement was issued in answer to a U. S. State Department memorandum Wednesday urging a resumption of Dutch and Indonesian discussions looking to solution of the conflict in the Netherlands Indies.

Indonesians Take On Jap Task

Batavia, Java, Dec. 22 (AP)—Premier Sutan Sjahrir of the unrecognized Indonesian Republic said today that the Indonesian Peace Preservation Corps (TKR) had agreed to take on the task of removing Japanese troops from the interior of Java for the British.

"If the plan works," Sjahrir told a press conference at Malang, "the Indonesian Government is also prepared to guarantee the removal of Dutch internees to British areas for evacuation from Java."

He estimated that two divisions, or approximately 20,000 Japanese troops, were still in east and central Java. The British already hold most of the Japanese who were in west Java.

Details To Be Arranged

Sjahrir said details of the operation would be worked out with the British and predicted the job would be completed quickly.

Meanwhile, four British soldiers were killed and two wounded when an RAF truck was fired on in Batavia's troublesome Kramat area last night, a British statement reported. An Indian soldier was wounded during an investigation of the incident.

At Bandoeng, Java's summer capital, one British officer and one Gurkha were killed and four Gurkhas wounded during mopping-up operations.

Queen's Message

[At The Hague, Queen Wilhelmina, in a Christmas broadcast, today urged the people of her far-flung realm to "be united and put our shoulder to the wheel" to win the blessings of peace, an Aneta dispatch said.

[Urging her people to "be victorious over the dark powers and mountains of difficulties," Queen Wilhelmina said: "Our prayers go out to our heavily-tried compatriots in the Netherlands Indies." She voiced the hope that "their suffering would soon cease" and that "peace would be won there, too."]

MARSHALL, CHIANG TO RESUME PARLEY

General Arrives at Chungking—U. S. Ships May Move Nationalist Army.

CHUNGKING, Sunday, Dec. 23—(AP) The arrival of General Marshall from Nanking was followed by a China Central News agency report today that U. S. Seventh fleet transports had debarked central government troops from Haiphong at the Manchurian port of Hulutao on Friday.

The number landed was not specified.

Reports from Peiping said that one concrete effect of Marshall's first talks with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek on peace for China was a brightened prospect for the use of U. S. ships to carry huge Chinese occupation forces to Manchurian ports.

Marshall was greeted by both national and Communist leaders here yesterday.

A dispatch from Nanking said the first conference last night was "extremely cordial" and lasted for two hours. The discussions will be resumed tomorrow when Chiang and Madame Chiang fly in from Nanking.

This account said Marshall was prepared to confer with Communist leaders in Chungking, but had no immediate plans to visit Yenan, the Communist headquarters in North China.

President Truman's special envoy, who had braved perilous flying weather in hurrying here from the old Chinese capital, was met at the airport by Premier T. V. Soong, who accompanied him to his quarters.

Another greeter was Gen. Chou

En-Lai, head of the Chinese Communist delegation to the forthcoming peace parleys. The Chinese press was speculating that the peace meeting between government and Communist delegations would begin shortly after Jan. 1.

Although there were reports of new outbreaks in troubled north China, and a new Communist charge of an imminent government offensive, Chou asserted to newspapermen he still was working for a halt to all hostilities.

He said he had urged a Chungking government representative here to forward the Communist's plan for peace to Chiang at Nanking without waiting for the arrival of the generalissimo.

Associated Press Correspondent Richard Cushing in Nanking said the first discussions between Marshall and Chiang on the unification of China took place after a dinner in Marshall's honor last night.

Various topics were discussed over the dinner table, Cushing said, after which Marshall and Chiang retired for more serious talks.

GEN. MARSHALL BEGINS TALKS WITH CHIANG

Chungking, Dec. 22—(AP)—General Marshall, fresh from his first talks at Nanking with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek on peace for China, arrived today and was greeted by both National and Communist leaders.

A dispatch from Nanking said the first conference last night was "extremely cordial" and lasted for two hours. The discussions will be resumed tomorrow when Chiang and Madame Chiang fly in from Nanking.

This account said Marshall was prepared to confer with Communist leaders in Chungking, but had no immediate plans to visit Yenan, the Communist headquarters in North China.

President Truman's special envoy, who had braved perilous flying weather in hurrying here from the old Chinese capital, was met at the airport by Premier T. V. Soong, who accompanied him to his quarters.

Another greeter was Gen. Chou En-Lai, head of the Chinese Communist delegation to the forthcoming peace parleys. The Chinese press was speculating that the peace meeting between Government and Communist delegations would begin shortly after January 1.

Although there were reports of new outbreaks in troubled North China, and a new Communist charge of an imminent Government offensive, Chou, asserted to newspapermen he still was working for a halt to all hostilities.

Communist Plans

He said he had urged a Chungking government representative here to forward the Communist's plan for peace to Chiang at Nanking without waiting for the arrival of the Generalissimo.

Associated Press Correspondent Richard Cushing in Nanking said the first discussions between Marshall and Chiang on the unification of China took place after a dinner in Marshall's honor last night.

Various topics were discussed over dinner table, Cushing said, after which Marshall and Chiang retired for more serious talks.

AP Correspondent Spencer Davis said in a dispatch from Peiping that Marshall's arrival appeared to have had a beneficial effect already on Chinese-Russian negotiations for the occupation of Manchuria.

Davis reported that Central Government emissaries, after reporting to Chiang at Nanking, were returning to Changchun, Manchurian capital, while Chinese administrators were heading for the great cities of Mukden, Harbin and Dairen.

Prospects Bright

Davis said one concrete effect of Marshall's talk with Chiang was a brightened prospect for the use of United States ships to carry huge Chinese occupation forces to Manchurian ports.

The Communist New China Daily News here charged, however, that such American assistance would "enlarge the scale of the current civil war."

Possibly with the view of catching Marshall's attention, the Communists reiterated charges that the Central Government was massing troops for a large-scale invasion of the inner Mongolian province of Chahar.

A National Government dispatch from Peiping charged the Communists were attacking the Peiping-Mukden city of Lwanhsien, which lies between Tientsin and the U. S. Marine-guarded port of Chinwangtao.

The dispatch alleged that trains loaded with coal needed for redevelopment in the Yangtze River Valley already were affected.

Another dispatch said Central Government troops had recaptured Tsaoyang, highway town about 140 miles northwest of Hankow.

Marshall, Chiang Due To Confer Tomorrow

Chungking, Dec. 22 (AP)—Gen. George C. Marshall, assigned by President Truman to end China's internal strife, reached Chungking today and is expected to meet Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek in a series of conferences beginning tomorrow.

Chiang and Madame Chiang, who entertained Marshall yesterday at Nanking, are scheduled to arrive tomorrow. Premier T. V. Soong and a host of other notables—including Gen. Chou En-lai, head of the Chinese Communist delegation to forthcoming peace parleys here—greeted Marshall ceremoniously at the airdrome today.

Soong Lunches With Him

Premier Soong accompanied Marshall to his quarters for an informal lunch with the envoy, American Charge d'Affaires Walter Robertson and a few other officials.

In Peiping, news of Marshall's arrival in China reportedly speeded touchy Chinese-Russian negotiations over occupation of Manchuria—which already have extended a month longer than originally anticipated.

Associated Press Correspondent Spencer Davis reported today that within the past 48 hours special emissaries who reported to Generalissimo Chiang in Nanking have returned to Manchuria, and that Chinese administrators designated for Harbin, Mukden and Dairen, Manchuria, who have cooled their heels in Peiping for weeks, once more were heading north to take over their posts.

There was no indication that Central Government troops would occupy Mukden by Christmas—or by New Year's Day, in fact. Sub-zero weather was advanced as another reason for delays.

Davis added, however, that there were prospects that United States ships would transport nationalists to Manchurian ports, and he said this was believed in Peiping to be one result of Marshall's talks with the Chinese high command.

Reports Continued Fighting

Correspondent Davis quoted Maj. Gen. Hu Chung-ching, spokesman for Chinese 11th War Zone headquarters, as reporting continuing fighting between Communists and National Government forces.

A United States Army C-54 transport plane landed Marshall—the first five-star general to visit Chungking—at the airdrome at 12.20 P.M. (12.20 A.M., E.S.T.).

Welcomed By Soong

Marshall, accompanied by Robertson, was welcomed by Soong. Walking down the receiving line and shaking hands with high Chinese Government officials, he also met the three senior Communist delegates to the forthcoming peace parleys, General Chou, Gen. Yeh Chien-ying, chief of staff of Communists armies, and Wang Jo-fei.

The length of Marshall's stay in China probably will depend on political and military developments, Shepley indicated; it likely will be shortened if some concrete agreement for peace and unity is reached at the forthcoming parleys of Communist and Government leaders.

NATIONALIST AID STOPPED BY U. S.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22—(AP) The Army and Navy Journal said today that the United States has stopped assisting the movement of Chinese Nationalist troops from south China "as a result" of opening talks in the conference of Big Three foreign ministers in Moscow.

State department officials said, however, that the decision on American assistance in transporting the Nationalist troops from South to North China still rests with Gen. George C. Marshall.

These officials, who asked not to be identified, said the state department directive to the War department on troop movements in China, made public Tuesday, is still entirely valid.

This directive said Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer, U. S. Army commander in China, may transport Nationalist troops into Manchuria at his own discretion.

It added, however, that this privilege holds only for Manchuria. If Wedemeyer wishes to help transport Chinese troops into North China, it added, he must obtain the approval of General Marshall. President Truman's special envoy to China.

The Journal, an unofficial service publication, reported the situation as follows:

"As a result of the opening conversations of the foreign ministers of the Big Three in Moscow, instructions have been received in Washington for Lt. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer, our military commander in China, to cease assisting the reinforcement of Nationalist troops in the north by troop movements from the south, at least until Gen. George C. Marshall in his temporary roll of ambassador can have an opportunity to explore the situation and then give a definite ruling on policy. In the meantime we may continue facilitating the transport of Chinese Nationalist troops from the north to Manchuria ports.

"This obviously was an initial result of discussions James F. Byrnes, secretary of state, had with V. M. Molotov, Soviet foreign commissar. It reveals not only that China came early in the conversations but also that Premier Stalin, while continuing his pledge to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek concerning control by Chungking of Manchuria, does not want Chinese military operations in that area carried out by heavily augmented forces. As matters stand the Nationalist government still enjoys the support of both the United States and the Soviet Union. A support that we seek to implement through the proposal of the secretary of the Navy to Congress for authority to transfer surplus naval ships to the Chungking government."

Cruiser St. Paul Damaged

SHANGHAI, Dec. 22 (AP).—A Japanese amphibious ship now in the hands of the Chinese crashed into the American cruiser St. Paul yesterday in the Whangpoo River, tearing a small hole in the cruiser's bow and badly damaging the former Japanese craft. One Chinese on the amphibious ship was injured.

Jap Repatriation Figures Reported

Peiping, Dec. 22 (AP)—Headquarters of the 11th War Zone reported today that 144,728 Japanese troops and civilians were repatriated from Hopei and Shantung provinces in North China through last Wednesday.

A spokesman said the evacuation of Shansi province is progressing. Some 70,000 Japanese troops were reported there two weeks ago.

144,728 of Foe Quit North China

PEIPING, Dec. 22 (AP).—Headquarters of the 11th War Zone reported today that 144,728 Japanese troops and civilians were repatriated from Hopei and Shantung Provinces, in North China, through last Wednesday.

British to Land 18,000 in Japan

HONG KONG, Dec. 22 (UP).—Admiral Sir Bruce Fraser announced today that 18,000 British Empire troops will be landed at Kure, Japan, to participate in the occupation.

Congress Party Leads In Indian Election

New Delhi, India, Dec. 22 (AP)—Incomplete returns of Indian Central Assembly elections show that the Congress party has won 55 out of 102 seats.

The Moslem League won 27 seats, independents 5, Europeans 8, and the Akala Sikhs, 2. Five seats remain to be filled.

All Main Changes In Jap Affairs Now Outlined

Tokyo, Dec. 22 (AP)—Less than four months after the first American occupation troops landed, General MacArthur announced today that the framework for a new, demilitarized Japan is finished—a reconstituted country now planning to tax its Emperor "just like any ordinary taxpayer."

The occupation forces, first arriving August 28, have disarmed the home islands and arrested many war leaders for trial as criminals. Today it was learned authoritatively that former Premier Hideki Tojo and the men of his "Pearl Harbor Cabinet" will be tried jointly, probably in February.

Lack Of Leaders Seen

The statement on the completed framework said there is lack "of sufficient qualified leaders" among the Japanese at present, but that "the changes as directed are expected to be assimilated rapidly." No more major Allied directives are contemplated. The last one ordered an end to state-sponsored Shintoism.

The statement, noting that the directives had removed the yoke of militarism, emphasized that education and guidance "must be the main part of the program from here on, because a people who have lived their lives by the sword need help and leadership to adjust themselves to freedom."

Press Freed

MacArthur's directives have, among other things, broken Government shackles on the press and opened the way for the people, including released political prisoners, to freely criticize all leaders, even the Emperor.

Today Mainichi said the Government has decided to impose the wartime-profits levy on Hirohito and his household and to have his Majesty "served with a tax notice just like any ordinary taxpayer."

Relief Program

In compliance with a MacArthur directive of December 13 for the Japanese Government to care for the needy, the Welfare Ministry today completed plans for a 200,000,000 yen ($13,333,333) relief program for unemployed, war sufferers and repatriates. Community kitchens, medical service and public housing are included in the program.

Indicative of Japan's new way of life, the Kyodo News Agency reported that workers in one of the largest copper mines have won 50 per cent pay increases after a brief strike.

There were strong indications that some of the arrested war-criminal suspects, including Prince Morimasa Nashimoto, of royal lineage, would be released.

"If the available evidence fails to show reasonable cause to believe that certain men are guilty, we shall have to release them," said Joseph B. Keenan, MacArthur's chief war-criminal prosecutor. "I can say that we are scrutinizing the case of Prince Nashimoto for this purpose."

Another Prince, Fuminaro Konoye, committed suicide last Sunday rather than surrender. At that time Keenan emphasized that everyone under arrest would be given the full benefits of American justice.

War Planners The Targets

There is a distinction between Japanese who started the war and those who became leaders after it began, Keenan told a group of Japanese editors today.

"Japanese should know that the international prosecution section is concerned with those persons who may have planned and designed the war. The main purpose of these trials is to prevent future occurrences of war aggression, and to hold those Japanese who substituted force for reason accountable for their actions."

He said the Japanese editors bear an "enormous" responsibility to inform the people of methods used by their warmongering leaders.

Plans for several changes in the administrative setup of the Japanese Government were reported by Kyodo. It said the reorganization called for abolition of the Welfare Ministry and the Board of Information, and establishment of a new Public Works Ministry and a Premiers' office, the latter to be headed by a State Minister.

MacArthur Ignores Assassination Talk

His Aide Discounts Rumored Japanese Plan

TOKYO, Dec. 23 (Sunday) (AP).—General Douglas MacArthur's aide said today a half-threat to assassinate the Allied commander had been voiced by a Japanese petition-signer, but "we paid no attention at all to the statement."

Colonel Herbert H. Wheeler related that the Japanese, who presented petitions asking MacArthur to commute the death sentence up on Lieuetenant General Tomoyuki Yamashita, told Allied headquarters one of the signers said "if MacArthur didn't grant the petition then maybe we should assassinate him." Reports of any real plot to assassinate the commander are "groundless," Wheeler declared.

Brigadier General Elliott R. Thorpe, chief of the counter-intelligence corps, confirmed that there "is no assassination plot, and we are not rounding up any suspects."

Prince Konoye's Funeral Services Poorly Attended

Tokyo, Dec. 22 — (AP) — Shinto funeral services were conducted yesterday for Prince Fumimaro Konoye, pre-Pearl Harbor premier of Japan, with representatives of the Imperial household and several cabinet ministers attending.

Konoye committed suicide Sunday to escape trial as a war criminal.

The newspaper Asahi commented that the funeral was smaller than normally would be expected for a former premier.

"It was a lonely one," the paper added.

Branches of "a sacred tree" granted by the Emperor, the Empress and the Empress Dowager hung before the altar during the quiet ceremony in Tokyo's Arisugawa Park.

Silk Ordered for G. I.s in Japan

TOKYO, Dec. 22 (AP).—The United States Army has placed orders for 450,000 yards of white silk—for sale to G. I.'s in Japan. A third of the December supply will be sold by the yard, while the remainder is to be made into dressing gowns, muffiers, pajamas, ties and handkerchiefs. The average price of bolt silk is 33 cents a yard.

TO GO HOME

Tokyo, Dec. 22—(AP)—Allied Headquarters today ordered the Japanese Government to submit lists of natives of the Marianas, Marshalls and Caroline Islands now residing in Japan. Arrangements are being made to send home all those who wish to go. Foreign nationals, including Japanese, were barred from the islands.

750 Tons Of Turkey

Tokyo, Dec. 22 (AP)—The quartermaster depot today listed these ingredients for Christmas dinner for an occupation army:

Over 1,500,000 pounds of dressed turkey, 132,500 pounds of mincemeat, 110,240 pounds of nuts in the shell, 112,625 pounds of fruitcake, 74,000 pounds of figs, 7,475 pounds of dehydrated cranberry sauce, 35,000 pounds of tomato puree, 80,000 pounds each of sweet and white potatoes, 70,000 pounds each of peas and corn, 18,600 pounds each of relish and pickles, 7,000 pounds of coffee, 18,650 pounds of butter, 23,300 pounds of lard, 65,250 pounds of flour, 51,000 pounds of sugar, 9,300 pounds of raisins, two tons of bread for dressing, 290 pounds of poultry seasoning, 580 pounds of pepper, 4,700 pounds of salt, 290 pounds of mustard, 580 quarts of vinegar and 4,650 quarts of cooking oil.

JAPS BANNED

Tokyo, Dec. 22—(AP)—Japanese will be banned from entering Korea to conduct private business, General MacArthur's headquarters informed the Japanese Government today.

New Board to Try Jap Criminals

Tokyo, Dec. 22 (A. P.).—Col. A. C. Carpenter, chief of Gen. MacArthur's legal section, will leave next Wednesday or Thursday by air for Manila to set up a new military commission to try war crimes suspects, and to confer with the prosecutors appointed to try Lieut.-Gen. Masaharu Homma, the "death march" commander.

WAR CRIMES COURT CONTINUES TRIAL OF JAP GUARD

Yokohama, Dec. 22—(AP)—Tatsuo Tsuchiya, defendant in the first war crimes trial held in Japan, is expected to tell his own story from the witness stand Monday.

The U. S. Military Commission trying him on a charge of beating an American prisoner to death adjourned for the weekend after hearing four of Tsuchiya's fellow guards at the Mitsushima Prison Camp testify he handled prisoners "impartially and fairly."

American former prisoners of war who testified for the prosecution said Tsuchiya was responsible for the beating to death of Pfc. Robert Gordon Teas of Streator, Ill., with clubs and knotted ropes.

Before recessing, the commission announced it would be dissolved after hearing one or two more cases. The remainder of a list of nearly 400 "small fry" war criminals accused of murdering or mistreating Allied prisoners will be tried in five courts sitting concurrently. These trials are expected to begin soon after the first of the year.

Jap War-Crimes Trial Recesses

Yokohama, Dec. 22 (AP)—The United States Military Commission, conducting the first war-crimes trial in Japan, recessed today until Monday, when the defendant—Tatsuo Tsuchika, "Little Glass Eye"—is expected to take the stand in his own behalf.

Four of Tsuchiya's fellow guards at the Mitsushima prison camp testified for the defendant, who is charged with the fatal beating of Pfc. Robert Gordon Teas, of Streator, Ill., in March, 1943. Former American prisoners of war testified against Tsuchiya by deposition.

To Dissolve Commission

As the trial ended its fifth day, the commission announced it would be dissolved after hearing one or two more cases. Col. Robert V. Laughlin, 8th Army judge advocate, said five concurrent trials were planned after the first of the year for the nearly 400 other Japanese "small fry" accused of mistreating and slaying Allied prisoners.

Members of the newly appointed second trials commission are Navy Captain Beverly M. Coleman, president; Lieut. Col. Burwell G. Smythe, Lieut. Col. Richard Reichman, law member; Lieut. Col. Huland Wendorf, Lieut. Col. Garrison L. Beechy, Major Harold Raffensperger, Major William A. Panton and Major Lyman B. Sutter.

Ex-Guard Defense Witness

One of the defense witnesses for Tsuchiya, a former guard known to the prisoners as "Punk," told the commission the defendant worked "impartially and fairly" and that he had never seen Tsuchiya strike prisoners.

The witness, Tamotsu Kimura, is wanted as a war criminal himself, but at the conclusion of his testimony he walked out of the chamber. Prosecution attorneys explained that it was the duty of the Japanese foreign liaison committee to apprehend suspects.

Japan G. I.s to Learn Russian

YOKOHAMA, Dec. 22 (AP).—A course in conversational Russian will be opened soon for all interested personnel of United States 8th Army headquarters, headquarters company and special troops, it was announced today. Registration will begin Wednesday.

KOREA WELCOMES EXILED LEADERS

Myers

SEOUL, Korea, Dec. 22 — (AP) Koreans turned out today by tens of thousands for a day of speeches, celebrations and parades staged as a welcome home for the long-exiled Korean provisional government, recently returned from Chungking.

A high point of the festivities was an address by provisional President Kim Koo urging political unity, which was noticably lacking in the failure of several major political groups to participate in the ceremonies of welcome.

The Liberal Peoples party and the Communist party, as well as the People's Republic organization, were absent. The rightist so-called Democratic party dominated the picture.

Maj. Gen. Archer L. Lerch attended the morning program of speeches and a reception later. Lerch, newly-appointed American military governor in Korea, takes over soon from Maj. Gen. A. V. Arnold, who returns to the 7th division.

Observers of the one-sided festivities saw in them further indication of an approaching show-down between Kim Koo's provisional government and the Peoples Republic organization. The latter, closely Allied with the Liberal and Communist parties, was organized in Korea immediately after Japan's capitulation.

The American military government has tried to stand aloof but leftist groups allege that the AMG is backing the conservative, rightist elements behind Kim Koo's provisional government in preparation for its possible future recognition.

Kim Koo's adherents insist they want to bring all factions together, but cannot accept a government that does not include leaders who lived in exile during the 30-year Japanese occupation.

WAKE EXECUTIONS REVEALED BY JAPS

KWAJALEIN, Marshall Islands, Dec. 22. — (AP) Japanese Rear Adm. Shigematsu Sakaibara today admitted he ordered the execution of 98 American civilian employes of Pan-American Airways on Wake Island Oct. 7, 1943, and later lied about his act.

On trial with his executive officer on charges of murder in connection with the mass slaughter, Sakaibara told the military commission hearing his case that he lied to American investigators when he said, under oath, the prisoners of war had been killed by American bombs and by Japanese sentries when they tried to escape.

"It was a bitter experience for me to have to tell a falsehood," the officer said. "However, I was afraid the Americans would not understand the true story."

The admiral asserted the slaying by firing squads was a matter of "military necessity" because of the danger of prisoners giving aid to the attacking force which the Japanese expected to invade the island.

The day before the civilians were killed, he said, an air raid destroyed his airplanes, damaged many guns and otherwise caused heavy damage, leading him to believe an invasion was imminent.

He said the prisoners of war received better food than the Japanese soldiers and that their only complaints were made "in jest."

The prosecution rested its case at noon, after drawing admissions from the defendants they had lied about how the Americans met death.

Canned Goods Returning To Manila

Manila, Dec. 22 (AP)—Christmas is bringing canned goods to Manila stores for the first time since 1941, the Philippines Commerce Bureau reported today — but living costs still are more than six times their prewar level and luxuries are rare.

Although prices of imported goods are buoyed by black marketing, they are competing noticeably with home-produced items, the bureau survey showed. A fifteen-ounce can of evaporated milk, once an almost unobtainable luxury, now is down to 17 cents, for example.

Construction has begun on the first reinforced concrete building to be erected here since Pearl Harbor—and builders said it would be a movie theater named the Bataan.

Most prospective builders are waiting until costs of labor and materials drop, and the city remains an array of old-time western-style false fronts with paint disguising rusty, salvaged iron roofing.

There is an increasing number of United States license plates appearing on automobiles shipped across the Pacific by businessmen.

Roxas Promises to Aid Philippines 'Little People'

Running for President, He Finds Country 'in Distress'

MANILA, Dec. 22 (UP).—Manuel Roxas, President of the Philippines Senate, formally launched his candidacy for the Philippines presidency today, pledging in his program support for the "little people."

Roxas, who spoke at a rally of his wing of the Nacionalista party, said that the Philippines are "in distress," and that if elected he would see to it that the "little fellow gets a square deal."

Roxas also hit rumors that he might team up with provisional President Sergio Osmena in the coming campaign. It was believed that Elpidio Quirino, pro tempore S[illegible]tet president, will be Roxas' [illegible]ning mate.

More Space Than Eligible GI's, Paper Says

Manila, Dec. 22 (AP)—Daily Pacifican, the army newspaper, dished up some arithmetic for army officials today, saying there will be more than 170,000 troop spaces going to the States empty in January from the western Pacific area unless point scores are lowered to make more men eligible for discharge.

Pacifican said ships alloted for

January troop movements home have 251,000 troop spaces but, according to point scores, only 70,000 western Pacific soldiers are eligible for discharge in that month.

Stoning Jap POW's Cause For Shooting

Manila, Dec. 22 (AP) — Filipinos should stop stoning Japanese prisoners of war or run the risk of being shot by American military police, Col. Josiah P. Holland, of Chicago, has written the Manila Municipal Council.

At every army camp in Manila and others on Luzon and Leyte, gangs of blue-denimed Japanese soldiers are policing the grounds, hauling garbage and removing debris from ruined buildings. The prisoners are guaranteed protection under terms of the Geneva convention.

MINE DANGER IN PACIFIC

Pearl Harbor, Dec. 22—(AP)—All ships in the Pacific have been warned against the danger of floating mines which the Japanese dumped into the sea by the thousands during the last days of the war, the Navy said today.

In time the mines will spring leaks and disappear but may remain a menace for many months, the Navy said.

Jap Repatriation Progress

Pearl Harbor, Dec. 22 (AP)—Virtually all of the 100,000 Japanese soldiers and sailors who surrendered in the Bonins, Marianas and Carolines will be evacuated to their homeland before January 1, the Navy announced today.

PANAMA REVOLT ATTEMPT QUELLED IN SHORT ORDER

Ex-President Arias Seized; Six Killed and Eight Hurt at Colon.

Panama City, Dec. 22 (A. P.).—A brief but violent skirmish around the Colon police station, which the Government charged was precipitated by a revolutionary attempt by followers of former President Arnulfo Arias, resulted today in the killing of six persons and the wounding of eight others.

The authorities ordered a countrywide roundup of the followers of Arias, who has been waging an aggressive political campaign since his return from exile in Argentina two months ago.

Arias himself, who has been asserting the right to the presidential office from which he was ousted by a bloodless revolution in 1941, was arrested by plain clothes men and secret police and charged with instigating the short-lived revolt.

President Enrique Jimenez called a special Cabinet meeting to discuss the Government's next step. The clash occurred when a small band of armed men made a surprise attack on the national police station at Colon.

Police Casualties.

The dead included five of the attacking party and one policeman. Four of the wounded were policemen hit by stray bullets.

Reports of the incident said that seven men entered the police station and when inside opened fire while their comrades outside fired into the building. One of the attacking party was shot as he reached the door of the arsenal room. The unexploded grenades were found later in the station.

Sporadic firing continued for an hour afterward. A governmental announcement said that calm prevailed in the other principal cities and towns of Panama.

Arias Paper Seized.

Governmental reports said that at least twenty-five "Arnulfistas" were arrested in Panama City, while other arrests were made in other places. The police confiscated the edition of El Panamenista, the Arias party weekly, which apparently was prepared for big news. Its two inside pages carried inconsequential items, while the two outside pages were blank. The police seizure was carried out at the printing plant.

Shortly after the attack the Government said the situation was "perfectly under control."

An attempted attack on the Colon telephone exchange also was reported unofficially, but the mayor was understood to be in the building with a strong police guard and to have the situation well in hand.

Police reinforcements were rushed to Colon.

Incident in Panama City.

Although quiet prevailed generally throughout Panama City, brief gunfiring took place outside the Presidencia here. when the presidential guard mistook for attackers armed detachments rushed to reinforce the guard, official sources said. As soon as the reinforcements identified themselves, the shooting stopped.

A statement issued at the presidential palace said:

"A group of partisans of Dr. Arnulfo Arias entered the Colon police station more or less in the attitude of visitors and, after entering, started shooting. Capt. Zambrano was killed, and Lieut. Comparaz was wounded. The clash lasted but briefly. Three or four of the attackers were killed. The situation is perfectly under control."

Arrests Last Week.

It was recalled here that police last week arrested four men, two of them known supporters of Arias, charging them with smuggling arms purchased from United States soldiers in the Canal Zone.

Arias headed the National Revolutionary Coalition which forced President Florencio Harmodio Arosemena to resign in 1931. Arias himself was elected President in 1940 but was ousted in a bloodless coup in 1941.

REVOLT SMASHED BY PANAMA POLICE

Ex-President Arias Seized, Seven Persons Killed as Coup Fails.

PANAMA CITY, Dec. 22—(AP)—Former President Arnulfo Arias was arrested today by government authorities on charges of instigating a short-lived revolutionary attempt at Colon last night in which seven persons were killed and seven wounded.

The arrest of Arias and a nationwide roundup of his followers was ordered after a meeting of the cabinet called by President Enrique Jimenez. Police reinforcements from Panama City were hurried to Colon, at the northern end of the Panama Canal, and an official statement said the situation was "perfectly under control."

District Attorney Lionel Urriola Valdes, who with secret police and plain clothesmen arrested Arias at his home, said the former president denied responsibility for any revolutionary attempt.

U. S. Army headquarters declared Colon out of bounds for American troops.

Arias, president in 1940-41, returned from exile two months ago and immediately launched a political campaign in which he criticized United States policy toward Panama and reiterated his nationalist beliefs. He made claims also to the presidential office from which he was ousted in 1941.

Five attackers and two police officers were killed in the shooting, which began at the Colon police station and continued from roaming automobiles for an hour. Four policemen and three civilians were wounded, with three reported seriously hurt.

Reports said seven men, taken to the station on charges of disturbing the peace, began shooting when they entered the building. Other men reportedly fired into the station from the outside.

Shot at Arsenal Door

One man was shot as he reached the door to the arsenal room, and two unexploded hand grenades were found later inside the station, advices said.

Minister of Government Carlos Sucre said all other principal cities remained calm, and that at least 25 Arias supporters had been arrested.

Police confiscated an edition of "El Panamanista," the Arias party weekly, and said it apparently was prepared for big news, since two inside pages carried inconsequential news and the two outside pages still were blank.

Unofficial reports said an attack was attempted also against the telephone exchange in Colon, on the Atlantic side of the isthmus of Panama about 47 miles from Panama City. The mayor of Colon and a strong police guard were reported to be in the exchange building with the situation under control.

A brief flurry of excitement, including some shooting, occurred in Panama City when police headquarters in Panama rushed an armed detachment to the presidential palace as a safety measure after hearing of the attempted coup in Colon.

The presidential guard opened fire when they saw the armed men jumping from a car, but as soon as the reinforcements identified themselves the shooting ended.

Entry Of Refugees Under Quota Plan

President Directs

30.24 - 32587

MAJORITY DUE TO COME FROM EAST EUROPE

39,000 Expected Annually —Truman Seeks to Set Example

Washington, Dec. 22—(AP)—President Truman today directed the entry into the United States—within established immigration quotas—of European war refugees at the rate of about 39,000 a year.

Most of them will come from Central and Eastern Europe and the Balkans where approximately 2,000,000 persons are said to be homeless.

The effect of the order is to require that the regular immigration quotas from those countries be filled with persons whom the war drove away from their homes and who, for one reason or another, are not returning. There will be little room left for other nationals of those countries who may want to come here.

"This is the opportunity for America to set an example for the rest of the world in co-operation towards alleviating human misery," the President said in a statement.

Along with the statement the White House made public an official directive to six Federal agencies to put the plan into effect.

The President said the war has brought "an appalling dislocation of populations" and added that it is "common decency" to provide homes of these displaced persons. Several months ago he asked Britain to allow 100,000 homeless Jews to enter Palestine, but Britain refused to agree to the figure and the two countries now have a joint commission studying the whole problem.

The President not only directed normal resumption of quota immigration to take care of displaced persons desiring to come to this country, but spoke out vigorously against any legislation at this time which would either prohibit or severely reduce further immigration.

Must Maintain Quotas

He called attention to measures now pending to restrict immigration and commented:

"This period of unspeakable human distress is not the time for us to close or to narrow our gates. I wish to emphasize, however, that any effort to bring relief to these displaced persons and refugees must and will be strictly within the limits of the present quotas as imposed by law."

Mr. Truman emphasized that nothing in his directive will "deprive a single American soldier or his wife or children of a berth on a vessel homeward bound, or delay their return."

He made special provision for approximately 1,000 Yugoslavs, Poles and Czechs permitted to enter this country several years ago from refugee camps in Italy and now in a camp near Oswego, N. Y. Persons in that group who wish to apply for admission under their countries' quotas may do so without returning home to go through the visa routine.

"Upon the basis of a careful survey by the Department of State and Immigration and Naturalization Service," the President said, "it has been determined that if these persons were now applying for admission to the United States, most of them would be admissible under the immigration laws."

Wants Status Adjusted

The President asked the Secretary of State and the Attorney General to adjust the immigration status of the refugees at Oswego.

He pointed out that most of the persons displaced in the recent war are natives of Central and Eastern Europe and the Balkans. He said the immigration quotas for all these countries for one year total about 39,000, two-thirds of which are allotted to Germany. Since visas cannot exceed 10 per cent of the annual quota in any single month, this means that only about 3,900 per month can be issued monthly to natives of these countries.

Quotas operate on a fiscal year basis, so only about 23,400 visas could be issued in the remaining six months of this year for displaced persons. The annual immigration quotas for all countries total 153,879, of which Great Britain and Eire get more than half.

"To the extent that our present immigration laws permit, everything possible should be done at once to facilitate the entrance of some of these displaced persons and refugees into the United States," Mr. Truman said.

"In this way we do something to relieve human misery, and set an example to the other countries of the world which are able to receive some of these war sufferers."

Immigration officials said the normal quotas for the countries affected are about 25,000 a year for Germany, 2,000 for Austria, 6,000 for Poland, and smaller figures for Czechoslovakia, Romania and Yugoslavia.

Hopes Majority Are Children

It is hoped, the President asserted, that the majority of the refugees allowed to enter this country will be orphaned children.

"Responsible welfare organizations now at work in this field" will guarantee that the immigrants will not become public charges, he said.

Since it will be impossible to reopen and restaff over night all consular offices closed during the war, the President said it has been decided to concentrate immediately on bringing out those refugees from the American zones of occupation in Europe.

"I hope," he added, "that by early Spring adequate consular facilities will be in operation in our zones in Europe."

The President's directive asked the State Department to establish consular facilities with utmost dispatch near displaced persons areas in American zones. Visas should be distributed fairly among persons of all faiths, creeds and nationalities, the directive said.

The Secretary of War was asked to furnish information to facilitate the selection of applicants for visas.

The attorney general, through the Immigration Service, will assign personnel to American zones to make the immigration inspections.

The War Shipping Administration has been directed to arrange for shipping to the United States, so long as it does not interfere with the return of veterans.

UNRRA will provide aid in transit.

The Public Health Service will conduct mental and physical examinations of prospective immigrants.

Truman Immigration Report

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22 (AP).—Following are the complete texts of President Truman's statement tonight on speeding the immigration into this country of refugees and displaced persons from American-occupied areas of Europe, and of the President's directive to Federal agencies on facilitating the immigration program:

Truman Statement on Immigration

The war has brought in its wake an appalling dislocation of populations in Europe. Many humanitarian organizations, including the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, are doing their utmost to solve the multitude of problems arising in connection with this dislocation of hundreds of thousands of persons. Every effort is being made to return the displaced persons and refugees in the various countries of Europe to their former homes. The great difficulty is that so many of these persons have no homes to which they may return. The immensity of the problem of displaced persons and refugees is almost beyond comprehension.

A number of countries in Europe, including Switzerland, Sweden, France and England, are working toward its solution. The United States shares the responsibility to relieve the suffering. To the extent that our present immigration laws permit, everything possible should be done at once to facilitate the entrance of some of these displaced persons and refugees into the United States.

In this way we may do something to relieve human misery, and set an example to the other countries of the world which are able to receive some of these war sufferers. I feel that it is essential that we do this ourselves to show our good faith in requesting other nations to open their doors for this purpose.

Most of these persons are natives of central and eastern Europe and the Balkans. The immigration quotas for all these countries for one year total approximately 39,000, two-thirds of which are allotted to Germany. Under the law, in any single month the number of visas issued cannot exceed 10 per cent of the annual quota. This means that from now on only about 3,900 visas can be issued each month to persons who are natives of these countries.

Unused Quotas

Very few persons from Europe have migrated to the United States during the war years. In the fiscal year 1942, only 10 per cent of the immigration quotas was used; in 1943, 5 per cent; in 1944, 6 per cent, and in 1945, 7 per cent. As of Nov. 30, 1945, the end of the fifth month of the present fiscal year, only about 10 per cent of the quotas for the European countries has been used. These unused quotas, however, do not accumulate through the years, and I do not intend to ask the Congress to change this rule.

The factors chiefly responsible for these low immigration figures were restraints imposed by the enemy, transportation difficulties and the absence of consular facilities. Most of those Europeans who have been admitted to the United States during the last five years were persons who left Europe prior to the war, and thereafter entered here from non-European countries.

I consider that common decency and the fundamental comradeship of all human beings require us to do what lies within our power to see that our established immigration quotas are used in order to reduce human suffering. I am taking the necessary steps to see that this is done as quickly as possible.

Of the displaced persons and refugees whose entrance into the United States we will permit under this plan, it is hoped that the majority will be orphaned children. The provisions of law prohibiting the entry of persons likely to become public charges will be strictly observed. Responsible welfare organizations now at work in this field will guarantee that these children will not become public charges. Similar guarantees have or will be made on behalf of adult persons. The record of these welfare organizations throughout the last year has been excellent, and I am informed that no persons admitted under this sponsorship have ever become charges on their communities. Moreover, many of the immigrants will have close family ties in the United States and will receive the assistance of their relatives until they are in a position to provide for themselves.

These relatives or organizations will also advance the necessary visa fees and travel fare. Where the necessary funds for travel fare and visa fees have not been advanced by a welfare organization or relative, the individual applicant must meet these costs. In this way the transportation of these immigrants cross the Atlantic will not cost the American taxpayers a single dollar.

In order to enter the United States it is necessary to obtain a visa from a consular officer of the Department of State. As every one knows, a great many of our consular establishments all over the world were disrupted and their operations suspended when the war came. It is physically impossible to reopen and to restaff all of them over night. Consequently, it is necessary to choose the area in which to concentrate our immediate efforts. This is a painful necessity, because it requires us to make an almost impossible choice among degrees of misery. But if we refrain from making a choice because it will necessarily be arbitrary, no choice will ever be made and we shall end by helping no one.

Europe Chosen

The decision has been made, therefore, to concentrate our immediate efforts in the American zones of occupation in Europe. This is not intended, however, entirely to exclude issuance of visas in other parts of the world.

In our zones in Europe there are citizens of every major European country. Visas issued to displaced persons and refugees will be charged, according to law, to the countries of their origin. They will be distributed fairly among persons of all faiths, creeds and nationalities.

It is intended that, as soon as practicable, regular consular facilities will be re-established in every part of the world, and the usual, orderly methods of registering and reviewing visa applications will be resumed. The pressing need, however, is to act now in a way that will produce immediate and tangible results. I hope that by early spring adequate consular facilities will be in operation in our zones in Europe, so that immigration can begin immediately upon the availability of ships.

I am informed that there are various measures now pending before the Congress which would either prohibit or severely reduce further immigration. I hope that such legislation will not be passed. This period of unspeakable human distress is not the time for us to close or to narrow our gates. I wish to emphasize, however, that any effort to bring relief to these displaced persons and refugees must and will be strictly within the limits of the present quotas as imposed by law.

Aid to Oswego Group

There is one particular matter involving a relatively small number of aliens. President Roosevelt, in an endeavor to assist in handling displaced persons and refugees during the war and upon the recommendation of the War Refugee Board, directed that a group of about 1,000 displaced persons be removed from refugee camps in Italy and settled temporarily in a war relocation camp near Oswego, N. Y. Shortly thereafter President Roosevelt informed the Congress that these persons would be returned to their homelands after the war.

Upon the basis of a careful survey by the Department of State and the Immigration and Naturalization Service, it has been determined that if these persons were now applying for admission to the United States, most of them would be admissible under the immigration laws. In the circumstances.

it would be inhumane and wasteful to require these people to go all the way back to Europe merely for the purpose of applying there for immigration visas and returning to the United States. Many of them have close relatives, including sons and daughters, who are citizens of the United States and who have served and are serving honorably in the armed forces of our country. I am therefore directing the Secretary of State and the Attorney General to adjust the immigration status of the members of this group who may wish to remain here, in strict accordance with existing laws and regulations.

The number of persons at the Oswego camp is, however, comparatively small. Our major task is to facilitate the entry into the United States of displaced persons and refugees still in Europe. To meet this larger problem, I am directing the Secretary of State, the Attorney General, the Secretary of War, the War Shipping Administrator and the Surgeon General of the Public Health Service to proceed at once to take all appropriate steps to expedite the quota immigration of displaced persons and refugees from Europe to the United States. Representatives of these officials will depart for Europe very soon to prepare detailed plans for the prompt execution of this project.

The attached directive has been issued by me to the responsible government agencies to carry out this policy. I wish to emphasize, above all, that nothing in this directive will deprive a single American soldier or his wife or children of a berth on a vessel homeward bound, or delay their return.

This is the opportunity for America to set an example for the rest of the world in co-operation toward alleviating human misery.

U. S. GRANTS RECOGNITION TO YUGOSLAVIA

Directs Criticism, However, at Tactics Employed in Recent Election

Washington, Dec. 22 — (AP) — The United States formally recognized the new government of Yugoslavia today, but simultaneously criticized its tactics in the elections which it recently held.

Britain also announced recognition.

In recognizing the regime headed by Marshal Josip Broz-Tito, the U. S. and Britain thus gave their legal sanction to the liquidation of another of Europe's rapidly-vanishing monarchies.

Tito's government rushed a law through its constituent assembly November 29 which ousted 22-year-old King Peter from the throne and abolished the Karadjordjevic dynasty.

British Abandon Peter

Peter thus was abandoned by the nation which served as headquarters for his Yugoslav Government-in-Exile during much of the war. The young king has lived in England most of the time since his country was over-run by the German Army in 1941.

The American decision to recognize Tito's regime in the form which it adopted following November elections was communicated by Acting Secretary of State Dean Acheson to Yugoslav Ambassador Stanoje Simic in Washington.

Acheson said the U. S. assumed that the Yugoslav government would accept responsibility for that nation's international obligations and would confirm existing treaties and agreements between the two countries.

When assured of these actions, the U. S. will accredit U. S. Ambassador Richard C. Patterson Jr., to the new Yugoslav regime in Belgrade, Acheson said.

The outspoken American disapproval of Tito's tactics was contained in instructions sent by Acheson to Ambassador Patterson and made public by the State Department.

These instructions said the Yugoslav government had not made good its pledges to extend the basic freedoms to its people and asserted that the elections November 11 did not provide a free choice of representatives for the assembly.

Policies Not Approved

The instructions said the U. S. government wants it understood that establishment of diplomatic relations with the Tito regime should not be interpreted as approval of its policies, "its methods of assuming control or its failure to implement the guarantees of personal freedom promised its people."

Patterson was told to emphasize that the American people and government have "only the friendliest sentiments" toward the Yugoslavs and expect developments which would make possible desirable political and economic relations between the two countries.

His instructions recalled that guarantees of personal freedom, freedom of speech, press freedom, and freedom of assembly were guaranteed in the agreement signed last February between Marshal Tito and Dr. Ivan Subasic.

This agreement supposedly united the Yugoslav government-in-exile with Tito's partisans, who had carried on the fight against the Germans from within Yugoslavia. The partisans maintained very close relations with Russia.

Subasic became foreign minister under Tito, but resigned from the government prior to the November elections, officially because of ill health.

Statehood Soon For Hawaii Is Urged by Ickes

He Says War Record Shows Delay Is Not Necessary; Step Hailed in Honolulu

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—The admission of Hawaii "in the immediate future" as the forty-ninth state in the Union was recommended today by Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior.

The people of the Pacific Ocean outpost already have voted in the ratio of 2 to 1 in favor of statehood. The final decision on admittance will be up to Congress, which will check up on the territory's qualifications through a committee visit next month.

In Honolulu this reaction came editorially from "The Star-Bulletin":

"Mr. Ickes may not think of his statement in terms of the Christmas season, but it is a welcome gift to the islands as an expression of confidence in the citizens of Hawaii, whose sincerity and significance are not to be mistaken."

In urging that Hawaii become the latest state Mr. Ickes said in a statement:

"The record of the people of Hawaii during the war clearly indicates that further postponement will be unnecessary. In contribution of personnel to the armed services, in military and naval construction, in civilian-defense activities and in their willingness to undergo the inconveniences and hardships consequent on their strategic geographical location, the people of Hawaii conducted themselves in a manner of which they may well be proud.

"Despite the highly cosmopolitan composition of the population, in which many racial groups are represented with distinct traditions and customs, the people of Hawaii live and function as a unified American community."

Previously, Mr. Ickes had expressed concern over what he called the "economic control that five families exert over there," but in today's pronouncement he declared the Interior Department now believes that "the concentrated economic control of which some people have complained can better be handled by the people themselves under statehood with the assistance that they will have from the Federal government."

Hawaii, with a present population of 500,000, was taken over by the United States in 1898 and formally declared a territory in 1900.

[The executive power of Hawaii is vested in a Governor and a Territorial Secretary, who is Acting Governor in the former's absence. Both are appointed for four-year terms by the President of the United States with the consent of the Senate. The territory's legislature consists of two houses—a Senate elected every four years and a House of Representatives elected every two years. The delegate to the Congress of the United States is elected for a two-year term and has floor privileges in the House but no vote.]

Joseph R. Farrington, a Republican, who is the Hawaiian delegate, said Mr. Ickes's suggestion is "the most significant contribution" to the Hawaiian statehood movement since the people approved the idea in a 1940 plebiscite.

The mainland absorbs most of the territory's principal products, pineapples and sugar, and most of Hawaii's manufactured imports come from the United States.

Stainback Is Pleased

HONOLULU, Dec. 22 (AP).—Governor Ingram M. Stainback expressed pleasure today over Secretary of Interior Ickes's recommendation that Hawaii be admitted as the forty-ninth state of the Union. The territorial governor in a statement expressed hope that Congress would act quickly on the recommendation, saying that Hawaii now bore the burdens of statehood without its privileges.

While Hawaii now has political autonomy, except in the appointment of the governor, secretary and judges, Stainback declared that "under our status as a territory Congress can modify or completely repeal our organic act."

"In fact," he continued, "we have had recent attempts to place the territory under military or naval control."

The Governor said it was important for Hawaii to have adequate representation in both houses of Congress and that action should be taken at once for the passage of an enabling act. A convention then can be called for drafting a constitution for "the State of Hawaii," he said.

LEHMAN OUTLINES PLANS FOR UNRRA IN COMING YEAR

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22—(AP) Recent American contributions have enabled UNRRA to reach "the full stride of action," and the agency will ship nearly a million tons of supplies to war-ravaged countries in December, Director General Herbert H. Lehman said today.

Lehman emphasized at a news conference, however, that demands for UNRRA aid by members of the United Nations are "far beyond the resources of the administration."

He said he wanted it known that UNRRA, by limitation of its financial resources and supplies of certain commodities, "will be unable to provide all the assistance which is so clearly needed in the world today."

Recent congressional actions in appropriating sums of $550,000,000 and $750,000,000 to complete the first U. S. UNRRA contribution of $1,350,000,000 and make the first payment on a second identical contribution were "the most vital in UNRRA's history," Lehman said.

"Without the U. S. funds appropriated this month, our program would now be grinding to a halt, with the most crucial days of the first post-war winter just ahead," he declared.

Here is a summary of UNRRA's projected new programs for 1946, as outlined by Lehman:

China: Relief needs in "this nation, ravaged by 14 years of continuous war," are "stupendous." China's program will be the largest one in UNRRA's relief effort, probably costing about $675,000,000.

By Russian and Ukrainian Republics: Agreements were signed today providing UNRRA aid approximating $189,000,000 for the Ukraine and $61,000,000 for Byelorussia. War destruction in these two republics—part of the U.S.S.R. —reached "a scale never before known in history." The Germans carried off nearly all agricultural machinery; depleted livestock herds, food and seed supplies, totally destroyed many cities and left more than 25,000,000 people homeless.

Takes Over Italy

Italy: UNRRA will take over the entire relief load for Italy from the Allied armies January 1, thus undertaking a job the Allied commission estimated would cost $450,000,000 for 1946.

Austria: UNRRA received a formal request yesterday from the Allied control commission for assistance to Austria and will give it immediate attention. The program contemplated might cost about $100,000,000.

Finland: UNRRA will undertake a "limited emergency" relief program to cost $2,500,000 and apply principally to northern Finland districts devastated by German armies.

Korea: An UNRRA delegation soon will examine relief needs in the American-occupied area and "an invitation for the delegation to consult on relief problems in the Russian-occupied zone of Korea is anticipated."

Formosa: An UNRRA program will be carried out as part of the program for China, which again has sovereignty over Formosa.

In addition, full-scale programs started in 1945 will be continued during 1946 in Albania, Czechoslovakia, Greece, Poland, Yugoslavia and the Dodecanese islands.

A special program will be continued in Ethiopia and some emergency programs will be carried on in liberated nations of western Europe and the Philippines.

If all member nations meet their UNRRA pledges and duplicate their original contributions, as the UNRRA council has requested, UNRRA's potential resources will be $3,766,576,682, Lehman said.

Text of Lehman Statement on UNRRA Outlook for 1946

30-24-32589

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22—Following is the statement by Herbert H. Lehman, Director General of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, on the organization's program for 1946:

Within the past two weeks several actions have been taken by the Government of the United States to extend United States participation in UNRRA. A sum of $550,000,000, completing the first contribution of this nation, has been appropriated. A bill was passed by Congress and signed by the President on Dec. 18 authorizing the second United States contribution of $1,350,000,000. On Dec. 20 the Congress passed and sent to the President a bill appropriating $750,000,000 of this amount.

These actions are the most vital in UNRRA's history. Without the United States funds appropriated this month our program would now be grinding to a halt, with the most crucial days of the first post-war winter just ahead. With the funds we are in the full stride of action.

Using the resources previously provided by the United States and other member nations, we rapidly expanded relief shipments and services through the fall months. As of 30 Nov. our shipments had mounted to 3,410,000 long tons. In August we shipped 354,000 long tons, in September 370,000, October 520,000, November 755,000. We hope our shipments this month may reach close to 1,000,000 tons and in January exceed that mark.

To Expand China Aid

The shipments will continue to hold at a high mark in the early months of 1946. We will be carrying on the programs initiated in 1945 for full-scale aid to Albania, Czechoslovakia, Greece, Poland, Yugoslavia and the Dodecanese Islands. The China program will be expanded rapidly.

We will continue with the special program for Ethiopia and some emergency programs for the liberated nations of western Europe and for the Philippines. We will be assisting the military authorities in care and repatriation of United Nations displaced persons in Germany and Austria. The program of repatriating United Nations nationals from the Middle East will be completed in early 1946.

In addition to these continuing activities we will assume large new responsibilities in the new year.

In 1946 aid will be provided to the Byelorussian [White Russian] and Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republics, which suffered the greatest devastation of any of the lands invaded by the enemy. The council at its third session in London last August authorized UNRRA to take over from the Allied Armies Commission the task of providing relief to Italy (during 1945 UNRRA carried on a limited program in Italy), and also to give assistance to Austria, Korea and Formosa. Recently the Central Committee authorized a limited program of aid to the sections of northern Finland which were devastated by the German armies.

Status of New Programs to Be Undertaken in 1946

(1) BYELORUSSIAN [WHITE RUSSIAN] AND UKRAINIAN REPUBLICS

these two republics war destruction reached a scale never before known in history. Twice their territories were a battleground; once when the tide of invasion reached to Moscow and Stalingrad and again when the enemy was driven out by the victorious Soviet armies.

The enemy took vitually all the agricultural machinery away; livestock herds were terribly depleted. All movable stocks of food and even of seeds were removed. Millions were left homeless. City after city was totally destroyed and countless cities and villages were heavily damaged. More than 25,000,000 are without shelter save such as they can get in caves and dugouts and ruined dwellings. Whatever assistance UNRRA will be able to provide to these brave people will be infinitesimal in proportion to the need.

Govenments of these Republics and UNRRA are today announcing completion of agreements setting the terms and conditions of aid from the United Nations to them. The agreements have been signed by Anatoli M. Baranovsky for the Ukrainian Republic and Leonid I. Kaminsky for the Byelorussian [White Russian] Republic and by myself for UNRRA.

The agreements generally follow the pattern of understandings between UNRRA and other Governments receiving aid. An UNRRA mission is to be installed in each country for the usual purposes of observing distribution in compliance with the UNRRA principles and maintaining liaison between the relief organization and the Governments. The mission for the Byelorussian [White Russian] Republic will have its headquarters in Minsk and that for the Ukrainian Republic in Kiev. The agreements assure the UNRRA missions full opportunity to observe distribution operations, and the usual diplomatic privileges and immunities. In addition, they provide for the supplies and equipment to be labeled with the UNRRA symbol.

The Ukrainian Republic has requested aid in the amount of $189,000,000 and the Byelorussian [White Russian] Republic in the amount of $61,000,000. The supply schedules which will determine the money value of the goods provided are now under review along with supply schedules for all other United Nations which are to receive aid in 1946. The entire group of schedules will be submitted by the Director General soon to the Central Committee in accordance with Council resolutions passed at the August, 1945, session of the Council in London. These direct that the Central Committee review and approve the broad programs of operations for the year 1946.

(2) ITALY

The utter destitution in Italy is well known and does not require recounting here. The basic imported supplies for the whole Italian population have so far been provided by the armies of the United States, Great Britain and Canada. UNRRA, in accordance with instructions given during the Montreal Council session, has carried on a successful supplementary program of aid, providing additional rations to more than 2,000,000 of the most needy children and mothers and some medical aid to the general population.

The cost and responsibility of providing a relief program for Italy shifts from the three Allied nations to UNRRA on Jan. 1. Early next month UNRRA will begin loading supplies for Italy. The supplies which are delivered in Italy during January—and some which will arrive in February—will be those loaded by the United States Army-Foreign Economic Administration program in December. The program contemplated by the Allied Commission for 1946 would have cost $450,000,000, including shipping charges. The supply schedules for the UNRRA program which will determine its cost are now under review in the same manner as those for the Byelorussian [White Russian] and Ukrainian Republics mentioned above and for all other recipient nations. They will go through the same procedure before the tentative goals for the year are confirmed. Mr. Spurgeon M. Keeny, the chief of the Italian Mission, has been in Washington for ten days consulting with our headquarters staff on the relief program generally.

The operations in Italy will be carried on under agreement with the Italian Government. Mr. Keeny on his return to Italy next week will carry draft agreements which will be put into final form during consultations with the Italian Government, approved by the European Regional Office and Headquarters, and signed in Rome.

3. AUSTRIA

At the invitation of the Allied Control Commission in Vienna, a small UNRRA delegation was sent to Austria to explore the relief situation and recommend steps to be taken under the Council authorization. Its members were Hart Schaaf of our European Regional Office, Alexander Daderkin and M. Burinsky of our Headquarters office and Brig. Reginald Parminter, in charge of our displaced persons operations in Austria.

This delegation has now completed its exploratory work. I received late yesterday a formal request from the Allied Control Commission for UNRRA to give assistance in Austria. We are giving immediate attention to this request. Pending completion of arrangements for the assistance which UNRRA may be able to give, the Allied armies will continue to supply the basic necessities of life which must be imported for the Austrian people.

(4) FINLAND

The Central Committee of the UNRRA Council has authorized the Director General to undertake a program of limited emergency relief for Finland, at a total cost to UNRRA of $2,500,000.

It is expected that the program will apply principally to districts of northern Finland devastated by German armies. For some time reports from this region of bitter winters have caused grave concern. During their retreat through Finnish Lapland the Germans laid waste practically all towns and villages. Cattle and reindeer were butchered or driven off and boats and fishing equipment confiscated or destroyed. Food and clothing are now desperately needed. Though disease of epidemic proportions is not known to exist, fears are felt concerning outbreaks this winter due to the present lowered resistance of the people. Medical supplies will constitute a substantial portion of the emergency shipments. It is felt that the UNRRA program, though limited, will help to tide the areas of Finland which are in the worst need through the winter season. A small UNRRA mission will observe the distribution of the supplies provided.

(5) KOREA

Examination of relief needs and possible program provisions for Korea is just getting under way. At the invitation of General MacArthur a small UNRRA delegation will proceed to the American-occupied districts of this nation early in January to examine needs and possibilities. It is headed by Frank S. Gaines, the chief of the UNRRA Philippines Mission and the Southwest Pacific Area office, and will include an agricultural rehabilitation officer, a medical officer and a displaced persons specialist.

An invitation for the delegation to consult on relief problems in the Russian-occupied zone of Korea is anticipated.

(6) FORMOSA

This island has returned to Chinese sovereignty. Its relief program will be carried on as part of the relief program for liberated China through the Chinese National Relief and Rehabilitation administration and UNRRA cooperating. Formosa will constitute one of the fifteen administrative districts for the China relief program.

(7) EXPANDING CHINA PROGRAM

Relief needs in this nation, ravaged by fourteen years of continuous war, are stupendous. The UNRRA program for relief of the liberated areas has been carefully worked out to make the available resources contribute most to the self-help effort of the Chinese Government and people.

The basic organizational work for the China program has been completed long since. The agreement between the Chinese Government and UNRRA setting the terms and conditions of the program was signed in October. It will constitute the largest single program of the United Nations' relief effort. Our mission has been in China for more than a year. It is expanding in pace with the accelerated program. The Deputy Director General in charge of supply, Mr. Roy F. Hendrickson, has just returned from a six-week stay in China, during which he collected up-to-date basic data on requirements and on relationships between the Central Government's programs with which ours will mesh. He reported last week to the press and radio group here on the most urgent needs and on the plans for meeting them.

Several ports are now open. But the inland transport system of China is smashed. It is not extensive enough to move the locally produced or the imported goods now on hand. Providing trucks and rail equipment, barges, landing craft and small coastal and river shipping is the first task and at that we are working steadily. The flow of supplies to the ports will proceed as fast as the transport system can be built up to get them into the interior.

Potential Financial Resources for the 1946 Program

The operating resources for the UNRRA programs are provided by the thirty-one uninvaded member nations. Of these, twenty-nine have to date pledged contributions. Action is still to be taken by Liberia and Guatemala. The total pledged to date is $1,866,624,591. All nations contribute to the administrative expense fund, which defrays the cost of operating the headquarters and regional offices. Total contributions authorized since the inception of our work to this fund are $16,643,750. The total potential availability then, from the first contributions, is now $1,883,268,341. Assuming that the second contributions by the nations are the same as the first, the potential resources for the whole program will be $3,766,576,682.

The United States has authorized its full second contribution of $1,350,000,000 and appropriated $750,000,000; the United Kingdom has also authorized its full second contribution of approximately $300,000,000. Action is yet to be taken by the other Governments, though the Canadian Parliament is well advanced in the legislative process of making its second contribution available. We are proceeding to make plans for the year on the assumption that the other member nations will accede to the requests of the UNRRA Council and provide the means of carrying on the operations.

Breakdown Held Impossible

It is not possible at this time to give the breakdown of the funds tentatively allocated for the 1946 operations in each country receiving aid from UNRRA, and in the displaced persons, administrative and mission expenses phases of the program for the year. The chiefs of missions in the countries where UNRRA already is operating are now in Washington for final review of supply and service requirements. Following the determinations of the administration on the basis of their representations, the schedules must be approved by the Central Committee. When so approved we will announce them.

At present, we are able to give only the very tentative break downs of the dollar values of the total programs contemplated from both contributions in the most general terms for the countries receiving aid, for reserves, for administrative and mission expenses and for displaced persons operations. The following table divides on this tentative basis the total amount that will be available if all member nations complete their first contributions as authorized and make second contributions of the same amounts. When the final record is written it is certain that the value of goods and services supplied in each phase of the operations will vary from these tentative figures. Availability of funds, availability of supplies, shifts in programs dictated by developments of the year, allocation to actual operations of the $185,000,000 reserve, and other factors will bring about alterations. Hence this table should be read as indicative and not as in any way final or definitive.

Estimated Distribution by Country—Total UNRRA Program, Including Original and Recommended Additional Contributions From All Countries (a).

(In Millions of United States Dollar Equivalents.)

Item.	Estimated Cost.
1. Supplies to receiving countries (landed cost basis):
Albania	$30.0
Austria	100.0
Byelorussian S.S.R.	60.0
China	675.0
Czechoslovakia	315.0
Greece	450.0
Italy	490.0
Poland	533.0
Ukrainian S.S.R.	190.0
Yugoslavia	519.0
(b) Other	37.8
(c) Unallocated	185.0
2. Administrative expenses	35.1
3. Mission operating expenses	55.5
4. Displaced persons operations (including supplies)	91.2
Total	$3,766.6

(a) Tentative estimates—subject to revision and approval by the central committee of UNRRA.
(b) Dodecanese Islands, Ethiopia and emergency programs.
(c) Unallocated for emergencies that cannot be foreseen at this time.

Availability of Supplies Will Greatly Affect Programs

The effective fulfillment of the programs in providing for the survival through the winter of the populations in the war-torn areas and in helping to revive production within the countries will depend heavily upon the availability of supplies and shipping. This cannot be determined precisely in advance. However, the general situation as it appears now is as follows:

(1) The required ocean shipping will be available. Charges are still high, but we hope that during the year they will be reduced, so that more of the available funds can be used to get supplies.

(2) Minimum requirements for supplies to revive farm production, for repairs and raw materials to speed output from industries producing the necessities of life and for providing coastal and inland transportation can, in general, be met. Fortunately, military surpluses are in sight for nearly all the transport requirements. Here the timing is of utmost importance. For maximum restoration of production we must put the equipment and raw materials at the right places at the right times in the right amounts. This means that the funds to finance procurement must be available early in the year, for many of these items require months to manufacture after the orders are placed.

(3) The health and medical supply requirements can be met if financing is provided.

(4) The clothing and textile and footwear and raw fiber and leather programs can be met. They are the barest minimum sort of programs. We wish they were more nearly adequate. We are gratified that we can supplement these programs with used clothing collections. We hope that the response to these drives in the United States, Canada Australia and other nations continues as generous as it has been in the collection campaigns of 1945.

(5) The food requirements present a difficult problem because of the world shortage, long acute in the case of fats and oils but only recently in the case of wheat and rice.

Shipping Problem Stressed

After a relatively easy period during the last six months in providing grain for recipient countries, a most unsatisfactory situation has developed with alarming suddenness during the last few days. World demands for imported grain have increased very greatly during the past year, owing partly to small harvests in all European countries. While the main supplying countries (United States, Canada, Argentine and Australia) may have sufficient supplies of grain available for export, an extraordinarily difficult situation has now developed in moving this grain from the producing areas in these countries to seaboard. The supplying countries now face an immense problem in meeting the exceptionally heavy demands which have been placed upon them. Unless exceptional measures are taken by the supplying countries, UNRRA may not be able to meet the January schedules we had set up and February and March shipments may fall considerably below the mark at which we are aiming.

UNRRA's requirements for January wheat and flour shipments to countries it is serving total 666,000 tons. There is in sight today insufficient grain to meet these requirements. Efforts are under way to bring up the supplies for January loading. I am sure all concerned will do everything in their power to improve the present prospects, for unless this can be done there is the possibility of reduction in the bread rations in some European countries.

Breadstuffs are the basis of the austerity diets which our Allies whose countries were the battleground have been contemplating for this winter. If we undercut that foundation, the basis stat of health and energy of millions of people will deteriorate still further. The supplying nations do not wish to be responsible for such a tragic occurrence in the first post-war winter, and I now appeal and will continue to appeal on behalf of all the liberated nations for the most strenuous efforts to provide the essential exports of grain; especially of wheat.

Conclusion

As I have indicated, new contributions of funds from the United States, the United Kingdom and Canada for the time being will enable UNRRA to carry on with its task. At the same time I want to emphasize, and to make this clear to everybody, that the demands for aid now being placed on UNRRA by members of the United Nations are far beyond the resources of the Administration. The discussions which we have had during the last few days with representatives of the Governments now receiving UNRRA aid and with our chiefs of missions in those countries show clearly that in order to provide their minimum overall relief needs, we would require financial resources greater than those now in sight. When I make this point I have particularly in mind the needs of China, the central and southeastern European countries and Italy. Equally so, I am conscious of the fact that UNRRA will be able to undertake only part of the minimum relief job which is required to be done if tragedy is to be averted in Austria.

UNRRA will use its available funds with the utmost efficiency and with the sole purpose of providing relief fairly to the greatest possible number of people. But I want it to be known that UNRRA, by the limitation of its financial resources and by limitations of supply of certain commodities, will be unable to provide all the assistance which is so clearly needed in the world today.

CONGRESS FACES MAJOR ISSUES IN 1946 SESSION

Washington, Dec. 22—(AP)—No Congress in recent years has faced an election-year docket as laden with controversy as that which confronts the 79th when it reconvenes next month.

Between January 14 when they come back from vacation, and next Summer when they hope to get away for political campaigning, the legislators must grapple with more than a dozen major subjects, each primed with political dynamite.

There are many items on President Truman's legislative program that haven't been acted on, and there are many others, not on the Chief Executive's priority list, that are likely to become bitter issues.

The Senate in particular faces a prospect of diving immediately into a row, with Senators Ball (R-Minn.) and Chavez (D-N. M.), planning to bring up the bill for a permanent Fair Employment Practices Committee. That plan has started trouble every time it has come up. Senator Bilbo (D-Miss.), already has let it be known he will filibuster.

Some time before May 15, Congress must decide what it wants to do about the draft law. It expires then, and many members of Congress want it to go right on with its dying.

Draft Law

The decision on the draft probably will be coupled with universal military training legislation the President has requested. The House Military Committee is in the midst of hearings on peacetime military training now.

Before the end of June, some decision must be done about price controls. If nothing is done, the controls end automatically, for the price control law expires on June 30, 1946.

The Administration will insist on early action on legislation setting up fact-finding boards to handle labor disputes. The President wanted it enacted before the Christmas adjournment, but Congress ignored his request. Committee hearings will be resumed next month in both the House and the Senate.

The President also wants Congress to do something quickly about employment. He favors the so-called Full Employment Bill passed by the Senate, and definitely doesn't like a substitute passed by the House. The issue is in the hands of Senate-House conferees who won't get together until after the first of the year.

Unemployment compensation legislation has a high priority on the 1946 calendar. The President wants financial aid to jobless increased and the coverage of existing law broadened. The House Ways and Means Committee has plugged its ears to his request thus far.

Other subjects almost certain to be in the foreground on Capitol Hill:

Bonuses for service men: There already have been strong hints that an adjusted compensation drive will be launched early in the new year. And with the Congressional elections just around the corner, it's a political "hot potato."

Discharge of service men: Legislation to force the immediate release of married soldiers and sailors and other designated groups has been gaining support in recent months. A "discharge petition" to force its consideration by the House has more than 100 signatures.

Army-Navy Merger: The President has drawn the issue by requesting creation of a single department of national defense. The betting on Capitol Hill is about even-money on whether he will get it.

Health Insurance: Legislation dealing with this was requested by the President in a recent message and legislation is in the mill.

Foreign Loans: Congress will be asked early in the year to approve huge loans to Great Britain and possibly other nations. With the national debt soaring toward the $300,000,000,000 mark, the lawmakers aren't likely to vote approval without asking a lot of questions.

Pensions

Pensions for Congressmen: One of the hottest of the "hot potatoes." Congressional sentiment is strongly behind it, a House committee has overwhelmingly recommended it, but the Congressmen themselves are wary about voting on it.

The Atomic Bomb: Legislation setting up machinery for domestic controls has been on a House Rules Committee shelf for some time. The President requested its enactment.

Taxes and Appropriations: An election-year clamor for reductions in both is a certainty. The House Appropriations Committee already is considering the new budget and its chairman has demanded cuts to the bone in all items. There is a strong prospect that some of the war-enacted "luxury" taxes may be removed or reduced.

New Hawaii Probe Counsel Sought

Washington, Dec. 22 (AP)—The Pearl Harbor Investigating Committee took a holiday today, but Chairman Barkley (D., Ky.) had some unfinished business — the search for a new chief counsel and staff.

Gerhard Gesell, assistant counsel, said the staff still intends to quit after questioning of witnesses on the day the committee meets again, December 31.

William D. Mitchell, chief counsel, and his aides announced several days ago they would withdraw because the scope of the investigation had been so broadened that it could not be completed by the January 3 deadline. Congress subsequently extended the deadline to February 15.

Stark To Be Called

Admiral Harold R. Stark, the 1941 chief of naval operations, is expected to be the first witness when the hearing resumes.

Even Admiral Husband E. Kimmel, Pacific Fleet commander in 1941, and Lieut. Gen. Walter C. Short, then Hawaiian army chief, were absent yesterday.

Representative Gearhart (R., Cal.) asked counsel to obtain for him during the recess photographs or the original documents on all intercepted Japanese messages dated December 6, 1941, regardless of origin or the time of decoding.

"Has A Hunch"

Gearhart said he is interested in seeing "all the markings" made on the messages and that he "has a hunch" something interesting might be developed.

The committee heard Admiral R. K. Turner, former war plans chief, yesterday.

Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.) suggested in questioning him that Navy Department orders for Kimmel to transport planes to Midway and Wake Island on carrier decks left the fleet without any air support if it had put to sea from Pearl Harbor.

Turner agreed that Kimmel would have had no air support for the battleships, except when they were operating close to land.

Reconnaissance Order

Ferguson noted that for a three-day period at the end of November, Admiral Thomas C. Hart, then Asiatic Fleet commander, had been ordered to fly reconnaissance in connection with British sweeps.

Since the Navy had lost track of two squadrons of Japanese carriers, Ferguson asked why Kimmel was not told to do the same thing at Pearl Harbor.

Turner replied that Kimmel had had orders to deploy his forces and "giving commanders specific orders as to how they are going to do it is very bad practice."

PLANNERS SEEK FOOD, SUPPLIES AS GIFT TO GERMANY

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22 — (AP) The National Planning association recommended today a $1,000,000,000 gift in food and feed for western Europe, including ex-enemy countries.

The contribution, the report said, should be in addition to funds provided for the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation administration which does not operate in the former enemy territory.

The association, a non-profit, non-political organization, estimated that the billion dollars in goods will be needed, in addition to an estimated $500,000,000 in UNRRA funds, to keep western Europe, the United Kingdom and non-UNRRA countries from hunger this winter.

"There is no real alternative," the association's board of trustees said in a statement, adding:

"We should regard this gift not a charity but as a demonstration of our concern for the lives of Europeans and the welfare of Europe, and as part of the war's unfinished business."

It would not be sound financial policy, the association said, to ask the liberated countries to finance their emergency food imports through long terms loans when their "slender dollar resources are sorely needed to buy from us the equipment for rehabilitating x x x their operating economies."

The association estimated that the $1,500,000,000, including UNRRA's money, would provide:

Food and grains $600,000,000; dairy products and eggs $200,000,000; meats $350,000,000; fats and oils $100,000,000; other food items $100,000,000; livestock feed $150,000,000.

"An analysis of the effect of such aid on U. S. civilian supplies," the association declared, "indicates that, with the possible exceptions of fats and sugar, food supplies in this country are sufficient to meet these requirements if the American people, instead of consuming more food than ever before, are willing to consume at a rate not higher than six to eight per cent above pre-war (1935-39) levels."

H. Christian Sonne, chairman of the NPA board, said that the food should be given directly to the government of western Europe for distribution through regular channels to their people, provided adequate rationing machinery exists, or seems in prospect, in the individual countries.

FRANCO MAINTAINS LARGE ARMY SAYS U. S. AMBASSADOR

Washington, Dec. 22—(AP)—Ambassador Norman Armour, just back from Spain, says Generalissimo Franco still maintains an army of 600,000 to 700,000 and that one-third of that nation's budget goes to the armed forces and police.

Obviously, Armour told newsmen yesterday, the Franco regime is not shifting from totalitarianism to democracy rapidly enough to satisfy the United States.

The 58-year-old diplomat, who is retiring after 30 years in the foreign service, returned from Madrid two days ago. State Department officials said there is no plan to fill the vacancy immediately.

This nation has been increasingly critical of Franco in recent months. Armour said, however, that Franco insists that he is taking steps to make his government more acceptable to the Allies.

Among these, Armour said, the Spanish dictator lists the lifting of censorship of dispatches of foreign correspondents in Spain; adoption of a so-called Bill of Rights; and the scheduling of municipal elections for next March.

Armour said one of the major current problems of American and British Embassies in Madrid is arranging for repatriation of an estimated 9,000 to 15,000 German nationals who were in Spain on V-E Day.

U. S. Backs Down On Plea to Britain On Siamese Peace

Request to Defer Settlement of Terms Is Withdrawn; Financial Issue a Factor

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22 (AP).—The United States notified the British and Siamese governments today that it was withdrawing its recent request that they defer final conclusion of a war-end agreement. British-American conversations regarding certain terms of the proposed agreement now have been concluded, the State Department said.

There was no amplification in the statement of the American government's discussions with the British and no official disclosure of the terms of the proposed agreement. Government officials have said privately, however, that the United States believed the original British terms were too harsh on the Siamese.

These officials, who asked not to be identified, said the American government feared severe British reparation demands might seriously cripple the Siamese economy.

RUBBER SHIPMENT DUE FROM MALAYA

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22—(AP) The Reconstruction Finance corporation disclosed today that the first shipment of crude rubber in three years from the rehabilitated countries of the Far East is due soon.

The shipment is expected aboard the S.S. Canton Victory, due Sunday or Monday at New York with 2,060 tons of rubber from Malaya and Java.

The rubber will be stored and later parcelled out for productive use, the RFC said in a statement.

Meanwhile the RFC said it will get rid of its scrap rubber piles in 18 cities, explaining that the material has been worked over many time and what is left has no commercial value.

At the beginning of 1945, the Office of Rubber Reserve and its predecessor, the Rubber Reserve company, had bought 1,109,000 short tons of scrap rubber, had sold 927,000 tons for use by rubber manufacturing comanies, and had 182,000 tons of scrap rubber on hand.

POW ARE KEPT OFF TRAINS

Army Postpones Transfer of Germans to Ports in East

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22 (AP)—The War Department said today that it had postponed a scheduled transfer of 5,000 German prisoners from Fort Custer, Mich., to East Coast ports and that such transfers had been "virtually suspended for some two weeks."

Brig. Gen. B. M. Bryan, Provost Marshal General, issued a statement after publication of reports from Fort Custer that furloughs of American soldiers guarding prisoners there had been canceled under plans to start the prisoners eastward by Friday. Fort Custer officials announced today that Christmas furloughs had been reinstated as a result of the War Department's action.

General Bryan said that the prisoners would not be moved until some time in January and then only if their transportation would not interfere with transportation for American service men

Gregory Gets Surplus Post

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22 (AP).—President Truman has named Lieutenant General Edmund B. Gregory, Army Quartermaster General, as chairman of the new War Assets Corporation of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. This R. F. C. subsidiary will soon take on the job of disposing of surplus government-owned goods.

Commemorative Silver Coins Urged

Washington, Dec. 22 (AP)—Ten million silver pieces will cause Americans to remember Pearl Harbor, and another ten million will remind them daily of the victory over the Axis, if Representative White (D., Idaho) gets his wish.

White introduced bills to authorize the coinage of ten million half-dollars commemorating the Japanese attack that brought this country into the war and coinage of an equal number of silver dollars commemorating the successful conclusion of the conflict.

New Impeachment Proceedings Favored For Federal Judges

Washington, Dec. 22—(AP)—New machinery for removal of Federal judges, except those on the Supreme Court, is recommended by the House Judiciary Committee.

A majority of the group said in a report filed with the House that impeachment proceedings, the only way now to oust Federal judges are outmoded.

Accompanying the report yesterday was a bill which would provide for trial by Circuit Courts of Appeal of Federal judges, whom the House of Representatives certified by resolution as suspected of a breach of "good conduct." This procedure would not apply to Supreme Court justices.

The committee divided sharply on the revision proposal, however. Of the 27 members, 11 signed a minority report attacking it. They argued that the present procedure of impeachment before Congress is adequate.

White House Group Gets V-E Day Scroll For Christmas Gift

Washington, Dec. 22—(AP)—Several hundred employes of the White House received from President Truman yesterday and today an autographed illuminated scroll of the President's V-E Day proclamation of May 8, 1945.

Cabinet members and those on the President's immediate staff received the additional compliment of a personal expression of good wishes inscribed in Mr. Truman's own hand in one corner of the scroll.

The employes include those in the reconversion office of John W. Snyder and the domestic employes in the living quarters, as well as the office staff and police guard.

Mead Urges Congress Act in Housing Crisis

Washington, Dec. 22—(AP)—Senator Mead, (D-N. Y.), said today that Congress, immediately on returning from its recess, should take steps "to alleviate the critical conditions of housing, hospital facilities and educational opportunities for veterans."

He urged in a statement that an inventory be taken immediately of all Army and Navy facilities and Federally-owned buildings suitable for housing, hospital and educational purposes.

"With an emergency upon us," he said, "an all-out national frontal attack which will include the use of all available facilities, both temporary and permanent, must be initiated."

RED CROSS HELPS WITH YULE CHEER

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22. — (AP) The American Red Cross said today special effort has been made to provide Christmas cheer for every American serviceman overseas, as well as the wounded at hospitals in this country.

The Red Cross reported that in cooperation with the Army Special Services, Red Cross clubs have laid plans to provide turkey and trimmings, trees and gifts, holiday decorations and carol singing at clubs and canteens.

In addition 1,250,000 individual gift boxes were shipped overseas earlier in the year for distribution to hospitalized men, to those at lonely outposts and others.

Men aboard ship will not be forgotten, nor will those who land from transports on Christmas day. The Red Cross said they will receive not only the usual canteen service but gifts also will be distributed in many areas.

Gifts will be distributed Christmas morning to veterans in hospitals.

To Help G. I.s on Clothing

Senators Will Back Bills Allowing Yeterans to Wear Uniforms

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22 (AP).—The Senate Small Business Committee is going to the rescue of discharged veterans who can't buy civilian garb after they get home because of the clothing shortage and cannot wear their Army uniforms more than a month after they get home because of military law.

The committee has agreed to sponsor legislation which would permit the former G. I.s to go about in olive drab or khaki as long as they please.

Fourth Of Re-Enlisted Men Are Overseas

Washington, Dec. 22 (AP)—Almost a quarter of the more than 300,000 men who have signed up in the Army's two-month recruiting campaign are overseas, the War Department said today.

Up to December 7, a total of 304,802 enlistments had been made, including 43,097 in the week ended on that date, the Army disclosed.

Officials expressed pleasure over the rate of enlistments, but said they would not attempt to project this rate into the future because of various unforeseeable factors. The Army hopes to have its manpower at 1,600,000 by next July. This figure would include men enlisted as well as draftees.

EX-G. I. MAY WEAR UNIFORM LONGER

Washington, Dec. 22 (A. P.).—The Senate Small Business Committee is galloping to the rescue of discharged veterans who can't buy civilian garb after they get home, because of the shortage, and who can't wear their Army uniforms after they get home, because of military law.

Lest large scale nudity result the committee agreed yesterday to launch legislation which will permit the former G. I.'s to go about in olive drab or khaki as long as they please. It also announced the quartermaster general has agreed to recommend that the War Department permit discharged men to take home all clothing in their possession.

The committee said the Civilian Production Administration will tackle the civilian suit shortage with regulations requiring production of more suit-weight cloth by woolen and worsted mills.

Truman Names Army Quartermaster Chief As War Assets Head

Washington, Dec. 22—(AP)—President Truman has named Lt. Gen. Edmund B. Gregory, Army quartermaster general, as chairman of the new War Assets Corporation of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

This RFC subsidiary will soon take the job of disposing of surplus Government-owned goods.

General Gregory is expected to organize a staff of merchandising and sales executives after the first of the year to handle the work. He will retain his quartermaster general post, but while engaged in his RFC duties, Maj. Gen. Clifford Corbin, now assistant quartermaster general, will act for him in the Army assignment.

Gregory, 63 and a native of Storm Lake, Iowa, will take over the surplus property disposal job given temporarily to RFC Director Sam H. Husbands. Husbands acted pending the appointment of someone who could devote full time to the task.

NINE MAP EXPERTS GET DECORATIONS

Truman Gives Legion of Merit to Men Who Kept White House War Charts Up to Date

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22 (AP)—President Truman awarded the Legion of Merit today to five members of the Army and Navy who kept the White House war maps up to date.

Recipients were Lieut. Comdr. G. M. Elsey, Oakmont, Pa.; Lieuts. Robert H. Myers, Chevy Chase, Md., Ogden S. Collins, Rockaway, N. J., and Robert W. Bogue, Sioux Falls, S. D.; and Ship's Clerk Edwin L. Hoying, Anna, Ohio, all of the Naval Reserve.

Also Majors Ogden Kniffin, Darien, Conn.; Boyce P. Price, Bronxville, N. Y.; and Franklin H. Graham, Detroit, and Chief Warrant Officer A. M. Cornelius, Hastings, Neb.

Lieut. Comdr. William M. Rigdon, administrative assistant and secretary to the President's Naval aide, also received the Legion of Merit for assisting in the "planning and preparation" for the late President Roosevelt's participation in two Quebec conferences and the Allied meetings at Cairo, Teheran and Yalta, and for President Truman's participation in the Berlin conference.

Lieuteant Commander Rigdon, who lives in Statesboro, Ga., acted as the President's personal secretary at most of the Allied meetings abroad.

The map room officers were cited for fulfilling "exacting responsibilites" which "contributed materially to the successful prosecution of the war."

They not only maintained maps on which were posted the day to day positions of opposing air, ground and naval forces, but prepared charts showing current and future military operations and daily reports on the war's progress for the President, his Chief of Staff and military and naval aides.

They also operated special communications systems, including scramblers, set up for the personal use of the Chief Executive in communicating with heads of foreign governments.

One or more of the map room officers accompanied the late President Roosevelt and President Truman to each of the big international war conferences.

CURB IS ENDING ON NEWSPRINT

Will Be Lifted on Dec. 31, but Supply Is Short.

Washington, Dec. 22 (A. P.).—Government controls on use of newsprint will be lifted on December 31, but the supply is expected to remain short of demand.

In ordering revocation of all but inventory restrictions, the Civilian Production Administration estimated that about 1,935,000 tons of newsprint will be available to United States publishers during the first half of 1946. This is 98 per cent of supply in the same period of 1941.

"While this is not adequate to meet demands," the CPA said, "it is considered sufficient to warrant revocation of the order in view of recommendations of the industry."

A pledge by the American Newspaper Publishers Association to see that no newspaper suspends publication for lack of newsprint was an important factor in CPA's decision yesterday to cancel the rationing order, L-240.

A. N. P. A. Indorses Plan.

A. N. P. A. has indorsed a plan under which publishers agree to set aside up to 3 per cent of their newsprint tonnage for papers threatened with suspension because they cannot obtain newsprint.

J. Hale Steinman, director of CPA's printing and publishing division, said newspapers required to draw on such a pool would be permitted to publish an eight-page daily paper.

Steinman said the plan calls for State and regional reserves. CHA Administrator John D. Small stressed, however, that if this voluntary plan should break down, the Government "will act promptly to reinstitute newsprint controls, either through a general order or through use of the priorities power in special cases."

Under the newsprint rationing order, which went into effect on January 1, 1943, newspapers have been limited to a certain percentage of the paper they used during 1941. Inventory restrictions are being continued, CPA said, to prevent "any unreasonable accumulation of the available supply." Under these restrictions, newspapers in the Eastern and Central States are limited to supplies for twenty-five days' consumption, while those in Western States cannot exceed forty-five days' supply. These restrictions, CPA explained, are based on average daily consumption during the last six months of this year.

N. Y.-Amsterdam Flights To Commence Jan. 15

Washington, Dec. 22—(AP)—American Airlines System will inaugurate weekly flights from New York to Amsterdam and Berlin on January 15 and to Copenhagen and Stockholm on February 1, a company spokesman said yesterday.

Service to the Scandinavian countries will include Oslo as soon as the necessary navigational and landing aids are installed at Gardermoen Airport, about 30 miles from Oslo.

This will make nine flights weekly from the United States to Europe on the American Airlines System. It is now flying three times weekly from New York and once weekly from Washington and Chicago to London. Next week it will add a flight from New York and one from Washington.

The flight to the Netherlands and Germany will leave on Tuesdays and that to the Scandinavian countries on Fridays.

NEW TECHNIQUES AID BLIND VETS FROM BOTH WARS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—(AP) Amazingly successful methods that promise to rehabilitate virtually all of the 1,375 blinded veterans of World War II are to be applied to 505 sightless veterans of the first World War still confined to government institutions.

Announcing this, Maj. Gen. Paul R. Hawley, acting VA Surgeon General, said the Army Rehabilitation program of World War II has been so successful there are only six blinded men from the recent conflict in Veterans Administration hospitals or homes.

The Army has established instruction centers where its blinded men are given training to minimize their handicap.

In one of these, Old Farms Convalescent Hospital at Avon, Conn, they are taught to substitute hearing for eyesight as an aid in walking and other activities. They are taught to read in braille and to engage in a wide variety of occupational activities and recreations. These not only rekindle normal interests but also help veterans to choose suitable occupations.

After mastering the Army course of instruction, 680 blinded World War II veterans have been discharged and returned to civilian life. Most of the others are receiving training.

The Veterans Administration faces one complication the Army did not have to meet. Many of the 320 World War I veterans in VA hospitals, and of 185 in VA homes, have been there for many years. Most are more than 50 years old.

While the Army's blind center staffs are composed of physicians and other specialists, and of people with normal sight, the Veterans Administration plan is to retain blind instructors in nine special instruction centers.

They hope to make most of the World War I veterans self-reliant with the idea that many of them may later be able to leave veterans institutions.

They will be taught braille; the use of braille typewriters and watches; the use of talking books; perception of objects and sounds; recognition of people; how to get about without aid; personal hygiene; pencil writing and the use of hand tools and games for the blind.

First instructor appointed was George Hackenburg, for 17 years a field representative of the Pennsylvania State Council for the Blind and recently a dictaphone operator for the VA. Eighty veterans will be placed under his guidance at the Dayton, O., VA home.

Other VA centers for the blind will be in the Bronx, N. Y.; and Tuskegee, Ala., VA hospitals; and in the following VA homes; Bath, N. Y.; Bay Pines, Fla.; Kecoughtan, Va.; Los Angeles, Calif.; Mountain Home, Tenn., and Wood, Wis.

BOARD GIVES G. M. AND UNION TIME TO COOL

Hopes Both Sides Will Use Six-day Recess to End Month-old Strike.

'ABILITY TO PAY' IS ISSUE

Company Is Silent on Stand—Locals' Demands Will Be Discussed Wednesday.

Washington, Dec. 22 (A. P.).—The President's fact - finding board in the General Motors strike began a cooling off recess today, hoping that the principals would use the time to end the month-old walkout.

By adjourning its second day sessions until next Friday the board sidestepped any immediate crisis over the corporation's reaction to the board's decision that it will consider "ability to pay" in connection with the C. I. O.-Auto Workers' demand for a 30 per cent wage rise.

The company was silent on its position. Lloyd K. Garrison, chairman of the fact-finding panel, declined to say whether the board's statement of policy, which he read before quickly adjourning the hearing, had been approved by the corporation.

Garrison and his colleagues were closeted with the corporation's president, Charles E. Wilson, and his associates for two and one-half hours before the panel chairman announced the recess. He said he would not call upon either side to comment on the panel's declaration of policy.

The board said the ability to pay, based on profits and present prices, "will not be regarded as the only or controlling factor in determining the amount of a fair and equitable wage adjustment."

The panel put off a decision on another issue which has stirred the corporation's ire. It said:

Books Inquiry Put Off.

"Whether the board will call upon the company to submit books or records germane to the case for examination by the board in accordance with the President's statement of December 20, will be determined by the future developments in the case."

President Truman said on Thursday that fact-finding boards should have access to company books to complete their studies, but that the data survey should not be made public.

The company and union representatives of the 175,000 strikers headed back to Detroit today with an appointment to get together there Wednesday at 2:30 P. M., to discuss revised demands of local unions at plants where pickets are permitting office help to go through. Walter P. Reuther, union vice-president, said this conference was on local demands only and not on the wage issue, but that he hoped the broader negotiations could begin soon after.

Reuther's Statement.

"We are going to make a sincere effort at collective bargaining," he said. "If we are not successful we will be back here on December 28. This strike will be settled eventually, as all other strikes have been."

As a parting plea to the company and union to end the strike, the fact-finding board said it was "firmly of the view that the strike can and should be settled by agreement of the parties, and that collective bargaining in this case has not yet proved adequate to its proper tasks."

MOST U.S. STRIKES ENDED QUICKLY, SURVEY DISCLOSES

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22—(AP) The Labor department counted up the strikes since V-J day today and concluded that most of the nation's industrial plants "are proceeding with production without work stoppage or significant labor-management controversies."

From the end of hostilities in the Pacific through Dec. 21, the department estimated that about 1,650 work stoppages occurred. The conciliation service was instrumental in settling 1,256 of the 1,450 which were terminated, the Labor department said.

Strikes or lockouts since V-J day involved about 1,550,000 workers who lost about 24,000,000 man days of work—94-100 per cent of the total available working time of the nation's wage earners.

The figures do not include plants shut down or crippled because of the lack of material or parts from plants closed by strikes.

The department said in a statement accompanying its routine November strike figures, that:

"Labor - management disputes which result in strikes often overshadow the fact that most of the nation's industrial plants are proceeding with production without work stoppage or significant labor-management controversies.

"In recent months many plants have granted, without any difficulties, wage increases under the President's announced wage-price policy. Several hundred general wage increases made since V-J day have already come to the attention of the Department of Labor, covering a large number of industries."

The department said that more than half of the total idleness in November resulted from four strikes. These they listed as the C.I.O.-Auto Workers Strike over a 30 per cent wage increase at General Motors which began November 21, the strike of AFL machinists in the San Francisco bay area which began late in October, the strike of glass workers in 10 plants of the Libbey-Owens-Ford and Pittsburgh Plate Glass companies since October 22, and the the strike of A.F.L. lumber workers started September 24.

The total number of new strikes and lockouts in November was 335, involving 405,000 workers, the Bureau of Labor Statistics estimated. Approximately 230 stoppages which began in preceding months continued into November for a total of 565 stoppages in progress during the month affecting 600,000 workers.

G.M. And Union Both Silent On Fact Board

Detroit, Dec. 22 (AP)—General Motors and the CIO United Auto Workers continued deadlocked today in their dispute over a union demand for a 30 per cent wage increase.

After a first meeting of the two sides with President Truman's fact-finding board yesterday the situation was:

1. The board had urged the necessity of making a determined new effort to settle the month-old dispute by collective bargaining.

2. Hearings were recessed; the board said they would be resumed December 26 if no agreement has been reached.

3. A statement of board policy said G.M.'s ability to pay would be considered by the board and that developments would determine whether the board would ask the company to submit its books.

Prices And Profits

An Administration announcement yesterday authorized the fact-finders to consider prices as well as profits and to determine whether any wage increases they recommend would justify companies in seeking price increases.

The fact-finders were believed to have averted any immediate showdown with General Motors on the question of examination of profits by the recess in the Washington proceedings. G.M. had threatened to bolt the hearing if its profits were considered in connection with the union's pay demand.

Both Sides Silent

No comment was made by either the corporation or the union on yesterday's developments. The disputants did announce that a meeting would be held here December 26 to consider numerous local-union grievances.

Walter P. Reuther, UAW-CIO vice president, said considerable groundwork for future negotiations in most of the 100 units in G.M. plants was laid in Washington discussions. He said local-union grievances were accumulating to such an extent that if they were not cleared up they might bog down wage sessions.

"Veterans Day" Set

The union disclosed that a telegram had been sent to all its locals designating Saturday, January 12, as "Veterans Day" for "simultaneous nation-wide demonstrations by veterans of World Wars I and II in support of striking workers."

While General Motors held the spotlight on the nation's labor front and the Ford Motor Company's negotiations with the UAW were in recess until January 8, developments included:

CLEVELAND — Common Pleas Judge Frank S. Day issued a temporary injunction limiting to 60 the number of pickets at G.M.'s strike-bound Cleveland Diesel engine plant.

DETROIT — The Packard Motor Company told its foremen it would appeal to the United States Supreme Court any lower court's ruling that the company must bargain collectively. The NLRB on December 6 ordered Packard to negotiate with the Foreman's Associations of America (Ind.). Packard maintains that foremen, as representatives of management, are not to be considered "employés."

MOST AUTO FIRMS IDLE OVER HOLIDAY

Ford, Packard and Chrysler Shut Down Because of Shortage of Parts.

DETROIT, Dec. 22. — (AP) The Christmas holidays swelled to nearly half a million tonight the number of workers idled in the nation's automobile industry.

To the 175,000 General Motors production workers who left their jobs a month ago in the C.I.O. United Automobile Workers' battle for a 30 per cent wage rate increase were added additional thousands today as the factories closed down until next Wednesday at least.

Parts shortages figured in the laying off of 100,000 employes by the Ford Motor company and 10,000 by Packard Motor Car company. Chrysler Corp. with approximately 80,000 workers also closed their plants until next Wednesday.

Look to New Parley

Meanwhile General Motors and U.A.W.-C.I.O. representatives looked to the reopening of negotiations here the day after Christmas as holding possibilities for an agreement in the dispute over production workers' wages in approximately 100 GM plants throughout the country.

There was no comment today from management or union concerning the Washington meetings of President Truman's fact-finding board and the sudden recess decided upon yesterday until after the Detroit meetings next week.

Technically, the least, the meetings here are to deal with what were described as "local union grievances," including U.A.W.-C.I.O. picketing activities at a number of GM plants. In some instances where salaried workers have been unable to return to work, GM has sought injunctions against the union, alleging the picketing was illegal.

The fact-finding board, however, apparently was hopeful the Detroit meetings might make further hearings by the board unnecessary.

G-M Threatens to Quit

The board had announced it would consider "ability to pay" in reaching a decision on the wage demands, and shortly before the recess GM had threatened to withdraw from the hearings if its profits were considered in connection with the union demands.

Throughout the negotiations between GM and the U.A.W.-C.I.O. the union has asserted the corporation's books would show it could pay the increase within its present price structure. GM has insisted its profits were not properly a subject for collective bargaining with the union over wages.

To the fact-finding board the management representatives said the question of profits and prices was a responsibility of the OPA, adding that GM did not propose to "submit any issue within the jurisdiction of the OPA to this fact-finding board."

In recessing its hearings the board announced they would be resumed in Washington on December 28 if no agreement was reached in the meantime.

The U.A.W.-C.I.O. has spurned a GM offer of a 10 per cent or 13 1-2 cents an hour wage increase and a Ford Motor Co offer of 12.4 per cent or 15 cents an hour. The Ford offer was coupled with stipulations concerning production volume and union responsibility which the U.A.W.-C.I.O. termed "completely unacceptable."

Negotiations between Ford and the U.A.W.-C.I.O. over the union demand for a 30 per cent increase will be resumed on January 8. No date has been set for a renewal of discussions between the union and Chrysler which also turned down a 30 per cent increase demand.

$50,000 CIO Strike Fund

Detroit, Dec. 22 (AP)—The special strike fund of the CIO United Auto Workers now total about $50,000, Secretary-Treasurer George F. Addes reported today.

A $15,000 check was presented yesterday to Addes by John Anderson, Amalgamated Local 155 president, on behalf of approximately 12,000 members employed by 150 small tool, die, and machine shops in Detroit.

Addes said that the fund is growing at the rate of $25,000 weekly.

More Steel Hands Back Strike

Pittsburgh, Dec. 22 (AP) — More CIO United Steel Workers have put their nearly 5-to-1 approval on a strike to enforce a $2-a-day wage demand, incomplete returns compiled by National Labor Relations Board offices indicated today.

Workers in 145 plants in fifteen states voted yesterday.. Returns from at least 89 plants gave 16,926 for a strike, 3,772 against.

The count was slow in some quarters. The NLRB announced that Minnesota returns would not be available until next week.

The ballot was in the nature of a "cleanup" for the big union poll November 28, when 411,401 workers voted for a strike and 83,859 against.

The union has set the nation-wide steel strike for January 14, unless the dispute is settled meanwhile or the Government intervenes.

Union Assails G.E. On Raise Offer

New York, Dec. 22 (AP)—A ten per cent wage increase offered by the General Electric Company was rejected almost immediately last night by the CIO United Electrical Workers, which recently voted to strike for raises of about 30 per cent.

The company proposal, stipulating that the union agree not to impose limitations on or obstacles to increased production, was turned down as "grossly inadequate to the needs of G.E. employés, whose earnings have been cut as much as 50 per cent."

The company employs about 89,000 UEW members. About 6,000 additional employés, members of other unions, were included in the wage increase offer.

Union Alleges Bad Faith

The UEW voted 5 to 1 last week to strike after January 1 in plants of General Electric, Westinghouse and General Motors. The union recently rejected a General Motors offer of a wage boost of 13½ cents an hour.

The union's negotiating committee, in a letter to E. D. Spicer, vice president of General Electric, said the company's proposal was "substantially less" than General Motors', and added:

"Your offer is deliberately inadequate. It is surrounded by conditions which you knew and intended should insure its rejection. You have not yet, after many months of negotiations and after a strike vote of your employés, commenced to bargain in good faith."

Other Raises Offered

Officials of the company were not available for comment on the rejection.

The G.E. offer was made by President Charles E. Wilson, who also said that nonunion employés would be given a ten per cent increase January 1 and that salaried workers earning between $3,000 and $5,000 would receive $300 annual increases.

Definite and proposed wage increases, he said in a statement, would total about $25,700,000 annually for 124,000 employés.

The statement said that "whether or not the union accepts this offer, the increase will go into effect on January 1 for eligible employés who are not subject to collective bargaining agreements."

150,000 STRANDED ON WEST COAST, MORE ARRIVING

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 22—(AP) The Army's "Operation Santa Claus" to get Pacific warriors home for Christmas was running short of time today, with little hope for newcomers to western ports which have about 168,000 awaiting transportation.

Army and Navy officials explained that over-taxed transportation facilities were assigned on "first come-first served" basis and that the thousands arriving from now until Christmas day had little hope of getting on a train or plane going east of the Rockies until after Dec. 25.

Invitations to Dinner

With indications that the port cities of San Francisco, Los Angeles, Seattle, Portland, Tacoma and San Diego would likely have at least 150,000 stranded men of both services on Christmas, thousands of turkey dinner invitations for the veterans poured into Army and Navy headquarters.

The San Francisco area had the biggest number awaiting transportation, 53,000. The Army's total was about 44,000 with 5,100 to move east today and 3,348 arriving by ships. The Navy's backlog rose to nearly 9,000.

The battleship Colorado steamed into harbor with 2,114 passengers aboard, most of them sailors. They will be debarked immediately. The ship is expected to grant generous liberty for its own sailors on Christmas.

300 Vessels in Port

Navy officials estimated the total vessels ranging from the Colorado down to LCI's and PC's in the harbor for the holidays would be more than 300, with thousands of sailors to be on shore liberty in the area.

About 45,000 soldiers, sailors and marines are scheduled to be brought to western ports by the Pacific transport fleet in the Navy's "magic carpet" operation from now until

30.24-32595

Dec. 26.

Elaborate plans to make the delay more pleasant include Christmas trees on all ships and piers and at all camps where veterans are billeted, distribution of presents, entertainment by civilian professionals as well as army entertainers and, most important, generous "liberties."

In addition, there will be special church services. Everything possible is being done to put through communications to relatives of the men and special pay advances are being made so everybody will have some funds.

Veterans "sweating it out" on two of the "floating hotels" tied up at the San Francisco docks—the Monterey and the General Bundy—as well as soldiers living on other ships are free to go ashore as soon as morning roll call is taken. The men do not have to return to the ships until 6 a. m. the following day, unless they want to.

Storm-Hit Ship Docks, Another Safe

San Francisco, Dec. 22 (AP)—One of two vessels which have been in distress because of storm conditions along the Pacific coast made port this morning and the other was reported weathering the disturbance while rescue vessels stood by.

The LST 224, which battled heavy seas off the Golden Gate for two days, arrived in the bay at 2 A.M. and was proceeding to Mare Island under tow of a navy tug.

The army transport Imperial, with 581 Pacific veterans aboard, lay to off Cape Mendocino during last night with the Coast Guard cutter Shawnee and two tugs holding her in position. The Imperial's engines broke down but she was in no danger, Coast Guard officials said. The ship was bound for Seattle.

12 Nurse Returnees Use Private Car

Los Angeles, Dec. 22 (AP)—"Tell the folks to keep the Christmas tree up."

"I'm going to sit in a tub and soak for hours—with nobody to tell me to hurry."

These were typical reactions from twelve army nurses as they sat in a private railroad car bound for their homes in the East.

They had just returned from Leyte, where they served 18 to 24 months in a 3,000-bed hospital caring for wounded service men. Stranded in Los Angeles along with thousands of other service men and women, they had no hope for getting home by Christmas.

In Jeffers Private Car

But William M. Jeffers, Union Pacific president, had his private car attached to an eastbound train last night and asked the Army to select the occupants. The girls will reach their separation centers at Fort Dix, N.J., Monday and railroad officials said that with army cooperation they will reach their homes sometime Christmas Day.

First Lieutenant Sally Hitchcock, 26, West Brattleboro, Vt., had a special request for the home folks: "Please, please get my skis waxed. I'm dying to get out in the snow."

"And I want heads and heads of lettuce and hot soup and gallons of ice cream and cold fresh milk," said First Lieutenant Helen E. Gestwucki, 23, of Dunkirk, N.Y.

Fiance Still On Leyte

But First Lieutenant Ruth W. Dailey, of Newton Center, Mass., disclosed that her Christmas won't be as perfect as she might wish.

Her fiancé, Capt. Douglas Edwards, of Bartow, Fla., whom she met in New Guinea and who was her first date overseas, is still on Leyte.

"We'll be married when he gets back, in February, I guess," she said.

"But how glorious it will be anyway, getting home and seeing the folks again."

SERGEANT-IS HELD AS GERMAN AGENT

SAN RAFAEL, Calif., Dec. 22—(AP) A press statement issued by Army headquarters at Hamilton field said today S/Sgt. Frank Hirt, 30, of the air forces, was being held at the field on a charge of conspiracy to commit espionage on behalf of Germany.

He will be tried by court martial within the next month at Hamilton field, the Army statement said.

When arrested he and his wife were living at Petaluma, Calif.

Army authorities accused Hirt of sending to Germany information about American military planes. They said he admitted that he belonged to the Nazi party in Germany and was a corporal in the S.A., Hitler's storm troops.

Hirt, born in the United States, lived for many years in Germany with his grandparents. He returned to this country a few weeks before the 1941 attack on Pearl Harbor, and enlisted in the Army Air forces.

The charge against him, the Army said, included the allegation that he was recruited, trained and financed in Germany for an espionage mission to this country by Karl Bauer, Nazi espionage agent, and that after his enlistment in the U. S. Air Force, he corresponded with active German agents, providing them with information on war planes.

Hirt was arrested many months ago and has been secretly held at Hamilton field. His mother lived at North Babylon, Long Island, New York at the time of his enlistment in the Air Force. He subsequently changed his Army record to give the Petaluma address.

Order Canceling Furloughs Is Revoked

DEC 23 1945

Fort Custer, Mich., Dec. 22 (AP)—Christmas furloughs, previously canceled for soldiers at the prisoner-of-war camp here in order to process prisoners for return to Germany, have been reinstated, army officials announced here today.

Major Charles E. Gilbert, camp executive officer, said the reinstatement was possible because of a War Department move yesterday that extended from December 28 to January 1 the date when 5,000 German prisoners were to be ready for shipment.

Furlough To Be Short

The soldiers may now have short furloughs and Christmas passes, he said.

The order canceling furloughs was issued December 18, effective immediately, according to Capt. Raymond F. Collier, public-relations officer. Soldiers living at some distance from the fort were already on furlough when the order came out, thus it affected principally those living near by.

No soldier and only one officer had been recalled from furlough when the order was rescinded.

Army authorities earlier had announced that preparations were under way to ship out the prisoners, but said they probably would not be sent until the holiday travel rush subsides.

The shipment of prisoners will be the first to leave this camp, which has more than 7,000 internees. The War Department has announced all German POW's will be sent home by the latter part of April.

Lieut. Charles H. Ryan, Gas Victim at Army Camp

Board Investigates Entry of Monoxide Into Quarters

FORT MONMOUTH, N. J., Dec. 22 (AP).—A board of inquiry was still seeking today to determine how carbon monoxide gas entered the quarters of Lieutenant Charles H. Ryan, twenty-five, of 233 Weequahic Avenue, Newark, Thursday morning and killed the young officer who reported here last week.

A post public relations officer said there is no doubt that Lieutenant Ryan's death was accidental, and he added that a study is being made of the heating and plumbing fixtures in his quarters.

A former assistant to a chemistry professor at Harvard University in 1938 and 1939, Lieutenant Ryan entered the service in September, 1940. He was commissioned a lieutenant in the Signal Corps in July, 1942, and after further duty at Camp Crowder, Mo., was sent to the Pacific in June, 1944. He served in New Guinea and the Philippines, receiving two battle stars. Though he had ninety-seven points, he volunteered to continue in service until June, 1947.

Lieutenant Ryan lived at the Newark address with his wife, Mrs. Marguery Victorson Ryan, and a son, Robbie.

Army Officer Found Guilty of Illegal Discharge Transfers

Mitchel Field, N. Y., Dec. 22—(AP)—Maj. Alphonse J. Fabricatore, 27, former Army Medical Administrative ofiicer here, has been convicted by a General Court-Martial on charges of improperly bringing about transfer and discharge of soldiers and sentenced to three years' hard labor and dismissal from service.

Fabricatore had admitted arranging the transfer of some enlisted men to the hospital detachment here but denied charges that he had taken money from them. Pvt. Daniel J. Patrissy of New York City testified he left $500 on the seat of Fabricatore's automobile after the officer arranged for his discharge, but none of the other 74 witnesses at the trial attempted to link Fabricatore's activities with the payment of money.

After the 10-man court had convicted Fabricatore he told the presiding officer, "Sir, I feel absolutely no consciousness of guilt."

He will remain at Mitchel Field until his case is reviewed.

N. J. Battalion Decorated

695th Field Artillery Wins Presidential Unit Citation

TRENTON, N. J., Dec. 22 (AP).—Awarding of the Presidential unit citation and the meritorious service unit plaque to the 695th Armored Field Artillery Battalion, composed of the 112th Field Artillery, New Jersey National Guard units from Trenton, Red Bank and Morristown, was announced today by Adjutant General James I. Bowers.

The battalion received the Presidential award for outstanding performance while engaging the enemy as part of a small task force of the 3rd Army during the crossing of the Moselle River in France in September, 1944.

The unit plaque was awarded for efficient handling of supplies during actions from the Roer to the Rhine River.

Two C-97's Fly 200 From Seattle

SEATTLE, Dec. 22 (AP)—The first of two C-97 planes, military prototype of the Boeing stratocruisers, took off at 2:15 P. M., Pacific standard time, today with 100 Midwestern war veterans. It was due in Chicago at 1 A. M., Central standard time.

The other, similarly laden, followed an hour later. The aerially transported men will be taken to separation centers at Camps Grant and Sheridan. Some of them had arrived here from overseas only Wednesday; others had been awaiting transportation more than a week.

The experimental flights were scheduled earlier in the week, but the planes were grounded by bad weather at Great Falls, Mont.

One plane's passenger list consisted entirely of Michigan men; forty-six of the other's 100 men were from Detroit.

1,250 WOUNDED MEN THANK A PUBLISHER

FITCHBURG, Mass., Dec. 22 (AP)—A Santa Claus in khaki gave George H. Godbeer, publisher of The Fitchburg Sentinel, a Christmas gift today from 1,260 wounded service men—a scroll of thanks for keeping them in touch with world news.

Pvt. Manny Margolis of Brooklyn made the presentation.

"I present this scroll in the name of 1,260 wounded men at Lovell General Hospital in appreciation of your kindness and consideration in furnishing us with Associated Press news service. It has been of information and education for all patients."

The publisher replied:

"When I see you and thousands of other veterans bearing wounds like yourself, I feel that anything the rest of us can do is very small indeed, compared with what you have done.

"In the 107 years of The Sentinel's continuous publication, I am sure nothing resembling this has ever happened in this office before."

Mr. Godbeer learned in February that the patients at the hospital were hungering for up-to-the-minute news of the world.

He arranged with the Associated Press to install equipment at the hospital which linked the institution with the service.

"Send the bill to me," he said.

Since then a twenty-four-hour news service has been maintained. Periodically, the public address system has carried the news throughout the hospital to men unable to leave their beds and to the medical personnel.

V. F. W. Chief Claims American Uniform Being Degraded

Pittsburgh, Dec. 22—(AP)—Joseph M. Stack, National Commander in Chief of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, said today that "most of the crimes committed in Europe by men in American uniforms are not committed by American soldiers."

"Investigation has disclosed that the uniform is being worn by both French and German civilians, displaced, and in some instances by German prisoners of war," he said in a statement. "Returning veterans are continually calling attention to this fact, claiming that it is a degradation to their uniform.

"In order that there be no confusion, it is my recommendation that the commanders responsible issue and enforce orders prohibiting the wearing of any part of G. I. clothing by all except American personnel."

New Destroyer Christened For Medal of Honor Winner

Bath, Me., Dec. 22—(AP)—A 2,200-ton destroyer named for Pvt. Joseph W. Ozborn, USMCR, who was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor for giving his life by falling on a hand grenade to protect his comrades, will be launched here today.

Ozborn's widow, Mrs. Joseph William Ozborn of Logan, Ill., will christen the craft before it slides down its Bath Iron Works Corp. ways.

Ozborn, a native of Herrin, Ill., an automatic rifleman with the first Battalion, 23d Marines, Fourth Division, died in the battle for enemy-held Tinian Islands, July 30, 1944.

Nimitz to Speak

Will Be Guest of A. P. Editors Association on Jan. 11

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 22 (AP).—George W. Healy jr., chairman of The Associated Press Managing Editors' Association, announced today that Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, the new chief of Naval operations, will be the dinner speaker at the association's meeting in Miami, Jan. 10.

Mr. Healy, vice-president and managing editor of "The New Orleans Times-Picayune," announced also that C. R. Smith, chairman of the board of directors of American Airlines, will speak at the association's luncheon on Jan. 11.

Meetings of the association were deferred in 1944 and 1945 because of the war.

3 Sailors Cross Country By Taxi for Christmas

By The Associated Press.

CHATTANOOGA, Dec. 22—Four Atlanta sailors and one from Chattanooga licked the transportation problem and came home for Christmas by making a shuttle taxicab trip from the West Coast.

S 1/c Richard T. Harris of Chattanooga said today that he and his buddies flagged a cab in San Pedro, Calif., after they found plane and train accommodations unobtainable. They had spent the past year in the Pacific.

In Dallas they transferred to another cab, which took them to Atlanta. Harris made the hop from there to Chattanooga on a bus.

The trip East was made in three days and cost the sailors $55 apiece.

PLAN ENDURANCE FLIGHT

Two Ex-Army Ferry Fliers at Tampa Seek New Record

TAMPA, Fla., Dec. 22 (AP)—Two former Army ferry pilots are making plans for an attempt in February to break the world's endurance flight record of twenty-nine days established in 1934 at Meridian, Miss., by the Key brothers.

They are Russell B. Hockensmith, 30, who has been flying planes around Tampa for fifteen years, and Paul D. Records, 40, of Glenwood, Iowa.

"We will fly a stock Morel 1946 family plans," said Hockensmith.

Gasoline and food would be picked up by the plane flying low over the runway at an airport and using a hook and rope to snag five-gallon cans from an automobile.

Basilone Launched; Honors Marine Hero

Orange, Tex., Dec. 22 (A. P.).—The U. S. S. Basilone, named for the late Marine gunnery Sgt. John J. Basilone, first enlisted Marine to be awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor in world war II, was launched here yesterday at the Consolidated Steel Corporation yard.

His widow, Marine Sgt. Lena Riggi Basilone of Portland, Ore., sponsored the ship. Basilone, who lived in Raritan, N. J., won the medal during the early fighting on Guadalcanal.

Farrell to Resume State Job

ALBANY, Dec. 22 (AP)—Maj. Gen. Thomas F. Farrell, Army engineer who took part in the atomic bomb development, will return Jan. 1 to his post as chief engineer of the State Department of Public Works, Superintendent Charles H. Sells said today. He has been on military leave since Feb. 1, 1941.

Warships Due in Philadelphia

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 22 (AP).—Five destroyers of Squadron 57 are scheduled to dock tomorrow at the Philadelphia Navy Base. They are the U. S. S. Watts, Rowe, Stoddard, Wren and Smalley.

During Battle in North Luzon

Joe E. Brown Shot Two Japs

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 22. — (AP) How Joe E. Brown switched roles from actor to fighter and killed two Japs in a foray on northern Luzon was related by the comedian today for the first time.

The incident was disclosed by Major Gen. Robert S. Beightler, commander of the 37th (Ohio) division, and Brown reluctantly confirmed it.

"I've never mentioned it before," the actor said. "Maybe some people will think I shouldn't have done it. I was only doing what every one else was doing—trying to help win the war."

"Besides," he added, "the Japs were shooting at me."

And they were, reported General Beightler, who was host to Brown when he visited the 37th troops last June in his entertainment tour. He said:

"One of our men standing beside Brown was shot by a Jap Sniper and wounded."

Brown and Beightler had a reunion last night on the stage of a local theater, where the actor is playing in the show, "Harvey." It was there that Beightler told how Brown went into combat.

Elaborating today, General Beightler said:

"Joe was worrying the life out of me, because I personally felt responsible for his safety and he insisted on staying up at the front when he was not putting on a show.

"I finally asked him if he would like to help capture the town of Bambang, and Joe thought that would be swell.

"I put him into the lead tank, and the attack got underway."

As the spearhead broke into the town, the general related, Joe popped out of the tank and began firing a carbine at the Japanese. During the attack, a machine gun in Brown's tank exploded and a soldier was stunned.

When the skirmish was over, the colonel and Joe had a friendly argument over who got two Japs lying near them. The G. I.'s settled it by awarding to Brown a flag one Jap carried.

General Beightler declared Brown "had more personal courage than any other entertainer from the states whom I met."

Brown has a son, Joe., in the armed forces. Another son, Capt. Don E. Brown of the Air corps, was killed in a plane crash in Palm Springs, Calif.

IDLE SHIPS CLOG EAST COAST PORTS

NEW YORK, Dec. 22—(AP) Capt. Hewlett R. Bishop, Atlantic coast director of the War Shipping administration, said today there were 110 ships tied up in east coast ports because of personnel shortages. Twelve of the ships were troop carriers, Bishop said.

A spokesman for the Army port of embarkation here said transports in service were shy men and occasionally an army ship had been delayed by lack of a key crew member such as a radio man or chief engineer.

The WSA has appealed for 1,000 officers and 10,000 experienced seamen to man the immobilized ships, Bishop said. John Lock, Atlantic coast director of the WSA's recruitment and manning organization, said his New York office had unfilled orders for 451 officers and 798 seamen and conditions at other east coast ports were just as serious.

Bishop said there were 410 ships in New York harbor today and that incoming vessels may be compelled to remain in the bay over Christmas, because of a lack of pier space. The port of embarkation however, that troopships would be unloaded because the army uses its own piers.

There were 42-immobilized ships in New York, five of them troop carriers, Bishop said. The number of other ships tied up at Atlantic ports was:

Norfolk—28 (five of them troopships).

Baltimore—18 (no troopships).

Philadelphia—10 (no troopships).

Charleston—4 (no troopships).

Boston—2 troopships.

Fox Hills Barracks To House 2,000 Civilians

New York, Dec. 22—(AP)—Remodeling of the Fox Hills Army Barracks on Staten Island to provide 700 apartments for 2,000 civilians is expected to begin within a week, State Housing Comsr. Henry T. Stichman said today.

Stichman said the project would be expedited as a result of finding a supply of building materials at the Army sub-depot in Saratoga Springs. The Fox Hills apartments are expected to be available for occupancy within 60 days after the materials are delivered.

The Manhattan Beach Coast Guard Barracks, to be converted into 600 units of emergency housing for civilians, probably will be turned over to the State on Monday, Stichman said.

Holiday Eve Traffic Jam Worst in Nation's History

Railroad and Bus Travel Reaches Peak in City, Officials Report.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The worst traffic jam in history spread throughout the nation last night as servicemen, civilians and brand-new dischargees surged into trains, buses and planes in a gigantic home-for-Christmas movement.

Determined to celebrate the gayest Christmas in five years with their families at home, tens of thousands waited in endless lines at ticket windows, pushed into buses, stood for hours jammed in the aisles of trains, and some even slept overnight at airports in the hope that someone might cancel a reservation.

No longer obligated to ask themselves "Is this trip necessary?", the holiday travelers ignored warnings by railroads that space was at a premium, that military travel was at its highest peak in history despite the end of the war.

Travel reached such a volume that the New York Central system suspended ticket sales at a number of points "until further notice," and in Washington all lines shut off ticket sales to civilians for 30 to 90 minutes at a time.

Air lines had 40 to 50 persons on waiting lists for each flight. Telephone jams developed as thousands besieged railroad stations for reservations.

In Chicago, a Union depot station master said 15,000 were left in the station Friday night when trains pulled out without them because of lack of space. Shore patrols and Military police supplemented regular policemen in keeping order at the stations but minor stampedes still were reported. In Madison, Wis., a sailor suffered a mangled leg when a surging platform crowd accidentally pushed him under the wheels of a train.

Aggravating the national tie-up was shortage of equipment reported by all rail lines as a result of wartime deterioration and military demands.

In San Francisco, about 168,000 Pacific veterans awaited transportation home for Christmas and there was little hope for newcomers to western ports.

Indications were that the port cities of San Francisco, Los Angeles, Seattle, Portland, Tacoma and San Diego would have at least 150,000 stranded men of both services on Christmas.

Servicemen arriving on the east coast were destined to spend Christmas day at separation centers, the Army said, because it was too late for them to be processed and reach their homes.

Ticket sellers at Pennsylvania station in New York reported the greatest demand was for seats to Philadelphia and Washington, with southern resort cities a close second. Trains of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad were crowded with tens of thousands of New Englanders heading for their family firesides.

Transportation officials estimated that the volume of travel was from 12 to 35 per cent higher than in 1944.

LONDON, DEC. 22-(AP)-THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT HAS DEVELOPED A PLAN WHOSE ULTIMATE OBJECTIVE IS A WORLD GOVERNMENT TO BE ACHIEVED THROUGH STEADY STRENGTHENING OF THE UNITED NATIONS ORGANIZATION, A RESPONSIBLE AUTHORITY SAID TONIGHT.

THE OFFICIALS WORKING ON THE PLAN ACKNOWLEDGE THAT THE IDEA COULD NOT BECOME REALITY FOR A LONG TIME TO COME. BUT IT IS THE BRITISH BELIEF, THIS AUTHORITY SAID, THAT THE UNITED NATIONS ULTIMATELY SHOULD HAVE SOLE AND DIRECT CONTROL OF THE WORLD POLICE FORCE, AND EVERY COUNTRY SHOULD BE DISARMED TO A POINT WHERE NONE WOULD DARE CHALLENGE THE POLICE FORCE.

BRITISH CABINET MEMBERS HAVE WORKED OUT IDEAS LOOKING TOWARD A MERGER OF SOVEREIGNTIES OF PRESENT DAY NATIONS, EVEN NOW, THE INFORMANT SAID. THEY ARE PLANNING STEPS IN WHAT DIPLOMATS CALL THE "TECHNICAL SPHERE"--THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL MEASURES WHICH MAKE UP MUCH OF THE SERVICES NATIONAL GOVERNMENTS NORMALLY PERFORM FOR THEIR PEOPLE.

THE GOVERNMENT OFFICIAL, WHO ASKED THAT HIS NAME BE WITHHELD, OUTLINED THE PLAN THUS:

IT BEGINS WITH A PROPOSAL FOR A REGIONAL UNITED NATIONS ORGANIZATION IN EUROPE, MOVING ALONG BOTH ECONOMIC AND POLITICAL LINES TOWARD THE OBJECTIVE OF THE SUPER-STATE.

THE BRITISH PLACE EMPHASIS ON QUICK CREATION OF A EUROPEAN ORGANIZATION ON GROUNDS THAT EUROPE, BLASTED BY WAR, NOW MAY BE READY TO "ADVANCE RAPIDLY ALONG THE PATH OF INTERNATIONAL GOVERNMENT," AND BECAUSE THEY FEEL EUROPE MUST WORK AS A UNIT ON ITS OWN RECONSTRUCTION.

CONCRETE PLANS HAVE BEEN DISCUSSED FOR REAL INTERNATIONAL CONTROL OVER SUCH MATTERS AS TRANSPORT, COMMUNICATIONS, AVIATION AND HEALTH. THE PLANNERS INSIST THAT THE ORGANIZATIONS WILL NEED REGIONAL OFFICES IN EVERY CONTINENT TO COORDINATE THE ACTION OF GOVERNMENTS AND MAINTAIN CLOSE LIAISON BETWEEN EACH MEMBER STATE AND THE UNITED NATIONS.

THIS, THE AUTHORITY SAID, WAS WHAT FOREIGN SECRETARY ERNEST BEVIN AND MINISTER OF STATE PHILIP J.NOEL-BAKER HAD IN MIND WHEN THEY MADE RECENT PUBIC STATEMENTS ABOUT A "PARLIAMENT OF THE WORLD."

THE BRITISH FEEL, HE ADDED, THAT THE UNITED NATIONS CHARTER PROVIDES THE FOUNDATIONS FOR A SYSTEM OF WORLD-WIDE LAW AND JUSTICE, JUST AS FEDERAL LAWS OF THE UNITED STATES ARE PARAMOUNT OVER CONFLICTING STATE LAWS.

"HE WAS ONE OF THE GREATEST MILITARY LEADERS IN OUR HISTORY," MARSHALL SAID.
TEXT OF HIS STATEMENT:
"THE NEWS OF THE DEATH OF GENERAL PATTON COMES AS A GREAT SHOCK TO ME. I HAD BEEN TOLD HIS CONDITION HAD SHOWN MUCH IMPROVEMENT. WE HAVE BEEN FRIENDS FOR MANY YEARS. SINCE HIS ACTION IN THE MEUSE-ARGONNE BATTLE IN 1918, I RECOGNIZED HIM AS A DETERMINED AND UTTERLY FEARLESS BATTLE LEADER. THIS WAS ONE OF THE REASONS I SELECTED HIM TO LEAD OUR TROOPS IN LANDING AT CASABLANCA IN NOVEMBER, 1942.
"IN THE FIGHTING IN AFRICA AND IN SICILY, HE WAS CONSPICUOUS FOR THE DRIVING ENERGY AND TACTICAL SKILL WITH WHICH HE LED HIS TROOPS.
"THE BREAK-THROUGH OF THE THIRD ARMY AT NORMANDY AND ITS DRAMATIC LIBERATION OF CENTRAL FRANCE WAS INDICATIVE OF THE MAN WHO LED IT.
"BUT IT WAS HIS COUNTERATTACK TOWARD BASTOGNE AND THE TREMENDOUS THRUST TO THE RHINE AT COBLENZ AND INTO THE CENTER AND REAR OF THE GERMAN ARMIES IN THE SAAR BASIN, FOLLOWED BY THE SUDDEN CROSSING OF THE RHINE, THAT ESTABLISHED GENERAL PATTON AS ONE OF THE GREATEST MILITARY LEADERS IN OUR HISTORY."

URAGA, JAPAN, SUNDAY, DEC.23-(AP)-IT'S ALMOST CHRISTMAS AT HOME AND THE WAR SEEMS LONG ENDED AND FAR AWAY--BUT HERE IN JAPAN STARVING TROOPS WHO FOUGHT FOR THE EMPEROR ARE FALLING UNCONSCIOUS ON THE DOCKS.

THESE ARE THE MEN WHO GARRISONED THE PALAU ISLANDS, AND FOR FOUR MONTHS SINCE HOSTILITIES CEASED "LIVED OFF THE LAND." THEY ARE RETURNING NOW TO BE DEMOBILIZED IN A LAND THAT HOLDS LITTLE OPPORTUNITY.

AS THEY CLIMBED DOWN THE SIDES OF THE TRANSPORTS WHICH BROUGHT THEM BACK TO JAPAN, THE LINER MATSONIA LAY ANCHORED CLOSE BY. ON BOARD HER WERE 1,100 NISEUI FROM THE UNITED STATES, WHO HAD RENOUNCED THEIR AMERICAN CITIZENSHIP. THE SIGHT OF GAUNT AND HUNGRY NIPPONESE TROOPS WAS THEIR WELCOME TO JAPAN.

BESIDE THE DOCKS SOLDIERS WAIT PATIENTLY FOR TRUCKS TO MOVE THEM TO A SEPARATION CENTER TWO MILES AWAY. EVERY FEW MINUTES THERE IS A SMALL COMMOTION AS SOME SOLDIER COLLAPSES. A JAPANESE NURSE PUSHES HER WAY THROUGH THE CROWD AND JABS A NEEDLE INTO THE UNCONSCIOUS SOLDIER. HE IS PLACED ON A STRETCHER AND PUT IN A TRUCK.

THE REPATRIATED SOLDIERS ARE STARVING BECAUSE THE JAPANESE GOVERNMENT FAILED TO SEND THEM ANY SUPPLIES SINCE THE END OF THE WAR.

THEY ARE 40 TO 50 POUNDS UNDERWEIGHT; SILENT AND PATIENT. THEY ARE LIKE LIVING DEAD.

ON THE MATSONIA, IT WAS A DIFFERENT PICTURE. THERE WERE 1,100 PERSONS, COMPRISING 285 FAMILIES, EATING THE BEST AMERICAN FOOD. BUT IT WAS THEIR LAST AMERICAN MEAL. THEY CAME ASHORE THIS MORNING TO AN IMPOVERISHED, BURNED-OUT LAND, COVERED WITH A LIGHT FALL OF SNOW; THEY MARCHED A MILE AND A HALF DOWN A MUDDY ROAD TO A WINDOWLESS, UNHEATED RECEPTION CENTER.

CAPT. FRANK A. JOHNSON, WHO COMMANDS THE MATSONIA, SAID "IT ISN'T THE OLDER JAPANESE COMING BACK WHOM I FEEL SORRY FOR. IT'S THE BOYS AND GIRLS, KIDS FROM A FEW MONTHS OLD TO 16. PUT A SCREEN IN FRONT OF THEM AND TALK TO THEM AND THEY ARE JUST PLAIN AMERICANS. THEY DON'T WANT TO COME TO JAPAN. THEIR PARENTS MADE THEM DO IT. THEY HATE IT."

(ADVANCE)...WASHINGTON, DEC.22-(AP)-AMERICA'S PEACETIME INTELLIGENCE SERVICE WILL BE NO "CLOAK AND DAGGER" OUTFIT IN THE OPINION OF THE MAN WHO WILL RUN THE STATE DEPARTMENT'S END OF IT.

COL. ALFRED MCCORMACK, SPECIAL ASSISTANT TO THE SECRETARY OF STATE IN CHARGE OF RESEARCH AND INTELLIGENCE, SAID TONIGHT HIS HARDEST JOB WAS TO OVERCOME "THIS ROMANTIC BUT FALSE IDEA OF WHAT INTELLIGENCE WORK IS."

IN ONE OF A SERIES OF NBC BROADCASTS DEVOTED TO DISCUSSIONS OF UNITED STATES FOREIGN POLICY, MCCORMACK DEFINED FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE AS "THE SUM TOTAL OF ALL INFORMATION ABOUT FOREIGN COUNTRIES WHICH IS RELEVANT TO THE POLICIES AND PROBLEMS OF THE GOVERNMENT."

"IT RANGES FROM ESTIMATES, SAY, OF THE POLITICAL INTENTIONS OF A REVOLUTIONARY PARTY IN SOME COUNTRY TO THE MOST DETAILED KIND OF INFORMATION, SUCH AS THE DEPTH OF WATER AT A PARTICULAR POINT ON A BEACH WHERE CONCEIVABLY MILITARY OPERATIONS MIGHT SOME DAY OCCUR," HE SAID.

MCCORMACK LISTED THESE MAJOR OBJECTIVES OF A PEACETIME FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE SERVICE:

1. TO "KNOW AND UNDERSTAND THE OTHER COUNTRIES AND PEOPLES OF THE WORLD WELL ENOUGH TO LIVE WITH THEM IN PEACE--TO SHAPE OUR POLICY, AS IT AFFECTS OTHER PEOPLES, TOWARD THE AIMS OF PEACE."
2. TO BE PREPARED FOR WAR IF IT COMES.

HE SAID THE STATE DEPARTMENT PROPOSED TO CREATE A NATIONAL INTELLIGENCE AUTHORITY, "PRESIDED OVER BY THE SECRETARIES OF STATE, WAR AND NAVY, WITH THE SECRETARY OF STATE AS CHAIRMAN." HEADS OF OTHER GOVERNMENT DEPARTMENTS AND AGENCIES COULD BE CONSULTED, HE ADDED.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF STATE WILLIAM BENTON, WHO APPEARED ON THE PROGRAM WITH MCCORMACK, DESCRIBED THE AUTHORITY IDEA AS A PLAN "TO HARNESS ALL INTELLIGENCE RESOURCES IN THE GOVERNMENT BY GETTING MORE EFFECTIVE COOPERATION AMONG DEPARTMENTS."

A133WX

A DIRECTOR OR EXECUTIVE SECRETARY WOULD OPERATE THE AUTHORITY WITH A FULL-TIME STAFF DRAWN FROM INTERESTED GOVERNMENT DEPARTMENTS, MCCORMACK SAID.

INTERDEPARTMENTAL COMMITTEES WOULD BE SET UP FOR EACH OF THE PRINCIPAL FIELDS OF INTELLIGENCE--POLITICAL, MILITARY, ECONOMIC, GEOGRAPHIC, SCIENTIFIC AND TECHNOLOGICAL AND SOCIOLOGICAL.

MCCORMACK ESTIMATED THAT THE RESEARCH ALONE WOULD COST ABOUT $6,000,000 FOR THE NEXT FISCAL YEAR, BENTON OBSERVING THAT "A MAJOR WAR COSTS MORE THAN THAT PER HOUR."

BRIG.GEN.E.M.BRYAN, PROVOST MARSHAL GENERAL, MADE THE ANNOUNCEMENT IN A STATEMENT WHICH FOLLOWED PUBLICATION OF REPORTS FROM FORT CUSTER THAT FURLOUGHS OF AMERICAN SOLDIERS GUARDING PRISONER THERE HAD BEEN CANCELLED IN ORDER THAT THE PRISONERS COULD BE STARTED EASTWARD BY NEXT FRIDAY. FORT CUSTER OFFICIALS ANNOUNCED TODAY THAT CHRISTMAS FURLOUGHS HAD BEEN REINSTATED AS A RESULT OF THE WAR DEPARTMENT'S ACTION.
BRYAN SAID THE PRISONERS WOULD NOT BE MOVED UNTIL SOMETIME IN JANUARY AND THEN ONLY IF THEIR TRANSPORTATION WILL NOT INTERFERE WITH RETURNING AMERICAN SERVICEMEN.
IN NO CASE, BRYAN SAID, IS RAILROAD EQUIPMENT WHICH COULD CARRY AMERICAN PERSONNEL BEING USED FOR THE SHIPMENT OF PRISONERS TO EMBARKATION PORTS. SUCH SHIPMENTS ARE BEING "CLOSELY COORDINATED TO INSURE THAT ONLY DEADHEAD TROOP TRAINS ARE USED," BRYAN SAID.
HE SAID THAT THE ONLY TROOP TRAINS USED TO TRANSPORT PRISONERS ARE THOSE WHICH WOULD OTHERWISE RETURN EMPTY TO THE PORTS AFTER DELIVERING AMERICAN PERSONNEL TO INLAND DESTINATIONS.

Big Three Leaders Open Discussions On Atomic Energy

DEC 24 1945

SECRET OF BOMB STILL RETAINED BY U. S. AND BRITAIN

Extent of Progress of Moscow Talks Not Disclosed by Diplomats.

BYRNES SEES STALIN

U. S. Secretary Has Second Meeting With Soviet Ruler.

GILMORE

MOSCOW, Dec. 23 — (AP) The Big Three foreign ministers have considered the American-British-Canadian policy on world control of atomic energy but informed quarters said today that no secrets had been given away.

Generalissimo Stalin received U. S. Secretary of State James F. Byrnes, Ambassador W. Averell Harriman and Charles E. Bohlen, chief of the Russian section of the State department, at the Kremlin today, an American embassy spokesman announced. (The Moscow radio said Soviet Foreign Commissar V. M. Molotov also attended the meeting).

The extent of the progress made toward reaching a disposition of the atomic question was not disclosed. This question constitutes one of the major items on the agenda of Byrnes, Molotov and British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin.

Cling to Truman Decision

During the discussions Byrnes and Bevin were said to have adhered to the statement issued in Washington Nov. 15 by President Truman and Prime Ministers Attlee and W. L. MacKenzie King which declared control of destructive atomic power should be handed over to a United Nations commission and that production secrets would be kept until effective safeguards are devised.

As the three foreign ministers moved into their eighth day of discussions, informants said the progress of the conference remained uninterrupted. One source observed that the current meetings were much more friendly in tone than the five-power foreign ministers conference in London which ended in a deadlock last October.

Specific accomplishments of the three foreign ministers are not expected to be revealed until their meetings have been concluded.

Will Announce Decisions

Secretary Byrnes plans to hold a press conference then and a communique may be issued. Presumably Bevin will meet with the press also. Molotov's plans in this respect were not known but it was believed likely he also would hold a press conference just as he did after the London conference.

Byrnes, Bevin and Molotov met today in the Soviet Foreign commissar's office in the Kremlin and were luncheon guests of Ambassador Harriman at Spasso House. Tonight a Moscow theater audience applauded warmly when Secretary Byrnes, British Secretary Bevin and Soviet Foreign Commissar Molotov shook hands in the glow of spotlights at Bolshoi theater just before a performance of the ballet "Cinderella."

Byrnes came to the theater after his meeting with Generalissimo Stalin at the Kremlin.

A huge Christmas tree went up at Spasso House today and presents for Byrnes were to be placed beneath it in expectation of his being here for the holidays.

At the theater the handshaking took place in a central box, where Molotov was entertaining the two foreign ministers, British ambassador Sir Archibald Clark Kerr and others. Molotov and his guests came in with Kathleen Harriman, Ambassador Harriman's daughter, leading. The orchestra struck up The Star Spangled Banner and later God Save the King and the Soviet anthem, as the spotlight settled on the box.

Molotov gave Byrnes a vigorous handshake and a hearty smile—both of which Byrnes returned. Then with both hands Molotov shook hands with Bevin.

The audience which included practically the entire Moscow foreign diplomatic colony cheered as the spotlight faded and the performance began. It was the first time the Soviet public has had an opportunity to see the visiting foreign ministers, and the warmth of their welcome was obvious to all observers.

Stalin was not present at yesterday's meeting in the Kremlin, the first held there. It was explained that no special significance was attached to the fact that the Kremlin had been used as a meeting place, since the informal sessions in Molotov's spacious office were arranged as a matter of convenience.

Byrnes was said to be anxious to return to Washington as soon as possible to handle a considerable volume of business there before attending the United Nations Conference in London next month.

Russia Says Frontier Sectors Are Sought From Turkey

Moscow, Dec. 23 (AP)—The official Communist newspaper Pravda published a Tass dispatch from Egypt today reporting that a group of Armenians in Alexandria were seeking to have Turkey give certain frontier districts to Soviet Armenia.

The dispatch said that the group, known as the Armenian National Council, offered a nine-point program based on the contention that Turkey had forcibly split up Armenia after World War I.

Soviet newspapers published Thursday demands that Turkey cede a strategic 180-mile stretch of her Black Sea coast to Russia. The demands were made in a letter from two intellectuals of the Georgian Soviet Socialist Republic.

Russian Paper Cites "Crime Wave in U.S."

Moscow, Dec. 23 (AP)—The Russian army newspaper Red Star today printed a double-column headline, "unprecedented crime wave in U.S.A.," over an account of a speech by FBI director, J. Edgar Hoover, before the International Association of Chiefs of Police in Miami Beach, Florida.

(Hoover told the police chiefs December 10 that crime in the United States was on the increase, and that he feared gangsterism which characterized the "Roaring Twenties" would return to the American scene.)

Reds Check Iran Typhus

MOSCOW, Dec. 23 (AP).—A Tass dispatch from Tehran said today that Red Army detachments have battled successfully a typhus epidemic in the Turkmen steppes of northeastern Iran, bordering on the Turkmen Soviet Socialist Republic. Soviet doctors said they disinfected 70,000 homes and almost 75,000 outfits of clothing. Medical supplies were rushed into the area by Soviet troops.

SESSION ENDED BY UNO GROUP

No Final Action Taken On Colonial Trusteeship Issue

LEWIS

London, Dec. 23 (AP)—The United Nations Preparatory Commission ended its month-long session tonight without taking final action on the controversial colonial trusteeship issue and after setting up procedural rules for the new world peace agency.

The first meeting of the United Nations General Assembly will convene in London January 10.

Next Thursday the interim committee on the permanent UNO headquarters will discuss who should visit prospective sites in the United States, when they should leave and the places they should tour.

Delegates from Australia, Britain, France, Russia, China, Iran, Iraq, the Netherlands, Poland, Yugoslavia, Cuba and Uruguay are members of the committee.

British, U.S. Opposition Fails

During debate today on the trusteeship issue, Prof. C. K. Webster, a British delegate, told the Preparatory Commission that the British Government was "in absolute agreement" with the principle of a committee report allowing free expression to colonial peoples.

But Britain objects, he said, to a provision of the report which leaves it up to the trusteeship council to decide whether there should be special elections, referenda or other means of consulting the opinion of colonials.

The provision was strongly supported by the Russian and Ukrainian delegations and inserted in the report over British and American opposition. The proposal, introduced originally by the Philippines, also was supported by the eastern European states.

U.S. Delegate Reserves Stand

"We are exceedingly interested," Webster said, "in the attitude taken by certain states on this subject and their advocacy of free speech and self-expression which shows that the furthering of that principle was making very wide progress in the world."

Adlai Stevenson for the United States and delegates of the Netherlands, Belgium, France and South Africa reserved their positions on the provision. An American delegate said the issue was sure to come up again as soon as the trusteeship council is established.

A demand by Guy Perez Cisneros, Cuban delegate, that members of the general assembly's steering committee be ineligible for immediate re-election was expected to be brought up when the assembly convenes. Perez Cisneros said if such re-election was allowed it would result in "permanent members running the assembly just as there are permanent members of the security council."

Arrest Of Former SS Commander Reported

London, Dec. 23 (AP)—The Berlin radio said tonight that Viktor Zoeller, former SS commander of the Nazi concentration camp at Mauthausen has been arrested in Mindelheim.

Zoeller had long been sought by the Allies. Police were able to identify him despite the fact he carried false identity papers, the radio said.

Swords for Two Correspondents

LONDON, Dec. 23 (AP)—Charles Grumich of The Associated Press and Michael MacDonagh of Reuter have received Japanese ceremonial swords from Maj. Gen. D. D. Gracey, head of the Allied Control Commission in Saigon, for their work in covering the Allied campaign in Burma. A Southeast Asia Command statement released today in London said the two correspondents, now in Saigon, were congratulated by General Gracey for their reporting in Burma "under most arduous and difficult conditions."

U.S. Ship Reported In Trouble

London, Dec. 23 (AP)—The Sunday Graphic said today that the United States ship James M. Wayne, a 7,000-ton vessel en route from Antwerp to America, was reported to be shipping water and in serious trouble.

The Graphic said the information was contained in a message from the British ship Pendeen to Lloyds.

No details were given on the location of the Wayne or her cargo.

Transatlantic Queens Trade Yule Greetings

LONDON, Dec. 23 (AP).—The two "Queens"—the trans-Atlantic liners Queen Elizabeth and Queen Mary—exchanged Christmas greetings at sea last night as they passed each other off the southwest English coast.

The ships turned on all lights and passengers crowded the rails while the crews flashed signals. The Elizabeth is carrying 12,000 Canadian soldiers home, while the Mary docked at Southampton today with 1,150 passengers from the United States.

Former GI's Wife Will Sail To Him

Liverpool, Dec. 23 (AP)—Since Herbert John Lamoureaux, 22-year-old former American soldier, could not swim to his wife, she is determined to sail to him.

So said Mrs. Veronica Lamoureaux, brunette English girl, today.

Lamoureaux, wishing to spend Christmas with his wife and their 5-week-old daughter but denied a visa to enter Britain, dived from the ship Rushville Victory yesterday and attempted to swim five miles to shore.

Confident Of Passage

Rescued from the dangerous seas by a lighthouse crew, Lamoureaux was put aboard the New York-bound liner Argentina before he could even catch a glimpse of his wife and the baby he has never seen.

"It would have given him great happiness if we could all have been united this Christmas," the exGI's 23-year-old wife said.

She added, however, she was confident she could book passage to the United States as soon as their daughter, Elaine, is 3 months old, which will be next February 16.

Feels Certain Of Welcome

"I know there's a warm welcome waiting for me because his parents have written me beautiful letters and sent some lovely clothes for Elaine," Veronica added.

"He'll get in touch with me by wireless," she asserted. "He'll find a way. He's only 22, but he's a man of great resourcefulness."

Lamoureaux sailed from New York on the Rushville Victory as a mess attendant because he believed that to be his only hope of reaching England.

Rate Drop For Franc

Paris, Dec. 23 (AP)—The French Cabinet voted today to devaluate the franc, several ministers reported at the conclusion of a meeting that lasted four and a half hours.

The Cabinet members said they were sworn to secrecy as to the exact new rate of exchange.

Previously it had been predicted that the franc would probably be pegged at 125 to the dollar and 500 to the pound sterling. The present rate is 50 to the dollar and 200 to the pound.

No communiqué or announcement was issued at the close of the Cabinet meeting, contrary to usual practice.

The Bourse is closed for the holidays.

Bretton O.K. Recommended

Earlier today the finance committee of the Constituent Assembly voted to recommend ratification of the Bretton Woods monetary agreement. This action was regarded as clearing the way for the move to devaluate the franc.

The committee will present its recommendation to Wednesday's meeting of the assembly. If ratified, this would bind France not to change the value of the franc unilaterally by more than ten per cent for a period of five years after December 31.

Rene Pleven, Finance Minister, said that while the quota of 4.8 per cent granted France in the international monetary fund did not measure up to her "normal position in world trade," adherence to the agreement would give France the possibility of acquiring foreign currency without expenditure of gold bullion.

Foreign Trade Revival Seen

Proponents of devaluation have asserted that devaluation will tend to revive France's foreign trade, which is largely dormant, and inspire more production that will cut the present high cost of living.

Pleven said that negotiations will be undertaken with the United States next year to determine how to finance American exports to France now that lend-lease is abolished.

The finance committee approved a bill providing for an agreement for a loan of $550,000,000 by the United States Export-Import Bank to France.

Paris Newspaper Strike Lasts Three Hours

Paris, Dec. 23 (AP)—Paris Sunday morning newspapers appeared late on the streets today after a three-hour general strike of pressmen and print shop maintenance workers for higher wages was called off at 12.30 A.M.

The union agreed to wait until January 20, while the publishers sought permission to enlarge their present two-page newspapers to four pages and to change the price from 2 francs (4 cents) to 3 francs (six cents), so as to meet the salary demands.

SHIP STRIKES MINE IN LEHAVRE PORT

Forward Part of Vessel Blown Off, All of Crew Rescued.

LE HAVRE, Dec. 23—(AP) The forward section of the Liberty ship Duncan L. Clinch was blown off today when the vessel struck a mine while leaving Le Havre. All of the crew was rescued from the remainder of the ship, which stayed afloat.

The ship had unloaded part of a cargo of wheat and oil from Buenos Aires and was about to proceed up the Seine to discharge the remainder at Rouen.

Authorities said the 42 members of the crew, all of them Americans, would be sent home by the first available transport.

SIMPLE RITES ARE HELD FOR GEN. PATTON

Army Chaplains Conduct 22-Minute Episcopal Services

Luxembourg, Dec. 23 (AP)—Marshal Georgi K. Zhukov, assistant commander in chief of the Red Army, arrived tonight for the funeral tomorrow of Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., who will be buried in the cemetery at Hamm.

Heidelberg, Dec. 23 (AP)—Funeral services for Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., were performed with military simlicity today, and then the remains of the colorful commanding warrior were borne away to be buried among the 10,000 white crosses of the American cemetery near Luxembourg.

Two army chaplains conducted a 22-minute Episcopal service marked by the singing of one of the General's favorite hymns, "The Son of God Goes Forth to War," and recital of two of his best-liked psalms, the Ninetieth and the Sixty-third.

There were no eulogies.

Many Germans Stony-Faced

Mrs. Patton, grieving but erect, and her brother, Frederick L. Ayer, of Boston, were the only members of the family who attended the services, held in the Sixteenth Century Christ Church, in the heart of this picturesque German university town.

At the conclusion Patton's body was carried on a halftrack to the railroad station along a mile-long route lined by more than 6,000 American soldiers and German civilians, who had stood shoulder to shoulder for hours awaiting the procession.

Many of the Germans were stony-faced, but the GI's clearly grieved.

600 Soldiers In Church

After a nineteen-gun salute, the flag-draped casket was placed aboard one of two special funeral trains which rolled away in the winter dusk for Luxembourg. Tomorrow Patton will be buried in the American military cemetery at Hamm, near Luxembourg, where many of the men Patton commanded in the Battle of the Bulge a year ago have found a final resting place.

Approximately 600 soldiers, including virtually all the top-ranking American officers in Europe, and representatives of a dozen countries, crowded into the church for the service.

Mrs. Patton and her brother sat in a front pew with Lieut. Gen. Goeffrey Keys, commander of the 7th Army. They were within a few feet of the casket, which rested before an altar covered with red and pink roses, carnations, camellias and mimosa. A Christmas tree with a few tinsels formed the backdrop.

Negro Is Pallbearer

Across from them, on the other side of the church, sat the pallbearers—six enlisted men selected for their soldierly qualities. One was Master Sergeant William L. Meeks, Negro, from Junction City, Kan., who, as Patton's orderly for eight years, was with him in all his campaigns.

Other active pallbearers were Sergt. Oliver R. Day, Hudson, N.C.; Sergt. Vernon P. Rehberg, Painesville, Ohio; Sergt. Frank Hoboly, Bulger, Pa.; Staff Sergeant Charles J. Kadow, Chicago, and Staff Sergeant Ben Heck, St. Louis.

Mrs. Patton, wearing a brownish gray fur coat with a tri-cornered black hat, arrived at the church at 3 P.M. in a black sedan. She wore no veil.

Slowly but steadily she took her place in front of the church and turned her head to look at the choir loft when a soldier choir of 36 voices began to sing the hymn, "The Strife Is Over."

Two army chaplains—Col. Edwin R. Carter, Richmond, Va., and Col. Loren T. Jenks, of Michigan, officiated at the services.

Before the service the General's body, preceded by an army band and sixteen armored cars from Patton's old 15th Cavalry, was borne through the streets from the hilltop villa where it had rested in state.

Dozens of generals, including Joseph T. McNarney, new commanding general of United States forces in Europe, and officers representing several foreign governments, were in the procession that moved at a walking pace.

Luxembourg Greatly Honored

Col. Frank Fraser, of Phoenix, Ariz., chief of the American Army mission to Belgium, said Patton's grave in Luxembourg will be tended by that little duchy's royal family.

In a statement given through Colonel Fraser, Grand Duchess Charlotte said:

"Luxembourg and my people have been greatly honored in being charged with the care of the last resting place of the beloved American General Patton. We will do everything we can to keep this trust."

Fraser said every American buried in the hillside cemetery at Hamm marked by 10,000 white crosses has been adopted by someone in Luxembourg who is charged with care of the grave.

General Walker On Way

Soldiers of Belgium, France, Luxembourg and the United States will line both sides of the road during the 3½-mile funeral procession from Luxembourg station to the cemetery.

Fraser said that Lieut. Gen. Walton Walker, former 20th Corps commander under Patton, will arrive in Paris early tomorrow and fly directly here as a representative of Chief of Staff General Eisenhower and the Secretary of War. His announcement discounted reports that Eisenhower was flying from Washington to attend the burial rites.

Most of the men buried at the United States cemetery at Hamm are doughboys killed in the Battle of the Bulge a year ago, in which Patton's forces played such a brilliant part. Many of the dead are troops Patton once commanded.

Luxemburg Royalty Plan To Tend Patton's Grave

Some One in Duchy 'Adopts' All Americans Buried There

HEIDELBERG, Dec 23 (AP).—Colonel Frank Fraser, of Phoenix, Ariz., chief of the American Army Mission to Belgium, announced today that the grave in Luxemburg of General George S. Patton jr. will be tended by that little duchy's royal family.

In a statement given through Colonel Fraser, Grand Duchess Charlotte said: "Luxemburg and my people have been greatly honored in being charged with the care of the last resting place of the beloved American General Patton. We will do everything we can to keep this trust."

Fraser said every American buried in the hillside cemetery at Hamm has been "adopted" by some one in Luxemburg who is charged with care of the grave.

Marshall Tells Shock Over Death Of Patton

Chungking, Dec. 23 (AP)—Gen. George C. Marshall, five-star wartime chief of staff, said in a statement today that news of the death of Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., was a great shock.

"He was one of the greatest military leaders in our history," Marshall said.

Text of his statement:

"The news of the death of General Patton comes as a great shock to me. I had been told his condition had shown much improvement. We have been friends for many years. Since his action in the Meuse-Argonne battle in 1918, I recognized him as a determined and utterly fearless battle leader. This was one of the reasons I selected him to lead our troops in landing at Casablanca in November, 1942.

"In the fighting in Africa and in Sicily, he was conspicuous for the driving energy and tactical skill with which he led his troops.

"The breakthrough of the 3d Army in Normandy and its dramatic liberation of Central France was indicative of the man who led it.

"But it was his counterattack toward Bastogne and the tremendous thrust to the Rhine at Coblenz and into the center and rear of the German armies in the Saar basin, followed by the sudden crossing of the Rhine, that established General Patton as one of the greatest military leaders in our history."

Chiang's Condolences Sent To Mrs. Patton

Nanking, China, Dec. 22 [Delayed].—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek today messaged condolences to Mrs. George S. Patton, Jr., on the death of the fighting general. Informed of the death by Lieut. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer, the Generalissimo turned and whispered in Chinese to Madame Chiang. She quickly dictated the message, transmitted by army channels. The text was not made public.

GREECE REQUISITIONS HER LEADING FACTORIES

ATHENS, Dec. 23 — (AP) Premier Themistokles Sophoulis' government today requisitioned all cement factories throughout Greece and a big chemical, fertilizer and glass works at Piraeus which ranks as the country's largest industrial concern.

Authorized by recently enacted legislation, government control of the factories was described as being designed to increase production as an initial step in a new reconstruction plan.

The new board of directors for the big Piraeus factory will consist of government and trade union representatives. More than 4,000 men are employed there.

Rezaich Defense Stronger

Tehran, Dec. 23 (AP)—An Iranian general staff officer said today that Kurdish tribesmen had joined the defense of the Iranian Army's Rezaich garrison and that the reinforced post was holding out against its beseigers, whom he described as "Assyrians, Caucasians and Democrats."

Meanwhile, Russian Embassy and consular officials still withheld permits for foreign newsmen and American State Department officials to visit northern Iran, explaining that applications had not been approved by military commandants.

The new government of Azerbaijan in northern Iran has claimed autonomy within the Iranian state, and an Iranian army officer said yesterday that "armed civilians and an unusual concentration of Russian tanks and troops at Garmsar," 75 miles southeast of Tehran, had been reported.

Thousands in Khaki Will See Historic Ceremony in Bethlehem

PALMER

BETHLEHEM, Dec. 23 — (AP) This little town nestled in the rolling hills of Judea will be the scene again tomorrow of the annual pilgrimage of the holy to the sacred spot where Christ was born nearly 2,000 years ago.

NIGHT

After a full day of prayer and benediction, of colorful processions and solemn meditation, hundreds who have come from far and wide will witness the impressive annual ceremony of the celebration of the birth of the Christ child in St. Catherine's which adjoins the Church of the Nativity.

Thousands of visitors, a great portion of them in khaki, will file over the cobblestone streets of this ancient village to witness the entry of a religious leader as he approaches Bethlehem from Jerusalem and leads his priests, acolytes and followers into the Church of the Nativity in Manger Square.

Throughout the afternoon they will take part in Pontifical vespers. Masses will be read in the Grotto of the Nativity every half hour from noontime tomorrow until 4 p.m. on Christmas, but the day of prayer will reach its climax at midnight with the reenactment of the miracle of the birth of Christ.

The Christmas eve ceremonies will open before noon at the famous Jaffa gate at the walls of the Old City of Jerusalem where high above the crowd the Tower of David looms in symbolic splendor. It is here that the annual procession to Bethlehem begins.

It is only five miles from Jerusalem to Bethlehem, but in those five miles the history of Christian life was created. It is the road which Mary and Joseph traveled.

The procession of motor cars and mounted escort will wind slowly into the Jerusalem suburbs and out to the Bethlehem road. Then it will move on through the valley past the Hill of Evil Counsel, past the well of the Magi where the wise men rested on their journey. It will proceed along the narrow highway flanked by terraced hills of Palestine farmlands and olive groves by the score, then up a gentle slope to the site of Rachel's tomb.

At this point the procession will halt to be met by the Mayor of Bethlehem and dignitaries of the town, before moving into the town where waiting crowds will gather in Manger Square to witness the solemn entry of the church leader into the Church of the Nativity.

MARSHALL STUDIES CHINESE PROBLEMS

MOOSA

CHUNGKING, Monday, Dec. 24 —(AP) Gen. George C. Marshall told a press conference here today that the United States "has a natural, intense interest in the Chinese people, their well being and their relations with the peace of the world."

It was the first conference the new U. S. ambassador to China had granted the press.

Marshall said the United States government and he personally, were "very much interested" in forthcoming meetings of the political consultative council—the all-party and non-partisan conference which is to try to compose problems between the Kuomintang (government) party and the Communists and to open the way to peaceful reconstruction of China.

NIGHT

Marshall met a record number of newsmen at the U. S. embassy after having received a call at his home from Chinese Premier T. V. Soong.

He emphasized that he just had arrived in China.

"I'm in the business of informing myself and not making announcements myself," he said. "It will naturally be some time before I can hope to get a fair picture of China."

He said it was not necessary to reiterate America's China policy, as President Truman had made that clear.

Prospect Of Christmas Truce In China Dimmer

MOOSA

Chungking, Dec. 23 (AP) — The prospect of a truce between Central Government and Chinese forces in China by Christmas grew dim today. There was no development on a Communist proposal, termed unofficial and informal by Government spokesmen, for an immediate and unconditional cessation of hostilities.

Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, who returned to Chungking today from Nanking, conceivably could approve the truce proposal by Christmas, but as far as is known the Communists have not yet put the proposal in writing.

Would "Freeze" Troop Positions

The Communist proposal includes the "freezing" of contending troops at present positions. It would mean the Government would have to halt movement of troops into Manchuria, where the Russians under present arrangements are supposed to withdraw by January 3.

Central Government quarters were patently suspicious of the Communist proposal.

The Communists again asserted the central government was massing troops for a large-scale invasion of the Inner Mongolian province of Chahar. A Central Government dispatch declared Communists were attacking the Peiping-Mukden railway city of Lwanhsien. Another dispatch said government troops had recaptured Tsaoyang, highway town northwest of Hankow.

Charges Poison Gas Use

An unconfirmed Communist dispatch charged government troops used poison gas against the Communists near Paoting, Hopei province, November 27, killing one and affecting 40 others.

Gen. George C. Marshall, the new United States envoy to China, was expected to resume with Chiang tomorrow the conversations begun at Nanking.

Members of the Communist delegation here for scheduled peace parleys conferred with Marshall today. It was understood they probably would invite him to visit Yenan, the Communist capital for discussions with their leader, Mao Tse-tung.

More Listening Than Talking

The conference, at which Marshall was said to have done more listening than talking, lasted an hour. The meeting was the first presentation of the Communist viewpoint to Marshall by party leaders.

The trio who visited the new ambassador were Gen. Chou En-lai, deputy chief of the party and leader of the Communist delegation to peace talks here; Gen. Yeh Chien-yi, chief of staff of Communist armies, and Tung Pi-wu, a Communist member of the Chinese delegation to the San Francisco United Nations conference.

Chinese Government quarters said they could not confirm a statement in the United States Army and Navy Journal that Soviet Premier Stalin did not want heavily augmented Chinese forces to occupy Manchuria.

No Limitation In Treaty

They said their treaty with Russia provided no limitation on the number of Chinese troops to be stationed in Manchuria and any attempt to impose such a limitation would be a violation of China's sovereign rights.

The Army and Navy Journal said the United States had stopped assisting the movement of Chinese troops as a result of the Moscow talks by the Big Three foreign ministers. Marshall's office said, however, it had no information that any developments in the talks had influenced the movement of Chinese troops.

Authoritative quarters here said that as they understood the situation, Lieut. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer, United States commander in China, was authorized to assist movement of Chinese troops to Manchuria ports if he believed it necessary; and the movement of government troops from southern to northern China could be carried out only if Marshall determined this is to be consistent with his negotiations with the Chinese.

'George Marshall Slept Here!'

Nanking, China, Dec. 23 (AP)—Vice Admiral Daniel E. Barbey, leaving for Shanghai after a one-day visit with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek here, said he was sorry to give up his very comfortable bed at the home of Premier T. V. Soong.

Barbey said he had a good sleep in that bed—and he added, with a grin, "George Marshall slept here!"

General Marshall, new United States envoy, occupied it the previous night.

Admiral Barbey Sees Chiang

NANKING, China, Dec. 22 (Delayed) (AP).—Vice-Admiral Daniel E. Barbey, retiring commander of the United States 7th Fleet, conferred with Chiang Kai-shek today "on shipping," and was decorated by the generalissimo.

There were indications the two discussed possible American naval aid in moving Chinese troops northward to Manchuria. Barbey said six American Liberty ships now finishing troop movements in North China would be turned over to the Chinese, along with several LSTs (landing ships, tank) at Shanghai, through the American War Shipping Board.

Barbey received the Order of the Cloud and Banner from Chiang. There are only ten such decorations outstanding.

COMMUNISTS LIFT 3 SIEGES IN CHINA

Yenan Calls Move Gesture To Show Desire For Peace

RODERICK

Yenan, China, Dec. 23 (AP)—Chinese Communist forces besieging the Inner Mongolian cities of Paotow, Kweisui and Tatung have been withdrawn "as an earnest gesture of the Communist desire for peace," Gen. Chu Teh, the Communist commander in chief, said today.

NIGHT

General Chu also asserted in an interview at his cave home that "Communist delegates to the Chungking peace talks are fully empowered to deal immediately and directly with Gen. George C. Marshall, American Ambassador, in all matters" concerning the ending of China's internal warfare and establishment of a coalition government.

Bans Drive Into Territory

The Communist withdrawals from Paotow, Kweisui and Tatung prove that the party is ready immediately to lay down arms, Chu said. He added that National Government forces in these cities now are free to move about so long as they do not attempt penetration of Communist areas.

"The military situation around these cities was perfectly favorable to us," he continued, "but we withdrew as an expression of our often-expressed desire that the civil war be ended."

The inner Mongolian cities had been under Communist siege since the Reds' 8th Route Army pushed Nationals of Gen Fu Tso-yi from Kalgan in mid-October.

Ready To Dissolve Forces

Chu said the Communists stand ready to dissolve all their armed forces except an agreed-upon 20 divisions, as soon as a coalition government is set up.

American forces in China can achieve internal accord "by unwaveringly carrying out the Truman policy of restricting their tasks," the Communist general said, adding that if it is true the United States State Department ordered Americans to stop transporting Central Government troops into North China, "then it is not too late to avoid a full-scale civil war."

Cheered By Ship Prospect

[In Peiping, Associated Press correspondent, Spencer Davis, said Government officials were cheered by prospects that United States ships soon would be taking National troops to Manchuria. The Chinese central news agency said the United States 7th Fleet transports already had started the task.

[Davis reported liaison teams of Chiang's troops advanced on four objectives. He said arrangements were reported complete for flying other units this week to Changchun.]

Chinese General Cites Unsettled Manchurian Conditions

MOVEMENTS

Tientsin, Dec. 23 (AP)—As an example of unsettled conditions in Manchuria, the Chinese paper Ta Kung Pao printed today a dispatch from Changchun, territorial capital, quoting Gen. Chang Pai-chen as saying that in Mukden alone murders averaged ten a night.

The General, who has just made an inspection trip along the railway connecting Changchun, Dairen and Mukden, said conditions between Dairen and Changchun were improving, however.

General Chang was represented as saying that business hours in the few shops operating in Mukden were from 10 in the morning until 2 in the afternoon, with little travel on Mukden streets at night and gunfire often heard. However, General Chang said Russian troops were improving the situation and restoring order.

Soviet General Kachiu ordered the Chinese to put eight garrison units along the rail line to prevent disruptions of traffic, the paper added. Bandits frequently throw stones through car windows.

In Changchun, the article continued, there were two theaters showing Russian pictures. It said many labor unions had been formed there and that the union members had elected a mayor and vice mayor.

In passing through Anshan, which was bombed by Allied forces, General Chang said he saw smoke coming from only one chimney among the many in the industrial area.

India Approves Bretton Pact

New Delhi, Dec. 23 (AP)—The government of India announced today it has authorized its agent general in Washington to sign the Bretton Woods agreement.

THREE ARE KILLED IN INDONESIAN RAID ON JAVA HOSPITAL

BATAVIA, Java, Dec. 23—(AP) An Indonesian attack today on a Red Cross emergency hospital in the Kramat district of Batavia in which one patient and two native servants were killed raised to eight the death toll from violence in that troubled area since Thursday.

Six native servants were wounded in the hour-long attack on the hospital, making a total of nine hurt in the area during the past four days. Five Royal Air Force men were killed last week in ambuscades in the district, which has been declared out of bounds to all British forces. The district borders an evacuee camp still housing nearly 2,000 Dutch women and children.

One Indian soldier was killed and four others wounded in the mid-Java port city of Semarang, where British forces encountered stiff opposition at road blocks in attempts to clear the eastern part of the city.

The Netherlands East Indies government information service said five Indonesians were arrested in connection with the finding of 12 mutilated bodies of Eurasians in Bandoeng Thursday. Quiet now prevailed in the Java summer capital.

The Dutch news agency Aneta quoted a British spokesman as saying that an "agreement in principle" had been reached with Premier Sutan Sjahrir of the unrecognized Indonesian republic on employing members of the Indonesian peace preservation corps (TKR) in helping to evacuate Japanese troops from Java.

Sjahrir said yesterday that if the plan works to British satisfaction the Indonesian government was prepared also to guarantee removal of Dutch internees to British areas for evacuation from Java.

JAPAN TO ORDER CHANGE IN RELIGION

SPENCER

TOKYO, Dec. 23—(AP) Emperor Hirohito will make effective on Christmas day General MacArthur's decree divorcing religion and government in Japan, the Kyodo news agency said today.

The imperial household's religious service ordinance will be drastically revised by the Dec. 25 anniversary of the death in 1926 of Emperor Yoshihito, father of the present emperor.

In the future, the emperor will not be accompanied by members of the imperial family and government officials when he offers personal prayers or observed imperial festival days within the palace. Members of imperial families and officials may attend such functions at will, however.

Grand festivals, held by the emperor to report important state matters to the imperial sanctuary, imperial ancestors' shrine and imperial mausoleum, will be discontinued, as will the dispatch of imperial messengers to government and national shrines.

Festivals in the palace will be observed solely by the imperial household, while the three biggest festivals of historically famous Kamo shrine in Kyoto, Iwashimizu-Hachiman shrine in Kyoto, and Kasuga shrine in Nara, will not be held next year.

The anniversary of the death of Emperor Yoshihito Dec. 25 will be only a routine holiday for the general public, instead of an observance under Shinto as in the past.

Other festival and feast days under Shinto in the past also will become holidays without Shinto significance.

LANGUAGE BARRIER HALTS ATROCITY TRIAL

TOKYO, Monday, Dec. 24 (AP)—Tatsuo Tsuchiya, Japanese prison guard accused of brutally murdering Pfc. Robert Gordon Taas, an American prison, began testifying in his own defense today, but language barriers caused the American military commission trying him to recess until Wednesday.

Tsuchiya, informed that if he refused to testify the prosecution would make capital of his refusal, began by stating that he was 28 years old and married and had one child. He was a farmer and mat maker and was "very poor" before he became a prison camp guard.

The defendant—dubbed "Little Glass Eye" by his American charges—spoke so rapidly that the interpreter could not follow him. The commission called a recess and said that it would obtain another interpreter.

The prosecution contended that Tsuchiya was in a position to tell more than anyone else about the accusations against him and if he remained silent it had a right to comment on that fact. The commission agreed, over the protests of Tsuchiya's American attorneys.

Tokyo Damage Summarized

TOKYO, Dec. 23 (AP)—More than a year after American superforts began bombing Japan, the fire department of Tokyo's police board reported today that 605,338 homes or buildings within the metropolitan area were destroyed by the raids. The report said 1,128,000 persons were made homeless, and it estimated over-all damage at 5,753,000,000 yen, or about $383,530,000.

Japanese Are Reported Fighting in China Battle

Said to Have Taken Part on Both Sides in Mongolia

TOKYO, Dec. 24 (Monday) (AP)—The Kyodo news agency today quoted a Japanese newspaper man repatriated from north China as stating that former Japanese soldiers, participating on both sides, were responsible for most of the fighting in a recent battle of Communist and government troops at Paotow, Inner Mongolia.

"Furious fighting developed in true Japanese style," Hisashi Aoyama, former chief copy reader at Peiping of the Japanese newspaper 'Toa Shimpo," told Kyodo.

He said demobilized Japanese soldiers had joined government troops in "utter despair." He said one Japanese sergeant who retained the same rank in the Chinese Army was paid the equivalent of 25,000 yen ($1,667) monthly.

Tokyo Fights Crime Wave

Tokyo, Monday, Dec. 24 (AP)—Police arrested about 900 men and 100 women Saturday night as burglary or petty theft suspects, Kyodo news agency said today in reporting an increasing crime wave. Most offenders were charged with petty offenses, but some were accused of armed robbery.

12 Americans Die, Scores Injured As Fire Sweeps Barracks in Japan

By The Associated Press.

SIXTH ARMY HEADQUARTERS, Kyoto, Japan, Dec. 23—Furiously spreading flames trapped and killed twelve American officers and men in a medical battalion barracks on Shikoku today, leveling the two-story frame building in ten minutes.

Twenty-two of the scores of injured were hospitalized.

The victims, whose bodies were found huddled near the stairway and around windows from which they fought unsuccessfully to escape, were members of the Twenty-fourth Medical Battalion of the Twenty-fourth Division. Shikoku is south of the main island of Honshu, in the Japanese home islands.

The origin of the fire, which started at 6 A. M., was not determined, but an investigation was begun at once. The names of the casualties were not immediately announced.

It was a flash fire, costliest tragedy of the occupation thus far, and was fanned by a strong offshore wind. A guard discovered the fire in the early morning darkness, but the flames raged out of control despite a pump truck crew's efforts. A number of small adjoining buildings as well as ambulances and other vehicles were destroyed.

Many survivors suffered broken legs or arms, and lacerations, in thirty-foot leaps from the second floor. Emergency surgery and first aid were administered at an evacuation hospital 100 yards away.

Nisei Who Quit U. S. for Japan Are Greeted by Starving Nation

URAGA, Japan, Dec. 23 (AP).—It's almost Christmas at home and the war seems long ended and far away, but here in Japan starving troops who fought for the emperor are falling unconscious on the docks.

These are the men who garrisoned the Palau Islands and for four months since hostilities ceased "lived off the land." They are returning now to be demobilized in a land that holds little opportunity.

As they climbed down the sides of the transports which brought them back to Japan the liner Matsonia lay anchored close by. On board her were 1,100 Nisei from the United States who had renounced their American citizenship. The sight of hungry Japanese troops was their welcome to Japan.

Beside the docks soldiers wait patiently for trucks to move them to a separation center two miles away. Every few minutes there is a small commotion as some soldier collapses. A Japanese nurse pushes through the crowd and jabs a needle into the unconscious soldier. He is placed on a stretcher and put into a truck. The repatriated soldiers are forty to fifty pounds underweight.

On the Matsonia it was a different picture. There were 1,100 persons, comprising 285 families, eating the best American food. But it was their last American meal. They came ashore this morning to an impoverished, burned-out land, covered with a light fall of snow. They marched a mile and a half down a muddy road to a windowless, unheated reception center.

Captain Frank A. Johnson, who commands the Matsonia, said: "It isn't the older Japanese coming back whom I feel sorry for. It's the boys and girls, kids from a few months old to sixteen. Put a screen in front of them and talk to them and they are just plain Americans. They don't want to come to Japan. Their parents made them do it. They hate it."

$17,000,000 Surplus Goods Sold

MANILA, Monday, Dec. 24 (AP)—The sale of $17,000,000 in surplus Army and Navy materials in the Philippines and the Orient during its first six weeks' operations was announced today by the Foreign Liquidations Commission's Pacific office. Food sales totaled $11,000,000, hospitals and medical supplies, $1,500,000, and aircraft and parts, $1,500,000.

PHILIPPINES LEFTISTS ACT

Alliance Calls Convention to Name Presidential Slate

MANILA, Monday, Dec. 24 (AP)—A democratic alliance of Leftist groups entered the Philippine political arena today and called a national convention here Jan. 27 to select candidates for President, Vice President and Congress for the April election.

Luis Tarbuc, pre-war leader of Manila and central Luzon labor unions, criticized High Commissioner Paul V. McNutt's recent Shanghai statement that Filipinos were wavering on their independence demand.

"It is fascist elements, imperialists and vested interests who are against giving Philippine independence," said Mr. Tarbuc, who was a "lieutenant general" in the Hukbahalahap socialist army during Japanese occupation.

Juan Feleo, former Communist party president, and other speakers at a mass meeting assailed both President Sergio Osmena and Senate President Manuel Roxas.

Three Lost As Gale Hits U. S. Cruiser

PONTA DELGADA, Azores, Dec. 23—(AP) Two American soldiers were killed, one lost overboard and 52 injured in a violent gale which struck the U. S. heavy cruiser Portland en route to America with 600 homeward bound GIs. The Portland resumed her voyage to the United States today after putting in here for refueling.

Twenty-two of the most seriously injured were transferred to the U.S.S. Dearborn and will be flown home by the Army Transport command.

The airplane hangar of the Portland which was used as a dormitory was broken in by the heavy seas.

The war transport Pirloston, carrying 1,500 men home from Europe, also put in for refueling.

The battleship Washington, however, was reported proceeding steadily toward America at reduced speed through heavy seas without damage.

NEW YORK, Dec. 23—(AP) The transport India Victory, which brought 1,542 servicemen, arrived today.

Capt. A. L. Newson of San Angelo, Texas, skipper of the ship, said the voyage from Le Havre, France, was the "roughest in my 20 years at sea."

The bulk of the troops were high point discharge men from various units, with the Third battalion of the 118th infantry regiment the only organized unit aboard.

Also arriving at New York were the James F. Rhodes, with 616 troops; Athos, 3,072; George Woodward, 561; Tristant Dalton, 630; Thomas Johnson, 631; Pittsburgh Seam, 5; R. Walton Moore, 8; Eli Whitney, 15; and Exmoor, 17.

Dutra to Govern Brazil By Temporary Charter

Pact Will Be Studied When Constitution Is Drafted

RIO DE JANEIRO, Dec. 23 (AP).—Brazilian newspapers said today that President-elect Enrico Gaspar Dutra, who is to take office early next year, would govern Brazil under a temporary constitutional charter.

Newspapers expressing the views both of the majority Social Democratic party and the opposition National Democratic Union agreed that the charter would serve as a basic proposal to be considered by the incoming congress when it drafts a permanent constitution.

Korean P. W.s Sent Home

HONOLULU, Dec. 23 (AP).—More than 2,600 Korean prisoners of war sailed yesterday for Jinsen, Korea, aboard the transport General O. H. Ernst, Army authorities announced. After discharging the prisoners, the ship will embark 3,100 American soldiers to be returned home for discharge.

POCKET VETO KILLS BILL TO RESTORE U.S.E.S. TO STATES

Truman Fears Proposal Would Retard Re-Employment.

MEASURE WAS RIDER

President Critical of Congress' Action in Linking Two Unrelated Issues.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23—(AP) President Truman announced today he is killing legislation handing the Federal employment offices over to the states in 100 days. He said it would "immeasurably retard our re-employment program."

It was a rider to a bill wiping $52,000,000,000 in left-over war appropriations off the books. Mr. Truman wanted this, but he could not approve it without the rider. So a pocket veto will cover both.

(A pocket veto is accomplished by the President's refusal to sign legislation within 10 days after receiving it. When Congress is in recess, as it is now for the Christmas holidays, such legislation automatically dies. Should Congress be in session, however, any measure not acted upon by the President within the ten-day period would become law.)

Money Will Not Be Spent

Pending re-enactment of the savings bill, the sums will be preserved by executive directive to the Budget bureau. Actually, for all practical purposes, the appropriations already are rescinded because the agencies aren't spending this money.

Announcing his action in a "memorandum of disapproval," the Chief Executive not only objected to the rider itself, but opposed "even more strongly" the method employed tacking it on to a major appropriation bill.

This, he asserted, "restricts the President's exercise of his functions and is contrary to good government."

Would Delay Until 1947

He said he favored eventual return of the 51 employment offices to the states and territories, but repeated his recommendation that the transfer be deferred until June, 1947.

The offices during the next several months will be in the midst of their all-time peak work load, Mr. Truman said.

"Such a dispersion and transfer at this time," he stated, "x x x will result in a disrupted and inefficient employment service at the very time when efficient operation is most vitally needed by veterans, workers and employers."

Mr. Truman also objected to the rider's provision for operation by the states under regulations of the U. S. Secretary of Labor, costs to be met entirely by the Federal government, noting this setup would continue only until next June 30. He preferred permanent legislation on a matter of "such grave importance."

He also observed the bill barred grants to states which are unable or unwillingly to comply with Federal requirements.

"This means, in effect," he said, "that when there is a substantial failure to provide essential services or to meet minimum standards of efficiency, the Federal government must choose between two alternatives which are both unsatisfactory. It must either acquiesce in a substandard operation—or, by withholding funds, it must deprive all of the state's employers, workers and veterans of a service they need and to which they are entitled."

He called attention to several bills now pending which he said are designed to accomplish permanent and needed changes in the employment system and declared:

"Enactment of such permanent legislation is essential before a transfer back to state operations can be achieved in an efficient and orderly manner."

Text of President's Veto Message

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23 (AP).—Following is the text of President Truman's statement disapproving legislation canceling left-over war appropriations:

I am withholding my approval of H. R. 4407, "reducing certain appropriations and contract authorizations available for the fiscal year 1946, and for other purposes."

It is with sincere regret that I am unable to approve this legislation. In response to my communication of Sept. 5, 1945, and in conformity with their own careful plans, the Appropriations Committees of the House and of the Senate held extended hearings and gave mature consideration to the readjustment of executive programs and finances to the problems of the reconversion period. The Congress has acted expeditiously and considerately to develop the basis for the continuing peace-time operations of the government. It has demonstrated a fine spirit of economy in reducing appropriations without complicating the delicate adjustment from war-time to peace-time functions, and without sacrificing the basic progress which has been made during the war years in the long-term development of government activity.

So far as the basic purpose of this bill rescinding appropriations is concerned, I am in thorough agreement with the action of the Congress. Far from wishing to sacrifice the care and effort which have gone into its development, I shall by executive action preserve the full values of these recission provisions in the exact terms which the Congress itself has approved. If these provisions stood alone I should gladly approve the bill. I have asked the Director of the Bureau of the Budget to place these recission amounts in a reserve, non-expendable status, and so to advise the departments and agencies concerned.

51 Separate Systems

In addition to its effect on appropriations, however, the bill contains provisions which require our system to be broken up—with in 100 days—and transferred to operation as fifty-one separate state and territorial systems.

While I believe such a transfer should be made at the proper time, I am convinced that this bill requires that it be made at the wrong time and in the wrong way. Such a dispersion and transfer at this time would immeasurably retard our re-employment program. And as the basis for Federal-state co-operation, in a fundamental program of national importance, the provisions of the bill dealing with the public employment offices are unsound and unwise from any point of view.

So far as the timing of the transfer is concerned, the period designated by this bill—the next 100 days—is the most disadvantageous that could have been chosen. It will result in a disrupted and inefficient employment service at the very time when efficient operation is most vitally needed by veterans, workers and employers.

Our local public employment offices are now and will be during the next several months in the midst of the peak work load in their history. This is because the offices are now engaged in counseling and placing millions of applicants who require individualized service. These applicants include able-bodied veterans seeking assistance in their readjustment to civilian life, handicapped veterans requiring even more time and guidance in finding the jobs most suitable for them, and unemployed war workers who are confronted by difficult readjustments because of substantial reductions in job opportunities at their war-time skills and wage rates.

At such a time, any change in management and direction is necessarily disruptive to the service. A change which would replace our present single and unified management by fifty-one separate managements would be very harmful. Even with every effort by the states to promote a smooth transition the transfer of some 23,000 employees to new conditions of employment, and the adjustment of operations to the requirements of fifty-one different state agencies, will inevitably cause confusion and delay.

In my reconversion message of Sept. 6 to the Congress, I pointed out our national responsibilities and problems in connection with re-employment during the reconversion period. During this period, displaced war workers and the veterans who are returning to civilian life at the rate of more than a million a month, will need and have a right to expect from their national government an effective job-counseling and placement service. These problems and responsibilities cannot, in a period when millions of veterans and other workers are moving across state lines, be met adequately through fifty-one separate and independent public employment service systems, linked only by the necessarily remote and indirect influence of a Federal agency financing the state systems through grants-in-aid.

For these reasons, I now repeat my recommendation that the transfer of our public employment offices to state operation be postponed until June, 1947. The administration is committed to returning the service to state operation, and that commitment will be carried through. But this is not the time.

Apart from the timing of the transfer, the provisions of H. R. 4407 which govern the basis for Federal-state co-operation in the maintenance of public employment offices do not assure that an adequate service will be available in all states.

The bill provides for the operation of public employment offices by the states under rules and regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Labor to carry out the provisions of the Wagner-Persey act. Operating costs would be met entirely by the Federal government. These provisions of the bill would remain in effect for only a few months—the balance of the current fiscal year.

Two Basic Objectives

The bill precludes the granting of funds to any state which is unable, or unwilling, to comply with the provisions of the bill or any requirement of the Secretary of Labor pursuant to the provisions of the bill.

A Federal-state co-operative program for a national system of public employment offices financed entirely by Federal funds must at least provide assurance as to two basic objectives: the Federal government must be sure that the essential services are being provided through the states' employment offices, and it must know that the offices are being operated with reasonable efficiency. Under such a program the Federal government is not interested in prescribing minute or insignificant details concerning the state operation, but it does have a stake in the preservation of reasonable standards.

H. R. 4407 provides no effective protection for this national interest. If any state, for any reason, can not or does not meet the minimum requirements, Federal grants cannot be made. But at the same time the Federal government itself is precluded from continuing the operation of public employment office facilities in the state.

This means, in effect, that when there is a substantial failure to provide essential services or to meet minimum standards of efficiency, the Federal government must choose between two alternatives which are both unsatisfactory. It must either acquiesce in the substandard operation—or, by withholding funds, it must deprive all of the state's employers, workers and veterans of a service they need and to which they are entitled.

At a time of such acute emergency—when employment offices are needed to provide veterans with the services with which the Congress has required they be provided, and needed also to assist other unemployed workers in securing peace-time jobs—I cannot approve legislation which, under some conditions, may offer only a choice between a substantially sub-standard service or no service at all.

It seems clear to me that a matter of such grave importance as our public employment system deserves not only permanent legislation but legislation carefully and separately considered. Issues of such a difficult and vital nature should not be dealt with as riders to appropriation bills.

The fact is that our present legislation governing the operation of our co-operative Federal-state employment service system, enacted in 1933, needs thorough revision in the light of changed conditions. Several bills now pending before both houses of the Congress—H. R. 4437, S. 1456 and S. 1510—are designed to accomplish this. Enactment of such permanent legislation is essential before a transfer back to state operation can be achieved in an efficient and orderly manner.

Adequate and uniform standards of service must be maintained and proper security for the personnel of the organization itself must be provided in a permanent way, if it is to keep and attract the caliber of personnel able and eager to perform its important tasks.

Method Is Criticized

Only in this way can we provide a sound and permanent basis for Federal-state co-operation in the maintenance of a post-war system of public employment offices which will meet the needs of veterans, employers, workers, and the nation as a whole.

While I object to the specific measure which this bill proposes to carry out with respect to our employment service, I object even more strongly to the legislative method employed for its enactment. To attach a legislative rider to an appropriation bill restricts the President's exercise of his functions and is contrary to good government.

In view of my past legislative experience, I realize the obligations of the President to the Congress as a co-ordinate branch of the government. At the same time, I must be equally aware of the constitutional responsibility of the President to the people, and of the obligation of the Congress to help him discharge that responsibility.

The Constitution has placed upon the President the duty of considering bills for approval or disapproval. It has always been possible for the Congress to hamper the President's exercise of this duty by combining so many subjects into a single bill that he cannot disapprove an objectionable item without holding up necessary legislation.

Partly in order to prevent this practice, it has long been considered a fundamental principle that legislation on a major issue of policy ought not be combined with an appropriation measure. The present bill directly violates that principle. I am obliged to withhold my approval to some very excellent legislation because of the objectionable practice which has been followed by attaching this rider which I cannot possibly approve.

U. S. Policy on Yugoslavia May Apply Also to Romania

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23—(AP) Officials concerned with the Balkans are studying the tactics used by the United States in recognizing the new Yugoslav republic for their possible application to Romania and Bulgaria.

Acting Secretary of State Dean Acheson last night announced recognition of the regime headed by Marshal Tito, but made it clear that the U. S.:

1. Believes Tito thus far has failed to permit the Yugoslavs the basic freedoms he promised, including a "free and untrammeled election."

2. Will go slow on economic assistance to Yugoslavia until satisfied those obligations have been reasonably well fulfilled.

Situations Differ

Although emphasizing that the situation is different in each of the three countries, officials say the second point probably will apply not only to Bulgaria and Romania but other parts of Europe and the world.

"If there is any pattern in the statement on Yugoslavia which might apply elsewhere, it is the reference to economic relations with the United States," said one official who asked to remain anonymous.

It was recalled that President Truman implied in his directive to Gen. George C. Marshall December 15 that strife-torn China can expect economic assistance from the U. S. only as it moves along recommended lines toward unity and peace.

No Ties With Romania

The U. S. thus far has not established diplomatic relations with the provisional governments of Romania and Bulgaria. It has indicated several times that it regards both regimes as Russian-sponsored and Communist-dominated. Britain has followed the same policy.

Secretary of State Byrnes recently sent Mark Ethridge, Louisville publisher, to both countries to determine if the provisional governments are broadly representative and their plans for national elections democratic.

Ethridge's report has not been made public but it is understood generally that it said "no" on both counts.

Byrnes took the report with him to Moscow, where the subject of the Balkans is known to be high on the discussion agenda of the Big Three foreign ministers. Thus, the next official word on U. S. relations with Bulgaria and Romania probably will come either in a Moscow Big Three communique or from Byrnes on his return to Washington.

There are several reasons why the U. S. might grant official recognition to a Yugoslav government of which it did not wholly approve, while withholding similar sanction for the governments of neighboring Romania and Bulgaria.

The most important are these:

1. Bulgaria and Romania are former enemy nations while Yugoslavia, although overrun by the Wehrmacht, never officially gave up the fight on the Allied side.

2. Yugoslavia's government, whatever its faults, is a Yugoslav product and the elections which brought about its existence were conducted only after all foreign troops were withdrawn from Yugoslav territory. The Romanian and Bulgarian governments, on the other hand, were set up with Soviet encouragement and Red army garrisons remain in both countries.

NATIONAL GUARD TO USE AIRFIELDS

Surplus Army Aviation Centers Will Be Turned Over to State Groups.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23—(AP) Postwar national guard air units are expected to use a number of the airfields now being abandoned by Army Air forces as wartime requirements shrink.

War department officials, planning for participation of state units in the national defense system, said today that the operation of a national guard air force of perhaps 2,000 first-line planes would require facilities far more comprehensive than those of prewar days.

Planning has not yet reached the point where specific fields have been selected, officials said, explaining that this is being worked out with state officials.

Officials of the national guard bureau of the War department said the postwar aviation sections of the national guard will be a "very active component of the nation's air defense."

Present plans contemplate a national guard air force almost double the size of the pre-war force in number of units and far more than that in planes and men. Currently, the idea is for about 80 squadrons, compared with 44 before the war.

Pre-war national guard air units generally were observation units. Postwar emphasis will be placed on fighter and fighter-bomber types.

While initially state air forces will have the surplus aircraft stocks of Army Air forces to draw upon, the planners emphasize that there is no intention to let the equipment of the guard become obsolete. The replacement program for the AAF is being coordinated with plans for keeping the national guard aviation units on a modern, efficient basis.

Almost every state has its quota of ace pilots from this war to call upon in getting the National Guard units started. The training facilities of the regular Army Air Forces will be made available.

The AAF has advised the War Department that to meet expected postwar strategic requirements a regular air force of 8,200 planes, including 5,000 combat aircraft, will be needed.

BEDS NEEDED FOR VETERANS

Acute Shortage In Service Hospitals Disclosed

Washington, Dec. 23 (AP)—The shortage of hospital beds is so acute that the Veterans Administration soon may have to turn away some veterans whose disabilities are not connected with war or military service.

"That means if we are to do anything about it, so that we can continue to take all cases, both service and nonservice connected disabilities, the over-all policy will have to be changed," Maj. Gen. Paul R. Hawley, acting surgeon general of the Veterans Administration, said in an interview today.

"The authority to do this lies higher than the Veterans Administration."

20,000 Beds "Borrowed"

The General announced he had "borrowed" approximately 20,000 hospital beds, with medical care to go with them, from the Army and Navy last week to meet the present crisis. He also asked for two more army hospitals to be placed under Veterans Administration.

But already 87,967 veterans of all American wars are receiving hospital or home care, an all-time record. Two thirds of these are classed as nonservice connected cases, and the percentage of service connected cases among World War II veterans is rising. They have priority and will crowd nonservice cases from hospitals unless more space becomes available.

Up To 40,000 More In 2 Years

"We expect an increase of from 30,000 to 40,000 patients within two years," General Hawley said.

"Under our present policy and limitation it will be impossible to care for them all. We will need more doctors and more hospitals than are in sight at the moment."

The law says the Veterans Administration must care for veterans with injuries or illness traceable to military service. Other veterans may be accepted, with nonservice connected illness or injury, if facilities are available and if the veteran has no money to pay his own way.

Hawley said 20,000 beds borrowed from the Army and Navy last week are only "stop-gaps," because they are available on a temporary basis. Army and navy doctors will attend veterans in these beds.

Seven Army Hospitals Taken Over

In addition to these beds, the Veterans Administration recently took over seven army hospitals.

"But it would be a hollow gesture if we take over any more army or navy hospitals without the staffs to man them," he said.

"We will need from 7,500 to 10,000 doctors in the Veterans Administration within ten years."

He said probably about 5,000 of these will be permanent staff appointees while the others may come from medical schools.

The Veterans Administration medical reorganization bill approved last week by Congress will help to relieve the doctor situation, Hawley said.

More Doctors And Better Ones

"This new outlook will permit us to obtain doctors five times as fast, and to get better ones, than ever would have been possible under the old setup."

The reorganization bill provides for a director of medical service at $12,000 a year; a deputy at $11,500 and eight assistants at $11,000 each; a director of nursing at $8,000, and deputy director, $7,000, and chiefs of four services—pharmacy, dietetics, occupational therapy and physical therapy—at salaries of $6,000 each.

Authority for a complete medical and hospital service is provided with salaries for doctors ranging from a maximum of $9,800 down to $3,640. Specialists may be paid a salary plus an extra allowance up to 25 per cent of salary, but not to exceed $11,000.

PROBE MAY HELP CONGRESS SOLVE DEFENSE ISSUE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23—(AP) The Pearl Harbor investigation was viewed by Senator Ferguson (R-Mich) today as turning up a lot of valuable information for Congress on side questions, including that of unifying the Army and the Navy.

"The record of hearings is something members of Congress will find of interest in passing on that issue," he told reporters. "It will also bear examination when consideration is given to creating a central intelligence service."

Ferguson emphasized that he was drawing no conclusions as yet and did not want to comment directly on the evidence received thus far.

The committee, which recessed yesterday for a Christmas holiday, has heard only a dozen of some 60 scheduled witnesses.

Two of these, however, were the pre-Pearl Harbor Army and Navy intelligence chiefs, Maj. Gen. Sherman Miles and Vice Admiral Theodore S. Wilkinson. They testified a joint Army-Navy intelligence committee did not begin to function actively until after Japan's Dec. 7, 1941, attack on the U. S fleet at Hawaii.

In a discussion of intelligence needs, Ferguson said it was obvious that the atomic bomb made it imperative for the United States to have prompt information on what is going on in other countries.

"I don't mean spying," he said. "I mean information on resources and capabilities of other nations."

Unification of the Army and Navy under one department has been recommended by President Truman and looms as one of the major controversies for Congress when it returns next month.

It came up directly in the Pearl Harbor hearings when Gen. George C. Marshall, former chief of staff, was in the witness chair. He endorsed it emphatically.

The hearings may figure in Congress' decision, in connection with the question whether the Pearl Harbor disaster might have been more or less likely under a single department of defense.

The Senate-House group will resume hearings Dec. 31. In the meantime, Chairman Barkley (D-Ky) has the task of finding some one willing to take over the counsel's job in midstream.

William D. Mitchell, counsel, and his three assistants have given notice that they cannot continue after Jan. 1. Mitchell gave as his reason the apparent prospect that the hearings will go on for months.

FERGUSON DENIES POLITICS IN INQUIRY

Senator Holds Chief Aim Is Preparing to Avert Another Pearl Harbor Disaster

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23 (AP)—Senator Homer Ferguson of Michigan declared today that preparedness, not politics, was the prime purpose of the Pearl Harbor investigation.

A member of the Congressional inquiry committee, he expressed the view that the main objective was to prevent a repetition of that military disaster.

"Just why some people think that if a Republican member asks why this was done, or that was not done, he is presenting a partisan view, I just cannot understand," he said.

He thus took issue with a Democratic member of the committee, Senator Tunnell of Delaware, who has contended that the Republicans were trying to build up a campaign issue by blaming the Roosevelt Administration for the attack.

The Michigan Republican asserted that none of the witnesses thus far had been asked about his political affiliations.

He was interviewed as the inquiry took a week's recess, during which a search will be made for new counsel for the committee.

Representative Bertrand V. Gearhart, Republican, of California said he would recommend Warren Atherton of Stockton, Calif., and Harry Colmery of Topeka, Kan., former national commanders of the American Legion.

Both are outstanding lawyers, he said, and "not too close to Washington politics."

The committee's present four-man legal staff, headed by former Attorney General William D. Mitchell, has expressed a desire to withdraw because of the length of the hearings.

Scheduled as a witness when hearings resume Dec. 31 is Admiral Harold R. Stark, who was Chief of Naval Operations in 1941. No time has been set as yet for the expected questioning of the 1941 Pearl Harbor commanders, Admiral Husband E. Kimmel and Lieut. Gen. Walter C. Short.

Senator Ferguson said that the evidence already adduced had made the inquiry worth while, especially in showing the workings of Army and Navy intelligence. He noted that for the first time translators and decoders of intercepted Japanese messages were to be called.

This may bring before the committee its first feminine witness, Dorothy Edgers, a translator.

Senator Ferguson said that she was supposed to have translated "in the rough" on Dec. 6, 1941, a secret Japanese message detailing a spy's signal system for warship movements around Pearl Harbor. Navy records show this was not finally translated until four days after the attack.

26 LARGE PLANTS TO BE REMOVED FROM GERMANY

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23—(AP) Gen. Joseph T. McNarney said today 26 large plants in Germany have been made ready for delivery as war reparations to the countries which suffered at Nazi hands, and 58 others have been earmarked.

The general, military governor of the United States zone of occupation, reported that "many more" of the plants in the American zone are being surveyed for inclusion in the planned removal of Germany's war potential. He spoke from Germany on an NBC broadcast.

Approximately 100,000 Nazis now are in custody as members of organizations being tried by the international tribunal at Nuernberg, McNarney said. Thousands of Nazis have been removed from government and industry and "denazification is well advanced," the general added.

Maj. Gen. John H. Hilldring, chief of the War department's civil affairs division, also a speaker on the program said that the four-power rule of Germany "has been exceedingly successful" and that "our ability to get along with our Allies is no longer an academic question—it's a postive and proven fact."

Hilldring said he was confident that the disagreement between France and the other Allies over centralization of administration will be "argued out and settled." The French, he said, want to hold up centralization "until we decide what we're going to do with the Rhineland and the Ruhr."

DETROIT PICKETS LEAVE G-M GATES FOR YULE HOLIDAY

DETROIT, Dec. 23—(AP) The age-old spirit of Christmas cast its spell today over the C.I.O. and its automotive adversaries, stilling the wrangling voices of both for the first time in many months.

Not since last August has Detroit been as free of bitter crosstable conferences.

Striking pickets at nearly 100 General Motors Corp., plants throughout the nation are leaving windswept lines for a "pickets holiday" with their families. They have been on strike since Nov. 21 in a demand for a 30 percent wage increase.

The United Auto Workers (C.I.O.) and GM will get back to work after Christmas with a meeting Dec. 26, their first since they were both called before a government fact-finding board in Washington.

The meeting has been called to study "local union grievances" and will be eyed narrowly by Federal authorities who have threatened to intervene again unless the two sides get together.

On the following day, Dec. 27, the U.A.W.-C.I.O. will sit down again with the management of the Kaiser-Frazer Corp., newest entry in the highly competitive automobile manufacturing field.

K-F has under consideration a union list of demands, including a request for a wage scale 30 percent above that now prevailing in the Ford Motor Co. The firm is expected to present its side of the picture for the first time Thursday.

Kaiser-Frazer plans to begin production in 1946 and hopes to be employing nearly 11,000 workers by late spring or early summer.

The Ford company is not scheduled to meet again with the U.A.-W.-C.I.O. until Jan. 8.

Their last meeting adjourned with a union denunciation of a company proposal to increase wages by about 15 cents an hour. Workers at Chrysler Corp., are continuing their "truce" with that firm, working without a union contract and under a "no strike" plan that is expected to endure at least until the end of the General Motors walkout.

Full-Scale Output Held Impossible Before March

Detroit, Dec. 23 (AP)—The chairman of Michigan's labor mediation board said today that full-scale automobile production is impossible before March 1 at the earliest.

Even if all strikes in the industry and its supplying units are settled in January, Philip Weiss explained, it would require several weeks to attain full production.

Weiss said the Ford Motor Company is the only car manufacturer that does not depend solely upon outside sources for steel, glass and other essentials. Even Ford cannot make enough of its own supplies to meet the heavy demands of all out production, he added.

Outside Strikes Cause Lag In G-E Appliance Output

Current Production Is Below Expectations, Andrews Reports.

NEW YORK, Dec. 23. — (AP) Officials of General Electric company, report postwar production running considerably behind expectations with strikes among parts suppliers a prime factor.

H. L. Andrews, vice president in charge of appliance operations, said output in his division was roughly 40 per cent behind schedule on average.

As an example of strikes in other companies, this was cited: A supplier of tubs for washing machines has been shut down for around eight weeks, affecting G. E. operations.

Charles E. Wilson, president, termed current conditions and thinking "admittedly confused" and he added: "Maybe we expected too much in laying our reconversion plans."

"We thought we had plans ready to reconvert easily," he said, "and also to make vast improvements in plant facilities and layouts plus expanding some old lines and adding new lines and new plants.

"We have found it necessary to make a lot of changes in plans to overcome the time lag in getting out certain lines."

Speaking at a news conference over the week-end, G. E. officials denied what they called union charges that they were holding back goods to take advantage of lower tax rates in 1946 and also that they would move plants out of "heavily unionized old work cities."

Wilson said that expansion was scheduled at West Lynn, Mass.; Fort Wayne and Decatur, Ind.; Bloomfield, N. J.; Bridgeport, Conn., and Anaheim and San Jose, Calif.

It would cost a billion dollars to move into smaller towns," said Wilson. "Besides they eventually all will be unionized, too. And anyway, labor is entitled to collective bargaining and we happen to believe in it."

Andrews cited examples which he said proved appliances were being shipped out as fast as they came off the production line. He said 97 per cent of the flat irons and washing machines made so far and 94 per cent of the refrigerators had left the plant.

Touching on price controls, Wilson said "you reach the irreducible minimum somewhere" and amplified this by saying that with wages and materials up considerably it would be necessary to undergo considerable technological and engineering progress before such higher costs could be offset.

He held out little likelihood that prices for products would go down in the near future.

BOWLES CRITICIZES EXHIBIT ON PRICES

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23—(AP) Chester Bowles said today an exhibit of the National Retail Dry Goods association "seems to have been another sorry effort" to crack inflation controls.

The OPA chief made what he said was his fourth attempt to have Lew Hahn, general manager of the association, disclose the identity of manufacturers represented in the exhibit "so that a full investigation could be made."

OPA contends that the exhibit, recently displayed in a Congressional committee room, is designed to prove that OPA prices have created difficulties for old manufacturers while allowing special advantages to new producers.

In a letter to Hahn, Bowles repeated that in almost every instance in which OPA has been able to check statements made in the exhibit, they were found "to be rather seriously in error."

Bowles said he was "astounded" that Hahn would sponsor "a presentation which at best seems to have been founded on unchecked flimsy evidence."

In an earlier letter to Hahn Bowles said that in one case the exhibit had stated, "OPA expects this manufacturer to produce this pair of shorts at $3.55 a dozen."

Bowles said an investigation had shown the manufacturer was "producing thousands of dozens of this item each week, and is not even charging as much as his allowable ceiling."

The association's display included merchandise of numerous unidentified manufacturers, with accompanying statements that in almost every case ceilings fixed for new producers were considerably higher than allowed old-line manufacturers.

Hahn, in previously refusing to reveal the identity of manufacturers represented in the display, said his refusal was based on a desire to protect the firms in their relations with government agencies.

He said the exhibit comparisons showed "actual disparities in OPA price ceilings on standard and comparable or inferior lines turned out by newcomers in various fields."

Myer Cohen Named Director of Displaced Persons Division

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23 (AP).—Appointment of Myer Cohen, of Washington, as director of the displaced persons division of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration was announced tonight.

Cohen, formerly acting chief of U. N. R. R. A.'s Austrian displaced persons operations, succeeds Fred K. Hoehler, who is resigning Dec. 31 to become director of the Chicago Community Fund.

Director General Herbert H. Lehman of U. N. R. R. A., asserting Hoehler has had "one of the heaviest operating responsibilities in the administration" during the last three years, said he was releasing him "with great regret and a keen sense of personal loss."

ARMY AIR SERVICE LOSES ITS VETERANS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23 — (AP) More than 60 per cent of the men who operated the Air Transport command in Europe and the Pacific will be out of service by Jan. 1.

Lt. Gen. Harold L. George, ATC chief, announced today that the Pacific division will total 17,135 men on that date, compared with a peak strength of 41,180. The European division will have 3,600 officers and men at the beginning of the year, compared with its one-time strength of 10,300.

Engineers Report On Crash Of Bomber

Washington, Dec. 23 (AP)—Allison engineers found no sign of engine failure in an examination of the wreckage of the army's experimental XB-42 plane which crashed near here December 16, the manufacturers announced today.

Lieut. Col. E. J. Ascani, pilot, said shortly after the crash of the speedy bomber that he ordered the other two officers aboard to take to their parachutes, and jumped after them, after both engines quit in the air.

The unorthodox plane, with engines inside the fuselage and propellers behind the tail assembly, fell just eight days after it had set a new transcontinental record by flying from Long Beach, Cal., to Washington in five hours and seventeen minutes.

Zionists Appoint Stone To Head Expansion Fund

Washington, Dec. 23 (AP)—The Zionist Organization of America today announced the appointment of Dewey D. Stone, Taunton, Mass., as national chairman of a $500,000 expansion fund to finance enlarged public relations and educational projects.

The projects will include a nation-wide radio program, publication of books, scholarships at the Hebrew University, and "the counteracting of anti-Zionist propaganda."

Manuel Posy, formerly Zionist regional director for Manhattan (New York city), was named national director of the fund.

Nimitz Navy Greeting Urges Will To Peace

Washington, Dec. 23 (AP)—Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz declared that this is a time "for the sincere rededication of our will toward 'peace on earth' in the decades to come."

In a Christmas greeting broadcast to naval personnel, the new chief of naval operations said:

"Let us all, in a personal way and in a common national unity, dedicate our efforts toward the establishment of a sound peace for the world. . . . A sound peace founded on security. And let us strive to build that security on good will. . . . In the true meaning of Christmas."

YOUTH ON WAY HOME FINALLY

American, 15, 'Was Stuck' In Germany During War

New York, Dec. 23 (AP)—An American boy of 15 who "got stuck" in Germany when the war started returned home today in time for Christmas.

Rudolph Frederick Wagner had gone to Europe with his mother, who still is awaiting transportation on the exchange liner Gripsholm.

He and his mother lived with relatives during the early part of the war. Later they were transferred to the American occupation zone and finally to the displaced persons camp in Paris.

The youth said he would go to Portland, Ore., to join his guardian, Ludwig Post, an engineer, and hoped to enter high school there.

A Rough Voyage

Wagner arrived on the transport India Victory, which brought 1,542 service men.

Capt. A. L. Newson, of San Angelo, Texas, skipper of the ship, said the voyage from Le Havre, France, was the "roughest in my twenty years at sea."

The bulk of the troops were high-point discharge men from various units, with the 3d Battalion of the 118th Infantry Regiment the only organized unit aboard.

Also arriving at New York were the James F. Rhodes, with 616 troops; Athos, 3,072; George Woodward, 561; Tristant Dalton, 630; Thomas Johnson, 631; Pittsburgh Seam, 5; R. Walton Moore, 8; Eli Whitney, 15, and Exmoor, 17.

Five Destroyers Dock

Philadelphia, Dec. 23 (AP)—Five battle-scarred destroyers, veterans of Pacific warfare as part of Task Force 38, docked at the Philadelphia naval base today carrying approximately 1,000 officers and men who were given Christmas liberty.

The ships are the Watt, the Smallely, the Wren, the Stoddard, and the Rowe. All five of them saw action off the Kuriles Islands and the Aleutians and later at Okinawa. After the surrender, they joined the naval occupation forces in Tokyo Bay but left for home on December 1.

CLIPPER YULE SALUTES DUE

Two Planes Will Pass Over Atlantic Christmas Eve

New York, Dec. 23 (AP) — Pan American World Airways said today that for the first time in flying history passengers on two trans-Atlantic clippers would bid each other Christmas greetings as the ships pass while over the Atlantic Christmas Eve.

An England-bound plane, the company said, is scheduled to pass a United States-bound plane 800 miles east of Newfoundland. Weather permitting, the planes will be close enough to see each other. Radio greetings will be carried from plane to plane.

CHUNGKING,DEC.23-(AP)-GENERALISSIMO AND MADAME CHIANG KAI-SHEK ARRIVED IN CHUNGKING THIS AFTERNOON FROM NANKING.

THE GENERALISSIMO WAS EXPECTED TO MEET GEN.GEORGE C.MARSHALL, NEW U.S. ENVOY, LATER TODAY OR EARLY TOMORROW IN THE FIRST OF SERIES OF SCHEDULED CONFERENCES HERE ON CHINSE UNITY AND PEACE. NO TIME WAS SET.

THREE CHINESE COMMUNIST LEADERS CALLED ON GENERAL MARSHALL THIS AFTERNOON TO PAY THEIR RESPECTS AND FOR A "FRIENDLY EXCHANGE OF VIEWS AND AIDES TO THE GENERAL SAID.

THEY SPENT AN HOUR WITH MARSHALL, WHO FROM ALL ACCOUNTS DID MORE LISTENING THAN TALKING.

THE MEETING MARKED THE FIRST PRESENTATION OF THE COMMUNIST VIEWPOINT TO MARSHALL BY PARTY LEADERS THEMSELVES.

THE TRIO INCLUDED GEN.CHOU EN-LAI, DEPUTY CHIEF OF THE PARTY AND LEADER OF THE COMMUNIST DELEGATION TO FORTHCOMING PEACE TALKS HERE; GEN.YEH CHIEN-YING, CHIEF OF STAFF OF COMMUNIST ARMIES; AND TUNG PI-WU, WHO WAS A COMMUNIST MEMBER OF THE CHINESE DELEGATION AT THE SAN FRANCISCO UNITED NATIONS CONFERENCE.

CHUNGKING,DEC.23-(AP)-COMMUNIST LEADERS HERE FOR THE FORTH-COMING UNITY PARLEYS WITH THE CENTRAL GOVERNMENT ARE ENTERING ENTHUSIASTICALLY UPON CHUNGKING'S SOCIAL LIFE.

THEIR ATTITUDE TOWARD GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS AT PARTIES IS OUTWARDLY MOST FRIENDLY--SO MUCH SO THAT SEVERAL FOREIGNERS AT AN AMERICAN PRE-CHRISTMAS PARTY LAST NIGHT REMARKED THAT IF BOTH SIDES SHOWED THIS SAME FRIENDLY SPIRIT AT THE CONFERENCE TABLE THE FUTURE OF CHINA MIGHT BE BRIGHT.

THE COMMUNISTS SELDOM MISS A CHANCE OF DRINKING A TOAST. AT LAST NIGHT'S PARTY CHOU EN-LAI, HEAD OF THE COMMUNIST DELEGATION, AND YEH CHIEN-YING, COMMUNIST CHIEF OF STAFF, DANCED, DRANK AND GENERALLY ENJOYED THEMSELVES.

THEY GOOD-NATUREDLY PLAYED THE DRINKING GAME OF "KAN PAI" (BOTTOMS UP) WITH A PROTESTING GOVERNMENT OFFICIAL WHO EVENTUALLY FOUND THE GOING ROUGH BUT EVIDENTLY ENJOYED HIMSELF AS MUCH AS THE TWO COMMUNISTS DID.

CHUNGKING,DEC.23-(AP)-CHINESE QUARTERS TODAY SAID THEY WERE UNABLE TO CONFIRM U.S. ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL STORY THAT PREMIER STALIN DID NOT WANT CHINESE TO OCCUPY MANCHURIA WITH HEAVILY ARMED FORCES.

SINCE THE SINO-SOVIET TREATY PROVIDES NO LIMITATION ON THE NUMBER OF CHINESE TROOPS TO BE STATIONED IN MANCHURIA, THEY SAID, ANY ATTEMPT TO IMPOSE SUCH A LIMITATION WOULD CLEARLY VIOLATE CHINA'S SOVEREIGN RIGHTS. IT WOLD BE ABSURD, THEY ADDED, TO THINK THAT THE PRESENCE OF CHINESE TROOPS IN MANCHURIA, NO MATTER IN WHAT STRENGTH, WOULD THREATEN RUSSIA'S SECURITY.

GEN.GEORGE C.MARSHALL'S OFFICE HERE PROFESSED TO HAVE NO INFORMATION ON ANY DEVELOPMENTS IN THE TALKS OF BIG THREE DIPLOMATS AT MOSCOW WHICH HAD INFLUENCED THE MOVEMENT OF CHINESE TROOPS. (THE ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL STORY SAID THAT THE U.S. HAD STOPPED ASSISTING THE MOVEMENT OF CHINESE TROOPS AS A RESULT OF THE OPENING TALKS AT MOSCOW.)

AUTHORITATIVE QUARTERS HERE SAID THAT SO FAR AS THEY KNEW THERE HAS BEEN NO CHANGE IN THE SITUATION, WHICH THEY SUMMARIZED THUS:

1. LT.GEN.ALBERT C.WEDEMEYER, U.S. COMMANDER IN CHINA, IS AUTHORIZED TO ASSIST THE MOVEMENT OF CHINESE TROOPS TO MANCHURIA PORTS IF AND WHEN OPINION THAT IS NECESSARY.

2. THE MOVEMENT OF GOVERNMENT TROOPS FROM SOUTHERN TO NORTHERN CHINA MAY BE UNDERTAKEN ONLY AFTER GENERAL MARSHALL DETERMINES THAT THIS IS CONSISTENT WITH HIS NEGOTIATIONS WITH THE CHINESE.

THESE QUARTERS POINTED OUT THAT MARSHALL'S NEGOTIATIONS HAVE HARDLY BEGUN, AND THAT THE SECOND POINT CONSEQUENTLY HAS NOT YET ARISEN.

Big 3 to Draft Treaties For 5 Nazi Satellites, Call Peace Parley by May 1

DEC 24 1945

Peace Treaty Accord Reached by Big Three

LONDON, Dec. 24 (AP).—The Moscow radio said today the three-power conference of foreign ministers reached definite agreements with regard to peace treaties, as Moscow reports indicated the conference neared a close with the three major nations closer together than they have been for months.

The broadcast said the ministers had agreed to include France in the framing of the Italian peace treaty, and had agreed that nations which signed capitulation agreements with Romania, Bulgaria and Finland would participate in the drafting of those peace treaties.

U. S. Secretary of State James F. Byrnes, Soviet Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav M. Molotov and British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin agreed, the broadcast said, that deputy foreign ministers should resume work in London on the basis of agreements reached by the first session there of the five-power foreign ministers conference.

"The conference will consist of the five members of the council of ministers of foreign affairs (of Britain, the United States, the Soviet Union, France and China) as well as all members of the council who had taken an active part in the war against the enemy states of Europe with substantial military contingents," the broadcast said.

"When preparations of all of these drafts (of treaties) are concluded, the council (of foreign ministers) will call a conference for the discussion of peace treaties with Italy, Romania, Bulgaria and Finland," the broadcast said.

Although the conference has reached its final stage, both Secretary of State Byrnes and Foreign Secretary Bevin will be in Moscow until tomorrow morning at least, it was said.

Meanwhile, it was reliably reported that Russia has not been let in on any secrets about the atomic bomb, although the Foreign Ministers were said to have discussed the American-British-Canadian policy on world control of atomic energy. It was understood that Byrnes and Bevin have adhered to the policy set forth by President Truman, Prime Minister Attlee and Prime Minister Mackenzie King for placing control of atomic energy in the hands of a United Nations Commission, meanwhile retaining the production secrets on the bomb until effective controls have been established. The extent of progress made on handling the atomic energy question was not revealed.

Atmosphere Still Hopeful.

An atmosphere of optimism continued to prevail today as the conference went into its ninth day. The three ministers, Byrnes, Bevin and Foreign Commissar Molotov, twice last night displayed their cordiality publicly at the Bolshoi Theater.

Bevin and Molotov received an ovation when they appeared at the Bolshoi for a performance of the ballet "Cinderella." The commissar was host for the theater party. The orchestra played the three national anthems, and the three Foreign Ministers clasped hands twice, while the audience cheered heartily and applauded.

The audience, which included most of the Moscow diplomatic colony, got its first look at the visitors when they filed out just before the performance began and shook hands in the glare of spotlights turned on their flag-draped box. United by handclasps held high above their heads, the three smiled as the crowd applauded. Molotov, beaming with courtesy, held Byrnes's left hand in his right and clasped Bevin's right hand with his left. Byrnes and Bevin waved to the crowd with their free hands. The audience and foreign diplomats were quick to grasp the importance of this tableau of friendship presented in the theater box draped with the American, Soviet and British flags.

During the intermission, Molotov, Byrnes and Bevin strolled through the foyer, shaking hands with various other theater-goers.

Today President Truman's recommendations on the unification of the United States armed forces were displayed conspicuously in Moscow newspapers.

Stalin Host at Kremlin

MOSCOW, Dec. 24 (AP).—Generalissimo Stalin was host at an official dinner at the Kremlin tonight for Secretary of State Byrnes, Foreign Secretary Bevin and twenty other American and British guests. For Byrnes and Bevin it was the high point of their Moscow visit, which has been marked by friendliness surpassing the traditional Russian courtesy toward guests.

While it was Christmas Eve for a large part of the world, the date was not observed as such in the Soviet Union, where, following the old calendar, the Russian Orthodox Church celebrates the nativity on Jan. 7. At Spasso House, however, American Ambassador W. Averell Harriman planned an elaborate Christmas Eve party to take place after the Kremlin dinner.

Moscow Talks Nearing Success

Observers Say Good News May Be Expected —Atomic Bomb Secret Not Divulged.

GILMORE

Moscow, Dec. 24 (A. P.).—The end of the Big Three foreign ministers' conference is in sight, informed spokesmen said today, and good news may be expected. The informants stated that definite accomplishments would probably be announced simultaneously in Moscow, London and Washington.

The Big 3 Communique

By Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Dec. 24—The text of the communiqué on the Big Three Foreign Ministers' meeting, as broadcast by the Moscow radio tonight, follows:

The Conference of Foreign Ministers of the U.S.S.R., U. S. A. and Great Britain took the following decisions:

The Governments of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, Great Britain and the United States of America announce that they have reached an agreement and that they have approached the Governments of France and China with a request to join the agreement on the procedure of the preparation of peace treaties as stated below:

In the drawing up of the peace treaties with Italy, Rumania, Bulgaria, Hungary and Finland by the Council of Foreign Ministers, only those members of the Council will take part who are, or—in accordance with the agreement on the institution of the Council of Foreign Ministers passed at the Berlin Conference—are considered to be parties who have signed the conditions of surrender, unless or until the Council decides in accordance with this agreement to invite other members to take part in the Council with regard to questions in which they are directly concerned, i. e.:

(A) The conditions of a peace treaty with Italy are to be drawn up by the Foreign Ministers of Great Britain, U. S. A., U.S.S.R. and France.

(B) The conditions of a peace treaty with Rumania, Bulgaria and Hungary by the Foreign Ministers of the U.S.S.R., U. S. A. and Great Britain.

(C) The conditions of a peace treaty with Finland by the Foreign Ministers of U.S.S.R. and Great Britain.

The deputies of the Foreign Ministers will immediately resume their work in London on the basis of an agreement reached on questions that had been discussed at the first session of the Council of Foreign Ministers in London.

As soon as the preparation of all these drafts is completed, the Council will call a conference to discuss peace treaties with Italy, Rumania, Bulgaria, Hungary and Finland. The conference will consist of the five members of the Council of Foreign Ministers and also of all those members of the United Nations which took an active part in the war against enemy states in Europe with substantial military contingents, to wit: U. S. A., U.S.S.R., Great Britain, China, France, Australia, Belgium, White Russian Soviet Socialist Republic, Brazil, Greece, the Netherlands, India, Canada, New Zealand, Norway, Poland, Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, Czechoslovakia, Ethiopia, Yugoslavia and the South African Union. The conference will take place not later than May 1, 1946.

After the conference has concluded its work and its recommendations have been examined, the states which had signed the armistice terms with Italy, Rumania, Bulgaria, Hungary and Finland, and France—which is considered as one of the Allied signatory states as far as the peace treaty is concerned—will draw up, respectively, the final texts of peace treaties.

The final texts of the respective peace treaties thus drawn up will be signed by the representatives of the states represented at the conference and in a state of war with the respective enemy state. The texts of the respective peace treaties will then be submitted to other United Nations in a state of war against the respective enemy state.

The peace treaties will come into force immediately after their ratifications by Allied States who had signed the respective armistice terms and also by France (which is considered as one of them as far as Italy is concerned). The peace treaties are also subject to ratification by the respective enemy states.

The talks on other questions continue in a friendly spirit. There is hope that a communiqué embracing the work of the conference will be issued in one or two days.

man, British Prime Minister Attlee and Canadian Prime Minister MacKenzie King.

Anglo-American spokesmen say they will avoid discussion of what should be done with the bomb and concentrate discussion on constructive uses of atomic energy, with regulation of its destructive uses.

Domination Sought

However, other delegates have made it clear that once the atom is up for discussion, they will air all their views on its place in international society.

Several smaller powers have served notice they will continue their battle against preponderance of the "Big Five" in UNO.

The assembly also must pick the exact location of UNO's permanent home. The Preparatory Commission decided only that it should be on the East Coast of the United States. An interim committee will visit the United States and narrow the candidates down to a maximum of six cities, from which the assembly will choose one.

STORM LASHES ENGLAND

Thousands of Holiday Travelers Stranded on South Coast

LONDON, Dec. 24 (AP)—A week-old storm increased in fury over the English Channel today, driving many ships to cover and stranding thousands of Christmas holiday travelers. Torrential rains and hail, blown by a sixty-mile wind, lashed the coastal areas.

Mountainous waves breached many seawalls in English ports and drove mines into busy shipping lanes, or beached them dangerously near waterfront buildings.

British Coast Guard crews and mine disposal squads worked throughout the night, while other workmen rushed repairs to the seawalls to prevent the flooding of several towns.

There was little prospect for an early resumption of traffic from the Continent where British troops and furloughed Americans are stranded.

LONDON, Dec. 24—Mayor La Guardia of New York played long-distance Santa Claus to a 7-year-old Lancashire lass today. Her Christmas stocking bulged with a beautiful doll, unobtainable in England this year.

When Allison Isabel Spratt, St. Helen's, Lancashire, told her mother that the one thing she wanted most for Christmas was a doll, Mrs. Spratt sat down and wrote the only man in the United States whose name and address she could remember, and explained her plight.

Mayor La Guardia put the doll aboard a Pan-American Clipper in New York and it arrived at Hurn Airport, Bournemouth, Sunday night. The airways staff in London saw to it that it was sent by train to St. Helens in time to be placed in the Christmas stocking.

Finland's Banks To Be Nationalized

London, Dec. 24 (A. P.).—The Helsinki radio said today that the Finnish Parliament has voted to nationalize Finland's banks.

the soldiers themselves, such as canned turkey in Chungking or beer (weak beer) on the edge of New Guinea's steaming jungles.

Hundreds of English families will share their meager Christmas fare with GI's "sweating out" the long wait for passage home.

Symbol Of Drabness

German housewives have begged a few luxuries from Allied soldiers to supplement their families' hand-to-mouth existence. In a Frankfurt railroad station, one large tree, devoid of ornament, stands as a symbol of the drabness of Christmas in Germany.

By contrast, liberated Brussels turned a public square into a forest of Christmas trees with bright flowers, while in Copenhagen great torches will flare tonight over the graves of patriots killed by the Germans.

In Paris, children whose parents still can't buy new shoes for them pressed their noses against show windows displaying toy jeeps costing $175 each and expensive dolls.

Rome Stores Blacked Out

Rome stores, blacked out by power shortage, still displayed an abundance of cheeses, nuts and confections, at which the average working man making $2 a day could only look.

Blitzed British City Carries On Despite Shortages

COVENTRY, England, Dec. 24 (AP).—There is a Christmas spirit in Coventry, even though Christmas decorations cannot be obtained and there is not much left to decorate.

Broadgate Square, heart of the city's repaired and makeshift shopping district, boasts the main decoration, a forty-foot Christmas tree with colored lights which spell out "Wishing All a Merry Christmas."

The square mile of shops which were destroyed or damaged by the blitz have been partially restored. Some shops are operating in old army huts, and some are makeshift shacks of corrugated sheeting.

Many people have been able to buy geese and ducks, and it is a picture out of Dickens these last few days to see a man hurrying home with the head of a goose wagging out behind him. There are no paper sacks, so the approved method is to lash the bird's feet together and carry the string over the shoulder.

France Is Ready To Recognize Tito

Paris, Dec. 24 (A. P.).—The French Government has decided to recognize Marshal Tito's Yugoslav regime, but formal recognition has not yet been extended, the Ministry of Information said today. How soon this would be done was not disclosed.

France Expected To Devaluate Franc

Paris, Dec. 24 (AP)—Foreigners in France were besieged with black-market money-exchange offers today as word spread that the Cabinet voted last night to devaluate the franc.

Action yesterday of the Finance Committee of the Constituent Assembly in ratifying the Bretton Woods monetary stabilization agreement cleared the way for devaluation.

Both the Constituent Assembly and the Paris Bourse are closed for the holidays through Tuesday. Prior to reopening Wednesday, a special edition of the Government's official journal is expected to announce the devaluation and set new rates at least double the present exchange of 50 francs to the dollar and 200 to the pound sterling, informed sources said.

those who died of infectious disease." Near by was a cardboard angel proclaiming "Merry Christmas—Peace on earth, good will toward men."

Christmas in Berlin—once a proud, gay capital echoing with merriment and goose-stepping Nazi legions on parade—is a sordid, depressing sight of incredible ruins, of shivering, sunken-eyed people thankful for peace but overwhelmed with the emptiness of the future.

From the Tiergarten comes a weary procession of carts loaded with twigs and branches for firewood. The carts are pulled by old men and women who pause by the wayside to rest and eat dinner—black bread covered with lard.

Long lines of pale, thinly clad children, many crippled in bombing raids, wait excitedly to attend a Santa Claus party in the Magistrat Building. Each will get a toy, some warmer clothing and a cookie with a trace of sugar. The city's "Save Our Children" campaign was at least this much of a success.

Children get their best toys and food at various Christmas parties given by American troops.

On the Christmas markets, there are such items as women's pocketbooks made from remnants of clothing or imitation leather pasted together. A special attraction is a hot dog "Heisse Wiener" filled with sawdust-like meat.

Only very small quantities of meat, sugar and chocolate are on the black market, and they bring tremendous prices.

Stage Set For Formal Opening Of UNO In Jan.

London, Dec. 24 (AP)—All preparations had been completed today for the formal opening early next year of the United Nations Organization, blue printed by the San Francisco Conference and embodying the world's hopes for peace.

With adjournment of the preparatory commission yesterday, the path was cleared for official opening of UNO when its first general assembly convenes here January 10. The assembly will have elected nonpermanent members of the Security Council, Economic and Social Council, Trusteeship Council and a secretary general before UNO can get into full swing.

Difficult Problems

Among the several tough political issues to come before the first meeting will be the atomic bomb. American and British representatives here say they still intend to put before the assembly plans for an international commission along lines suggested by President Tru-

La Guardia Plays Santa To Lass, 7, in England

Santa Lean, Pack Thin To Most Of The World

London, Dec. 24 (AP)—A lean Santa totes a thin pack for most of the world on this first peacetime Christmas in six years.

In conquered and liberated countries, as well as in the shattered remnants of the third Reich, there is not food enough for a hearty Yuletide feast, and the children's Christmas stockings literally gape at toes and heels.

American service men, separated from their families on another Christmas, are filling their now familiar role of foster Santa wherever they can—for instance, they are entertaining 20,000 youngsters in Vienna tomorrow with food deducted from their own rations.

In Belgrade And Cairo

War orphans in Belgrade and Cairo and the children of released internees in Singapore also will share the Yanks' bounty—turkey and sweets, movies and laughter.

Some sort of treat is in store for Nuernberg's toy market, once the world center for the industry, has shrunk to a handful of shabby shops.

Even in Portugal, neutral throughout the war, poultry prices stood at five times the peacetime level. However, a glass of red wine or an attractive toy could be bought for half a cent.

Getting Along Somehow

But somehow people who had been through the war were getting along—thankful the soldiers were home and the bombers grounded this Christmas Eve.

UNRRA distributed 100,000 Christmas packages in cold, disease-ridden Poland. Socks came from the United States for nearly every Hollander, and British children donated 57 cases of toys to Danish youngsters.

TROOP PROTEST DROPPED

British Soldiers Persuaded to Board Ship for Middle East

LIVERPOOL, England, Dec. 24 (AP)—Three hundred British soldiers who walked off the troopship Orion this morning in protest against living conditions aboard were induced to return this afternoon, and the ship sailed for the Middle East on schedule.

Several Tommies were injured in a skirmish between the rebelling soldiers and military police before high Army officials succeeded in persuading the troops to get back on board.

Last night 700 soldiers walked off but were forced to return. Some started ashore again this morning and when police tried again to detain them comrades scrambled down to help.

The soldiers said the ship was overcrowded, that food was bad and conditions insanitary. They were headed for the Middle East to relieve other forces due for leave or demobilization.

Red Cross Worker Killed In France

Paris, Dec. 24 (AP)—Miss Henrietta Jean Cunnningham, of Sherman Oaks, Cal., American Red Cross worker at the Le Havre port of embarkation, was killed in a jeep accident December 12, the Red Cross said today.

Miss Cunningham, staff assistant overseas since August, was one of four passenger in the jeep. The accident occurred 40 miles outside Paris. Others in the jeep were not seriously injured.

HESS INTERESTED IN RELIGION NOW

Nuernberg, Dec. 24 (A. P.).—Rudolph Hess, one of the four war crimes defendants who had professed no attachment for any Christian denomination, is beginning to show interest in religion. As preparations were completed for Christmas services in the grim, gray stone jail, Hess indicated to chaplains that he was interested, but had held back until now because he felt he would be subject to criticism if he began attending religious services after going on trial for his life.

The prisoners will dine tomorrow on ordinary prisoner-of-war fare served in G. I. mess kits. They will not be allowed to receive packages.

A field organ has been set up in the chapel cell where Capt. Henry Gerecke, a chaplain from St. Louis, will conduct Lutheran services tonight for thirteen of the Nazi defendants professing that faith. Some of the Nazis informed the chaplain they were not interested in singing carols.

Capt. Sixtus R. O'Connor of Oxford, N. Y., will say mass tomorrow and Wednesday morning for the three Nazi defendants who are Catholics: Franz von Papen, Hans Frank and Arthur Seyss-Inquart.

GEN. PATTON BURIED WITH HIS SOLDIERS

His Grave Is Next to Private —Wreaths Hon[illegible] Him as Leader and Liberator

R. O'REGAN

By The Associated Press.

LUXEMBOURG, Dec. 24 (AP)—Gen. George S. Patton Jr. was laid to rest this Christmas Eve in the American Military Cemetery near here, his grave no different from 6,000 others that mark the final resting places of soldiers from his own beloved Third Army.

Generals of Allied nations stood stiffly at attention in the rain as the body of the fallen warrior was placed beside that of an American private.

A plain white cross was placed above the general's grave—just like 6,000 other white crosses that dot the gently sloping hillside. These were the graves of Third Army men who fell just a year ago as General Patton's mighty armored columns smashed northward in the bitter Battle of the Bulge in the Ardennes.

In the same fog and rain the half tracks and armored cars moved once again, slowly this time. One of them bore a silver casket covered with the American flag.

Soldiers who fought under General Patton paid their commander as great a tribute as any of the many governments who honored him—an evergreen wreath with the simple inscription: "To Our Leader."

The train bearing the general's body arrived before dawn. In a second special train was Mrs. Patton, and with her the eleven generals and two colonels who served as pallbearers.

Picturesque old Luxembourg city was in mourning. Flags at half staff drooped in the melancholy rain.

At 9:15 A. M. the doors of the funeral car were opened and ten soldiers, all privates in the Third Army, lifted the casket to the platform and placed it on a halftrack. Mrs. Patton and her brother, Frederick Ayer, of Boston, Mass., followed it. She looked worn and pale as she slowly walked behind the casket.

Behind the widow walked the generals, and the military and diplomatic representatives of Russia, Britain, France, Holland, Belgium, Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia and Italy.

When the cortege was formed in the square fronting the station, the strains of the American national anthem broke the solemn silence. Then came the rattling thunder of an artillery salute.

Through the haze that hung like a pall over the scene the flags and brilliant emblems of America's armies and regiments gleamed.

Over four winding miles of cobbled streets the cortege moved, across the Petrusse River and into the wooded hills. Along the route the people of Luxembourg stood bare headed in mute tribute to the dead warrior.

American military police on motorcycles led the procession followed by units of the United States Second and 42nd Cavalry squadrons, a French squadron and then some more American cavalry from Metz, all mechanized and armored—General Patton's type of army.

Behind the pallbearers and family came a car bearing a representative of President Truman. Prince Felix of Luxembourg and his son, Prince John, were in the next car. The cortege spread over two miles.

The procession moved over the crest of the hill and through a white painted gate. Stretching below was a long sweep of greensward patterned with rows of white crosses.

At the end of one row stood a canopy banked with flowers. The cards and inscriptions were a roll call of famous names and places, united in final homage to a great soldier.

Honored by All

The governments of Europe had honored him, recalling the battlefield victories of his mighty Third Army. One inscription, written in French, said "We owe our freedom to you."

When the casket had been placed on beams over the open grave, the chaplain, Col. Edwin Randolph Carter Jr., of Richmond, Va., intoned the words of General Patton's favorite 63d Pslam. As he spoke, the flag was lifted from the casket and the soldiers held it a few inches above the silver top.

Then, with the reading of The Lord's Prayer, the assembled military men bared their heads. A squad of Alpine Chasseurs, in whose company General Patton had been an honorary master sergeant, snapped rifles to attention. With the ending of the prayer, the soldiers folded the flag and handed it to Mrs. Patton.

At a curt command, the rolling cadence of three rifle volleys echoed away into the hills.

A bugle sounded taps for the fallen leader and the military attendants once again snapped to attention. The Russian, British and French generals, their great-coats gleaming with medals, held themselves stiffly in salute until Mrs. Patton turned to leave.

Following them came the military and diplomatic representatives of Russia, Great Britain, France, the Netherlands, Belgium, Yugoslavia, Czecho-Slovakia and Italy. Generals represented the Soviet Union, Great Britain and France.

When the cortege was formed in the square fronting the station, the clear, swelling strains of "The Star-Spangled Banner" broke the silence. An artillery salute boomed somewhere in the gloomy distance. The column moved on.

It was a gray-black day of thick haze, with the many flags lending what color the scene held.

Throngs Line Streets.

For more than four miles through the winding, cobbled streets of Luxembourg, across the Petrusse River and into the forested hills, the route was lined with people. Old men stood bareheaded in the rain. Children, as rigid as statues, watched with wide and staring eyes.

American motorcycle police led the procession. They were followed by units of the United States Second and Forty-second Cavalry squadrons, a French squadron and then some American cavalry from Metz, all mechanized and armored—Patton's type of an army. Behind the pallbearers and the family was a car bearing the representative of President Truman. His Royal Highness, Gen. Prince Felix of Luxembourg, and his son, Prince John, were in the next car.

The cortege spread over two miles. It climbed a long hill and entered a pine forest. The trees were dripping rain. The fog crept low across the hilltops.

At the top of the hill, the half tracks turned right through a white painted gate. Spread below them was a gentle slope sweeping upward from a tiny valley fringed with thick black woods. The lawn was like a green jewel on which white crosses marking graves of Patton's Third Army troops stood row on row.

At the end of one row of crosses a canopy had been erected. Flowers were banked high on three sides. The cards and inscriptions were a roll call of famous names and places, telling the story of a great soldier. Governments had honored him. Cities in all parts of Europe had sent tribute to "Our Honorary Citizen." His battlefield victories were recalled in the names of some of the tributes—Gela, Avranches and Metz.

"To Our Leader."

But these were not all. A simple wreath of evergreens had been sent by some American soldiers and said simply: "To Our Leader."

Another, written in French, said: "We Owe Our Freedom to You." The tribute from Avranches recalled the Normandy village, where Patton and his Third Army broke through the breach fashioned by the United States First Army and overran and liberated France. The floral piece from Metz recalled that Patton was the first general in more than a thousand years to storm and capture that incredible strong city frontally.

The chaplain, Col. Edwin Royall Carter Jr., of Richmond, Va., read from the Bible:

"In the midst of life, we are in death."

As he intoned the words, the flag was lifted from the casket. Then he began reciting the Lord's Prayer.

A squad of Alpine chasseurs in whose company Patton had been an honorary master sergeant, snapped their rifles to attention. When the last of the prayer had been said, the soldiers folded the flag and handed it to Mrs. Patton.

A curt command sounded outside the canopy: "Half left—aim—fire." Three volleys splintered the silence.

Bugle Sounds Taps.

And then the notes of a bugle rang in the air. This was taps for Gen. Patton, the soldiers' command for sleep.

Again the military attendants snapped to attention. The Russian, British and French generals, their great coats gleaming with medals, held themselves in salute until Mrs. Patton turned to leave.

As soon as the space beneath the canopy was empty, the Bishop of Luxembourg in his purple robe entered. For a moment, he stood looking intently at the casket. Then he bowed his head and his lips moved in prayer.

When he left, three men entered. They wore no hats and their clothing was marked weirdly with parallel black and white stripes. These were Luxembourgers who had been held in a German prison camp until Patton's army liberated them.

After this, all the thousands of people who had entered the cemetery filed in or near the canopy, paying a last homage to the general.

Honorary Pallbearers.

Lieut.-Gen. Joseph Pierre Koenig, commander of French forces in Germany, came by special train, accompanied by Col. De la Bretasche. Lieut.-Gen. Thomas represented Britain.

Marshal Georgi K. Zhukov, assistant commander in chief of the Red Army, reached Luxembourg last night to attend the funeral.

Honorary pallbearers were Lieut.-Gen. John C. H. Lee, American deputy commander in Europe; Lieut.-Gen. Lucian K. Truscott, commander of the Third Army; Lieut.-Gen. J. C. Cannon of the United States Air Forces in Europe; Major-Gen. E. S. Hughes, Major-Gen. A. W. Kenner, Brig.-Gen. Walter J. Muller, Brig.-Gen. Roy T. Maddix, Brig.-Gen. John M. Williams, Major-Gen. R. M. Littlejohn, Major-Gen. Leven Allen, Col. T. H. Nixon and Col. Paul D. Harkins.

Crowds of Luxembourgers had gathered around the station and lined the streets leading east from the city by the murky, rain-spattered daybreak to pay last tribute to the commander they had made an honorary citizen.

Special military police from Metz were on duty—brought up last night from France because all United States military installations have been moved out of little Luxembourg.

With Prince Felix were the Prime Minister and members of the Cabinet, the chairman of the House of Representatives, the Bishop of Luxembourg and representatives of the Council of State, the Court of Justice and officials of the City of Luxembourg.

Foreign Representatives

Lieut. Gen. Joseph Pierre Koenig, commander of French forces in Germany, came by special train, accompanied by Col. De la Bretasche.

Lieut. Gen. Thomas represented Britain, and the Russians were represented by Lieutenant General Lukianchenko and three high-ranking attachés.

Patton Buried in Luxembourg With Heroes of His Third Army

Armored Columns Escort General's Body to U. S. Cemetery in Cold Rain—High Military Men Pay Tribute.

Luxembourg, Dec. 24 (A. P.).—Gen. George S. Patton Jr. was buried today beside Pvt. John Prozgwara of Detroit, a member of his beloved Third Army who helped the famous commander forge one of the greatest victories of his brilliant career in stamping out the Ardennes bulge.

The grave was near this capital of the little Duchy of Luxembourg among the resting places of 6,000 other American troops who died a year ago in driving back Germany's last bid for victory.

Patton died Friday of lung and heart complications which developed after a motor accident December 9, in which the General was paralyzed from the shoulders down and suffered a broken neck.

The troops among whom he was lain were buried last December on just such a day as this—fog and lowering clouds, in biting rain, and while a wind moaned a requiem in the forest. Armored columns like the ones Patton dispatched last Christmas Eve to compress the German bulge wound through the hills and forest from Luxembourg city again today.

Patton's body arrived on a special train from Heidelberg before dawn. A second special train followed, bringing Mrs. Patton and the ten generals and two colonels who acted as pallbearers.

Promptly at 9:15 A. M., the doors of the funeral car were opened, and ten soldiers, all privates of the Third Army, lifted the casket onto the platform, carried it through the station and placed it on a half track.

Wife Walks Behind Casket.

Mrs. Patton and her brother followed. She looked tired and was pale. She walked behind the casket with her face tilted upward. Her chin was firm. She kept her eyes on the soldiers. Behind her were the generals.

Chungking, Dec. 24 (A. P.).—Gen. George C. Marshall, wartime Chief of Staff, said in a statement here that news of

Pope Calls Upon Statesmen To End Hate

Vatican City, Dec. 24 (AP)—Pope Pieus XII in a world broadcast today urged statesmen to banish "hate, vengeance" and "dishonest competition" from the political and economic conferences restoring world peace.

The Pontiff spoke a day after he named 32 new cardinals including four from the United States, six from Latin America and one each from Canada, China and Australia. The membership of the Sacred College of Cardinals after the secret consistory on February 18 will reduce the traditionally overwhelming Italian majority to 40 per cent.

Those From The U.S.

New United States cardinals will be Archbishop Francis J. Spellman, of New York, who is prominently mentioned as a possible appointee as secretary of state of the Holy See; Archbishop Samuel A. Stritch, of Chicago; Archbishop Edward Mooney, of Detroit, and Archbishop John J. Glennon, of St. Louis.

The appointed raised the United States total to five for the first time. Dennis Cardinal Dougherty, of Philadelphia, already is a member of the College.

The Pope spoke to the cardinals, replying to their traditional Christmas greetings. He said sadly that the hatred and devastation of the war would long remain impressed upon the world.

Stresses Gigantic Task

He said statesmen probably never before faced such a gigantic task "to restore to humanity after three years of global war, economic catastrophe and boundless impoverishment—order, peace and prosperity."

Commenting on the creation of the new cardinals, the Pope said that the many nationalities included illustrated the universality of the Catholic Church.

The Pope condemned totalitarianism as a source of war and appealed to the world to return to the principles of Christianity which he declared were practicable, even in relations between states.

Discusses Repatriation

Notin gthat many prisoners of war still were not repatirated, despite the end of the war, the Pontiff declared that repatiration was being held up in some cases without just cause.

He spoke for 37 minutes, starting at 10 A.M. (5 A.M., Eastern standard time).

"Totalitarianism is incompatible with true and sane democracy," the Pope said. "Like a dangerous germ, it poisons the community of nations and renders it incauable of guaranteeing the safety of individual peoples. It represents a continued danger of war."

In order to establish a basis of collaboration among nations, the Pope said it was necessary that an attempt "to create the omnipotency of money be abandoned everywhere."

Cites The Law Of God

He urged a return to Christian principles, saying:

"Let it not be said that this is not a realistic policy. Experience should have taugh to everyone that experience of the law of God is the most real and concrete of all policies."

The Pope appealed for humane treatment of political prisoners who "cannot be accused of any criminal activity beyond their political past."

This was the first time in six years that Christmas was being celebrated at peace—but not at a real peace, he said.

College Now At Full Strength

He expressed satisfaction that his new appointments had brought the College of Cardinals up to its full strength of 70, and said he regretted that other churchmen, however worthy, could not be appointed cardinals because of the traditional limit. He noted that the elevation of 32 cardinals would create a precedent for the number appointed at one time.

"The Catholic Church is above nationalities—it is the mother of all nations and all peoples," he said.

The church, he continued, radiated a unifying force to a torn and shattered humanity and rebuffed every attempt to dismember it or make it a slave of any one people.

200 Prelates Attend

The traditional Christmas reception for cardinals and members of the Papal Court took place in the Vatican Consistorial Hall. About 200 prelates, including eighteen cardinals, attended along with three cardinals-designate.

The walls of the great hall were hung with red damask. The Pope, in white robes, sat erect on a gilded throne facing two microphones.

He looked less pale than usual and spoke in firm tones. No outsiders were admitted to the Vatican during the ceremony. Special detachments of Swiss guards stood at entrances to the papal city. Telephone communications with the Vatican were suspended while the Pope was speaking.

Represented First Time

Detroit and St. Louis will be represented in the college for the first time. St. Louis will be the westernmost United States city ever to receive a cardinalate.

The new appointments broke with the tradition that the majority of the college be Italians. Only four of the 32 new cardinals are Italians, thus bringing the total Italian membership of the 70-man college to only 28.

Latin America, which at present has one cardinal, will be represented by seven in the new college. Canada, which now has one, will be represented by two.

Youngest Is Only 46

An unusual aspect of the Pope's appointments was the comparative youth of some of the new members. The youngest, Archbishop Bernard Griffin, of Westminster, England, is only 46.

Among the new cardinals were one from Australia and one from Portuguese Africa. This will mean that for the first time in history all six continents will be represented in the college. A precedent was also shattered by the naming of a Chinese prelate. Msgr. Tomasso Tien, titular Bishop of Ruspe and apostolic vicar of Tsingtao, will be the first non-Caucasian cardinal.

Text of Pope Pius' Address Outlining the Fundamentals for Effectuating Peace on Earth

VATICAN CITY, Dec. 24 (AP)—Following is the officially translated text of the Christmas Eve allocution by Pope Pius XII to the College of Cardinals:

In the course of the last six years, venerable brethren and beloved sons, as this eve of our Lord's nativity came around, we must all have felt keenly the sad contradiction between the spirit of holy joy and deep brotherly union in the service of God suggested by the beautiful Christmas season, and the lamentable spirit of vengeance and spite that prevailed throughout the world; between the sweet harmony of the "Gloria in excelsis Deo et in terra pax hominibus" and the discordant cries of hate amid the thunder of fratricidal war; between the suffused light of Bethlehem and the sinister glare of destructive fires; between the resplendent innocence radiating from the features of the heaven-sent Child and the mark of Cain which will long remain impressed on the countenance of our century.

What a sigh of relief, then, arose from all our hearts, as we heard that the gory conflict had ended, first in Europe, then in Asia! What fervent prayers had risen, during the long years of strife, to the throne of God, imploring Him to shorten the days of affliction and stay the hands of those angels who hold the vials of God's wrath for the sins of men.

Now, by the mercy of God, the human family will begin once more to celebrate a Christmas without the terrors of war on land and sea and especially in the air any longer filling men's heart with deadly anguish. For this turn of events let us all give humble thanks to our omnipotent Lord.

Peace on earth? True peace? No: Only the "post-war period," to use a sad but very pregnant term! How long will it take to cure the material and moral disorder, to close up so many wounds!

But yesterday men were scattering destruction, disaster, misery over vast territories; and today, when they must rebuild, men but faintly realize how much perspicacity and foresight, how much rectitude and good-will must go to the task of bringing the world back from physical and spiritual devastation and ruin to law, order, and peace. So even this Christmas is still a time of expectancy, of hope and of prayer to the incarnate son of God, that he, "The king of peace * * * whose face all the earth desires to see close," (Antiphon I, First Vespers, Christmas Day) may give to the world his peace.

The Coming Consistory, Its Characteristic Features

As already announced, for the first time since God willed to raise us, in spite of our unworthiness, to the office of Supreme Pontiff, we shall address ourselves, if it be God's will, to the task of creating new members of the Sacred College. In our Christmas message last year, we referred to the grave and diverse difficulties which had, alas, prevented us up to then from filling the many vacancies which had sadly depleted the Roman Curia.

How happy, then, shall we be to see ourselves presently surrounded here by such a large number of Cardinals, who, for their outstanding virtue and signal merits, seemed to us especially worthy to be raised to the sacred purpose. It seems to us that this unusual event merits some special comment on our part.

As to the Number of New Cardinals

We shall note first of all that with this creation the Sacred College will be complete. You know that our predecessor of happy memory, Sixtus V, in his constitution of the "Postquam verus" of Dec. 3, 1586, when he had observed that in ancient times the Sacred College had been too small, and in more recent times too numerous, fixed the number of Cardinals at seventy, after the example of the seventy ancients of Israel (Exodus XIV: 1-9) and ordained in the strictest terms that this number should not be exceeded for any motive whatsoever, even the most urgent.

Undoubtedly the Roman pontiffs who succeeded him would not be bound by this provision, if they considered it opportune to increase or diminish the number. But there is no evidence that any of them ever departed from this law, which has had formal confirmation in Canon 231 of the Code of Canon Law. The Sacred College had its full complement of seventy Cardinals frequently enough in the Seventeenth and Eighteenth centuries, but never in the Nineteenth and, up to the present, never in the Twentieth.

To cite but one example, let us recall that Clement XI, in the secret consistory of May 17, 1706, wanted to create as many Cardinals—i.e. twenty—as were needed to fill up the number of seventy. Moreover, when one of the newly nominated Cardinals, Gabriel Filipucci, renounced the high dignity, Clement XI in the next consistory, on June 7 of the same year, while accepting the renunciation, immediately filled the vacancy by nominating Michaelangelo Conti, who was later to be his immediate successor, Innocent XIII.

We have decided to return to that ancient custom, which, while it brings the number of Cardinals in the Sacred College up to its full complement, respects at the same time the limit set by Sixtus V. We are sorry that respect for that limit has prevented us from including in this first creation not a few other prelates and religious, especially of the Roman Curia and clergy, who for their long service to the Holy See would also have been very worthy of the honor.

We have considered it all the more fitting not to go beyond the limit set, because there never yet has been created so large a number of Cardinals—thirty-two—in a single consistory. Up to now, the two largest creations were made under Popes Leo X and Pius VII, who each created thirty-one Cardinals in a single consistory: that is to say, Leo X created thirty-one; while Pius VII, after his return to Rome, turned his attention to the Sacred College which was much depleted by the sorrowful events of that period, and in the secret consistory of March 8, 1816, likewise created thirty-one; but he published only twenty of the nominations, reserving ten in petto.

As to Their Nationality

Another characteristic of this creation will be the variety of nations to which the future Cardinals belong; for we have been anxious that the greatest possible number of races and peoples should be represented, so that this creation may portray in a living manner the universality of the church. In this way, just as we have during the years of our pontificate seen congregate in the Eternal City, in spite of the war—or rather as a consequence of the war—men from every nation and from the remotest lands, so now that the World War is over we shall have the consolation—if it be God's will—of seeing grouped around us now members of the Sacred College from the four quarters of the earth.

Rome will thus be seen in its true light as the Eternal City, the universal city, the Caput Mundi, the city par excellence, the city of which all are citizens, the city which is the See of the Vicar of Christ, on which the gaze of the whole Catholic world is fixed; nor will Italy, the blessed land which holds this Rome of ours in her bosom, suffer any loss of prestige: rather will she be resplendent in the eyes of all peoples as sharing in this greatness and this universality.

The Supra-National Character of the Church

The Catholic Church, of which Rome is the center, is supra-national by its very nature. This has two implications, one negative and the other positive. The church is a mother—Sancta Mater Ecclesia—a true mother, mother of all nations and all peoples no less than of all men individually. And precisely because a mother, she does not and cannot belong exclusively to this or that people, nor even more to one than to others but equally to all.

Since she is the mother, she cannot be a stranger anywhere; she dwells, or at least should, because of her nature, dwell among all peoples. Moreover, while the mother with her husband and children form a family, the church, in virtue of a union incomparably more intimate, deeper and more perfect than is possible for the family, forms the mystical body of Christ. The church is then supra-national because it is an indivisible, universal whole.

30.24-32619

The Indivisible Unity Of the Church

The church is an indivisible whole because Christ, her head, is undivided and indivisible. Christ with his church is—in the profound words of St. Augustine—Totus Christus, the whole Christ. This wholeness of Christ, according to the saintly doctor of the church, means the indivisible unity of the head with the body "in plenitudine ecclesiae," in the fullness of the life of the church, which brings together all places and all periods. Firmly established on such solid foundations, the church, placed as she is in the center of the history of the whole human race, in the agitated and turbulent atmosphere of divergent energies and conflicting tendencies, is so far from being shaken—however much she be exposed to all forms of attacks on her indivisible integrity—that she actually diffuses from her own integral and coherent vitality ever new forces to heal and consolidate torn and divided mankind: forces of unifying divine grace, forces of the unifying spirit, for which all hunger, truths which are valid always and everywhere, ideals which are everywhere and always fresh.

From this it becomes clearer that a sacrilegious attack has been and is made against the Totus Christus, the whole Christ, while at the same time a dastardly blow has been struck against the unity of mankind, whenever an attempt has been, or is made to put the church, like a prisoner and slave, in the service of this or that particuiar people, to tie her up within the narrow confines of a single nation or on the other hand to ostracize her from any nation.

Such a mutilation of the church's integrity has entailed and entails for the peoples who are victims of it—to a degree proportionate to its duration—the lessening of their real welfare and of their full vitality—but it is not merely that the individualism of nations and states has in these last centuries striven to break up the integrity of the church, to weaken and hinder her unifying forces, those forces which nevertheless once had an essential part to play in the unification of western Europe.

A musty liberalism strove to create, without the church or in opposition to her, a unity built on lay culture and secularized humanism. Here and there—at once the result of its destructive force and the hostile reaction to it—totalitarianism supplanted it. In a word, what was the net result after a little more than a century of those strivings without—and often against—the church? Human liberty buried; forced organizations; a world which for brutality and barbarity, for its achievement of destruction and ruin, but above all for its tragic disunity and insecurity has never known an equal.

At a time of stress such as ours still is, the church, in her own interest and in that of mankind, should make every endeavor to use to the best advantage her undivided and indivisible integrity. She must be now more than ever supranational. This spirit must pervade and inspire her visible head, the Sacred College, all the activities of the Holy See, on which now more than ever there weigh grave responsibilities, not only for the present, but even more for the future. It is a question here of a spiritual factor, of having an accurate sense of the church's supranationalism, and not measuring or determining it according to mathematical proportions or strictly on the basis of statistics giving the nationality of individuals.

During the long periods when, by the disposition of Divine Providence, the Italian nation, to a greater extent than the others, gave the church her head and large numbers of collaborators in the central government of the Holy See, the church as a whole has always kept its supranational character intact. Indeed many factors contributed, precisely along this way, to preserve her from dangers which otherwise could easily have been more felt.

One might recall, to cite one example, the struggles for leadership of the national states of Europe and the great dynasties in past centuries. Ever since the reconsiliation of church and state by the Lateran pacts, the Italian clergy as a whole, without any prejudice to natural and legitimate love of their country, have faithfully continued to support and promote the supranational character of the church. We hope and pray that they—and especially the younger clergy in Italy and throughout the Catholic world—may continue to do so: in any case the delicacy of the present situation calls for special care in safeguarding that supranational character and indivisible unity of the church.

The Universality Of the Church

She is supranational because she extends the same love to all nations and peoples; she is also supranational, as we have already said, because nowhere is she a stranger. She lives and grows in all countries of the world, and they all contribute to her life and growth. There was a time when ecclesiastical life, in its visible manifestations, flourished especially in the countries of old Europe, from which it flowed, like a majestic river, to what could then be called the outer limits of the world; today it appears rather as a sharing of life and energy between all the members of the mystical body of Christ on earth.

Not a few regions in other continents have long ago outlived the phase of missionary formation in their ecclesiastical development; they are governed by their own hierarchy and give spiritual and material benefits to the universal church from which once they only received such benefits. Is there not revealed in this progressive enrichment of the supernatural and even natural life of mankind the true significance of the church's supranational character? She is not, because of this supranational character, placed aloft as though suspended in an inaccessible and intangible isolation above the nations; for just as Christ was in the midst of men, so too his church, in which he continues to live, is placed in the midst of the peoples.

As Christ assumed a real human nature, so too the church takes to herself the fullness of all that is genuinely human, wherever and however she finds it, and transforms it into a source of supernatural energy.

Thus ever more fully is verified in the church of today that phenomenon which St. Augustine praised in his "City of God": The church, he wrote, "recruits her citizens from all nations, and in every language assembles her community of pilgrims on earth; she is not anxious about diversities in customs, laws, institutions; she does not cut off or destroy any of these, but rather preserves and observes them. Even the differences in different nations she directs to the one common end of peace on earth, as long as they do not impede the worship of the one, supreme and true God."

Like a powerful lighthouse, the church, in her universal integrity, casts her beam of light over those dark days through which we pass. No less obscure were those in which the great doctor of Hippo saw the world which he loved so dearly begin to founder. That light was then his comfort and, as it shone out, he greeted, in a prophetic vision, the dawning of a happier day. His love for the church—it was no other than his love for Christ—was his consolation and his happiness.

God grant that all those who today, amid the sorrows and perils of their native land, endure suffering like those of Augustine, may, like him, find their solace and support in love of the church, of that great universal home which according to God's promise will last to the end of time.

For our part we desire to make that home ever more solid, ever more attractive to all, without exception. Hence we desire to leave nothing undone that may reflect outwardly the supranational character of the church because it is the expression of her love for Christ, whom she sees and serves in the rich variety of her members scattered throughout the whole world.

The Peace Structure

At an hour like this, in which we celebrate the birth of Him who came to reconcile men to God and to one another, we cannot let pass the opportunity of saying a word about the peace structure which the ruling classes in the State and in politics and economics have set themselves to erect. With an accumulation, hitherto perhaps never achieved, of experience, good-will, political insight and organizing talent, men have begun the preliminaries to the world peace settlement.

Never perhaps from the beginning of the world have statesmen found themselves faced with a task so gigantic and complex, because of the number, gravity and difficulty of the problems to be solved, so important for its effects in extent and in depth for good or for evil, as that of now restoring order, peace and prosperity to mankind after thirty years of world war, economic crises and incalculable destitution.

Exalted, formidable is the responsibility of those who set themselves to bring such a gigantic undertaking to a successful conclusion. It is not our intention to discuss the practical solutions that they may be able to apply to such thorny problems. We believe, however, that it belongs to our office, in continuation of our previous Christmas messages during the war, to indicate the fundamental moral prerequisites of a true and lasting peace; we shall reduce to three short considerations:

Three Fundamental Prerequisites for a True and Lasting Peace

1. The present hour calls imperiously for collaboration, good-will, reciprocal confidence in all peoples. The motives of hate, vengeance, rivalry, antagonism, unfair and dishonest competition must be kep out of political and economic debates and decisions. "Who can say," we may add, in the words of Sacred Scripture (Proverbs, XX, 9-10) "my heart is clean, I am pure from sin? Diverse weights and diverse measures, both are abominable before God." Anyone, then, who exacts the expiation of crime through the just punishment of criminals because of their misdeeds should take good care not to do himself what he denounces in others as misdeeds or crime. One who seeks reparations should base his claim on moral principles, respect for those inviolable natural rights which remain valid even for those who have surrendered unconditionally to the victor. One who asks for security in the future should not forget that its only true guarantee lies in one's own internal force—that is, in safeguarding the family, children, labor, in fraternal charity, the outlawing of all hate, all persecution, all unjust vexation of honest citizens, in loyal concord between State and State, between people and people.

2. To secure this, men must everywhere forego the artificial creation, through the power of wealth, of arbitrary censorship, onesided judgments and false assertions, of a so-called public opinion which sways the ideas and will of the electorate like reeds shaken by the wind. Let due heed be paid to the true and overwhelming majority of men, made up of those who live honestly and peacefully by their own labor in their own family circle, and who desire to do the will of God. In their eyes, disputes for more advantageous frontiers and the scramble for the treasure of the earth, even if not of necessity and a priori unjust in themselves, are at least always a dangerous venture which cannot be entered on without the risk of causing an accumulation of death and ruins. The vast majority of good fathers and mothers of families want to protect and safeguard the future of their own children against the pretensions of every policy of brute force against the arbitrary totalitarianism of the powerful state.

3. The force of the totalitarian state. The whole surface of the globe, reddened with the bloodshed in these terrible years, cries aloud the tyranny of such a state.

The fabric of peace would rest on a tottering and ever-threatening base if an end were not put to such totalitarianism, which lowers man to the state of a mere pawn in the game of politics, a cipher in economic calculations. With a stroke of the pen it changes the frontiers of states; by a peremptory decision it deprives a people's economy—always part of its life as a nation—of its natural outlets; with ill-concealed cruelty it, too, drives millions of men, hundreds of thousands of families, in the most squalid misery, from their homes and lands, tears them out by the roots and wrenches them from a civilization and culture which they had striven for generations to develop.

It also sets arbitrary bounds to the necessity and right of migration, and to the desire to colonize. All this constitutes a policy contrary to the dignity and welfare of the human race.

And yet by divine right it is not the will or the power of fortuitous and unstable vested interests, but man in the framework of the family and of society, who by his labor is lord of the world. Consequently this totalitarianism fails by what is the only measure of progress, namely the progressive creation of ever more ample and better conditions in public life to ensure that the family can evolve as an economic, juridic, moral and religious unit.

Within the confines of each particular nation as much as in the whole family of peoples, state totalitarianism is incompatible with a true and healthy democracy. Like a dangerous germ it infects the community of nations and renders it incapable of guaranteeing the security of individual peoples. It constitutes a cencinual menace of war.

The future peace structure aims at outlawing from the world every aggressive use of force, every war of aggression. Who could not greet such an intention enthusiastically, especially in its effective realization?

But if this is to be something more than a beautiful gesture, all oppression and all arbitrary action from within and without must be banned.

In the face of this accepted state of affairs, there remains but one solution: a return to God and to the order established by Him.

The more the veil is lifted from the origin and increase of those forces which brought about the war, the clearer it becomes that they were the heirs, the bearers and continuers of errors of which the essential element was the neglect, overthrow, denial and contempt of Christian thought and principles.

If, then, the root of the evil lies here, there is but one remedy: to go back to the order fixed by God also in relations between states and peoples; to go back to a real Christianity within the state and among states. And let it not be said that this is not realism in politics. Experience should have taught all that the policy guided by eternal truths and the laws of God is the most real and tangible of policies. Realistic politicians who think otherwise pile up only ruins.

The Prisoners of War And Political Prisoners

And now, lastly, this gaze, which has wandered, if only for a moment, over the present state of the world, must pause once again on the masses, still immense, of war prisoners. As we get ready to pass in quiet, interior joy and fervent prayer the holy feast of Christmas, which reaffirms and ennobles, with century-old and undiminished harmony, the bonds of the human family, and invites to the domestic hearth, as to a sacred rite, even those who habitually live long away from it, we remember with profound sorrow all those who, although the end of the war has been proclaimed, must this year again pass the beautiful season in a foreign land and feel, on the night of rejoicing and peace, the torment of their uncertain lot and of their separation from parents, wives, children, brothers, sisters, all their dear ones.

And while we wish to pay the tribute of just recognition and praise to those authorities and to those organizations and individuals who have striven to alleviate and to abbreviate their sorrowful condition, we cannot conceal the pain we felt when, in addition to the sufferings inevitably accruing from the war, we heard of others which were almost on purpose inflicted on prisoners and deported people; when, in some instances, we saw their captivity prolonged without reasonable cause; when the yoke of imprisonment, of itself oppressive, was aggravated by hard and unjustified labor, or when in unconscionable disregard for standards set up by international conventions and by the still more sacred standards of Christian and civil conscience, they were refused in an inhuman way the treatment due to the vanquished.

To these children, still held in prison, may our Father's message be carried on the wings of the Christmas angels. May they receive and be comforted by our wish—shared by all who cherish the sense of man's brotherhood—to see them regularly and speedily restored to their anxious families and to their normal peacetime occupations. And we are certain that we voice the sentiments of all right-thinking men when we extend that wish to include those political prisoners, men, women and youths, at times exposed to dire sufferings, against whom no accusation of crime or violation of the law can be brought, but, at most, only their past political views.

We shall include with affectionate solicitude also those missionaries and civilians in the Far East who in consequence of recent grave events are living in affliction and danger. There is an obvious natural obligation that these unfortunate victims be treated in a humane manner: Indeed, we consider that the much-desired pacification and concord among peoples could not be better initiated than by their liberation and as far as possible by their fair, proper and equitable rehabilitation.

With such sentiments and wishes on our lips and in our heart, we ask our Divine Saviour to bestow on you, venerable brethren and beloved sons, and on all our dear sons and daughters scattered over the earth, an abundance of His graces, of which the token is this apostolic benediction which with all our heart we impart to you.

U. S.-Greek Air Agreement

ATHENS, Dec. 24 (AP).—A preliminary sixty-day air agreement was signed by Greece and the United States today providing for transportation of passengers and mail between New York and Athens via London and Paris.

Justice Jackson, Son Arrive In Jerusalem

Jerusalem, Dec. 24 (AP)—Justice Robert H. Jackson, chief United States prosecutor at the Nuernberg war crimes trial, arrived today from Europe accompanied by his son and six othre persons.

Jackson will spend Christmas in Government House with the high commissioner and will attend midnight mass at the Church of St. Catherine's in Bethlehem. He also will attend a carol service in he courtyard of the Church of the Nativity.

Veterans Attend Jerusalem Ceremony

Jerusalem, Dec. 24 (AP)—British military authorities have arranged for as many service men and women as possible to witness the Christmas ceremonies in Bethlehem on this, the first peacetime celebration of the birth of the Prince of Peace in six years.

Hundreds of service personnel will make the pilgrimage to Bethlehem and other hundreds will take part in services elsewhere in Palestine.

Few Yanks There Now

Missing this year are the hundreds of American army personnel who last year were flown to Palestine from farflung European battlefronts to witness the ceremonies. Only a handful of Americans are now in the area.

Christmas Eve ceremonies are scheduled to begin before noon today at the famous Jaffa Gate in the walls of the old city of Jerusalem. From there a procession of automobiles and mounted escort will move down the five-mile route to Bethlehem, along the road which Mary and Joseph traveled.

At the site of Rachel's tomb the procession will be met by the mayor of Bethlehem and other dignitaries. The pilgrims will then proceed into Bethlehem where crowds will have gathered in Manger Square to witness the entry of a Latin prelate with his priests and acolytes into the Church of the Nativity.

Masses will be read in the grotto of the Nativity every half hour, from noon today until 4 P.M. tomorrow. Today's religious ceremonies reach their climax at midnight with the re-enactment of the Nativity.

Future Of Italian PW's Is Discussed

Capetown, Dec. 24 (AP)—The future of Italian prisoners of war, many of whom wish to remain in South Africa, is the subject of widespread discussion in Capetown newspapers. Farmers, particularly grape growers in Cape Province, want to retain the Italians and at least 5,000 have said they would like to stay.

The Government is considering the advisability of allowing a number of selected prisoners to settle here and defense headquarters has been instructed to ask all PW camp commandants to obtain reports from employers on the prisoners' work, general deportment and capabilities.

Anzacs Jump Ship, Drink Town Dry

Cape Town, Dec. 24 (AP)—Australian and New Zealand soldiers, indignant at not being allowed ashore at Cape Town after the long voyage from England, invaded tugs lying alongside the ships and went ashore.

The men formed up into orderly parties and marched into the city, where they were given a great welcome.

The soldiers spent thousands of pounds in Cape Town shops and drank the city dry of beer by midnight.

The ship's departure was delayed a day.

See No Hope Of China Peace Before Jan. 1

CHUNGKING, Dec. 24 (AP).—Chinese still were killing one another in their strife-torn nation on this day before Christmas with no apparent hope of ending the conflict between the Communists and the central government before the new year.

The Communist New China Daily News demanded that General Marshall, new American special ambassador to China, set a time limit for withdrawal of United States forces and contended that any sort of American help to the recognized central government prior to a coalition agreement with the Communists would aggrevate "the current civil war."

Marshall, at his first new conference, declined to say when American troops might leave the country and remarked that "it will be some time before I can hope to get a fair picture of China."

Marshall said the United States "has a natural, intense interest in the Chinese people, their well-being and their relations with the peace of the world," and that he and his government were "very much interested" in the prospective meetings at which the Chinese governments and Communists will seek to resolve their differences.

There were indications, however, that such unity conferences would not even begin until after Jan. 1, although a Communist delegation has been here for several days and met briefly with Marshall Sunday.

Both sides reported continuing bloodshed at widely-separated places in China.

CHINESE REDS SAY U. S. MIGHT PROLONG WAR

Marshall Urged to Set a Time-limit on Yanks' Withdrawal.

CONFERS WITH BOTH SIDES

Suspicion of Truce Proposal Increases Doubt Civil Strife Will End Quickly.

Chungking, Dec. 24 (A. P.).—The Communist New China Daily News urged Gen. Marshall today to set a time limit on the disarmament of Japanese troops in China and the withdrawal of American forces.

The newspaper asserted that any American help to Chungking—military, political, financial or technical—before a coalition government was established would aggravate "the current civil war."

The statement of the newspaper, which has been speaking authoritatively for the communist side, came at a time when Marshall was plunging into his mission of peace for troubled China.

After conferring with Chiang Kai-shek, Premier T. V. Soong and three Communist leaders of the peace delegation assigned here, Marshall had admitted "it will be some time before I can hope to get a picture of China."

Doubt Early End to War.

This statement by President Truman's special envoy to China, coupled with Government suspicion of a Communist truce proposal, strengthened doubt that the civil war would be halted quickly. The Communists had suggested immediate cessation of hostilities and "freezing" of troops in present positions. This would mean Government forces would halt their movement into Manchuria.

Marshall said it was unnecessary to restate America's policy toward China, as President Truman had made that clear. He had conferred with Soong just before meeting newspaper men, and earlier with Chiang. Yesterday he had a "friendly exchange of views" with Gen. Chou En-lai, Deputy Chief of the Communist party and leader of the Communist delegation to the Political Council; Gen. Yeh Chien-ying, Chief of Staff of Communist armies, and Tung Pi-wu, Communist member of the Chinese delegation at the San Francisco UNO conference.

Seeking Information.

"I'm in the business of informing myself and not making announcements," he stated.

Marshall said both he and America were "very much interested" in the forthcoming Political Council at which China's multiple problems will be up for settlement.

"The United States Government and people have a natural, intense interest in the Chinese people," he continued. "That interest—almost affection—was overrun and brutalized by the Japanese armies."

Marshall has not yet considered making a visit to Yenan, the Communist capital, nor was he certain he would travel about China.

"I'll try to orient myself here," he stated, making no estimate how long he would remain in Chungking.

Battle of Words.

Meantime, the Government and the Communists continued their battle of words, each accusing the other of fighting or preparing to fight in North China. The Communists included an unconfirmed charge that Government troops used poison gas November 27 in an engagement near Paoting, Hopeh Province.

At his headquarters in Yenan, Gen. Chu Teh, Communist Commander in Chief, said he had withdrawn his forces from Paotow, Kweisui and Tatung, Inner Mongolia, as "an earnest gesture of the Communist desire for peace."

From Peiping, the Associated Press reported that Government liaison troops were moving toward four objectives in Manchuria.

Communists in "Peace Gesture"

CHUNGKING, Dec. 24 (AP)—At his headquarters in Yenan, Gen. Chu Teh, Communist commander in chief, said he had withdrawn his forces from Paotow and Kweisui, in Suiyuan and from Tatung, in Shansi, as "an earnest gesture of the Communist desire for peace."

CHINESE CELEBRATE DAY

Commemorate Release of Chiang Kai-shek at Sian in 1936

CHUNGKING, Tuesday, Dec. 25 (AP)—China is spending its happiest Christmas since 1936, with Chinese Christians throwing themselves more whole-heartedly into the observance than they did during the depressing years of war.

Christmas Day is being celebrated as National Recovery Day. It commemorates the release of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek at Sian in 1936, after his kidnapping and twelve days of detention by political opponents.

The day also is the anniversary of the rebellion in 1913 against Yuan Shih-kai's attempt to restore the monarchy.

SHANGHAI SOLDIERS SAD

Official Word Indicates That Return Will Be Delayed

SHANGHAI, Dec. 24 (AP)—Almost 10,000 GI's in the China theatre, most of them concentrated in Shanghai, contemplated Christmas with the saddening, official word that most will be delayed in going home because of President Truman's recent pronouncement of American policy in China.

Numerous church services, Christmas parties and dinners have been scheduled, however, in an effort to make the boys feel better about it.

There is no fresh turkey available for Army messes because the quartermaster couldn't find any birds in a widespread search of China.

All naval units will enjoy turkey dinners, however, provided from refrigerator ships. Two navy units will hold parties for Shanghai orphans.

HANKOW SUFFERS IN COLD

Lack of Coal Causes Stagnation of Trade and Spread of Ills

HANKOW, Dec. 24 (AP)—This once-flourishing treaty-port city, still without electricity or adequate tap water, is wide open to further epidemics such as the recent smallpox outbreak, which took 200 lives.

Lack of coal is one reason for the stagnation of public utilities and a general slowing down of normal activities. Coal from the Kailan mines in North China is reaching Shanghai, but so far Hankow has not benefited. In freezing weather, people are burning every available scrap of wood for fuel.

The city is as bad off or worse than it was when the Japanese pulled out months ago. Peanut-oil lamps still are the only source of light. Even in the best hotels tap water is available only for an hour or so in the morning and for the same period in the evening.

The sewage in open curb canals moves sluggishly because of the inadequate flow of water.

The two-month epidemic of smallpox, which ended early this month, took Chinese lives at such a rate that coffins piled up in the roadways waiting for burial. Two Americans also died.

New Korea News Agency Operating in U. S. Zone

Gets Associated Press News; System Is Independent

SEOUL, Korea, Dec. 24 (AP).—Press freedom made progress in the American-occupied section of Korea today with independent operation of a new Korean news agency, Hapdong-KP. The last two letters KP were added for English-speaking purposes, signifying Korea Pacific Press.

The new agency is beginning its independent operation with an arrangement to receive the news of The Associated Press by radio. It is using facilities of the old Japanese Domei agency, which were seized by the American military forces and have been operated under military government supervision. The American military government relinquished control of the system and turned it over to the all-Korean organization with approval of a recommendation that it be operated henceforth free of control by either the present military government or the new Korean government to be established.

The new agency comprises nine nowspapers and one radio station and is headed by Kim Sung Dong, publisher of "The Seoul Times."

Javanese Want Allies to Test Regime Support

Survey by Newspapermen Reveals That Soekarno Is Popular With People

By Vern Haugland

BATAVIA, Java, Dec. 24 (AP).—Leaders of the unrecognized Indonesian Republic are seeking today to have an American or Allied commission tour Java and learn for itself the temper of the people before any Allied military action is launched here.

Newspaper men who toured the island on just such a trip as the Indonesians want a commission to undertake drew the conclusion that President Soekarno and his Indonesian government are tremendously popular with the people and have the support of a wide variety of groups.

These conclusions were the result of the trip:

The Indonesian Army itself now has sufficient arms and is sufficiently disciplined to insure the safe delivery of all Japanese still to be rounded up by the British, and all former internees and war prisoners of the Japanese.

The Indnesian government is eager to perform this task as soon as possible.

Internees, after long imprisonment by the Japanese, now are confined to crowded camps, and while they are not ill-treated, there is insufficient food and medicine.

There is virtually no feeling among the Indonesian people against white people in general, and surprisingly little feeling even against the Dutch. The real feeling is against colonialism.

We who made the trip—I was the only American newspaper man in the party—were the first white men to enter the trouble areas of Java since the outbreaks. On the outward-bound trip we had an escort, but it was found to be unnecessary. We made the trip back without armed escort, and encountered no trouble anywhere.

We visited Japanese and Dutch internment camps, witnessed many mass meetings, inspected thousands of youths drilling with everything from machine guns to spears and dummy guns carved from wood.

The party left Batavia Dec. 16 in Soekarno's special train. Among those making the trip were Soekarno and his wife, Indonesian Premier Sutan Sjahrir, five members of Sjahrir's Cabinet, and Acting Governor Amir, of Sumatra, who was accompanied by other Sumatran leaders.

British Penetrate 5 Batavia Areas

Batavia, Java, Dec. 24 (AP)—British parachute troops have fought into five districts of Batavia where Indonesian attacks since Friday have caused eight deaths and nine other casualties, the Dutch news agency Aneta said today, quoting British headquarters.

The British communiqué said engineers demolished three houses in one section where considerable opposition was encountered. In another district, three bodies were found and armed men were encountered. Sniping was reported in another area. The British said firing died down in the Kramat district of the capital, scene of weekend violence.

75 Prisoners Taken

In clearing Bandoeng, 75 miles southeast of Batavia, the British took 75 prisoners. Organized sniping was reported continuing at Semarang, Central Java port. East of the town, 50 prisoners were taken. An infantry company with tanks cleared Oengaran, south of Semarang, where Indonesian concentrations were found.

British Indian troops searched without success in an East Java village north of Krian for a missing RAF man. They liberated nine Eurasians.

Indonesian headquarters at Medan in Sumatra were raided and three persons were held for questioning about recent kidnappings, Aneta said.

Difference on Recognition

AMSTERDAM, The Netherlands, Dec. 24 (AP)—Informants said today that Dr. Hubertus J. van Mook, acting Governor General of the Netherland East Indies, had differed with other Netherlands officials over the issue of recognition for the self-proclaimed "Indonesian Republic."

Dr. van Mook was said to have supported Indonesian demands for recognition of the Indonesian Nationalist Government, and to have told the Netherlands Cabinet during the past week that Indonesians would accept nothing less than such recognition. The Cabinet was said to have opposed the move because of fear that the Netherlands Parliament would turn it down.

Woman From San Francisco Helps Indonesians in Fight Against Dutch

Mrs. Manx Left U. S. to Become Hindu in Bali—Japanese Tortured Her, Believing She Was an American Spy

HAUGLAND

MALANG, Java., Dec. 22 (Delayed) (AP)—A tiny, dark-haired woman revealed herself today as the possessor of the mysterious voice with the American background which daily has been violently attacking the British and Netherlanders over the Indonesian Nationalist radio in eastern Java.

She said her name a decade ago was Mrs. Vannen Manx, that she left the United States for Bali in 1931, adopting the Hindu religion and the Balinese name of Ketoet-Tantri. Before the war she opened a hotel in Java which became famous as a Swiss-managed, Indonesian-operated mountain resort near Malang. It was destroyed during the Japanese occupation, and Mrs. Manx, suspected of being an American spy, was subjected to tortures, she said.

"I can't tell you where I work from, but I change stations frequently and I work closely with the youth leader Soetomo," she said.

"I was in Surabaya when the British bombed it. I saw hospitals crowded with innocent Indonesians. That was when I decided to go along with the Indonesians. I keep close watch on the Surabaya front. Once I went back through the lines. Friendly Gurkhas saved me from being shot.

"What do you think the British would do with me if they caught me?"

For some time she dwelt on her harrowing experiences as a prisoner of the Japanese, who she said regarded her as their principal enemy in Java and heaped cruelties upon her. Others who were interned with her have corroborated this part of her story, saying she received the most brutal treatment.

"They kept me locked in a room alone, often without clothes, for a year and a half," she said. "They made me walk the main street in Purwokerto stark naked, with a sign, 'American Spy,' and forced water down my throat until my stomach was distended terribly.

"Four times they fastened my arms behind me and hung me by them—again naked—until I fainted. They broke all my toes and fingers by hammering them.

"Nothing could convince them that I was not a spy."

The tiny woman recalled the days when she was hostess at her hotel to many world notables, writers, actors and other dignitaries. The hotel was destroyed after the Japanese captured Bali.

"I formerly lived in Hollywood but I don't like to talk about that part of my life," she said. "I could have had fame and fortune, but when a terrible accident took my husband and child, I fled to Bali from San Francisco in 1931.

"The first five years I spent in a sultan's palace, adopted as his daughter. I took a Balinese name, learned the language and customs and spent my spare time painting. Then I opened my hotel, not for the public but only for people I liked to be with, writers, artists, musicians and never the monopolistic Dutch."

Mrs. Marx prefers to be called Tantri. Acquaintances said that although she has an American passport she is a native of the Isle of Man and is a British subject. To British monitors of the outlawed Free Indonesia radio she is known only as the woman "who calls herself an American."

Her own dream, she says, is to go back to the United States for three months, taking with her several representative Indonesians to plead their cause at Washington.

"Then I want to return to Bali and my painting," she concluded.

M'ARTHUR HAILS PEACE

His Christmas Statement Gives Thanks It Has Come to World

TOKYO, Tuesday, Dec. 25 (AP)—Gen. Douglas MacArthur issued today the following statement:

"On this Christmas Day—the first in five years in which our guns have been silent—I join with all members of this command in thanking God for our deliverance from the death and destruction of war and pray that our merciful Lord will sustain us in our efforts to realize in its fullest the ideal which Christ brought to the world—peace on earth and to all men, good-will."

Army Probes Fatal Fire

Sixth Army Headquarters, Kyoto, Dec. 24 (AP)—An investigation was under way today to determine the origin of a fire which swept through a barracks killing twelve American officers and men of a medical battalion.

Twenty-two others were in hospitals with burns and lacerations and scores more received treatment for minor injuries after the fire broke out yesterday.

A guard discovered the fire about 6 A.M. in a frame building housing members of the 24th Medical Battalion. The flames spread so fast that most of the survivors escaped by leaping from second-story windows.

Bodies of the victims were found huddled near the stairway and around windows. The building was destroyed and the fire spread to a number of small adjoining buildings and parked ambulances. Names of the victims were not announced pending notification of next of kin.

P.O.W. Murder Trial Halted

Japanese Guard Talks Too Fast for Court Interpreter

TOKYO, Dec. 24 (AP).—Tatsuo Tsuchiya's trial on a charge of brutally murdering an American prisoner of war was recessed today over Christmas because the court interpreter could not keep pace with the defendant's rapid flow of Japanese.

Tsuchiya, dubbed "Little Glass Eye" by men he guarded at a prison camp, began his story after the American trial commission upheld the prosecution's contention that if he refused to testify it could be held against him.

The Japanese, accused of murdering Private First Class Robert Gordon Teas, of Streator, Ill., had said he was twenty-eight, married, the father of one child, and a "very poor" farmer and mat maker before he became a prison guard, when the court called a halt. It said it would obtain another interpreter before the hearing resumed Wednesday.

Hendrix Joins McNutt's Staff

Manila, Dec. 24 (A. P.).—Lieut.-Col. Walter C. Hendrix Jr. of Atlanta, Ga., who served with Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita's defense counsel, joined the staff of Paul V. McNutt, High Commissioner to the Philippines, today.

Hendrix formerly was head of the military police command legal section in the Philippines.

Plans To Supervise Greek Election Told

San Francisco, Dec. 24 (AP)—When Greece goes to the polls March 31, nearly 250 American, British and French army officers will observe whether a free election has taken place, but they will not police the polls.

Dr. Henry F. Grady, head of the American mission which will observe the Greek elections, said here:

"If there is fighting around any of the polling booths, we will not interfere. We will be in Greece only as observers. We will in no way conduct the election."

Dr. Grady returned here recently from Greece, where he helped set up the machinery for observing the election.

Polish Relief Heads See Bierut

The Polish Press Agency reported from Warsaw yesterday that President Boleslaw Bierut has held a long conference with a Polish-American delegation headed by Roman Catholic Bishop Stefan Woznicki, of Detroit. The delegation, representing the Polish War Relief organization in the United States, which recently arrived in Poland, included Casimir E. Midowicz, of the Polish National Alliance and vice-president of Polish War Relief; Henry J. Osinski, executive secretary of Polish War Relief, and Jan Olejniczak, president of the Polish Roman Catholic Union of America.

Truman Pleads for Lasting Peace in Christmas Message

DEC 25 1945

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24 (AP).—At the touch of President Truman lights sprang up tonight on the nation's own Christmas tree after four war years in darkness.

Although peace had come again, the President said, we must work to fulfill the biblical prophecy of lasting peace.

"Peace has its victories no less hard won than success at arms," the President told 10,342 chilled Washingtonians huddled in the snow before the 30-foot living fir tree on the White House south lawn.

"We must strive without ceasing to make real the prophecy of Isiah. They shall beat their swords into plow shares * * * Nation shall not lift sword against nation'," he said.

Mr. Truman, protected against the biting cold of a grey dusk by heavy new galoshes, strode with aides down the winding road from the mansion. First he inspected his guard of honor of Washington high school cadets, then nearing the platform, he pointed to the boots and whispered to a friend:

"They've got me shod—ike a wild horse."

Lights of the White House shone across the snow as Mr. Truman pressed a button and the nation's tree glowed red and green. The crowd, admitted on the grounds under police supervision, exclaimed in admiration. The presidential act was a signal for thousands of communities to light their trees.

"This is the Christmas that a war-weary world has prayed for through long and awful years," the President began. His words were broadcast over the nation and camera crews spotlighted his overcoated, bare-headed figure.

"With peace come joy and gladness * * * we meet in the spirit of the first Christmas * * * let us not forget that the coming of the Saviour brought a time of long peace to the Roman world."

On a spot within sight of the Washington Monument, the Lincoln Memorial and the new Jefferson Memorial, and within two blocks of the Jackson statue, Mr. Truman said they were reminders of St. Paul's four anchors."

"Happily for us, whenever the American Ship of State has been storm-tossed, we have always had an anchor to windward," he said.

"Out of the past we shall gather wisdom and inspiration to chart our future course," he said, "with our enemies vanquished we must gird ourselves for the work that lies ahead."

Truman Yule Message

Washington, Dec. 24 (AP)—President Truman has a Christmas Eve date with the nation today before flying to Missouri tomorrow to spend his first Yuletide as Chief Executive with his family.

Promptly at 5 P.M. (E.S.T.), Mr. Truman planned to walk out on the south lawn of the White House to light the national community Christmas tree—a big living fir that has remained dark the last four wartime Christmases.

Sixteen minutes later the Chief Executive will broadcast a brief Christmas message to the nation. All networks have arranged to carry the address.

An hour and a half before the ceremony, the White House grounds were to be thrown open to the public, with the usual Secret Service precautions in force—no cameras, bundles or umbrellas permitted.

A platform has been erected to hold the President's immediate party, the Marine Band and 65 choristers.

Mr. Truman will leave by plane tomorrow for Independence, Mo., to join his family. His wife and daughter, Margaret, already are there. The President will return to Washington Friday.

President's Christmas Eve Talk

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24 (AP).—The text of President Truman's talk at the lighting of the National Community Christmas Tree this afternoon follows:

This is the Christmas that a war-weary world has prayed for through long and awful years. With peace come joy and gladness. The gloom of the war years fades as once more we light the National Community Christmas Tree. We meet in the spirit of the first Christmas, when the midnight choir sang the hymn of joy: "Glory to God in the Highest, and on Earth, Peace, Good Will Toward Men."

Let us not forget that the coming of the Saviour brought a time of long peace to the Roman world. It is, therefore, fitting for us to remember that the spirit of Christmas is the spirit of peace, of love, of charity to all men. From the manger of Bethlehem came a new appeal to the minds and hearts of men: "A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another."

In love, which is of the very essence of the message of the Prince of Peace, the world would find a solution for all its ills. I do not believe there is one problem in this country—in the world—today which could not be settled if approached through the teaching of the Sermon on the Mount. The poet dream, the lesson of priest and patriarch and the prophets' vision of a new heaven and a new earth, all are summed up in the message delivered in the Judean hills beside the Sea of Galilee. Would that the world would accept that message in this time of its greatest need!

This is a solemn hour. In the stillness of the eve of the Nativity when the hopes of mankind hang on the peace that was offered to the world nineteen centuries ago, it is but natural, while we survey our destiny, that we give thought also to our past—to some of the things which have gone into the making of our nation.

You will remember that Saint Paul, the apostle of the gentiles, and his companions, suffering shipwreck, "cast four anchors out of the stern and wished for the day." Happily for us, whenever the American ship of state has been storm-tossed, we have always had an anchor to windward.

We are met on the south lawn of the White House. The setting is a reminder of Saint Paul's four anchors. To one side is the massive pile of the Washington Monument—fit symbol of our first anchor. On the opposite end of Potomac Park is the memorial to another of the anchors which we see when we look astern of the ship of state—Abraham Lincoln, who preserved the Union that Washington wrought.

Between them, appropriately too, is the memorial to Thomas Jefferson, the anchor of democracy. On the other side of the White House, in bronze, rides Andrew Jackson—fourth of our anchors—the pedestal of his monument bearing his immortal words: "Our Federal Union—it must be preserved."

It is well in this solemn hour that we bow to Washington, Jefferson, Jackson and Lincoln as we face our destiny with its hopes and fears—its burdens and its responsibilities. Out of the past we shall gather wisdom and inspiration to chart our future course.

With our enemies vanquished we must gird ourselves for the work that lies ahead. Peace has its victories no less hard won than success at arms. We must not fail or falter. We must strive without ceasing to make real the prophecy of Isaiah: "They shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more."

In that day, whether it be far or near, the kingdoms of this world shall become indeed the Kingdom of God an He will reign forever and ever, Lord of Lords and King of Kings. With that message I wish my countrymen a merry Christma and joyous days in the new year.

IRAN TO REFER CASE TO UNITED NATIONS

Ambassador Says, However, He Places High Hopes on Secretary Byrnes

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24 (AP)—Iranian Ambassador Hussein Ala said today that his Government undoubtedly would submit its case on the uprising in Azerbaijan to the United Nations Assembly as soon as possible after it convenes on Jan. 10 in London.

Mr. Ala added, however, that Iran was basing high hopes on the meeting of Secretary of State James F. Byrnes in Moscow with Foreign Commissar V. M. Molotoff and Foreign Minister Ernest Bevin.

The Ambassador told reporters, after a call at the State Department, that he had sent Christmas greetings to Mr. Byrnes and had told the Secretary that the fate of the United Nations rested on him.

Iran repeatedly has charged Russia with fomenting the uprising in Azerbaijan which resulted in establishment of an autonomous government in that province, adjoining the Soviet Republic by the same name.

Mr. Ala reiterated his assertions that only immediate departure of all foreign troops from Iran could save his Government's sovereignty.

Mr. Ala conferred at the State Department with Loy W. Henderson, Chief of the Division of Near Eastern Affairs.

TRUMAN WIDENS CONGRESS RIFT BY USES ACTION

New Row 'Inevitable' as He Bars Return of Job Offices to States.

COUNTER-MOVE IS PLANNED

Legislation Abolishing Federal Operation of Agency Already Is Drafted in the House.

DEC 25 1945

Washington, Dec. 24 (A.P.).—A new and bitter row between President Truman and Congress over the United States Employment Service appeared inevitable when the lawmakers resume work on January 14.

The President provided the fuel for the fight yesterday. He announced he was killing—by a pocket veto—legislation to return USES to State control within 100 days. He said in a statement that he was withholding approval of the measure because it "would immeasurably retard our re-employment program." He reiterated a request that action be delayed until June, 1947. The Government took over the employment services early in 1942 in an effort to channel more workers into war production jobs.

The presidential move brought immediate reports from Capitol Hill that new legislation would be introduced to do away with Federal administration of USES.

Congressional Move Seen.

House Appropriations Committee aides told a reporter that such a measure already has been drafted. Likewise, associates of Senator Lucas (D.-Ill.), and Reed (R.-Kan.), said one of the two would take the action "right after the holidays."

The Senators, who led the fight for return of USES to the States, were not available for comment, but Reed recently issued a statement declaring: "The USES is not an efficient service under the Federal Government, never has been and so far as any of us can see it never will be. It has never rendered as good service as it did under the States, but its costs have increased 400 per cent. President Roosevelt promised when he took it over that it would be returned after the war. Now the Government is stalling."

New legislation would be required to achieve the goal sought by the Senators, because the pocket veto is not subject to overriding by Congress.

[A pocket veto occurs when the President refuses to sign within the required time legislation on his desk during a congressional recess. If he does not sign a bill during a session it becomes law, unless he returns it to Congress for consideration. In the latter case, two-thirds of both the Senate and House must approve the measure to pass it over his veto.]

Was Rider on Cutback Bill.

The legislation returning USES to State control was a rider on a measure withdrawing $52,000,000,000 originally allocated in war appropriations. Mr. Truman said, however, that until another cutback bill can be enacted this amount still will be saved through a Budget Bureau order banning use of the funds.

The Chief Executive commented that he not only objected to the rider itself, but opposed "even more strongly" its attachment to a major savings bill. The move, he said, "restricts the President's exercise of his functions and is contrary to good government."

Discussing the USES work, Mr. Truman said that it will reach an all-time peak during the next several months. Accordingly, he added, a shift in administration at any time soon "will result in a disrupted and inefficient employment service at the very time when efficient operation is most vitally needed by veterans, workers and employers."

The USES rider passed both

30.29-32623

Senate and House by large majorities. It was only through extensive persuasion by Administration leaders that the period for return to the States was extended from 30 to 100 days.

Truman Pardons GI ex-Convicts

DEC 25 1945

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24 (AP).—A presidential pardon on Christmas Eve restored to thousands of ex-convicts today the democratic rights they fought to uphold in World War II.

All persons who had lost their civil rights because of convictions for violating federal laws and who served hoonrably in the armed services for one year or more after July 29, 1941, were covered in President Truman's blanket proclamation of "a full pardon."

More than 2,000 federal prisoners were paroled to enter the Army, Attorney General Clark said, and "several thousand more" who had finished their sentences were inducted. "A large number" also served in the Marines, Navy and Coast Guard, he added. Exactly how many in all are affected by the pardon could not be ascertained.

As a precedent, a White House statement cited the amnesty which President James Madison proclaimed for Jean Lafitte, the buccaneer, and nearly 1,000 of his followers when they offered to help Gen. Andrew Jackson defend New Orleans against the British in 1814. The pirates and smugglers distinguished themselves in manning the artillery in the battle, but Lafitte and his men later occupied an island which has now become the city of Galveston, Tex., and returned to piracy.

The White House also noted that after World War I, individual pardons were granted, based on the applicants' war records.

Mr. Truman's blanket pardon does not cover ex-convicts who enlisted before July 29, 1941, when a law was passed which permitted such men to serve. Clark noted that ex-convicts who enlisted before then might have done so "on the basis of misrepresentation." But he said that any meritorious cases not covered by the proclamation "would be dealt with individually under established procedure."

Proclamation of Pardon

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24 (AP).—The texts of a Presidential proclamation pardoning several thousand ex-convicts who served meritoriously in the armed forces and a White House statement follow:

By the President of the United States of America. A proclamation.

Whereas the Constitution of the United States provides that the President "shall have power to grant reprieves and pardons for offenses against the United States, except in cases of impeachment"; and

Whereas subsequent to July 29, 1941, there were inducted and enrolled in the armed forces of the United States persons who had prior to their entry, induction or enrollment been convicted of offenses against the laws of the United States or the Territory of Alaska, other than the laws for the government of the Army and Navy; and

Whereas it appears that such convicted persons who have or shall hereafter be honorably discharged or separated from the armed forces, or separated with honor from active service therein, after serving in active status for not less than one year ought to have restored to them the political, civil, and other rights of which they were deprived by reason of such conviction and which may not be restored to them unless they are pardoned:

Now, therefore, I, Harry S. Truman, President of the United States of America, do hereby grant a full pardon to all persons convicted of violation of any law of the United States or of the Territory of Alaska, except the laws for the government of the Army and the Navy, who on or after the 29th day of July, 1941, and prior to the date hereof, entered, enrolled in, or were inducted into the armed forces of the United States and who after serving in active status for not less than one year have been or shall hereafter be honorably discharged or separated therefrom, or separated under honorable conditions from active service therein; provided, however, that such pardon shall not be construed to include the pardon of such persons for any offenses for which conviction has been obtained after the date of such entry, enrollment, or induction into service.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States of America to be affixed.

Done at the City of Washington this 24th day of December, in the Year of Our Lord Nineteen Hundred and Forty-five, and of the independence of the United States of America, the One Hundred and Seventieth.

HARRY S. TRUMAN.

By the President:
Dean Acheson,
Acting Secretary of State.

White House Statement

This proclamation is intended for the benefit of those ex-prisoners whose meritorious service in the armed forces has earned them a Presidential pardon for the offenses of which they were previously convicted.

The Attorney General informed the President, in recommending this action, that under the authority of the act of July 29, 1941, 55 stat 606, the army enrolled a considerable number of ex-prisoners "in special meritorious cases" and other services took parallel action.

"The trust reposed in these individuals by accepting them for military duty has been amply vindicated," Attorney General Tom C. Clark said. "Certainly it would seem that if an ex-convict has served honorably for a year or more in the armed services and has been granted an honorable discharge, he should now be given the benefit of Presidential pardon."

The Attorney General pointed out that the situation of these men differs in numerous respects from that of the men who have been convicted and confined for violations of the selective service laws and who are referred to generally as "conscientious objectors." The men who will obtain the benefits of the proclamation are men who are now at liberty, and whose honorable record in the armed services would seem to demonstrate their fitness to be restored to a respected place in society.

The proclamation will not grant a full pardon to every veteran who had previously been convicted of a Federal offense. It is limited to men who entered the service on or after July 29, 1941, because men with criminal records who enlisted prior to July 29, 1941, may well have entered the armed forces on the basis of misrepresentation, inasmuch as the laws and regulations prevailing prior to that date forbade their acceptance. It requires also that the veteran shall have served honorably, and for at least one year. It is further limited by excluding any offenses for which conviction has been obtained after the individual's entry, enrollment or induction into service.

"Somewhat more than 2,000 prisoners were paroled from Federal institutions for induction into the Army," the Attorney General said. "It is known that several thousand more had completed their sentences before induction. A large number of persons similarly situated joined the other armed services. It is believed that only a few meritorious cases among such persons will not be included within the terms of the proclamation. Such cases would be dealt with individually under established procedure, through consideration of the particular facts on an application for executive clemency."

There is ample precedent for the issuance of the proclamation.

President Madison pardoned the offenders at Barataria Island, noting in his amnesty proclamation "particularly that they have exhibited in the defense of New Orleans unequivocal traits of courage and fidelity." Also after the last war individual pardons were grounded on the applicant's "excellent" war records.

Union Charges Chrysler With Law Violation

Says Payments in Lieu of '45 Vacation Were Not Agreed On in Bargaining

DEC 26 1945

DETROIT, Dec. 24 (AP).—The United Automobile Workers' Union, a Congress of Industrial Organizations affiliate, accused the Chrysler Corporation today of violating the national labor relations act in distribution of vacation pay last week.

The char e was contained in a letter to the corporation in which the union said the payments, ranging from $45 to $90 for 41,316 employees, had been made without collective bargaining. The Chrysler U. A. A. contract, which included provision for the payments in lieu of vacations during the ensuing year, was terminated on Dec. 4 when negotiations over the union demand for a 30 per cent wage increase were halted.

The Chrysler Corporation made no comment on the union allegation. In announcing plans for the payment, the corporation said it had proposed provisions to improve the method and time for the vacation payments when the contract was terminated. Chrysler said that, although no agreement was reached, it decided to make the payments this year in the same manner as had been done since 1940.

The payments totaled $3,245,715. Workers with one to five years seniority received $45, those with more than five years $90.

Norman Matthews, U. A. W.-C. I. C. national Chrysler director, said when negotiations are resumed the union plans to ask that payments be brought up to $54 and $108, respectively.

Elsewhere on the auto labor front activities were in a Christmas holiday lull.

Due to strikes and parts shortages the industry, which six months ago aimed its sights at production of 500,000 passenger cars this year, will wind up 1945 with fewer than 80,000 units assembled.

Picketing around scores of strike-bound General Motors plants throughout the country came to a virtual halt for the holidays as 175,000 General Motors production workers demanding 30 per cent wage rate increases continued the strike that began Nov. 21. The strike also idled thousands of General Motors office workers.

The union already has rejected offers of a 10 per cent increase from General Motors and 12.4 per cent from Ford Motor Company. What, if any, offer Chrysler has advanced as a counter-proposal to the union's 30 per cent demand has not been disclosed.

Negotiations with Ford will be resumed Jan. 8. No date has been set for a renewal of the Chrysler conferences. The General Motors talks will be resumed this week.

The company has said it may have some details of its own case ready for presentation at the next conference.

Ford Parley Resumes January 18

The Ford Motor Company, its plants idle during the holiday, is not scheduled to meet with the UAW-CIO again until January 8. The union has turned down the firm's offer of a 15-cent-an-hour wage boost.

Across the Detroit River, in Windsor, Ont., C. I. Hand, a justice of the Canadian Supreme Court, will arrive Wednesday to begin arbitration of a dispute over union security demands that closed the Ford Motor Company of Canada for 99 days.

The nearly 10,000 UAW-CIO employés voted last week to return to work and are now awaiting recall by the company.

Employés of the other member of the Big Three, Chrysler Corporation, are working without a union contract, but the UAW-CIO has said it will withhold any strike action for the duration of the G.M. dispute.

G.M. Pickets Take Holiday

Detroit, Dec. 24 (AP)—The CIO United Auto Workers' picket lines around nearly 100 General Motors Corporation plants throughout the nation are due to be abandoned temporarily today to allow the strikers a Christmas holiday with their families.

Approximately 200,000 employés of the largest of the automotive Big Three have been idle since November 21 in America's greatest postwar labor walkout.

Meet Again Wednesday

Prodded by Government fact-finders, the UAW-CIO and G.M. will meet again Wednesday in their first conference since both sides were called to Washington last week.

The Government has promised that it will intervene further unless the parties adjust their differences.

On Thursday the union will hold in second meeting with the Kaiser-Frazer Corporation, latest firm to enter the car-manufacturing field.

The UAW-CIO has already outlined its demands on this corporation, including a proposal for a wage scale 30 per cent above that now in effect at the Ford Motor Company.

Code-Breaking Feared Blow To U.S.

DEC 25 1945

Washington, Dec. 24 (AP)—Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short, U.S.A. (retired), who was army commander of the Hawaiian Department when the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor on December 7, 1941, is a patient at Walter Reed Hospital. It was reported that General Short was threatened with pneumonia.

Washington, Dec. 24 (AP)—The jig is up for the Navy's "Jig-19," but Pearl Harbor investigators can't agree about the effects of code-cracking disclosures on future espionage activities.

Senator Lucas (D., Ill.) said today he believes the Senate-House inquiry committee's action in baring the secret that Americans have been reading German, Japanese and other nations' confidential messages "has given us a diplomatic setback that can't be measured."

Lucas said the greatest effect will be in the loss to this country of information about the activities of other nations, which, he said, are bound to change their codes.

"Will Continue," Says Gearhart

But Representative Gearhart (R., Cal.) said he thinks that code breaking will continue "as it always has in the past." He conceded, however, that it is likely almost every nation in the world already has changed its codes.

The reason the jig is up for the Navy's "Jig-19" is that the Japanese aren't sending anymore what they thought were highly confidential messages to their nationals.

One of the systems by which the Navy broke down these messages into intelligible English was called "Jig-19," according to testimony of Capt. L. F. Safford, formerly in charge of the communications division. The testimony has been placed in the record of the Senate-House committee, now in recess until a week from today.

Interception At Corregidor

Safford said in a previous investigation conducted by Admiral H. K. Hewitt that an interception unit at Corregidor "had been intercepting messages in the Japanese 'purple' code and other diplomatic systems for several years and continued to do that up to and including December 7, 1941."

Safford said there was extensive exchange of information between Corregidor and Washington "on the 'purple' machine and on what we called the Jig-19 system and other diplomatic systems, but Pearl Harbor was not addressed in these messages."

The fantastic story of how American experts built a machine that duplicated the Japanese code decrypters already has been told the committee.

Safford's testimony that the Pearl Harbor unit was left out of these messages supported information given the congressional investigators that Admiral Husband E. Kimmel, then Pacific Fleet commander, did not have available to him the decoded Japanese messages that Admiral Thomas C. Hart, Asiatic Fleet commander, saw at Corregidor.

General Short Is Stricken Ill

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24 (AP).—The already uncertain future of the congressional investigation of Pearl Harbor was further complicated today by the serious illness of Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short, a star witness.

Short, retired officer who commanded Army forces at Hawaii when the Japanese slipped in a surprise raid four years ago, is in Walter Reed Hospital with an "acute respiratory" illness.

There had been suggestions within the Senate-House committee that Short and Rear Admiral Husban E. Kimmel, 1941 commander of the Pacific Fleet, be called to testify soon after the holiday recess which ends this week.

But hospital authorities said that the 65-year-old Short certainly will be directed by his doctors to take things easy; they said there is no assurance of just when he will be able to testify.

Contributing also to uncertainty of the inquiry's future is the fact that no new legal staff has yet been selected to replace the outgoing William D. Mitchell and aides.

Senator Lucas (D., Ill.) of the committee announced today he would recommend Weymouth Kirkland, Chicago lawyer, as Mitchell's successor. A statement issued from Lucas' office said Kirkland is an attorney for the Chicago Tribune.

Rep. Gearhart (R., Calif.), is backing either of two former national commanders of the American Legion—Warren Atherton of Stockton, Calif., and Harry Colmery of Topeka, Kans.

82d Airborne Slated For Army Reserve

Washington, Dec. 24 (AP)—The War Department said recently that the 82d Airborne Division has been designated as the only airborne division to become part of the general reserve of the United States Army.

Those men in the unit not eligible for discharge will form a cadre to train volunteers for this special type of organization which proved itself in operations against the Germans.

It is necessary that the cadre begin its training as soon as possible in order to fulfill its mission as a training unit, the Army said. For this reason, the Army statement added, a portion of the troops comprising the 82d Airborne Division and its complement will not have sufficient points for discharge when they arrive in the United States early in January.

If men not eligible for discharge were removed from the division prior to sailing, the department said, they would become dispersed; full advantage of their experience and training could not be realized, and the formation of a permanent airborne division "would be retarded for a considerable length of time."

Romulo Denies He Sought U.S. Citizenship

Washington, Dec. 24 (AP)—Brig. Gen. Carlos Romulo, Philippines commissioner, flatly denied reports that he had applied for United States citizenship.

Commenting on unconfirmed stories appearing in Filipino newspapers, General Romulo declared, "That is absolutely false. There is nothing I treasure more than my Philippine citizenship. Never in my wildest dreams have I ever considered giving it up."

He said he had no idea of the source of "that terrible news."

Bradley Plans Fast Medical Reshuffle

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24 (AP).—Gen. Omar N. Bradley, administrator, plans a speedy reorganization of the medical department of the Veterans Administration when President Truman signs a recently-passed bill authorizing such a step.

Maj. Gen. Paul R. Hawley, acting surgeon general of the Veterans Administration, is expected to become the new chief of the medical service.

Vet Hospitals To Keep Some Civilian Jobs

Washington, Dec. 24 (AP)—The Veterans Administration will keep some, but possibly not all, of army and navy civilian personnel when it takes control of army and navy hospitals.

This policy was announced recently by George H. Sweet, assistant administrator for personnel.

Sweet said civilian employés would be given "every consideration" but the Veterans Administration does not always follow the same staff pattern as army and navy institutions.

If possible, present employés will be "fitted" to the Veterans Administration plan, Sweet said, but under civil service and the Veterans Preference Act the job priorities must be given to war veterans.

Californian Gets Post With UNRRA

Washington, Dec. 24 (AP)—Appointment of Cornelius Van W. Engert, of Berkeley Cal., as assistant diplomatic adviser to the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration has been announced.

Director General Herbert H. Lehman said Engert, who was in the United States foreign service for many years, will act principally as liaison with the State Department and diplomatic missions in Washington.

3,200,000 Vets Still Away

Washington, Dec. 24 (AP)—About 3,200,000 soldiers, sailors and marines will spend this first peacetime Christmas either at sea or in foreign lands.

The Army and Navy counted noses today and came up with this estimate. But they added that, even so, this should be a particularly Merry Christmas for the armed services because:

1. As you may have heard, the war's over.

2. Celebrations can be carried on without worrying what the enemy is up to.

3. Even though 3,200,000 are far away, that's a numerical improvement over last year.

Shopping Done Early

Last Christmas there were 4,933,682 soldiers overseas, compared with the 2,100,000 who are there now. A year ago 1,750,000 sailors and marines were at sea or overseas. This figure has been cut to 1,100,000.

The Army and Navy did their Christmas shopping early. Hundreds of thousands of turkeys, plus all the trimmings, were bought and shipped long ago. The Navy started moving out Christmas trees as early as October.

How the soldier, sailor or marine actually will spend Christmas Day is up to his theater commander or ship's captain.

But Christmas traditionally is a big day on any navy ship. And the Army's Special Services Division hopes that enough entertainment is available to keep the soldiers fairly happy.

How He May Spend The Day

Your favorite GI may spend part of Christmas Day at a movie, in a service club or possibly he will attend one of the shows put on by the 253 USO camp units now overseas.

If he is a sports fan, he may holler his tonsils out at the army-sponsored Pacific Olympics. If he is in Europe, he may be on an army-conducted tour of Switzerland.

One army officer pretty well summed it up:

"At this season of the year, we can't fill the place of mom and pop and the family fireside.

"But we are trying."

Crewless Plane Flies 900 Miles Across 5 States

Abandoned Over Nebraska Because of Icing, C-47 Finally Crashes in Ohio

CHILLICOTHE, Ohio, Dec. 25 (AP).—A pilotless, crewless, twin-engine Army transport plane crashed in an open field twelve miles west of here last night after soaring haphazardly for some 900 miles on a four-hour phantom flight, unguided through the wintry night.

The plane, a C-47, was abandoned about 5:30 p. m. over Dwight, Neb., after its crew lost control because of heavy icing conditions, and flew for four hours while Air Force officials at the Lincoln, Neb., Army Air Field pondered where it was and where it might come down.

Sheriff Sam Mark, of Ross County, found the wreckage a short time after residents of the vicinity reported the crash at about 9:30 p. m.

Unaware that the ship had flown itself across five states, the sheriff started searching for possible survivors after discovering only one parachute in the unburned wreckage and finding an escape hatch open.

Residents reported the plane had circled, as if in trouble and looking for a place to land, before it clipped a tree, skidded across an open field and nosed into a bank.

Apprised of the crash, Lieutenant W. H. Aderhold, officer of the day at Lincoln Field, identified the plane by numbers on the fuselage and tail assembly.

Colonel J. T. Posey, commanding officer of Lincoln Field, said he had first learned the plane was on the loose through a telephone call reporting that its crew of six had parachuted to safety. He said the pilot had been unable to land at Lincoln because of weather and presumably had started for North Platte, where it was clear.

Besides being uncontrollable because of icing, the plane's automatic controls were inoperative when the men bailed out, Colonel Posey reported. The ship was headed in a northwesterly direction when the crew left it.

The transport, based at Lincoln Field, was on a routine training flight from Denver. It had an estimated eight-hour fuel supply when it took off and presumably had exhausted its fuel when it crashed, without burning, near here.

Colonel Posey identified the men who bailed out as Major Phillip Warner, of Philadelphia, pilot; Captain Harold Kellogg, of San Diego, Calif., co-pilot; Sergeant Thomas R. Little, of Canton, Ohio, crew chief; Sergeant Vernon W. Entrekin, of St. Louis, flight engineer, and Dale K. Nelson, of Omaha, and Quartermaster 3-Class Willard L. Meichel, of Baldwin, Kan., passengers. Nelson was treated for shock, Colonel Posey said.

Private Aid Held Need In European Relief Job

New York, Dec. 24 (AP)—Col. Charles Poletti, former Governor of New York and once head of the American Military Government in Italy, said recently that the relief job in Europe "never can be done exclusively by Government agencies—we have got to have the assistance of private agencies."

Addressing the annual convention of the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society, Poletti criticized congressional delay in appropriating funds for UNRRA and declared that he detected on his return to the United States "a growing cynicism toward the ideals which guided us during the war."

$2,000 Plaque Donated For Warship

New York, Dec. 24 (AP)—A $2,000 silver plaque, honoring war work done by miners and metal workers of Missouri, will be presented to officers of the battleship Missouri by the St. Joseph Lead Company at a ceremony at Flat River, Mo., on January 6.

Plans for the presentation were announced by E. V. Peters, vice president of the mining concern.

Silver for the plaque, a 100-pound representation of the Missouri State Seal, was mined by the St. Joseph company in Missouri. Paul Mannship, New York sculptor, prepared the huge medallion.

Peters said Gov. Phil M. Donnelly of Missouri would present the 22-inch plaque to Capt. Roscoe W. Hillenkoetter of the famous man o'war. Hillenkoetter is a native of Missouri.

Sixteen Missouri enlisted men aboard the battleship, as well as the vessel's executive officer and chief chaplain, will go to Flat River for the ceremony, Peters said.

'U.S. And Palestine Hopes Of Every Jew'

New York, Dec. 24 (AP)—Dr. Leo Baeck, 73, former chief rabbi of Berlin and former president of all Jewish congregations in Germany, has arrived here by trans-Atlantic plane and says the United States and Palestine were the "two hopes of every Jew."

"The history of the Jews in Germany is finished," said Dr. Baeck. "There is no foundation there for the re-establishment of Jewish religious existence. Jewish life now has only two centers—one in America and the other in Palestine.

"America and Palestine are the two hopes. In the concentration camps there was always one cry—Palestine and America."

Dr. Baeck, who spent two and a half years in concentration camps, said he planned to remain in the United States about a month to assist the 1946 drive by the United Jewish Appeal for $100,000,000 in relief funds.

Farm Is Given Blinded Soldier

BATAVIA, N. Y., Dec. 24 (AP)—Pfc. Charles F. Bishop, 22, who was blinded by a Japanese sniper two months after V-J Day while on guard duty in Yokohama, received $10,038.91 today to buy a chicken farm as a Christmas present from residents of Genesee County. The fund was started Nov. 22 by The Batavia Daily News, which said it was learned from the youth's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer P. Bishop of Batavia, that their son always had wanted to own a chicken farm.

Yule Delayed In East For Over 50,000 GI's

DEC 25 1945

New York, Dec. 24 (AP)—The Christmas at home that they dreamed about for months will come a little bit late for more than 50,000 GI's along the eastern seaboard, but most of them don't seem to mind.

They are so close they know it will be only a matter of days so they are taking the delay in soldierly stride, happy in the knowledge that mother will have Christmas dinner ready whenever they get home—a day late or a week.

Some Delayed By Storms

Storms at sea delayed some returning troopships. Hundreds of soldiers were held up by the week end travel jam, which hit an all-time peak before it began to ease yesterday.

Nearly 25,000 soldiers are arriving from Europe today and unless they live very close to the Eastern ports or separation centers, they have virtually no chance of getting home. The same goes for the 11,000 that arrived yesterday.

Several thousand returnees will spend the holiday at Camp Shanks, New York. Also at the camp are 10,500 men awaiting shipment overseas as replacements. They are being granted brief leaves, mostly 24-hours passes, and those who don't leave camp will be entertained at parties.

USO Entertaining

The USO is getting several thousand girls to join the men in Christmas Eve festivities.

Sailors arriving at Lido Beach, N.Y., too late for discharge before Christmas were given liberty, permitting many of them to go home. They will return after the holiday for processing.

Most of the separation centers have been able to keep up with the flow of returnees and about the only GI's likely to be in those places tomorrow are those half-way through the processing.

One of these was Pfc. James Kirk of Falls City, Neb., who ate his Christmas dinner last year at night in a foxhole near the Rhine.

"Remember, Son?"

He is at Camp Shanks—got in too late to get home—but telephoned his mother, Mrs. Ruth Kirk, who told him:

"You remember, son, how you wrote us that you had to gulp your turkey at Christmas (last year). I'm going to hold up the cooking of this bird until you arrive. You can take four or five hours to eat the meal. We won't eat our Christmas dinner until you are here."

Hundreds of other GI's got the same assurance. As they turned from the camp telephone booths they would exchange grins. "They're going to delay Christmas until I get there," said one. "So are my folk," another shouted, and a third echoed, "Mine, too."

Promote Gettysburg

GETTYSBURG, Pa., Dec. 24 (AP).—Gettysburg was suggested today by a group of business men and Representative Chester H. Gross, Republican, of Pennsylvania, as the site for the United Nations capital. The group sent a cablegram to the secretary-general and executive committee of the U. N. O. in London urging its availability for the international center.

"Gettysburg presents itself for your consideration and invites inspection as the site for the United Nations capital," the wire stated. "Gettysburg is America's greatest historic shrine. It is world-famed and symbolizes Lincoln's inspiring concept of peace and freedom for all mankind. Gettysburg is ideally situated geographically and climatically. It is located in Pennsylvania in eastern United States, 150 miles inland, well removed though readily accessible without difficulty from great centers of population."

Atom Smashers for School

University of Pennsylvania to Have Two in Its Laboratories

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 24 (AP).—Two atom smashers and radar experimental equipment will be included in post-war laboratory facilities at the University of Pennsylvania, it was disclosed today by Dr. Park H. Miller jr., acting head of the university's physics department.

Dr. Miller said a new 200,000-volt particle accelerator, or atom smasher, now being constructed, will be the first of its kind devoted entirely to undergraduate instruction.

A larger atom smasher, an electrostatic generator with potential of 5,000,000 volts, is being reconstructed for study of the behavior of bombed particles.

Disabled Schooner Towed To Safety by Navy LST

12 in Crew of Jersey Man's Ship Landed in Virginia

NORFOLK, Va., Dec. 24 (AP).—The schooner Mabel Ruth, which became disabled seventy miles northeast of False Cape, N. C., has been towed to Little Creek, Va., with her crew of twelve men, Coast Guard headquarters reported today.

The Coast Guard said the schooner was first taken in tow by the Navy LST 528, which brought her to Dam Neck, N. C., where the Coast Guard tug Cuyahoga took the vessel over and towed it to Little Creek.

The owner is listed as M. A. Lane, of 216 Second Street, Asbury Park, N. J., and the master as Charles Anderson, of 77 Columbia Avenue, North Long Branch, N. J.

The office of the Rex Engineering Company, of Plainfield, N. J., former owner of the craft, said there today that it left Manasquan, N. J., Monday for St Petersburg, Fla., to be refitted as a pleasure boat. The ship lost a mast in the storm, the company was notified.

The Rex concern was refitting the schooner for Mr. Lane, and its office said six of its employees were among those on board. They are Albert Cennamo, Myrtle Avenue; Dominick Concilio, North Avenue; Walter Harper, South Second Street, and Joseph Flatley, all of Plainfield; Alfred Dargard, of Lake View Terrace, New Market, and Paul Bucovin, of Warrenville.

The Mabel Ruth, fifty years old was 138 feet long.

Wife Sticks by Sergeant Accused of Espionage

Air Force Man's Trial Is Likely To Be Held Within Month

SAN RAFAEL, Calif., Dec. 24 (AP).—As Army investigators prepared records for court martial of Sergeant Frank Hirt, thirty, accused of spying against his country and dealing with German agents, his wife declared today she would "stick by him."

An Army announcement said the trial was expected to be held within the next month at near-by Hamilton Field.

The 22-year-old wife, Jean, mother of two children, said she had not been officially told of the charges against her husband.

Jam In Transport Keeps 170,000 Vets In West

San Francisco, Dec. 24 (AP)—The transportation dam over which only a comparative trickle of homeward-bound service men is flowing will hold upwards of 170,000 veterans in Pacific Coast ports over the Christmas holiday.

Generally inclined to accept their enforced stay on the coast with good humor because they are satisfied just to be "back in the states," a large number of the service men will be entertained in private homes while extensive plans have been made to provide holiday festivities for the remainder.

Moving Only A Fraction

Airlines, busses and railroads were moving only a fraction of the large number of men East and arrivals scheduled for today were far in excess of planned departures.

San Francisco Bay area camps held the largest number of men. Army officials said there were 41,000 returned veterans in the area, 9,300 of them living aboard three troopships, and 15,246 more are due to arrive within the next 24 hours.

In addition, 20,269 naval personnel awaited transportation from Treasure Island.

Near-by states were sending special busses to return their veterans by Christmas, but this accounted for only a small number.

3,119 Leave On Eight Trains

Los Angeles expected 10,439 men today while 23,000 already taxed camp facilities. Only 3,119 were able to leave the city yesterday on eight trains.

Seattle had 13,809 troops in near-by staging areas and 7,564 living aboard ships; 18,000 awaited debarkation from ships at Tacoma and 13,507 were at Fort Lewis; Portland had 4,671 soldiers and 3,500 navy men awaiting transportation, and another 1,370 were due to arrive today.

Many Stranded In Christmas Travel Rush

[By the Associated Press]

"Merry Christmas, folks—we made it."

Those were the words that echoed across the nation today as thousands of Americans joined their families and friends for the Yuletide after battling through the greatest travel jam in the country's history.

Countless other thousands still were fighting the odds of greatly overtaxed train, plane and bus facilities and only time could determine the outcome. Many were almost certain to be stranded but it appeared that most of the travelers would reach their destination in time.

Extra Equipment

Transportation companies added extra equipment wherever possible, but that took care of only a trickle of the added demand for accommodations. In most cases the travelers didn't bother about seats—they were satisfied just to get aboard.

Aisles of New York Central trains were so jammed the railroad suspended sales of tickets at some points over the week end. Most of the pasengers on United Air Lines planes Friday and Saturday had had their reservations three months.

In Chicago a spokesman for Gov. Dwight H. Green of Illinois said 500 militiamen and and 110 trucks and jeeps would be pressed into service to transport stranded service men between the city's seven railroad stations.

Crush Levels Off

The railroad crush settled down to a normal holiday rush in Washington, after an earlier tiedup due chiefly to government workers leaving the city. Most passengers were able to get out of the Capital after delays of only four of five hours.

At Richmond, Va., rail officials said holiday crowds were leveling off after some passengers had waited up to 14 hours to get aboard.

Portland (Ore.) union station officials said all trains passengers got aboard yesterday as the holiday jam eased. Air lines still had waiting lists and busses north and south were jammed. East-bound overland stages were idle because of a strike.

Auto Rentals Rise

With most roads cleared after the recent storms, many persons turned to automobiles to escape the jam. An auto travel company in Chicago reported renting out 50 cars a day, most of them for trips to the West Coast.

Indianapolis got 1,000 cots ready for veterans who might be stranded there over Christmas.

In Chattanooga, Tenn., many service men turned to hitchhiking to get home and in Memphis more than 800 persons, most of them in service, were held up when bad weather grounded planes.

Peace-Blessed America Glows With Oldtime Yuletide Spirit

DEC 25 1945

(By the Associated Press)

Peace-blessed America, glowing with the oldtime Yuletide spirit, celebrated today (Tuesday) with an old-fashioned kind of Christmas whose brightness and cheer swept away many of the lingering shadows of war.

Not since the dark days of 1941, when the jarring notes of conflict first lent a saddening air to the tinkling of Christmas bells, had the nation enjoyed such universal happiness and good cheer.

Many a family was united around the Christmas tree again after months or years of separation. The tree itself was laden with many an article that couid not be obtained in former years. The larder was filled with all manner of good things for the Christmas table.

Withal, there was much that kept it from comparing with the Christmas of yesteryear.

About 3,200,000 sons and daughters still were in far off lands, unable to come home until war's last task was finished. But military officials, in Washington, said they were trying to make Christmas as enjoyable as possible for service personnel on foreign soil.

Although many places had a White Christmas, the Christmas day forecast was for mostly rain and cold or snow, except for the eastern Rocky Mountain states, where fair weather was expected to prevail.

Over the nation ,there were countless typically American acts of good will and generosity which gladdened the heart of many a citizen.

In Dolgeville, N. Y., a footwear company began distribution of three tons of silver dollars—100,000 of them—as a Christmas bonus to its employes.

At Los Angeles, a boat carrying the carol-singing choir of the Immaculate Heart College, Actor Jimmy Cagney and others shuttled among troopships loaded with vets who had to remain aboard because of the lack of transportation East.

Five thousand pounds of gifts sent by the city of Chicago were hoisted aboard the Cruiser Chicago in token of the vessel's war contribution.

At Warsaw, N. Y., George H. Nesbitt, 63-year-old woodwork shop proprietor, invited disabled veterans to come and get three five-acre farms, each valued at $500 and with "no strings attached." Nesbitt said he was going to teach the lucky new tenants how to farm the tracts.

40,000 VETERANS GET DISCHARGES

Army and Navy Speed Work at Separation Centers to Give Men Yule at Home

By The Associated Press.

More than 40,000 veterans were discharged at Army and Navy separation centers across the nation yesterday as a climax to the campaign to get men home for Christmis.

With both services attempting to release men from centers nearest their homes, spokesmen estimated that nearly all the thousands would reach the family fireside in time to celebrate.

Army figures showed 27,567 getting their release papers. The Navy, including marines and coast guardsmen, mustered out 12,822.

Most centers gave Christmas passes to men who could not be cleared in time to reach home. Others arranged special entertainment and holiday dinners. At Fort Dix, N. J., 10,000 late arrivals got the option of a three-day pass to go home or remain and be released on Christmas Day.

Following are the figures as reported by the centers:

Army

Fort Knox, Ky., 1,100; Jefferson Barracks, Mo., 1,313; Fort McPherson, Ga., 742; Maxwell Field, Ala., 125; San Francisco, 1,000; Fort Lewis, Wash., 860; Fort Devens, Mass., 1,450; Fort Leavenworth, Kan., 600; Fort Dix, N. BESIDES THE FIVE POWERS, THE BROADCAST SAID THESE OTHERS ARE AUSTRALIA, BELGIUM, THE WHITE RUSSIAN REPUBLIC, BRAZIL, GREECE, THE NETHERLANDS, INDIA, CANADA, NEW ZEALAND, NORWAY, POLAND, THE UKRAINIAN SOVIET REPUBLIC, CZECHOSLOVAKIA, ETHIOPIA, YUGOSLAVIA AND THE UNION OF SOUTH AFRICA. THE BROADCAST SAID THIS CONFERENCE WOULD TAKE PLACE NOT LATER THAN MAY 1, 1946.

THE AGREEMENT ON TREATIES, THE BROADCAST REPORTED, PROVIDES THAT "THE CONDITIONS OF THE TREATY WITH ITALY WILL BE DRAFTED BY THE MINISTERS OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS OF THE UNITED STATES, GREAT BRITAIN THE SOVIET UNION AND FRANCE. THE UNITED STATES, THE SOVIET UNION AND BRITAIN WILL DRAFT THE PEACE WITH ROMANIA, BULGARIA AND HUNGARY, AND THE SOVIET UNION AND BRITAIN THE TREATY WITH FINLAND, THE BROADCAST SAID.

IN GENERAL, THE COUNTRIES WHICH SIGNED THE CAPITULATION AGREEMENTS WILL BE CONCERNED WITH THE DRAFTING OF TREATIES, UNLESS OTHER PARTIES ARE INVITED TO DISCUSS "QUESTIONS WHICH AFFECT THEM DIRECTLY," THE BROADCAST SAID.

ANOTHER BROADCAST SAID PREMIER STALIN RECEIVED BRITISH FOREIGN SECRETARY BEVIN TONIGHT. NO INDICATION WAS GIVEN OF WHAT WAS DISCUSSED.

MOSCOW SAID FINAL TREATIES "WILL BE SIGNED BY REPRESENTATIVES OF THE STATES REPRESENTED AT THE CONFERENCE AND WHO WERE IN A STATE OF WAR WITH ANY GIVEN ENEMY POWER." THE FINAL DRAFTS THEN WILL BE PRESENTED TO OTHERS OF THE UNITED NATIONS WHOSE WERE IN A STATE OF WAR WITH ANY GIVEN ENEMY POWER BUT WHO ARE NOT REPRESENTED AT THE CONFERENCE.

"THE PEACE TREATIES WILL COME INTO FORCE AS SOON AS THEY HAVE BEEN RATIFIED BY THE ALLIED STATES WHO HAVE SIGNED THE CORRESPONDING ARMISTICE TERMS, AS WELL AS FRANCE, WHO IS CONSIDERED ON EQUAL TERMS AS FAR AS ITALY IS CONCERNED." THE BROADCAST CONTINUED. "THE PEACE TREATIES ARE SUBJECT TO RATIFICATION BY THE CORRESPONDING ENEMY STATES AS WELL.

"CONVERSATIONS ON OTHER QUESTIONS ARE CONTINUING IN THE SPIRIT OF FRIENDSHIP. IT IS HOPED A COMMUNIQUE ON THE WHOLE CONFERENCE WILL BE ISSUED IN TWO OR THREE DAYS."

THE BROADCAST SAID THE THREE MINISTERS ADDRESSED A REQUEST TO THE GOVERNMENTS OF FRANCE AND CHINA TO "ADHERE" TO THE PROCEDURE WHICH WILL BE OUTLINED IN THE AGREEMENT.

THE DECISION TO HOLD A CO... FERENCE TO TRANSFER ITALY, BULGARIA, ROMANIA, HUNGARY AND FINLAND FROM A STATIC STATE OF ARMISTICE TO PEACE WAS WELCOMED IN LONDON DIPLOMATIC QUARTERS WITH WARM OPTIMISM.

UNITED NATIONS DELEGATES SPENDING THE CHRISTMAS HOLIDAYS IN THE BRITISH CAPITAL WHILE AWAITING THE FIRST MEETING OF THE NEW PEACE ORGANIZATION NEXT MONTH GREETED THE NEWS FROM MOSCOW AS "A CONCRETE INDICATION" THAT THE BIG THREE "HAVE REALIZED AND ACCEPTED THEIR RESPONSIBILITY FOR MAINTAINING THE PEACE OF TE WORLD."

INCLUSION OF FRANCE IN THE AGREEMEN

RESPONSIBILITY FOR MAINTAINING THE PEACE OF THE WORLD."

INCLUSION OF FRANCE IN THE AGREEMENT ON ITALY REPRESENTED A RUSSIAN CONCESSION. AT THE FIRST LONDON CONFERENCE OF FOREIGN MINISTERS IN OCTOBER, MOLOTOV HAD CONTENDED THAT ONLY THE SOVIET UNION, GREAT BRITAIN AND THE UNITED STATES SHOULD WRITE THE ITALIAN SETTLEMENT. WHILE

THE UNITED STATES WANTED TO INCLUDE BOTH FRANCE AND CHINA AS SIGNATORS. RUSSIA, HOWEVER, HAS POINT THE BIG THREE ALONE SHOULD WRITE THE ITALIAN TREATIES.

SOME DIPLOMATS BELIEVED THAT EVEN BETTER NEWS WOULD COME OUT LATER ON. THEY CONSIDERED IT SIGNIFICANT THAT THE ISSUE OF THE PLACE TREATIES, WHICH BROKE DOWN THE FIVE-POWER LONDON CONFERENCE, HAD BEEN SETTLED IN SUCH A SHORT TIME.

YET TO COME UNDER THE BIG THREE MANNER ARE THE QUESTION OF THE ATOM BOMB, CONTROL OF JAPAN AND THE DISTURBANCES IN IRAN.

ON THE QUESTION OF THE ATOM BOMB MOST DIPLOMATIC OBSERVERS BELIEVED THE FOREIGN MINISTERS WOULD REACH AGREEMENT ON ITS FUTURE CONTROL. THEY SAID IT SEEMED LIKELY THAT BRITAIN AND THE UNITED STATES WOULD INFORM RUSSIA OF THE PLACE OVER TO THE UNITED NATIONS ORGANIZATION. THEIR POSSIBLE INTENTIONS TO TURN IT

MEANWHILE, UNITED NATIONS DELEGATES FELT CERTAIN THAT THE ATOM BOMB WOULD BE DISCUSSED AT THE FIRST SESSION OF THE PEACE AGENCY'S GENERAL ASSEMBLY HERE IN JANUARY.

NIGHT LEAD CHRISTMAS ROUNDUP (520)

BY HELEN CAMP

LONDON, DEC 24-(AP)-THE BLEAKNESS OF A CHRISTMAS SHADOWED BY DESTITUTION AND DEATH WAS LIGHTENED THROUGHOUT THE WORLD TONIGHT BY A SPIRIT OF GIVING AND GRATITUDE AND BY THE APTITUDE OF AMERICAN SOLDIERS TO MAKE A HOME AWAY FROM HOME.

THROUGHOUT EUROPE, WHERE SHIVERING PEOPLE HAVE FEARED RATHER THAN DREAMED OF A WHITE CHRISTMAS, AMERICAN SERVICE MEN ARE PLAYING SANTA CLAUS. IN GERMANY, ITALY AND FRANCE THEY ARE DISTRIBUTING THEIR OWN CANDY RATIONS, GIVING PARTIES, PUTTING ON MOVIES AND PUNCH AND JUDY SHOWS FOR CHILDREN. IN VIENNA THEY VOLUNTARILY CUT THEIR FOOD RATIONS TO SAVE SUPPLIES FOR ORPHANS' PARTIES AND CONSERVED FUEL THAT AN EXTRA RATION MIGHT BE DISTRIBUTED TO THE AUSTRIANS.

IN BULGARIA TROOPS WHO MIGHT HAVE BEEN ENJOYING WINTER SPORTS ARE GIVING A PARTY FOR CHILDREN AND EXPLAINING CHRISTMAS CUSTOMS OF THE UNITED STATES.

OFFICERS IN BUCHAREST HAVE OPENED THEIR HOMES TO GUESTS. A SMALL GARRISON OF TROOPS IN ICELAND WILL JOIN IN SINGING CHRISTMAS CAROLS.

TROOPS TRYING TO FORGET THAT THE THREAT OF CIVIL WAR IN NORTH CHINA HAD DIMMED THEIR CHANCES OF GOING HOME SEARCHED FOR CHRISTMAS CHEER IN SHANGHAI'S NIGHT SPOTS.

IN INDIA, 69,000 MEN AWAITING TRANSPORTATION TO THE UNITED STATES WERE TOLD BY MAJ.GEN.C.A.TERRY THAT "HOME MUST REMAIN A DREAM A LITTLE WHILE LONGER," BUT HUNDREDS OF EVERGREENS WERE CHOPPED OUT OF DARJEELING FORESTS FOR CHRISTMAS TREES, AND ENOUGH TURKEY WAS DISTRIBUTED BY TRAIN AND PLANE TO PROVIDE "SECONDS" FOR NEW YEAR'S DAY.

AMERICAN ENLISTED MEN ENTERTAINED RELEASED INTERNEE CHILDREN IN SINGAPORE AND IN JAVA CHILDREN WAVED EXCITEDLY AS A LIFE-SIZE SANTA STUFFED WITH GOODIES WAS PARACHUTED FROM AN RAF PLANE. IN BATAVIA THE CREW OF A U.S. NAVAL VESSEL UNLOADED THE CARGO THEMSELVES SO THEY COULD SAIL AGAIN TO EVACUATE A SHIPLOAD OF DUTCH WOMEN AND CHILDREN ON CHRISTMAS DAY.

NOT ONLY COLLECTIVELY, BUT INDIVIDUALLY, GI'S ARE REMEMBERING PEOPLE WHO HELPED THEM DURING THE WAR AND ARE TRYING TO HELP THOSE WHO DIDN'T.

THE CREW OF AN ENGLISH TUGBOAT RECEIVED A PARCEL OF FOOD FROM AN AMERICAN AIRMAN THEY RESCUED IN 1941. THE PILOT OF AN AMERICAN PLANE FORCED DOWN NEAR COPENHAGEN IN 1944 SENT A WREATH FOR THE GRAVE OF A FREEDOM FIGHTER WHO AIDED HIS 10-MAN CREW AND LATER WAS SHOT BY THE GERMANS.

UNRRA DISTRIBUTED 100,000 GIFT PARCELS IN POLAND. SOME RESTAURANT OWNERS IN BERLIN OFFERED FREE MEALS TO CHILDREN, AND CITIZENS COLLECTED $300,000 FOR GIFTS AND FOOD. DOCKERS AND WHOLESALE FRUIT DEALERS IN LONDON WORKED ALL WEEKEND UNLOADING A SHIPLOAD OF ORANGES FROM PALESTINE AND SEVERAL HUNDRED SHOPPERS QUEUED GOOD-NATUREDLY FOR TWO HOURS TO BUY THEM.

THE THEME OF ALL CHRISTMAS DECORATIONS IN DENMARK WAS RED, WHITE AND BLUE, IN HOMAGE TO THE ALLIES WHO LIBERATED THE COUNTRY. BELL-RINGERS IN THE COLOGNE, GERMANY, CATHEDRAL PREPARED TO RING THE WORLD'S LARGEST CHURCH BELL FOR THE FIRST TIME IN SIX YEARS.

SANTA'S VISIT WAS EXPECTED TO BE SOMEWHAT DELAYED AT LONELY SABLE ISLAND, 170 MILES OFF THE NOVA SCOTIA COAST. FOUR TIMES THIS YEAR A CANADIAN GOVERNMENT STEAMSHIP HAS LEFT THE MAINLAND WITH A CARGO OF CHRISTMAS GIFTS AND SUPPLIES, BUT EACH TIME HIGH SEAS HAVE FORCED IT TO TURN BACK. VATICAN CITY, DEC 24-(AP)-POPE PIUS XII, BROADCASTING HIS TRADITIONAL CHRISTMAS MESSAGE TO THE WORLD TODAY, EXCORIATED TOTALITARIANISM AS THE ROOT OF HUMAN MISERY, AND OUTLINED "FUNDAMENTAL PREREQUISITES FOR A TRUE AND LASTING PEACE."

THE HOLY FATHER CALLED FOR AN END TO "ARTIFICIAL CREATION THROUGH THE POWER OF WEALTH OF ARBITRARY CENSORSHIP," PLEADED FOR THE OUTLAWING OF HATE, PERSECUTION AND "THE UNJUST VEXATION OF HONEST CITIZENS" THROUGHOUT THE WORLD, AND WARNED THE NATIONS NOT TO COMMIT THEMSELVES THE CRIMES FOR WHICH THEY DENOUNCE OTHERS.

THE TRADITIONAL CHRISTMAS RECEPTION FOR CARDINALS AND MEMBERS OF THE PAPAL COURT TOOK PLACE IN THE GREAT CONSISTORIAL HALL OF THE VATICAN.

THE POPE, CLAD IN WHITE ROBES, SAT ON A GILDED THRONE FACING TWO MICROPHONES. HE LOOKED LESS PALE THAN USUAL, AND SPOKE IN FIRM TONES.

ABOUT 200 PRELATES, INCLUDING 18 CARDINALS, ATTENDED, ALONG WITH THREE CARDINALS-DESIGNATE.

HIS HOLINESS, WHO YESTERDAY CREATED 32 NEW CARDINALS, SAID HE HAD BEEN ANXIOUS THAT THE GREATEST POSSIBLE NUMBER OF RACES AND PEOPLES WOULD BE REPRESENTED IN THE COLLEGE OF CARDINALS, SO THAT "THIS CREATION MAY PORTRAY IN A LIVING MANNER THE UNIVERSALITY OF THE CHURCH."

THIS UNIVERSALITY, HE SAID, IS MORE IMPORTANT TODAY THAN EVER BEFORE, WITH MANKIND FACING THE GIGANTIC TASK OF RESTORING PEACE, ORDER AND PROSPERITY TO THE WORLD.

IN HIS DENUNCIATION OF TOTALITARIANISM, THE PONTIFF SAID:

"TOTALITARIANISM LOWERS MAN TO THE STATE OF A MERE PAWN IN THE GAME OF POLITICS, A CIPHER IN ECONOMIC CALCULATIONS. WITH A STROKE OF THE PEN IT CHANGES THE FRONTIERS OF STATES. WITH ILL-CONCEALED CRUELTY IT DRIVES HUNDREDS OF THOUSANDS OF FAMILIES IN MOST SQUALID MISERY FROM THEIR HOMES, TEARS THEM OUT BY THE ROOTS AND WRENCHES THEM FROM A CIVILIZATION THEY HAVE STRIVEN FOR YEARS TO DEVELOP.

THESE, THE HOLY FATHER SAID, ARE THE "FUNDAMENTAL PREREQUISITES FOR A TRUE AND LASTING PEACE:"

"THE PRESENT HOUR CALLS IMPERIOUSLY FOR COLLABORATION, GOOD WILL, RECIPROCAL CONFIDENCE IN ALL PEOPLES. THE MOTIVES OF HATE, VENGEANCE, RIVALRY, ANTAGONISM AND UNFAIR AND DISHONEST COMPETITION MUST BE KEPT OUT OF POLITICAL AND ECONOMIC DEBATES AND DECISIONS.

"X X X ANYONE, THEN, WHO EXACTS THE EXPIATION OF CRIME THROUGH THE JUST PUNISHMENT OF CRIMINALS BECAUSE OF THEIR MISDEEDS SHOULD TAKE GOOD CARE NOT TO DO HIMSELF WHAT HE DENOUNCES IN OTHERS AS MISDEEDS OR CRIME.

"ONE WHO SEEKS REPARATIONS SHOULD BASE HIS CLAIM ON MORAL PRINCIPLES AND RESPECT FOR THOSE INVIOLABLE NATURAL RIGHTS WHICH REMAIN VALID EVEN FOR THOSE WHO HAVE SURRENDERED UNCONDITIONALLY TO THE VICTOR.

A17

DEC 25 1945

"ONE WHO ASKS FOR SECURITY IN THE FUTURE SHOULD NOT FORGET THAT ITS ONLY TRUE GUARANTEE LIES IN ONE'S OWN INTERNAL FORCE--THAT IS, IN SAFEGUARDING THE FAMILY, CHILDREN AND LABOR IN FRATERNAL CHARITY; THE OUTLAWING OF ALL HATE, ALL PERSECUTION, ALL UNJUST VEXATION OF HONEST CITIZENS; IN LOYAL CONCORD BETWEEN STATE AND STATE, BETWEEN PEOPLE AND PEOPLE.

"TO SECURE THIS, MEN MUST EVERYWHERE FORBID THE ARTIFICIAL CREATION THROUGH THE POWER OF WEALTH OF ARBITRARY CENSORSHIP; ONE-SIDED JUDGMENTS AND FALSE ASSERTIONS OF A SO-CALLED PUBLIC OPINION WHICH SWAYS THE IDEAS AND WILL OF THE ELECTORATE LIKE REEDS SHAKEN BY THE WIND.

"LET DUE HEED BE PAID TO THE TRUE AND OVERWHELMING MAJORITY OF MEN MADE UP OF THOSE WHO LIVE HONESTLY AND PEACEFULLY BY THEIR OWN LABOR IN THEIR OWN FAMILY CIRCLE, AND WHO DESIRE TO DO THE WILL OF GOD.

"YESTERDAY," THE PONTIFF SAID, "WE WERE SCATTERING DESTRUCTION, DISASTER, MISERY OVER VAST TERRITORIES; AND TODAY, WHEN THEY MUST REBUILD, MEN BUT FAINTLY REALIZE HOW MUCH PERSPICACITY AND FORESIGHT, HOW MUCH RECTITUDE AND GOOD WILL MUST GO TO THE TASK OF BRINGING THE WORLD BACK FROM PHYSICAL AND SPIRITUAL DEVASTATION AND RUIN, TO LAW, ORDER AND PEACE.

"SO EVEN THIS CHRISTMAS IS A STILL TIME, OF HOPE AND OF PRAYER TO THE INCARNATE SON OF GOD, THAT HE THE KING OF PEACE WHOSE FACE ALL THE EARTH DESIRES TO SEE, MAY GIVE TO THE WORLD HIS PEACE."

REFERRING TO THE YEARS OF SORROW AND PRIVATION THAT ACCOMPANIED THE WAR THE HOLY FATHER SAID:

"WHAT A SIGH OF RELIEF THEN AROSE FROM ALL OUR HEARTS, AS WE HEARD THAT THE GREAT CONFLICT HAD ENDED, FIRST IN EUROPE, THEN IN ASIA. WHAT FERVENT PRAYERS HAD RISEN DURING THE LONG YEARS OF STRIFE TO THE THRONE OF GOD, IMPLORING HIM TO SHORTEN THE DAYS OF AFFLICTION AND STAY THE HANDS OF THOSE ANGELS WHO HOLD THE VIALS OF THE CUPS OF WRATH FOR THE SINS OF MEN. NOW BY THE MERCY OF GOD, THE HUMAN FAMILY WILL AGAIN ONCE MORE TO CELEBRATE A CHRISTMAS WITHOUT THE TERRORS OF WAR ON LAND AND SEA AND ESPECIALLY IN THE AIR, FILLING MEN'S HEARTS WITH DEADLY ANGUISH. FOR THIS TURN OF EVENTS, LET US GIVE ALL HUMBLE THANKS TO OUR OMNIPOTENT LORD."

THE HOLY FATHER CONCLUDED HIS MESSAGE WITH AN APPEAL ON BEHALF OF WAR AND POLITICAL PRISONERS. HE PRAISED THOSE WHO HAD "STRIVEN TO ALLEVIATE AND ABBREVIATE THEIR SORROWFUL CONDITION," BUT EXPRESSED SORROW OVER THE SUFFERING SOMETIMES INFLICTED ON PRISONERS AND DEPORTED PEOPLE.

SECOND NIGHT LEAD FOREIGN MINISTERS (200 UP)
BY EDDY GILMORE

MOSCOW, DEC 24-(AP)-THE UNITED STATES, RUSSIA AND GREAT BRITAIN HAVE AGREED ON THE PROCEDURE FOR THE PEACE TREATIES FOR THE DEFEATED NATIONS OF ITALY, ROMANIA, BULGARIA, HUNGARY AND FINLAND, AN OFFICIAL ANNOUNCEMENT FROM THE CONFERENCE OF FOREIGN MINISTERS SAID TONIGHT.

THE BIG THREE, THE ANNOUNCEMENT SAID, HAVE ASKED CHINA AND FRANCE TO ADHERE TO THE PROCEDURE WORKED OUT BY U.S. SECRETARY OF STATE JAMES F.BYRNES, BRITISH FOREIGN SECRETARY ERNEST BEVIN AND SOVIET FOREIGN COMMISSAR VYACHESLAV M.MOLOTOV AT THEIR PRESENT CONFERENCE.

TERMS OF THE PEACE TREATY WITH ITALY WILL BE DRAFTED BY THE FOREIGN MINISTERS OF THE UNITED STATES, GREAT BRITAIN, RUSSIA AND FRANCE, THE ANNOUNCEMENT SAID.

PEACE TREATIES FOR ROMANIA, BULGARIA AND HUNGARY WILL BE DRAWN UP BY RUSSIA, THE UNITED STATES AND GREAT BRITAIN. FINLAND'S PEACE TREATY WILL BE COMPLETED BY ENGLAND AND RUSSIA.

"CONVERSATIONS ARE CONTINUING IN A FRIENDLY SPIRIT," THE ANNOUNCEMENT SAID, ADDING THAT "IT IS HOPED THAT A COMMUNIQUE COVERING THE WORK OF THE CONFERENCE MAY BE ISSUED WITHIN A DAY OR TWO."

THE ANNOUNCEMENT WAS ISSUED AS THE TRI-POWER CONFERENCE DREW NEAR AN END AND INFORMED SOURCES SAID THE MAJOR NATIONS NOW STAND MUCH CLOSER TOGETHER THAN THEY HAVE IN MANY MONTHS.

THE STATEMENT SAID THAT WHEN PREPARATIONS FOR THE TREATIES HAVE BEEN COMPLETED BY THE MAJOR POWERS THE COUNCIL OF FOREIGN MINISTERS "WILL CONVOKE A CONFERENCE FOR THE PURPOSE OF CONSIDERING THE TREATIES OF PEACE."

THE CONFERENCE WILL CONSIST OF THE FIVE MEMBERS OF THE COUNCIL OF FOREIGN MINISTERS (THE UNITED STATES, RUSSIA, GREAT BRITAIN, CHINA AND FRANCE) TOGETHER WITH ALL MEMBERS OF THE UNITED NATIONS WHICH ACTIVELY WAGED WAR WITH SUBSTANTIAL MILITARY FORCES AGAINST THE ENEMY."

THE ANNOUNCEMENT LISTED THE FOLLOWING NATIONS AS ELIGIBLE TO PARTICIPATE: RUSSIA, GREAT BRITAIN, THE UNITED STATES, CHINA, FRANCE, AUSTRALIA, BELGIUM, WHITE RUSSIA, BRAZIL, CANADA, CZECHOSLOVAKIA, ETHIOPIA, GREECE, INDIA, THE NETHERLANDS, NEW ZEALAND, NORWAY, POLAND, UNION OF SOUTH AFRICA, YUGOSLAVIA AND THE UKRAINE.

THE CONFERENCE, THE ANNOUNCEMENT SAID, WILL BE CALLED "NOT LATER THAN MAY 1, 1946."

AS A RESULT OF THE AGREEMENT IN MOSCOW THE DEPUTY FOREIGN MINISTERS WILL IMMEDIATELY RESUME THEIR WORK IN LONDON.

THE ANNOUNCEMENT SAID THE "PEACE TREATIES WILL COME INTO FORCE IMMEDIATELY AFTER THEY HAVE BEEN RATIFIED BY THE RESPECTIVE ALLIED STATES WHICH ARE SIGNATORY TO THE RESPECTIVE ARMISTICES X X X " AND AFTER RATIFICATION BY THE "ENEMY STATES IN QUESTION."

BY THE AGREEMENT ON PEACE TREATY PRECEDURE THE BACKGROUND OF ONE OF THE MOST TROUBLESOME PRE-REQUISITES TO GETTING THE WORLD BACK ON A FULL PEACETIME BASIS APPEARED TO BE WELL ON THE WAY TOWARD SOLUTION.

WITH THIS PROGRESS ACHIEVED BYRNES, MOLOTOV AND BEVIN INTIMATED DECISIONS WILL BE FORTHCOMING SHORTLY ON OTHER MATTERS OF WORLD WIDE INTEREST.

DEC 25 1945

A66

THE PROCEDURE AGREED UPON BY THE THREE FOREIGN MINISTERS WAS REGARDED BY INFORMED PERSONS IN FOREIGN DIPLOMATIC QUARTERS HERE AS A FAIR COMPROMISE OF THE POSITIONS TAKEN AT THE RECENT UNSUCCESSFUL LONDON MEETING OF THE COUNCIL OF FOREIGN MINISTERS.

MOST OF THE BUSINESS OF THE CONFERENCE WAS SAID TO HAVE BEEN CONCLUDED BY TODAY. OBVIOUSLY ALL PROBLEMS HAVE NOT BEEN SETTLED, BUT SOME OUTSTANDING ONES HAVE COME UNDER DISCUSSION AND PROGRESS UNDOUBTEDLY HAS BEEN MADE.

WHAT HAS NOT BEEN AGREED UPON AT MOSCOW IS APT TO BE BROUGHT UP IN WASHINGTON IN THE SPRING. ON MORE PRESSING MATTERS, THE SOLUTIONS WILL BE SOUGHT THROUGH DIPLOMATIC CHANNELS.

SECRETARY BYRNES IS SAID TO BE PLEASED WITH THE RESULTS OF THE CONFERENCE AND GLAD HE MADE THE TRIP. HE IS REPORTED ANXIOUS NOT TO RAISE AMERICAN HOPES TOO HIGH ABOUT THE ACCOMPLISHMENTS, HOPING THE AMERICANS WILL LOOK AT THE RESULTS IN A LONG-RANGE VIEW.

THE BRITISH VIEW IS SAID TO BE SLIGHTLY LESS OPTIMISTIC, BUT THEY, TOO, LOOK ON THE CONFERENCE AS HAVING ACHIEVED POSITIVE RESULTS.

WHAT MIGHT HAVE BEEN THE FINAL MEETING OF THE HISTORIC CONFERENCE WAS AN INFORMAL ONE. IT WAS CONVENED AT 3 P.M. AND STILL WAS IN SESSION AN HOUR LATER.

THE GUARDED OPTIMISM WITH WHICH DIPLOMATIC OBSERVERS HAVE REGARDED THE CONFERENCE APPEARED TO HAVE BEEN BOLSTERED CONSIDERABLY WITHIN THE PAST FEW DAYS AMID INDICATIONS THAT THE PROGRESS OF THE FOREIGN MINISTERS HAS BEEN RELATIVELY SMOOTH. MOST OF THESE OBSERVERS LOOK FOR CONCRETE ACCOMPLISHMENTS.

IT IS CONSIDERED MOST LIKELY THAT THE CONFERENCE HAS HAD A BROAD RANGE--ALL THE WAY FROM THE QUESTION OF ATOMIC CONTROL TO MATTERS WHICH, THOUGH IMPORTANT IN THEMSELVES, ARE MINOR BY COMPARISON. THIS IN ITSELF GAVE RISE TO HOPE THAT GOOD NEWS WILL BE FORTHCOMING SOON.

A7

IN INFORMED QUARTERS IT WAS CONSIDERED RELATIVELY CERTAIN THAT BYRNES AND BEVIN HAVE NOT YET RELEASED TO THE RUSSIANS ANY OF THE ATOM BOMB PRODUCTION SECRETS HELD BY THE UNITED STATES, BRITAIN AND CANADA. BUT THESE PERSONS WERE JUST AS CERTAIN THAT THE FOREIGN SECRETARIES HAD DISCUSSED FULLY THE MATTER OF WORLD CONTROL OF ATOMIC ENERGY.

THE OPTIMISTIC ATMOSPHERE STILL WAS APPARENT. THE OBSERVERS SAID THE MEETINGS SEEMED FAR MORE CORDIAL THAN THOSE OF THE STALEMATED FIVE-POWER LONDON CONFERENCE OF FOREIGN MINISTERS.

IT WAS UNDERSTOOD HERE THAT BYRNES AND BEVIN WERE ADHERING TO THE POLICY LAID DOWN BY THEIR GOVERNMENTS, TO RETAIN PRODUCTION SECRETS OF THE ATOM BOMB UNTIL EFFECTIVE CONTROLS HAVE BEEN ESTABLISHED, WHILE WORKING FOR ULTIMATE REALIZATION OF THE PLAN TO PLACE CONTROL OF THE WEAPON IN THE HANDS OF A UNITED NATIONS COMMISSION.

BY GEORGE PALMER

BETHLEHEM, DEC. 24-(AP)-IN A SMALL CHURCH BUILT ON THE HALLOWED ROCK OF THE MOST SACRED SPOT OF THE CHRISTIAN WORLD, HUNDREDS OF WORSHIPPERS FELL TO THEIR KNEES IN GLADNESS AND HUMILITY TONIGHT AS THEY WITNESSED THE MAJESTIC CLIMAX TO A FULL DAY OF PRAYER AND ADORATION--THE SOLEMN AND SANCTIFIED RE-ENACTMENT OF THE BIRTH OF JESUS OF NAZARETH, THE PRINCE OF PEACE.

AS STARS SHONE BRIGHTLY THROUGH THE COLD CHRISTMAS AIR AND THE GLOW OF A PALE WANING MOONLIGHT WRAPPED THE LITTLE TOWN OF BETHLEHEM IN AN AURA OF HOLINESS, VOICES OF THE HUMBLE ECHOED THROUGH THE LITTLE CHURCH OF ST.CATHERINE, WHICH ADJOINS THE CHURCH OF THE NATIVITY. THE VOICES OF THOSE UTSIDEA WHO HAD JAM

NATIVITY. THE VOICES OF THOSE OUTSIDE, WHO HAD JAMMED THE MANGER SQUARE TO OVERFLOWING, WERE HEARD IN THE HILLS BEYOND.

THE PONTIFICAL MASS WHICH BEGAN AT 10 P.M. AMID SOFT SACRED MUSIC AND DEEP VOICES OF TIERS OF CHOIRBOYS WAS CELEBRATED ON THIS FIRST PEACETIME CHRISTMAS EVE IN SIX YEARS BY THE MOST REV.VICAR OF PORT SAID, MONSIGNOR ANGELIMARIAE MIRAL, WHO CAME TO THE HOLY LAND THIS WEEK TO TAKE OVER HOLIDAY DUTIES OF THE AILING LATIN PATRIARCH MONSIGNOR LOUIS BARLASSINA.

RESPLENDENT IN THE PURPLE ROBES OF HIS HIGH CATHOLIC OFFICE, THE VICAR, LED BY DOUBLE ROWS OF ALTAR BOYS AND BEARERS OF TALL HOLY CANDLES, MOVED SLOWLY FROM THE SACRISTY AND AT ONCE ALL THE BEAUTY OF THE LATIN PAGEANTRY UNFOLDED BEFORE THE PILGRIMS.

A73

BENEATH AN ALTAR BLAZING WITH LIGHT HE OFFERED A SILENT PRAYER AND, AS THE MULTITUDE BEHIND HIM KNELT IN DEVOTION, ONLY THE LOW MUMBLING OF THEIR PRAYERS WERE HEARD.

SUDDENLY AT MIDNIGHT THE GREAT BELLS IN THE TOWERS OF THE NATIVITY RANG OUT, LOUD AND CLEAR.

ON THE HIGH ALTAR A BABE APPEARED, A STATUTE OF THE HOLY INFANT WAS BEFORE THEM, AND AS THE VICAR TOOK THE SYMBOL OF THE CHRIST CHILD IN HIS ARMS, SOFT STRAINS OF SACRED SONG FILLED THE ROOM.

THEN A SOLEMN PROCESSION OF CHOIR BOYS, ACOLYTES AND PRIESTS CARRYING FLICKERING CANDLES BEGAN TO WIND THROUGH THE LITTLE CHURCH. FOLLOWED BY HIGH DIGNITARIES OF THE CHURCH AND FINALLY BY THE VICAR BEARING THE STATUE OF THE INFANT, THEY FILED OVER THE STONE STEPS WHICH LEAD TO THE GROTTO OF THE NATIVITY WHERE THE TINY REPRESENTATION OF CHRIST WAS PLACED ON THE SACRED SPOT WHERE, NEARLY 2,000 YEARS AGO, CHRIST THE REDEEMER WAS BORN IN THE MANGER.

CHRISTMAS
BY GEORGE PALMER

BETHLEHEM,DEC.24-(AP)-THIS LITTLE TOWN NESTLED IN THE ROLLING HILLS OF JUDEA OPENED ITS ARMS AGAIN TODAY TO ANOTHER ANNUAL PILGRIMAGE OF THE DEVOUT TO THE SACRED SPOT WHERE CHRIST WAS BORN NEARLY 2,000 YEARS AGO.

THE PILGRIMS TOOK PART IN A FULL DAY OF DEVOTIONS AND BENEDICTION, COLORFUL PROCESSIONS AND SOLEMN MEDITATION.

HUNDREDS HAVE COME FROM FAR AND NEAR TO BE AT THIS HOLY PLACE ON THE HOLIEST OF CHRISTIAN DAYS TO WITNESS ONCE AGAIN THE STIRRING ANNUAL CEREMONY OF CELEBRATION OF THE BIRTH OF THE INFANT JESUS. THE CEREMONY TAKES PLACE IN THE CHURCH OF ST.CATHERINE, WHICH ADJOINS THE CHURCH OF THE NATIVITY.

THOUSANDS OF VISITORS, MANY OF THEM IN AMERICAN KHAKI, FILE ACROSS COBBLESTONE STREETS IN THIS ANCIENT VILLAGE TO WATCH THE SOLEMN ENTRY OF THE RELIGIOUS LEADER WHO YEARLY LEADS PRIESTS AND ACOLYTES AND HIS FOLLOWERS INTO THE CHURCH OF THE NATIVITY IN THE SQUARE WHICH HOLDS THE HOLY MANGER.

THROUGHOUT THE AFTERNOON PONTIFICAL VESPERS ARE HELD. MASSES ARE CELEBRATED IN THE GROTTO OF THE CHURCH OF THE NATIVITY EVERY HALF HOUR UNTIL 4 P.M. CHRISTMAS DAY.

THE DAY OF PRAYER REACHES IT CLIMAX AT MIDNIGHT TODAY WITH THE REENACTMENT OF THE MIRACLE OF CHRIST'S BIRTH.

CHRISTMAS EVE CEREMONIES ALWAYS OPEN BEFORE NOON AT THE JAFFA GATE, AT THE WALLS OF THE OLD CITY OF JERUSALEM. HIGH ABOVE THE CROWD THE TOWER OF DAVID RISES IN SYMBOLIC SPLENDOR. IT IS HERE ANNUALLY THAT THE PROCESSION TO BETHLEHEM BEGINS.

THE PROCESSION WINDS FIVE MILES FROM JERUSALEM TO BETHLEHEM--THE FIVE MILES IN WHICH THE HISTORY OF CHRISTIANITY WAS BORN. IT IS THE ROAD WHICH WAS TRAVELED BY JOSEPH AND MARY.

THE PROCESSION MOVES SLOWLY THROUGH THE SUBURBS OF JERUSALEM AND INTO THE BETHLEHEM ROAD, THENCE THROUGH A VALLEY AND PAST THE HILL OF EVIL COUNSEL, AND PAST THE HILL OF THE MAGI, WHERE THE WISE MEN RESTED ON THEIR JOURNEY ON THE NIGHT OF THE SAVIOR'S BIRTH. ON FOOT, AND IN MOTOR CARS THE DEVOUT JOURNEY PAST THE TERRACED HILLS OF PALESTINE FARMLAND AND THE OLIVE GROVES AND UP A GENTLE SLOPE TO THE SITE OF RACHEL'S TOMB.

THERE THE PROCESSION TRADITIONALLY IS HALTED AND IS MET BY THE MAYOR OF BETHLEHEM AND OTHER DIGNITARIES OF THE TOWN. THEN IT PROCEEDS INTO TOWN, AND WAITING CROWDS SEE THE SOLEMN ENTRANCE OF THE LEADERS INTO THE CHURCH OF THE NATIVITY.

THE AFTERNOON AND EARLY EVENING ARE DEVOTED TO VESPERS, MASSES AND MEDITATION, AND THE MIRACLE OF THE CHRIST CHILD'S BIRTH IS CELEBRATED AT A SOLEMN HIGH MASS AT MIDNIGHT.

WASHINGTON, DEC.24-(AP)-PETER FRASER, PRIME MINISTER OF NEW ZEALAND, SAID TODAY HE WOULD LIKE TO SEE THE POWER TO GOVERN JAPAN TRANSFERRED FROM THE EXCLUSIVE CUSTODY OF THE UNITED STATES TO THE FAR EASTERN ADVISORY COMMISSION.
HE EMPHASIZED TO NEWSMEN, AFTER BRIEF VISITS WITH PRESIDENT TRUMAN AND ACTING SECRETARY OF STATE DEAN ACHESON, THAT HE HAD NO FAULT TO FIND WITH GENERAL MACARTHUR'S ADMINISTRATION THUS FAR, HOWEVER.
"HE'S DONE A REMARKABLY FINE JOB," SAID FRASER, WHO IS EN ROUTE TO LONDON FOR THE FIRST MEETING OF THE UNITED NATIONS ASSEMBLY. "I BELIEVE, HOWEVER, THAT ALL OF THE POWERS WHICH CONTRIBUTED TO THE WAR AGAINST JAPAN SHOULD NOW ASSUME RESPONSIBILITY FOR GOVERNIN THAT COUNTRY."
THE FAR EASTERN ADVISORY COMMISSION, COMPOSED OF REPRESENTATIVES OF TEN NATIONS, LEAVES WEDNESDAY MORNING FOR JAPAN TO STUDY HOW MACARTHUR'S DIRECTIVES TO THE JAPANESE HAVE BEEN CARRIED OUT. ESTABLISHED IN WASHINGTON NEARLY TWO MONTHS AGO, IT HAS BEEN MOSTLY A SOUNDING BOARD RATHER THAN A POLICY-MAKING BODY TO DATE.
RUSSIA NEVER HAS JOINED THE COMMISSION, HOLDING OUT FOR A FOUR-POWER (U.S., RUSSIA, BRITAIN, CHINA) CONTROL COUNCIL TO ADMINISTER JAPAN. FRASER SAID HE WAS "ENTIRELY OPPOSED" TO THE FOUR-POWER COUNCIL.
"NEW ZEALAND WOULD AGREE TO LEAVE THE ACTUAL ADMINISTRATION IN JAPAN ENTIRELY TO THE AMERICANS, AND MY PERSONAL CHOICE FOR THE TOP ADMINISTRATOR WOULD BE MACARTHUR," FRASER SAID.
"BUT WE FEEL THAT THE DIRECTIVES TO THAT ADMINISTRATION SHOULD BE THE WORK OF TEN -- OR ELEVEN -- NATIONS, NOT JUST ONE."
HE SAID HE BELIEVED DECISIONS ON THE COMMISSION, IF IT WERE GIVEN THE ACTUAL POLICY-MAKING POWER, SHOULD BE BY MAJORITY VOTE IN MOST CASES, OR PERHAPS BY A TWO-THIRDS MAJORITY ON IMPORTANT ISSUES.
FRASER PREDICTED THAT THE BIG FIVE VETO POWER ON THE UNITED NATION SECURITY COUNCIL WOULD EVENTUALLY BE TOSSED OUT. HE AND ANOTHER SOUTHWEST PACIFIC STATESMAN -- AUSTRALIA'S HERBERT VERE EVATT -- LED THE FIGHT AGAINST THE VETO POWER AT THE SAN FRANCISCO CONFERENCE.

SPAIN

BY GRAHAM HOVEY
WASHINGTON,DEC.24-(AP)-AS RELATIONS MOUNT BETWEEN GENERALISSIMO FRANCO AND THE ALLIES, SPANISH REPUBLICANS ARE INCREASING EFFORTS TO WIN MAJOR POWER RECOGNITION FOR THEIR GOVERNMENT-IN-EXILE.
THIS REGIME, ESTABLISHED IN MEXICO CITY SOME FOUR MONTHS AGO, HOPES TO TAKE OVER AS A "CARETAKER" GOVERNMENT IN MADRID WHEN--AND IF--FRANCO IS OUSTED.
RECENT SPANISH REPUBLICAN DEVELOPMENTS IN WASHINGTON INCLUDE:
1. REGISTRATION WITH THE STATE DEPARTMENT OF JUAN NEANA, FORMER SPANISH EMBASSY SECRETARY, AS AGENT IN THE U.S. FOR THE EXILED REGIME.
2. VISITS TO ACTING SECRETARY OF STATE DEAN ACHESON BY FERNANDO DE LOS RIOS, FOREIGN MINISTER OF THE MEXICO CITY REGIME, AND JUAN NEGRIN, LAST PREMIER OF REPUBLICAN SPAIN.
THESE EVENTS COINCIDED WITH THE RETURN AND RETIREMENT OF NORMAN ARMOUR, U.S. AMBASSADOR TO SPAIN, AND INDICATIONS PRESIDENT TRUMAN WILL LEAVE THE MADRID POST VACANT, AT LEAST FOR THE PRESENT.

DEC 251945

HOW FAR SPANISH REPUBLICANS WILL GET IS SPECULATIVE. STATE DEPARTMENT OFFICIALS GENERALLY ARE COOL TO THE REPUBLICAN GOVERNMENT. THEY EMPHASIZE THAT REGISTRATION OF NEANA AS AGENT SHOULD NOT BE CONSTRUED AS EVEN TACIT APPROVAL BY THE U.S. OF THE REGIME HE REPRESENTS.
RECALLING UNPLEASANT POST-LIBERATION EXPERIENCES OF EUROPEAN GOVERNMENTS LONG ABSENT FROM THEIR HOMELANDS DURING THE WAR, THESE OFFICIALS POINT OUT THAT MOST SPANISH REPUBLICAN LEADERS HAVE NOT BEEN IN SPAIN SINCE THE AXIS-AIDED FRANCO REBELLION WON OUT IN 1939.
EVEN IF FRANCO IS OUSTED, MOST U.S.OFFICIALS BELIEVE IT WOULD BE AS IMPOSSIBLE FOR AN EXILED REGIME TO RETURN TO MADRID AS A GOVERNMENT AS IT WAS FOR THE LONDON POLES TO TAKE OVER IN WARSAW OR FOR KING PETER TO RULE IN BELGRADE.
THE CONSPICUOUS EXCEPTION TO UNSUCCESSFUL EXILED GOVERNMENTS, HOWEVER, WAS THE PROVISIONAL FRENCH REGIME OF GEN.CHARLES DE GAULLE. IT IS NOW CLEAR THAT SPANISH REPUBLICAN STRATEGY IS TO FOLLOW DE GAULLE'S

30.24-32635

EXAMPLE METICULOUSLY.

EUROPEAN EXPERTS SAY THESE WERE THE MOST IMPORTANT REASONS FOR DE GAULLE'S SUCCESS.

1. HE NEVER LOST CONTACT WITH DEMOCRATIC LEADERS INSIDE FRANCE AND BROUGHT THEM OUT TO SERVE UNDER HIM WHEN ADVANTAGEOUS.

2. HE COMPOSED DIFFERENCES AMONG FRENCH RESISTANCE FORCES AND BANDED THEM INTO A CENTRAL ORGANIZATION WHICH RECOGNIZED HIM AS ITS LEADER.

MEANA SAYS SPANISH REPUBLICANS ALREADY HAVE MADE MUCH PROGRESS TOWARD THOSE GOALS. HE TOLD A REPORTER MOST ANTI-FRANCO FORCES INSIDE SPAIN NOW RECOGNIZE THE EXILED GOVERNMENT AND THAT ALL UNDERGROUND FIGHTING FORCES NOW TAKE ORDERS FROM A CENTRAL ORGANIZATION.

A157WX

TO STRENGTHEN TIES WITH THESE ELEMENTS IN THE HOMELAND, THE REPUBLICANS RECENTLY SMUGGLED LABOR LEADER JOSE E.LEIVA OUT OF SPAIN AND NAMED HIM AGRICULTURE MINISTER IN THE EXILED GOVERNMENT. MEANA SAYS MORE WILL FOLLOW.

RECOGNIZED TO DATE BY ONLY MEXICO, GUATEMALA, PANAMA AND VENEZUELA, THE REPUBLICAN GOVERNMENT APPARENTLY FACES A LONG AND DIFFICULT ROAD. DESPITE MEANA'S UNITY TALK, SPANISH REPUBLICANS IN EXILE NEVER HAVE BEEN ABLE TO FORGET THEIR DIFFERENCES.

FOR EXAMPLE, DR. NEGRIN, LEFT WING SOCIALIST LEADER, AND HIS COMMUNIST SUPPORTERS, ARE NOT REPRESENTED IN THE EXILED GOVERNMENT'S CABINET. THIS MAY EXPLAIN WHY RUSSIA, WHICH NEVER RECOGNIZED FRANCO, HAS NOT GIVEN OFFICIAL SANCTION TO THE EXILED GOVERNMENT, EITHER.

THIS IS THE CONSENSUS OF MANY VETERANS' ADMINISTRATION OFFICIALS WHO EMPHASIZE THAT THE REORGANIZATION HAS BEEN ADVOCATED BY BOTH HAWLEY AND BY OMAR N.BRADLEY, VETERANS ADMINISTRATOR.

GEN.HAWLEY, NOW ITS ACTING SURGEON GENERAL ON LOAN FROM THE ARMY, HAS SAID THE ADMINISTRATION SHOULD SET OUT IMMEDIATELY TO HIRE OUTSTANDING PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS RELEASED BY THE ARMY AND NAVY.

"WE WILL NEED 10,000 DOCTORS WITHIN 10 YEARS," GEN.HAWLEY SAID. "NOW IS THE TIME TO START TO GET THEM."

IF HAWLEY IS APPOINTED CHIEF MEDICAL DIRECTOR, SOME ARRANGEMENT SIMILAR TO THAT MADE FOR BRADLEY PROBABLY WILL BE APPROVED. A SPECIAL ACT OF CONGRESS PERMITTED BRADLEY TO KEEP HIS ARMY STATUS AND ACCEPT A VETERANS' ADMINISTRATION SALARY OR HIS ARMY SALARY, WHICHEVER IS HIGHEST.

THE NEW VETERANS' REORGANIZATION BILL, PASSED LAST WEEK BY CONGRESS IN AN EFFORT TO SPEEDILY REALIGN THE MEDICAL DEPARTMENT, PROVIDES A SALARY OF $12,000 FOR CHIEF MEDICAL DIRECTOR.

HAWLEY TOLD REPORTERS THE ADMINISTRATION MUST MOVE IMMEDIATELY TO GET 1,125 DOCTORS, 1,200 NURSES AND 100 DENTISTS TO FILL VACANCIES.

MOST CRITICAL SHORTAGE IN THE ENTIRE VETERANS' ADMINISTRATION NOW IS IN PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, THE GENERAL SAID. LAST WEEK HE BORROWED 20,000 BEDS FROM THE ARMY AND NAVY WITH MEDICAL SERVICES TO GO WITH THEM, BUT HE EMPHASIZED AT THAT TIME IT WAS A "HOLLOW GESTURE" TO TAKE OVER ANY MORE ARMY AND NAVY HOSPITALS UNTIL THEY CAN BE STAFFED BY VETERANS' ADMINISTRATION DOCTORS.

ALREADY SEVEN ARMY HOSPITALS HAVE BEEN AUTHORIZED TO BE TAKEN OVER BY THE ADMINISTRATION BUT ONLY ONE HAS ACTUALLY BEEN TRANSFERRED, WINTER GENERAL HOSPITAL AT TOPEKA,KAS. A PRINCIPAL FACTOR IN DELAY IS SHORTAGE OF PERSONNEL.

THE NEW BILL AUTHORIZES A DEPUTY TO THE MEDICAL CHIEF AT $11,500.

LMEMEMBMBMBMBMBMBMEMPX

IS SHORTAGE OF PERSONNEL.

THE NEW BILL AUTHORIZES A DEPUTY TO THE MEDICAL CHIEF AT $11,500, EIGHT ASSISTANT MEDICAL DIRECTORS AT $11,000, A CHIEF OF NURSING SERVICE AT $8,000, AND AN ASSISTANT AT $7,000. IT OFFERS A BONUS OF 25 PERCENT OF SALARY FOR SPECIALISTS AND PROVIDES THAT RESIDENCIES MAY BE SET UP IN ADMINISTRATION HOSPITALS WHERE YOUNGER DOCTORS MAY STUDY TO BE SPECIALISTS. SUCH SALARIES CANNOT EXCEED $11,000 A YEAR.

THE PLAN WAS CREATED TO ATTRACT PROMISING YOUNG DOCTORS.

HAWLEY WAS CHIEF SURGEON IN THE EUROPEAN THEATER OF OPERATIONS AND HAS SERVED IN THE ARMY SINCE 1916. HE WAS A MAJOR IN THE MEDICAL CORPS IN FRANCE IN 1918.

(350) UNIFICATION

WASHINGTON,DEC.24-(AP)-PRESIDENT TRUMAN'S REQUEST FOR UNIFICATION OF THE ARMED FORCES MAY GET QUICK ATTENTION IN THE SENATE AFTER CONGRESS REASSEMBLED JANUARY 14.

SENATOR EDWIN C.JOHNSON (D-COLO) TOLD A REPORTER TODAY THAT THE SENATE MILITARY AFFAIRS COMMITTEE "SHOULD HAVE A BILL COVERING WHAT THE PRESIDENT ASKED READY FOR SENATE ACTION BY FEB.1."

IN HIS MESSAGE TO CONGRESS JUST BEFORE IT ADJOURNED FOR CHRISTMAS, MR.TRUMAN REQUESTED A SINGLE "DEPARTMENT OF NATIONAL DEFENSE" WITH "THREE COORDINATED BRANCHES" OF LAND, NAVAL AND AIR FORCES. THIS WOULD MERGE THE PRESENT SEPARATE NAVY AND WAR DEPARTMENTS INTO A SINGLE CABINET POST.

SENATOR CAPEHART (R-IND), WHO OPPOSES IMMEDIATE ACTION ON THE PRESIDENT'S REQUEST, SAID IN A SEPARATE INTERVIEW THAT IF THE UNIFICATION MEASURE IS BROUGHT UP IN THE SENATE "THERE ARE ENOUGH VOTES TO PASS IT."

THE INDIANA REPUBLICAN HAS URGED A CONGRESSIONAL "COOLING-OFF PERIOD" ON BOTH UNIFICATION AND THE PRESIDENT'S RECOMMENDATION FOR "UNIVERSAL TRAINING" OF YOUTH DURING PEACETIME.

"I KNOW THAT BOTH THE CONGRESS AND THE PUBLIC ARE CONFUSED ON THESE QUESTIONS," CAPEHART SAID. "THAT IS WHY I SUGGEST THAT PRESIDENT SET UP A COMMISSION FOR AN UNPREJUDICED STUDY OF THE OVER-ALL DEFENSE PROBLEMS. IN SIX MONTHS' TIME MANY WAR VETERANS WILL BE DISCHARGED AND CONGRESS SHOULD HAVE THEIR VIEWS BEFORE ANY ACTION."

CAPEHART SAID THE LENGTHY HEARINGS BY THE SENATE MILITARY AFFAIRS COMMITTEE ON UNIFICATION LEGISLATION HAD WON STRONG SUPPORT FOR MERGER IN THE SENATE.

JOHNSON, AUTHOR OF ONE OF THE MERGER BILLS AND ACTING CHAIRMAN DURING MOST OF THE WEEKS-LONG COMMITTEE HEARINGS, SAID HE AGREED WITH PRESIDENT TRUMAN THAT "FURTHER STUDIES OF THE GENERAL PROBLEM WOULD SERVE NO USEFUL PURPOSE." THE PRESIDENTIAL MESSAGE ADDED THAT THERE "IS ENOUGH EVIDENCE NOW AT HAND TO DEMONSTRATE BEYOND QUESTION THE NEED FOR A UNIFIED DEPARTMENT."

LEADERS FROM BOTH THE NAVY AND WAR DEPARTMENTS APPEARED BEFORE THE SENATE COMMITTEE PRIOR TO THE WHITE HOUSE UNIFICATION MESSAGE. ALL NAVAL WITNESSES OPPOSED CONSOLIDATION WHILE ALL WAR DEPARTMENT SPOKES URGED THE SINGLE DEFENSE DEPARTMENT.

ALL NAVAL WITNESSES OPPOSED CONSOLIDATION WHILE ALL WAR DEPARTMENT SPOKESMEN URGED THE SINGLE DEFENSE DEPARTMENT.

JOHNSON IS OPPOSED TO COMPULSORY TRAINING WHICH THE PRESIDENT LINKED TO UNIFICATION.

"I BELIEVE WE SHOULD ACT FIRST ON MERGER AND THEN DETERMINE WHAT IS NEEDED," HE SAID.

MIGHT LEAD PEARL HARBOR

BY J.M.DAVIS

WASHINGTON,DEC.24-(AP)-THE ALREADY UNCERTAIN FUTURE OF THE CONGRESSIONAL INVESTIGATION OF PEARL HARBOR WAS FURTHER COMPLICATED TODAY BY THE SERIOUS ILLNESS OF MAJ.GEN.WALTER C.SHORT, A STAR WITNESS.

SHORT, RETIRED OFFICER WHO COMMANDED ARMY FORCES AT HAWAII WHEN THE JAPANESE SLIPPED IN A SURPRISE RAID FOUR YEARS AGO, IS IN WALTER REED HOSPITAL WITH AN "ACUTE RESPIRATORY" ILLNESS.

THERE HAD BEEN SUGGESTIONS WITHIN THE SENATE-HOUSE COMMITTEE THAT SHORT AND REAR ADMIRAL HUSBAND E.KIMMEL, 1941 NAVAL COMMANDER OF THE PACIFIC FLEET, BE CALLED TO TESTIFY SOON AFTER THE HOLIDAY RECESS WHICH ENDS THIS WEEK.

BUT HOSPITAL AUTHORITIES SAID THAT THE 65-YEAR OLD SHORT CERTAINLY WILL BE DIRECTED BY HIS DOCTORS TO TAKE THINGS EASY. THEY SAID THERE IS NO ASSURANCE OF JUST WHEN HE WILL BE ABLE TO TESTIFY.

CONTRIBUTING ALSO TO UNCERTAINTY OF THE INQUIRY'S FUTURE IS THE FACT THAT NO NEW LEGAL STAFF HAS YET BEEN SELECTED TO REPLACE THE OUTGOING WILLIAM D.MITCHELL AND AIDES.

SENATOR LUCAS (D-ILL) OF THE COMMITTEE ANNOUNCED TODAY HE WOULD RECOMMEND WEYMOUTH KIRKLAND, CHICAGO LAWYER, AS MITCHELL'S SUCCESSOR. A STATEMENT ISSUED FROM LUCAS' OFFICE SAID KIRKLAND IS AN ATTORNEY FOR THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

REP.GEARHART (R-CALIF) IS BACKING EITHER OF TWO FORMER NATIONAL COMMANDERS OF THE AMERICAN LEGION--WARREN ATHERTON OF STOCKTON, CALIF., AND HARRY COLMERY OF TOPEKA,KANSAS.

GEARHART EXPRESSED THE COMMITTEE'S REGRET AT THE ILLNESS OF GENERAL SHORT. BUT HE SAID IT NEED NOT NECESSARILY AFFECT THE COURSE OF ACTION.

GEARHART RECALLED THAT ADMIRAL HAROLD R.STARK, 1941 CHIEF OF NAVAL OPERATIONS, IS SCHEDULED AS THE NEXT WITNESS.

"ADMIRAL STARK'S TESTIMONY PROBABLY WILL REQUIRE THE BETTER PART OF NEXT WEEK," GEARHART TOLD A REPORTER. "AND EVEN IF THE COMMITTEE DECIDES TO HEAR ADMIRAL KIMMEL FOLLOWING THAT, TWO OR THREE WEEKS MIGHT BE REQUIRED FOR HIM."

BUT GEARHART SAID HE BELIEVES THERE ARE SOME "CONTROVERSIAL MATTERS" WHICH OUGHT TO BE ATTENDED TO BEFORE EITHER SHORT OR KIMMEL IS CALLED.

HIGH AMONG THESE GEARHART LISTED:

"WHY WAS AN AIR ALERT CALLED AT HICKAM FIELD (IN HAWAII) DEC. 1,1941 AND WHY WAS IT CALLED OFF DEC.6?"

GEARHART HAS SAID HE HAS LETTERS FROM ENLISTED MEN TELLING OF SUCH A SEQUENCE.

WASHINGTON, DEC.24-(AP)-PRIME MINISTER PETER FRASER OF NEW ZEALAND, TODAY APPLAUDED SUGGESTIONS THAT THE UNITED NATIONS HEADQUARTERS BE ESTABLISHED AT HYDE PARK,N.Y.

IT WOULD, HE SAID "BE A FITTING MEMORIAL" TO FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT, WHOM HE CALLED "THE GREATEST FRIEND OF DEMOCRACY AND HUMAN PROGRESS THE WORLD HAS EVER KNOWN."

FRASER, EN ROUTE TO LONDON TO ATTEND THE UNITED NATIONS GENERAL ASSEMBLY NEXT MONTH ALSO TOLD REPORTERS AT A WHITE HOUSE CALL THAT IN HIS OPINION THE UNITED KINGDOM HAS NO INTENTION OF PARTICIPATING IN THE FINAL SETTLEMENT OF THE INDONESIAN PROBLEM EXCEPT THROUGH THE UNITED NATIONS ORGANIZATION.

HE SAID THE VETO POWER OF THE BIG NATIONS IN THE WORLD ORGANIZATION "CANNOT ENDURE" AND THAT EARLY ACTION SHOULD BE TAKEN TO REPEAL IT.

ALL MANDATES UNDER THE OLD LEAGUE OF NATIONS AND ALL ENEMY TERRITORY TAKEN OVER AS THE RESULT OF THE LAST WAR, FRASER SAID, SHOULD BE ON THE BASIS OF UNITED NATIONS TRUSTEESHIPS.

HE ADDED THAT GEN DOUGLAS MACARTHUR HAS DONE A "MAGNIFICENT JOB OF ADMINISTRATION" IN JAPAN AND THAT THE TIME IS ABOUT ARRIVED FOR A MORE ACTIVE PARTICIPATION IN OCCUPATION BY THE FAR EASTERN ADVISORY COMMISSION.

ECONOMIC AID

BY GRAHAM HOVER

WASHINGTON.DEC.24-(AP)-WITH INCREASING FREQUENCY, THE UNITED STATES IS DANGLING THE BAIT OF ECONOMIC AID BEFORE CERTAIN GOVERNMENTS SLOW TO ADOPT POLICIES THIS COUNTRY BELIEVES ESSENTIAL TO PEACE AND STABILITY.

DIPLOMATIC OFFICIALS UNDERSCORED THAT ANGLE TODAY IN ANALYZING THIS COUNTRY'S STATEMENT SATURDAY ANNOUNCING RECOGNITION OF THE NEW YUGOSLAV REPUBLIC WHILE CRITICIZING SOME PRACTICES OF MARSHAL TITO'S BELGRADE REGIME.

IN THE STATEMENT, ACTING SECRETARY OF STATE DEAN ACHESON EXPRESSED HOPE THE YUGOSLAVS SOON WOULD FOLLOW A COURSE WHICH WOULD "MAKE POSSIBLE THOSE RELATIONS, BOTH POLITICAL AND ECONOMIC," WHICH HE SAID THE U.S. DESIRES.

THIS HAD A FAMILIAR RING FOR DIPLOMATS WHO RECALLED PRESIDENT TRUMAN'S DIRECTIVE TO GEN.GEORGE C.MARSHALL ON CHINA DECEMBER 15 AND A LETTER THE LATE PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT WROTE LAST MARCH 10 TO NORMAN ARMOUR, U.S.AMBASSADOR TO SPAIN.

IN THE MARSHALL DIRECTIVE, MR.TRUMAN SAID THAT AS CHINA MOVED TOWARD PEACE AND UNITY ALONG LINES HE SUGGESTED, THE UNITED STATES WOULD "ASSIST THE NATIONAL GOVERNMENT IN EVERY REASONABLE WAY" TO REHABILITATE ITS ECONOMY AND ESTABLISH AN ADEQUATE ARMY.

IN THE ARMOUR LETTER--MADE PUBLIC SEPTEMBER 26--MR.ROOSEVELT VIGOROUSLY CONDEMNED GENERALISSIMO FRANCO AND SAID IF IT WERE NOT FOR HIS REGIME THERE WERE MANY THINGS "IN ECONOMIC AND OTHER FIELDS" WHICH THIS COUNTRY WOULD DO GLADLY TO DEMONSTATE ITS FRIENDSHIP FOR THE SPANISH PEOPLE.

SOME OFFICIALS BELIEVE THE UNITED STATES NEXT MAY USE ECONOMIC HINTS IN ITS NEGOTIATIONS WITH THE STILL-UNRECOGNIZED GOVERNMENTS OF ROMANIA AND BULGARIA. WHAT THIS COUNTRY WANTS IN THOSE TWO BALKAN STATES ARE THE SAME THINGS IT SAYS TITO'S REGIME HAS NOT YET PROVIDED IN YUGOSLAVIA:

GUARANTEES OF THE BASIC FREEDOMS AND DEMOCRATIC ELECTIONS CONDUCTED BY PROVISIONAL GOVERNMENTS BROADLY REPRESENTATIVE OF ALL DEMOCRATIC PEOPLES.

30.25-3263'7

THE QUESTION OF BRITISH-AMERICAN RECOGNITION OF ROMANIAN AND BULGARIAN GOVERNMENTS WAS KNOWN TO BE HIGH ON THE AGENDA FOR THE MOSCOW MEETING. HENCE, SOME OFFICIALS BELIEVE THE NEXT OFFICIAL WORD ON THE SUBJECT MIGHT BE INCLUDED IN A BIG THREE COMMUNIQUE.

UNOFFICIALLY, THE BULGARIAN GOVERNMENT ALREADY HAS LET IT BE KNOWN THAT A LOAN FROM THIS COUNTRY WOULD BE HELPFUL.

THE ACHESON STATEMENT ON YUGOSLAVIA; THE TRUMAN DIRECTIVE TO MARSHALL, AND THE ROOSEVELT LETTER TO ARMOUR, OFFICIALS SAY, MAY BE TIPOFFS ON ANSWERS THE UNITED STATES IS THOUGHT TO HAVE READY FOR ROMANIA AND BULGARIA.

IMMIGRATION(160)

WASHINGTON, DEC.24-(AP)-THE UNITED STATES HELD OUT A PROMISE TODAY OF MERRIER CHRISTMASES TO COME FOR THOUSANDS OF EUROPE'S HOMELESS WAR REFUGEES.

IN A WEEKEND DIRECTIVE, PRESIDENT TRUMAN CLEARED THE WAY FOR 39,000 OF THEM A YEAR TO BE ADMITTED TO THIS COUNTRY. HE ORDERED THE RESUMPTION OF NORMAL QUOTA IMMIGRATION, SAYING THE ACTION BY APPLYING TO DISPLACED PERSONS OF EUROPE PROVIDES AN "OPPORTUNITY FOR AMERICA TO SET AN EXAMPLE FOR THE REST OF THE WORLD IN COOPERATION TOWARD ALLEVIATING HUMAN MISERY."

EMPHASIZING THAT THE NUMBER TO BE ADMITTED "WILL BE STRICTLY WITHIN THE LIMITS OF THE PRESENT QUOTAS AS IMPOSED BY LAW," MR.TRUMAN PLE-DED AGAINST THE ENACTMENT OF ANY FURTHER RESTRICTIONS.

"THIS PERIOD OF UNSPEAKABLE HUMAN DISTRESS," HE SAID IN A STATEMENT "IS NOT THE TIME FOR US TO CLOSE OR TO NARROW OUR GATES."

THE PRESIDENT ISSUED HIS STATEMENT IN CONNECTION WITH A DIRECTIVE TO GOVERNMENT AGENCIES TO CARRY OUT THE IMMIGRATION PROGRAM.

HE STRESSED THAT NOTHING IN HIS ORDER WILL "DEPRIVE A SINGLE AMERICAN SOLDIER OR HIS WIFE OR CHILDREN OF A BERTH ON A VESSEL HOMEWARD BOUND, OR DELAY THEIR RETURN."

NEW YORK, DEC.24-(AP)-AMERICAN RADIO STATIONS WILL BE PROHIBITED FROM BROADCASTING MUSICAL PROGRAMS ORIGINATING IN ANY FOREIGN COUNTRY EXCEPT CANADA, UNDER A NEW ORDER ISSUED BY JAMES C.PETRILLO, PRESIDENT OF THE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF MUSICIANS, THE NEW YORK TIMES SAYS.

PETRILLO TOLD A TIMES REPORTER THAT HIS RULING, EFFECTIVE JAN.1, WAS DESIGNED TO PROTECT THE AMERICAN MUSICIAN AGAINST FOREIGN COMPETITION. HE SAID THAT THROUGH THE INTERNATIONAL SHORT WAVE RADIO A FOREIGN MUSICIAN COULD DISPLACE AN AMERICAN'S SERVICES WITHOUT EVER ENTERING THE UNITED STATES.

INTERPRETATION OF THE ORDER IMMEDIATELY LED TO A NEW CONTROVERSY BETWEEN PETRILLO AND THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF BROADCASTERS, THE TIMES SAYS. THE NAB SUGGESTED IN ITS WEEKLY NEWS LETTER THAT THE UNION MEASURE MIGHT PREVENT RELIGIOUS BROADCASTS, SUCH AS THE ANNUAL CHRISTMAS AND EASTER PROGRAMS FROM THE VATICAN AND JERUSALEM, AND SPECIAL OVERSEAS MUSICAL PROGRAMS BY THE ARMY AND NAVY.

PETRILLO DECLARED THAT SUCH PROGRAMS WOULD BE EXEMPT.

"THAT NAB IS JUST A PROPAGANDA OUTFIT," THE TIMES QUOTED PETRILLO. "MY LETTER IS NOT TO BE INTERPRETED AS THEY DID. WE'VE NEVER STOPPED RRELIGIOUS PROGRAMS AT ANY TIME. ALL WE'RE ASKING THEM TO DO IS TO LIVE UP TO THEIR CONTRACT. UNDER NO CIRCUMSTANCES CAN THEY HAVE NON-UNION MUSIC."

THE TIMES SAYS THAT PETRILLO, IN A LETTER TO THE NAB, DATED DEC.5, ASSERTED:

"YOU WILL POSSIBLY RECALL THAT DURING THE WAR, THE FEDERATION WAIVED ITS OBJECTIONS TO NETWORK BROADCASTS OF PROGRAMS EMANATING FROM FOREIGN COUNTRIES, EVEN THOUGH MUSIC FOR THESE PROGRAMS WAS FURNISHED BY MUSICIANS WHO ARE NOT MEMBERS OF THE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF MUSICIANS.

"WE CONSIDERED THIS A NECESSARY WARTIME MEASURE TO PROMOTE GOOD WILL AND GOOD RELATIONSHIPS WITH OTHER COUNTRIES, AND WERE VERY HAPPY TO COOPERATE. HOWEVER, NOW THAT THE WAR IS OVER, WE BELIEVE THAT WE SHOULD GET BACK TO NORMAL AS RAPIDLY AS POSSIBLE. THEREFORE, WILL YOU KINDLY DISCONTINUE THE BROADCASTING OF ANY MUSICAL PROGRAMS EMANATING FROM FOREIGN COUNTRIES EFFECTIVE DEC.31, 1945.

"THIS, OF COURSE, DOES NOT APPLY TO THE DOMINION OF CANADA WHERE THE MUSICIANS ARE MEMBERS OF THE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF MUSICIANS."

PETRILLO IMPLIED IN HIS LETTER THAT IT HAD BEEN THE POLICY OF AMERICAN BROADCASTET

AMERICAN BROADCASTERS NOT TO USE FOREIGN MUSIC BEFORE THE WAR, BUT OFFICIALS OF THE NAB DECLARED THAT THIS POLICY NEVER HAD BEEN FORMALLY AGREED TO, THE TIMES SAID.

FINANCIALLY THE ORDER WILL MEAN LITTLE, BROADCASTING OFFICIALS SAID, BECAUSE ALL INTERNATIONAL MUSICAL PROGRAMS THUS FAR HAVE BEEN PRESENTED ON A SUSTAINING BASIS. PRIMARILY INVOLVED ARE PROGRAMS PREPARED BY THE BRITISH BROADCASTING CORPORATION, THE TWO MAJOR SHOWS BEING "ATLANTIC SPOTLIGHT" ON NBC AND "TRANS-ATLANTIC CALL" ON CBS. AN ADDITIONAL TEN BBC PROGRAMS ON INDEPENDENT STATIONS ALSO WERE SAID TO BE AFFECTED.

Big 3 Agree On Peace Treaties Formula

BYRNES PLEASED WITH BIG SUCCESS OF MOSCOW TALKS

Concrete Agreements on Several Controversial Issues Are Reported.

HOPES EXCEEDED

Compromise Is Reached on Procedure for Drafting European Peace Terms.

MOSCOW, Dec. 25—(AP) Secretary of State James F. Byrnes is highly pleased with accomplishments of the Moscow foreign ministers' conference, including concrete agreements on several controversial issues, authoritative quarters said today.

Far more has been gained than was even contemplated when Byrnes left Washington, according to these informants.

The three principals began the longest meeting of their Moscow session in Speridonifka palace at 4 p.m. (8 a.m. Eastern Standard Time) and were still deliberating at 9:30 p.m. (1:30 p.m. Eastern Standard Time).

Arrive at Compromise

A highlight of the conference, which at all times has been conducted in an atmosphere of extreme cordiality, was the announcement on Christmas Eve that Byrnes, British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin and Soviet Foreign Commissar V. M. Molotov had arrived at a compromise accord on the procedure for drafting the European peace settlement.

It was Secretary Byrnes' suggestion to announce to the world the news of the agreement on Christmas Eve. Molotov and Bevin were said to have been delighted with the idea.

The first communique on the results of the conference then was issued just before the foreign ministers attended a formal Christmas Eve party at the Kremlin at which Generalissimo Stalin presided as host.

At the dinner 15 toasts were drunk, and those proposed by Secretary Byrnes were said to have amused Premier Stalin highly. Stalin gave an "atomic" toast and all drained their glasses with an air of friendly amusement at the implication. Just what Stalin said was not made public.

Informed sources said yesterday that Russia has not been let in on any secrets about the atomic bomb. However, it was reported that the Big Three foreign ministers did discuss the American-British-Canadian policy on world control of atomic energy during their meetings.

Communique This Evening

A communique covering the business conducted at the conference is expected to be issued at 2 a.m., Thursday. (6 pm., Eastern Standard Time, Wednesday).

It was reported that Secretary Byrnes had no idea that an actual agreement could be made on the peace treaties when he came here and observers recalled his statement upon his arrival that one should not be surprised if no agreements were reached at the conference.

The three men soon discovered they could do more than simply explore—as was the original expectation—and then they got down to discussing the issues and the decisions which could be taken. Informed sources said the agreement on peace treaty procedure was very close to the compromise formula proposed by Byrnes at the five-power foreign ministers' conference in London.

The American delegation took a very favorable view of the first agreement—that the peace terms should be drawn up by those nations which signed the armistice terms with Germany's European satellites, "except in the case of other members of the United Nations who will be invited to take part in decisions of questions which concern them," and that deputies of the five-power council of foreign ministers will resume their work in London with the new formula as a base.

Specifically, the agreement (terms of which were sent to France and China with a request for its approval by those two governments) provided that the terms of the peace treaty with Italy be drafted by the United States, Britain, Russia and France, and that treaties with Romania, Bulgaria, and Hungary be drawn up by Russia, the United States and Britain. Britain and Russia will draft the treaty with Finland.

No Word from France

China was reported to have approved the agreement but no word has yet been received from the French government.

When this preparatory work is completed, the council of foreign ministers will call a conference to discuss the peace agreements. Nations eligible to participate in addition to the United States, Russia, Britain, France and China will be: Australia, Belgium, White Russia, Brazil, Greece, Holland, Canada, India, New Zealand, Norway, Poland, the Ukraine, Czechoslovakia, Ethiopia, Yugoslavia, and the Union of South Africa.

Although no announcement was made of any matter concerning Japan, American delegates to the conference said additional agreements, which include decisions on Far-Eastern matters, will not be disappointing.

Following the Kremlin party last night, and a Christmas Eve party at midnight at the Spasso House given by U. S. Ambassador W. Averell Harriman and his daughter for the American colony, Secretary Byrnes arose late this morning. He made a Christmas telephone call to his wife. Later there was a turkey dinner at the Spasso House.

Byrnes was eager to leave Moscow tomorrow, although his advisors said they did not believe it would be possible. His plane is ready, however, and the only thing holding up his departure is the winding up of the conference business.

KING GEORGE BROADCASTS

SANDRINGHAM, England, Dec. 25. — (AP) King George VI told his subjects in a broadcast today that this Christmas "is a real homecoming to us all, a return to a world in which the homely and friendly things of life can again be ours." He spoke from the Sandringham house where the British Royal Family is spending its first Christmas in six years.

FRANC VALUE SET

PARIS, Dec. 25. — (AP) The French government said tonight that the revalued franc had been set at 119.10669 to the dollar, and 480 to the pound sterling.

The franc has been valued at 50 to the dollar and 200 to the pound since the liberation of France.

The devaluation will take effect with publication of the decree tomorrow morning in the government's official journal, it was announced.

ROME, Dec. 25 (AP). — Premier Alcide de Gasperi, commenting on the announcement from Moscow that work would be resumed on drafting a peace treaty for Italy, said today that Italy received the news "with relief and renewed hope."

KILGORE CHARGE DENIED BY ARMY

FRANKFURT, Germany, Dec. 25 —(AP) A U. S. military government spokesman said today that "we know of no one who is working for his own selfish ends" within the army's administration of American-occupied Germany.

The statement was made in reply to charges by Senator Harley M. Kilgore (D-W.Va.) in Washington last Friday, that some American officials now with military government had close pre-war ties with the Nazis, and were "still sympathetic to the cause of cartelism and to their old German cartel partners."

Of Kilgore's further charge that failure to break up the huge I. G. Farben industrie combine was an illustration of American reluctance to carry out terms of the Potsdam conference, the spokesman pointed out that the entire I. G. Farben question had been placed on a four-power level.

He said the United States had only 9.75 per cent of Farben assets within the American zone, and that 58.55 per cent were in the Russian zone, with the remainder split between the British and French.

The spokesman said accusations that army men had blocked industrial disarmament, as required by the Potsdam conference, had been voiced before, but did not hold up under investigation."

Benes Backs Pact With Russia

PRAGUE, Dec. 24 (Delayed) (AP).—President Eduard Benes advised Czechoslovak politicians, in a broadcast today, to avoid making a bitter partliamentary campaign issue of the nation's alliance with Russia. Benes, reiterating a promise of free, secret elections next spring, said the alliance with Russia should be regarded as a cornerstone of Czechoslovakia's policy.

Nazi Spy Must Aid Kin of His Victims

WARSAW, Poland—(AP) A German spy accused of giving information that caused the killing of two prominent Poles must pay damages to their relatives as well as face a trial for his life in Poland.

A special triubnal ruled that Gustav Beckman, former owner of a German razor-blade factory and a fine villa, must turn over to the widow of Polish Judge Frackiewicz $7,000; to his two daughters, $3,000 each and an annual pension; to the widow of Polish prosecutor Doctor Bietkowski, $5,500, and to his daughter, $3,000 and an annual pension.

Relatives of the deceased filed a complaint against Beckman which brought a prompt court ruling.

Bechman is under arrest in the American zone of occupation in Germany. It was announced that he would be brought to Cracow, Poland, for trial.

Braun, who has never been outside the Soviet Union since he came here with Ambassador William C. Bullitt, expects to leave in the near future for the United States.

For Americans here the day passed quietly. The U. S. embassy and Ambassador W. Averell Harriman's Spasso House and a number of other American residences and flats had Christmas trees with gifts for the family under them.

The American youth delegation, visiting the Soviet Union, found a Christmas tree set up for them in their quarters in the Hotel Moscow.

For the Russians, however, it was just another day. Their big holiday is on New Year's day; the Russian church Christmas will be Jan. 7.

Gendarmes' Switch Reports

MOSCOW, Dec. 25 (AP)—A Tass dispatch from Teheran said today that gendarmes and police in the cities of Maku and Shahpur—both in northwestern Iran near the Turkish border—had placed themselves under the new self-proclaimed autonomous government of Azerbaijan Province.

Tass also quoted the Teheran trade-union newspaper Zafar as reporting that thirty Azerbaijans had been wounded and twenty-eight others had been arrested in a disturbance at coal mines at Shemshek and Kadzher, near Teheran. The dispatch said that Zafar and two other "democratic" papers had later been suspended by the Iranian Government.

INTERIOR MINISTER RESIGNS IN TEHERAN

Fahimi Rescinds Refusal That Almost Precipitated Crisis In Iranian Cabinet

TEHERAN, Iran, Dec. 25 (AP)—Khalil Fahimi resigned today as Minister of the Interior while Leftist forces fought on for the recognition of the autonomous government set up in Russian-occupied Azerbaijan Province.

Mr. Fahimi said that he had quit because he had been "asked to do so by the Shah." His successor, Allahyar Saleh, former Minister Without Portfolio, was appointed to fill the Interior post last week, when Mr. Fahimi's refusal to resign almost precipitated a Cabinet crisis.

Meanwhile Dr. M. Rudmanesh, a Tudeh [Leftist] party member, told Parliament that Iran was "fighting democracy" in resisting the autonomy movement in Azerbaijan. He declared that Iran was sticking to old traditions "when every country is reforming itself on lines of socialism." He said that Russia's interest in Azerbaijan was a "wish to have a neutral and democratic power" at her side.

Ex-Nebraskan Enjoys Christmas For First Time Since Leaving U.S.

TOKYO, Dec. 25—(AP) This is the first real Christmas John Sketani has enjoyed in the eight years since he left the United States for Japan.

DEC 26 1945

The 27-year-old former Nebraskan, now interpreter for the Associated Press bureau here, recalled that last Christmas was supposed to be a holiday in Tokyo in memory of the father of Emperor Hirohito. It wasn't.

"People in Tokyo were busy evacuating their families to the country," he said. "We had had the first B-29 raid just a month before and thousands were anxious to remove their valuables before the next attack."

Sketani, who used to live at Minatare, Nebr., recalled:

"The last Christmas day I spent in the United States was in 1937. I went to church in the morning in Scotts Bluff, and stuffed myself with chicken at dinner time. We gathered around the Christmas tree and exchanged gifts. It was fun.

"Today is the first real Christmas I have had in eight years. The same spirit I felt at home in Nebraska is here with the occupation troops. I received gifts and have been thrilled by Christmas decorations on buildings.

"But Tokyo still is far from being Minatare, Nebraska. I think I would rather be in Minatare today."

Sketani was born in the United States and lived there until 1938 when he came to Japan.

JAP GUARD ADMITS SLAPPING PRISONERS

TOKYO, Wednesday, Dec. 26—(AP) Former Prison Guard Tatsuo Tsuchiya admitted today in Japan's first war crimes trial he "struck prisoners eight or nine times with the open palm." The defense then rested its case.

The short, bland Japanese whom his ex-prisoners dubbed "Little Glass Eye," denied prosecution allegations that he used his fists or instruments against American prisoners. He asserted he did not recollect Pfc. Robert Gordon Teas, Streator, Ill., of whose death he is accused.

Tsuchiya testified for two and one half hours as the trial was resumed after a Christmas recess. A decision today by the American Military Commission hearing his case was considered possible.

MacArthur Orders Weekly Data

TROOPS PROTEST LACK OF VESSELS

MANILA, Dec. 25 — (AP) Four thousand demonstrating U. S. soldiers marched on the 21st replacement depot headquarters today in protest against cancellation of a scheduled transport sailing for home.

The soldiers carried banners proclaiming, "We want ships."

They were met by Col. J. C. Campbell, depot commander. He ordered them to return to their barracks. After listening to a brief talk by the colonel, the men milled around for about ten minutes, then filtered back to their quarters. A spokesman for the men said another mass meeting protest would be held Wednesday.

Cancellation of assignment of the transport Admiral Sims precipitated the demonstration. Colonel Campbell explained the transport was withdrawn in connection with consolidation of the 21st and 29th replacement depots. The Daily Pacifican, Army newspaper, quoted Campbell as saying:

"You men forget you're not working for General Motors. You're still in the army."

Army sources said troop ships capable of carrying 251,000 men had been assigned to the western Pacific for January, although only 70,000 will be eligible to return home.

RANK IS RETURNED TO SOLDIER EDITOR

DEC 26 1945

MANILA, Dec. 26.—(AP) Pvt. Robert W. Young, former editor of the "Homeward Herald," an Army mimeographed newspaper published on Leyte, wore his former T/5 rank again today but was banned from further editorial work.

Young, who once edited a California weekly, wrote a story recently saying that seven ships were being refitted at Leyte to carry Japanese prisoners of war home, while only one ship was being refitted to return American soldiers to the states. His commanding officer forbade publication on the ground the story would undermine morale and incite disturbances among men waiting transportation home.

The story appeared, not in the "Homeward Herald," but on paper mimeographed on the machine used for the newspaper. Young said a copy of the story had been taken from his desk and apparently was printed by someone else.

He was reduced to private and put on a garbage detail. The incident became public and Lt. Gen. W. D. Styer, commanding army forces in the western Pacific, ordered an investigation. The general stated the "resulting action" in lowering Young's rating was "not in my opinion an appropriate one under the circumstances" and restored the soldier to his former rating.

However, Styer said, failure to control the disputed story merited some disciplinary action, and he directed Young be banned from further duty in the information and education section in the western Pacific, which bars the writer from further editorial duty in this theater.

COURT DOOMS JAP ADMIRAL

Wake Commander Sentenced For Civilian Slaughter

Kwajalien, Marshalls, Dec. 25 (AP). Rear Admiral Shigmatsu Sakaibara, former Japanese commander of Wake during the occupation, was sentenced to death by hanging today along with his executive officer, Lieut. Com. Soichi Tachbana, for the mass execution of 98 American civilian employés of Pan-American Airways October 7, 1943.

A United States military commission sentenced the two—Sakaibara admitted heordered the executions—after Sakaibara declared in an outburst that those who conducted the atomic bomb attacks on Japan should be regarded as criminals of war.

Made As Request

"Now as we are about to receive the decision of the American court," the Admiral said, "I would like to make a request that the people who planned and carried out the dropping of the atomic bombs on Japan should be regarded in the same light as we."

The two defendants were held responsible for orders which sent the civilian prisoners of war to their deaths at a time when American air bombings led the Japanese to believe that there would be an attempt to retake Wake.

Blindbolded And Shot

The civilians were marched to a lonely beach in moonlight and mowed down by rifle squads while blindfolded and shackled.

The Japanese defense counsel, Lieut. Com. Kozo Hirata, said: "It was one of those tragedies which happen necessarily with the ruthless actions of war.

"Although the execution was a serious tragedy, it may be justified before law as a means of protecting the Japanese Wake unit from hostile deeds."

The trial commission did not share this view.

Chiang to Get Communist Bid On Truce Today

End of Fighting by New Year's Is Sought as Aid to Unity Talks in January

MOOSA

By The Associated Press

CHUNGKING, Dec. 25.—Strife-torn China hoped this Christmas Day for a New Year's truce between central government and Communist forces as a prelude to unity talks slated for January. A Communist spokesman said the Communists would submit in writing tomorrow their verbal proposal of Dec. 19 of an unconditional truce that would halt the forces of both sides at their present positions.

DEC 26 1945

Although complete stoppage of fighting was not regarded here as so simple as might appear on the surface, the Communist proposal was considered important because it represented a withdrawal from an earlier demand that government troops return to points they occupied when Japan surrendered.

Should a truce be declared, it would facilitate greatly the work of the Political Consultative Council, the all-party and non-partisan body now expected to meet next month.

The truce proposal is to be delivered at a scheduled formal meeting tomorrow of leaders of the Communist and central-government delegations to the council meeting, the Communist spokesman said. It will be the first formal session of the two groups since mid-November. "The China Times" said it had learned that the Consultative Council would not meet before Jan. 10.

Government press dispatches reported 50,000 Communist attacking Kaoyu on the Grand Canal, 60 miles north of Nanking, with other Communist forces striking at Shaopo, south of Kaoyu, and at Taihsien to the southeast. The reported move was described as a forerunner to an attempt to cut the Yangtze river between Nanking and Shanghai.

Another government dispatch said troops of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek repulsed Communists in "severe fighting" in western Shansi province Dec. 22-23. Communist efforts to take two towns were reported defeated.

Gen. George C. Marshall, President Truman's envoy to China, tonight attended a Christmas dinner party given by Walter Robertson, U. S. charge d'affaires. He ate luncheon with Chiang and Madame Chiang, in his first meeting with them since his arrival here Saturday.

American quarters in Chungking expressed surprise at what they termed some misconception over the status of Marshall, saying he had been referred to frequently as Patrick J. Hurley's successor as ambassador. These quarters said Marshall was the Presidential envoy to China, with rank of ambassador. Since Hurley's resignation, they said, the ambassador's post has been vacant, with Robertson filling the spot as charge d'affaires.

Gen. Geiger in Tientsin

Gen. Howard Takes Over Marine Command At Tsingtao

TIENTSIN, China, Dec. 25, (AP).—Lieutenant General Roy S. Geiger, commanding general of marine forces in the Pacific, arrived at Tientsin today on a routine inspection tour.

Major General Lemuel C. Shepherd jr., turned over command of the 6th Marine Division at Tsingtao yesterday to Major General Archie F. Howard, a veteran of Guadalcanal and New Georgia. General Shepherd has been ordered back to Quantico, Va., for duty.

MARINE FLIER RETURNED

Chinese Reds Send Shantung Crash Survivor to Tsingtao Base

YENAN, China, Dec. 25 (AP)—Communist Eighth Route Army headquarters here said today Lieut. Robert Blant, one of two survivors of the crash of six Marine Corps Helldiver bombers on Shantung peninsula on Dec. 8, was being returned by Communists to an American base at Tsingtao. Lieut. Waide Hoff, the other survivor, is recovering from leg injuries and will be sent to Tsingtao when he is able to travel.

The bodies of ten Marine Corps fliers killed in the crashes will be moved to the same place.

Lieutenant Blant is being accompanied back to base by Lieuts. V. Kaidich and Wesley Siguo, who were forced down in their planes Dec. 19 northwest of Chefoo. The latter were unhurt.

Aerial Santa For Marines

TIENTSIN, Dec. 25 (AP).—An aerial Santa Claus visited American marines on guard duty along the Peiping-Mukden railroad, between Tientsin and Chingwangtao today.

Transports of the 1st Marine Air Wing carried out the role, dropping Christmas packages to the men. The packages, prepared by special service, Red Cross and post exchange units, contain turkey, the usual marine chow, candy, cigarettes and reading matter.

Students Demonstrate

YENAN, Dec. 25 (AP).—The Communist New China News Agency today distributed a Dec. 23 dispatch from Chengtu saying that on Dec. 9 a crowd of 4,000 students and professors of six Chengtu universities had demonstrated before the American Information Service Building in that city, shouting: "Withdraw American troops from China; let the Chinese settle matters themselves!"

China Orphans Have G. Is as Daddies for Day

Christmas Presents From Marines and Soldiers Cheer Peiping Children

PEIPING, Dec. 25 (AP).—Christmas came quietly today for American troops in North China, with many a friendly soldier becoming "daddy" for a day to a wide-eyed, happy Chinese orphan. Hundreds of marines, air force men and sailors strode in the crisp, cold air to midnight services last night. Thousands more thronged churches today.

More than two score Chinese youngsters from an orphanage crowded joyfully around a big Christmas tree. Their equally happy uniformed "daddies," marines and soldiers, had gifts for all the youngsters.

It wasn't home, but it was more peaceful than any Christmas many of the marines and soldiers had experienced in the past four holiday seasons.

Peiping's half dozen or more night clubs were crowded last night. At the former Italian Embassy, the swank Legation Club of the Red Cross cheered men who had just learned definitely that their stay in China would be indefinite.

The men did not cheer.

MANCHURIA CELEBRATES WITHOUT JAP RULE

PEIPING, China, Dec. 25.—(AP) Christmas day was celebrated in Manchuria for the first time in 14 years without the overlordship of Japanese.

DEC 26 1945

But the rich territory, whose seizure brought the first aggression leading to World War II, was still in the twilight zone between Russian and Chinese management.

Changchun, capital of the puppet state of Manchukuo, is under a Chinese mayor. But his authority is still dependent upon the Russian army. Without Soviet arms he would be powerless to enforce his edicts.

Chinese mayors of Mukden, Harbin and Dairen have also flown northward. Chinese residents of these cities patiently wait completion of negotiations which will open the way for return of their own nationalist government troops.

Christmas Island Celebrates

CHRISTMAS ISLAND, Dec. 25 (AP).—The garrison of nearly 100 lonely American soldiers on this flat, isolated atoll 1,161 miles south of Honolulu observed today one of the few bright times of the year here—Christmas on Christmas.

Chiefly Visits Australian Troops

Sydney, Dec. 25 (AP)—Prime Minister J. B. Chiefly made a surprise visit by plane to Australian troops in New Guinea today and had Christmas dinner seated between two privates.

Greeks to Have 600 Americans Observing Vote

Britain and France Joining U. S. in Unique Project; Russia Spurns Invitation

WASHINGTON, Dec. 25 (AP).—More than 600 Americans will go into all parts of Greece soon as election observers in a project believed unique in history.

The size of the United States delegation and the exhaustive scope of the project were disclosed today by informed government officials, who asked to remain anonymous. These officials said they knew of no parallel for the observation—by invitation—of one country's elections by citizens of another on such a scale.

Britain and France also have accepted the Greek invitation to send observers, but Russia has declined.

Henry F. Grady, former Assistant Secretary of State, will head the American mission. Under him will be five or six commissioners. One of these—Major General Harry J. Malony—already has been chosen by the War Department, which will collaborate with the State Department on the project.

Indoctrination Staff

The rest of the organization, officials said, will include:

1. An "indoctrination" staff of experts in Greek history and politics, who will give background lectures to the observation teams.

2. A group of "sampling" experts, something like public opinion polltakers, who will take censuses in all parts of Greece to build up a scientific basis for the election observation.

3. Approximately 100 American observation teams, consisting in most cases of an Army officer, an enlisted man, a driver and a Greek interpreter, who will travel in a jeep and trailer to their observation points.

4. A secretary-general and secretariat for the delegation.

The British also will send out about 100 observation teams and the French about forty, officials said.

Administrative officials of the American group will leave for Greece early in January, with the others to follow. The War Department will pick the Army officers and men to serve on the teams from troops in the European or Mediterranean theaters, to cut down transportation expenses.

The teams probably will assemble first in Italy for their indoctrination course. While this is proceeding the census crews will be compiling information in Greece. Asked how they would operate, one official said he thought they could manage "without ringing doorbells," but gave no further details.

Will Check Fraud

Much of the work of the observation teams will be carried out before the Greeks go to the polls March 31, officials said. For about four weeks before that date the teams will be traveling through their assigned areas, checking election registration lists and trying to detect any evidence of fraud or intimidation. Their task will be complicated by the fact that there are some 150 political parties in Greece.

DEC 26 1945

The Greeks will elect an assembly which will serve both as the national legislature and a body to revise the 1911 constitution. Like their Yugoslav neighbors, Greek legislators may rule on the ticklish question of whether to continue the monarchy and permit King George to return from his London exile.

Greece invited foreign observers to the elections under a Yalta Conference provision that the major Allies would aid any liberated or former Axis-affiliated European state in measures to guarantee the right of the people to choose their own government.

Russia declined on grounds that the "observers" in fact would become "supervisers," and said the Soviet Union was opposed to intervening in another country's domestic affairs.

This refusal was regarded by some American officials as a move to forestall pressure for similar observations of elections in Bulgaria and Rumania, where Soviet-recognized governments have not been recognized by this country or Britain.

Greeks to Elect an Assembly

WASHINGTON, Dec. 25 (AP)—The Greeks in their March 31 election will choose an Assembly that will serve both as the national legislature and a body to revise the 1911 constitution. Like their Yugoslav neighbors, the Greek legislators may rule on the ticklish question of whether to continue the monarchy and permit King George II to return from his London exile.

Administrative officials of the American observation mission will leave for Greece early in January, with most of the others to follow in February. The War Department will pick the Army officers and men to serve on the teams from troops in the European or Mediterranean theatres to cut down transportation expenses.

The teams probably will assemble first in Italy for their indoctrination courses. While these are proceeding, American census crews will be compiling information in Greece. Asked how they would operate, one official said he thought they could manage "without ringing doorbells."

Special Bonds Proposed To Finance British Loan

Senator Johnson Says It Would Serve as Referendum

WASHINGTON, Dec. 25 (AP).—Senator Edwin C. Johnson, Democrat, of Colorado, suggested today that the proposed American loan to Great Britain be financed by a special bond issue, which he said would serve as a popular referendum.

Under Senator Johnson's plan, the bondholders rather than the United States Treasury would bear the loss if the British should default. The bonds would be offered to the American public by the United States government and the interest rate would be "exactly what Britain pays." The people who buy the bonds, Senator Johnson told reporters, would "take whatever risk there is and accept whatever payment Britain makes."

If the American people approve the loan, Senator Johnson said, they should prove willing to buy the bonds, and "if the American people don't want it, then the government ought not to underwrite it."

He said he intends to push his plan as an amendment to legislation authorizing the British loan when it comes up next session of Congress, but he has not yet worked out all the details.

He added that Representative Karl E. Mundt, Republican, of South Dakota, and some other House members were working on a similar plan independently of his proposal.

Vinson Supports France In Devaluing the Franc

He Declares Move Essential to Economic Reconstruction

WASHINGTON, Dec. 25 (AP).—Secretary of the Treasury Fred M. Vinson said tonight that "a change in the franc rate was an essential step in the French program of economic reconstruction."

In a letter to Rene Pleven, French Finance Minister, Vinson added that "it has been generally recognized that the foreign exchange value of the franc was out of line."

Expressing appreciation of France's action in keeping the American and other interested governments informed, Mr. Vinson said he had followed "with sympathetic interest the efforts of France to cope with her difficult economic problems."

"I wish to extend my best wishes to your government, your people and yourself in this undertaking," he said.

Fraser Supports Joint Japan Rule

Washington, Dec. 25 (AP)—Peter Fraser, Prime Minister of New Zealand, said yesterday he would like to see the power to govern Japan transferred from the exclusive custody of the United States to the Far Eastern Advisory Commission.

He emphasized in an interview after brief visits with President Truman and Dean Acheson, Acting Secretary of State, that he had no fault to find with General MacArthur's administration thus far, however.

On Way To Assembly Meeting

"He's done a remarkably fine job," said Fraser, who is en route to London for the first meeting of the United Nations Assembly. "I believe, however, that all of the powers which contributed to the war against Japan should now assume responsibility for governing that country."

The Far Eastern Advisory Commission, composed of representatives of ten nations, leaves Wednesday morning for Japan to study how MacArthur's directives to the Japanese have been carried out. Established in Washington nearly two months ago, it has been mostly a sounding board rather than a policy-making body to date.

Russia never has joined the commission, holding out for a four-power (United States, Russia, Britain, China) control council to administer Japan. Fraser said he was "entirely opposed" to the four-power council.

Would Leave Task To Americans

"New Zealand would agree to leave the actual administration in Japan entirely to the Americans, and my personal choice for the top administrator would be MacArthur," Fraser said.

"But we feel that the directives to that administration should be the work of ten—or eleven—nations, not just one."

He said he believed decisions on the commission, if it were given the actual policy-making power, should be by majority vote in most cases, or perhaps by a two-thirds majority on important issues.

Fraser predicted that the Big Five veto power on the United Nations Security Council would eventually be tossed out.

HIGHEST HONOR POSTHUMOUSLY

Congressional Medal Goes To Pfc. Manuel Perez, Jr.

DEC 26 1945

Washington, Dec. 25 (AP)—Pfc. Manuel Perez, Jr., a native of Oklahoma City, was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor posthumously for his assault on a Japanese pillbox, the War Department announced today.

The action occurred last February 13, in Luzon, Philippine Islands. He was killed March 14 in another action at Santo Tomas.

The medal will be presented to his father, Manuel Perez, of Nuevo Laredo, Mexico.

Lead Scout Of Company

Private first class Perez, who was inducted January 9, 1943, at Chicago, was lead scout of Company A of the 511th Parachute Infantry Regiment, 11th Airborne Division. His citation says he killed at least 23 Japanese in the attack on twelve pillboxes blocking the drive toward Fort McKinley.

Eleven of the twelve pillboxes were cleaned out with grenades by the company, with Private Perez accounting for five of the enemy by rifle fire in addition to an unknown number killed by his grenades.

The twelfth emplacement, protected by snipers, halted the advance and pinned down the attacking Yanks with a heavy fire from its two heavy machine guns.

Climbs On Top Pillbox

The 22-year-old scout climbed on top of a captured pillbox and respite heavy fire killed three of the snipers. Then he crawled around to flank the machine-gun nest.

Twenty yards from his goal, a fourth sniper opened fire on him. In a leap, the War Department announcement said, Perez shot the Jap rifleman and tossed a grenade into the pillbox.

As the Japanese began to leave the emplacement through a tunnel opening at the rear, Perez shot eight of them.

Uses Jap's Rifle

The ninth Japanese soldier threw his bayoneted rifle, spear-like, at the scout, knocking his rifle out of his hands. Perez grabbed the Japanese rifle and shot two more of the enemy before he ran out of ammunition.

Then, using the rifle as a club, he beat three more Japanese to death as they ran from the tunnel. Diving into the pillbox, he bayoneted the last remaining Japanese soldier.

"Through his courageous determination and heroic disregard of grave danger," his citation said, "Private Perez made possible the successful advance of his unit toward a valuable objective and provided a lasting inspiration for his comrades."

Mrs. Patton Lands In D.C. By Plane

Washington, Dec. 25 (AP)—Mrs. George S. Patton, Jr., landed here in an army plane at 1.32 P.M. today, completing a fast but interrupted trip home from the funeral of her husband in Luxembourg.

Army Transport Command officials said Mrs. Patton's plane took off from Boston early today but was forced to land in New York as a result of engine trouble. Because of rain and ice, the plane landed by instruments and trucks had to clean the slush and ice from the runway.

The widow of the famous 3d Army commander was met by Colonel and Mrs. John K. Waters, Lieutenant Colonel and Mrs. James W. Totten and her son, George S. Patton 3d, West Point cadet. Mrs. Waters and Mrs. Totten are daughters.

Mrs. Patton is expected to stay for an indefinite period with Mrs. Waters, who lives here.

Radar And Radio In Peacetime

DEC 26 1945

Chicago, Dec. 25 (AP)—Wartime radar and radio brain children are being groomed for peacetime jobs.

Some radio manufacturers in the Chicago area, where half the radar and communications equipment for the armed forces was produced, foresee such developments as these:

Anti-collision apparatus for ships, planes and trains.

Portable radio telephones based on the military walkie talkie principle that could be used to keep a chief in contract with firemen in a burning building, to direct ushers in ball parks, to convey messages to field workers on big farms.

Coat-Pocket Radios

Mobile radio units—Radio stations mounted on trucks like those which dogged Rommel's heels in the chase across Africa—that could operate in tornado, flood and forest-fire regions.

Streamlined sending and receiving sets for light aircraft and small boats.

Coat pocket radios with an ear attachment that would enable the owner to listen to a broadcast on the street, at his desk or at a football game without disturbing the people around him.

Experts who noted how radar detected enemy aerial and naval craft predicted it would be employed in peace to guide planes and ships safely through fog, storm and night.

Device To Prevent Collisions

Now President William J. Halligan says the Hallicrafters Company will develop a device for ships, planes and trains designed to prevent collisions. The idea, as he outlines it, is this:

It would blend the magic of radar and the proximity fuse, a war device which set off shells as they neared their target. The instrument would shoot radio pulses into the darkness ahead, and would give an alarm when it got without a predetermined distance of a hazard. If, for instance, a plane came within the danger range of a mountain, the proximity fuse would cause a light to flash or a bell to ring. The pilot would climb to safety. It would not be as elaborate or as expensive as war radar.

Citizens Radio Band

The Galvin Manufacturing Corporation, pioneer in the military handie talkie field, is engaged in postwar experimental development focused on the ultra high frequency citizens radio band of 460 to 470 megacycles. The firm reports such paraphernalia has limited civilian use at this time, but would prove valuable to firemen and policemen in fighting fires, controlling crowds and unsnarling traffic jams.

The Hallicrafters concern has a mockup model of a portable radiotelephone along the handie-talkie line. It can be carried in a handbag suspended from a shoulder strap. The joint earpiece and mouthpiece resembles the headset of a cradle telephone, and can be lifted out of the bag when in use. Another laboratory model can be carried in a briefcase.

The company labels these contrivances "futuristic," but states they could be used by spotters to send information to the coach's bench at football games, to report performances to press sections at golf tournaments and track meets, to communicate with workmen in sewers and tunnels.

War-developed tubes of pencil-top size will facilitate the maunfacture of miniature radios.

The Sentinel Radio Corporation is planning production of a pocket edition radio measuring 6 by 3 by 7-8 inches. The firm reports that, with the receiver in a pocket or purse and a listening attachment like a hearing aid, the owner could hear a broadcast in privacy.

11-Pound Receiver-Transmitter

The Hallicrafters Company figures on producing a radio receiver and transmitter, together weighing eleven pounds, for small planes and boats in which weight is an important factor.

The Rock Island Lines offer an example of early application of war-tested techniques. The railroad will install a radar-type radio communication system that will permit conductors to talk with engineers in transit, and keep trains in touch with other trains and dispatchers.

Radio manufacturers, in the main, are returning to the production of home and car sets. But many also are seeking to put war-sired innovations into new or improved civilian products.

They leave the impression they can and will make the more novel stuff—if enough people can use it and will buy it.

PRODUCTIVITY RISE FORECAST

Industry 5 Years Hence Seen Breaking All Records

New York, Dec. 25 (AP)—After the next five years, the productivity of American industry, which doubled between the two world wars, should break all previous records.

This forecast by Charles R. Walker, of Yale University's labor and management center, writing in the current issue of Fortune, is in reply to a question in debate by business men: "What was the actual impact of World War II on American industry?"

Despite his forecast, Walker warns that "high productivity does not necessarily mean a healthy economy." Productivity (efficiency of output) is only potential prosperity and output and employment must keep pace with it, he says.

Three Chief Influences

Many factors make for increased productivity, but most economists and business men agree that the three chief influences are (1) labor, as expressed by the efficiency of the worker, (2) managerial techniques, and (3) machines or technology.

New machines and managerial know-how resulting from the war should continue to increase productivity, although continuance of some factors regarding the worker are neither practical nor desirable. For the wartime miracle of production, America "recruited by every known device 6,500,000 emergency workers, including old men, wives of service men, teen-age boys and girls."

DEC 26 19

War Output No Standard

America's record of productivity during the war cannot be taken as a standard, says Walker. Those who ask, "If we can do it in war, why can't we do it in peace?" must consider the following factors:

"Four years after the defense program got under way Americans were producing $200,000,000,000 in goods and services—nearly twice the dollar total of 1940. . . . The arsenal of democracy in 1944 not only outproduced the Axis in combat munitions by more than 50 per cent, but alone accounted for more than 40 per cent of the armament output of all belligerent nations."

Walker says, however, that $200,000,000,000 gross output should not be taken as a sort of par for postwar economy.

Not Possible Nor Desirable

"No man in his right senses," he says, "thinks it possible or desirable to convert all the components of that $200,000,000,000.

"First, it should be noted that the peak of $200,000,000,000 is expressed in 1944 prices. Adjusted to 1940 dollars, the gross national output amounts to approximately $150,000,000,000. In short, the nation made an advance of 50 per cent over its $100,000,000,000 prewar output. That is a lot, but it represents the reduction of the miracle by 25 per cent.

"Second, in the war years we recklessly used up stocks, literally shooting away a vast proportion of . . . the largest iron source in the nation. We were equally reckless with our remaining petroleum supply."

Long Hours And Underage Labor

The long hours worked and the underage workers used in that time of necessity are other inconvertibles. "We mobilized our universities to train men for war thus incurring a deficit in doctors, lawyers, scientists, even engineers. Lastly there was achieved under the War Manpower Commission a kind of full employment and regimentation that would be neither practical nor desirable under a free peacetime economy."

A better standard of measure than war production, suggests the Fortune study, is the 60 per cent of United States economy that remained civilian. A look at the factories that turned out shoes, flour, cloth, etc., is more indicative than the arsenals.

Rayon and its allied products showed a 40 per cent increase between 1939 and 1944. Woolens and worsteds improved sixteen per cent, equaling the average prewar rate of increase for American industry as a whole.

The Consumer Industries

"Most consumer industries, burdened by difficult priority problems, showed increases up to the war and small percentage declines later."

Thus in the fields that are measurable (food, tobacco, canning, wearing apparel, etc.) "productivity continued its rise up to 1942, fell slightly during the war years but never declined to the 1939 level."

Further optimism is expressed in the belief that most of the causes that decrease productivity (shortages of material, manpower, government red tape, migratory labor, war pressures and dislocations) have been liquidated.

Problem That Must Be Met

"Slack discipline in the shop and stoppages through strikes and quickies," he points out, "are a continuing problem that management and labor must overcome. . . . But other factors that increase productivity, new machines and techniques, if skillfully adapted can raise it to a new high."

But only if output and employment keep pace with productivity will the promise of prosperity be kept, he says. In comparing four major group of industries (manufacturing, mining, railroads, and electric light and power) between the years 1923-24 and 1936-37, he found that only in electric light and power, where both output and productivity had increased tremendously, did man hours of employments go up.

MANY THOUSAND TROOPS ARE STILL FAR FROM HOME

DEC 26 1945

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 25.—(AP) Many thousand Americans who fought in foreign and strange lands and won, spent Christmas day on their native soil today thankfully and joyously although still far from their homes and families.

In all the great ports of the Pacific seaboard soldiers and sailors and marines just home from war, became special guests in private homes, in clubs and lodges.

There were between 150,000 and 170,000 stranded veterans on the coast for at least part of Christmas day.

Bear Up Cheerfully

They longed to be home with their own families but bore cheerfully the fact that servicemen were returning in such tremendous numbers railroads could not handle them.

Trains were moving men eastward to their homes at a better rate than heretofore. The Southern Pacific checked on its transcontinental rail lines and found that at about 94 per cent of passengers were servicemen.

There were thousands of parties for the veterans from Seattle to San Diego. Each "homeward ship" in the major ports was visited by Santa Claus; presents were distributed; extra portions of turkey served with sumptuous dinners.

Los Angeles welfare groups set up a special center for discharged, homeless veterans. This downtown center will be open through the holiday season.

In San Francisco 42,000 were stalled Christmas guests. The port of embarkation said this number would be reduced speedily, as only 18,000 more are due up to Jan. 1, just about twice the number that arrived yesterday alone. Railroads were moving out about 5,000 a day.

Los Angeles played host to about 75,000 veterans.

In military hospitals, Army and Navy patients received special attention in keeping with the season. Many of the men decorated their casts with "Merry Christmas" tags and signs.

Los Angeles was the only West coast port able to clear all veterans from ships at anchor or docked. San Francisco had four "hotel ships," with another, the S. S. Lubbock, coming in today. Similar conditions prevailed in the Seattle area. There simply wasn't room ashore for the volume of men arriving.

Special religious services were well attended today. About 800 men attended a midnight Christmas Mass at Pier 45 in San Francisco. In all cities churches had special welcomes for the men.

Thousands Held On East Coast

NEW YORK, Dec. 25. — (AP) Thousands of GI's who arrived on the East coast too late to spend Christmas at home had the best substitute celebration the Army, American Red Cross and USO could offer.

They had turkey with trimmings, Christmas trees and gifts, holiday parties and, in the case of patients in one hospital, free telephone calls home.

The Army staging and separation centers in the New York, Boston and Richmond, Va., areas outdid themselves to disspell any disappointment the servicemen might have felt.

The Red Cross and USO staffs worked overtime, sacrificing their own Christmas at home to bring the men Yuletide cheer.

At Camp Shanks, N. Y., where 5,000 troops arrived and 10,000 were awaiting shipment overseas, there were 10 1-2 tons of turkey. Sixteen thousand cartons of cigarets were distributed, as well as gifts sent from New Jersey families.

All soldiers heading overseas were given passes to New York City if they desired.

The Richmond, Va., News-Leader Telephone Fund provided 600 free telephone calls home for patients at the McGuire General hospital there. Two thousand patients were well enough to get furloughs home.

All ships arriving at Hampton Roads were greeted by Red Cross girls, who distributed Christmas packages and candy. At Camp Gee, Va., 10,000 servicemen received passes or furloughs.

Soldiers arriving at Camp Myles Standish, near Boston, for discharge over the holiday received passes to their homes, if nearby. Service clubs at Standish and Fort Devens were on an "all out" basis.

At Fort Dix, N. J., 4,000 soldiers received their discharge on Christmas day and another 5,000 received leaves. Those remaining at the post had a turkey dinner, but processing was not interrupted.

Thousands of soldiers arrived and other thousands left Camp Kilmer, N. J., either discharged or on passes. A total of 650 were discharged from Fort Monmouth and another 1,000 men were given a Christmas party.

SEAS BATTER 2 TRANSPORTS

Cruiser Philadelphia And Carrier Randolph Arrive

DEC 26 1945

New York, Dec. 25 (AP)—The light cruiser Philadelphia and the big aircraft carrier Randolph, battered and ripped by icy Atlantic storms, arrived today with 8,029 service men to spend Christmas Day in the United States, if not at home.

Heavy storms and giant waves forced the Essex Class carrier to reduce its speed for three days, carried away sections of the flight deck railing, walkways to gun platforms and some liferafts, and flooded some staterooms.

But the 6,761 high-point officers, enlisted men and army nurses aboard were in holiday spirits. Capt. Jackson R. Tate, Madison, N.J., skipper of the carrier, ascribed the good humor to navy food, a holiday celebration and "because we kept our promise to get them home—at least to the United States—by Christmas."

Philadelphiaa's Deck Buckled

The Philadelphia arrived in port with her fo 'castle deck buckled, her hull plating ripped and her gun shields and fittings twisted by wind and waves. She carried 1,268 troops.

"We did everything possible to get the boys home for Christmas and still preserve the ship," Capt. Robert W. Berry, San Francisco, the ship's skipper said.

A roll of 41 degrees and 80-foot waves delayed the vessel, he said.

"If we chose to run before the storm and ride it out, we wouldn't have gotten in before New Year's," he said.

Repair Men Held By Ropes

Lieut. (j.g.) C. F. Beatty, naval liaison officer to the army, of Scarsdale, N.Y., said Lalbert Parker, of Philadelphia, damage-control officer, and a party of navy men who went forward to repair the buckled fo'castle deck had to be made fast to lines to keep them from being swept overboard.

Troops had no Christmas services aboard the cruiser, but received gifts on the pier, en route to Camp Kilmer, N.J., for processing.

The Philadelphia was one of twenty vessels due today at three East Coast ports with 20,000 service men. Twenty-one ships, with 9,000 troops, were scheduled to dock at West Coast ports.

Other Arriving Ships

Also scheduled to arrive at New York: U.S.S. Randolph, 6,310; Ambrose Burnside, 619; Sea Tiger, 2,149; Cape Diamond, 12; John R. Gordon, 17; John G. Carlisle, 5; George Pendleton, 3; Sea Robin, 1,987; Capt. Flattery, 1,049.

At Newport News, Va.: The George Bancroft, 550; H.M.S. Begum, 478; Westbrook Victory, 1,490; Francis Lee, 547; S.S. Elroy Alfaro, 24; Byron Darnton, 44; Redstone Seam, 9.

At Boston: The John Merrick, 21; Exchequer Victory, 1,646; Waterbury Victory, 1,522.

At West Coast Ports

At San Diego, Cal.: The attack transport Leon, 1,300; LST 787, 92; destroyer transport Enright, 156; destroyer transport Daniel T. Giffin, 24; LST 469, 81; surveying ship Simon Newcomb, 13; six Navy LSM's with combined total of 45 men.

At San Francisco: The Niagara Victory, 28; LST 70, 10; LST 170, 29; Cambria, 1,619; James Woodrow, 805; Kassan Bay, 1,069; Rockingham, 1,782; Chepacht, 29; Menifee, 2,023.

No ships were due at Los Angeles, Seattle, Wash., or Portland, Ore., today. The quarantined ship, the Grundy, however, debarked 1,827 men in Portland.

Stranded GI's Cheered By Prospect Of Release

New York, Dec. 25 (AP)—America from coast to coast rejoiced today grateful for its first peacetime Christmas in five years.

Millions in churches across the country gave point to President Truman's statement. "This is the Christmas that a war-weary world has prayed for through long and awful years."

Archbishop Francis J. Spellman, in the first sermon since his designation to the College of Cardinals, told persons attending mass at New York city's St. Patrick's Cathedral:

"We must return to God, for deep within our hearts we know there is no other way—no other path to peace, for the lone soul or for the mighty nations of the earth."

Even inclement weather—gloomy, snowladen skies in the East and rain and sleet in much of the nation—failed to spoil the day for those families reunited after four years of war and those who, despite the worst travel jam in history, reached their destinations.

In Charlotte, N.C., 516 nurses and women employés of a hospital were gladdened to find Nylons under their Chirtsmas tree—gift of a doctor whose identity was withheld.

The CIO United Auto Workers' holiday truce in the strike against General Motors drew to an end. The strikers were to resume their fight for a 30 per cent wage increase today.

Joins Daughter In Death

At Philadelphia, a 45-year-old father, saddened by the death of his 8-year-old daughter, could think only of her dying wish—"I wouldn't mind dying if only papa could go along with me."

Papa—Emory S. Potter—died of a heart attack while walking upstairs.

A former WAC who lost her husband last March in Germany, lost her daughter, 19-month-old Gayle Eleanor Harvey. The child died of tubercular meningitis, despite every effort to save her.

"Gayle was all I had left," said the grief-stricken mother, Mrs. Jean Harvey.

Rector Assails 'Pagan' Plan to Move War Dead

The Rev. Mr. McKee Terms Bringing Bodies Back an 'Affront to Christmas'

Proposals to bring the bodies of American soldier dead back from Europe were assailed yesterday as "an example of organized paganism" and "an affront to the graciousness of Christmas" by the Rev. Elmore M. McKee, rector of St. George's Protestant Episcopal Church, 207 East Sixteenth Street.

"These men died not for things material but for indestructible values of the spirit." Mr. McKee told his congregation in a Christmas sermon. "Would they not certainly desire their bodies to serve as permanent promise that Europe and America can be one?

"Suppose our own American soil were studded with cemeteries of Allied dead. Then suppose our Allies sent in a band of grave diggers to lift these bodies and transport them overseas. What would we think? Is not our soil good enough for them? Were we not all in common cause as brothers?

"These same questions our European partners can now rightly ask."

Film Export Official Off To Open Office in Holland

H. W. Kahn to Represent Eric Johnston Group Abroad

Henry W. Kahn left at noon yesterday from La Guardia Field for Hurn, England, en route to Holland, where he announced he would open offices of the new Motion Picture Export Association headed by Eric Johnston.

Mr. Kahn said the new Export Association offices in Amsterdam would represent Columbia, M-G-M, Paramount, R K O Radio, Twentieth Century-Fox, United Artists, Universal and Warner Bros.

The venture is described as the "first combined operation" of its kind for United States film companies in the foreign field.

Mr. Kahn, who left aboard an American Overseas Airlines Flagship, recently was with Twentieth Century-Fox and has had many years of film experience in Europe.

NATION REJOICES IN FIRST WAR-FREE YULE IN FIVE YEARS

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

America from coast to coast rejoiced yesterday, grateful for its first peacetime Christmas in five years.

GI's stranded in East and West coast ports, on shipboard and in staging areas, cheerfully accepted their fate, knowing they would be home for good soon.

Civilians separated from loved ones overseas opened their homes and hearts to the stranded soldiers and sailors, or found joy in the knowledge their own sons, husbands and sweethearts were not in danger.

President Flies Home

President Truman, who flew to Independence, Mo., to spend the holiday with his mother, sounded the keynote for the nation when he declared "this is the Christmas that a war-weary world has prayed for through long and awful years." Minor disappointments could not overshadow that thought.

Millions expressed the President's thought in churches across the country. Archbishop Francis J. Spellman, in the first sermon since his designation to the College of Cardinals, told persons attending Mass at New York city's St. Patrick's Cathedral:

"We must return to God, for deep within our hearts we know there is no other way—no other path of peace, for the lone soul or for the mighty nations of the earth."

Even inclement weather—gloomy, snow-laden skies in the East and rain and sleet in much of the nation—failed to spoil the day for those families reunited after four years of war and those who, despite the worst travel jam in history, reached their destinations.

Families Entertain Men

In keeping with the holiday spirit, Pacific coast families welcomed 170,000 veterans stranded there. Those servicemen in camps and still on shipboard had the best the Army and Navy could find.

Camp Shanks, N. Y., had 10 1-2 tons of turkey for GI's whose thoughts were on the West coast. More offers for "Christmas at our home" were received than there were soldiers to accept the hospitality.

Wounded in Army hospitals had visits from celebrities. Helen Hayes, for instance, left her own two children on Christmas night to entertain the men.

President Truman gave freedom to more than 2,000 federal convicts who served faithfully in the armed forces during the war.

Women Get Nylons

In Charlotte, N. C., 516 nurses and women employes of a hospital were gladdened to find nylons under their Christmas tree—gift of a doctor whose identity mercifully was withheld.

The C.I.O. United Auto Workers' holiday truce in the strike against General Motors drew to an end. The strikers were to resume their fight for a 30 per cent wage increase today.

At Philadelphia, a 45-year-old father, saddened by the death of his eight year old daughter, could think only of her dying wish—"I wouldn't mind dying if only papa could go along with me."

Privations Dim Yule Spirit In Many Sections Of World

[By the Associated Press]

DEC 26 1945

A world at peace for the first yuletide in six years celebrated Christmas with the holiday spirit dimmed in many lands by privation and suffering.

In the town of Bethlehem, the birth of Christ was re-enacted at midnight Christmas Eve in the Church of the Nativity by high church dignitaries before an overflow of pilgrims from all over the world.

British military authorities in Palestine made special efforts to enable as many service personnel as possible to take part in the pilgrimage.

Berlin Collects $300,000

To many lands, short on food and fuel, the season held more threat than promise.

Shattered Berlin managed to collect more than $300,000 for gifts and food, and some restaurant owners offered free meals to children.

The starving people of cold Poland recevied 10,000 gift parcels from UNRRA.

Italians, desperately low on fuel, gave thanks for unseasonably warm weather.

In Brtiain, civilians still on wartime rations shared the best of their depleted larders with hundreds of American soldiers awaiting their transportation home.

Festive Air In Moscow

In Russia, although Christmas is not an official holiday, there was a festive atmosphere in Moscow and many other of the larger cities.

From Denmark, where there is less evidence of privation, the children sent playthings of their own to the children of Britain. Even German prisoners of war in Leicester, England, volunteered to work with penknives and scrap wood in their spare time to make toys for children of the countryside.

American service men, wherever the season found them, did their best to brighten the yuletide celebration.

Christmas Tree In Peiping

In Peiping, 40 Chinese youngsters from an orphanage crowded around a big Christmas tree while Marines and soldiers handed them gifts. In Singapore, recently released internee children were given a holiday feast by GI's.

The same story came from all parts of the world where American service men are still billeted, from India, China, the South Pacific, the Philippines, Bulgaria, Romania, Austria, Iceland.

CHRISTMAS ROUNDUP (550)

LONDON, DEC 25-(AP)-THE WAR-WEARY WORLD REJOICED TODAY IN THE FIRST PEACE-TIME CHRISTMAS IN SIX YEARS, BUT FOOD, CLOTHING AND FUEL SHORTAGES BROUGHT WIDESPREAD SUFFERING IN MANY LANDS.

SOME OF THE HARXSHIPS, HOWEVER, WERE ALLEVIATED BY AMERICAN GI'S WHO, UNABLE TO BE HOME FOR CHRISTMAS, FILLED IN FOR SANTA CLAUS AND BROUGHT YULETIDE JOY TO THOSE FOR WHOM THE BIRTHDAY OF THE PRINCE OF PEACE HAD LONG LOST ITS TRUE SIGNIFICANCE.

IN THE LITTLE TOWN OF BETHLEHEM, THE NEARLY 2,000-YEAR-OLD MIRACLE WHICH FOUNDED THE CHRISTIAN RELIGION WAS RE-ENACTED AT MIDNIGHT LAST NIGHT IN THE CHURCH OF THE NATIVITY BY HIGH CHURCH DIGNITARIES BEFORE AN OVERFLOW CROWD OF PILGRIMS FROM ALL OVER THE WORLD, MANY IN UNIFORM.

DEC 26 1945

POPE PIUS XII, BROADCASTING HIS TRADITIONAL CHRISTMAS MESSAGE TO THE WORLD YESTERDAY FROM VATICAN CITY, FLAYED "TOTALITARIANISM" AS THE SOURCE OF HUMAN SUFFERING AND CALLED FOR "COLLABORATION, GOOD WILL, AND RECIPROCAL CONFIDENCE IN ALL PEOPLES."

IN ENGLAND, CIVILIANS, STILL NOT BACK ON PEACE-TIME RATIONS THEMSELVES, MADE A BRAVE EFFORT TO UPHOLD THE REPUTATION OF JOHN BULL'S YULETIDE BOUNTY BY SHARING THE BEST THEIR DEPLETED LARDERS AFFORDED WITH HUNDREDS OF AMERICAN SOLDIERS STILL AWAITING TRANSPORTATION HOME.

AND THE AMERICANS RECIPROCATED, NOT ONLY IN ENGLAND BUT WHEREVER THE SEASON FOUND THEM. GI'S ENTERTAINED RECENTLY RELEASED INTERNEE CHILDREN IN SINGAPORE. THE CREW OF A U.S. NAVAL VESSEL IN BATAVIA YESTERDAY UNLOADED THE CARGO SO THEY COULD SAIL AGAIN TO EVACUATE A SHIPLOAD OF DUTCH WOMEN AND CHILDREN TODAY.

THE SAME STORY CAME FROM ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD WHERE AMERICAN SERVICE MEN ARE STILL BILLETED: FRON INDIA, CHINA, THE SOUTH PACIFIC, THE PHILIPPINES, BULGARIA, ROMANIA, AUSTRIA, ICELAND.

THE PEOPLE OF OTHER COUNTRIES DID THEIR BEST TO SPREAD THE SEASON'S HAPPINESS, HOWEVER THIN:

DANISH CHILDREN SENT THEIR OWN PLAYTHINGS TO CHILDREN IN ENGLAND. AN RAF PLANE PARACHUTED A LIFE-SIZE SANTA CLAUS STUFFED WITH GOODIES TO EXCITED CHILDREN IN JAVA. EVEN GERMAN PRISONERS-OF-WAR IN LEICESTER, ENGLAND, VOLUNTEERED TO WORK WITH PENKNIVES AND SCRAP WOOD IN THEIR SPARE TIME TO MAKE TOYS FOR CHILDREN OF THE COUNTRYSIDE.

ITALY, WITH LITTLE SPARE COAL, WAS GRATEFUL FOR UNSEASONABLY WARM WEATHER.

BERLIN, IN RUINS, STILL MANAGED TO COLLECT $300,000 FOR GIFTS AND FOOD, AND SOME RESTAURANT OWNERS OFFERED FREE MEALS TO CHILDREN.

IN DISTANT PALESTINE THE EMPHASIS WAS ON THE SPIRITUAL SIGNIFICANCE OF CHRISTMAS. VISITORS FROM MANY LANDS MADE THE TRADITIONAL PILGRIMAGE YESTERDAY OVER THE FIVE-MILE ROUTE FROM JERUSALEM TO BETHLEHEM. BRITISH MILITARY AUTHORITIES HAD MADE SPECIAL EFFORTS TO ENABLE AS MANY SERVICE PERSONNEL AS POSSIBLE TO TAKE PART IN THE PILGRIMAGE. IN CONTRAST WITH LAST YEAR, FEW AMERICAN SOLDIERS WERE CLOSE TO THE MEDITERRANEAN THEATER, ALTHOUGH GI UNIFORMS WERE STILL IN EVIDENCE YESTERDAY IN THE PROCESSION.

THE IMPRESSIVE PONTIFICAL MASS, WITH SOFT SACRED MUSIC AND COLORFUL CLERICAL VESTMENTS, BEGAN AT 10 P.M. YESTERDAY AT BETHLEHEM'S CHURCH OF THE NATIVITY. THE SERVICE WAS CONDUCTED BY THE MOST REV. VICAR OF PORT SAID, MSGR.ANGELIMARIAE HIRAL, WHO CAME TO PALESTINE TO OFFICIATE FOR THE AILING LATIN PATRIARCH, MSGR.LOUIS BARLASSINA. NIGHT LEAD FRANC

BY LOUIS P. NEVIN

PARIS, DEC. 25 - (AP) -- THE FRENCH GOVERNMENT ANNOUNCED TONIGHT THAT IT HAD CUT THE VALUE OF THE FRANC BY MORE THAN HALF, SETTING IT AT 119.10669 TO THE DOLLAR, AND 480 TO THE POUND.

DEVALUATION OF THE FRANC, WHICH SINCE THE LIBERATION, HAS BEEN PEGGED AT 50 TO THE DOLLAR AND 200 TO THE POUND, WILL TAKE EFFECT TOMORROWWITH PUBLICATION OF THE DECREE IN THE OFFICIAL GOVERNMENT JOURNAL, ~~IT WAS ANNOUNCED~~.

MEMBERS OF THE CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY FORECAST LAST WEEK THAT THE FRANC WOULD BE REDUCED IN VALUE AS A STEP TOWARDS FULL SCALE RESUMPTION OF INTERNATIONAL TRADE. DEC 26 1945

THE DECISION TO CUT IT WAS TAKEN AT A FOUR HOUR CABINET SESSION SUNDAY.

IT WAS KNOWN THAT THE GOVERNMENT WANTED TO STABILIZE ITS MONEY BEFORE RATIFICATION OF THE BRETTON WOODS MONETARY AGREEMENT, SCHEDULED FOR DEBATE IN THE CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY TOMORROW.

FRENCH FINANCIAL EXPERTS SAID THE TWO-CENT VALUATION OF THE FRANC WAS ARTIFICIAL AND PREVENTED THE FRENCH FROM "SELLING ANYTHING IN THE UNITED STATES OR IN ENGLAND."

THEY WERE DIVIDED AS TO HOW DEVALUATION MIGHT AFFECT THE FRENCH DOMESTIC ECONOMY. SOME HELD THAT IT WOULD INCREASE INFLATION;

30.24-32645

OTHERS MAINTAINED IT WOULD ~~XXXXXXX~~ SO STIMULATE PRODUCTION OF GOODS THAT LIVING COSTS WOULD FALL.

DEC 26 1945

THE ASSEMBLY NOW IS CONSIDERING THE 1946 BUDGET WHICH CONTEMPLATES A 120,000,000,000 FRANC DEFICIT, ESTIMATED ON THE OLD EVALUATION.

THE NATION'S INTERNATIONAL TRADE SINCE LIBERATION HAS BEEN CONFINED LARGELY TO TOKEN SHIPMENTS OF LUXURY GOODS--PERFUME, COGNAC AND CHAMPAGNE. UNABLE TO FULFILL HER PART OF A TRADE AGREEMENT WITH SWEDEN, FRANCE RECENTLY TRANSFERRED 400,000,000 FRANCS WORTH OF GOLD TO SWEDEN, PARTIALLY COVERING DELIVERIES FRANCE HAD BEEN UNABLE TO MAKE.

DEC 26 1945

THE PRESENT DEVALUATION IS THE FIFTH IN NINE YEARS. DURING THAT TIME THE VALUE OF THE PAPER FRANC HAS DECLINED STEADILY FROM APPROXIMATELY FIVE GOLD CENTIMES (0.049 GOLD FRANCS) TO THE PRESENT RATE OF SLIGHTLY MORE THAN HALF A GOLD CENTIME (0.0064 GOLD FRANCS).

THE MOVE WAS TAKEN TO ALIGN FRANCE'S CURRENCY MORE CLOSELY TO ITS ACTUAL VALUE IN COMPARISON TO WORLD MONEY ON THE EVE OF THE ASSEMBLY'S MEETING TOMORROW TO CONSIDER RATIFICATION OF THE BRETTON WOODS AGREEMENT.

THE GOVERNMENT ANNOUNCED ALSO THAT CURRENCIES IN THE FRENCH COLONIES WOULD BE CHANGED.

THOSE OVERSEAS TERRITORIES WHOSE LOCAL CURRENCY WILL HAVE THE SAME DOLLAR AND POUND VALUE AS THE METROPOLITAN FRANC ARE ALGIERS, TUNISIA, FRENCH MOROCCO, THE FRENCH WEST INDIES AND FRENCH GUIANA.

THOSE COLONIES WHERE 100 FRANCS OF LOCAL CURRENCY WILL BE MADE EQUAL TO 170 METROPOLITAN FRANCS ARE FRENCH WEST AFRICA, FRENCH EQUITORIAL AFRICA, FRANCH CONGO AND CAMEROONS, FRENCH SOMALILAND, MADAGASCAR, REUNION AND ST.PIERRE AND MIQUELON ISLANDS.

NEW CALEDONIA, NEW HEBRIDES AND THE REST OF FRENCH OCEANIA WILL HAVE A RATE OF 100 LOCAL FRANCS EQUAL TO 240 METROPOLITAN FRANCS.

ADDED TO THE ABOVE UNUSUAL DOCUMENT IS ANOTHER HITLER ORDER -- TOP SECRET WAR ORDER NUMBER 51, DATED MARCH 11, 1943 -- ~~ANXXXX~~ GIVING AUTHORITATIVE ANSWER TO THE QUESTION, "DID HITLER EXPECT AN ALLIED LANDING ALONG THE ATLANTIC COAST AND IF SO, WHERE?".

THIS ORDER INDICATES HITLER NOT ONLY EXPECTED AN ATTEMPTED LANDING BY THE SPRING OF 1944, BUT FULLY REALIZED ITS GRAVITY. THIS IS IN GLARING CONTRAST WITH THE PROPAGANDA LINE PURSUED BY HANS FRITSCHE, GOEBBELS' TOP RADIO COMMENTATOR, NOW ON TRIAL AT NUERNBERG. FRITSCHE INSISTED, "WE'RE JUST ACHING FOR THE ALLIES TO TRY TO EFFECT A LANDING. THEY'LL BE DRIVEN BACK INTO THE OCEAN WITH BLOODY NOSES."

DEC 26 1945

With Purely Technical Sections omitted,

DEC 261945

THE ORDER READS: "THE HARD AND SACRIFICIAL CONTEST OF THE PAST TWO AND A HALF YEARS AGAINST BOLSHEVISM HAVE STRAINED OUR MILITARY POWERS AND EFFORTS TO THE UTMOST. IT HAS CORRESPONDED TO AN IMMENSITY OF DANGER AND TO THE GENERAL SITUATION. THIS PICTURE HAS CHANGED, MEANWHILE. THE DANGER IN THE EAST HAS REMAINED, BUT AN EVEN GREATER ONE CASTS SHADOWS BEFORE IT IN THE WEST: THE ANGLO-SAXON LANDING!

DEC 261945

"IN THE EAST THE VAST EXTENT OF THE TERRAIN, IF WORST COMES TO WORST, PERMITS OF LOSS OF TERRITORY EVEN ON A GREATER SCALE WITHOUT STRIKING FATALLY AT GERMANY'S VITAL NERVE.

"IT'S XXXXX DIFFERENT IN THE WEST! SHOULD THE ENEMY HERE SUCCEED IN BREAKING INTO OUR DEFENSES ON A BROAD FRONT, THE CONSEQUENCES EVIDENT WITHIN A SHORT TIME WILL BE BEYOND COMPREHENSION.

DEC 261945

"ALL INDICATIONS POINT TO THE FACT THAT THE ENEMY WILL EMBARK UPON AN ATTACK AGAINST EUROPE'S WESTERN FRONT IN THE SPRING, POSSIBLY EVEN EARLIER.

"I CAN THEREFORE NO LONGER ASSUME RESPONSIBILITY FOR SEEING THE WEST STILL FURTHER WEAKENED IN FAVOR OF OTHER WAR THEATERS. I HAVE THEREFORE, DECIDED TO STRENGTHEN ITS DEFENSIVE POWERS, ESPECIALLY AT THE POINT WHENCE WE SHALL BEGIN OUR LONG-DISTANCE FIGHT AGAINST ENGLAND. FOR IT'S THERE THAT THE ENEMY MUST AND WILL ATTACK. IT IS THERE -- UNLESS ALL INDICATIONS MISLEAD -- THAT THE DECISIVE LANDING BATTLE WILL BE KXXXXXX FOUGHT.

"WE MUST COUNT UPON ATTACKS ON XXXXX ANOTHER FRONT, CALCULATED TO TIE US DOWN OR DIVERT US. BUT AN ATTACK ON A GRAND

DEC 261945

SCALE ON DENMARK IS ALSO NOT BEYOND THE RANGE OF POSSIBILITY. SUCH AN ATTACK IS MORE DIFFICULT TO SUPPORT FROM THE SEA AND LESS EFFECTIVE TO SUPPORT FROM THE AIR. IN THE EVENT OF ITS BEING SUCCESSFUL, HOWEVER, ITS POLITICAL AND OPERATIONAL CONSEQUENCES ARE OF THE GREATEST.

DEC 261945

"AT THE BEGINNING OF SUCH A STRUGGLE, THE ENTIRE OFFENSIVE POWER OF THE ENEMY XXXX NECESSARILY WILL BE DIRECTED AGAINST OUR COASTAL DEFENSES. IN THE SHORT TIME WHICH IS XX PRESUMABLY STILL AT OUR XXXXXXX DISPOSAL, OUR DEFENCES ON THE COAST CAN BE STRENGTHENED

30.24-32647

ONLY IF EXPANDED AS FAR AS POSSIBLE AND IF ALL AVAILABLE PERSONNEL AND MATERIAL FORCES AT HOME AND IN THE OCCUPIED AREAS INCREASE THEIR EFFORTS TO THE ~~MAXIMUM~~ HIGHEST POTENTIAL.

DEC 26 1945

"WEAPONS INTENDED IN THE IMMEDIATE FUTURE FOR DENMARK AND OCCUPIED WESTERN AREAS (SUCH AS PAK, AN IMMOVABLE ~~ARMOR~~ PANZER DUG INTO THE EARTH, COASTAL ARTILLERY, ACK-ACK GUNS, MINES, ETC.) ARE TO BE SHARPLY CONCENTRATED AND PLACED IN SERVICE AT THE MOST THREATENED COASTAL POINTS. THIS MAY MEAN THAT THE DEFENSIVE EFFECTIVENESS OF LESS ENDANGERED SECTORS FOR THE PRESENT CANNOT BE IMPROVED.

DEC 26 1945

"IN CASE THE ENEMY, NEVERTHELESS, BY COMBINING ALL HIS FORCES, BRINGS ABOUT A LANDING, OUR COUNTER-ATTACK CONDUCTED WITH THE GREATEST VEHEMENCE MUST MEET HIM. THE TASK WILL BE TO SUPPLY RESERVES AND MATERIAL QUICKLY AND IN SUFFICIENT QUANTITY, AND ALSO TO GIVE INTENSIVE TRAINING ~~AND~~ TO EXISTING LARGE UNITS SO THAT THEY ARE DEVELOPED INTO HIGHGRADE, ATTACK-LUSTY, FULLY MOBILE RESERVES WHO WILL PREVENT THE BROADENING OF THE LANDING BY A COUNTER-ATTACK AND WILL THROW THE ENEMY BACK INTO THE OCEAN.

DEC 26 1945

"BEYOND THAT, AUXILIARY MEASURES MUST BE PREPARED IN THE MINUTEST DETAIL FOR THROWING AGAINST THE ENEMY AFTER HIS LANDING WHATEVER CAN BE BROUGHT INTO PLAY WITH THE ~~XXXX~~ GREATEST SPEED FROM THE UNATTACKED COASTAL SECTORS AND FROM THE HOME AREAS.

"THE LUFTWAFFE AND THE NAVY MUST OPPOSE THE EXPECTABLE STRONG ATTACKS FROM THE AIR AND ON THE SEA WITH EVERY POSSIBLE FORCE, AND REGARDLESS OF COSTS."

DEC 26 1945

THE ORDER CONTINUES WITH DETAILED INSTRUCTIONS TO VARIOUS UNITS OF THE WEHRMACHT. IT CLOSES WITH THE WORDS, "I EXPECT THAT WITHIN THE TIME STILL AVAILABLE ALL ECHELONS WILL WITH EXTREME ENERGY PREPARE FOR THE EXPECTABLE DECISIVE BATTLE IN THE WEST.

"ALL RESPONSIBLE PERSONS MUST BE ON THE LOOKOUT ~~XXXX~~ THAT TIME AND MANPOWER WON'T BE WASTED USELESSLY IN JURISDICTIONAL QUESTIONS, BUT THAT, ON THE CONTRARY, ALL WILL JOIN IN ADVANCING OUR DEFENSIVE AND OFFENSIVE STRENGTH."

LOCHNERS THRU THIRD 1745/18/12 AND THRU THIRD 1830-17/12 OC/20/12/850PES

BERLIN, DEC. 18 -- (AP) -- BRITISH MILITARY AUTHORITIES CONTINUE TO KEEP CLOSED TO THE PRESS AND ANY OTHER OUTSIDERS WHAT IS REGARDED OFFICIALLY AS A HUGE PRISONER OF WAR CAMP ON THE EAST COAST OF SCHLESWIG-HOLSTEIN WHERE APPROXIMATELY 160,000 MISERABLE GERMAN TROOPS ARE AWAITING DEMOBILIZATION.

KNOWN AS "AREA F", THE CAMP CONTAINS THE REAL WRECKAGE OF THE WEHRMACHT. ONE BRITISH OFFICER SAID ONLY A FEW BRITISH ARMY MEN OUTSIDE OF INTELLIGENCE TEAMS AND SECURITY POLICE HAVE GAINED PERMISSION TO ENTER "AREA F"

DEC 26 1945

GENERALLY, ACCORDING TO THE BRITISH OFFICER, THESE MEN LIVE WRETCHEDLY ON PRISONER OF WAR RATIONS. THEY ARE KEPT AS BUSY AS POSSIBLE ON ROAD REPAIR WORK, LOG CUTTING, ETC. AND FROM THIS GIANT POOL THE BRITISH PULL OUT THOSE PRISONERS THEY MIGHT WANT TO QUESTION OR TO SEND TO INTERNMENT CAMPS AS SECURITY SUSPECTS.

THE MAJORITY OF THE GERMANS SEALED IN THE AREA ARE UNDERSTOOD TO BE FROM THE RUSSIAN, FRENCH OR AMERICAN ZONES OF OCCUPATION. BECAUSE OF THE DIFFICULTIES OF RETURNING THEM TO THEIR HOMES THE BRITISH THOUGHT IT BEST TO KEEP THEM CONCENTRATED IN THE AREA RATHERN THAN DEMOBILIZE THEM AND HAVE THEM WANDERING AROUND THE BRITISH ZONE.

THE BRITISH ALSO ANNOUNCED THEY HAVE BEEN USING GERMAN MINESWEEPERS FOR DANGEROUS WORK THAT OTHERWISE WOULD HAVE REQUIRED THE USE OF THEIR OWN NAVY. MANY DISHCARGED GERMAN NAVY PERSONNEL HAVE BEEN HIRED AS CIVILIANS AND PAID THROUGH THE BURGOMEISTERS TO REPAIR THE SHIPS.

FIRST LEAD KREMLIN DINNER

MOSCOW, DEC 25-(AP)-GENERALISSIMO STALIN GAVE AN "ATOMIC" TOAST AT A CHRISTMAS EVE DINNER FOR U.S. SECRETARY OF STATE BYRNES AND BRITISH FOREIGN SECRETARY ERNEST BEVIN IN THE KREMLIN LAST NIGHT AND ALL DRAINED THEIR GLASSES MERRILY.

DETAILS WERE NOT GIVEN OUT, BUT PERSONS WHO ATTENDED SAID THE TOAST PROBABLY WAS THE MOST INTERESTING AND AMUSING OF ABOUT 15 DRUNK AT THE FUNCTION.

STALIN, RESTED BY A LONG VACATION, TOOK A LIVELY PART IN THE CONVERSATION UP AND DOWN THE LONG TABLE. MEN WHO HAVE ATTENDED MANY KREMLIN BANQUETS FOR FOREIGNERS SAID HE NEVER WAS MORE HOSPITABLE.

MEEMBERS OF THE BYRNES PARTY SAID THEY HAVE ENJOYED THEMSELVES TREMENDOUSLY. BYRNES WON LAUGHTER AND APPLAUSE SEVERAL TIMES WITH HIS TOASTS, WHICH WERE SAID TO HAVE BEEN "TO THE POINT." STALIN WAS REPORTED GREATLY AMUSED.

AFTER THE BANQUET THE GROUP SAW A RUSSIAN FILM OF BYRNES' CHOICE, "THE DEFEAT OF JAPAN," WHICH SHOWED THE STRUGGLE BETWEEN RUSSIA AND JAPAN FROM 1904 THROUGH INTERVENTION AND VICTORY THIS YEAR.

30.24 - 32649

AMERICAN GUESTS RETURNING FROM THE DINNER SAID TOASTS WERE DRUNK TO THE HEALTH OF STALIN, KING GEORGE VI, PRESIDENT TRUMAN, TO THE CONTINUED FRIENDSHIP AND ALLIANCE OF THE ALLIED POWERS, TO WORLD AMITY AND PEACE.

FIRST LEAD FOREIGN MINISTERS DAY

BY EDDY GILMORE

MOSCOW, DEC.25-(AP)-ADVISERS AND EXPERTS WORKED TODAY ON THE DRAFTS OF AGREEMENTS REACHED BY THE FOREIGN MINISTERS OF THE BIG THREE HIGHLIGHTED BY A COMPROMISE ACCORD ON THE PROCEDURE FOR DRAFTING OF THE EUROPEAN PEACE SETTLEMENT.

A COMMUNIQUE WILL BE ISSUED AT 2 A.M. THURSDAY (6 P.M. WEDNESDAY EASTERN STANDARD TIME), A BRITISH SOURCE SAID.

INFORMED QUARTERS SAID THE THREE MINISTERS, JAMES F. BYRNES OF THE UNITED STATES, ERNEST BEVIN OF BRITAIN AND VYACHESLAV M.MOLOTOV OF SOVIET RUSSIA, PLANNED ANOTHER MEETING BEFORE ADJOURNMENT.

DEC 26 1945

ONE OF THE MAIN PIECES OF BUSINESS ON BYRNES' CALENDAR FOR TYE DAY WAS A CHRISTMAS TELEPHONE CALL TO HIS WIFE.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE HAD CHRISTMAS DINNER WITH U.S. AMBASSADOR W.AVERELL HARRIMAN AT THE SPASSO HOUSE, THE AMBASSADOR'S OFFICIAL RESIDENCE. BYRNES WAS ALMOST RECOVERED FROM A SLIGHT COLD WHICH BOTHERED HIM EARLIER THIS WEEK.

TURKEY WAS THE ORDER AT SPASSO HOUSE. ALL THE AMERICANS THERE GOT UP LATE TODAY BECAUSE OF A DINNER AT THE KREMLIN LAST NIGHT--AT WHICH BYRNES AND HIS PARTY REMAINED UNTIL MIDNIGHT--AND A PARTY FOR THE AMERICAN COLONY IN THE AMBASSADOR'S HOME WHICH BYRNES ATTENDED FOR ABOUT HALF AN HOUR.

HOPE WAS OFFERED UNDER THE AGREEMENT ON PROCEDURE REACHED IN MOSCOW FOR ENDING OF THE IMPASSE OVER THE PEACE TREATIES, WHICH CAUSED THE COLLAPSE OF THE FIVE-POWER FOREIGN MINISTERS CONFERENCE IN LONDON LAST OCTOBER.

INFORMED SOURCES SAID THE AGREEMENT WAS VERY CLOSE TO THE FORMULA PROPOSED BY BYRNES AS A COMPROMISE AT LONDON. IT WAS LEARNED THAT THE SITE OF THE PEACE CONFERENCE HAD NOT BEEN DECIDED.

CHINA HAS REPLIED AFFIRMATIVELY ON ADHERENCE TO THE AGREEMENT, BUT THERE WAS REPORTED TO HAVE BEEN NO REPLY YET FROM FRANCE, ALTHOUGH SHE HAS HAD THE TREATY PROPOSAL SEVERAL DAYS.

INFORMED QUARTERS SAID THERE HAD BEEN NO DISCUSSION ABOUT A PEACE TREATY FOR JAPAN. IN THE CASE OF GERMANY, THEY SAID, THE NATION MUST HAVE A GOVERNMENT BEFORE THE TREATY IS SIGNED.

BYRNES HOPED TO GET AWAY TOMORROW. THE CREW OF HIS PLANE CHECKED OVER THE SHIP TODAY AND WARMED UP THE ENGINES.

AN ANNOUNCEMENT ISSUED BY THE "BIG THREE" FOREIGN MINISTERS LAST NIH SAID THEY HAD AGREED THAT THE PEACE TERMS SHOULD BE DRAWN UP BY THOSE NATIONS WHICH SIGNED THE ARMISTICE TERMS WITH GERMANY'S EUROPEAN SATELLITES, "EXCEPT IN THE CASE OF OTHER MEMBERS OF THE UNITED NATIONS WHO WILL BE INVITED TO TAKE PART IN DECISIONS OF QUESTIONS WHICH CONCIN THEM."

DEC 26 1945

THE TERMS, THE ANNOUNCEMENT SAID, WILL BE SUBMITTED TO A CONFERENCE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF 21 ACTIVE BELLIGERENTS WHO FOUGHT FOR THE ALLIED CAUSE, TO BE CONVOKED NOT LATER THAN MAY 1, 1946.

IN THE MEANTIME, THE ANNOUNCEMENT ADDED, DEPUTIES OF THE FIVE-POWER COUNCIL OF FOREIGN MINISTERS WILL RESUME THEIR WORK IN LONDON.

THE "BIG THREE" CONFEREES ASKED BOTH FRANCE AND CHINA TO GIVE THEIR APPROVAL TO THE AGREEMENT.

THE ANNOUNCEMENT, ISSUED AS THE TRI-POWER CONFERENCE DREW TO A CLOSE, WAS REGARDED BY FOREIGN DIPLOMATS HERE AS A FAIR COMPROMISE OF THE POSITIONS TAKEN AT THE RECENT UNSUCCESSFUL MEETING OF THE COUNCIL OF FOREIGN MINISTERS IN LONDON.

THESE QUARTERS EXPRESSED BELIEF THAT THE MAJOR POWERS NOW STAND CLOSER TOGETHER THAN THEY HAVE IN MONTHS.

DEC 26 1945

SECRETARY OF STATE JAMES F.BYRNES WAS SAID TO BE PLEASED WITH THE RESULTS OF THE CONFERENCE, WHILE NOT WISHING TO RAISE AMERICAN HOPES TOO HIGH.

SPECIFICALLY, THE AGREEMENT REACHED HERE PROVIDED THAT THE TERMS OF THE PEACE TREATY WITH ITALY BE DRAFTED BY THE UNITED STATES, BRITAIN, RUSSIA AND FRANCE, AND THAT TREATIES WITH ROMANIA, BULGARIA AND HUNGARY BE DRAWN UP BY RUSSIA, THE UNITED STATES AND BRITAIN. BRITAIN AND RUSSIA WILL DRAFT THE TREATY WITH FINLAND.

WHEN THIS PREPARATORY WORK IS COMPLETED, THE COUNCIL OF FOREIGN MINISTERS WILL CALL A CONFERENCE TO DISCUSS THE PEACE AGREEMENTS. NATIONS ELIGIBLE TO PARTICIPATE IN ADDITION TO THE UNITED STATES, RUSSIA, BRITAIN, FRANCE AND CHINA WILL BE: AUSTRALIA, BELGIUM, WHITE RUSSIA, BRAZIL, GREECE, HOLLAND, CANADA, NEW ZEALAND, NORWAY, POLAND, THE UKRAINE, CZECHOSLOVAKIA, ETHIOPIA, YUGOSLAVIA AND THE UNION OF SOUTH AFRICA AND INDIA.

PROMPT ANNOUNCEMENT OF RESULTS, 'IMPORTANT AND DEFINITE', FORECAST

Moscow Conference Reported To Have Ended. Byrnes And Bevin Prepare For Early Departure

DEC 27 1945 GILMORE

Moscow, Dec. 26 (AP)—The foreign ministers of the United States, Russia and Great Britain were said late tonight to have reached an agreement on all points of their discussions and James F. Byrnes, Secretary of State, and Ernest Bevin, Foreign Secretary, were making arrangements for an early departure.

[The Moscow radio in a broadcast heard in London said that the conference had ended and that Byrnes would hold a press conference at 7.30 A.M. Thursday.]

Diplomatic observers forecast a prompt announcement of "important and definite results" concerning the conference.

Great Progress Reported

Unquestionably agreement has been achieved on many main issues, these observers said, adding that the conference has gone well beyond anything that had been expected even by Byrnes, Ernest Bevin and Vyacheslav M. Molotov, Soviet Foreign Commissar, themselves.

All world ills have not been solved, these informants said, "but progress, and great progress, has been made."

[In London, Foreign Office officials were called back from holiday vacations to be at their posts for an expected release of the conference communiqué.

[London diplomatic observers felt it was safe to assume that the major part of the conference has been devoted to current pressing problems and that problems with long-range significance were discussed for the purpose of an exchange of views, with final settlement put off.]

Air Of Optimism Persists

The air of optimism persisted here right up to the closing hours of the conference. Observers pointed out that the rapidity with which the three statesmen reached an agreement on peace treaty procedure indicated considerable progress.

The three foreign ministers began work at 2.30 P.M. (6.30 A.M., E.S.T.) and still were in session more than three hours later, putting the finishing touches to their communiqué.

The aura of ill feeling which marked the breakdown of the London meeting of the Foreign Ministers' Council appears to have been eliminated and the Big Three are again united in the same spirit of collaboration they enjoyed during the war, informed observers believed.

French Action Still Awaited

Molotov and his two visitors have come to know one another more intimately than ever before and, it is said, a real measure of mutual admiration exists among them.

While the ministers were preparing for today's meeting they still were awaiting the French adherence on the agreement for peace conference procedure as announced two days ago.

Under terms of the agreement reached on peace treaties, peace terms will be drawn up by nations which signed armistice agreements with Germany's European satellites. The communiqué provided that France would participate in drafting the treaty with Italy, and that treaties with Romania, Bulgaria and Hungary would be drawn up by Russia, the United States and Britain.

Byrnes Tries To Reach Bidault

[A French Foreign Ministry source said the French Government was preparing a reply with reservations, which would be completed by the end of the week. This source said France, with vital interests in the Balkans, should be permitted to participate in drafting the treaties. President de Gaulle and Georges Bidault, Foreign Minister, conferred at length on the matter yesterday.]

Diplomatic quarters revealed today that Byrnes had tried unsuccessfully on Christmas Eve to reach Bidault. The American Secretary talked with the French Foreign Office by telephone but Bidault was out.

The French had indicated earlier that there would be no objections to the draft. It was stated, and their failure to answer came as somewhat of a surprise. The general impression, according to informed quarters, was that the Christmas holidays must have caused the delay.

A Quick Turkey Lunch

Georges Catroux, French Ambassador to the Soviet Union, saw Mr. Bevin, it was learned, but the meeting was said to have had nothing to do with France's reply on the peace conference agreement.

The holiday did not interrupt Byrnes's duties. The secretary had a quick turkey lunch at Spasso House, hurriedly conferred with Bevin and then rushed to Speridonifka House for a conference with Molotov.

The three ministers on Christmas Day did not dine until almost midnight when, at the close of their meeting, they had an elaborate Christmas night buffet at Speridonifka Palace.

An atmosphere of informality and good cheer prevailed.

Byrnes's Picture Featured

It also was learned that because of the uncertain weather, the American Secretary might revise his route homeward if he thought that atmospheric conditions warranted a change. He was anxious to return home as quickly as possible.

Photographs of Byrnes and Bevin, each picture a column and a half wide, were displayed side by side on the front pages of the Government newspaper Izvestia and official army organ, Red Star.

On the same front pages were stories of the agreement on the preparation of peace treaties; Generalissimo Stalin's reception for the two foreign ministers, and of last night's dinner given in their honor by Stalin.

Cruiser Considerably Damaged By Seas

London, Dec. 26 (AP)—An army spokesman said today that the cruised Augusta, one of the United States warships being used as a troop transport, was considerably damaged three days ago in heavy seas and had put into Portsmouth for repairs.

The Army said the Augusta's sailing date was indefinite and that all troops aboard had been sent back to their staging area. No other details were announced.

Women's Federation Assails Fascist Spain

London, Dec. 26 (AP)—The International Democratic Women's Federation has appealed to the foreign ministers' conference in Moscow to bring about the liquidation of "Franco's Fascist dictatorship," the Moscow radio said tonight, quoting a message from Paris.

The appeal, which the broadcast quoted as having been signed on behalf of all members of the federation, said, "we consider that the security of all peoples will not be assured as long as there is a Fascist Spain in Europe. Spaniards who have fought for democracy since 1936 are still being killed by bullets of the Falange. Thousands are still being kept imprisoned."

The federation was formed December 1 in Paris at the close of the International Women's Congress.

FRENCH FAVOR BRETTON PACT

Assembly Group Votes to Recommend Adoption.

Paris, Dec. 26 (A. P.).—The Foreign Affairs Commission of the Constituent Assembly voted unanimously today to advise ratification of the Bretton Woods monetary agreement. The Government, by decree, cut the value of the franc yesterday more than one half, fixing its rate at 119.10669 to the dollar and 480 to the pound. The franc had been pegged at fifty to the dollar and 200 to the pound.

Foreign Minister Georges Bidault made a report to the commission before it voted for the Bretton Woods agreement. The commission members expressed a desire that the French quota of $450,000,000 be increased.

In subsequent debate in the Assembly, Pierre Lapie, speaking for the commission, asserted that the Bretton Woods agreement was "a mutilation of French sovereignty in financial affairs," but that this was "freely consented to by France." He said that the United States contribution of nearly $3,000,000,000 to the international fund was "a fine concession toward the establishment of a coherent and stable international monetary order."

French financial experts said that the 2-cent valuation of the franc was artificial and prevented the French from selling anything in the United States or England. The devaluation was decreed, they said, to align France's currency more closely to its actual value in world marts before the Constituent Assembly begins its debate on the Bretton Woods agreement. Because of the devaluation the Government ordered the French stock exchange to remain closed until Thursday.

French Assembly Approves Bretton

Paris, Thursday, Dec. 27 (AP)—The French Constituent Assembly early today unanimously approved the Bretton Woods monetary stabilization agreement and an American Export-Import Bank loan of $550,000,000.

Following the Assembly's ratification of the Bretton Woods agreement and the loan, the Assembly in effect approved the Government's devaluation of the franc by voting, 506 to 44, to give the Government authority to revalue the gold stock of the Bank of France on the basis of the new gold content of the paper franc.

Before the proposals were put to the vote, Gen. Charles de Gaulle told the Assembly that both franc devaluation and ratification of the international monetary agreement were necessary, and that every effort would be made to keep prices and salaries on a steady level, to keep the Government budget balanced and to reduce Government expenses.

Pleven For Ratification

The nation's principal need, de Gaulle said, "is to produce. We must get the maximum from our factories, our fields and our brains."

Advocating ratification of the Bretton Woods agreement, Rene Pleven, Finance Minister, said ratification was necessary because the franc "has suffered too much" from international monetary disorders. The Bretton Woods plan, he added, was the "first attempt to deliver the world from the evils" of financial disorder and payment restriction.

Meanwhile, the United States Army in France ordered all enlisted men, officers and civilians in army employ to turn in all their paper francs. The announcement said they would be issued new currency within 48 hours to compensate for the devaluation.

Army to Start Sending War Brides to the U.S.

PARIS, Dec. 26 (AP).—The Army will start sending brides of American soldiers to the United States next month, European Theater Service Forces Headquarters said today. No quota has been set, but the plans, said the Army, will not interfere with returning troops.

[At the War Department in Washington a spokesman for the Army Transportation Corps said "considerable thought" had been given to the problem of bringing war brides to this country from overseas, but no definite program had yet been worked out.]

FRENCH BUY U. S. PLANES

Part of Civil Air Development—Ship Purchases Planned

PARIS, Dec. 26 (AP)—France has bought twelve Constellation transport planes and an unspecified number of Douglas aircraft in the United States in a program to rebuild her commercial air fleet, Transport Minister Jules Moch said today.

He told the Constituent Assembly's communications commission that the United States Air Transport Command's airfield at Orley, near Paris, would be made into an air hub capable of receiving 100 planes an hour.

France expects to have her merchant marine back at its 1939 level of 3,000,000 tons by 1951 with the aid of Liberty ship purchases, for which she now is negotiating in the United States, he added.

Italy Buys U. S. Surplus Supplies

ROME, Dec. 26 (AP)—The United States Office of Foreign Liquidation said today that the Italian Government had paid $7,773,500.80 for a quantity of surplus American Army stocks. The sale included 133 locomotives and was mainly of equipment to rehabilitate Italian Railroads.

SOVIETIZATION REPORTED IN GERMAN ZONE

Russian Occupation Area Toured By Five U.S. Correspondents

KASISCHKE

Berlin, Dec. 26 (AP)—Five American correspondents who toured the Russian occupation zone of Germany found a program of Sovietization in progress, with veteran Communists in key posts. Industry, farming and mining are largely under control of German provincial governments, aided and supported by the Russian military government.

The correspondents toured for eight days through the southeastern section of the Russian zone—from Berlin, 125 miles south to Dresden through Saxony.

This is the first time western correspondents have been admitted into the Russian area, under an exchange plan which also will take Russians into the American zone. Five Americans, conducted by four Russians and driven by United States soldier-chauffeurs, traveled an itinerary chosen by the correspondents, and interviewed Russian and German administrators.

Great Refugee Problems

The Soviet-sponsored program was observed at work in a sector whose cities largely escaped the terrific bomb damage inflicted on western Germany, and in regions which, though rich agriculturally, were coping with tremendous refugee problems.

The Soviet program is based on a planned economy for industry and business, and widespread agrarian reform that has liquidated the aristocratic, militaristic Junkers, and distributed their vast holdings among previously landless or impoverished peasants.

German government leaders say the program is progressing satisfactorily, despite undeniable initial hardships. Reaction of the German little man ranges from courageous optimism among the new farmers, to helpless doubt in Dresden, and blurting complaints in the streets of Halle and Leipzig.

Planned Economy For Industry

People in the province of Saxony, which first was occupied by Americans, complained chiefly of the shortages of food and clothing, and of the Russian reparations collections which they called "plundering."

Farther south, in the state of Saxony, and in its capital, Dresden, where Americans have never been, the people acknowledged that life was hard, but added: "Well, that's to be expected. We lost the war."

Industry in Saxony and throughout the Russian zone has been geared to a strict planned economy, according to production plans drafted by the state governments at Marshal Georgi K. Zhukov's direction.

Unionization Is 100 Per Cent

Under this scheme the governments allocate available raw materials, and direct where the manufacturers should deliver finished products, and at what prices. Similar strict control is enforced on wholesalers and retailers, on all except a few unrationed consumer goods.

Mines and factories are run by boards of directors and workers' council representatives.

In factories and mines, unionization is 100 per cent. The general plan calls for one big vertical union, with multiple divisions—even one for public administrators, to which the provincial presidents belong.

In agrarian reform, the German government, with approval of Soviet authorities, split up 7,000 Junker estates which contained more than 247 acres each, among 281,155 new holders throughout the zone.

Housing Is Tough Problem

Along with the land there was division of the live stock and tools. Each new holder got from twelve to nineteen acres, for which he must pay the Government.

Currently, there are four political parties waging a joint campaign to boost the Government-financed scheme to provide new landholders with buildings and sorely needed implements and fertilizers.

Saxony's toughest immediate problems are housing, feeding or resettling millions of refugees swarming in from Poland and Czechoslovakia.

Claims Food Rations Met

More than 2,500,000 of them have poured into the state of Saxony. One million of these have been shifted to other sections of the zone, but those who stayed have swelled the population to 6,000,000—or 777 inhabitants for each square mile. At least another million must be taken in during the next few months.

In the province of Saxony the population jumped from 3,200,000 in September, to 5,000,000 in early December. There was an attendant dislocation with an exces of women and very young, and a great shortage of young, strong men for labor.

Despite the refugee influx, the Government claimed that food rations were being met. These range from 2,160 calories daily for the heaviest labor, to 1,178 calories daily for housewives and unessentially employed persons.

Civilians Get Rationed Coal

This is less than Berliners get, but somewhat higher than the average of 1,354 calories daily for the normal consumer in the American zone.

The Russian zone also has free markets in which peasants are allowed to sell 30 per cent of their production, and where anyone with money enough can buy meats and fats to supplement rations. Civilians also get rationed brown coal for heating their homes, which Berliners and western Germans do not get.

In the streets of Halle, Prussian capital, where a number of people complained to us of hunger, the windows of the meat market in the town square were well filled. However, Halle's children appeared pale, and many men were gaunt.

Nazi Spy Must Pay Relatives Of Victims

Warsaw, Poland, Dec. 26 (AP)—A German spy accused of giving information that caused the killing of two prominent Poles must pay damages to their relatives as well as face trial for his life in Poland.

A special tribunal ruled that Gustav Beckman, former owner of a German razor blade factory and a fine villa, must turn over to the widow of Polish Judge Frackiewicz $7,000; to his two daughters, $3,000 each and an annual pension; to the widow of Polish prosecutor Dr. Bietkowski, $5,500, and to his daughter, $3,000 and an annual pension.

Relatives of the deceased filed a complaint against Beckman which brought a prompt court ruling.

Beckman is under arrest in the American zone of occupation in Germany. It was announced that he would be brought to Cracow, Poland, for trial.

Krzycki In Stalingrad

Warsaw, Poland, Dec. 26 (AP)—The Russian news agency Tass said today that Leo Krzycki, of Milwaukee, president of the American Slav Congress, had reached Stalingrad on a tour of Russian industrial districts.

Russ Yield Plants To Poles

Warsaw, Poland, Dec. 26 (AP)—The Soviet Army in western Pomerania had turned over to the Poles "several industrial plants," according to an official announcement today.

17 Doomed in Yugoslavia

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, Dec. 24 (Delayed) (AP).—Seventeen persons, including some Chetniks, were condemned to death today at Ljubljana on charges of having collaborated with the Nazis. Thirteen others, also convicted of treason, received sentences of from eight to twenty years' imprisonment. One defendant was freed.

Churchill To Visit Czechs

Prague, Dec. 26 (AP)—Winston Churchill has accepted an official invitation to visit Czechoslovakia, either immediately before or immediately after his scheduled vacation visit to the United States, an authoritative source said today.

The former Prime Minister is expected to leave England about the middle of January. He is to discuss "world affairs" at Westminster College, Fulton, Mo., on March 5.

Greek Mission Going to London

ATHENS, Dec. 26 (AP)—The Greek Government said today that Vice Premier Emmanuel Tsouderos and Minister of Supplies George Kartalis would leave for London Friday to continue discussions on measures to stabilize the drachma and other reconstruction problems with the British Government.

Poles Get Romania Oil

Warsaw, Dec. 26 (AP)—The Polish press agency said today Poland has signed an agreement with Romania to import 50,000 tons of Romanian crude oil and is negotiating for additional imports as well as seeking Romanian timber.

Turks Promise To Fight for Black Sea Area

Press Reflects Popular Resistance to Georgian Demand for Annexation

EDWIN B. GREENWALD

ISTANBUL, Dec. 25 (Delayed) (AP).—The semi-official news agency Anatolia said today that "for one inch of Turkish territory, all Turkey is ready to throw itself into the fire," and branded as "crazy" recent Georgian demands, prominently displayed in the Soviet press, that Russia annex a 180-mile stretch of Black Sea coast.

Anatolia's declaration reflects local sentiment growing out of an opinion expressed recently by an Istanbul conservative newspaper, "Tasvir," which said that "Turkey will answer "No" to all territorial demands, and if she is told that there will be war, she will answer, "All right, we will fight."

The "territorial demand," published in the torm of a letter from two professors of the Georgian Soviet Socialist Republic, Premier Stalin's birthplace, appeared in the Moscow press as the Big Three foreign ministers prepared to convene.

Turkey Inspects Area

An area reaching 180 miles southwest from the Russian oil port of Batumi to Giresun, stretching inland as deep as seventy-five miles, and defined as "our ancient land taken by Turkey," was sought by the writers, S. R. Djanashia, doctor or historical science, and N. Berdzenishvili, both members of the Science Academy of the Georgian Republic.

[The Turkish Minister of the Interior, Recep Peker, has left Ankara to inspect the Black Sea provinces, the Paris radio said in a broadcast recorded by the Columbia Broadcasting System.]

Earlier this week, Turkish General Kazim Karabekir told the Turkish National Assembly that unless relations between Turkey and Russia were friendly, "great wounds" could follow.

Karabekir's words, and a statement by Foreign Minister Hassan Saka that Turkey wanted nothing and would give nothing, were repetitions of similar recent declarations that Turkey would fight before yielding either land or rights.

Relations Deteriorating

Russo-Turkish relations have been deteriorating since the Soviet Foreign Office announced last March that the Soviet Union was denouncing a twenty-year-old treaty of friendship and non-aggression and suggested that a new basis be found on which to renew the pact.

The Georgian letter appeared in the newspapers "Izvestia," "Red Star" and "Pravda," which stated that it had been printed earlier in the Communist journal at Tiflis, the Georgian capital.

Referring to the "seized cradle of our people—a crime which has cut in two our living national body," the letter demanded that Turkey turn over to the Georgians the districts of Artvin, Ardahan, Oltu, Tortum, Ispir, Bayburt, Guemuesane, Giresun and Trabzon.

Trabzon, an important port 110 miles southwest of Batumi, has a population of approximately 33,000. It is the largest city in the area named. The administrative district of Trabzon has a population of some 391,000.

The letter, which traced the history of the Georgian peoples for 2,000 years, said that Georgia had seen many conquerors. By rights the Turks have deserved the title of the worst of them and they brought only death and destruction, it asserted.

SAYS TURKS ARE READY TO FIGHT

Istanbul, Dec. 25 (Delayed) (A. P.).—The semi-official Anatolia News Agency, commenting upon a claim advanced by Soviet newspapers to a 180-mile stretch of Turkey's Black Sea coast, asserted today that all Turkey was ready to fight for her soil.

"For one inch of Turkish territory, all Turkey is ready to throw itself in the fire," the agency declared, addiing that this was the consensus of deputies, journalists and other quarters.

[The Turkish Minister of the Interior has left Ankara to inspect the Black Sea provinces, the Paris radio said in a broadcast recorded by CBS.]

The Anatolia agency comment followed an earlier assertion by Gen. Kazim Karabekir before the National Assembly that, unless relations were friendly between Turkey and Russia, "great wounds" could result. Hussan Saka, Turkish Foreign Minister, said Turkey wanted nothing and would give nothing. The Anatolia agency knew about the articles with crazy and misplaced demands by the Georgian professors."

Russian-Turkish relations have been deteriorating gradually since Soviet Foreign Commisar V. M. Molotov announced last March that the Soviet Union was denouncing a 20-year-old Treaty of Friendship, and suggested that a new basis be found for renewing the pact.

Indonesian Chief Shot At, Beaten With Pistol

Batavia, Java, Dec. 26 (AP)—Shots were fired at Premier Sutan Sjahrir of the unrecognized Indonesian republic and he was clubbed with a pistol butt today in what Aneta said apparently was an attempt by several Netherlands Indies soldiers to steal his car.

"I don't think they know who I was," Sjahrir was quoted by a correspondent of Aneta, the official Dutch news agency.

Four men in Dutch uniforms in another car pulled alongside the Premier's automobile and fired three bullets against the hood, forcing him to halt, Sjahrir reported. He said he had gotten out of his car when one of the soldiers struck him with the pistol. At one time, Sjahrir said, a Netherlands officer pointed a pistol at his head. He said a group of about fifteen men in all approached the car, but fled upon the apearance of a British patrol.

British Arrest Six

British military police arrested six soldiers, who said they were Eurasians and Surinamese. Netherlands army authorities said there was no doubt that the offenders would be punished.

Meanwhile, Dutch sources said two Dutch soldiers were killed in Batavia when they were ambushed on Christmas Eve. Dutch Amboinese troops, these sources said, set several near-by Indonesian houses afire in retaliation.

Informed quarters said that British and Dutch authorities were likely to renew peace talks with Indonesian leaders after the holidays.

Premier Back From Tour

The 35-year-old Premier, a key figure in Indonesian-Allied relations who has urged moderation upon his followers, returned yesterday from a tour of Java. During his absence, the British arrested several Eurasians who were attempting to break into his Batavia home.

Several British soldiers, mostly parachute troopers, were arrested for Christmas rioting at the capital's largest Chinese restaurant, the Yen Pin. They were charged with raiding the buffet after they were denied more liquor. Thousands of patrons, including women and children, fled in panic. Police closed the cafe.

The cafe manager, Ie Shueh-Wen, charged that doors and windows of the establishment were smashed last night, a grand piano was hurled from the stage, a crystal chandelier was torn down and liquor stocks and equipment were smashed.

SHOTS PERIL JAVA PREMIER

Dutch Troops Fire In Attempt To Confiscate His Auto

Batavia, Java, Dec. 26 (AP)—Native Dutch troops fired a volley of bullets today at a car in which Sutan Sjahrir, Premier of the unrecognized Indonesian republic, was a passenger, but Sjahrir was uninjured.

British authorities said it was established that the native troops—Eurasians and Surinamese—did not know the identity of the car's occupant, and had sought only to confiscate an Indonesian car.

Another unidentified Indonesian passenger in Sjahrir's car also escaped injury.

Bullets Strike Radiator

Sjahrir, who returned yesterday from a tour of Java, said an automobile containing five young men in Dutch uniforms approached the car in which he was riding. One man opened fire. The bullets struck the radiator of Sjahrir's car.

One of the Eurasians leaped from the attack car and aimed his pistol at Sjahrir, the Premier said. The weapon jammed.

Fifteen other Eurasians, all in Dutch uniforms, approached, but fled when a British military patrol car reached the scene. The five occupants of the attack car were arrested.

Sjahrir is a key figure in the negotiations to restore order in strife-torn Java, and such an attack could have thrown the delicate political situation into confusion.

Dutch In London For Parley

[Prime Minister Wilhelm Schermerhorn of the Netherlands and activing oshrdlu au auauauaupuu Huburtus J. Van Mook, acting governor general of the Netherlands East Indies, were in London today for conferences with Prime Minister Attlee, who is portrayed by diplomatic observers as most anxious to withdraw British troops from the Dutch islands. Attlee was believed to have made it clear he had asked the Dutch to state specifically their intentions in Indonesia.

[Van Mook was said to have told the Schermerhorn cabinet the Indonesian nationalists would accept nothing less than recognition of the government of President Soekarno.]

British and Dutch authorities were expected to renew their negotiations with Indonesian leaders soon after the holidays. A representative of Dutch Prince Bernhard has arrived for the talks.

Belated Report Of Sniping

The military situation in the island was generally quiet.

A belated communiqué reported sniping and grenade throwing in the area of the museum at Buitzenborg, 30 miles south of Batavia, Sunday evening.

Indonesian extremists believed responsible for atrocities committed at Tjitjadas, east of Bandoeng, have retired to Oedjoenbroeng, several miles farther east.

In East Java, an allied patrol southwest of Soerabaja found 30 staff cars and an armored car which the Indonesians had destroyed and left behind in the neighborhood of the village of Kletek.

More than 1,000 patrons, including women and children, fled in panic. Police closed the place.

The manager said that the paratroopers returned at night, smashed doors and windows, hurled a grand piano from the stage, tore down an expensive crystal chandelier and smashed the liquor stocks and equipment.

BRITISH SOLDIERS RIOT

Batavia, Dec. 26 (A. P.).—Several British soldiers, mostly parachute troopers, were arrested for Christmas rioting at the capital's largest Chinese restaurant, the Yen Pin. They were charged with raiding the buffet after they were denied more liquor. Thousands of patrons, including women and children, fled in panic. Police closed the cafe.

The cafe manager, Ie Shueh-wen, charged that doors and windows of the establishment were smashed last night, a grand piano was hurled from the stage, a crystal chandelier was torn down and liquor stocks and equipment were smashed.

Dutch Premier In London

London, Dec. 26 (AP)—Premier Willem Schermerhorn and a party of high Dutch Government officials arrived here from The Hague today to inaugurate discussions of the Indonesian situation with Prime Minister Attlee and other members of the British Government.

Accompanying Schermerhorn were acting Foreign Minister J. H. Van Royen, Minister for Overseas Territories J. H. A. Logemann and Dr. Hubertus J. Van Mook, acting Governor-General of the Dutch East Indies.

The question of recognition of the self-proclaimed Indonesian republic in Java will be uppermost. Dr. van Mook has recommended recognition of Premier Sutan Sjahrir's Government, but the Netherlands Cabinet rejected the proposal.

Palestine Doors Reported Shut To Immigrants

Jewish Agency Spokesman Calls Rumor Confirmed, Says Bevin Misled World

JERUSALEM, Dec. 26 (AP).—A spokesman for the Jewish Agency said tonight that the Palestine government had confirmed officially that Jewish immigration into Palestine had been stopped completely.

The spokesman asserted that "the world had been misled" by the statement of British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin on Nov. 13 in which he said immigration would continue at the rate of 1,500 a month pending the report of the British-American commission of inquiry.

"Even the rather dismal promise of Bevin's statement has been broken," the spokesman said, adding that immigration had stopped "apparently because the Arabs said 'no'."

"If that is the case, what is the use of an inquiry commission?" the spokesman asked. "If the British dare not to lift a finger without Arab consent, then it dooms the work of the commission to complete futility."

Earlier, leaflets distributed here asserted that several hundred Jewish refugees from Europe landed on the northern Palestine coast today, despite British precautions, and were guided to inland dispersal points by Haganah, Jewish defense organization. Stating that the refugees had landed from the vessel Hanah Senesh, named after a Jewish partisan girl killed by the Nazis in Yugoslavia, the leaflets announced that the immigrants "arrived despite stormy seas and notwithstanding the most modern devices of the guardians of the White Paper."

Jews Landing In Palestine

Jerusalem, Dec. 26 (AP)—The Jewish organization Haganah declared in leaflets distributed here that several hundred refugees from Europe had landed on the upper coast of Palestine today, despite British precautions, and were guided to inland dispersal points.

Boasting that the refugees had come ashore in good order from a 200-ton motor schooner which flew the Hebrew flag, the leaflets said the immigrants "arrived despite stormy seas and notwithstanding the most modern devices of the guardians of the White Paper."

Named For Jewish Girl

The vessel was named Hanah Senesh, after a Jewish Partisan girl from Palestine who was captured in Yugoslavia during the war and executed by the Nazis, the leaflets said.

The craft's flag was reported to have carried the inscription: "Let this ship be the symbol for 6,000,000 brethren in far-flung dispersion."

Tsuchiya's Fate Deliberated By Trial Board

LANDSBERG

Yokohama, Dec. 26 (AP) — An American military war crimes trial commission late today took under advisement the Allied case against Tatsuo Tsuchiya, alias "Little Glass Eye," and is expected to announce a verdict tomorrow.

In his closing argument, Major Louis Geffen of the prosecution staff contended that the case "is very simple — a violation of the rules of land warfare, forbidding any form of cruelty to prisoners." He again demanded the death penalty.

Two More Face Trials

As the commission began its deliberations in the case—the first of its kind in the Japanese homeland—it was announced that trials would be conducted later in the week for two more defendants, one of whom was charged with directing the slaying of an American prisoner.

Tsuchiya was accused of fatally beating Pfc. Robert Gordon Teas, of Streator, Ill., a survivor of the Battan "death march" who died in the Mitsuchima prison camp.

Trial Unfair, Defense Says

Lieut. Col. John Dickinson, of St. Petersburg, Fla., chief defense counsel, told the commission there was no competent evidence to prove Tsuchiya guilty and he asserted the defendant had not been given a fair trial or "what we know as such in Anglo-Saxon law."

Dickinson charged that the defendant was tried by prosecution rules. Geffen objected and said the rules were promulgated by the Supreme Allied Commander.

The prosecution emphasized two statements, one of them a deposition by Squadron Leader David Grant, of the RAF, introduced today, which said Teas was in sick quarters suffering from malnutrition and dysentery March 3, 1943. Grant said Teas was caught with several tins of Red Cross food which had been hidden in a shed by the Japanese guards.

Beating Alleged

The RAF airman continued that he tried to tell a Corporal Yoshizawa that Teas was suffering from kleptomania and should be given consideration. Yoshizawa, he said ordered the American to stand on a bed while Tsuchiya struck him repeatedly across the face with a knotted rope and Toshizawa jabbed Teas in the stomach with a stick.

The defendant testified that he "hit some prisoners with my open palm," but said he did not remember Teas.

Tsuchiya, a former prison camp guard, denied using his fists or ropes on prisoners.

"I always looked after their protection and their interest," he pleaded. "I don't think the prisoners had any grievance against me."

Bayonetting Charged

Meanwhile, Col. Robert V. Laughlin, 8th Army judge advocate, announced that First Lieutenant Ked Yuri will go on trial later this week, charged with directing guards to bayonet an American soldier to death before a group of American officers. Also named for trial was First Lieutenant Chotora Furushima, accused of denying American prisoners food, clothing and medical facilities. Both formerly commanded prisoner-of-war camps.

Yuri, who commanded Camp 17-B, will be tried by the current commission after completion of the Tsuchiya case. Furushima will be tried by a second trials commission, named recently.

Yuri was charged also with permitting guards under his command to beat a United States Marine unconscious and then place him in solitary confinement without food or water until the prisoner died.

Bloating Stomach Reported

Furishima was charged with permitting civilian and military personnel of his command to beat and confine another prisoner fourteen days, causing his death. The indictment said guards forced a hose down the throat of an American prisoner and turned on the water until the prisoner's stomach bloated—and then beat him.

Later the same prisoner was dragged by the feet down stone steps until he lost his sanity, the charges specified.

JAP CAMP GUARD GIVEN LIFE TERM

First Nippon War Crimes Trial Results In Conviction

Yokohama, Thursday, Dec. 27 (AP). Tatsuo Tsuchiya, a prison camp guard who was the first war crimes suspect to be tried in Japan, was convicted today of killing an American prisoner of war and was sentenced to hard labor for life.

The United States war crimes commission adjudged Tsuchiya, known as "Little Glass Eye," along with other Japanese "wilfully, unlawfully and unmercifully beat and killed Pfc. Robert Gordon Teas," of Streator, Ill., a survivor of the Bataan death march.

Death Penalty Had Been Asked

The prosecution had asked the death sentence for Tsuchiya.

The commission also convicted Tsuchiya on other specifications.

One was that he and another guard "brutally beat and tortured one Sergt. G. J. Lundquist," another prisoner of war. Another was that on numerous occasions Tsuchiya abused and mistreated American and British prisoners of war by forcing them to form two ranks and slap each other.

He was acquitted on charges that he beat Pfc. Fred L. Kolilis and Private Vincente P. Vigil.

Tsuchiya stood impassive before the commission as the sentence was repeated to him by an interpreter after it was announced in English.

Two More Trials To Start

The commission reached its decision by a secret, written ballot on each specification and on the sentence. The defense counsel gave no indication of an appeal.

The commission adjourned until this afternoon to meet again for the trial of First Lieutenant Ken Yuri, charged with directing guards to bayonet an American soldier to death in front of a group of American officers.

A second commission will begin trial tomorrow morning of Lieut. Chotora Gurushima, charged with beating prisoners and denying them clothing. Capt. Beverly Coleman, USNR, of McClean, W.Va., will be president of this second commission.

Counsel Terms Trial Fair

Tsuchiya's sentence provides for imprisonment in a prison selected by the reviewing authority who presumably will be Lieut. Gen. Paul P. Hall, acting commander of the 8th Army. The case automatically will go to him for review.

Appreciation for a "fair trial" was expressed after the verdict by Jiro Watanane, Japanese civilian of the defense counsel.

"As a Japanese, I feel very sorry for Tsuchiya," he said.

"I feel very sorry for Tsuchiya's family. But I believe the trial was conducted very fairly and justly."

Yokohama Sends 62,000 This Month

Yokohama, Dec. 26 (A. P.).—The liner Matsonia, sailing this morning, boosted to 62,000 the December total of American troops leaving from this port for home. The total already is 16,000 above November departures.

2 Jap Officers Sentenced To Hang

Kwajalein, Marshall Islands, Dec 26 (AP)—A second high-ranking Japanese officer—Rear Admiral Shigamatsu Sakaibara—must hang for war crimes.

A military commission on Christmas Day decreed death by the rope for Sakaibara, former Wake Island commander during the occupation, and his executive officer, Lieut. Com. Soichi Tachbana, for the mass executions on Wake Island on October 7, 1943, of 98 American civilian employés of Pan American Airways. A military commission in Manila recently sentenced Lieut. Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita to hang for condoning atrocities by his troops in the Philippines.

Shortly before he was sentenced, Sakaibara—who admitted ordering the executions—requested "that the people who planned and carried out the dropping of the atomic bomb on Japan should be regarded in the same light as we."

Japs To Restore Airline Aids

Tokyo, Thursday, Dec. 27 (AP)—The Japanese government will restore and maintain air and navigational facilities between Tokyo and Kyushu island under an order issued today by General MacArthur. Facilities will be maintained for the benefit of Army air travel in Japan.

Food 'Hoarding' Hit By Paper In Tokyo

Tokyo, Dec. 26 (AP)—The new Tokyo daily Mimpo, asserted today that large stocks of foodstuffs were being "hoarded" by the privileged class, while the Government "is trying to give the impression that the only way to tide over the food crisis in this country lies in importing foreign rice."

The paper demanded distribution of the "hoarded" stocks.

Under terms of a directive issued by Allied headquarters today, 20,000,000 kilograms (44,080,000 pounds) of food and 3,130,000 pieces of clothing, taken from Japanese military stores, will be distributed among the people.

30 P.C. Released

The total represents approximately 30 per cent of all Japanese Army and Navy food and all navy clothing. Very little army clothing is available.

The supreme allied commander also granted Japan's Minister of Finance permission to transfer 10,000,000 yen ($666,667) in imperial household bonds to "The Association for Relief of War Calamity Sufferers."

The Japanese Government was directed today to submit names, addresses and other information concerning wartime administrators of Allied properties as part of a program for returning confiscated property.

Some Property Sold

Properties of Allied nationals were placed in custody of 100 Japanese administrators in late December, 1941. Some were sold, but many such properties are still being supervised by Japanese overseers.

General MacArthur's headquarters announced approval of a Japanese Government proposal to relax wage-allowance controls for both public and private employés, permitting them increases of more than 100 yen ($6.67) monthly. Allowances, which supplement actual wages, are an important part of the Japanese pay roll.

Japanese silk producers, meanwhile, appealed to the Government for permission to exchange silk for imported rice, at the ratio of one bale of silk for 225 bushels of rice.

Kyodo news agency reported that a Cabinet meeting today decided to promulgate an imperial ordinance December 29 to enfranchise political offenders, as directed by Allied headquarters, in time to vote at the forthcoming general election.

Few members of the Diet, Kyodo noted, have decided to retire, despite popular demand for clarification of the Diet's war responsibility. More than 300, it said, will seek re-election.

Officers and men of the United States Eleventh Corps planned a Christmas party yesterday for 600 children of Japanese laborers employed by the corps. Soldiers contributed gifts, candy and cookies. A special program was prepared.

But the Yanks had forgotten about Japan's birth rate. Guests began arriving long before party time. They came tumbling in droves from the adjacent streetcar station and clattered gleefully up the short hill on their wooden clogs.

Their G. I. hosts soon swore that the whole Tokyo-Yokohama area must have been denuded of young life. Six hundred? That was only a starter; there were 1,200, then 3,000—6,000—8,000—and the final estimate was 9,000.

Local police and laborers were hustled to the scene to help maintain order. The children were sorted into shifts and admitted 300 at a time, while frantic G. I. hosts delved into duffel bags for impromptu additional gifts.

The program was curtailed and speeded, and sweating Red Cross workers handed out doughnuts until their arms ached. By nightfall, only 3,000 of the 9,000 had been entertained. The others still were waiting, hungrily and hopefully, outside in the sharp cold.

Their friends who had been lucky enough to get inside shared gifts and described the wondrous events in rapid-fire Japanese—then the thousands of wooden clogs pounded down the hill into the darkness.

5 PACIFIC AIR FORCES UNDER ONE COMMAND

TOKYO, Thursday, Dec. 27 (AP)—General MacArthur today announced consolidation of five Pacific Air Forces under one new command, which will supply air control for enforcement of Japan's surrender and maintain America's outflung defense line.

Gen. George C. Kenney will command the new organization, the Pacific Air Command of the United States Army, dubbed Pacusa. He formerly commanded the Far Eastern Air Forces. Lieut. Gen. Ennis C. Whitehead, former commander of the Fifth Air Force, will be deputy commander of Pacusa. Maj. Gen. Clement E. McMullen, former commander of the Far East Air Service Command, will be chief of staff.

Pacusa will maintain an advance echelon in Tokyo, staffed mainly by personnel of the Fifth Air Force. Other organizations embraced by Pacusa and their present bases are the Seventh Air Force, Hawaii; Eighth, Ryukyus; Thirteenth, Philippines, and the Twentieth, Marianas. The Fifth will cover Korea as well as Japan.

The numbered units will retain their numerical identity and present commanding generals while operating under General MacArthur's over-all command. Previously, the Eighth and Twentieth made up the Army's strategic air forces and the others were under FEAF.

Maj. Gen. Kenneth B. Wolfe, commander of the Fifth Air Force and former commander of the Twentieth Bomber Command in India and China, will command Pacusa's advance Tokyo headquarters as well as his Fifth AAF.

Flying to 5 Children's Rites

TOKYO, Dec. 26 (AP).—The Army is flying Private Otto Winkelman home to attend funeral services for his five children burned to death in their home in the Detroit suburb of Rosevills, Mich. Winkelman was at the 11th Replacement Depot at Nagoya awaiting transportation home under a War Department order releasing enlisted men with three or more children when he learned of the tragedy through "Stars and Stripes," Army newspaper.

Kids Are Kids and Japan Has Plenty

9000 Swarm to Party G. I.'s Planned for 600 Children —It Almost Ended in Juvenile Riot.

Tokyo, Dec. 26 (A. P.).—It began as a G. I.'s idea to entertain a few hundred kids—and nearly ended in a juvenile riot.

Japanese Paper Suspended By U.S.

Tokyo, Dec. 26 (AP)—A 24-hour suspension of the Daily Ise Shimbun for violation of the Allied press code was announced today by Col. C. W. Wadsworth, head of civil censorship detachment.

He cited no details but said the paper had violated articles which prohibit publication of anything designed to disturb public tranquillity, or criticizing occupation forces and inviting mistrust or resenment toward Allied troops.

Kochi, Japan, Dec. 26 (A. P.).—Lieut. Arthur O. Nibling of Philadelphia and Pfc. Vernon Sunger of Washington, D. C., reported today locating the bodies of fourteen American airmen who died when their planes were shot down over this Shikoku city. Two B-29s, a P-51 fighter and a Navy fighter crashed in or near the city last summer.

Russian Officers Laud Yank Force On Kyushu

Fukuoka, Japan, Dec. 26 (AP)—Three Russian army officers today completed an inspection of the United States 32d Division and Japanese industrial sections of northern Kyushu.

The visitors termed the Yanks "excellent soldiers, well equipped, well trained and well disciplined."

The party, from the Tokyo embassy, made the trip through arrangements with Allied headquarters. It included Major Ivan Harovsky, a veteran of Stalingrad; Major Peter Chernishev and Major Alexi Kositsin.

CHINA PEACE TALKS AGAIN POSTPONED

Communists Fail to Present Promised Written Proposal—Democrats See Marshall

CHUNGKING, Dec. 26 (AP)—Hopes of an early truce in China's undeclared civil war received another setback tonight when a scheduled formal resumption of negotiations between Government and Communist leaders was postponed. Representatives of the two sides met, but their encounter was described as an "informal social occasion," and a truce proposal which Communists earlier had said they would deliver in writing today was not presented.

A Government spokesman, Minister of Information K. C. Wu, skeptically commented that the Communist truce offer, described as "unconditional" when it was first mentioned Dec. 19, actually had strings to it. He said it was conditioned on withdrawal of Government forces from the railroads.

Gen. George C. Marshall, special American envoy, received a letter from one of the leaders of the Democratic League, Prof. Chang Hsi-kan, urging the use of American troops to safeguard the implementation of any truce which might be agreed on. He suggested they should accompany Chinese truce supervisors to the various fronts.

A proposal to put China's armed forces under the control of "literary men" provoked some discussion in the Chinese press. It was advanced by Prof. Ho Yung-chu, who suggested that the armies be placed under the direction of a committee including the presidents of three leading universities.

Central Government troops in cotton quilted uniforms braved subzero weather in their march toward Mukden, Manchuria. An Associated Press dispatch from Peiping said Gen. Tu Li-ming's forces had established liaison with Russian troops for entry into Sinmin, thirty-seven miles from Mukden. No Communist opposition was reported.

General Tu arrived at Kowpangtze, on the main railway line to Mukden, then went on by jeep to Peichen, a town of 70,000 which had been occupied by Communists for the last three and one-half months. The Government Central News Agency said stores and homes had been looted by the Communists before their withdrawal, and estimated the damage at the equivalent of $60,000.

A Foreign Office spokesman told newspaper men today that the conversion of Haiphong, Indo-China, into a free port was under contemplation by France, and that Chinese troops were withdrawing from Indo-China according to schedule.

Democratic Group Sees Marshall

Chungking, Dec. 26 (AP)—Leaders of the Democratic League, third largest political group in China, today presented to Gen. George C. Marshall, American Presidential envoy, their views on the current situation in China.

This first meeting of Marshall with leaders of the league came as a Government minister charged that the Communists' proposal of December 19 for an "unconditional truce" in China's civil strife had strings to it.

K. C. Wu, Information Minister, declared the Communist proposal was conditioned on the withdrawal of Government forces from railroads.

Advancing On Mukden

As General Marshall continued his conferences with leaders of Chinese factions, looking toward unity for China, Government troops advanced toward Mukden. A dispatch from Peiping by Spencer Davis, Associated Press war correspondent, reported Chiang's forces marching toward the Manchurian city along snow-banked roads and in weather 18 to 20 degrees below zero.

Davis said that liaison had been established with Russian troops for the entry into Sinmin, railway junction 37 miles from Mukden.

Chiang Son Russia-Bound

The Chinese press reported today that Chiang Chung-kuo, elder son of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, left for Moscow on Tuesday.

Official quarters refused to confirm or deny the report.

The press said young Chiang, who was special commissioner for foreign affairs in Manchuria, would be consulted on Sino-Soviet problems now being discussed by the Big Three Foreign Ministers in Moscow.

Significance Detected

The official reticence may indicate the report was well-founded.

A Government spokesman today replied "no comment" to a correspondent's question whether Soviet forces actually would withdraw from Manchuria by the scheduled date, January 3.

Haiphong Discussed

A Foreign Office spokesman also told newsmen that conversion of Haiphong, Indo-China, into a free port was under contemplation by France, and that Chinese troops are withdrawing from Indo-China according to schedule. France had not asked for any delay in the withdrawal, he added.

[The China Times said December 20 in an unconfirmed dispatch that France had agreed to convert Haiphong into a free port.]

SEIZED PEIPING OPIUM TO GO UP IN SMOKE

Peiping, Dec. 26 (A. P.). Eight hundred thousand ounces of opium confiscated by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's headquarters after the Japanese surrender in Peiping will be burned publicly here on New Year's Day.

The Generalissimo ordered the public ceremony, after a meeting of municipal government officials, civic leaders, Catholic priests and Protestant missionaries decided that 60,000 ounces would be sufficient to preserve for medical purposes. Some 860,000 ounces had been seized.

Hundreds of opium dens have been closed in the past four months, and the central government announced harsh penalties for violation of its anti-opium laws. Sellers face execution upon conviction.

During the Japanese regime, there were dens on almost every corner, with signs advertising the licensed—and highly taxed—drug openly.

'Santa' Finds Way, On Instruments

ROBERTS

Yenan, Dec. 26 (AP)—"Santa Claus" had to make three tries, but the little group of American soldiers in this desolate town, headquarters for Chinese Communists, finally got their Christmas tree. It came in on instruments.

The twelve members of Col. Ivan D. Yeaton's observer group began "sweating it out" December 21, when Lieut. Gen. Albert Wedemeyer, United States military commander in China, radioed that he hadn't forgotten them.

The General told them to watch for Lieut. Glenn van Zee's C-46 cargo plane. The twelve remained glum; they recailed having gone seven weeks without supplies last winter because flyers couldn't even find the place.

Truck's Lights Used

Bad weather balked van Zee's first figiht; a close-in airfield and a faulty radio beam prevented a landing on the second attempt. He tried again. Once more the field was fogbound, but the radio worked and soldiers drove a truck up and down the runway, so that its lights gave van Zee a faint guide.

The tree, an aristocratic, potted thing, glittered at an array of guests as well as Americans—including Gen. Chu Teh, Communist commander in chief; Lin Pai-chu, chairman of the party's border region, and Po Ku, propaganda chief. To American turkey, pork chops and chicken soup, they added a potent wine called "pai ga."

Eight Bodies Recovered In China Plane Crashes

2 Survivors of 6 Lost Marine Helldivers Reach Tsingtao

TIENTSIN, China, Dec. 26 (AP).—The bodies of eight Marine Corps flyers killed in plane crashes southwest of Tsingtao on Dec. 8 were brought to Tsingtao yesterday, 3d Amphibious unit headquarters reported today. Five have been tentatively identified. Their names were not made public.

Two of twelve men riding the six Helldivers which crashed have returned to Tsingtao. The remaining two have not been accounted for.

The two who returned alive are First Lieutenant Raymond Bernard Werdenhoff (Marine headquarters in Washington gave his mother's home as Jefferson, Ore.) and Second Lieutenant Robert E. Blount (Marine headquarters gave his mother's home as Independence, Kan.).

Four of six more Marine Corps flyers who went down Dec. 11 on a flight from Okinawa to Tsingtao have been accounted for.

An unconfirmed report from Tsingtao today said two American flyers were in a hospital at Weihaiwei on Shangtung Peninsula.

Capt. Winston Guest Decorated

SHANGHAI, Dec. 26 (AP).—Marine Captain Winston F. C. Guest, of New York, once one of the country's top polo players, received the Soldier's Medal today for braving a heavily mined airfield at Canton on Aug. 19 to land an Allied humanitarian aid team before the Japanese had officially surrendered. Guest, who was at that time a first lieutenant, began surrender negotiations with the Japanese at the field.

FIGHTS BLACK MARKET

Shanghai, Dec. 26 (A. P.).—Confiscation of all U. S. Government property found in Shanghai's vast black market was ordered by the Army today. Criminal investigation agents were authorized to make arrests of civilian as well as military suspects.

The move was a crackdown on black market operators who have been obtaining quantites of supplies from persons with access to the Army and Navy commissary depots and post-exchanges.

Shanghai's black market is so widespread and open that grocers blandly display G. I. canned goods at such fabulous prices as $12 American money for a pound of coffee.

Manila's Torture Expert Faces Victims at Trial

By The Associated Press.

MANILA, Thursday, Dec. 27—Lieut. Col. Seichi Ohta, who brought Japanese gendarmerie torture methods to the Philippines, went on trial for his life today, charged with permitting his Kempetai (thought police) to commit inhuman atrocities after the fall of Manila in 1942.

Witnesses described grim scenes behind the ancient walls of Fort Santiago where, they said, Japanese tried to obtain information from civilians and prisoners of war with a wide variety of continuous physical and mental tortures.

Georges Bonnet, secretary of the Free French Committee, pointed positively at Ohta as the man responsible for his mistreatment. M. Bonnet testified that he spent fourteen months in a 12-foot-square wooden cell, was slapped if he moved and was beaten with a board for talking.

Joaquin Pardode Tavera, chief of the Philippine Department of Justice Investigation Division, described the fort as "a death house never silent from the crying and shouts of tortured souls."

He said he saw bleeding children and women hanging naked from the bars of a cell.

MANILA G. I.'S PLAN PROTEST MEETING

Manila, Dec. 26 (A. P.).—Spokesmen for 4,000 G. I.'s said a mass meeting would be held today to discuss cancellation of a scheduled home-bound transport sailing—after a mass protest march yesterday brought both an explanation and a reprimand from their colonel, who was quoted as telling them:

"You men forget you're not working for General Motors—you're still in the Army."

The Army newspaper Pacifican attributed the statement to Col. J. C. Campbell, depot commander, who ordered the men to their barracks. He explained that the sailing cancellation was in connection with consolidation of the Twenty-first and Twenty-ninth Replacement Depots.

The men dispersed within ten minutes, discarding their "We Want Ships" banners.

PHILIPPINES LACK RICE

1945 Crop 50 Per Cent Short, McNutt Declares

MANILA, Dec. 26 (AP)—The Philippines' 1945 rice crop is 500,000 tons below normal, a 50 per cent shortage, High Commissioner Paul V. McNutt said today.

"The almost complete disruption" of the islands' transport facilities makes the food situation even more acute than the rice-deficit figures indicate, he said. The combined food board agreed today to increase the current quarter's rice quota for the islands to 44,000 tons, including 28,000 to be obtained from the United States, 15,000 from Siam and 3,670 tons held by the United States commercially in Chile.

$104,000 In Gifts At Hawaii Feast

Honolulu, Dec. 26 (AP)—Oahu's Christmas celebration featured what probably was the world's largest luau (Hawaiian feast), with 4,760 sailors and other guests receiving $104,000 worth of gifts.

The feast last night climaxed a two-day holiday sponsored by the Naval Air Station and Naval Air Transport Service. Among guests were 71 children from the adjoining Damon tract, where sailors and civilians had rioted November 12.

The children sang carols and chanted "Mele Kalikimaka" (Hawaiian equivalent of "Merry Christmas.")

Thousands of gifts donated by New York city fraternal and philanthropic organzations were presented to service men and children.

The guests consumed 11,000 pounds of roasted pig, 1,200 pineapples, 800 chickens, 600 cases of beer and 300 cases of soft drinks.

LaGuardia To Be Envoy To Brazil Inauguration

Mayor F. H. La Guardia will be President Truman's personal representative at the inauguration in Rio de Janeiro next month of Eurico Gaspar Dutra as Brazil's new President, Mr. Truman announced yesterday. Mr. La Guardia will go to Brazil with the rank of special ambassador.

Mayor La Guardia said at City Hall that he stood ready to accept the appointment, but declined to discuss details. It was not expected, however, that the trip will conflict with his contracts to make two commercial broadcasts each Sunday after he leaves office next Tuesday. The American Broadcasting Company has agreed to broadcast one of the programs from any point the Mayor may visit, and it was reliably reported that similar arrangements would be made for the other program.

Canada to End Tire Rationing

Ottawa, Dec. 26 (A. P.).—All tire rationing restrictions in Canada will be removed on January 1, Munitions Minister C. D. Howe announced today. He emphasized that lifting of tire rationing does not mean present stocks are such that all demands can be met immediately.

Price controls on new and used tires, tubes and retreading services remain in forces under the Prices Board.

busy Christmas home-coming to go to his office, where he met friends and exchanged Christmas greetings. At the press conference he laughed off a suggestion that he go back to Washington by train.

The President replied in the negative when a reporter said he heard the address would be an anti-labor one.

"Oh, No; It Won't Be That"

"Oh no, it won't be that, it will be on the over-all legislative program — a state-of-the-Union address," he said.

The President's proposals for ending labor strife through use of fact-finding boards and a 30-day "cooling off" period while threatened strikes are under consideration was submitted to Congress recently. Much of the remainder of his legislative program has been stalemated on Capitol Hill.

First on the President's busy program today was a sentimental journey from his ice-glittering Independance home—the summer White House—to Grandview, Mo., to pay his second Christmas call on his mother, Mrs. Martha E. Truman, 93, and exchange Christmas gifts. He ate a turkey sandwich and a piece of her Christmas cake, and found her spry and alert. The gifts, he said, were the kind of sentimental things you would give your mother, and receive from her.

The President visited his mother again in the evening.

Mother Weatherbound

Mrs. Truman, because of her age, was weatherbound at Grandview although today was bright and just about freezing. Snow and ice covers everything. The elements, however, failed to stop the President who said his weather-delayed, hazardous Christmas flight here yesterday from Washington was rough—that he had had rougher trips, but not many. The weather was bad when he left Washington four hours late, and rough en route, but it was clear on his arrival here.

State Of The Union Talk Announced By Truman

President Tells Kansas City Conference Address Will Be Made Next Week; Denies It Will Be Anti-Labor

Kansas City, Dec. 26 (AP)—President Truman will carry his labor and other legislative proposals directly to the people in a radio address probably during the first week in January. It will be a state-of-the-Union adress to start off 1946.

This announcement today came from the President at his Federal Building offices here in a news conference. Mr. Truman interrupted a

The President joked when it was suggested the return be made by train to Washington after the President said he would leave by plane at 9.30 A.M. Friday aboard his plane, the Sacred Cow, weather permitting. The weather would have to be worse than it was yesterday to prevent the return plane trip, the President said.

Moscow Conference

Tomorrow Truman will lunch with correspondents at 12.30 P.M. He specified the time, saying he liked to eat earlier than 1 P.M. when he was in Missouri.

The President withheld comment on the results of the Moscow conference of James F. Byrnes, Secretary of State, with the foreign ministers of Great Britain and Russia. He said he would have something to say on that after his return to Washington, but stressed that he and Byrnes were in complete accord.

At another point the President said that an economic report on China, recently submitted by Ed Locke, presidential adviser, would be published soon. He said it had been referred to the War and Navy departments for routine check. He added it was a capable report and he thought it would be helpful.

If the wind is right, the President said of his projected flight to Washington Friday, he should make the return trip in about three hours and 45 minutes. He said he had had no trouble in landing so far in his flights, and that the use of the plane enabled him to save time.

Congressional Message Scheduled Next Month

Washington, Dec. 26 (AP)—President Truman probably will deliver his annual message to Congress in person next month. If so, there may be history's first television broadcast of a presidential address at the Capitol.

This was confirmed by White House officials today, along with word that Mr. Truman will speak to the nation by radio sometime before the January 14 reconvening of Congress. Charles G. Ross, press secretary, said the radio address will be shortly after January 2.

The radio speech to home listeners has been in the works for some time. Democratic leaders have indicated Mr. Truman's purpose was to get his ideas directly to the voters while congressmen are back home for the holidays.

Friends said the President has received advice to follow various methods of building up sentiment for his legislative program. Now, with a portion of his program on the statute books and more stalled at the Capitol, the President apparently is taking the counsel of those who want him to appeal directly to the people.

President Truman Named 'Man Of The Year'

New York, Dec. 26 (AP)—President Harry S. Truman was named today by Time Magazine as its "Man of the Year" for 1945.

In selecting the President, Time said in its December 31 issue, released tomorrow, that "the greatest of all 1945's great events was the atom bomb."

The President, the magazine said, "somewhat unwittingly, somewhat against his own will, became more than any other man responsible for the bomb, its use in 1945 and its future."

Except for the bomb, the greatest events of 1945 would have been the surrender of Germany and Japan, and the greatest men of the year would have been Allied military men, the magazine declared.

10-Nation Unit Set To Go To Japan

Washington, Dec. 26 (AP)—With ambitions at policy-making rather than mere advice giving, the Allied Far-Eastern Commission, leaves today for Japan and a scrutiny of Gen. Douglas MacArthur's administration.

After flying to Pearl Harbor, the commission members will complete the trip on the U. S. S. Mount McKinley, a Navy command ship. They expect to return to Washington about February 15.

Approval Is Expected

The ten-nation commission made it plain in two months of deliberations in Washington that it does not expect to find any grave fault with the way MacArthur has administered Japan. Most commission members have said they believe the supreme allied commander has done a creditable job.

What the commissioners will do is study carefully how United States directives to MacArthur have been carried out.

Directive Rewritten

Up to now, the commission has devoted most of its time to debating the directives themselves. A basic policy committee under leadership of Australia's foreign minister, Herbert V. Evatt, has rewritten the original White House directive to MacArthur, issued shortly after the Japanese surrender.

Some members, however, believe the time is approaching when the commission should take over the actual power to formulate policy for Japan; that once the strictly military phase of the occupation is over, the commission should move to Japan and issue its own instructions directly to MacArthur.

This view brought about the quiet dropping of the word "advisory" from the commission's title in recent communiqués.

Far East Commission Off For Japan Inspection Tour

Washington, Dec. 26 (AP)—With its scope probably hinging on the impending Big Three communiqué in Moscow, the ten-nation Far Eastern Commission left tonight to study American policies in Japan.

Russia never has joined the commission which was established in Washington two months ago, on the suggestion of the United States, to give advice on the administration of Japan.

Recently, some of the smaller members—notably Australia and New Zealand—have insisted the commission eventually should become the natural policy-making body for the beaten enemy nation.

Would Affect Powers

Informed Government officials, who emphasized they had no knowledge of the Moscow communiqué contents, said that that document would be bound to affect the future powers of the commission one way or another. They reasoned this way:

1. If the communiqué does not refer to any policy-making body for Japan, the Far Eastern Commission—with or without Russia—may become a virtual policy-maker as the strictly military phase of the Japanese occupation nears an end.

2. If the communiqué does set up in Tokyo some type of four-power body—United States, Britain, Russia, China—to take over policy-making, the ten-power commission is likely to continue as merely an advice-giver.

Russia has held out for creation of a four-power council. Soviet officials said they would join the larger commission only if the smaller, more powerful body were first established.

France and all of the smaller Pacific powers are vigorously opposed to the four-power idea. Peter Fraser, New Zealand Prime Minister, said in Washington Friday that such a body would accelerate what he called "a trend toward big-power dictatorship."

Viewed As Same Thing

One compromise suggestion advanced shortly after the commission was established was for a four-power executive committee within the commission. This committee would meet in Tokyo, and supposedly would supervise the administration of Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

Officials of the smaller countries say this would amount to the same thing as the Russian four-power council idea, however, and they are equally opposed to it.

Hence, commission members are leaving Washington with no definite idea of their future function.

They probbaly will find out in San Francisco during a brief stopover en route to Pearl Harbor tomorrow, if the Moscow foreign ministers' communiqué is issued in the meantime.

The first of two Army Transport Command planes carrying the travelers left here at 9 P.M., making one stop at Topeka, Kan. It is due at Hamilton Field, San Rafael, Cal., at 10 A.M. tomorrow. The second plane was to follow it by two or three hours.

SENATORS PLAN WASTE PROBE

Trio Making World Flight To Check Reports On Military

Washington, Dec. 26 (AP)—Three senators will take off tomorrow on a 30-day 'round-the-world flight to see whether good military supplies are being thrown away.

Senator Knowland (R., Cal.), who was an army major in Europe, said war was wasteful and that many useful things had to be thrown away.

"What we want to make sure of," he said, "is that there is no unnecessary waste now."

Tunnell In Group

Knowland and Senators Tunnell (D., Del.) and Mitchell (D., Wash.) will look into the question of possible waste. They are members of a subcommittee of the Senate Defense Investigating Committee.

Knowland said the committee had heard reports that items which might be useful to civilians had been destroyed. He declared:

"We have read, as newspaper readers have, of trucks being pushed off cliffs. We have heard reports that food is being wasted. We don't know how true they are.

Hopes For "Sound Policy"

"It may be, for example, that stocks of food have been kept from hungry people because they have become spoiled, to keep people from poisoning themselves."

The senator said he hoped a "sound national policy" for handling surplus goods overseas would result from the inspection trip.

U.S. May Recognize Romania, Bulgaria

Washington, Dec. 26 (AP)—The United States probably will extend formal recognition to Romania and Bulgaria once the Big Three powers have concluded peace treaties with those former Axis satellites, Acting Secretary of State Dean Acheson said today.

Asked at his news conference if the fact that the Big Three Foreign Ministers in Moscow had laid down plans for concluding peace settlements with the two Balkan states was a step toward formal diplomatic recognition, Acheson replied in the affirmative.

Procedural Problems Solved

The United States, Britain and Russia in the Moscow conference now have solved procedural problems with regard to peace treaties, Acheson said.

If the three Allies can follow the procedures through and come out with peace treaties satisfactory to all concerned, he went on, the United States then will be ready to recognize the Bulgarian and Romanian regimes.

Regimes Not Satisfactory

This country and Britain thus far have refused to grant recognition to the two Balkan nations on grounds that their present provisional governments are not broadly representative of all democratic groups and have not given adequate guarantees of free and unfettered elections.

However, the United States and Britain granted recognition Saturday to a third Balkan government—the newly constituted Yugoslav Peoples' Republic—even though they sharply criticized the tactics of Premier-Marshal Tito and the recent national elections.

Washington, Dec. 26 (AP)—Although critical of all three regimes, the United States today took simultaneous steps in the direction of a diplomatic break with one European government and recognition of two others.

At his news conference, Dean Acheson, Acting Secretary of State, disclosed these prospects:

1. The United States has indicated willingness to discuss with the British and French governments all aspects of the relations of the three countries with Generalissimo Franco's Spanish regime.

2. Once the United States, Britain and Russia have concluded peace treaties with Romania and Bulgaria on lines laid down by the Big Three foreign ministers at Moscow, this Government will be ready to recognize regimes of the two Balkan states.

France proposed American-British-French discussions on Franco and, presumably, on the Spanish Republican government in exile, now quartered in Mexico City, several weeks ago.

U.S. Reply Delivered

Acheson said the United States reply, expressing this Government's complete willingness to talk about Franco wherever and whenever the French suggest, was delivered in Paris yesterday or Monday. He added that Britain also had sent a reply, but that he was not at liberty to say what it contained.

In London, a Foreign Office spokesman said Britain had informed France she would take part in a three-way conference on the Spanish situation if the French proposed one.

While the British dislike the Franco regime, this spokesman said, current policy is to let France or the United States take the lead in suggesting any action.

Time And Place Up To France

In answer to a question, Acheson said discussions could start any time—possibly early in January—but that the time and place are up to France.

It is believed possible that the talks may take place during the open session of the United Nations Assembly in London next month. Foreign Ministers Bevin of Britain and Bidault of France and Secretary of State Byrnes all will be in attendance.

Some diplomatic officials doubted, however, that the French, having authored the proposal, would agree to hold the discussions anywhere but Paris.

The United States agreement to three-power discussions was the latest in a series of recent developments indicating this country is moving in the direction of a showdown with Franco.

Related Events Listed

Related events were:

1. Delay in the appointment of a new ambassador to Madrid to replace Norman Armour, who came home to retire last week.

2. Visits with Acheson at the State Department by Juan Negrin, last Premier of Republican Spain, and Fernando de los Rios, Foreign Minister of the exiled Spanish Government.

The United States and Britain have refused to date to recognize the provisional governments of Romania and Bulgaria. The American view is that the two regimes are not broadly representative of democratic elements and that their plans for elections did not assure free voting.

Last Saturday, however, this Government formally recognized a third Balkan government — Marshal Tito's new Yugoslav republic—against which it had made similar criticisms.

Step Toward Recognition

Following that action, Government officials predicted freely that some formula might be worked out by Byrnes, Bevin and Soviet Foreign Commissar Molotov in Moscow under which the United States and Britain could join Russia in approving the Romanian and Bulgarian governments.

Acheson said today that the Big Three plan for concluding final peace treaties with the two former Axis-affiliated countries was a step toward British-American recognition.

The three Allies now have solved procedural problems regarding the peace treaties, Acheson said.

He added that if the three powers could follow the outlined procedure and come out with peace treaties satisfactory to all concerned, this country then would be ready to grant diplomatic recognition to Bulgaria and Romania.

U.S. Answers French Note On Franco

Washington, Dec. 26 (AP)—The United States has notified France of its readiness to discuss with Britain and France all aspects of the relations of the three Governments with Spain's Franco regime.

Acting Secretary of State Acheson told a news conference today that the United States Government, replying to a French suggestion for such discussions, had indicated its willingness to go into the matter whenever and wherever France suggests.

Delivered This Week

The United States reply, Acheson said, was delivered in Paris this week.

The secretary added that he had had no word from France since the original suggestion and hence could not say when or where the three-power discussions might take place.

May Begin Next Month

He stated, however, that it was not impossible that they would begin early in January.

Acheson disclosed that the British Government also had replied to the French note, but said contents of this reply would have to be released in London.

Break With Franco Mentioned

Although contents of the French note have never been made public, it is generally believed it proposed that:

1. The three powers discuss in detail their relations with Franco and explore the desirability and effect of a diplomatic break with the Generalissimo's regime; and

2. The three powers discuss possibility of formally recognizing the Spanish government-in-exile, whose headquarters currently are in Mexico City, as the provisional government of Spain.

Sees Republican Envoy

Acheson said he had obtained further information on the Spanish Republican attitude regarding Generalissimo Franco in a long conference Saturday with Fernando de Los Rios, Foreign Minister of the Spanish Republican Government in exile.

Acheson previously had conferred December 15 with Dr. Juan Negrin, last Premier of Republican Spain.

Formal Bretton Pact Signing Will Be Today

Washington, Dec. 26 (AP)—Representatives of at least 24 United Nations will participate in a formal signing of the Bretton Woods international monetary agreements at 4 P.M. tomorrow in the State Department.

Secretary of the Treasury Vinson has been authorized by President Truman to sign the agreements, setting up a world bank and world stabilization fund on behalf of the United States.

Other countries to be represented include Britain, China, Mexico, Colombia, Czechoslovakia, Ecuador, Egypt, Salvador, Ethiopia, Iceland, India, Iraq, Netherlands, Norway, Paraguay, Philippines, Union of South Africa, Yugoslavia, Dominican Republic, Greece, Honduras, Luxembourg and Bolivia.

State Department officials said any other countries whose governments had ratified the Bretton Woods agreements since the last checkup was made also may participate.

ELECTRICAL STRIKE HELD INEVITABLE

CIO Union Says It Will Call Walkout Next Month; U.S. Moves Balked

Washington, Dec. 26 (AP)—The Government ran into delay today in Government conciliation talks, and union leaders declared a strike of 200,000 CIO electrical workers appeared inevitable after January 5.

The union announcement followed a two-hour conference with the United States conciliation director, Edgar L. Warren, who had invited the union to talk over its demand of $2-a-day wage increases.

General Electric and Westinghouse were asked to meet with Warren on Friday, but he said the former rejected a meeting this week. Westinghouse early tonight announced in Pittsburgh it would attend such a meeting on January 2.

Warren Comments

Prior to the Westinghouse announcement, Warren said he had not heard from that firm, and that he did not know what the Labor Department's next move would be.

The announcement of W. G. Marshall, Westinghouse vice president, was read to Warren. The conciliation director commented:

"I am glad to learn from the Associated Press that he is going to be in Washington January 2. The Conciliation Service will be happy to see him. I am sorry to learn he connot come down this week. I still hope the General Electric can go to Washington for a similar conference."

Marshall said "an informal discussion" with the Labor Department of the demand would not mean that "a breach existed between the parties involved." The union has taken the view that bargaining has been broken off.

Strike Authorized

After the union conference with Warren and before the Westinghouse announcement, James Matles, organization director for the workers, stated the union executive board would meet January 5 in New York.

There, he said, it will exercise the strike authorization voted earlier this month by 83 per cent of the union's membership.

The actual date of the projected walkout will be set by union locals, but Matles indicated the date would be co-ordinated and the strike would be simultaneous.

Matles said negotiations broke down last week with General Electric and Westinghouse, but were continuing with General Motors. At a meeting Saturday, union representatives from the three companies agreed that a strike was "inevitable," Matles said.

Steel Strike Set

"I'm afraid it's a serious situation," he declared, adding that the Labor Department felt that a strike in the electrical industry would be "a serious aggravation" of the nation's present industrial problems.

Approximately 175,000 auto workers now are on strike at General Motors Corporation plants and 750,000 steel workers are slated to walk out on January 14.

Warren read a telegram from E. D. Spicer, General Electric vice president, which described Warren's invitation to discuss the electrical strike threat as a "misunderstanding."

"We have no notification of strike action," the telegram said. "We do not consider that collective bargaining has broken down and the union has not asked us for joint meetings with conciliators. As previously advised, we cannot schedule a meeting in Washington this week."

No Meeting Planned

Warren said the "previously advised" referred to a telephone conversation in which Spicer had given him the gist of the telegram. Neither the company nor the Labor Department has suggested a date for a possible future meeting.

Warren asserted that "they certainly know a strike vote has been taken" and said the Labor Department had received a copy of a union letter on December 21 notifying the companies that negotiations had broken down and that the union locals had been alerted for possible strike action.

Matles explained that the union was urging the General Electric and Westinghouse companies at least to match an offer of a 13½-cents-an-hour boost made by General Motors Corporation. Although the union rejected the offer, he explained, a similar bid by G.M.'s competitors would indicate they were renewing bargaining.

Union Membership Drops

No strike will be called against General Motors so long as negotiations with that company continue, he added.

Revising previous figures, Matles estimated that a drop in employment within the industry had forced the union membership down to 200,000, compared with the 250,000 total on the books prior to V-J day.

He said the strike would affect about 100,000 workers in General Electric plants, about 75,000 Westinghouse workers and—if a strike were called there—about 25,000 General Motors employés.

The stoppage would affect 76 plants in 22 states.

Asked if the union wished a Government fact-finding board to look into the dispute, Matles asserted "we're not asking for fact-finding—we're asking for a settlement."

Picketing Here 'Tentative'

Officials of the national headquarters of the WEEA, an affiliate of the National Federation of Telephone Workers, stated in Newark yesterday that any picket action in the Baltimore area in connection with the forthcoming strike in New York and New Jersey is "only tentative."

In Baltimore, a majority of the 4,800 employes at the Point Breeze works of the company voted early last October in favor of the WEEA as the collective bargaining agent in an election that saw the United Electrical Workers (CIO) as the loser.

Subsequently, the CIO group demanded an investigation of the WEEA, charging it is a successor to the Point Breeze Employés' Association, which the National Labor Relations Board found to be company-dominated and which was ordered disbanded.

WLB PREPARES TO CLOSE SHOP

Clearing Docket To Go Out Of Business January 1

Washington, Dec. 26 (AP)—The War Labor Board, nearly four years old, is clearing its docket so it can go out of business January 1.

Two major cases remain to be decided. They involve severance pay for CIO-Steelworkers at the United States Steel Corporation and nineteen iron ore operations, and wage increases for Western Union employés.

Considers Severance Pay Case

The board said today it will dispose of the severance pay case tomorrow unless the parties come to agreement by negotiation beforehand. There was no indication that the steel and iron companies had accepted the union proposal for severance pay, which the board approved in principle for workers who were displaced by technological changes, in its basic steel industry decision of November 25, 1944.

A specific recommendation as to amount of severance payment is to be made by the board.

Threatens Strike

The Western Union workers have threatened to strike next month in support of their wage demands. The AFL represents employés in all areas of the country except metropolitan New York, where the CIO-American Communications Association has the bargaining rights.

The national board granted the AFL union a 4-cent hourly increase and a 55-cent wage minimum for all but messengers, who would have a 45-cent minimum rate. The union asked the board to reconsider its decision, and the board agreed.

Company Appeals Award

In New York, the regional board's award of a 10-cent hourly increase and 65-cent minimum rate was appealed by the company. The union has threatened to strike as a result of this appeal.

The board scheduled discussions of the Western Union cases Thursday, Friday and Saturday. If necessary, it will take it up again next Monday, working right up to the last hour in an effort to settle this dispute amicably and avert a strike on the vital communications system.

GRIEVANCES WILL BE HEARD

G.M. Agrees To Negotiations At Local Levels

Detroit, Dec. 26 (AP)—The strike-bound General Motors Corporation and the CIO United Auto Workers agreed today to discuss minor grievances, but reached no understanding on the all-important 30 per cent wage increase issue.

Spokesmen for both sides said the wage issue—crux of the strike that has idled 175,000 G.M. production workers since November 21—did not figure in today's negotiating session.

It marked the first time they had conferred since their December 20-21 appearance at Washington before a special fact-finding board which President Truman named to study the strike issue.

Only Grievance Problems

The conferees, although aware that hearings are due to be resumed before the fact-finding board Friday if no agreement is reached before that time, discussed only local grievance procedure during a four-hour meeting.

Walter P. Reuther, UAW-CIO vice president, announced that the "principle of beginning negotiations at the plant level has been agreed upon and they will begin shortly." He cautioned, however, that the decision to discuss such local issues between G.M. plants and individual UAW locals would not affect over-all negotiations on the wage issue.

The conferees broke up without scheduling another meeting here Thursday, but both sides denied that this meant a general breakdown on the wage problem.

No Meeting Sought

"We did not specifically request a meeting because some of our men have to entrain for Washington early Thursday afternoon and G.M. didn't mention the subject either," a UAW spokesman said.

General Motors spokesmen said the wage issue was still open for discussion but added that the company would not make public until Thursday its decision whether to return to Washington Friday and appear before the fact-finding board.

The board, backed by President Truman, has shown some desire to look over G.M.'s books to determine its ability to meet the 30 per cent increase but the company has not said definitely whether it will agree.

Not Proper Subject

In prior negotiations with the UAW, the company took the stand that its books, containing evidence of past, present and future earnings, are not a proper subject for discussion with the union.

The President in a letter to the board December 21 said that such a board is "free to draw such inferences as it may choose from the employer's failure to produce evidence on this issue."

Reuther, at a press conference following today's session, described the Truman letter as "a victory for the principle of wages based on the ability to pay."

"We do not say it is up to the Government to settle this strike but we do say that the machinery has been set up and that it is up to us to co-operate with it (the machinery)," Reuther said.

Even as Reuther spoke, the UAW was manning picket lines around many G.M. plants again today after a Christmas interlude.

Agreements Terminated

"No progress was made today that would warrant postponing the Friday meeting in Washington," he added.

Union officials explained that when G.M. canceled its contract with the union on December 10—a contract that was due to run until April, 1946—it simultaneously terminated agreements with various UAW locals.

These included issues such as seniority, lunch periods, picketing and other items that could not be negotiated easily on a national scale because of different situations in various communities.

Reuther explained that "there are a few spots left where pickets are not allowing office help to enter—about ten," and it was intimated that this was the type of problem to be discussed on a local level.

Lutes Successor To Somervell In Service Forces

Washington, Dec. 26 (AP)—Secretary Patterson today announced appointment of Lieut. Gen. Leroy Lutes as commanding general, Army Service Forces, effective January 1, to succeed Gen. Brehon B. Somervell who is retiring.

Lutes, a native of Cairo, Ill., was director of plans and operations of the Army Service Forces from March, 1942, until April, 1945, when he became chief of staff and deputy commanding general, Army Service Forces, with headquarters in Washington.

The Patterson statement said "it is with extreme regret that I announce retirement of General Somervell as commanding general of the Army Service Forces. In organizing and directing the world-wide supply lines on which our troops depended on their offensive power, General Somervell performed a service without parallel in military history."

Lutes saw service in six combat zones in the last war. In 1942, he initiated plans to assure adequate supply support for American forces in Britain. That year, he covered thousands of miles in the South and Southwest Pacific co-ordinating supply.

Later, Lutes assisted in preparation for logistical support of air transport activities through Brazil and to supply troops en route to and from Africa. In August, 1943, he was back in the Pacific.

Prior to the invasion of France, Lutes was called to General Eisenhower's headquarters to advise and was instrumental in expediting action that delivered critical items to meet that invasion deadline.

Admiral Sherman Given New Post

Washington, Dec. 26 (AP)—Rear Admiral Forrest P. Sherman was named today to be deputy chief of naval operations for operations, an assignment in which he will continue his close wartime association with Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, now chief of naval operations.

Admiral Sherman, who served as deputy chief of staff under Admiral Nimitz in the Pacific, succeeds Rear Admiral Richard L. Conolly, who will become deputy CNO for administration.

The latter post has been held by Rear Admiral Bernhard H. Bieri, whose new assignment has not been announced.

Byrnes Leaving Tomorrow.

Washington, Dec. 26 (A. P.).—Secretary of State Byrnes will leave Moscow by plane at 1:30 A. M. (Eastern standard time) tomorrow for his return trip to Washington from the Big Three Foreign Ministers conference, the State Department announced today. It was emphasized that the departure time was tentative and subject to weather conditions.

Byrnes arrived in Moscow on December 15 for the sessions at which plans for peace treaties with former enemy countries and a general European peace conference were made. When Byrnes gets back here State Department officials say it is unlikely he will have more than a week at his desk before leaving for London to attend the opening sessions of the United Nations Assembly.

General Holmes Named T.W.A. Vice President

Washington, Dec. 26 (AP)—Transcontinental and Western Air, Inc., announced today the appointment of Brig. Gen. Julius C. Holmes as a vice president of the airline.

Jack Frye, T.W.A. president, said Holmes will handle international relations in connection with routes to Europe, North Africa, the Middle East and Asia.

Holmes served during the war as deputy assistant chief of staff to Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

NAVY HONORS BRAZILIAN

Nimitz Presents Legion of Merit to Admiral de Noronha

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26 (AP) — Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, Chief of Naval Operations, presented at a reception here tonight the Legion of Merit Medal with rank of commander to ice Admiral Sylvio de Noronha of the Brazilian Navy.

The presentation was made for "exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services to the Government of the United States" as naval attaché at the Brazilian Embassy and for carrying out "with great tact, skill and understanding his important duties as a member of the Intra-American Defense Board."

Admiral de Noronha is returning home to become commander in chief of the Brazilian Navy.

PLAN TO SPEED PROBE URGED

Lucas Would Have Pearl Harbor Committee Take Turns

Washington, Dec. 26 (AP)—Senator Lucas (D., Ill.) suggested today that members of the Pearl Harbor investigating committee "divide up" future witnesses among themselves as a means of expediting the hearings.

Under his plan, Admiral Harold R. Stark, who is to be the witness when the committee resumes hearings Monday, would be questioned by only one or two members of the ten-man committee.

Other members would take turns in quizzing later witnesses.

Republicans Want Free Rein

Senator Lucas conceded that his proposal, which he discussed with reporters, appears unlikely to get far. Republicans on the committee have been particularly insistent that no restrictions be placed on questioning.

The Illinois Senator contended that a committee member assigned to certain witnesses could make better advance preparation for the examination and thus speed things up.

"The way we are going now I doubt that we can finish by February 15," he said.

The committee, originally instructed to report January 3, has obtained an extension until February 15.

Had Sought Time Limit

Lucas disclosed that he sought at a recent executive session to impose a time limit on questioning by individual members, but the proposition was not put to a formal vote.

Before the committee resumes hearings, it hopes to obtain counsel to succeed William D. Mitchell, former Attorney General. Mitchell and his staff of three have given notice that they cannot continue after the New Year.

Senator Barkley (D., Ky.), committee chairman; Representative Cooper (D., Tenn.), vice chairman, and Senator Brewster (R., Maine) were appointed as a subcommittee to canvas prospects.

Three Names Suggested

Representative Gearhart (R., Cal.), a committee member, has suggested the names of two former American Legion commanders — Warren Atherton, of Stockton, Cal., and Harry Colmery, of Topeka, Kan. Lucas nominated Weymouth Kirkland, Chicago attorney.

Tentative plans call for Stark to be followed to the stand by Lieut. Gen. Walter C. Short and Admiral Husband E. Kimmel, army and navy commanders in Hawaii when the Japanese struck December 7, 1941.

Short is in Walter Reed Army Hospital with a respiratory ailment, but was reported improved today.

Army Discloses 'Azon Bomb' Use

Washington, Dec. 26 (AP)—The Army Air Forces told today about another of its store of secret weapons, the "azon bomb." This is a guided missile which was first used on the Japanese December 27, 1944, when a three-span steel railway bridge between Rangoon and Mandalay was destroyed by the 7th bomb group of the 10th Air Force.

Research since then has produced newer types of guided missiles which already have made the "azon bomb" obsolescent.

The azon is a standard 1,000-pound demolition which has a "radio brain" that enables the bombardier to guide it by remote control.

The accuracy of the bomb was described as having been particularly effective when used on Japanese transportation in Burma. On seven missions, fourteen bridges, considered as vital links in a Japanese supply system, were destroyed by 150 azon bombs.

The cost of the bomb was not much higher than that of an ordinary 1,000-pounder.

6 Marines Cross U.S. In Taxicab

Pittsburgh, Dec. 26 (AP)—Tech. Sergt. Joseph Ward pulled up in front of his home here today, just a day late for Christmas, after a taxicab trip from the West Coast with five of his Marine buddies.

Ward said the cab left San Diego at 1 A.M. Saturday, but was stalled 28 hours in Tucson, Ariz.

"It's great to be back," declared the sergeant, "but did you ever spend four whole days in a taxicab?"

He and his buddies took turns at the wheel with the driver, Harry Arisohn, who had offered to drive the Marines East for the cost of the trip. The six passengers paid about $80 each, including the repair bill at Tucson, Ward said.

Immediately after the cab let Ward off in Pittsburgh, it continued on to New York with the five remaining Marines.

4,500 Japs To Sail For Their Homeland

Portland, Ore., Dec. 26 (AP)—Two trainloads of silent Japanese arrived today from the Tulelake (Cal.) camp to board a ship that will take them back to Japan.

Most of the 1,800 men, women and children, bound for Japan by their own request or by deportation orders, stood expressionless as customs officials examined their baggage in the embarkation depot.

Only one boy of many questioned said he would rather have remained here. He stared quickly down at his sports shoes when the question came. "No, no," he muttered, "I don't want to do to Japan." He walked quickly away.

A total of 4,500, including 1,300 children and 1,400 women, will sail on the General W. H. Gordon, probably at the end of this week.

Veteran Called to Side Of His Stowaway Bride

British Girl Held at Baltimore by Immigration Laws

BALTIMORE, Dec. 26 (AP).—A British war bride who cut red tape by stowing away on a freighter reached her objective—the United States—today, but after several hours ashore went back to the freighter Empire Chamois.

There the girl, Brenda Morgan, nineteen, must wait in the custody of Captain Harold Sapsworth for the removal of the last legal barriers between her and her husband, former G. I. Jimmy Morgan, of Wichita Falls, Tex.

She came ashore at noon with all her luggage, a little bag containing lipstick, powder and a change of clothes, for a preliminary hearing before immigration officials.

The hearing was suspended, Inspector John P. Ryan said, pending the expected arrival of her husband. Then the girl, technically barred from this country, went back to the ship.

Her stowing away solved a lot of her legalistic problems and a bill now on President Truman's desk might fix the rest, immigration officials told her. The bill would make it unnecessary for G. I. brides to have the usual immigration documents, which she doesn't have. Ryan said that Red Cross officials told him that the husband, Jimmy, was leaving Wichita Falls tomorrow for Baltimore.

Six hours after the freighter sailed from Avonmouth, England, Dec. 7 the girl was found. Then Captain Sapsworth installed the girl in a cabin.

U. S. REPATRIATING 360 JAP ALIENS

Bismarck, N. D., Dec. 26 (A. P.).—About 360 Japanese aliens from the Federal detention camp at Bismarck were today on the first leg of a long journey of repatriation—to a Japan some of them have never seen.

W. C. Robbins, acting officer in charge of the camp, said they left Mismarck Christmas Day aboard six railroad cars bound for Portland, Ore. From there they will sail to Japan on a United States Army transport. Most of them, Robbins said, are American born Japanese who renounced their American citizenship, but a few are being deported because of illegal entry into this country. The American born Japanese, he said, were sent here last winter from Tule Lake, Cal.

Many of the group left Bismarck yesterday, he said, were classed as "troublemakers." The shipment leaves about 150 Japanese and slightly more than 200 Germans still at the camp.

The poem, written on November 11, 1918, to an otherwise unidentified Capt. English read:

The war is over and we pass
To pleasure after pain,
Except those few who ne'er shall see
Their native land again.

To one of these my memory turns,
Noblest of the slain;
To Captain English of the tanks
Who never shall return.

Yet should some future war exact
Of me the final debt,
My fondest wish would be to thread
The path which he has set.

For faithful unto God and man
And to his duty true,
He died to live forever
In the hearts of those he knew.

Death found in him no faltering,
But faithful to the last;
He smiled in the face of fate
And mocked him as he passed.

No, death to him was not defeat,
But victory sublime;
The grave prompted him to be
A hero for all time.

Washington, Dec. 26 (A. P.).—Mrs. George S. Patton Jr. arrived in the capital yesterday after a flight from Luxembourg, where her husband was buried.

The widow of the famous tank tactician will stay here indefinitely with her daughter, Mrs. John K. Waters.

Blood Plasma Free To All Who Need It, Red Cross Announces

Washington, Dec. 26 (AP)—Blood plasma—the substance that saved thousands of lives on the battlefields—soon will be available without cost to civilians who need it.

The Red Cross, announcing this

How Patton Wanted to Die

General's World War I Tank Instructor Releases Poem Written in 1918.

Brownsville, Tex., Dec. 26 (A. P.).—Gen. S. D. Rockenbach, U. S. A., retired, who was Gen. George S. Patton Jr.'s instructor in tanks in world war I, has released a poem Gen. Patton wrote in tribute to a friend in the last world war telling how he would like to die.

30.24-32659

tonight, said it would distribute 1,250,000 units of plasma which had been declared surplus by the Army and Navy. This was estimated to be enough to meet civilian needs for two years, and to represent approximately 2,000,000 donations.

Initial Shipment

A three-months' supply will make up the initial shipment to health departments in each state. The departments, in turn, will distribute it to hospitals, health agencies and physicians. The announcement said: "As envisaged under present plans, every acceptable hospital in every community will have a supply of plasma on hand, ready for instant use in the treatment of any patient without charge for the product. Every physician licensed by the state to practice medicine and surgery may also keep a small supply for emergency use."

Warehouse For Reserve

Red Cross reserves, which will be tapped as necessary to replenish state supplies, will be stored in warehouses at New York, Alexandria, Va.; Atlanta, St. Louis and San Francisco.

In addition to the plasma for civilians, a five-year supply will be turned over to the Veterans' Administration.

Break Is Near In GI Jam On Coast

DEC 27 1945

San Francisco, Dec. 26 (AP)—A break in the jam which has held nearly 170,000 service men in Pacific coast ports over the Christmas holiday appeared near today.

Los Angeles and San Francisco, principal bottlenecks in the tieup which has prevented returning veterans from proceeding to their homes at eastern points, both reported far fewer men coming in than going out.

Clearing 15,000 Daily

Two ships are scheduled to bring 2,703 men to Los Angeles today and 1,915 are due at San Francisco aboard two other vessels. These ports have been clearing close to 15,000 men a day for eastern points.

San Francisco port officials yesterday said they anticipated only 18,000 men between then and January 1, allowing an opportunity for substantial reduction of the more than 40,000 men already here. Los Angeles has a similar number.

Plenty Of Programs

Seattle and Tacoma, Washington State staging areas, anticipate 949 men today while several thousand are being cleared via train, bus and plane. Portland, Ore., reported no arrivals.

Programs yesterday in the port cities gave the waiting army, navy and Marine veterans plenty to do and eat as civilian homes, clubs and lodges from Seattle to San Diego were thrown open to them. At Seattle a party planned for 10,000 men, with presents for all, was attended by not nearly that number.

Discharge Of GI's Is Speeded In East

New York, Dec. 26 (AP)—Army camps and separation centers along the eastern seaboard, jammed with returned GI's, set as their goal today the discharge of as many service men as possible before the New Year's holidays.

Some 70,000 veterans, arriving too late to get home for Christmas, settled yesterday for army-served Christmas fare and entertainment offered by the Red Cross and the USO. They had turkey with trimmings, Christmas trees and gifts, holiday parties and, in the case of patients in one hospital, free telephone calls home.

In The U.S. At Least

But all were strengthened by the thought that at least they celebrated the day in the United States if not at home.

The number of returnees was swelled by the arrival here of the light cruiser Philadelphia and the aircraft carrier Randolph, which battled Atlantic storms. The ships carried 8,029 service men.

13-Year-Old English Boy Stowaway On Cruiser Reno

New York, Dec. 26 (AP)—Thirteen-year-old Charles R. Dugan, of Winchester, England, might have made the trip to New York stowed away aboard the light cruiser Reno without being detected if the high waves hadn't made him seasick.

The Reno's captain, Merle A. Sawyer, said young Dugan was aboard the Reno unknown to the ship's officers for seven of the vessel's ten-day trip across the Atlantic. But the rough Atlantic was too much for him, and two soldiers brought him to sick bay for seasick treatment.

The Reno docked today and immigration officers said the boy would be turned over to Ellis Island officials tomorrow morning.

Wore U.S. Army Uniform

Charles told Sawyer his family was killed by Nazi bombs and said he had lived for three years with American troops in England and France. The boy said he came to America to find an uncle, William Dugan, who he said worked as an auto mechanic somewhere in Brooklyn.

The boy wore a cut-down United States Army uniform and carried a cut-down suit of navy blues in a package.

Immigration officials said there was a chance the boy might be allowed to enter the United States if some responsible person would agree to take care of him.

Pfc. Moses F. Payne, of Wausau, Fla., one of 590 officers and men brought home by the cruiser, corroborated Charles's account of his activities in France. He met the lad in Lille, Payne said, and "sort of adopted him," but tried to discourage the youngster from coming to the United States.

Navy Transport Bliss Docking

Capt. John J. Caffrey, of Childs, Pa., the transport commander, said the crossing took almost twice as long as had been expected.

Also docking today was the navy transport Gen. T. H. Bliss, delayed by storms and carrying 3,348 veterans from the China-Burma-India theater who had counted on arriving December 21—in time for Christmas at home.

Instead they celebrated Christmas 350 miles offshore with yuletide music, singing and a Christmas dinner of turkey, steak and baked ham with cranberry sauce and other holiday fare.

The Bliss and the Reno were among 27 troop-carrying vessels arriving at New York, Boston and Newport News today.

Vessels Arriving At N.Y.

Other vessels arriving at New York were the Claymont Victory, 1,611; Frederick Victory, 1,652; Newburn Victory, 1,533; Coaldale Victory, 1,513; Wilson Victory, 1,508; Josiah Bartlett, 676; Alfred Moore, 580; Athos II, 3,074; William and Mary Victory, 1,527; R. J. Reynolds, 41; Clarence King, 38; Leonardo Romero, 22; Walter R. Moore, 18; Negley Cochran, 18; Ville O'Anvers, 147.

Arriving at Newport News, Va., were the Matthew Maury, 547; Alexander G. Bell, 562; James McHenry, 31; Thomas Kearns, 23; Redstone Seam, 9.

Arriving At Boston

Arriving at Boston were the Lincoln Victory, 1,535; Irving S. Cobb, 38; John M. Moffitt, 23; Wheaton Victory, 1,554; Belgian Victory, 29.

Due at San Francisco were the Highland, 1,590, and the Flint, 325.

Due at Los Angeles were the Evangeline, 1,000; Meteor, 1,703.

Seventeen small craft with 675 men were scheduled to dock at San Diego, and the Arlington with 949 men was due at Tacoma, Wash.

Clippers Bring In 18 Refugees, 4 War Brides

New York, Dec. 26 (AP)—Eighteen Jewish refugees and four English war brides were among passengers who arrived today at LaGuardia Field aboard Pan American clippers from Hurn, England, and Lisbon, Portugal.

Bernard A. Kornblith, of the Hebrew Immigrant Sheltering and Aid Society, said there were from 10,000 to 15,000 refugees awaiting transportation to the United States from Germany, Romania and Palestine.

Twelve of the refugees arrived on the clipper from Lisbon. They said they left Palestine some weeks ago.

The war brides were Mrs. Sam Feldman, whose staff sergeant husband came from Chicago to meet her at the plane; Mrs. Margaret Robinson, whose husband, Guy, was to take her to his Medford (Mass.) home; Mrs. Robert Quirk, who said she would meet her husband, a Columbia Pictures photographer, in Hollywood, and Mrs. Joseph Rothman, whose husband is in the produse business in Newark, N.J.

Lower Valuation Of Franc May Spur Trade

New York, Dec. 26 (AP)—Devaluation of the French franc was labeled in foreign trade circles here today as a long step forward in bringing "Made-in-France" articles back to the shelves of American stores.

Leading New York financial institutions reported no transactions in francs, however, in the first few hours of business since the new rate of 119.10669 francs to the United States dollar was promulgated.

Experts expect the move to stimulate imports of French wines and liquors, perfumes and cosmetics, laces and fine textiles. When more normal travel conditions are restored, it will make possible an expansion of tourist trade to France.

Purchasing Power Up

As a result of the devaluation, the United States dollar will purchase more than twice as much French goods as at prices prevailing prior to the financial step.

But imports cautioned against expectations that prices of French articles hare would be cut in half, although conceding some downward adjustment was probable.

A large liquor and wine importer pointed out that in order to re-establish their American markets and in anticipation of some such currency devaluation, French shippers of champagne and cognac have been selling these products, made some years ago, at less than the current cost of replacing them.

May Boost Wine Imports

"The Frenchman is going to do a lot of thinking before he announces his new prices," this importer said.

Import duties, he noted, are on a gallonage basis, so that any reduction in the price per gallon would increase the proportion of the cost which must be allocated to taxes, and, in addition, the liquor importers' profit has largely been based on a specific sum, instead of a percentage.

Lower prices should increase consumption, he said, and with easing of transportation difficulties, the devaluation of the franc may be expected to increase the annual total of wines and liquors imported from France.

Called "All To The Good"

He pointed out that a factor tending to restrict the import of still wines, Bordeaux and Burgundy, has been that French shippers are unable to buy replacements because the French consumer has been stocking up his wine cellar in anticipation of possible inflation.

An economist for a large perfume and cosmetic importer described the franc's devaluation as "all to the good" and "a necessary step," but said exports from France will not be as large for a long time as the French would wish them to be.

Wh ether these exports can be stepped up appreciably, he said, depends to a large extent on whether French industry can obtain coal and raw material which has been lacking up to this time.

One trade advisor said France had an undetermined quantity of goods ready for export, unable to move them because prices were too high, and that the devaluation move should release most of this material.

Import needs of France, as is the case in virtually all European countries, will continue for years to exceed her export markets, however, he said.

Atomic Bomb Secrets Are Like 'Fairy Tales'

New York, Dec. 26 (AP) — The secrets of the atomic bomb are more fantastic than fairy tales and will remain secret for some time; what has been told, in the official release of Maj. Gen. L. R. Groves and Dr. H. D. Smyth, concerns only the principles of the bomb.

But this same report, without divulging how the seemingly impossible feats were done, tells what a few of them were.

In the Tennessee plant the heavy metal, uranium, is converted into gas by mixing it with fluorine, the yellow gas used in the nonpoisonous cooling systems of most household refrigerators.

Metallic Gas Filtered

This metallic gas is filtered through membranes called barriers, and in that process some of the uranium 235, which makes bombs and atomic fires for power, is separated from the common form of uranium 238.

The holes in these barriers must not average greater than 1-250,000,000th of an inch. There must be billions of these incredibly small holes in each membrane. And the barrier material has to be manufactured in large quantities of uniform quality. In Tennessee there are many acres of such barriers filtering out uranium 235.

Electronic Pump Controls

In this same filtering process pumps must be used to produce partial vacuum in the chambers holding the metallic gases. But never did pumps have to be as perfect as these. There must be no leaks and no corrosion.

One of the pumps made to meet these requirements runs by induction. It is completely enclosed, sealed so tightly that neither air nor any other gas can enter or get out. There are no wires and no connections whatever with outside power or supply sources.

The pump motor starts or stops by electronic controls. In fact, it would be easy with this kind of control to arrange a tube so that a person could start the motor by saying the word "Go," and stop it by saying "Stop."

New Methods Developed

In this single method of separating uranium 235 from 238, new lubricants had to be invented. New cooling substances or new cooling methods had to be devised. Ordinarily it would have taken the industrial power of the United States many years to discover how to make these processes work. Those named in the Smyth report are only a few among scores of such inventions.

No matter if no atomic power ever is used, the public will benefit in many ways from the processes like filters, pumps, lubricants and coolants discovered to make bomb production possible.

These new methods are answers to many of industry's problems in producing new consumer goods. About 10,000 industrial plants worked on the processes of one or another of the hundreds of atomic bomb problems.

SAYS FRENCH SEIZE SAAR COAL MINES

France has confiscated the coal mines in the Saar district in the French zone of Germany, the British radio reported today.

CBS recorded the BBC broadcast, which pointed out that the Saar district is an industrial area second only in importance to the Ruhr. At the end of the last war France was given possession of the Saar mines as compensation for the destruction of her own coal mines in northern France and as part payment of German reparations. The Saar was then detached from Germany and governed for fifteen years by the international commission under the League of Nations. In 1935, a plebiscite was held which decided the return of the Saar to Germany.

DEC 27 1945

BY LOUIS LOCHNER

NUERNBERG, DEC. 18 - (AP)-- DAY AFTER DAY SINCE ABOUT OCT. 1 A FLOOD OF LETTERS HAS BEEN DESCENDING UPON THE INTERNATIONAL MILITARY TRIBUNAL NOW SITTING AT NUERNBERG TO TRY NAZI WAR CRIMINALS, WHICH SPEAKS ELOQUENTLY OF THE WIDESPREAD INTEREST WHICH THE FIRST TRIAL OF ITS KIND IN HISTORY HAS EVOKED.

THE POSTMAN IS USUALLY LOADED UP WITH UP TO 150 DAILY MISSIVES. GERMAN IN ALL WALKS OF LIFE ARE POURING OUT THEIR HEARTS.

MANY LETTERS ARE WRITTEN ON CHEAP WRATIME PAPER IN GERMAN SCRIPT BY PENCIL, OR AFTER A BAD START HAS BEEN MADE WITH BLURRING INK, ARE CONTINUED WITH PENCIL. SOME COME IN THE FORM OF POETRY. MANY ARE TYPED.

THERE ARE LETTERS OF ERUDITE AND SIMPLE TEUTONS, OF RELIGIOUS AND POLITICAL LEADERS, OF COMMON FOLK AND ARISTOCRATS, PARTY AND POLITICAL LEADERS,

IT KEEPS SEVERAL MEMBERS OF THE TRIBUNALS STAFF BUSY DOING NOTHING BUT DECIPHERING THESE LETTERS AND MAKING TRANSLATIONS OF THE MOST PERTINENT SECTIONS.

THE LETTERS ARE BY NO MEANS CONFINED TO THE AMERICAN ZONE. GERMANY UNDER ITS QUADRUPARTITE ADMINISTRATION HAS DIFFERENT POSTAGE STAMPS FOR DIFFERENT ZONES AND SEPARATE ONES FOR BERLIN. A GLANCE AT THE ENVELOPES IS SUFFICIENT TO ESTABLISH THE FACT THAT GERMANS IN THE RUSSIAN ZONE WRITE QUITE AS EAGERLY AS THOSE IN WESTERN AND SOUTHERN GERMANY.

DEC 27 1945

ONE OF THE MOST INTERESTING LETTERS CAME FROM EMIL RUEGE, A FORMER INMATE OF SACHSENHAUSEN CONCENTRATION CAMP. RUEGE OFFERED PROOF THAT HIS FELLOW INTERNEE, COUNT ERNST VON HOHENBERG WAS MADE TO DO THE DIRTIEST KIND OF WORK AT GOERING'S PERSONAL ORDER. HOHENBERG WAS

THE SON OF THE LATE ARCHDUKE FRANCIS JOSEPH OF THE HOUSE OF HAPSBURG, WHOSE MURDER AT SARAJEVO IN 1914 FURNISHED THE SPARK FOR SETTING THE WORLD AFLAME.

ACCORDING TO RUEGE, THE CAMP COMMANDER RECEIVED THE FOLLOWING TELEGRAM MARCH 30, 1938, DIRECTLY AFTER THE AUSTRIAN ANSCHLUSS: "GOERING HAS ORDERED THAT THE COUNTS HOHENBERG (ERNST AND MAX) ARE TO BE KEPT BUSY WITH THE HEAVIEST AND DIRTIEST JOBS." AS A RESULT, ACCORDING TO RUEGE, COUNT ERNST WAS USED AS "THE LEFTSIDE HORSE PULLING A MANURE CART."

ONE CRANK DEMANDED THAT HE BE SUMMONED BY THE COURT AS A REPRESENTATIVE OF THE WORLD'S CONSCIENCE. IF HIS ULTIMATUM WERE NOT ACCEPTED BY DEC. 3, HE SAID, HE WOULD ISSUE A PROCLAMATION STATING THAT CHRISTIANITY HAD CEASED TO FUNCTION.

MANY LETTERS STRIKE A RELIGIOUS NOTE. ROSA TAUSENDOFUND OF REGENSBURG SOLEMNLY ADJURES THE TRIBUNAL "IN THE NAME OF THE LIVING GOD NOT TO PRONOUNCE JUDGEMENT WITHOUT ASKING POPE PIUS' ADVICE."

ON THE OTHER HAND, MR JOHANN SCHMID OF STUTTGART-STELTON DEMANDS THAT GERMAN BISHOPS BE PUT ON THE WITNESS STAND TO PROVE THAT THEY COMPROMISED THEMSELVES WITH NAZISM.

RUDOLPH GUERTLER OF WEINBOEHLA WAS MOVED TO SAY IT WITH MUSIC AND VERSE. HE COMPSOED THE WORDS AND MUSIC FOR A "WAR CRIMINALS SONG" AND A "HISTORICAL VICTORY MARCH OF THE ALLIES." THERE'S ONLY ONE HITCH TO HIS OFFER-HE WANTS 50,000 DOLLARS FOR THE WORLD RIGHTS TO HIS MASTERPIECES.

SEVENTEEN-YEAR-OLD HEINRICH MUELLER OF SCHWARZENBERG-ERZGEBIRGE WROTE IN A LETTER INDICATING DEEP EMOTION "I DESIRE TO TO REPRESENT THE GERMAN YOUTH AND BE THE ACCUSER OF PEOPLE WHO WANTED TO POISON THE YOUTH OF OUR LAND AND WHO ALREADY HAVE INFECTED LARGE MASSESWITH THEIR POISON."

INNUMERABLE LETTERS DEMAND HARSHER PUNISHMENT THAN DEATH FOR THE WAR CRIMINALS. TYPICAL IN THIS CONNECTION IS A LETTER FROM KARL STUEBNER OFZWICKAU "OUR SON MANFRED WAS CURED OF A SERIOUS ILLNESS BY JEWISH DOCTORS, BUT HITLER HAD HIM MURDERED ON RUSSIA. MY THOUGHTS ARE ONLY OF REVENGE. IF I COULD, I WOULD GOUGE THE EYES OUT OF ALL THOSE CRIMINALS AND MURDERERS. THERE IS NO PUNISHMENT TOO HEAVY FOR THIS GANG."

30.24-32663

MANY LETTERS WRITERS URGE THAT GOERING AND HIS CO-DEFENDANTS BE TAKEN THROUGH GERMANY'S RUINED CITIES IN CAGES LIKE WILD ANIMALS, BOTH TO SEE WHAT THEY DID TO THEIR COUNTRY AND FOR THE POPULACE TO HAVE A CHANCE TO EXPRESS THEIR OPINION.

HOWEVER, OTHERS URGE THAT ALL MEN ARE SINNERS AND THAT THE NAZI LEADERS ARE NO WORSE THAN THE AVERAGE RUN OF HUMANITY.

MANY CORRESPONDENTS HAVE FORWARDED NEWSPAPER CLIPPINGS TO CONVICT THE NAZIS BY THEIR OWN WORDS.

NIGHT LEAD OCCUPATION

TOKYO, THURSDAY, DEC.27-(AP)-THE GOVERNMENT IS EXPECTED TO INAUGURATE A NEW FARM REFORM MEASURE ABOUT JAN.10, NEWSPAPERS REPORTED TODAY AS COMMUNISTS FAILED TO OBTAIN A SOCIALIST LIAISON FOR A COMMON FRONT OF THEIR RESPECTIVE FARM UNION GROUPS.

THESE DEVELOPMENTS COINCIDED WITH THE DEMAND OF A NEW POLITICAL PARTY THAT JAPAN'S PREMIER BE ELECTED BY THE PEOPLE INSTEAD OF BEING APPOINTED BY THE THRONE.

THE NEW ORGANIZATION, THE INDEPENDENT SOCIALIST PARTY, LED BY TWO FORMER OFFICIALS OF THE DEFUNCT SOCIAL MASS GROUP, ALSO ANNOUNCED A PLATFORM ADVOCATING "PRESERVATION OF THE EMPEROR SYSTEM."

THE INDEPENDENT SOCIALISTS EXPRESSED OPPOSITION TO NATIONALIZATION OF LAND TRANSPORTATION AND CARRIED NO SOCIALIST PLANKS IN ITS PRELIMINARY PLATFORM.

THE STRONG SOCIAL DEMOCRATS, WHO ADVOCATE CONSIDERABLE NATIONALIZATION, TURNED DOWN A THIRD COMMUNIST PROPOSAL FOR UNITED POLITICAL ACTIVITY. A SPOKESMAN FOR THE SOCIALISTS, APPROACHED ON PLAN OF FUSING FARMER ORGANIZATIONS, REPLIED, ACCORDING TO KYODO S AGENCY "OUR FARM GROUPS WILL SOLVE THE FOOD PROBLEM BY THEMSELVE HIN A FEW MONTHS."

NEWSPAPERS SAID THE GOVERNMENT WOULD ACTIVATE THE FARM REFORM MEASURE WHICH THE DIET PASSED RECENTLY BY ISSUING AN IMPERIAL DECREE AROUND MID-JANUARY. THE BILL LIMITS INDIVIDUAL LAND HOLDING TO 12 ACRES.

THE DIET RELUCTANTLY PASSED THE MEASURE UNDER PRESSURE OF A SHARP MACARTHUR DIRECTIVE WHICH GAVE THE GOVERNMENT UNTIL MARCH 15 TO REPORT AN ADEQUATE PLAN FOR THE ORDERED AGRARIAN REFORM.

ALLIED OCCUPATION HEADQUARTERS HAS GIVEN NO INDICATION WHETHER IT CONSIDERS THE BILL SATISFACTORY.

SECOND NIGHT LEAD UNDATED STRIKES
BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS (280)

(CX) CIO LEADERS LAST NIGHT (WEDNESDAY) DECLARED A STRIKE IN THE ELECTRICAL INDUSTRY WAS "INEVITABLE", AND EDGAR L.WARREN, CHIEF OF THE U.S. CONCILIATION SERVICE, SAID THE ACTION WOULD BE A "SERIOUS AGGRAVATION" OF CURRENT INDUSTRIAL PROBLEMS.

A WALKOUT OF 200,000 (CQ) CIO ELECTRICAL WORKERS EARLY IN JANUARY WAS "INEVITABLE", UNION OFFICIALS DECLARED, AND GOVERNMENT EFFORTS TO AVERT A STRIKE APPEARED BLOCKED. THE UNION'S EXECUTIVE BOARD WILL MEET IN NEW YORK JAN. 5 TO CONSIDER CALLING A STRIKE AUTHORIZED BY THE MEMBERSHIP EARLIER THIS MONTH. A STOPPAGE WOULD AFFECT 76 PLANTS IN 22 STATES.

IN THE UNITED AUTOMOBILE WORKERS-GENERAL MOTORS DISPUTE, THE UNION AND GM AGREED AT THEIR MEETING WEDNESDAY TO DISCUSS MINOR GRIEVANCES, BUT AN IMPASSE STILL EXISTED ON THE UNION'S DEMAND FOR A 30 PER CENT WAGE RATE HIKE. THE FIVE-WEEKS OLD STOPPAGE HAS IDLED 175,000 WORKERS IN SOME 70 PLANTS.

WARREN SAID THE GENERAL ELECTRIC CO., WHICH EMPLOYS ABOUT 100,000 OF THOSE INVOLVED IN THE DISPUTE, HAD REFUSED TO ATTEND A CONFERENCE THE CONCILIATOR HAD TRIED TO ARRANGE IN WASHINGTON TODAY (THURSDAY).

WESTINGHOUSE ELECTRIC CO., EMPLOYER OF 75,000, ACCEPTED WARREN'S INVITATION TO A SIMILAR MEETING. THE COMPANY'S VICE PRESIDENT IN CHARGE OF INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS, W.C.MARSHALL, SAID HE WOULD GO TO WASHINGTN NEXT WEDNESDAY TO MEET WITH WARREN.

THE ELECTRICAL WORKERS, DEMANDING A $2 A DAY WAGE INCREASE, HAVE REJECTED AN OFFER OF A 13 1/2 CENTS HOURLY INCREASE FROM THE ELECTRICAL DIVISION OF GENERAL MOTORS CORP., WHICH EMPLOYS 25,000 ELECTRICAL WORKERS. HOWEVER, THE UNION HAS URGED WESTINGHOUSE AND GENERAL ELECTRIC TO AT LEAST MATCH THE GM OFFER TO SHOW THEY WERE RENEWING BARGAINING.

THE OTHER STRIKE THREAT INVOLVED 17,000 WESTERN ELECTRIC EMPLOYES ASSOCIATION MEMBERS, WHICH HAS PLANS TO CALL ITS MEMBERSHIP OUT JAN. 3 AT 20 WESTERN ELECTRIC PLANTS. THE UNION ANNOUNCED PLANS TO SEND 300 TO 400 PICKETS TO CHICAGO, BALTIMORE, AND HAVERHILL, MASS., TO "ASSURE SYMPATHETIC STRIKE ACTION" IN THOSE CITIES.

THE UNION, AN AFFILIATE OF THE INDEPENDENT NATIONAL FEDERATION OF TELEPHONE WORKERS, IS DEMANDING A 30 PER CENT WAGE BOOST TO BALANCE THE COST OF LIVING INCREASE. A 15 PER CENT RAISE HAS BEEN RE.

SOME 3,000 WERE ADDED TO THE TOTAL NUMBER OF IDLE IN LABOR DISPUTES WITH A WALKOUT AT THE J.I. CASE COMPANY PLANTS IN RACINE, WIS., AND FURTHER WALKOUTS WERE SCHEDULED IN THE FIRM'S ROCK ISLAND, ILL., AND BURLINGTON, IA., ESTABLISHMENTS.

Big 3 Agree on U.N.O. Atomic Energy Board; U.S., Britain, Russia, China to Set Japan Policy

BYRNES REVEALS FOREIGN MINISTERS REACHED ACCORD ON ATOM CONTROL

Secretary Says Details Will Be Announced by Big Three.

COMMUNIQUE TO BE ISSUED

Moscow Conference Ends in Spirit of Friendship, With Great Hopes for Future.

Moscow, Dec. 27 (A. P.).—The Foreign Ministers of the United States, Soviet Russia and Great Britain have reached an agreement on the atomic question, U. S. Secretary of State James F. Byrnes disclosed today at the conclusion of an eleven-day tri-Power conference.

He also said that the three Foreign Ministers had agreed on "many" other problems of world peace, but did not indicate what they were. Issues on their agenda had included control of Japan and withdrawal of foreign troops from Iran.

Byrnes said details of the atomic agreement and of accords on other problems would be announced simultaneously in Moscow, Washington and London at 6 A. M. Friday (10 o'clock tonight) Eastern standard time). Immediately after making his statement Byrnes left for the Moscow airport and took off on his return trip to Washington at 8:45 A. M. (12:45 A. M. Eastern standard time).

Relations Improved.

Of equal importance with the agreements reached, the Secretary of State said, was a general improvement of relations between himself, Soviet Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov and British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin, which he said would open broad avenues for future understanding.

Diplomatic observers here said that in their opinion relations of the Big Three nations had been strengthened considerably by the discussions and were better than at any time since the end of the war.

Byrnes said the communique would be very lengthy because of the broad scope of the subjects it covered.

"There was no agreement on any subject which will not be covered in the communique," he declared. "When you read the atomic agreement you will know that no phase, other than that set forth, was discussed."

He added, however, that the three Foreign Ministers had discussed a number of other matters and, by their exchange of views, had "clarified subjects for the three governments" so that it will be easier in the future to obtain "agreeable" results.

Byrnes made his remarks at a press conference shortly before leaving Spasso House, residence of the United States Ambassador. The final meeting of the Foreign Ministers ended at 3:30 A. M. (7:30 P. M. yesterday, Eastern standard time).

Byrnes explained that he had stated that nothing was agreed to which was not set forth in the communique because "some people are always anxious to know if there are secret agreements."

He declared that the conference had been "very constructive" not only because of the settlement of many problems but also because "of the cordial relations between the three countries represented."

"There is great hope," he added, "for the settlement of other problems in the same friendly spirit."

Some New Matters Ahead.

Asked if he could say what percentage of agreement was reached on the matters discussed, Byrnes replied that "there will never come a time when there will not be matters pending because new matters always arise."

He disclosed that there still had been no reply from the French Government on the three-power formula for drafting European peace treaties. The agreement, announced Christmas Eve, was subject to approval by France and China. China was reported to have agreed to the plan.

[According to reports from semi-official circles in Paris, the French reply makes the request that France be represented at all meetings where the Balkan peace treaties are discussed, the French Radio reported today. "This matter is now being studied and Great Britain, the United States, and the Soviet Union may receive the French reply before the end of this week," said the broadcast, recorded by CBS.]

The final conference between the three Foreign Ministers lasted more than twelve hours. They had been meeting daily since December 16.

Byrnes appeared in excellent spirits and showed no signs of fatigue, although he had had less than three hours sleep. Correspondents, noting the weary appearance of others in his party, asked the Secretary of State whether he still was "going strong."

"I am not going strong," he replied with a laugh, "but I am going."

With that he picked up his hat and left.

Because of poor weather Byrnes's plane left by the Naples-Casablanca-Azores route instead of flying over central Europe. The departure was at 8:45 A. M., Moscow time.

Molotov and the entire Russian delegation to the conference came out to see Byrnes off at the airport. The two Foreign Ministers parted with warm words of friendship and firm handclasps. The Chinese Ambassador to Russia, Foo Peng Sheung, was the only member of the diplomatic corps up in time to be in the farewell group.

The first published Soviet comment on the Foreign Ministers' meeting praised the agreement for preparation of peace treaties with Italy, Romania, Bulgaria, Hungary and Finland.

Commentator Vladimir Linetsky, writing in Bolshevik, said "the new agreement reached at this conference has inflicted a blow on those political intriguers who, after failure of the London Conference of the Council of Ministers, were ready to consider that the great Powers had passed the stage of collaboration."

BYRNES IS JUBILANT

Says 'Important Thing' Is That 'Cordial' Ties Make Unity Likely

NO 'DEALS' IN SECRET

Communique Tells All, He Insists—Bevin Happy but More Reserved

By The Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Dec. 27 — Secretary of State James F. Byrnes was flying home tonight from Moscow, jubilant over the accomplishments of the Big Three Foreign Ministers' Conference in reaching agreement on vital questions, including atomic energy control, and in creating a "friendly spirit" for meeting future world problems.

In excellent spirits just before he boarded his plane at the snow-covered Moscow airport, Mr. Byrnes declared that the "important thing" about the conference "is that closer relations have been established, so that the possibility of agreement has been greatly increased."

The British Foreign Secretary, Ernest Bevin, who has not yet left Moscow, jotted down a more somber postscript when he told newsmen tonight that the Foreign Ministers had discussed the problem of Iran at length, but had not reached any final agreement.

Mr. Byrnes declared that the Moscow Conference had been "very constructive," not only because of the settlement of many problems but because of the "cordial relations between the three countries represented."

He said: "There is great hope

DEC 28 1945

for the settlement of other problems in the same friendly spirit."

Mr. Byrnes gave assurance that no secret agreements had been made at the conference, and said that everything agreed upon was covered in the communiqué.

He said he made that point because "some people are always anxious to know if there are secret agreements. * * * When you read the atomic agreement, you'll also know that no phase other than that set forth was discussed."

Mr. Byrnes, disclosing only that an agreement on atomic energy had been reached, said nothing of its nature.

In addition to the subjects covered in the communiqué, Mr. Byrnes added, the Ministers "have discussed a number of matters, and by exchange of views have clarified subjects for the three Governments, so that it will be easier to secure achievements agreeable to the three Governments."

Mr. Byrnes did not appear fatigued despite the fact that he had had only three hours' sleep before departure time, and that the closing Ministers' conference had kept him occupied for twelve hours.

Molotoff Sees Byrnes at Airport

"Are you going strong?" he was asked, and he replied with a laugh, "No, but I'm going." With that he got his hat and departed for the airport.

Foreign Commissar Vyacheslaff Molotoff and the entire Russian delegation, which also had had virtually no sleep for the past twenty-four hours, were at the airport to say farewell to Mr. Byrnes.

The American Secretary was visibly touched by Mr. Molotoff's gesture in coming out in the predawn Russian cold, and they exchanged firm handclasps. Mr. Byrnes had suggested to Mr. Molotoff and to Mr. Bevin that farewells under the circumstances were not necessary.

Because of the poor weather Mr. Byrnes' plane left by the Naples-Casablanca-Azores route instead of flying over Central Europe. The departure was at 8:45 A. M., Moscow time. Mr. Bevin may leave tomorrow.

Communique of Big 3 Foreign Ministers

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27 (AP).—The complete text of the communique issued at the close of the big three Foreign Ministers conference at Moscow:

The Foreign Ministers of the U. S. S. R., the United Kingdom and the United States of America met in Moscow from Dec. 16 to Dec. 26, 1945, in accordance with the decision of the Crimea conference, confirmed at the Berlin conference, that there should be periodic consultations among them. At the meeting of the three Foreign Ministers, discussions took place on an informal and exploratory basis and an agreement was reached on the following questions:

Report of the meeting of the Ministers of Foreign Affairs of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, the United States of America, the United Kingdom:

At the meeting which took place in Moscow from Dec. 16 to Dec. 26, 1945, of the Ministers of Foreign Affairs of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, the United States of America and the United Kingdom, agreement was reached on the following questions:

I. Preparation of peace treaties with Italy, Romania, Bulgaria, Hungary and Finland.

As announced on Dec. 24, 1945, the governments of the Soviet Union, the United Kingdom and the United States of America have agreed and have requested the adherence of the governments of France and China to the following procedure with respect to the preparation of peace treaties:

1. In the drawing up by the Council of Foreign Mnisters of treaties of peace with Italy, Romania, Bulgaria, Hungary and Finland, only members of the council who are, or under the terms of the agreement establishing the Council of Foreign Ministers adopted at the Berlin conference are deemed to be, signatory of the surrender terms, will participate, unless and until the council takes further action under the agreement to invite other members of the council to participate on questions directly concerning them.

That is to say:

(A) The terms of the peace treaty with Italy will be drafted by the Foreign Ministers of the United Kindom, the United States of America, the Soviet Union and France;

(B) The terms of the peace treaties with Romania, Bulgaria and Hungary by the Foreign Ministers of the Soviet Union, the United States of America and the United Kingdom;

(C) The terms of the peace treaty with Finland by the Foreign Ministers of the Soviet Union and the United Kingdom.

The deputies of the Foreign Ministers will immediately resume their work in London on the basis of understandings reached on the questions discussed at the first plenary session of the Council of Foreign Ministers in London.

2. When the preparation of all these drafts has been completed, the Council of Foreign Ministers will convoke a conference for the purpose of considering treaties of peace with Italy, Romania, Bulgaria, Hungary and Finland. The conference will consist of the five members of the Council of Foreign Ministers together with all members of the United Nations which actively waged war with substantial military force against European enemy states, namely:

DEC 28 1945

Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, United Kingdom, United States of America, China, France, Australia, Belgium, White Russian S. S. R., Brazil, Canada, Czechoslovakia, Ethiopia, Greece, India, The Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Poland, Union of South Africa, Yugoslavia and Ukrainian S. S. R. The conference will be held not later than May 1, 1946.

3. After the conclusion of the deliberations of the conference and upon consideration of its recommendations, the states signatory to the terms of armistice with Italy, Romania, Bulgaria, Hungary and Finland—France being regarded as such for the purposes of the peace treaty with Italy—will draw up final texts of peace treaties.

4. The final texts of the respective peace treaties as so drawn up will be signed by representatives of the states represented at the conference which are at war with the enemy states in question. The texts of the respective peace treaties will then be submitted to the other United Nations which are at war with the enemy states in question.

5. The peace treaties will come into force immediately after they have been ratified by the Allied states signatory to the respective armistices, France being regarded as such in the case of the peace treaty with Italy. These treaties are subject to ratification by the enemy states in question.

PART II

Far Eastern Commission and Allied Council for Japan.

A. Far Eastern Commission.

Agreement was reached, with the concurrence of China, for the establishment of a Far Eastern Commission to take the place of the Far Eastern Advisory Commission. The terms of reference for the Far Eastern Commission are as follows:

I. Establishment of the commission.

A Far Eastern Commission is hereby established, composed of the representatives of the U. S. S. R., United Kingdom, United States of America, China, France, the Netherlands, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, India and the Philippine Commonwealth.

II. Functions.

A. The functions of the Far Eastern Commission shall be:

1. To formulate the policies, principles and standards in conformity with which the fulfillment by Japan of its obligations under the terms of surrender may be accomplished.

2. To review, on the request of any member, any directive issued to the supreme commander for the Allied powers or any action taken by the supreme commander involving policy decisions within the jurisdiction of the commission.

3. To consider such other matters as may be assigned to it by agreement among the participating governments reached in accordance with the voting procedure provided in Article V, Section 2, hereunder.

B. The commission shall not make recommendations with regard to the conduct of military operations nor with regard to territorial adjustments.

C. The commission in its activities will proceed from the fact that there has been formed an Allied Council for Japan and will respect existing control machinery in Japan, including the chain of command from the United States government to the supreme commander's command of occupation forces.

III. Functions of the United States government.

1. The United States government shall prepare directives in accordance with policy decisions of the commission and shall transmit them to the supreme commander through the appropriate United States government agency. The supreme commander shall be charged with the implementation of the directives which express the policy decisions of the commission.

2. If the commission decides that any directive or action reviewed in accordance with Article II-A-2 should be modified, its decision shall be regarded as a policy decision.

3. The United States government may issue interim directives to the supreme commander pending action by the commission whenever urgent matters arise not covered by policies already formulated by the commission; provided that any directive dealing with fundamental changes in the Japanese constitutional structure or in the regime of control, or dealing with a change in the Japanese government as a whole will be issued only following consultation and following the attainment of agreement in the Far Eastern Commission.

4. All directives issued shall be filed with the commission.

IV. Other methods of consultation.

The establishment of the commission shall not preclude the use of other methods of consultation on Far Eastern issues by the participating governments.

V. Composition.

1. The Far Eastern Commission shall consist of one representative of each of the states party to this agreement. The membership of the commission may be increased by agreement among the participating powers as conditions warrant by the addition of representatives of other United Nations in the Far East or having territories therein. The commission shall provide for full and adequate consultations, as occasion may require, with representatives of the United Nations not members of the commission in regard to matters before the commission which are of particular concern to such nations.

2. The commission may take action by less than unanimous vote provided that action shall have the concurrence of at least a majority of all the representatives including the representatives of the four following powers: United States, United Kingdom, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and China.

VI. Location and organization.

1. The Far Eastern Commission shall have its headquarters in Washington. It may meet at other places as occasion requires, including Tokyo, if and when it deems it desirable to do so. It may make such arrangements through the chairman as may be practicable for consultation with the supreme commander for the Allied powers.

2. Each representative on the commission may be accompanied by an appropriate staff comprising both civilian and military representation.

3. The commission shall organize its secretariat, appoint such committees as may be deemed advisable, and otherwise perfect its organization and procedure.

VII. Termination.

The Far Eastern Commission shall cease to function when a decision to that effect is taken by the concurrence of at least a majority of all the representatives, including the representatives of the four following powers: United States, United Kingdom, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and China. Prior to the termination of its functions the commission shall transfer to any interim or permanent security organization of which the participating governments are members those functions which may appropriately be transferred.

It was agreed that the government of the United States on behalf of the four powers should present the terms of reference to the other governments specified in Article I and invite them to participate in the commission on the revised basis.

B. Allied Council for Japan.

The following agreement was also reached, with the concurrence of China, for the establishment of an Allied Council for Japan:

1. There shall be established an Allied Council with its seat in Tokyo under the chairmanship of the supreme commander for the Allied powers (or his deputy) for the purpose of consulting with and advising the supreme commander in regard to the implementation of the terms of surrender, the occupation and control of Japan, and of directives supplementary thereto; and for the purpose of exercising the control authority herein granted.

2. The membership of the Allied Council shall consist of the supreme commander (or his deputy) who shall be chairman and United States member; a Union of Soviet Socialist Republics member; a Chinese member, and a member representing jointly the United Kingdom, Australia, New Zealand and India.

3. Each member shall be entitled to have an appropriate staff consisting of military and civilian advisers.

4. The Allied Council shall meet not less often than once every two weeks.

5. The supreme commander shall issue all orders for the implementation of the terms of surrender, the occupation and control of Japan, and directives supplementary thereto. In all cases action will be carried out under and through the supreme commander, who is the sole executive authority for the Allied powers in Japan. He will consult and advise with the council in advance of the issuance of orders on matters of substance, the exigencies of the situation permitting. His decisions upon these matters shall be controlling.

6. If, regarding the implementation of policy decisions of the Far Eastern Commission on questions concerning a change in the regime of control, fundamental changes in the Japanese constitutional structure, and a change in the Japanese government as a whole, a member of the council disagrees with the supreme commander (or his deputy), the supreme commander will withhold the issuance of orders on these questions pending agreement thereon in the Far Eastern Commission.

7. In cases of necessity the Supreme Commander may make decisions concerning the change of individual ministers of the

DEC 28 1945

Japanese government, or concerning the filling of vacancies created by the resignation of individual cabinet members, after appropriate preliminary consultation with the representatives of the other Allied powers on the Allied council.

III. Korea.

1. With a view to the re-establishment of Korea as an independent state, the creation of conditions for developing the country on democratic principles and the earliest possible liquidation of the disastrous results of the protracted Japanese domination in Korea, there shall be set up a provisional Korean democratic government which shall take all the necessary steps for developing the industry, transport and agriculture of Korea and the national culture of the Korean people.

2. In order to assist the formation of a provisional Korean government and with a view to the preliminary elaboration of the appropriate measures, there shall be established a joint commission consisting of representatives of the United States command in southern Korea and the Soviet command in northern Korea. In preparing their proposals the commission shall consult with the Korean democratic parties and social organizations. The recommendations worked out by the commission shall be presented for the consideration of the governments of the Union ofSoovíet Socialist Republics, China, the United Kingdom and the United States prior to final decision by the two governments represented on the joint commission.

3. It shall be the task of the joint commission, with the participation of the provisional Korean democratic government and of the Korean democratic organizations, to work out measures also for helping and assisting (trusteeship) the political economic and social progress of the Korean people, the development of democratic self-government and the establishment of the national independence of Korea.

The proposals of the joint commission shall be submitted, following consultation with the provisional Korean government, for the joint consideration of the governments of the United States, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, United Kingdom and China for the working out of an agreement concerning a four-power trusteeship of Korea for a period of up to five years.

4. For the consideration of urgent problems affecting both southern and northern Korea and for the elaboration of measures establishing permanent coordination in administrative-economic matters between the United States command in southern Korea and the Soviet command in northern Korea, a conference of the representatives of the United States and Soviet commands in Korea shall be convened within a period of two weeks.

IV. China.

The three Foreign Secretaries exchanged views with regard to the situation in China. They were in agreement as to the need for a unified and democratic China under the national government, for broad participation by democratic elements in all branches of the national government and for a cessation of civil strife. They reaffirmed their adherence to the policy of non-interference in the internal affairs of China.

Mr. Molotov and Mr. Byrnes had several conversations concerning Soviet and American armed forces in China.

Mr. Molotov stated that the Soviet forces had disarmed and deported Japanese troops in Manchuria but that withdrawal of Soviet forces had been postponed until February 1 at the request of the Chinese government.

Mr. Byrnes pointed out that American forces were in North China at the request of the Chinese government, and referred also to the primary responsibility of the United States in the implementation of the terms of surrender with respect to the disarming and deportation of Japanese troops. He stated that American forces would be withdrawn just as soon as this responsibility was discharged or the Chinese government was in a position to discharge the responsibility without the assistance of American forces.

The two foreign secretaries were in complete accord as to the desirability of withdrawal of Soviet and American forces from China at the earliest practicable moment consistent with the discharge of their obligations and responsibilities.

V. Romania.

The three governments are prepared to give King Michael the advice for which he has asked in his letter of Aug. 21, 1945, on the broadening of the Romanian government. The king should be advised that one member of the National Peasant party and one member of the Liberal party should be included in the government. The commission referred to below shall satisfy itelf that:

(A) They are truly representative members of the groups of the parties not represented in the government;

(B) They are suitable and will work loyally with the government.

The three governments take note that the Romanian government thus reorganized should declare that free and unfettered elections will be held as soon as possible on the basis of universal and secret ballot. All democratic and anti-Fascist parties should have the right to take part in these elections and to put forward candidates. The reorganized government should give assurances concerning the grant of freedom of the press, speech, religion and association.

A. Y. Vyshinski, Ambassador Averell Harriman and Sir A. Kerr Clark Kerr are authorized as a commission to proceed to Bucharest immediately to consult with King Michael and members of the present government with a view to the execution of the above-mentioned tasks.

As soon as these tasks are accomplished and the required assurances have been received, the government of Romania, with which the Soviet government maintains diplomatic relations, will be recognized by the government of the United States of America and the government of the United Kingdom.

VI. Bulgaria.

It is understood by the three governments that the Soviet government takes upon itself the mission of giving friendly advice to the Bulgarian government with regard to the desirability of the inclusion in the Bulgarian government of the Fatherland Front, now being formed, of an additional two representatives of other democratic groups who (a) are truly representative of the groups of the parties which are not participating in the government, and (b) are really suitable and will work loyally with the government.

As soon as the governments of the United States of America and the United Kingdom are convinced that this friendly advice has been accepted by the Bulgarian government and the said additional representatives have been included in its body, the government of the United states and the government of the United Kingdom will recognize the Bulgarian government, with which the government of the Soviet Union already has diplomatic relations.

VII. The establishment by the United Nations of a commission for the control of atomic energy.

Discussion of the subject of atomic energy related to the question of the establishment of a commission by the General Assembly of the United Nations. The ministers of foreign affairs of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, the United States of America, and the United Kingdom have agreed to recommend, for the consideration of the General Assembly of the United Nations, the establishment by the United Nations of a commission to consider problems arising from the discovery of atomic energy and related matters. They have agreed to invite the other permanent members of the Security Council, France and China, together with Canada to join with them in assuming the initiative in sponsoring the following resolution at the first session of the General Assembly of the United Nations in January, 1946:

Resolved by the General Assembly of the United Nations to establish a commission, with the composition and competence set out hereunder, to deal with the problems raised by the discovery of atomic energy and other related matters.

I. Establishment of the commission.

A commission is hereby established by the General Assembly with the terms of reference set out under Section V below.

II. Relations of the commission with the organs of the United Nations.

(A) The commission shall submit its reports and recommendations to the Security Council, and such reports and recommendations shall be made public unless the Security Council, in the interests of peace and security, otherwise directs. In the appropriate cases the Security Council should transmit these reports to the General Assembly and the members of the United Nations, as well as to the Economic and Social Council and other organs within the framework of the United Nations.

(B) In view of the Security Council's primary responsibility under the charter of the United Nations for the maintenance of international peace and security, the Security Council shall issue directions to the commission in matters affecting security. On these matters the commission shall be accountable for its work to the Security Council.

III. Composition of the commission.

The commission shall be composed of one representative from each of those states represented on the Security Council, and Canada, when that state is not a member of the Security Council. Each representative on the commission may have such assistants as he may desire.

IV. Rules of procedure.

The commission shall have whatever staff it may deem necessary, and shall make recommendations for its rules of procedure to the Security Council, which shall approve them as a procedural matter.

V. Terms of reference of the commission.

The commission shall proceed with the utmost dispatch and inquire into all phases of the problem, and make such recommendations from time to time with respect to them as it finds possible. In particular the commission shall make specific proposals:

(A) For extending between all nations the exchange of basic scientific information for peaceful ends;

(B) For control of atomic energy to the extent necessary to insure its use only for peaceful purposes;

(C) For the elimination from national armaments of atomic weapons and of all other major weapons adaptable to mass destruction;

(D) For effective safeguards by way of inspection and other means to protect complying states against the hazards of violations and evasions.

The work of the commission should proceed by separate stages, the successful completion of each of which will develop the necessary confidence of the world before the next stage is undertaken.

The commission shall not infringe upon the responsibilities of any organ of the United Nations, but should present recommendations for the consideration of those organs, in the performance of their tasks under the terms of the United Nations Charter.

Big 3 Said to Have Agreed on Japan

DEC 28 1945

U. S. Officials Disclose Plan for Four-Power Control Council in Tokyo.

Washington, Dec. 27 (A. P.).—The Big Three Foreign Ministers have agreed to establish a four-Power control council to administer Japan, United States officials said today.

These officials, who requested anonymity, said the impending communique from the Moscow conference would announce the plan for such a council, on which the United States, Russia, Britain and China would be represented. The communique will be released tonight.

[London informants also reported that such an agreement had been reached in Moscow.]

The control council for Japan, officials here said, would have headquarters in Tokyo. It would carry out the policy recommendations of the Far Eastern commission, which has been functioning in Washington for two months and is now en route to Japan.

Russia, which thus far has refused to participate in the commission, will now come in, it was said, thereby increasing to eleven the number of nations participating in its deliberations. The Soviet Union repeatedly had insisted that it would not join the larger commission until the projected smaller, more powerful council was established for control of Japan.

Criticism Expected.

Officials here were unable to explain immediately how the operation of the four-Power council for Japan would be related to the administrative powers of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, the Allied supreme commander in Japan.

Establishment of the council was certain to bring much criticism from the smaller Pacific nations which have been asking that more actual power be given to the larger Far Eastern Commission on which they are now represented.

Prime Minister Peter Fraser of New Zealand and Foreign Minister Herbert Evatt of Australia have been among the most outspoken opponents of what they regard as pig-Power domination of Far Eastern affairs.

Also Agree on Korea.

London, Dec. 27 (A. P.).—The Foreign Ministers of the Big Three Powers were reported by a reliable source today to have agreed on a four-Power rule of Japan and to have reached other "important decisions," including control of atomic energy and a five-year trusteeship for Korea.

The informant, who is in a position to know what transpired during the eleven days of talks in Moscow, said the Big Three agreed that Japan should be controlled by Russia, the United States, Great Britain and China.

Full details of the agreement

were not immediately known, but it was understood that the unanimity rule would prevail on the four-Power council. The informant said it was not clear whether final authority in Japan would rest with the council or if Gen. Douglas MacArthur would have the power to override its decisions as the administering agent of Japan.

On the question of atomic energy, the Big Three were understood to have adopted the American-British plan of presenting a resolution to the United Nation General Assembly in January, outlining their suggestions.

Russia was said to have agreed to associate herself with the United States, Britain and Canada in the presentation of the resolution. France and China were also said to have been asked to associate themselves with the document.

During the discussions, Byrnes was understood to have suggested that the United Nations Security Council comprise the proposed atomic control commission. The Ministers were said to have agreed that the atomic control reports should go to the United Nations Security Council and not to the peace agency's general assembly. This was the expressed wish of Russia.

Korea Accord Significant.

Diplomatic quarters said they considered the reported agreement on Korea significant.

According to information here, the Big Three agreed to establish a big four trusteeship council composed of the United States, Russia, Britain and China. The report that the trusteeship would be held for five years led to the assumption that, at the end of that period, the Koreans would be given independence.

It was understood that the Big Three Foreign Ministers further agreed that the American military command in southern Korea and the Russian command in northern Korea would confer and co-ordinate the administration of the country, wrested from Japan.

London informants said also that Turkey and the claims projected by intellectuals in Soviet Georgia for Turkish territories on the Black Sea and elsewhere were discussed by the Big Three, but that no agreement was reached. These informants said the Iranian problem played a "lesser role" in the discussions than had been expected. Iran has accused Russia of interfering with efforts to suppress rebellion in the northern Iranian province of Azerbaijan, currently occupied by the Red Army.

British Foreign Ministry experts were understood to be busy deciphering the Moscow communique which began arriving here early this morning for issuance later.

FRUITFUL SESSION FINDS AGREEMENT ON GLOBAL ISSUES

Conference Proposes Security Council Take Charge of Curbing New Weapons.

BALKANS DISCUSSED

Recognition Will Be Accorded to Governments of Romania, Bulgaria.

(Text of Report on Page Fifteen)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27—(AP) An agreement on drafting the blueprint for machinery to control atomic power, and accord on other problems ranging the globe, was announced tonight by the foreign secretaries of the U. S., Russia and Britain.

Russia concurred in the plan proposed by the U. S. and Britain, with Canada, that the United Nations should handle controls over atomic energy to "ensure its use only for peaceful purposes."

In a communique outlining results of their 11-day conference in Moscow, the three foreign ministers announced agreement also on problems arising from Japan, Korea, China, Romania and Bulgaria.

Session is Fruitful

Thus, in contrast to a non-productive conference in London last September, Secretary of State Byrnes, Foreign Secretary Bevin of Britain and Foreign Commissar Molotov of Russia reached accord on troublesome questions worldwide in scope and importance.

They proposed in effect that the United Nations Security council take on the job of atomic control, of eliminating fearsome atomic weapons and "all other major weapons adaptable to mass destruction" from the arsenals of all nations.

They said the question of establishing a control commission would be laid before the United Nations General Assembly at its first meeting in London next month.

Russia agreed to go along with a control formula that was just about what Britain and the United States, along with Canada, suggested in November.

Has Role in Tokyo Occupation

But Russia got a louder voice in running conquered Japan. She had been hammering for months for an Allied control council.

The three foreign ministers agreed on one. Russia will sit in on it, along with an American and Chinese member, and a fourth representating Britain, Australia, New Zealand and India.

General Douglas MacArthur still will play a dominant role as the American representative, council chairman, and "sole executive authority for the Allied powers in Japan."

Russia also joins a revised Far Eastern commission, an 11-nation agency which will consider policy for governing Japan.

In addition, the Russian-sponsored governments in Romania and Bulgaria are to be recognized by Britain and the United States after they have been broadened to include representatives of additional political parties.

The communique omitted any reference to conditions in Iran, Turkey and Germany. But Bevin told newsmen in Moscow that the Iranian question was discussed at length, that no final agreement was reached, but that assurances were repeated that British, Russian and American troops would be withdrawn from Iran by the treaty date of March 2. Through diplomatic channels, Bevin said, discussions on Iran will continue.

Before he left Moscow, Byrnes termed the meeting "very constructive" from the standpoint of agreements and the development of "cordial relations."

No Secret Agreements

Byrnes said there were no secret agreements beyond the scope of the three-way communique. That ruled out any decision to let Russia in on the secrets of making atomic bombs.

The communique said discussion of atomic energy dealt with the establishment of a control commission.

Plans were made for writing the final peace treaties for Italy, Romania, Bulgaria, Hungary and Finland.

Foreign ministers of the big powers will draft the terms in the first instance—Russia and Britain for Finland, the U. S., Russia and Britain for Romania and Bulgaria, and the "Big Three" plus France for Italy.

Then a conference of all the United Nations which "actively waged war with substantial force against European enemy states" will be called by May 1 to pass upon the treaties. After that the countries which signed the final armistice terms with the former Axis-Allied nations in question will draw up the final texts.

The Moscow meeting agreed to set up for Korea a provisional "democratic government" and a four-power, five-year trusteeship—with "a view to the reestablishment of Korea as an independent state."

The three foreign secretaries reaffirmed adherence to a policy of "non-interference" in the internal affairs of China. And Byrnes and Molotov said they were in "complete accord as to the desirability of withdrawal of Soviet and American forces from China at the earliest practicable moment consistent with the discharge of their obligations and responsibilities."

The communique was released simultaneously in Washington, London and Moscow. Most of its major points had leaked out ahead of time.

The three top diplomats at the conference had announced, on Christmas eve, plans to call a 21-nation conference by May 1 to consider peace treaties for Italy, Romania, Hungary, Bulgaria and Finland. The communique repeated that announcement.

It wound up with the plan for safeguards against atomic destruction. In general, the plan followed the arrangements recommended last November by Britain, Canada and the United States—the countries which share the secret of making atomic bombs.

Will Defer Resolution

Russia agreed to join these three nations in offering a resolution on atomic control to the first meeting of the United Nations General Assembly in London next month. France and China were invited to sponsor the resolution, too.

It provides for the General Assembly to establish a control commission—with the same member nations as the security council, plus Canada.

The commission reports and recommendations would go to the security council. Thus each of five big powers—the United States, Russia, France, Britain and China—would have veto authority over any major action dealing with atomic questions.

These five powers are permanent members of the security council and must vote unanimously on all but matters of procedure. Six smaller nations will be elected to two-year terms to round out the security council's membership of 11 countries.

The resolution to be submitted to the 51-nation General Assembly follows almost exactly the British-Canadian-American formula in outlining the duties of the atomic control commission.

The commission is to proceed with "utmost dispatch," inquire into all phases of the atomic problem, and make recommendations. In addition, the resolution says, it shall make specific proposals:

"(A) For extending between all nations the exchange of basic scientific information for peaceful ends;

"(B) For control of atomic energy to the extent necessary to ensure its use only for peaceful purposes;

"(C) For the elimination from national armaments of atomic weapons and of all other major weapons adaptable to mass destruction;

"(D) For effective safeguards by way of inspection and other means to protect complying states against the hazards of violations and evasion."

This was the exact wording of the declaration issued Nov. 15 by President Truman, Prime Minister Attlee of Britain and Prime Minister Mackenzie King of Canada.

Big Powers Have Veto

The pattern for the new Far Eastern commission contemplates big-power veto rights. The commission could take action by less than a unanimous vote only if the United States, Britain, Russia, China and two more of the 11 members agreed.

Thus this country could veto any step to change policies or orders already put into effect by MacArthur as supreme Allied commander in Japan.

For the most part the commission would operate along lines of the old Far Eastern advisory commission, which has been working for two months in Washington and now is on the way to Japan. Russia had not participated in this group.

But it would have the added authority to review, on the request of any member, any directive issued to MacArthur or by any action taken by him "involving policy decisions within the jurisdiction of the commission."

The commission would serve more as a policy-shaping than as an advisory board. Its policy decisions would be carried out by MacArthur through directives issued by the United States government.

In addition to the big four, commission members would be France, the Netherlands, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, India and the Philippines. Headquarters would be in Washington.

China Agrees

The foreign ministers said the decision for a four-power Allied council for Japan was reached with the concurrence of China. On it will be MacArthur or his deputy as chairman and American representative, a representative of Russia and China, and a member jointly representing Britain, Australia, New Zealand and India.

It will meet in Tokyo, at least every two weeks.

It was created to consult with and advise MacArthur on carrying out surrender terms and on occupation and control of Japan.

But MacArthur still issues all the orders.

He will consult the council ahead of time on orders on "matters of substance"—the "exigencies of the situation permitting," and "his decisions upon these matters shall be controlling."

But, if a member of the Allied council disagrees with him, MacArthur is to withhold any orders implementing any policy decisions on a change in the regime of control, fundamental changes in Japan's constitutional structure, and a change in the Japanese government as a whole pending an agreement by the commission.

In "cases of necessity," MacArthur himself can make the decisions on changing individual Japanese cabinet ministers and filling cabinet vacancies after talking the situation over with other members of the council.

Commission for Korea

Russia and the United States agreed to set up a joint commission in Korea to help form a provisional government. Commission members will be drawn from the American command in southern Korea and the Soviet command in the north.

The commission's recommendations will be submitted to the governments of the United States, Russia, China and Britain.

Once the provisional government is created, the commission will consult it about a five-year trusteeship to be submitted to the four governments. With the participation of the provisional government and Korean democratic organizations, the commission is directed to work out measures for:

"Helping and assisting the political, economic and social progress of the Korean people, the development of democratic self-government and the establishment of the national independence of Korea."

The commission will meet within two weeks to consider more immediate problems—working out a system for permanent coordination in administrative and economic matters between the American and Soviet commands.

Up to now, there has been no central administrative authority in Korea.

Will Aid King Michael

For Romania, the Big Three foreign ministers agreed that their governments should give King Michael the advice he sought last August on broadening his government.

When Michael asked for this advice, Russia objected and contended that Britain and the United States had inspired the king's action. Britain and the United States had declined to recognize the present Russia-backed government in Bucharest on grounds it was not sufficiently representative of all elements.

Now Russia has agreed that Michael should be advised that one member each of the national peasant and liberal parties should be included in the government.

A commission of one Russian, one Briton and one American is to head for Bucharest immediately to satisfy itself that the new members of the government are truly representative of their parties and will work with the government.

America's commission member will be W. Averell Harriman, ambassador to Russia.

The Big Three said the reorganized Romanian government "should declare that free and unfettered elections will be held as soon as possible on the basis of universal and secret ballot." They said all democratic and anti-fascist parties should have the right to take part and put forward candidates.

Further, they said, the new government should give assurances that it will grant freedom of the press, speech, religion and association. Once all these conditions have been met, the Romanian government will be recognized by the American and British governments.

Britain and the U. S. had withheld recognition from the Bulgarian government also on grounds it was not broadly representative. They were dissatisfied, too, with election arrangements.

Now the Big Three foreign secretaries have agreed that Russia should advise Bulgaria to include in its government two representatives of other democratic groups. Britain and the United States will extend recognition when they are satisfied the advice has been followed.

What Was Decided at Moscow

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27 (AP).—The Foreign Ministers of the United States, Russia and Great Britain announced these agreements at Moscow:

ATOMIC ENERGY—The United Nations Assembly meeting next month should set up a commission to propose controls.

JAPAN—The supreme commander (General Douglas MacArthur) remains in charge. But a commission of eleven nations is established to fix policies, and a council of four nations is established to advise the commander and review his actions.

CHINA—There must be "a unified and democratic China under the national (Chiang Kai-shek) government." The United States and Russia will withdraw their troops as soon as possbile "consistent with the discharge of their obligations and responsibilities."

KOREA—The United States and Russia will form a joint commission to unify Korea and help form a provisional government. A four-power trusteeship will be established for a period up to five years. An independent Korea is the ultimate aim.

PEACE TREATIES—Final treaties with Italy, Romania, Bulgaria, Hungary and Finland will be concluded along the lines announced on the day before Christmas.

MacArthur Keeps Powers Under Moscow Decisions

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27 — (AP) Decisions of "Big Three" foreign ministers on Japan appeared tonight to have left virtually unchanged the powers of Gen. Douglas MacArthur as supreme Allied commander.

Although the ministers agreed to establish a four-power council for Japan in Tokyo, it was given only the functions of "consulting with and advising" the supreme commander.

In addition, MacArthur was made chairman and United States member of the council. The other members will represent Russia, Britain and China.

U. S. Can Block Action

The Moscow communique increased the policy-making powers of the Far Eastern commission, which Russia now will join, but provided a method of voting under which the U. S. can block any decisions on Japan with which it disagrees.

Thus, this country could block any attempt to change existing American directives which MacArthur already is carrying out.

The commission was pledged by the communique to respect "existing control machinery in Japan, including the chain of command from the United States government to the supreme commander's command of occupation forces."

The right to issue interim directives to MacArthur on urgent matters not covered by existing commission policy decisions was retained by the U. S., except where a major change in the Japanese government is involved. Then, the U. S. must consult the commission before acting.

"MacArthur hasn't been touched," commented one U. S. official concerned with policy-making machinery for Japan. He cited the redefinition of the supreme commander's powers in the part of the communique dealing with the four-power council.

Is Sole Executive

This section said that "in all cases, action will be carried out under and through the supreme commander, who is the sole executive authority for the Allied powers in Japan.

"He will consult and advise with the council in advance of the issuance of orders on matters of substance, the exigencies of the situation permitting. His decisions upon these matters shall be controlling."

If any council member disagrees with MacArthur on a matter involving a major change in the Japanese government, the commander can not issue orders on the question until the Far Eastern commission has agreed on it, the communique said.

The U. S. official, who asked not to be identified, said, however, that absolute authority on a matter of the kind specified never had been given to MacArthur.

The supreme commander's original powers were assigned to him August 29 by a document prepared jointly by the State, War and Navy departments and approved by President Truman.

Since then, the State-War-Navy coordinating committee has forwarded additional directives at intervals through the U. S. joint chiefs of staff.

In discussions with other Allied nations on control machinery for Japan, Secretary of State Byrnes expressed willingness to have a four-power council set up in Tokyo but repeatedly emphasized that in event of a disagreement on a proposed policy within that body, MacArthur was to have the final authority.

Shaw Proposes British Draft New Alphabet Based on Sounds

LONDON, Dec. 27 (AP).—George Bernard Shaw appealed today to the British government to appoint a committee to draft a new English alphabet "with which every sound in our speech can be written with one graphic and easily written symbol without even crosses or dots."

Shaw, who has campaigned before for simplification of the alphabet, said in a letter to "The Times" that adoption of his proposals would soon pay the cost of the war in time saved.

Using the word "bomb" as an example, Shaw said the final "b" was "entirely senseless and represented "an absurd mispronunciation, as if the word 'gun' were to be spelt 'gung.'"

"I can scribble the word 'bomb' barely legibly eighteen times in one minute," Shaw said, "and 'bom' twenty-four times, a saving of 25 per cent."

The result, he argued, is staggering enough to justify a priority for a new alphabet, "no matter what it costs."

Shaw said he had found "it is useless to appeal to education authorities."

"They dare not interfere with Dr. Johnson's monumental mispelling, which is now much more sacred than the Creed and the Catchecism," he declared. "I suggested to one eminent official educator that children in the elementary school be encouraged to spell phonetically as they speak, so that their mispronounciations should be detected and corrected. He replied that the barest hint of such a step would banish him from public life.

"I do not propose to meddle with our classic tetxs, mispelt—or rather unspelt—as they are. What I desiderate as a professional writer is an alternative alphabet which will save the millions of hours of manual labor now wasted in a sort of devil worship of Dr. Johnson."

Shaw said he would disqualify from the alphabet drafting committee such "cranks" as universal language advocates, shorthand experts and "persons who want to force everybody to spell in the same way.'"

"The phonetics involved," Shaw said, 'a're simple A B C: What we need are economically and statistically minded men and women of vision, even if they are hopelessly bad spellers and cannot add up their own washing bills.

G. I. Won't Come Home Without Dog

DEC 28 1945

Hit Beach Together in Normandy, Were Wounded Together in Germany and Stay Together Now.

London, Dec. 27 (A. P.).—Pvt. Raymond J. (Rocky) Doolittle, a soldier from Detroit who did not get home for Christmas, had a cable from his mother today, asking: "What, the dog again? Love, Mom.'

Rocky was refused transportation three or four times because he was unable to ship his German shepherd dog, Buck, along with him. He got the dog in Sicily two years ago.

Dog and private landed on the Normandy beachhead together; were wounded together at Aachen, Germany. They were carried off the battlefield on the same stretcher and have been together from hospital to hospital. Now Buck sleeps under Rocky's bed while they sweat out passage home.

The 28-year-old private last defaulted on a ride home December 15, when he volunteered to escort all G. I. pets quarantined at Southampton back to the United States, if he could only take Buck. He has now been assigned to the veterinary department at Southampton and expects to leave soon—with thirteen dogs.

What Rocky likes about Buck, he said, is his loyalty.

"You don't find it every day, you know," he said. "He's a one-man dog—mine and nobody else's. If someone tried to take him away from me he'd probably tear them apart."

Doolittle is a former dancer. He said he had toured the United States and Canada with Glenn Miller's band and other troupes. His stomach wounds will prevent him from dancing again, he said, but, he added, raising dogs wouldn't be bad, "if they were like Buck."

12 QUIT EMBASSY OF U. S. IN LONDON

London, Dec. 27 (A. P.).—The resignation of twelve United States embassy employees who said they could not live in London on the salaries paid them was announced by American officials today. Among those who resigned were two vice-consuls and seven code-room clerks, who must be replaced from the United States. The others were British telephone operators. Their salaries were about $2,400 a year.

Embassy officials said high living costs made it difficult to maintain a full staff of about 900 persons on prevailing wages.

Frequent resignations and a lack of new recruits has forced the embassy staff to work overtime on post-war work, such as arranging transportation for brides of soldiers, which alone requires sixty extra clerks. Although those who resigned recently were among the lowest paid, there have been expressions of discontent from higher salary brackets also. Wage scales, which range from $1,800 to $10,000, are fixed by the State Department. It was said Washington "has been advised" of the unusually high living costs here.

Nearly half of the embassy staff is American, with the percentage increasing as temporary British employees are released.

UNO SITE GROUP TO VISIT U. S. SOON

London, Dec. 27 (A. P.).—A seven-man committee appointed by the United Nations Preparatory Commission to make an "on the spot" investigation for a permanent United Nations headquarters site is expected to leave here for the United States by plane early next week.

The committee met today for the first time since the Preparatory Commission ended its sessions, to study information submitted by Eastern American cities which have extended invitations as sites for the world peace organization.

Middle West And South Ruled Out For UNO Site

London, Dec. 27 (AP)—All proposed sites in the Middle West and South for a world capital for the United Nations Organization were ruled out tonight by the UNO preparatory commission's seven-man investigating committee.

The action by the committee, expected to leave for the United States next week to make "on the spot" investigations, eliminated bids from all cities except those in ten Atlantic Coast seaboard States.

States still in the running, the committee said, are Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware.

The committee announced it would leave for the United States by plane on January 3 or 4 to make a final selection. UNO delegates are generally agreed that the committee's recommendation will be accepted by the UNO General Assembly at its first session in London January 10.

The committee said it would meet again tomorrow to eleminate bids of all but six cities. A subcommittee will visit these cities, returning to London by the end of January.

"Before we go, we'll notify the officials of each city that we went no ceremonies, no parties, and the cost of the trip will be borne by the UNO," the committee said.

30 G. I.'S HURT AT SEA

London, Dec. 27 (A. P.).—Thirty American soldiers were severely injured aboard the French liner Athos II, damaged by hurricane in mid-Atlantic last Sunday, Lloyd's reported today. The liner is carrying 3,000 United States service men to New York.

A radio message to Lloyd's from the battered 15,000-ton vessel indicated the ship was heading for the Azores at reduced speed due to engine trouble.

Morrison to Sail For U. S. Tomorrow

London, Dec. 27 (A. P.).—Herbert Morrison, lord president of the Council, will sail from Liverpool tomorrow aboard the Mauretania for a visit to Canada and the United States.

16,829 G. I.'S DUE TO LEAVE ENGLAND

Southampton, England, Dec. 27 (A. P.).—The United States aircraft carrier Wasp sailed for the United States today with 5,000 troops after temporary repair of damages received in an Atlantic gale last week.

A total of 16,829 American troops will leave for home aboard the Queen Mary and four other ships from this port between December 29 and January 8, United States base headquarters said. The Queen Mary will carry 11,400 on December 29; the hospital ship Hudleston 89 in December 31; the United States aircraft carrier Lake Champlain 4,400 on January 5; and H. M. S. Ruler and H. M. S. Emperor 470 each on January 8. The Ruler and the Emperor are two of thirty-three aircraft carrier escorts which the Royal Navy is returning to the United States Navy.

FRANCE APPROVES FINANCE MEASURES

Paris, Dec. 27 (A. P.).—The Bretton Woods monetary stabilization agreement and a $550,000,000 loan by the American Export-Import Bank were approved unanimously by the French Constituent Assembly early today.

The Assembly then approved, in effect, the Government's devaluation of the franc by voting, 506 to 44, to give the Government authority to revalue the Bank of France's gold stock at the rate of the new paper franc gold content.

President de Gaulle told the Assembly that devaluation of the franc and ratification of the Bretton Woods pact were necessary. He said every effort would be made to keep prices and salaries on a steady level, keep the budget balanced and reduce governmental expnses. France's chief need, he said, "is to produce." "We must get the maximum from our factories, our fields and our brains," he dclared.

The new value of the franc is 119.10669 to the dollar and 480 to the pound sterling—a cut of more than half from the previously pegged level of 50 to the dollar and 200 to the pound.

Terming the devaluation "liquidation of the past," Finance Ministr Ren Pleven told the Assembly that France's gold and foreign exchange holdings had declined from $3,200,000,000 when the war began to $1,800,000,000 today.

FRENCH LEFT-WING PARTIES ARE SPLIT

Socialists Withdraw Due To Coolness To Communists

Paris, Dec. 27 (AP)—The Socialist party withdrew from the left-wing delegation today, causing a rift in a powerful nine-year-old political alliance, but observers said the Constituent Assembly's reform program was not endangered by the break.

The leftist coalition, abandoned by Socialists, comprised members of the prewar groups that constituted the 1936 "popular front"—the Socialists, Communists and Radical Socialists and general confederation of labor—and emphasized the growing coolness between the Communists and Socialists.

Split Over General Strike

A left-wing delegation program in November committed the Socialists to a joint platform with the Communists that excluded the more moderate M.R.P. (popular republicans).

However, the Socialists recently were aligned with the M.R.P. in refusing to take a stand against the government of Gen. Charles de Gaulle when public service workers threatened a general strike. The Communists agreed to back union demands for wage increases.

GIANT NAZI OIL PLANT WORKING

Russians Restore Factory To 20% Of War Output

KASICHKE

Berlin, Dec. 27 (AP)—The giant Nazi Leuna synthetic oil plant at Merseburg, bombed to a standstill by the Allies, has been restored to twenty per cent of its wartime gasoline production and is now delivering 200 tons daily to Russian occupation authorities.

This sprawling factory, during the war a high priority target for American Flying Fortresses, was bombed 22 times from May, 1944, to March, 1945. Its German production manager told American correspondents touring the Russian occupation zone that Leuna was knocked out of production in October, 1944.

But the bombers continued to come, and what they accomplished is visible here amid acres of pipes, valves and vats, representing one of the world's most complex industrial establishments. Forty per cent of Leuna was destroyed and about 70 per cent of it unroofed. A German expert estimated that it will take at least five years to restore it to its former condition.

3-Man Control Staff

Leuna is a changed place in other ways, too. A three-man control staff from the Russian military government, headed by boyish-looking Col. Nikolai Kunyukhov, 37-year-old ex-combat soldier, has supplanted the former Nazi-ridden directorate. Under Kunyukhov works the German manager, Rudolph Augsten, veteran Leuna division chief, who succeeded to the directorship when America first occupied the area.

Leuna is a limited liability corporation whose stock was all owned by the I. G. Farben industry. Since Allied confiscation of all Farben's German assets, the title to Leuna rests with the Allied Control Council for Germany.

Kunyukhov said all Leuna's production is taken by the Russian military government and shipped to Berlin, where it is "distributed to the Red Army and military government, with a certain portion going to the Germans." He said none is sent to the other occupation zones.

Former Director Arrested

Plant Manager Augsten said Leuna's former director, Dr. Christian Schneider, was arrested by the Americans as a Nazi and evacuated. Augsten added that the Americans also evacuated 28 other Leuna directors and scientists before turning their territory over to the Russians.

Leuna is employing 18,000 workers, or about half its peak wartime pay roll. Many are engaged in repair work. Denazification of its worker rolls is left to the employé purge committee, which has ousted about 80 "active" Nazis, but left nominal party members in jobs, Augsten said.

SOCIALISTS AND REDS IN GERMANY MAY JOIN

BERLIN, Dec. 27 (AP)—The central committees of Germany's Social Democratic and Communist parties said today that they had appointed a joint commission to prepare plans for a merger of their organizations into a single Workers' party.

This action was taken at a meeting of the two central committees. Thirty district leaders of the two parties from the Russian occupation zone attended.

The Social Democratic party is generally recognized as the strongest, numerically, in Germany. Some observers questioned, however, whether in such a merger with the Communists the tail might not wag the dog. Both parties belong—with the Christian Democrats and the Liberal Democrats—to the Russian-sponsored four-party "united front" of anti-Fascist parties.

Single Workers' Party Planned In Germany

Berlin, Dec. 27 (AP)—The central committees of Germany's Social Democratic and Communist parties said today they have appointed a joint commission to prepare plans for a merger of their organizations into a single workers' party.

This action was taken at a meeting here of the two central committees. Also attending were 30 district leaders of the two parties from the Russian occupation zone.

The Social Democratic party is generally recognized as the strongest, numerically, in Germany. Some observers questioned, however, whether in such a merger with the Communists the tail might wag the dog.

100 GI'S MARCH ON EUROPE GHQ

Their Return To U.S. Delayed, They Protest To General

Frankfurt, Germany, Dec. 27 (AP). More than 100 Air Corps enlisted men, protesting that their redeployment had been delayed, marched on United States Army headquarters here today, but dispersed when the Army explained a lack of ships held up their return to the United States.

The soldiers charged there was the "possibility" their passage home had been delayed because of plans, they said, to accept paying civilian passengers on the European Transport Service, continental branch of the Air Transport Command.

Brig. Gen. Alvan C. Kincaid, chief of staff of the Air Force, denied such plans and told the men their redeployment had "not been held up for any reason apart from the lack of available water transportation."

All Have 55 Discharge Points

The troops, all with 55 to 59 discharge points, marched on the office of Maj. Gen. E. S. Hughes, inspector general for the European theater. Hughes saw the spokesman for the group and assured their grievances would be considered by Kincaid.

The spokesman said the group represented 400 soldiers who had been ordered to prepare to leave for embarkation ports on December 10 and December 26 and that their orders had been canceled twice.

"The European Transport Service plans to accept civilian passengers January 1 and the men feel there is a possibility that their redeployment will be held up in connection with this," Private Anthony S. Lapintas, of Indianapolis, said.

Conviction Indicated In Trial Of SS Leader

Aurich, Germany, Dec. 27 (AP)—A Canadian military court indicated today the conviction of SS Maj. Gen. Kurt Meyer, accused of responsibility for the shooting of 48 Canadian prisoners of war in the Normandy campaign.

The court acquitted Meyer of two of the five charges and announced that findings and sentence on three others would be promulgated later—the normal wording for a court-martial decision finding a defendant guilty.

Meyer was acquitted of responsibility in the killing by his troops of 23 Canadian prisoners near Buron and Authie, France, and of ordering his troops to kill seven other Canadian prisoners at an abbey. Meyer pleaded that the Canadians were killed without his knowledge.

German Reds And Socialists Plan to Merge

Name Joint Commission at Berlin to Prepare for a Single Workers' Party

BERLIN, Dec. 27 (AP).—The central committees of Germany's Social Democratic and Communist parties said today they have appointed a joint commission to prepare plans for a merger into a single workers' party.

This action was taken at a meeting here of the two central committees. Also attending were thirty district leaders of the two parties from the Russian occupation zone.

The Social Democratic party is generally recognized as the strongest, numerically, in Germany. Some observers questioned, however, whether in such a merger with the Communists the tail might wag the dog. Both parties belong—along with the Christian Democrats and Liberal Democrats—to the Soviet-sponsored four-party "united front" of anti-Fascist parties.

The Red Army's newspaper, "Taegliche Rundschau," in reporting the merger, called it "the second phase of democratic unity."

The first joint action of the two parties will be to set up a common program for community elections to be held in the American zone late in January.

FLY GOLD FROM SPAIN

Madrid, Dec. 26 (Delayed) (A. P.).—A United States Army C-47 transport plane, carrying $1,000,000 in German gold, left the Madrid airport today en route for Frankfurt, where the money will be turned over to the Allied Control Council.

The gold, in English and American coins, was surrendered to the Spanish Government by the Germany embassy when the Nazis capitulated. After lengthy negotiations the Spanish Government agreed about ten days ago to turn the gold over to British and American representatives.

Reparations Proposal Rejected By Greece

Athens, Dec. 27 (AP)—Greece announced today rejection of the war reparations award proposed for her by the Inter-Allied Reparations Conference as inadequate and unjust.

The figure was reported here to be $10,500,000,000 from Germany alone, against $14,000,000,000 Greece has claimed from Germany, Italy and Bulgaria.

[The Inter-Allied Conference on Reparations announced in Paris last Friday a division of German assets among eighteen nations, subject to ratification by the individual governments, but did not place a money value upon them. Greece was allocated 2.7 per cent of category "A," including foreign assets, current production and stocks, and 4.35 per cent of category "B," made up of shipping, industrial machinery and other goods taken from western Germany.]

Announcing a telegram of protest to Allied governments, John Sophiano Poulos, Foreign Minister, declared: "The quota allocated to the Greeks is out of proportion to the sacrifices and damage sustained by Greece through the war and enemy occupation."

Greek Communists Riot In Suburb Of Piraeus

Athens, Dec. 27 (AP)—Communist rioters stormed a police station in a suburb of Piraeus today, as Minister of the Interior Constantine Rentis warned that the release of between 8,000 and 10,000 left-wing political prisoners might result in a wave of vengeance killings throughout Greece.

The Communists sought the release of two members of the KKE, Communist organization, who had been arrested for allegedly disarming a police officer. The Communists fought their way to the cell where the men were held, but were dispersed after arrival of reinforcements from Piraeus, port of Athens.

Three KKE Members Killed

Rentis said three members of the KKE, released recently from political imprisonment, were killed and one wounded in the Corinth district of Athens by relatives of victims slain in last winter's disturbances.

A sharp rise in disorders, including many outbreaks of street fighting in Athens and Piraeus, have been reported recently.

An amnesty law covering the release of many left-wing political prisoners was adopted by Premier Themistokles Sophoulits's Government on December 11, but no date has been given as to when it will go into effect.

General Strike Planned

LONDON, Dec. 27 (AP).—The Leftist Greek news agency Martipress said today that a twenty-four-hour general strike would begin in Greece at noon tomorrow to protest against deterioration of living conditions resulting from the collapse of the drachma.

'Red Star' Accuses Turks Of Printing War Threats

Two Editors Named in Articles Against Russia

MOSCOW, Dec. 27 (AP).—A "Red

DEC 28 1945

Star" (Soviet Army newspaper) commentator said today that some Turkish editors and deputies in the Turkish Parliament are making outspoken threats against Russia.

The article called Husein Yalchin, editor of the Turkish newspaper "Tanin," "The Aged Bandit of Journalism" and quoted him as saying Russia had been Turkey's traditional enemy for centuries. It said Necemeddin Sadak, editor of "Aksham," is carrying on provocative discussions on the "possibility of announcing a sacred war against Russia by the western world."

General Kazim Karabekir also was cited as declaring to the Turkish National Assembly that Turkey would "shed blood" if the Russians insist on territorial demands, and that a blow against Turkey "may bring to action all Anglo-Saxons."

Reds Try 2 German Generals

MOSCOW, Dec. 27 (AP).—Two German generals and two soldiers formerly under their command faced a Russian war-crimes tribunal in Bryansk today, charged with responsibility in the mass murder and torture of thousands of Russian noncombatants. The officers are Lieutenant General Frederick Gustaf Berngardt and Major General Adolf Hamann, who commanded troops in the Bryansk, Orel and Bobruisk regions during the Nazi occupation.

ALLIES ASK AID OF INDONESIANS

Plan Active Measures to Restore Order in Java.

Batavia, Dec. 27 (A. P.).—Lieut.-Gen. Sir Philip Christison, Allied commander in the Netherlands East Indies, informed Indonesian leaders today that he planned "more active measures" to restore order in strife-torn Java. He also called on the Indonesians to place under his command whatever units of the Indonesian Peace Preservation Corps (TKR) he might need to assist British troops in suppressing disorders.

Christison outlined his plans at a conference with Premier Sutan Sjahrir and Information Minister Amir Sjarifuddin of the unrecognized Indonesian Republic as large-scale fighting flared anew in Bandoeng, Java's summer capital.

Fighting Continues.

In one sector of Bandoeng, British Mahratta troops cleared an Indonesian training center after six hours of heavy house-to-house fighting. In another sector, Gurkha troops, with tank support, attacked a surburban area held by Indonesians, but were forced to withdraw. Other outbreaks were reported in Soerabaja. In the vicinity of Semarang, two former Japanese 75mm. guns shelled British positions.

Shortly before going into the meeting with Sjahrir and Sjarifuddin, Christison issued a prepared statement declaring that British troops in Java were there "only in pursuance of an Anglo-American decision allocating the responsibility for disarming and repatriating the Japanese, and rescuing European and Eurasian prisoners and internees."

BRITISH FORCE RINGS BATAVIA

Cordon Thrown Around City As Action Is Stepped Up

HAUGLAND

Batavia, Dec. 27 (AP)—The British threw a military cordon around Batavia today as Lieut. Gen. Sir Batavia today as Lieutenant General Sir Philip Christison, Allied commander in the Netherlands East Indies, notified Indonesian leaders he was taking more active measures to restore order in Java and appealed for their co-operation.

[London dispatches said Prime Minister Attlee had begun talks this afternoon with Dutch officials, including Premier Wilhelm Schemerhorn and Dr. H. J. van Mook, acting governor general in the Netherlands Indies. The British Government was said to be pressing the Dutch to recognize the self-proclaimed Indonesian republic.]

Asks Aid Of Indonesian Corps

Christison said he had asked the aid of the Indonesian Peace Preservation Corps (TKR) in maintaining order, and this afternoon certain units were already being equipped by the British to be used as auxiliary military police.

The cordon was thrown around the Java capital in order to check identity of people leaving and entering the city and thus prevent an inflow of terrorists and bandits, the British said.

Christison, after conferring with Premier Sutan Sjahrir and Information Minister Amir Sjarifuddin of the unrecognized Indonesian republic, issued a statement reiterating that the British were in Java "in pursuance of an Anglo-American decision allocating the responsibility for disarming and repatriating the Japanese, and rescuing European and Eurasian prisoners and internees.

Suffer From Terrorists

"My troops," he said, "have suffered daily casualties at the hands of terrorist and extremist organizations. These people have committed the most horrible outrages.

"I had hopes conditions might improve, but they haven't. I am compelled to take more active measures to insure order. I call on Indonesian leaders to co-operate and to make available, if possible, such units of the Peace Preservation Corps as I deem necessary."

Meanwhile, large-scale fighting flared again at Bandoeng. In one sector of Java's summer capital British Mahratta troops in six hours of heavy house-to-house fighting cleared an extremist training center.

Find Well-Defined System

They found a well organized defense system of trenches, trip wires, booby traps, mines, road blocks and snipers.

In another sector of Bandoeng, Gurkha troops with tank support attacked a suburban area held by Indonesians but were forced to withdraw.

In the Soerabaja area, 50 Indonesian nationalists armed with machine guns and grenades attacked a patrol base, wounding two British soldiers.

Christison's Statement

The text of the statement made by General Christison, released by the British Information Services in New York, follows:

"Britis htroops are only in Java in pursuance of an Aglo-American decision allocating to them the responsibility of disarming and repatriating Japanese prisoners of war and rescuing European and Eurasian prisoners of war and internees. These objectives can only be achieved if law and order are preserved.

"Meanwhile, my troops, who have adopted the principle of never firing unless attacked, have suffered and are suffering daily casualties at the hands of terrorists and extremist organizations.

"These people have committed most horrible outrages, not only against Allied troops but against defenseless women and children and civilians, including even their own kith and kin. I had hoped conditions might mprove, but they have not.

"While the future of Indonesia is a matter for the Dutch and Indonesians, I am compelled to take more active measures to insure law and order to enable peaceful inhabitants once more to go about their business without fear and intimidation in the areas for which I am responsible. In carrying out these measures, I should naturally welcome the co-operation of Indonesian leaders. In fact, the more they do to help preserve law and order, the less my troops will come into the picture.

"I, therefore, call on Indonesian leaders to co-operate and make available, if possible, such units of their Peace Preservation Corps as I shall deem it necessary to co-operate under my over-all command."

Discuss Java Problem.

London, Dec. 27 (A. P.).—Prime Minister Willem Schermerhorn of the Netherlands and Acting Governor-General Hubertus J. Van Mook of the Netherlands East Indies continued talks today with Prime Minister Attlee on a settlement of the Indonesian dispute. Attlee, who is said to be anxious to withdraw British troops from the Indies, was reported to have asked the Dutch to state specifically their intentions with regard to Indonesian demands for independence.

BRITISH POLICE OFFICE TARGET OF HEAVY BLOW

Gunfire Is Heard in City and Troops Are Sent to Action Stations.

NUMBER TRAPPED IN BUILDING

Part of Detective Headquarters Collapses—All Traffic Is Halted.

Jerusalem, Dec. 27 (A. P.).—Seven bombs exploded in the center of Jerusalem tonight and two heavy explosions were reported from Tel Aviv.

The building housing the Criminal Investigation Department (police detective headquarters) in Jerusalem was damaged when the blasts rang out at 7:23 P. M. and first reports said that a number of persons were trapped inside. Part of the structure collapsed.

All traffic in Jerusalem was halted. Troops were rushed to emergency stations. Armored cars patrolled the city.

Sounds of heavy gunfire were heard in the city.

Bombs Blast Three Blocks In Jerusalem

Central Police Building Partially Wrecked, With Seven Reported Dead

Explosives Set Off In Tel Aviv, Too

Gunfire Rakes Streets; British Blame Zionist Extremists for Attacks

By The Associated Press

JERUSALEM, Dec. 27.—Nine persons were killed tonight in simultaneous Jewish attacks on police headquarters buildings in Jerusalem and in the Jaffa-Tel Aviv area some thirty miles away.

A communique said one British assistant police superintendent, two British constables and four policemen were killed in Jerusalem, where a three-block area in the heart of the city was damaged and the Central Police Building was partially destroyed by heavy explosions.

During the attack against the district police headquarters in Tel Aviv an Arab telephone operator was killed, the communique said, and later, in an attempted raid at the Royal Engineers arms store at the exhibition grounds north of Tel Aviv, one British soldier was killed.

The communique added that in addition to the seven killed in Jerusalem, the superintendent of police and six soldiers were seriously injured and four constables were wounded, placing the latest estimate of wounded in that city at eleven.

Covered by Gunfire

Eyewitnesses in Jerusalem were reported to have said they saw six young men with haversacks dash across the street toward the Central police building. Some of them were said to have fired revolvers at policemen guarding the gates of the police building, while the rest placed the explosives which turned the place into a shambles. Earlier reports said the explosions were believed to have been caused by bombs thrown from an automobile.

The heaviest blast was in the police building, housing the Criminal Investigation Department headquarters, which borders on Jaffa Road, the main thoroughfare in the modern part of the city.

Search for Victims

Police, hospital and military authorities removed bodies from the police building wreckage on stretchers, and squads of men still were digging through high piles of debris around the headquarters.

Side Of Building Blown Out

One entire side, several floors high, was blown completely out of the building. Chunks of concrete littered the streets and flying glass was scattered over the neighborhood. Windows of shops in a three-block area were shattered. Overhead wires were torn down and were hanging over trees and the roofs of other buildings.

Inspector General Rymer Jones and his deputy, two of the highest ranking police officers, narrowly escaped death from the explosions.

Police were dispersed throughout the area to enforce security measures, and tonight the military commander of the Jerusalem district ordered strict enforcement of an 11 P.M. curfew throughout a large part of the city.

Utilities Interrupted

Following the explosions taxis and busses did not resume operations immediately and electric power was interrupted in several sections of the business district.

[A Reuter dispatch from Jerusalem received in London said men armed with mortars were attacking criminal investigation department headquarters in the coastal city of Jaffa, some 30 miles from Jerusalem, and that casualties were heavy.

[This was not confirmed from any other source, and the possibility existed of some confusion in identifying the locale of the attack.]

TURKS REPORTED DEMONSTRATING

Said To Be Against Land Demands Printed In Russia

Istanbul, Dec. 26 (AP) [Delayed]. Demonstrations against proposals published in Moscow that a large strip of Turkish Black Sea territory be ceded to the Soviet Union were reported today from Port Trabzon.

The semi-official Anatolia news agency said that the claims of two Georgian professors, published in Russian papers last week, created "great nervousness" in Trabzon, which lies on the shore of the Black Sea only 50 miles from Russian territory.

A Trabzon newspaper was quoted as saying the nature of the territorial demands should be considered "an attack against Turkey, and an injustice toward the rights of small nations."

"This will constitute the beginning of a new fight," it was added.

U. S. Diplomat Scores Soviet

TEHERAN, Iran, Dec. 27 (AP)—Harold B. Minor, chief of the United States State Department's Near East section, said today he had "given up" after a sixteen-day wait for Russian permission to visit Azerbaijan. Saying that he planned to leave for Washington tonight, Mr. Minor added:

"I hope my experience and the experience of American newsmen in Teheran will result in demands for a Soviet statement of policy on freedom of the press and distribution of information among friendly nations."

Mr. Minor, former secretary of the embassy here, said daily inquiries at the Russian Embassy had met with "polite evasions and 'Sorry, we've had no answer from the military commander in Azerbaijan. Please call tomorrow.' "

"Sixteen days of such procrastination," Mr. Minor asserted, "I consider a definite refusal by the Soviet to allow Americans to judge for themselves if friends and Allies are being allowed freedom in solving their own internal affairs."

EMPEROR SYSTEM DECLARED ERASED

Nippon Reforms' Effect Cited By MacArthur's Aide

Tokyo, Friday, Dec. 28 (AP)—The traditionally worshiped, all-powerful emperor system that Japan has known in the past is being "destroyed—wiped out of existence," as the result of Allied reforms, Brig. Gen. Frayne Baker, General MacArthur's public relations officer, said today.

His written summary of MacArthur's democratization decrees did not, however, mention Emperor Hirohito; neither did it indicate that the throne itself would be abolished. The statement referred rather to reforms which have eliminated the throne's traditional feudal controls that shackled the nation.

"Evil Roots Pulled Out"

"The last evil roots of the tenno (emperor) system were pulled out and destroyed with the abolition of state Shinto" (ancestor worship directed and supported by the government), Baker asserted.

The first step, his statement explained, was "when the Japanese war and navy departments were blacked out, and all armament gathered in by the occupation forces.

"This first step was really the main one, because that took away the sword which was the key control."

Successive MacArthur steps, the statement added, were studied ones, which must be considered in sequence to get the full benefit of the progressive psychology applied.

Thought Control Halted

"Destroying the whiphand control of the empire's police force and cancellation of thought control was another far-reaching operation," Baker declared.

Removal of the sword, he said, necessarily accorded free speech, free religion, free press, free assembly and free petition, and these foundations for the new government quickly won favorable reaction.

Progressively, decrees freeing enterprise, controlling currency, and instituting social security, agrarian reform, collective bargaining and the fair distribution of food, took the people out from under the vertical control of the military.

Further Allied judicial reform freed the courts from the influence of the sword, Baker explained, adding that "all these are pillars" of the emperor system which occupation decrees have torn down.

People Want New Life

The nation early became conscious of MacArthur's aims, the statement said, and this has "grown so that the mass of people now wants to get along in the new life."

Had occupation changes been tossed into the lap of the Japanese Government all at once rather than step by step, Baker cautioned, "utter confusion and chaos" would have resulted, and the full benefits never would have been achieved. The step-by-step program, however, caused "outsiders" to think that Japanese were getting a "soft peace," he commented.

As for the future, he concluded: "The project for the Japanese, therefore, is to found a government on horizontal planes in place of the vertical lines previously known. It is a major operation which must be guided and closely supervised."

Jap Reds Urge Election Delay

Oppose Government's Plea for Speedy Poll —Date Is Up to Allies.

Tokyo, Dec. 27 (A. P.).—The Japanese Communists are proposing a postponement of the forthcoming general election for at least a month to allow time for the setting up of what they called a truly democratic opposition to the old-school politicians, the Kyodo News Agency said today.

Date of the election has not been announced, pending approval by Supreme Allied Headquarters. It would be held in mid-January under the newly passed election law which is now under study by the occupation authorities.

Although many Japanese have privately expressed the belief that the election should be postponed, the reported Communist proposal is the first advanced by any political organization. Government officials contend, however, that a speedy election is necessary to permit the prompt convening of a more representative Diet for consideration of a budget and other matters.

New Party Appears.

Meanwhile, Premier Kijuro Shidehara said that the Japanese Government would take drastic action against any Government officials found meddling with the balloting.

A new political party, the Independent Socialists, appeared on the Tokyo scene and demanded that the Premier be elected by the people instead of appointed by the throne. The party's platform, however, advocated the preservation of the emperor system.

A Communist party proposal for united political activity was rejected by the Social Democrats, an organization plugging for the nationalization of land, transportation and other industry.

Land Reform Due.

Tokyo newspapers reported that the Government would activate a new land reform measure about January 10, a measure passed reluctantly by the Diet under a MacArthur directive calling for a new agrarian system. The bill limits individual holdings to twelve acres.

Supreme Headquarters and Shidehara's residence were visited today by hundreds of Koreans who demonstrated peacefully for an accelerated program of repatriation and increased food rations. Making the rounds in a cold, drizzling rain, the Koreans asked for Government payment of their living expenses until repatriation.

Also today Allied headquarters announced approval of some sixty stock transfers in the Mitsubishi Trading Company, involving 4,525 shares of stock. Recipients of the stock are not members of the once-dominant Iwasaki family, which has been forbidden any ownership in the company, and none will control more than 1 per cent of the shares outstanding.

Delay Of Election Urged

Tokyo, Dec. 27 (AP)—Japan's Communist party proposed today, the Kyodo agency reported, that the new general election scheduled tentatively for mid-January be postponed for at least a month to allow time for formation of a "truly democratic opposition" to the old-line parties.

While the exact date of the election has not been decided, pending approval by Allied headquarters of the new election law, many Japanese have said privately that mid-January was too soon. Government officials, however, hold that a quick election is necessary to obtain "a more representative Diet" than the present lame-duck parliament.

To Maintain "Hands Off"

Premier Kijuro Shidehara has instructed prefectural officials to maintain a strict hands-off attitude in the balloting. Drastic penalties were threatened for any interference with the voting.

While the Communists were urging postponement, a new party, the Independent Socialists, demanded that the Premier be subject to election rather than being appointed by the Emperor as at present.

The Social Democrats rejected a Communist proposal for a coalition of parties, although the Social Democrats are urging nationalization of land, transportation and heavy industries.

The new land reform measure to break up large holdings, adopted recently under General MacArthur's orders by a reluctant Diet, is scheduled for activation about January 10, the Tokyo press reported. It limits individual properties to twelve acres.

Meanwhile, hundreds of Korean demonstrators visited Premier Shidehara's residence and supreme headquarters today, demanding more food and faster repatriation. They paraded quietly through a drizzling rain.

Hitoshi Ashida, welfare minister, told prefectural governors that 600,000 Koreans already had been repatriated, and that of the 1,400,000 still in Japan, only 400,000 wanted to go home.

REGIMENT TO BE REVIVED

31st Infantry Was Wiped Out on Bataan Early in 1942

TOKYO, Dec. 27 (AP)—Wiped out on Bataan in the first months of 1942, the Thirty-first Infantry Regiment will live again.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced today that the new Thirty-first would be organized in Korea about Jan. 19 and attached to the Seventh Division, replacing the homeward-bound 184th Regiment. The Thirty-first will have new colors and guidons to replace those burned on Corregidor, to which a very few survivors made their way after the valiant stand on Bataan.

The regiment will have its original silver punchbowl trophy, made from 1,500 Chinese silver dollars and buried on Corregidor before the Japanese arrived. Survivors of the original outfit now serving in the Southwest Pacific who wish to return to the Thirty-first will be transferred to Korea. Headquarters said that there was no official estimate of their number but it was negligible.

The Thirty-first is the only unit of the United States Army that never served in the United States. It was activated originally in the Philippines and remained in the Orient, serving in China and Siberia. It was in the Philippines when the Japanese struck four years ago.

G. I.s Escape Japanese Tax

TOKYO, Dec. 27 (AP).—Allied miltary personnel in Japan will no longer have to pay the stiff Japanese retail sales tax on souvenir purchases. A Supreme Headquarters memorandum to the Japanese government today exempts service men from payment of the tax which ranges from 20 per cent on shoes to 120 per cent on jewelry chinaware and furs.

Five Air Forces Merged in Pacific

Tokyo, Dec. 27 (A. P.).—Gen. MacArthur today announced consolidation of five Pacific Air Forces under a single organization commanded by Gen. George C. Kenney, former commander of the Far Eastern Air Forces. The new organization, the Pacific Air Command of the United States Army—Pacusa—will supply air control to enforce the terms of Japan's surrender.

Chinese Reds Propose Truce

Suggest Unconditional Cease-fire Order as Talks Resume at Chungking.

Chungking, Dec. 27 (A. P.).—The Chinese Communists announced that they presented a formal written proposal to the Government today for an unconditional truce on all fronts of China's undeclared civil war. The proposal, they said, was delivered at a two-hour meeting with three Government representatives.

The meeting, the first formal session between the two sides since November 17, took place at the headquarters of the National Military Council in downtown Chungking. The Communists said that their proposal involved (1) an unconditional cease-fire order by each side, (2) a peaceful settlement of all problems relating to the civil war, and (3) the sending of inter-party and non-partisan groups to the various fronts to observe the situation.

The Government representatives at today's session promised to deliver the truce proposal to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek for consideration, the Communists added.

Council Meeting Discussed.

Preliminary arrangements for the January meeting of China's Political Consultative Council—the inter-party, non-partisan conference that will seek to end the civil war—were also discussed at today's meeting.

No date was set for the Political Consultative Council session, but several Chinese newspapers have predicted that the meeting would not be held prior to January 10.

Meanwhile today Gen. Chou En-lai, the top Communist delegate to the council, was a luncheon guest of Gen. George C. Marshall, the new United States envoy, giving Marshall for the second time a direct report of the Communists' viewpoint.

An earlier caller at Marshall's residence was Chou Chin-wen, Manchurian member of the Democratic League. The new envoy also received Dr. Arthur Young, American financial adviser to the Chinese Government, who was accompanied by Walter Robertson, United States Charge d'Affaires.

Marshall was scheduled to dine tonight with Robertson, who was entertaining prominent Chinese Government, Communist and Democratic League leaders.

CHINESE TRUCE PLAN OFFERED

Communists Submit Proposal At Formal Conference

Chungking, Dec. 27 (AP)—Chinese Communists, meeting government leaders to arrange for peace discussions, submitted in writing today their plan for a truce.

"All we can do is hope," declared Chou En-lai, head of the Communist delegation, on emerging from the preliminary conference at which the rival factions met formally for the first time since November 17.

Then he set off for a dinner honoring Gen. George C. Marshall at the home of Walter Robertson, United States charge d'affaires, also attended by representatives of the Government and China's Democratic League.

Calls Plan "Unconditional"

Chou insisted the plan—text of which was withheld—called for an "unconditional" truce, but the Government had asserted that as made orally last week it contained some booby traps.

Chou outlined it as calling for a "cease fire" order by each side, settling all problems peacefully and dispatching nonpartisan observers to the fronts to make a report.

The Government charged the oral plan would require its troops to withdraw from the railroads and would freeze in present positions their forces now moving into Manchuria.

The Government was represented as seeing the latter condition as a stiff barrier to acceptance of the Communist plan.

May Ask Postponement

In fact, there was a report current that the Government would ask the Russians to postpone their January 3 withdrawal from Manchuria because National forces still had too far to go before being ready to take over the administration.

Spencer Davis, Associated Press correspondent, in a dispatch from Peiping said advance units of National occupation forces were 7 miles northeast of Tahushan, which is more than 60 miles southwest of Mukden, Manchuria's largest city.

A score of high government officials left Peiping by plane for Changchun, the Manchurian capital, to assist advance groups in taking over the civil administration, Davis said.

The presence in Chungking of Marshall, America's special envoy to China, was increasing interest in the forthcoming peace talks by the Political Consultative Council.

May Tour North China

Davis said there were unofficial reports that Marshall would visit Peiping in a quick tour of North China.

While the preliminary discussions between Government and Communist delegations today set no date for the peace conference, several Chungking papers predicted it would be called for around January 10.

Chou went to the meeting with Gen. Yen Chien-ying, chief of staff of the Communist armies, and Wang Jo-fei, Communist liaison officer in Chungking.

On the Government side were Wang Shih-chieh, minister of foreign affairs; Gen. Chang Chun, governor of Szechwan province, and Shao Li-tsu, elder statesman and former ambassador to Moscow.

China Agrees on Treaties.

Chungking, Dec. 27 (A. P.).—China has signified her concurrence to an agreement on procedure for peace treaties reached at the Big Three Foreign Ministers' conference in Moscow, it was announced officially today.

JAP PUPPET DIES IN NORTHERN CHINA

Final Illness Laid To Inability To Obtain Opium In Jail

Peiping, Dec. 27 (AP)—Wang Keh-min, leading North China collaborator with the Japanese, died in the military prison here Christmas Day of an illness which local newspapers asserted resulted from his inability to obtain opium, to which he was said to have been addicted.

Official biographies differ as to whether Wang was 66 or 70 years old. A native of Hangchow, he was educated in Japan, served there five years as counselor of the old Chinese imperial legation, and later was Finance Minister and held other high posts in the Chinese republic.

In 1937, when the Japanese invaded North China, Wang came out of retirement to head the Japanese-sponsored provisional government. In 1939, when the Japanese established a puppet rule over all occupied China, he became chairman of North China political affairs. He retired prior to the Japanese surrender, but was arrested on a treason charge December 5.

Japanese Surrender Slated In Shantung

Peiping, Dec. 27 (AP)—Formal surrender of 70,000 Japanese troops is due to take place today at Tsinan, capital of Shantung province, the Chinese central news agency reported.

This latest surrender ceremony in the China theater involves Japanese who have been doing guard duty under Chinese orders on the railways in that area, the agency said.

Gen. Li Yen-nien, who commanded the Tsinan and Tsingtao garrison before the war and who now commands China's 11th War Zone, will accept the surrender.

Marines' Morale Called Low

SHANGHAI, Dec. 27 (AP).—The morale of homesick American marines in North China was described by "Stars and Stripes" today as "cracking up" because the marines "are convinced they are merely pawns in a political chess game."

The China theater edition of the Army newspaper, in a Tientsin datelined article by Sergeant Dick Wilson, of Bellerose, N. Y., news editor, said the marines refused to believe it is necessary for them to guard Chinese railroads and British-owned coal properties.

Wilson wrote that "incidents" had decreased during the last month, but that marine casualties from snipers, demolition crews and track wreckers were higher than reports have indicated.

"Nightly jags, mourning buddies who fell in Pacific campaigns, a bit of joint-wrecking, brawls with civilians and marines, an occasional show of arms and sometimes more than just a show—these are the manifestations of the cracking up of America's fighting men who have had too much fighting and want to go home so desperately that nothing else means anything to them," the article said.

Japanese Lieutenant Denies Atrocity Charge

Yokohama, Dec. 27 (AP)—Lieut. Ken Yuri pleaded innocent today to atrocity charges, including one that he let a United States private be bayoneted to death before the eyes of comrades at Omuta prison camp.

The prosecution told the military commission that it would demand the death penalty for the former commander of the camp in southern Japan.

Yuri was accused specifically of ordering guards to beat the private, Noah C. Heard, before he allegedly was bayoneted to death May 31, 1944. A second charge held Yuri respsonsible for death by torture and starvation of Corporal James G. Pavlokos, a Marine known as "the mad Greek."

U. S. ACTS TO CURB DISEASE

Off-Limits Regulations Are Tightened in Shanghai

SHANGHAI, Dec. 27 (AP)—The newly created joint Army-Navy venereal disease board ordered strict enforcement of off-limits regulations against brothels today and instituted a prophylactic educational program to combat a rapid rise in the rate of infection.

The records showed 374 cases per thousand in the Navy and 185 in the Army, compared with 95 and 65 per thousand when the American forces landed here in September.

'Roosevelt Road' for Shanghai

SHANGHAI, Dec. 27 (AP)—The Kuomintang Government party organization proposed to the City Council today that one of Shanghai's main streets be renamed "Roosevelt Road."

Korea Renews Demands.

Seoul, Korea, Dec. 27 (A. P.).—Unconfirmed reports that the Big Three Powers have agreed on a five-year trusteeship for Korea prompted the wartime, unofficial government-in-exile of Kim Koo to renew its demands for immediate Korean independence today.

A spokesman, voicing emphatic objections to joint Allied control, said: "The purpose of world war II was to protect weaker nations from the claws of tyrants. The four powers, America, England, Soviet and China, have promised independence to Korea."

Singapore Has Transit Strike

SINGAPORE, Dec. 27 (AP).—A new walkout paralyzed Singapore's public transport system today. About 20,000 transport, gas and electric workers, newsboys and laborers employed by the British armed forces at this naval base are now on strike for higher wages.

SHIPS ASSIGNED FOR MANILA G. I.'S

Manila, Dec. 27 (A. P.).—Col. J. C. Campbell, commander of the Twenty-first Replacement Depot where angered soldiers had protested cancellation of a homebound transport sailing, said today that three troopships have been assigned and that the depot "will be cleaned out by December 31."

"And I'd bet three to two that you will all be on your way by December 29," he told the men.

He poo-poohed Tuesday's demonstration as "a college rally," and pointed out that demonstrations had been staged at both the Twenty-first and Twenty-ninth Replacement Depots because of misunderstandings when ships were transferred from one to the other.

There was no further protest reported. In the current atmosphere of kiss-and-make-up, the colonel agreed with the men that complaints arose originally because officers had failed to keep the men fully informed about available shipping and schedules.

Filipino Traitor to Die

MANILA, Dec. 27 (AP).—Clark Castillo was sentenced to death today by a people's court as the Pied Piper who led almost 1,000 Filipinos to mass execution by the Japanese.

He was the first collaborator so senenced under a decision which established as an important precedent that membership in the Japanese-sponsored Makapili Army constitutes treason.

Last March, Castillo, on pretense that the Japanese were according safe conduct, cajoled the population of the village of Lumband, near Lipa, in Batangas Province, to congregate. The Japanese then killed all except members of the Makapili organization.

The massacre was one of the atrocities which figured in the trial of Lieutenant General Tomoyuki Yamashita, former Japanese commander in the Philippines, presently under sentence of death.

ESPIL TO BE ENVOY AGAIN

Argentine Delegate to UNO to Return to Washington

BUENOS AIRES, Dec. 27 (AP)—The Foreign Office said today that Dr. Felipe A. Espil, Argentine Ambassador to Spain and now vice president of the Argentine delegation at the United Nations Conference in London, would assume the post of Ambassador to the United States at the close of the UNO meeting starting next month.

Dr. Espil, Ambassador to the United States from 1931 to 1943, will succeed Oscar Ibarra Garcia, now absent from the American capital. The Foreign Office also announced the appointment of Rodolfo Garcia Arias, Ambassador to Venezuela, as Argentine Ambassador to the Pan American Union in Washington.

Brazil Is Enthusiastic Over La Guardia Visit

RIO DE JANEIRO, Dec. 27 (AP).—The Brazilian press and public welcomed enthusiastically the news that New York's outgoing Mayor, Fiorello H. La Guardia, will represent President Truman at the inauguration Jan. 15 of Brazil's Presi-President-elect General Eurico Gaspar Dutra.

The news was carried on front pages with photographs of Mr. La Guardia, who is an extremely popular personality here. The newspaper "A Noite" carried a front-page feature story with headline: "La Guardia Symbol of American Democracy," detailing his political career. The story added, "He is one of the most appealing and picturesque of the United States political figures."

Spanish Exile Heads Leaving Mexico City

Mexico City, Dec. 27 (AP)—Diego Martinez Barrio, President of the exiled Spanish Republican Government, entrained here today for New York, from where he plans to embark for London.

Meanwhile, Republican Premier Jose Giral was preparing to leave the Mexican capital by plane, weather permitting.

Exiled leaders' decision to leave coincided with an announcement from Washington that the United States Government was ready to join England and France in a conference to determine their future attitude to Generalissimo Francisco Franco's regime.

28 Powers Sign Bretton Woods Monetary Pact

U. S., Britain, France and China Included; Russia Only Big Nation Absent

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27 (AP).—Hailed as a forerunner of an improved world economy, the Bretton Woods monetary agreements were formally signed today by twenty-eight of the forty-five nations which had drafted them in July, 1944.

Russia was the only big power absent, but she has until Dec. 31 to ratify and sign as one of the original forty-five. The larger nations signing were the United States, Great Britain, France and China.

The agreements establish a $9,100,000,000 international bank to make loans to help rebuild and rehabilitate war-torn countries and a $8,8000,00,000 fund to keep world currencies stabilized.

They still can be signed until next Monday by the other countries participating in the United Nations 1944 monetary conference at Bretton Woods, N. H. After that date a nation wishing to participate will have to be approved by the fund or bank boards.

Appointment of boards of governors by each signatory country is the next step in setting the two institutions on a going basis.

The two agreements were signed in a twenty-six-minute ceremony at the State Department.

Fred M. Vinson, Secretary of the Treasury, signed for the United States; the Earl of Halifax, British Ambassador, for Great Britain; Ambassador Henri Bonnet for France and Ambassador Wei Tao-ming for China.

Other signatories were Belgium, Bolivia, Brazil, Canada, Colombia, Costa Rica, Ecuador, Egypt, Ethiopia, Greece, Guatemala, Honduras, Iceland, India, Iraq, Luxemburg, Netherlands, Norway, Paraguay, Philippine Commonwealth, Poland, Union of South Africa, Uruguay and Yugoslavia.

At the conclusion of the ceremony Secretary Vinson declared: "The birth of these two great international financial institutions is not an end in itself but only a means to the end of international peace and prosperity. Our task, therefore, has but just commenced."

Dean Acheson, Acting Secretary of State, described the establishment of the fund and bank as "symbolic of ever-increasing cooperation of all nations" looking toward a better world.

Henry Morgenthau jr., former Secretary of the Treasury, who headed the Bretton Woods conference, said he felt "that this is a new step in international finance and can't help but bring better conditions in the world."

As provided by that conference, the pacts were to take effect only if ratified and signed before Dec. 31 by governments having 65 per cent of the fund quotas ($5,720,000,000) and bank subscriptions ($9,915,000,000). Those signing today have total quotas well in excess of the 65 per cent.

Forty-four nations have been assigned quotas. No shares have yet been fixed for Denmark.

The fund quota of the United States, first country to ratify, is $2,750,000,000, and its subscription to the bank is $3,175,000,000. This total of $5,925,000,000 represents nearly one-third of the aggregate capital of the two accounts.

Great Britain's aggregate will be $2,600,000,000. Russia's will be $2,400,000,000, when and if she comes in.

The next step will be the appointment by signatory countries of a governor for the fund and a governor for the bank.

The United States will call the first meetings of the two boards of directors under the rule giving this authority to the power putting up the most capital.

TRUMAN ENDS SWPC AGENCY

Duties Of Smaller War Plants Units Are Shifted

Washington, Dec. 27 (AP)—President Truman today abolished the Smaller War Plants Corporation, effective January 28, and shifted its duties to other agencies as a step in reorganizing the executive branch of the Government.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation gets SWPC's assignment in surplus disposal activity and its job of lending money to help small firms reconvert and expand. The Commerce Department takes over the expiring agency's duties of supplying technical and other aid to little businesses.

Maury Maverick, former Mayor of San Antonio and former Congressman, who headed SWPC during most of the war, got no new assignment. However, he will continue his current survey of the possibilities of developing new markets in the Pacific for United States small business.

Reason For Changes

The changes were made, Mr. Truman explained, because the Government "must have a permanent program to assist small business to grow and prosper." His statement, issued at the White House, described the shift as an "important step" in that direction and expressed belief it will "simplify and unify the Government's aid to small business."

While Congress recently granted Mr. Truman authority to revamp executive agencies, he acted today under the first War Powers Act of 1941. He referred to the changeover in letters to retiring SWPC directors, however, as part of his reorganization plans.

Maverick has not yet resigned as chairman and general manager of SWPC, although Mr. Truman's letter giving him the overseas assignment and notifying him of the impending consolidation was sent early in November.

Maverick Toured Pacific

There have been reports that the Texan, vociferous foe of red tape and official "gobbledegook," would go into private business, but one official close to the arrangements said a government job would be available if he wanted it.

Maverick is due here shortly after New Year's Day. He has visited China, Japan, Korea, the Philippines, Australia and New Zealand.

The RFC will get the bulk of SWPC's 1,150 employés and all 110 field offices. It also will get the agency's revolving fund of $200,000,000 for loans to little business men.

Veterans and little business men, both entitled to priority in the purchase of surplus equipment, apply for the goods through the SWPC field offices. Whether RFC will maintain all the branches was not known, since the big lending agency has a field setup of its own.

Wallace To Inherit Units

Secretary of Commerce Wallace will inherit all the other SWPC units. These survey the needs of small business and furnish technical and marketing advice. They include the legal, statistical, information and administrative divisions of SWPC.

Wallace plans to wrap them into his own operations in the small-business field. He will create a new small-business bureau which will become one of three major divisions of the Commerce Department. The others will be foreign trade and domestic economy.

Maverick's agency has loaned about $500,000,000 to small firms with an average loss of less than one half of one per cent. Besides the $200,000,000 revolving fund already in hand, Congress has authorized $150,000,000 more when and if needed.

Besides Maverick, the SWPC board of directors includes James T. Howington, vice chairman; C. Edward Rowe, Patrick W. McDonough and Laurence Arnold.

Canada To Aid In Rail Jam

Washington, Dec. 27 (AP)—Canadian railroads have agreed to make available "all possible spare cars" to help transport American service men home from Pacific ports, Senator Mead (D., N.Y.) said today.

Mead, chairman of the War Investigating Committee which has been looking into transportation bottlenecks, said the Canadian transport comptroller had given the assurance to Col. J. Monroe Johnson, director of the Office of Defense Transportation.

He also reported in a statement that airlines, which had hoped to carry 100,000 troops a month across the country, had been able to accommodate only about 53,000 as a result of weather conditions and manpower shortages.

To Return Idle Cargo Ships

The War and Navy departments have advised the committee, Mead added, that efforts will be made to return idle cargo ships and crews from the Pacific to the United States to ease difficulties of coastwise transport.

Committee inquiries brought out, he said, that approximately 10,000 merchant seamen were now being held on the idle cargo ships.

Meanwhile, the Navy reported it had discharged approximately 1,154,305 men and women between September 2 and December 22, about 45,000 more than anticipated under original schedules. Through the same date, the Marine Corps had released 176,334 and the Coast Guard, 68,428.

The Army reported yesterday it had demobilized 4,466,000 between V-E day, May 12, and December 21. Since September 2, the total amounted to 3,874,000.

GI's Killed By Heavy Heas En Route Home

Washington, Dec. 27 (AP)—The War Department tonight disclosed that two men are dead, one missing and 22 injured as a result of heavy seas encountered last week by the U.S.S. Portland en route to New York from Europe.

The dead are Sergt. Noah L. Daniels, Amity, Ark., and Sergt. Louis S. Csurics, Steelton, Pa.

The missing soldier is Sergt. J. M. Lewis, Springfield, Col.

G.M. TO GIVE ITS STAND TO FACT BOARD

Firm To Be Represented Today At 2d Hearing Before Truman Group

Detroit, Dec. 27 (AP)—A representative of strike-bound General Motors will present a formal statement "regarding our position with respect to further proceedings" to President's Truman's fact-finding board when it reconvenes in Washington tomorrow, the corporation said tonight.

C. E. Wilson, president, revealed this move in a belated and brief statement late today when he announced that General Motors will be represented at the second hearing before the board. Wilson declined to disclose who would be on hand to do the corporation's talking.

Formal Statement Planned

The statement by Wilson said:

"General Motors will be represented, at which time a formal statement will be made regarding our position with respect to the further proceedings of the board."

The striking CIO's United Auto Workers had announced some 24 hours earlier that it would send a delegation in an effort to find a solution to the strike that has kept 175,000 G.M. production workers idle more than five weeks.

The union president, R. J. Thomas, and its vice president, Walter J. Reuther, headed a union group which left today for Washington.

A 30 per cent wage-rate increase from the nation's motorcar industry has been demanded by the UAW-CIO, which struck at General Motors plants November 21.

Throughout the negotiations with the union G.M. has insisted its prices and profits were not a subject for collective bargaining.

Truman's Position

As the fact-finding board adjourned its hearings last week it had been told by President Truman that it had an "unquestionable" right to consider a company's ability to pay as a factor in making recommendations for settling a dispute.

The auto union resumed negotiations today with Kaiser-Frazer Corporation, newcomer to the automotive industry. A joint statement said Kaiser-Frazer presented counterproposals to those made by the union on December 17.

"Not touched on so far," the statement said, "have been wages, company security and union security."

Both sides said substantial progress had been made "and agreement has been reached on most issues."

The union has demanded of Kaiser-Frazer a wage equal to 30 per cent more than the present wage rate prevailing at the Ford Motor Company.

Chrysler Gives View

Chrysler Corporation today told Norman Matthews, the UAW-CIO national Chrysler director, that his criticism of the company's action in distributing vacation pay differed "completely" from opinions previously expressed by the international union.

Matthews had accused the company of violating the National Labor Relations Act in making the distribution following the termination of the contract between the company and union. He explained the union intended to seek an increase in the amounts distributed.

Robert W. Conder, Chrysler director of labor relations, in a letter to Matthews said that when he informed the union on December 12 that the company intended to make the payment as usual "the union expressed distinct pleasure with the company's offer to make a payment at all under present conditions."

In near-by Windsor, Ontario, today machines hummed in the Ford Motor Company of Canada, Ltd., plants for the first time since September 12, when a strike over wages, union security and other demands of the UAW-CIO made 10,000 workers idle.

Approximately 900 production workers were recalled today and others will be called back as soon as an adequate stock of materials can be obtained.

The disputed issues, meanwhile, are to be turned over to a Government-appointed arbitration panel.

Electrical, Telephone Strikes Are Threatened

New York, Dec. 27 (AP)—The possibility of two big strikes increased the nation's industrial problems tonight.

The new strikes—notices of which have been served by two unions—would affect the electrical and telephone industries.

Officials of the CIO-United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers in New York termed a walkout of 200,000 workers in plants of General Motors, Westinghouse and General Electric "inevitable" and said it might be called late next week.

Meeting Set Jaunary 2

The Government hoped a meeting set for January 2 among Federal labor conciliators, General Electric and Westinghouse might avert the strike.

The executive board of the ERMW meets January 5 to arrange the walkout, authorized by the union membership in support of demands for a $2-a-day wage-rate increase.

Meanwhile, independent - union spokesmen said a nation-wide work stoppage by telephone employés might result from a strike set for next Thursday by Western Electric Company workers in the New York-New Jersey area.

Henry Mayer, counsel for the independent Western Electric Employés Association, affiliated with the independent National Federation of Telephone Workers, said the Western Electric strikers would establish picket lines around telephone companies in New York and New Jersey January 3.

30% Boost Sought

The Western Electric workers are seeking a 30 per cent wage increase. Mayer said that if the strike continued and "additional pressure" was believed necessary to support the wage demand, picket lines would spread to all Bell System companies using W.E. equipment.

Joseph A. Beirne, president of the telephone workers, said his group would support the W.E. strike. Western Electric spokesmen, however, said the company "always welcomes a resumption of negotiations in the hope of reaching an accord." The union has rejected a company offer of a fifteen per cent wage increase.

Six Seized In Plant Picketing

With the arrest of the six men, police reported, pickets made no further effort to stop about 200 management officials and foremen from entering the plant.

That group had been permitted free access to the plant since Gov. Raymond E. Baldwin conferred here three weeks ago with management, union and city officials.

More than 3,000 workers have been idle since two locals of the IAM called a strike in demands for a closed shop and a 30 per cent wage increase.

China Pays $250,000 to U. S.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27 (AP).—China has made a $250,000 payment to the Reclamation Bureau to cover initial costs of developing plans to harness the Yangtze River.

Reporting the payment today, Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes estimated the cost of the planning work at $500,000. The initial $250,000 payment was made through the New York office of the National Resources Commission of China.

Under a recently negotiated contract, the Reclamation Bureau will prepare plans for huge irrigation and hydro-electric projects to conserve and control waters of the Yangtze. Financing and construction will be in the hands of the Chinese government.

Adm. Sherman Is Named To Command 5th Fleet

Adm. Barbey to Head Atlantic Amphibious Forces

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27 (AP).—Vice-Admiral Frederick C. Sherman, of Coronado, Calif., was ordered to command of the 5th Fleet today, succeeding Admiral John H. Towers.

At the same time, Vice-Admiral Daniel E. Barbey, of Portland, Ore., now commander of amphibious forces of the 7th Fleet, was ordered to duty as commander of amphibious forces in the Atlantic.

The Navy also reported that Rear Admiral Thomas L. Sprague, of Coronado, would take over his new assignment as assistant chief of naval personnel on Jan. 10.

Admiral Sprague will succeed

DEC 28 1945

DEC 28 1945

Rear Admiral William M. Fechteler, of Washington, who will become commander of battleships and cruisers, Atlantic Fleet, with the rank of vice-admiral.

Admiral Sprague, fifty-one, who has been commander of Pacific carrier divisions, has been a qualified naval aviator for twenty-five years. His assignment is in line with recently announced naval policy putting qualified aviators in at least half of the Navy's top positions.

Admiral Sherman has been commander of the 1st Carrier Task Force since July, 1945, when he succeeded Vice-Admiral Marc A. Mitscher.

Admiral Towers is due to succeed Admiral Raymond A. Spruance as commander of the Pacific Fleet.

Speed Asked on Cases Of German Internees

Washington, Dec. 26 (A. P.).—The Department of Justice asked the Court of Appeals today to act speedily on the cases of a group of German internees who are challenging the Government's right to send them back to their native land.

Officials said it was costing the Government $1.21 a person a day to maintain 542 German internees in this country. Three suits for about 150 are holding up their return to Germany, according to C. Edward Rhetts, acting head of the War Division. Among their claims was that they were not given appropriate hearings and the Enemy Alien act under which the Government seeks to deport them is no longer valid.

President Ends Holiday Visit In Home State

Orders Plane Readied for Return to Washington; to Leave This Morning

KANSAS CITY, Dec. 27 (AP).—President Truman ordered his big C-54 readied tonight for his return to Washington as his Christmas holiday came to an end with another round of visiting and hand shaking.

The Sacred Cow, in which he flew to Kansas City Christmas Day, was scheduled to take off at 8:30 a. m. tomorrow for the capital where he will begin work on a nation-wide speech to the people.

The President's activities were highlighted by an informal lunch where he was guest of newspaper men, radio and photographic representatives who accompanied him on his trip to Missouri.

The President was in a jovial mood. Earlier in the day he had dropped by the offices of his home-town newspaper, "The Independence Examiner," where he talked with Colonel William Southern, its owner since 1898, and members of the staff.

Has 200 Callers

From there he went to his offices in the Federal Building to shake hands with upward of 200 callers, including Eddie Jacobson, his former haberdashery store partner.

Others who stopped in to see Mr. Truman included Major General Ralph Truman, his cousin; Mayor Gage of Kansas City, Jim Pendergast, nephew of the late T. J. Pendergast, and a half-dozen members of his World War I outfit, Battery D. He also had an opportunity to talk with Theodore Quinn, postmaster from St. Joseph, Mo., long among his close friends.

At the newspaper luncheon, the guests included the President's brother, Vivian Truman; Thomas Evans, Kansas City drug store and radio executive; Ted Marks, Kansas City, who recently completed a mission in China for the President; Colonel Southern, and Roy Roberts, managing editor of "The Kansas City Star."

Mr. Truman slipped away from the press luncheon long enough to put in an appearance at a Rotary Club luncheon, also at the Hotel Muehlebach, where he was introduced to sons and daughters of Kansas City Rotarians by Cecil Bathurst, the president, and H. Roe Bartle, Boy Scout executive.

May Visit Mother Again

After luncheon, the President retired to the hotel penthouse for a brief nap before returning to Independence. He hoped to have one more visit with his mother, Mrs. Martha E. Truman, at Grandview, before his return to Washington.

He made it clear that he would begin work at once on two major public addresses. The first will be his radio speech, the first week in January, which will be an appeal to the people in behalf of labor and other legislative proposals he has submitted Congress as part of an over-all Administration post-war program.

The second will be his formal message to the Congress on the state of the nation.

White House officials have indicated that the latter may be broadcast by television if the President delivers it in person.

Stowaway's Husband Flying Here To Get Her Into U.S.

Wichita Falls, Texas, Dec. 27 (AP). John William Morgan, of Wichita Falls, is flying today to Baltimore to help get his stowaway British wife into the United States.

He has five days in which to assure the entry of Brenda Morgan, waiting on the freighter Empire Shamoise which docked in Baltimore yesterday after leaving England December 7.

Coming By Plane

Morgan's mother, Mrs. Ethel Morgan, said that Morgan left Dallas by plane today.

Brenda, who had just turned 19 at the time of her marriage to the American infantry lieutenant, was reported to have stowed away on the freighter after she had been advised she could not hope to sail for the United States with the first contingent of English wives of American soldiers.

She had planned to land at Nova Scotia where an aunt resided. She had sailed when her husband's cable advising her to wait reached England.

Will Live In Wichita Falls

Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Harris, of Eastville, near Bristol.

Morgan served with the 1st Army, and began overseas service in 1943. He fought in North Africa and Sicily and later in Europe where he participated in the Battle of the Bulge. He met Brenda at Bristol and knew her a year and a half before they married.

Mrs. Morgan said the young couple plans to live with her in Wichita Falls temporarily.

U.S. Agents Investigate Collaboration In Japan

Lincoln, Neb., Dec. 27 (AP)—Attorney General Tom Clark announced today that Justice Department investigators are being sent to the Philippines and Japan to check into the activities or collaborationists during the war.

He announced also that agents are being sent to Europe to investigate ownership by Germans of stock in American corporations.

"We want to see to it that the same thing doesn't happen as did after the last war, when Germans continued to hold stock, often through neutrals," Clark said at a news conference. He arrived in Lincoln by plane to speak at the annual dinner of the Nebraska State Bar Association.

Ex-Civilian Prisoners Of Japs To Be Drafted

Denver, Dec. 27 (AP)—State Selective Service officials indicated today that under present regulations the yhad no choice but to draft three Denver youths called up by their draft boards despite the fact that all three suffered hardships as civilian prisoners of the Japs in Philippine internment camps.

Commenting on a protest by an American Legion post in Denver against the induction of the three, Col. H. E. Reed, State selective service director, said:

"We haven't any choice in the matter under present regulations but to draft them if they answer selective service requirements."

GI's Honor Red Cross Girl Killed In Europe

Montgomery, Ala., Dec. 27 (AP)—Spontaneous contributions from Japanese-American soldiers she had befriended went into a college scholarship fund today in memory of a Montgomery Red Cross worker killed in Germany.

A money-order for several hundred dollars, along with a letter expressing "our deepest sympathy" addressed to the parents of Harriet Engelhardt, voiced the condolences of the 522d Field Artillery Battalion, composed of Japanese-Americans.

Miss Engelhardt was one of three Red Cross girls attached for a time to the battalion in Germany. She was killed in a jeep accident month.

To the money the fighting me donated, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Engelhardt added a sum of their own and put it aside for a scholarship for "some deserving girl." It will serve, Mrs. Engelhardt said, as a "living memorial" to their daughter.

'LUXURY' NURSES ARRIVE IN FORT DIX

12 From Leyte Rode In Jeffers's Private Railroad Car

Fort Dix, N.J., Dec. 27 (AP)—Twelve army nurses from Leyte are at the Fort Dix separation center today after traveling most of the way from Los Angeles in the luxury of the private railroad car of William M. Jeffers, president of the Union Pacific Railroad.

Jeffers offered his richly appointed car last Friday, when it appeared that the nurses would be among the thousands of service men and women stranded on the West Coast over the holidays. The twelve were the lucky ones drawn by the Army to take advantage of the Jeffers's offer.

"Like A Dream Come True"

"It was like a dream come true," said First Lieutenant Sue A. Allard, of Endicott, N.Y., speaking for herself and the other nurses.

"Especially after a year of roughing it in the Philippines, everything was like a luxurious hotel. We had Mr. Jeffers's private porter, and a chef who turned out the most wonderful meals. No C-rations, either.

"Mr Jeffers was a real Santa Claus to us," she continued. "He sent us individual Merry Christmas telegrams."

Telephone Jeffers

Lieutenant Allard telephoned the thanks of the nurses to Jeffers in Los Angeles, and when they stopped at North Platte, Neb., she phoned him again to tell him how well the trip was going.

The dream ended in Chicago, where the girls changed to a troop train which brought them into Fort Dix Christmas midnight. The dream will start again with new variations sometime tomorrow when they all will receive their discharge papers and start trips home.

Bulk Of GI's To Dock In N.Y.

New York, Dec. 27 (AP)—New will shortly be the only official East Coast port of arrival for homebound troops, the Army said today.

Heretofore, the city has received about one-half the returning traffic, with the remainder being split among Boston, Philadelphia and Newport News, Va., but local port of embarkation officers reported that beginning Monday, Boston would cease to be an official port, with Newport News following on February 1.

Philadelphia's Status

Philadelphia has received only small, occasional groups of homebound veterans in the past and probably will continue to receive them in the future in the same small quantities, while an occasional shipload will be diverted from New York to Boston or Newport News, army officers reported they had been instructed by the War Department.

New York port officials said they expected that all high-point men would be returned from Europe by the middle of January, barring unforeseen events, and that the only men left there would be occupation forces, estimated at about 400,000, and those needed for guarding United States property.

After that time, local port officers predicted, homeward troop movements would not cease, but they would consist only of soldiers on European duty for whom replacements had been made.

106 Delayed Sailings In Day

New York, Dec. 27 (AP)—The War Shipping Administration said today an "extremely critical" delay in ship sailings from Atlantic Coast ports was affecting shipment of food, coal and other relief supplies and threatened the return of troops.

Capt. Hewlett R. Bishop, WSA Atlantic Coast director, said there were 106 delayed sailings today and that the principal factor in the delays was crew shortages caused by seamen spending Christmas at their homes.

Bishop said the delayed sailings were: New York, 49, including three troopships; Boston, three; Philadelphia, ten; Baltimore, fourteen; Norfolk, 24, including three troopships, and Charleston, six.

Stettinius To Leave For England This Week

New York, Dec. 27 (AP)—Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., United States representative to the United Nations Organization, said today he would leave this week end for England aboard the Queen Elizabeth to resume his duties with the international organization.

Stettinius arrived at LaGuardia Field by ATC plane from Washington. He had been recuperating from an operation for gall stones which he underwent here October 17.

An exact sailing date for the Queen Elizabeth has not been announced.

Blind Boy, GI 'Daddy' Due At Hopkins Today

New York, Dec. 27 [Special]—After "seeing" New York with his "GI daddy," Giuliano Cabbia, 8-year-old blind Italian boy befriended by the 88th Division in Italy, will leave for Baltimore at 10.30 A.M. tomorrow on a train due to arrive there at 1.42 P.M.

Blinded by a kick from a horse belonging to the Germans, the boy is being sent to the Johns Hopkins Hospital for surgery and treatment on a $3,500 fund raised by officers and men of the 88th Division.

His "GI daddy" on the tour of New York and the trip to Baltimore is Pfc. Howard W. Gorgas, combat infantryman and former Y.M.C.A. worker from Montpelier, Ohio, who was the first to befriend the boy when he was found lying in a ditch in Italy.

MAYOR HELPS ITALIAN BOY

Gives 2 Pairs of Shoes to Youngster, Who Is Almost Blind

Mayor La Guardia made a gift of two pairs of shoes yesterday to 8-year-old Gianfranco Cabbia, the nearly-blind Italian boy who was brought to the United States on Christmas Day by the men of the Eighty-eighth Division, aboard the aircraft carrier Randolph. The youngster, accompanied by Pfc. Howard W. Gorgas of Montpelier, Ohio, who first befriended him a year ago in Italy, was the Mayor's guest at City Hall.

In a thirty-minute chat with the Mayor it developed that the lad had had trouble in finding properly fitting shoes. The Mayor promptly arranged to have two pairs set aside for the boy at a midtown store.

Young Cabbia, whose near-blindness was caused by a kick from a horse, will go to Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore today to undergo an operation for which the members of the Eighty-eighth Division have raised $3,500.

Pope Pius Places Hope In America

New York, Dec. 27 (AP)—Pope Pius XII said in a Christmas message made public today that "into the hands of America, God has placed the destinies of afflicted humanity."

The Pope's views were expressed in an article published in the current issue of Collier's Magazine and presented by Cardinal-Designate Francis J. Spellman.

Declaring that the "American people have a genius for splendid and unselfish action," the Pope told Americans to "increase" the flame of brotherly love.

"Return To Unity"

"There is only one way of escaping from the mesh in which war and hate have wrapped the world," the Pope said. "That way is a return to unity, a unity not restricted to any one people, but a universal solidarity established on the foundation of mutual interests and common destinies of all peoples."

The gravest obstacle to such unity is the disruption of the family caused by war, the Pope declared. War caused "the greatest and most tragic migration of peoples in all history," he said.

"In these homeless masses is the yeast for revolution and disorder," he said, calling on women especially to "help reconstruct the family, resanctify the home, restore society, re-establish peace."

Socialism And Communism

The indispensable element in a peaceful world, Pope Pius said, is "mutual trust based on the belief that each party will respect its plighted word and the conviction that 'better is wisdom than weapons of war.'"

He said the church "contradicts and condemns various forms of Marxist socialism and atheistic Communism as enemies of Christion civilization and world peace," he added.

"She contradicts and condemns state absolutism based on the false principle that the authority of the State is unlimited and controls the entire field of public and private life, invading even the realm of ideas, beliefs and conscience."

homes, relaxed today after the trip by making plans for a return coast-to-coast jaunt with five service men as fares.

The Marines, all veterans of the Pacific, hired Arisohn in Los Angeles Saturday to beat the West Coast transportation jam. They paid him $40 each for the ride.

To Leave Tomorrow

Four of the Leathernecks arrived here before dawn today after dropping off one of their buddies at his Pittsburgh home and another in Pennsylvania, where he boarded a train for Niagara Falls, N.Y.

Resting in his brother Al's Bronx home, Arisohn said he planned to leave New York city Saturday. His service men-passengers will share expenses and driving, as did the eastbound contingent.

The 37-year-old taxi driver said he made the trip east for two reasons:

To see his family for the first time in five years and because he "had a heart" and heeded the pleadings of the Marines that he "get them out of Los Angeles and home."

72 Hours' Driving Time

The 3,200-mile trip took 84 hours, 72 of which were spent in driving. The only trouble encountered was an engine mishap in Tucson, Ariz., and a blizzard in Indiana.

Arriving in New York were Sergt. Sam Steinman and Sergt. Gordon W. Edwards, of New York; Pfc. Ralph Minichino, of Mount Vernon, N. Y., a distant relative of Arisohn who promoted the trans-continental taxi trip, and Staff Sergeant George Shepard of Woodstock, N.H.

Tech. Sergt. Joseph Ward got out in Pittsburgh, while Tech. Sergt. George Upton headed for Niagara Falls.

Steinman stepped out of the 1941 sedan at Grand Central Station—and promptly hopped into another taxi.

"I was so tired and I wanted to get home so quickly," he explained later, "I just hired another taxi."

6th Army to Wreck Machine Unless Order Is Revoked

One Japanese Cyclotron Is Reported Still Existing

One of Japan's four cyclotrons, ordered destroyed by the War Department, is still in existence and available for study, George Thomas Folster, of the National Broadcasting Company radioed last night from Tokyo.

However, the original order from Washington to destroy all Japanese cyclotrons still stands, the N. B. C. reporter said, and it will be carried out as soon as an ordnance officer has time, if it is not countermanded.

According to Mr. Folster, another N. B. C. reporter, Guthrie Janssen, visited the Imperial University which housed the cyclotron, the second biggest in the country, and found that the 6th Army had removed it, chopped away its base and cut it into several pieces. But the dismantled cyclotron is now at Kobe, available for inspection and study if Washington gives the word.

(ADVANCE FOR USE AT 10 P.M., EASTERN STANDARD TIME TONIGHT, THURSDAY, DEC. 27)

BY JOHN A. PARRIS

(ADVANCE) LONDON, DEC. 27-(AP)-THE BIG THREE SUCCEEDED IN DOING THINGS WHERE THE FIVE-POWER CONFERENCE OF FOREIGN MINISTERS FAILED DISMALLY.

A COMPARISON OF THE LONDON AND MOSCOW CONFERENCES, DIPLOMATIC SOURCES SAID TONIGHT, IS AS EASY AS DISTINGUISHING BETWEEN NIGHT AND DAY.

WHILE THE FIVE-POWER COUNCIL FAILED IN LONDON LAST FALL TO REACH A DECISION ON A SINGLE IMPORTANT ISSUE OF EUROPEAN PEACE--THE PROBLEM ON WHICH THE OTHER MAJOR DECISIONS HINGED--THE BIG THREE CONFERENCE OF THE UNITED STATES, BRITISH AND RUSSIAN FOREIGN MINISTERS AGREED ON THE MANY OUTSTANDING QUESTIONS OF THE DAY.

AFTER FAILURE OF THE LONDON CONFERENCE, SOME COMMENTATORS BLAMED ITS UNSUCCESSFUL CONCLUSION ON THE ATOMIC BOMB. ONE LONDON NEWSPAPER CARRIED A CARTOON SHOWING THE FOREIGN MINISTERS OF THE UNITED STATES, GREAT BRITAIN, RUSSIA, FRANCE AND CHINA SEATED AT A TABLE WITH AN ATOMIC BOMB OVERHEAD.

NOW STEPS HAVE BEEN TAKEN BY THE BIG THREE WHO CONCLUDED THEIR MEETING IN MOSCOW TODAY TO PLACE THE CONTROL OF ATOMIC ENERGY WITH THE UNITED NATIONS 11-MEMBER SECURITY COUNCIL.

DIPLOMATIC QUARTERS EMPHASIZED THAT WHILE THE FIVE-POWER FOREIGN MINISTERS WERE UNABLE TO AGREE, THE BIG THREE HAD FAR EXCEEDED THEIR MOST OPTIMISTIC HOPES IN REACHING DECISIONS BY AGREEING ON THE PROCEDURE FOR ESTABLISHING EUROPEAN PEACE.

THUS THE BIG THREE HAVE MADE IT POSSIBLE FOR THE FIVE-POWER DEPUTIES TO DEAL WITH THE MAJOR EUROPEAN ISSUES SUCH AS ITALIAN COLONIES, THE ITALO-YUGOSLAV FRONTIER DISPUTES, ITALIAN REPARATIONS, AND DRAFTING OF TREATIES FOR ROMANIA, BULGARIA AND HUNGARY, AS WELL AS FOR ITALY AND FINLAND.

THE ATMOSPHERE OF THE LONDON CONFERENCE WAS TENSE AND CLOUDED WITH SUSPICION, AND HARSH WORDS PASSED BETWEEN SOME MEMBERS OF THE CONFEREES, WITH FOREIGN COMMISSAR MOLOTOV THREATENING TO WALK OUT AND RETURN TO RUSSIA.

THERE WAS EVERY INDICATION FROM THE SOVIET CAPITAL THAT THE MOSCOW TALKS WERE HELD UNDER EXTREMELY FRIENDLY AND CORDIAL CONDITIONS. THE FIVE-POWER TALKS IN LONDON LASTED THREE WEEKS, WHILE THE MOSCOW DISCUSSIONS TOOK ONLY 11 DAYS.

WHEN RESULTS OF THE LONDON FIVE-POWER PARLEY WERE MADE KNOWN, OBSERVERS HELD OUT LITTLE, IF ANY, HOPE FOR FUTURE ACCORD, AND A WAVE OF PESSIMISM SWEPT 'ROUND THE WORLD. THE MOSCOW CONFERENCE, IN THE OPINION OF LONDON DIPLOMATS, PROMISES A REVIVAL OF THE COOPERATION AND TRUST THAT EXISTED AMONG THE BIG POWERS DURING THE WAR.

LONDON, DEC. 27-(AP)-PRIME MINISTER CLEMENT ATTLEE BEGAN TALKS THIS AFTERNOON WITH DUTCH OFFICIALS IN AN EFFORT TO SETTLE THE INDONESIAN CRISIS.

(THE ANETA NEWS AGENCY REPORTED TONIGHT THAT THE DISCUSSIONS HAD MADE "SATISFACTORY PROGRESS" AND THAT THE CONFERENCE HAD VIRTUALLY COMPLETED ITS BUSINESS IN THE FIRST OF TWO SCHEDULED DAYS.)

THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT WAS UNDERSTOOD TO BE PRESSING THE DUTCH TO RECOGNIZE THE SELF-PROCLAIMED INDONESIAN REPUBLIC.

DUTCH OFFICIALS CONFERRING WITH ATTLEE INCLUDED PRIME MINISTER WILHELM SCHERMERHAM AND DR.J.H.VAN MOOK, LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR GENERAL OF THE NETHERLANDS EAST INDIES. REPORTS FROM AMSTERDAM SAID GOOD SOURCES IN THE HAGUE MAINTAINED EVEN IN THE FACES OF DENIALS FROM SOME QUARTERS THAT VAN MOOK HAD RECOMMENDED RECOGNITION OF THE REGIME OF SUTAN SJAHRIR, PREMIER OF THE SELF-STYLED INDONESIAN REPUBLIC. THESE REPORTS SAID THAT VAN MOOK MIGHT NOT NECESSARILY MEAN RECOGNITION OF THE REPUBLIC AS AN AUTONOMOUS GOVERNING BODY, BUT RECOGNITION OF THE SJAHRIR REGIME WHICH THEN WOULD ACT UNDER THE DIRECT GUIDANCE AND SUPERVISION OF THE NETHERLANDS GOVERNMENT.

A DIPLOMATIC WRITER IN THE LONDON DAILY TELEGRAPH SAID "THERE IS A STRONG DESIRE ON THE BRITISH SIDE FOR SETTLEMENT ALONG LIBERAL LINES."

"I UNDERSTAND," THE WRITER ADDED, "THAT THE SPIRIT OF ACCOMODATION PREVAILS AND THAT THERE IS LIKELIHOOD THAT AN OFFER OF CONSIDERABLE SELF-GOVERNMENT WILL BE MADE TO THE INDONESIANS."

BERLIN, DEC 27-(AP)-AMERICAN MILITARY AUTHORITIES AND GERMAN CIVILIAN POLICE PRESSED A HOUSE-TO-HOUSE SEARCH IN THE TEMPEL-HOF AIRDROME DISTRICT TODAY FOR THE PERSONS RESPONSIBLE FOR THE CHRISTMAS EVE SLAYING OF TWO AMERICAN SOLDIERS.

REPORTS OF THE SHOOTING WERE CONFIRMED OFFICIALLY YESTERDAY BY U.S. ARMY AUTHORITIES, WHO SAID THE TWO MEN HAD BEEN SHOT THROUGH THE HEAD WITH A .38 CALIBER GUN. POLICE SAID THEY WERE UNABLE TO DISCOVER A MOTIVE FOR THE SHOOTINGS -- THE FIRST TO TAKE THE LIFE OF AN AMERICAN SOLDIER SINCE THE OCCUPATION OF BERLIN.

THE VICTIMS WERE SGT.ERNEST L.BAUER OF WARSAW, N.Y., AND SGT.STANLEY C.CRANSTON OF 11 UNION STREET, WARREN, R.I.

INGARD GROSSA, 19, GERMAN GIRL, TOLD AMERICAN AUTHORITIES SHE AND ONE OF THE SOLDIERS WERE WALKING DOWN THE STREET AFTER VISITING A CAFE WHEN THEY HEARD A SHOT AND SAW A FLASH CLOSE BY.

SHE SAID THEY THOUGHT BOYS WERE SHOOTING FIRECRACKERS, WHEN TWO UNIFORMED MEN SHE RECOGNIZED AS RUSSIANS APPROACHED. ONE OF THE MEN, THE GIRL DECLARED, STAYED ON THE DARKENED SIDEWALK AND THE OTHER MET THEM IN THE STREET AND ASKED IN BROKEN ENGLISH, "ARE YOU AN AMERICAN?"

30.27-32679

SHE SAID THE AMERICAN SAID "YES", AND HIS ASSAILANT THEN DREW A GUN AND FIRED AT HIM TWICE.

THE BODY OF THE OTHER AMERICAN WAS FOUND IN THE STREET ABOUT 50 YARDS AWAY. HE WAS PREVIOUSLY SEEN BY FRIENDS OUTSIDE A THEATER EARLY THAT MORNING AND LATER WITH A GIRL WHO HAS NOT YET BEEN FOUND.

INVESTIGATION ALSO IS BEING MADE OF THE SHOOTING OF FRITZ HERBER-HOLTZ, 29, GERMAN THEATER ACTOR, LAST NIGHT IN THE ANHALTER STATION AREA.

MARGOT MOOS, ACTRESS, TOLD POLICE SHE WAS SAYING GOODNIGHT TO HERBERHOLTZ WHEN THEY HEARD DRUNKEN VOICES AND RAN TOWARD THE FRONT DOOR OF HER APARTMENT. THE ACTRESS SAID SHE HEARD SHOTS AND HERBERHOLTZ COLLAPSED.

(ADVANCE)..BERLIN, DEC 27-(AP)-A PLANNED ECONOMY FOR INDUSTRY AND BUSINESS AND WIDESPREAD REVISION OF LAND OWNERSHIP ARE THE BASIS OF THE SOVIET PROGRAM IN RUSSIAN-OCCUPIED GERMANY.

GERMAN GOVERNMENT LEADERS SAY THE PROGRAM IS PROGRESSING SATISFACTORILY DESPITE INITIAL HARDSHIPS. THE REACTION OF THE GERMAN LITTLE MAN RANGES FROM COURAGEOUS OPTIMISM AMONG THE NEW FARMERS TO HELPLESS DOUBT IN BRESLAU AND COMPLAINTS IN THE STREETS OF HALLE AND LEIPZIG.

THE PROGRAM OF SOVIETIZATION IS BEING CARRIED OUT WITH VETERAN COMMUNISTS IN KEY POSTS. INDUSTRY, FARMING AND MINING ARE LARGELY UNDER CONTROL OF GERMAN PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENTS, AIDED AND SUPPORTED BY THE RUSSIAN MILITARY GOVERNMENT.

THE SOVIET-SPONSORED PROGRAM WAS OBSERVED AT WORK IN AN AREA WHICH LARGELY ESCAPED THE TERRIFIC BOMB DAMAGE INFLICTED ON WESTERN GERMANY. IT IS A REGION WHICH IS RICH AGRICULTURALLY BUT WHICH IS FACED WITH A TREMENDOUS REFUGEE PROBLEM.

DEC 28 1945

THE PEOPLE COMPLAINED CHIEFLY OF SHORTAGES OF FOOD AND CLOTHING, BUT RUSSIAN MILITARY GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS SAID THERE WAS NO SIGN OF DESPONDENCY OR INSURGENCE.

DESPITE THE LARGE REFUGEE INFLUX, RUSSIAN OFFICIALS SAID THAT RATION QUOTAS WERE BEING MET, AND THAT PERMISSION FOR FARMERS TO SELL PART OF THEIR PRODUCE ON THE OPEN MARKET ENABLED MANY TO GET MEATS AND FATS. BROWN COAL WAS AVAILABLE IN SOME AREAS.

THERE WAS OBVIOUSLY LESS OPEN FRATERNIZING BETWEEN THE RUSSIANS AND GERMAN GIRLS THAN IN THE AMERICAN ZONE.

IN HALLE, SAXONY, A GERMAN GOVERNMENT SPOKESMAN SAID INDUSTRIAL PRODUCTION IN MANY RESPECTS WAS AHEAD OF THAT IN THE WESTERN ZONES, DESPITE HEAVY REPARATIONS STILL BEING EXACTED BY SOVIET OCCUPYING FORCES.

DR. ERHARD HUBNER, SOVIET-APPOINTED PRESIDENT OF THE GERMAN PROVINCIAL ADMINISTRATION, WHOSE OFFICES ARE IN HALLE, SAID THE RUSSIANS "ARE LEAVING US ENOUGH TO SUPPORT OUR POPULATION -- ON A SOMEWHAT MORE MODEST SCALE, OF COURSE."

HE SAID THAT 2,600 OF THE PROVINCE'S 3,100 FACTORIES EMPLOYING 10 OR MORE PERSONS WERE OPERATING IN VARYING RATES OF PRODUCTION.

MINISTERS (175)

MOSCOW, FRIDAY, DEC. 28-(AP)-THE DECISIONS REACHED AT THE THREE-POWER CONFERENCE OF FOREIGN MINISTERS WAS APPRAISED IN AUTHORITATIVE AMERICAN AND BRITISH QUARTERS HERE TODAY AS A MAJOR STEP FORWARD IN THE COLLABORATION OF THE UNITED STATES, GREAT BRITAIN

30.27-32681

AND RUSSIA.

WHILE THE MEETING DID NOT SOLVE ALL EXISTING PROBLEMS, THESE QUARTERS SAID, IT CLEARED THE ATMOSPHERE OF SUSPICION AND PUT COLLABORATION BETWEEN THE THREE NATIONS BACK ON THE RIGHT TRACK.

SOME OBSERVERS SAID THE GREATEST ACCOMPLISHMENT OF THE 11-DAY SESSION WHICH ENDED YESTERDAY WAS RUSSIA'S ACCEDING TO THE AGREEMENT ON ATOMIC POWER REACHED AT A RECENT MEETING OF BRITISH PRIME MINISTER CLEMENT ATTLEE, PRESIDENT TRUMAN AND CANADIAN PREMIER MACKENZIE KING.

IT WAS LEARNED IN INFORMED QUARTERS THAT FREE INSPECTION OF ATOMIC BOMB RESEARCH AND DATA AMONG NATIONS WAS NOT DISCUSSED DURING THE FOREIGN MINISTERS' CONSIDERATION OF THE ATOMIC QUESTION.

DR. JAMES B. CONANT, A MEMBER OF THE AMERICAN DELEGATION AND ATOMIC ADVISER, MET NO SOVIET SCIENTISTS DURING HIS STAY, IT WAS SAID, AND THE FEW RUSSIANS HE DID MEET WERE EDUCATORS AND DISCUSSED PURELY EDUCATIONAL MATTERS WITH HIM. CONANT IS PRESIDENT OF HARVARD UNIVERSITY.

AN OFFICIAL SOURCE ASSERTED THE MEETING'S "ACHIEVEMENTS ARE AS BROAD AND WIDE AS THOSE OF THE YALTA CONFERENCE."

ON THE AGENDA WERE EXCHANGES OF VIEWS ON GERMANY AND IRAN, ALTHOUGH NO DECISIONS WERE REACHED, IT WAS SAID. THE CONFEREES DID NOT DISCUSS MATTERS PERTAINING TO THE DARDANELLES, GREECE OR THE PROBLEM OF TRUSTEESHIPS FOR NATIONS, EXCEPT FOR KOREA.

THE DECISIONS CONCERNING JAPAN WERE LENGTHY AND CONSUMED MUCH OF THE CONFERENCE TIME, BUT A NUMBER OF OBSERVERS SAID THEY REPRESENTED A FAIR COMPROMISE BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND SOVIET POSITIONS.

BRITISH AND AMERICAN CIRCLES SAID THE DECISIONS ON THE BALKAN QUESTION POSSIBLY MIGHT SETTLE THAT TROUBLESOME PROBLEM FOR GOOD.

THE KOREAN DECISION, WHICH SETS UP AN AMERICAN AND RUSSIAN COMMISSION, WAS LOOKED UPON HERE WITH GREAT INTEREST BECAUSE IT WAS THE FIRST REAL TEST TO DETERMINE HOW THE REPRESENTATIVES OF TWO COUNTRIES COULD COOPERATE ON OCCUPATION. MEMBERS OF THE BYRNES DELEGATION PRAISED THE KOREAN DECISION HIGHLY.

NEW DELHI, DEC. 27-(AP)-UNITED STATES SURPLUS PROPERTY IN INDIA, WITH A BOOK VALUE PROBABLY EXCEEDING $500,000,000 WILL BE SOLD TO THE INDIAN GOVERNMENT UNDER AN AGREEMENT REACHED MONDAY, IT WAS ANNOUNCED TODAY.

ONE OF THE GREATEST SINGLE TRANSACTIONS OF THIS NATURE IN HISTORY, THE DEAL IS INTENDED TO PREVENT ANY DISLOCATIONS OF THE INDIAN ECONOMY WHICH MIGHT HAVE RESULTED IF THE AMERICAN FOREIGN LIQUIDATION COMMISSION HAD CONTINUED A POLICY OF PIECEMEAL DISPOSAL.

THE $500,000,000 FIGURE DOES NOT REPRESENT ACTUAL SALES PRICES, AMERICAN LIQUIDATION OFFICIALS HERE EXPLAINED. THAT IS TO BE SETTLED, IT IS HOPED, IN JANUARY OF FEBRUARY AT WASHINGTON MEETINGS OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE TWO GOVERNMENTS WHO WILL ALSO CONSIDER LEND-LEASE AND RECIPROCAL AID OBLIGATIONS AND OTHER ECONOMIC PROBLEMS ARISING FROM THE WAR.

THE VOLUME OF SALES IN TONNAGE WILL NOT BE KNOWN UNTIL THE TRANSFER IS COMPLETE.

ACCORDING TO THE ANNOUNCED AIMS OF THE TWO GOVERNMENTS, THE DEAL IS EXPECTED TO ACCELERATE EVACUATION OF U.S. TROOPS FROM INDIA, CONTROL DISTRIBUTION OF SURPLUSES, FACILITATE ECONOMIC ADJUSTMENT AND SERVE THE GENERAL WELFARE OF THE INDIAN PEOPLE.

MAJ. GEN. THOMAS A. TERRY, THEATER COMMANDER, DECLARED, HOWEVER, THAT THE SALE WOULD NOT MATERIALLY AFFECT THE EVACUATION PROGRAM FOR SOME TIME --"CERTAINLY NOT FOR TWO MONTHS."

TERRY SAID THE DEVELOPMENT WOULD HAVE THE LONG RANGE RESULT OF SENDING THE AMERICAN TROOPS IN INDIA HOME EARLIER THAN PREVIOUSLY EXPECTED, BUT DECLARED THAT "INACTIVATION OF THE THEATER IS STILL MONTHS OFF AND SPECULATION ON IT IS IMPOSSIBLE AT THIS TIME."

ABOUT 50,000 AMERICAN TROOPS STILL WILL BE IN INDIA ON JAN. 1.

THE AGREEMENT WAS SEALED IN AN EXCHANGE OF LETTERS BETWEEN MAJ. GEN. DONALD H. CONNOLLY, DEPUTY FOREIGN LIQUIDATION COMMISSIONER, AND M.W.W. YEATTS, SUPPLY SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

GEN. CONNOLLY CAME TO NEW DELHI A FEW DAYS AGO FROM IRAN, HAVING COMPLETED A SIMILAR BULK SALE THERE, AND NOW IS EN ROUTE BY AIR BACK TO THE UNITED STATES.

AIM OF THE IRANIAN SALE WAS TO GET THE LAST CUSTODIAL CONTINGENTS OF AMERICAN TROOPS OUT OF THAT COUNTRY BY THE END OF THE YEAR. CONNOLLY, WHO HEADED THE PERSIAN GULF COMMAND WHICH HANDLED SUPPLIES TO RUSSIA, SAID THE DATE SET WOULD BE MET.

France, Italy Disappointed By Big 3 Work

Soviet Press Hails Teamwork Between Russia, Britain and U. S.

DEC 29 1945

London, Dec. 28 (AP)—France and Italy expressed disappointment today over some of the decisions of the Big Three conference of Foreign Ministers in Moscow, while the Soviet press hailed the parley as a new step toward collaboration of Russia, the United States and Great Britain.

The U. S. Embassy in Moscow said Deputy Foreign Commissar A. V. Vishinsky, British Ambassador Sir Archibald Clark Kerr and U. S. Ambassador W. Averell Harriman planned to leave tonight for Bucharest to carry out the agreement of the Big Three as it pertains to Romania.

The three diplomats were authorized to consult with King Mihai on broadening the present government and holding free elections. Thus paving the way for recognition by the United States and Great Britain.

British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin arrived in London tonight from Moscow, and newsmen who asked him what he thought might take place in the future received this quotation from St. Matthew, VI, 34, in reply:

"Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof."

London diplomats saw in the conference a revival of cooperation and trust among the big powers, but pointed out that many vital problems barring the way to world peace remain to be solved.

Bevin had told newsmen in Moscow that "if the decisions that were made are all carried out with understanding, that will lead to the next step and the solution of more problems."

In Paris the French cabinet decided to ask Washington, London and Moscow for clarification of certain points in the Big Three communique before announcing any adherence to the procedure announced for Balkan peace treaties. A Foreign Office spokesman said France was frankly dissatisfied at being left out as a drafter of peace in the Balkans.

It was learned that Foreign Minister Georges Bidault asked his colleagues to approve the peace treaty procedure, but that President De Gaulle spoke against it and it was decided to ask the Allies for additional information.

The spokesman charged that U. S. Secretary of State James F. Byrnes "backed down" from his position at the London conference of Foreign Ministers, at which Byrnes insisted despite Russian opposition that France be permitted a role in the Balkan peace drafting.

The spokesman said France was likewise disappointed in the role allotted to her on the Far Eastern commission, leaving her without the power to veto that she has on the United Nations Security Council.

He said the over-all procedure for concluding peace treaties was "anti-democratic," because the Soviet Union, America and Great Britain would establish the peace terms and "satellite countries" would merely ratify the decisions.

In Rome, a Foreign Ministry spokesman said the Moscow announcement "is undoubtedly a step backward from the Potsdam decision" with regard to the Italian question. Italy was particularly chagrined, he added, at not being granted precedence over Germany's Balkan satellites.

This official said Italy still hoped "her contribution to Allied victory will be recognized in the peace treaty."

In Moscow, the newspapers Pravda and Izvestia hailed the conference results. Pravda asserted that the decisions "upset the enemies of collaboration of the Allied powers. The conference is a new step forward in the cause of the accomplishment of such collaboration."

Izvestia echoed with the assertion that the ministers had found solutions for problems which some people were ready to say could not be solved.

The Communist press in Bucharest said the conference was a victory over "atomic diplomacy" and against "the forces of Fascism in Romania which are supported from the outside."

In Hungary, another of the Balkan countries with which peace pacts must be drawn, Foreign Minister Janos Kyongyosy said in a Budapest broadcast that Hungarian political circles were "generally pleased" with the conference results.

In China the decisions met a generally enthusiastic reception, with the Chinese feeling that they insured Chinese sovereignty in Manchuria and paved the way for achieving unity in the country.

But in Tokyo the Japanese viewed with dismay the decision to establish a four-power occupation council for Japan. Most observers in Tokyo regarded the decision as a Russian victory in international bargaining.

In Bombay, the Times of India found in the Big Three communique evidence that Russia was less disgruntled than some thought about the secretive attitude of her Allies on the atomic bomb. The paper said Russia's willingness to participate in the atomic commission was the "clearest current indication that Russia is emerging from her 'isolationism.'"

Trust Revived, London View Pairs

London, Dec. 28 (AP)—Diplomatic circles today acclaimed the Moscow conference as a revival of co-operation and trust among the big powers which promised to open the way for settlement of many vital problems still standing on the road to world peace.

While recognizing the importance of the matters agreed upon at Moscow, these circles were quick to point out that the conference left other equally important issues unsettled and that their solution depended upon the maintenance of trust and confidence.

Stressed By Byrnes, Bevin

This point was stressed by both United States Secretary of State James F. Byrnes and British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin at the conclusion of their eleven-day meeting with Soviet Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov.

Byrnes, referring to the "cordial relations" of the three Foreign Ministers, said: "There is great hope for the settlement of other problems in the same friendly spirit."

"I do not believe in creating in the public mind the idea that holding a conference such as this one has solved all problems," Bevin declared. "It is but one stage on the way, and I think this conference marks an important step. . . ."

Bevin arrived by plane tonight from Moscow but declined to comment on the conference.

Speculate On D.C. Meeting

Diplomats speculated today on the possibility of a meeting of the Big Three Foreign Ministers in Washington during February or March.

The British Foreign Office said no such meeting had been arranged, however.

There was talk, also, that deputies of Soviet Foreign Commissar V. M. Molotov, Byrnes and Bevin would meet early in the new year to resume discussions.

Unusually well informed persons said a new meeting of the foreign ministers was unlikely until the organization of the United Nations Assembly, meeting here January 10, was well advanced.

Issues discussed but left unsettled included the Iranian question and problems of future policy in Germany. Moscow dispatches said the conferees did not discuss matters pertaining to the Dardanelles, Greece or the problem of trusteeship, except for Korea.

The agreements reached, it was pointed out, were primarily concerned with organization and procedure in dealing with the atomic bomb, control of Japan, drafting of European peace treaties and establishing a trusteeship for Korea.

On the atomic question, for example, the agreement did not go much beyond the American-British-Canadian declaration that a United Nations Commission should be set up to deal with the matter.

Green Light For Treaties

One of the conference's immediate results will be the resumption of work on European peace treaties which had been at a standstill since the collapse of the five-power Foreign Ministers' conference in London over questions of procedure.

It is now possible for the five-power deputies in London to deal with major European issues, such as Italian colonies, the Italian-Yugoslav frontier dispute, Italian reparations and the drafting of treaties for Romania, Bulgaria and Hungary.

Russians Hail Results of Big Three Meeting —London Notes Unsettled Problems —Italians Are Dissatisfied

DEC 29 1945

Tokyo, Dec. 28 (A. P.).—Japanese viewed with surprise and dismay today the Big Three decision for establishment of a four-power occupation council for Japan, which most observers regarded as a Russian victory in international bargaining.

General MacArthur studied the joint communiqué outlining the creation of an eleven-nation Far Eastern policy-making commission and an Allied control council, but he had no comment immediately.

Typical Jap Comment

By late afternoon, Japan had not been advised officially of the Allied decision and, therefore, the Government Foreign Office had not formally informed Emperor Hirohito of the development, which may have an important bearing as to his future status.

Government officials declined to comment, but an undercurrent of concern was apparent. Typical Japanese comment seemed to be:

"Aren't things going all right now? What is the need for an occupation council?"

It was noted that MacArthur would continue to issue orders and remain "the sole executive authority" for the four-power council of the United States, Russia, Britain and China.

"Fear Reds And Chinese"

The principal immediate Japanese reaction was the expressed belief that Russia had won concessions for the international council in bargaining for settlement of Korean and Manchurian problems. Some observers said they considered it a Russian victory to the detriment of the other Allies.

"People like and trust MacArthur," said one Japanese newspaper man. "Now they feel that some of his policies will be changed by the Russians and the Chinese. They have long been taught to fear and mistrust both countries."

Apprehension over the fat of Hirohito and the Emperor system appeared to increase, as the Japanese recalled that both Russia and China had previously proposed eliminating the system.

Depends On Co-Operation

American circles in Tokyo expressed concern over the future, saying that establishment of the new council might mean radical changes in policy, which they generally have found suitable thus far.

The smoothness of the occupation is dependent upon Japanese co-operation. Heretofore, the people have supported all occupation measures and the Government has offered no important opposition.

Yet, in some cases, directives from abroad have been regarded at headquarters as unsuitable to the psychology of the moment, or too unclear to indicate precisely what the Allies desired.

Some Americans believe there is a danger that this maladjustment will be increased through the power of the policy-making commission to review or modify directives.

One spokesman, however, voiced pleasure with the developments. He was Shigenori Kuraki, member of the Central Committee of the Japanese Communist party. Kuraki declined official comment, but said the party would issue a statement.

France Assails Big 3 Draft

Paris, Dec. 28 (AP)—A French Foreign Office spokesman said today that Washington, London and Moscow would be asked for clarification of certain points in the communique on the foreign ministers' meeting before announcing any adherence to the projected peace-treaty procedures for European countries.

The spokesman said France was frankly dissatisfied at being left out of the drafting of the peace in the Balkans.

Cabinet Reserves

The French Cabinet decided to reserve acceptance of the conference's peace treaty proposals after a session with Foreign Minister Georges Bidault.

The Foreign Office spokesman described Byrnes as having "backed down" from his position at the ive-po[illegible] London conference of foreign ministers favoring a French voice in the Balkan settlements.

The spokesman also said France was disappointed in the role allotted to her on the Far Eastern Commission, saying it left her without the power of veto which she enjoys on the United Nations Security Council.

Held Anti-Democratic

The over-all agreement for concluding peace treaties, set forth by the ministers' communiqué, was described as anti-democratic in French eyes, which see Russia, the United States and Britain establishing peace terms while "satellite" countries of each power would merely ratify the decisions.

"Also, it seems to us," said the spokesman, "that once again non-European governments are in error in making the peace for Europe."

He referred to the conference decision to allow France to be a signatory to only the peace treaty with Italy.

Italy Criticizes Decisions

Rome, Dec. 28 (AP)—The Italian Foreign Ministry spokesman said today that the Moscow announcement from the Big Three Foreign Ministers "undoubtedly was a backward step from the Potsdam decisions," so far as Italy was concerned.

"At Potsdam the peace treaty for Italy was placed first on the agenda and we were praised for our fight against the Germans," the spokesman said. "There is not a word of this in the Moscow communiqué."

Protests To Ambassadors

It was disclosed that Alcide de Gasperi, Premier and Foreign Minister, had expressed Italy's concern to the British, United States and Russian ambassadors.

The spokesman said Italy was particularly chagrined at not being granted precedence over Germany's Balkan satellites, "who caused Allied losses up to the last minute, while we gave 80,000 lives in the common fight against the Germans."

Newspapers Displeased

Italian newspapers continued today to voice sharp dissatisfaction with the formula laid down by the Big Three—a formula which, commentators said, gave no consideration to Italy's role as a cobelliger-

The Cabinet was expected to hear a report on the Big Three decisions this afternoon from Premier de Gasperi.

CHINESE APPLAUD MANCHURIA PACT

Chungking Spokesman Doubts Good Faith of the Yenan Proposal for Truce

CHUNGKING, Dec. 28 (AP)—Chinese Government sources praised the new Big Three accord today as assuring government sovereignty over Manchuria, but a spokesman questioned the good faith of a Chinese Communist proposal for a truce in this country's civil strife.

Official comment was withheld pending study of the Big Three statement from Moscow, but it was noted that Russian withdrawal from Manchuria had been postponed to Feb. 1 at the request of the Chinese Government and that the Americans would leave China as soon as Japanese forces were disarmed and repatriated or as soon as the Chinese could handle this work unaided.

The Russians originally were scheduled to quit Manchuria Dec. 3, but this was extended to Jan. 3 to give Chinese Government authorities time to take over that extensive territory. Indications were that the new postponement was required because much remained to be done before the establishment of full Central Government control there.

The China Times said present plans still called for the air movement of Government forces to Changchun and Harbin soon and that ground troops already were near Mukden.

A spokesman, commenting on other phases of the Big Three communiqué, said China's inclusion in the Allied Council for Japan was in line with Chinese wishes and that China "has always advocated independence for Korea."

Korea's Division Opposed

Unofficial quarters, however, did not look with favor on the program for the division of Korea between American and Russian forces during a five-year trusteeship.

On the domestic front, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek is studying the Chinese Communist truce proposal and a reply is expected tomorrow, but a spokesman sharply criticized the offer. The spokesman said it was merely a second reply to a Government demand of Oct. 31 that Communists cease hostilities and withdraw from the railroads. Originally the Communists rejected the suggestion but the spokesman said they had changed their attitude because of "crushing defeats."

At Communist headquarters in Yenan, Gen. Chu Teh, Communist military commander, said he felt the forthcoming unity talks in Chungking could lead China out of civil strife without the assistance of the United Nations and that democracy could be achieved quickly.

Speaking to an Associated Press correspondent, General Chu contended that the United States precipitated the conflict in north China by transporting Chinese Government troops and asserted that without American support the Government could not afford to continue the struggle.

Gen. George C. Marshall ended his first week in Chungking today, busier than ever. He entertained foreign correspondents at luncheon and afterward received the French and British chargés d'affaires separately.

Big 3 Accords Please Chinese

Chungking, Dec. 28 (AP)—Chinese quarters hailed the Big Three accords today, particularly the agreements involving China, which were viewed hopefully as insuring Chinese sovereignty over Manchuria and enhancing the prospects of peace and unity.

The agreement upon withdrawals of American and Russian troops at the earliest practical moment was interpreted as meaning: First, that there is bound to be a delay in Russian withdrawal from Manchuria—now slated for completion January 3—and, second, that American troops will withdraw as soon as Japanese are disarmed and repatriated.

Desires On Japan Met

Official quarters said comment would be forthcoming after the Allied communiqué is studied. One spokesman said, however, that China's inclusion in the Allied council for Japan met Chinese desires.

Concerning Korea, the spokesman said: "China has always advocated independence for Korea."

The accord on atomic energy was wholeheartedly indorsed by unofficial quarters, which also viewed favorably the formulas for preparation of peace treaties with Italy, Romania, Bulgaria, Hungary and Finland.

KOREAN ASSAILS BIG THREE'S PLAN

Washington, Dec. 28 (A. P.).—Col. Ben C. Limb, chairman of the Korean Commission to the United States, issued a statement today saying that the agreement by the Big Three Foreign Secretaries on a trusteeship for Korea "is an evil brew."

"The reported four-Power trusteeship of Korea," said the statement, "belies the reasons for the death of every American, Russian, Chinese and Englishman on the many fields of battle in this war.

Saying that Koreans had their own government for 4,000 years and fought the Japanese forty years, the statement asked: "Who are these nations, first the appeasers and only recently the enemies of the Japanese, who now feel they are entitled to rule our ancient race?"

Iranian Ambassador Hussein Ala declared that he was "very, very disappointed" at the lack of any reference to Iran in the Big Three Moscow communique.

"We had been placing our hopes in this meeting and in the United States," he said, for a settlement of the disturbances in northern Iran, "but now find our hopes were not justified."

Iran's Envoy Calls Parley Disappointing

Washington, Dec. 28 (AP)—Iranian Ambassador Hussein Ala said today that he was "very, very disappointed" at the lack of any reference to Iran in the Big Three's Moscow communique.

"We had been placing our hopes in this meeting and in the United States," he said, for a settlement of the disturbances in northern Iran, "but now find our hopes were not justified."

Ala told a reporter he "most certainly" intended to confer with Secretary of State Byrnes when he returns to Washington tomorrow "to follow up the matter and see what was done about Iran."

"Direct Parleys Blocked"

He charged that Russia "had closed every door to our efforts to put down this disturbance" and that the Iranian Premier was still in Tehran "because the Russians have placed no transportation at his disposal so he can get to Moscow for direct conferences with the Russians."

Ala said he had been informed by his government that it had "reliable information" that Russian trucks and troops have been used "to carry bombs and arms to be distributed among the population."

If the situation does not change for the better soon, Ala reiterated, Iran will appeal to the United Nations Organization "at the earliest practicable moment" after it meets in London January 10.

Harriman on Mission Enroute to Bucharest

Russian Papers Praise Work of Foreign Ministers

Moscow, Dec. 28 (AP)—A United States Embassy communiqué said today that Ambassador W. Averell Harriman would leave by train tonight for Bucharest with Russian and British officials to carry out the agreement of the Foreign Ministers' Conference to broaden the Romanian Government.

Andrei Vyshinski, vice commissar for foreign affairs, and British Ambassador Sir Archibald Clark Kerr will accompany Harriman.

Of the Big Three, only Russia now recognizes Romania.

Elections To Be Held

The communiqué specified that after the Romanian Government is broadened, "free and unfettered elections will be held as soon as possible."

The document said Harriman, Vyshinski and Sir Archibald were "to proceed to Bucharest at once and consult with King Mihai" and the present leftist Government, with which the monarch has been at odds.

Red Papers Praise Results

Russia's two most influential newspapers, Izvesta and Pravda, praised the results of the Foreign Ministers' conference which ended here yesterday with agreements on the atomic question and other vital problems.

Izvestia, official Government paper, asserted that the "decisions of the Moscow conference witness that a new step has been made toward the development of collaboration of the Allied states."

Without this collaboration, Izvestia said, "there will be no firmness of peace." Declaring that the three Foreign Ministers had found solutions for problems which some people were ready to say could not be solved, the newspaper commented specifically on the atomic agreement and the formula for drafting peace treaties.

"Presents No Doubts"

The atomic agreement, Izvestia said, "does not present any doubts" and the accord on treaty procedure means that the Ministers have solved a complicated problem and removed an obstacle delaying the regulation of postwar relations in Europe.

Pravda, official organ of the Communist party, stated that the formation of a commission for the Far East was "of great significance." The creation of a four-power council for Japan, Pravda said, was in answer to a necessity and should cut short the attempt of Japanese imperialists to preserve part of their power.

Atomic And Jap-Rule Pacts Top Big 3 Work

Washington, Dec. 28 (AP)—Russia aligned herself today behind Anglo-American proposals to put atomic energy controls up to the United Nations and in turn won a voice in control of beaten Japan.

These two results highlighted the eleven-day meeting of the Big Three Foreign Ministers in Moscow—a meeting which officially reunited the top wartime Allies in their efforts to solve the formidable problems of peace.

Other Agreements

Breaking a deadlock in their relations that had lasted nearly three months, the United States, Russia and Britain also agreed, in a communiqué made public simultaneously in the three capitals last night, on:

1. The necessity for a unified, democratic and independent China under the National Government now headed by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

2. The establishment of a provisional government for long-suffering Korea, with the prospect of complete independence for that nation in five years.

3. Broadening the governments of Romania and Bulgaria and plans for concluding peace treaties with them, along with Italy, Hungary and Finland.

Contrast To London Meeting

The architects of these agreements were Secretary of State Byrnes; Foreign Secretary Bevin of Britain, and Foreign Commissar Molotov of Russia. They hammered them out in a conference which—in results—provided a sharp contrast to the London meeting of Foreign Ministers last September.

Yet many vexing problems remained unsettled—and unmentioned. Among them are the uprising in Soviet-occupied northern Iran; the issue of access to the Dardanelles Straits; Germany's western border, and a common Big Three policy on the Franco Government of Spain.

Iran Lengthily Discussed

Bevin told reporters in Moscow last night that the Iranian issue had been discussed at length but without final agreement. He added, however, that the March 2 date for withdrawal of Russian and British troops from the little Middle Eastern country "still stands." The United States has promised to have its forces out by January 1.

But for all the unsettled points, Byrnes, en route home by plane, undoubtedly considers that the meeting called at his suggestion accomplished much.

"Very Constructive"

Certainly it cleared the air in British-American relations with Russia and heightened chances for a successful first session of the United Nations Assembly in London next month.

Byrnes told newsmen before leaving Moscow that the conference had been "very constructive" in accomplishments and in restoring "cordial relations."

"Step In Right Direction"

Whether Americans generally and Congress in particular would accept that verdict remained to be seen. Issuance of the 4,000-word communiqué last night found most senators and representatives away from Washington on a recess that will last until January 14.

Those in the Capital were wary about commenting immediately.

However, Representative Bloom (D., N.Y.), chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, called the agreements "a step in the right direction.' Apparently with the long Big Three deadlock in mind, Bloom said "the most important thing is to get together and agree to work together."

In disposing, for the present, of the touchy atomic energy question, Russia agreed to join this country and Britain in sponsoring a resolution in the United Nations Assembly which would establish a control commission, responsible to the powerful eleven-member security council.

The atomic commission would consist of representatives from the eleven nations holding council seats (the United States, Russia, Britain, France and China hold permanent ones) and Canada, which shares atomic energy secrets. It would work toward the exact goals outlined November 15 by President Truman and the Prime Ministers of Britain and Canada.

These include international exchange of basic scientific information for peaceful ends; control of atomic energy to insure its use for peaceful purposes only; elimination of atomic and other weapons adaptable to mass destruction, and safeguards against violations and evasions of the control regulations.

Four-Power Control Of Japan

For control of Japan, the Big Three Foreign Ministers agreed to establish a four-power (United States, Russia, Britain, China) council in Tokyo and an eleven-nation Far Eastern policy-making commission in Washington, to replace the present ten-member advisory commission.

One United States official concerned with the Far Eastern policy-making machinery said that as a practical matter, the present advisory commission probably would become the new policy-making body, with the addition of Russia, which previously refused to par-

The commission is now en route to Japan for an inspection trip. It is possible, this official said, that a Russian representative will join the body in Tokyo and return with it to Washington about February 15. Other commission members are the United States, Britain, France, China, Australia, New Zealand, Canada, the Netherlands, India and the Philippines.

Speculation On MacArthur

Release of the communiqué touched off much speculation about the extent to which the policy-making commission and the four-power council would curtail the authority of Gen. Douglas MacArthur as supreme Allied commander in Japan. The document provided no clear-cut answer.

But it appeared that because MacArthur has been the administrator of policy in Japan, not the maker of it, his powers would be left pretty much intact.

Veto Power

Veto power given the United States, Russia, Britain and China would enable this country to block any attempt to change any directives that have gone out to MacArthur since the occupation began.

Further, the commission is prohibited from making recommendations on military operations or territorial adjustments and is pledged to respect "existing control machinery in Japan, including the chain of command from the United States Government to the supreme commander's command of occupation forces."

U.S. Authority Curtailed

The United States can issue "interim directives" to MacArthur when urgent matters not covered by commission policy decisions arise.

Commission agreement must be obtained in advance, however, for any directive concerning "fundamental changes in the Japanese constitutional structure or in the regime of control, or dealing with a change in the Japanese Government as a whole."

This appeared to be the major point where present American authority in Japan is circumscribed, although Government officials would not elaborate immediately on the communiqué text.

Full Safeguards

Inspections and Controls of Equal Importance With Other 3 Objectives of Atomic Agreement

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL

Washington, Dec. 28 (AP)—Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich) received an official interpretation of the Moscow agreement today which makes clear, he said, that "full security" will surround each stage of dealing with the atomic energy problem.

He also reported assurance that all phases will be "finally subject to Congressional approval."

The influential Senator, member of the American delegation to the United Nations Assembly meeting next month, issued his statement after calling upon President Truman with Acting Secretary of State Dean Acheson.

"I am advised by the State Department," he said, "that while the communique listed four separate objectives, with inspections and controls listed last, that it is not intended that these objectives should be taken in the order indicated, but that it is intended that the four shall be read together and that each should be accompanied by full security requirements—all being finally subject to Congressional approval.

"This hopefully clarifies the situation. I shall present my own view to the American delegation in London."

The communique of Secretary of State Byrnes, Foreign Commissar Molotov of Russia and Foreign Minister Bevin of Britain had announced agreement for a United Nations Commission to make specific proposals on four subjects. It listed them in this order:

1. International exchange of "basic scientific information for peaceful ends."
2. Atomic energy control "to ensure its use only for peaceful purposes."
3. International disarmament in regard to atomic and other "mass destruction" weapons.
4. "Effective safeguards by way of inspection and other means."

The communique specified that the United Nations Commission "should proceed by separate stages" in its work.

"I heartily endorse the immediate creation of a United Nations Commission to explore all phases of the problem of atomic energy," Vandenberg said. "The problem is inevitably international in scope. Under recent legislation the American member of the commission will be confirmed by the Senate.

"I would not be able to agree that the problem can be handled by separate and unrelated stages. I particularly share what I believe to be the general Congressional opinion that any disclosures regarding the atomic bomb should be part of a complete plan for adequate world-wide inspection and control."

Other Congressmen and some diplomats mixed praise and criticism of the Big Three agreements with demands for more information.

Three Senators told reporters they were concerned lest the Big Three plan for control of Japan impair the authority of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, Allied Supreme Commander in Tokyo.

Iranian Ambassador Hussein Ala said in an interview he was "very, very disappointed" at the absence of any deference to Iran in the communique which announced a wide range of accords on other subjects by the three Foreign Ministers in Moscow.

A leading Democrat who would not be quoted by name said he and other members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee would appreciate some detailed information from Secretary of State Byrnes.

But President Truman, starting work on two major addresses in which he might have occasion to appraise the Moscow agreements, will have first call on the Secretary.

Byrnes is due back tomorrow morning. Soon after his arrival, he is expected to head for the Presidential yacht Williamsburg on which Mr. Truman will be cruising the Potomac River for five days.

Ben. C. Limb, chairman of the Korean commission to the United States, assailed the plan for a four-power trusteeship for Korea, saying it did not mean liberty but "supervision, restriction and overlordship."

"This strange Moscow report, supposedly the agreement of Russian Communism, London Labor and Washington Democracy, is an evil brew," he said in a statement.

The commission represents the Provisional Government of Korea in the United States. The Provisional Government was formed in 1919 after the Korean revolution against the Japanese and has maintained its principal headquarters in China since that time.

Senator McCarran (D-Nev) commented he could see "nothing beneficial to the United States" in letting Russia enter a setup for governing Japan. He termed this "contrary to every principle we have put forward" and added that America should demand that Russia pull completely out of the Balkans.

The Foreign Ministers conference agreed that an 11-nation commission should figure out policy for ruling Japan, that MacArthur should continue as the sole executive authority, but that he should consult with a British-American-Russian-Chinese Council.

Senators Capper (R-Kan) and Edwin C. Johnson (D-Colo) both said they hoped no arrangements would be made that would interfere with or destroy MacArthur's authority because the General had done a fine job thus far.

Senator Wherry of Nebraska, the Republican Whip, said it was not clear whether MacArthur's authority would remain unchanged. Wherry said all was "well and good" if the Council was merely intended to bring about mutuality of relations with Russia and "does not limit MacArthur."

He said if Russia was given a veto power over MacArthur, "I am afraid that it may hinder establishment of a Democratic government in Japan, and I want to see a Democratic government and not a Communistic one."

Senator Thomas (D-Utah), a former Missionary in Japan, told a reporter, however, that he thought "everything that was done was to the good" at the Moscow conference. He voiced approval for the Far Eastern Policy Commission and for the arrangements for

UNO Will Select Site Near Boston or New York

LONDON, Dec. 28—(AP) A spokesman for the United Nations Organization' interim committee said tonight the committee would choose a site in the "general areas" of either Boston or New York City as a permanent home for the organization.

The spokesman, who asked not to be identified by name, added that a sub-committee, leaving for the United States on Jan. 3 or 4 to inspect possible sites, would visit "at least 15 places and probably more." He declined to name these communities or to reveal the committee's itinerary.

The interim committee earlier issued a formal statement saying the sub-committee had been instructed to "consider possible sites within an area 50 to 60 miles around Boston, and within an area east of the Hudson river in New York state and Connecticut between 25 to 80 miles of New York City."

The spokesman said, however the instructions did not rule out other communities near these areas and specifically mentioned Princeton, N. J., as a site which might be visited and which remained under consideration. Princeton is southwest of the Hudson river, about 50 miles from New York City.

The interim committee last night ruled out the south and the middle west sections of the country, leaving only ten Atlantic seaboard states in the running at that time.

The spokesman said Philadelphia, a strong bidder, had been eliminated in today's deliberations "because of its proximity to Washington."

During the UNO preparatory commission's delegate on a site last week, several delegates argued that the organization's capital should not be "near enough to Washington to come under its influence."

The committee's formal announcement also said that "the site should not be located within or too near a large metropolitan district."

Four members of the site committee, which will have six members, have been named. They are François Briere of France, Dr. Shuksi Hsu of China, Julio A. La Carte of Uruguay and Awny El Khalidi of Iraq. A Yugoslav and a British delegate will be named tomorrow.

Yugoslavia has strongly favored selection of Hyde Park, the late President Roosevelt's ancestral home, which lies within the boundaries outlined by the committee today.

Canada Picks UNO Delegation

OTTAWA, Dec. 28 (AP)—Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King said tonight that Justice Minister Louis S. St. Laurent would be chairman of the Canadian delegation to the United Nations Assembly, opening in London, Jan. 10. Other delegates will be Agriculture Minister James Gardiner, State Secretary P. J. Martin, Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner in London, and H. Hume Wrong, Assistant Under-Secretary of State for External Affairs.

NEW HAVEN BIDS FOR UNO HOME SITE

NEW HAVEN, Dec. 28 — (AP) The New Haven Chamber of Commerce disclosed today through president Charles A. Williams that it had extended an invitation to the United Nations organization to locate its permanent headquarters here or in the general area.

The chamber's invitation was contained in a cablegram to the U. S. embassy in London with the request that it be turned over to the proper UNO committee.

In suggesting the desirability of New Haven as a site for the permanent home of the UNO, the chamber pointed out the many advantages that proximity to Yale University offered.

Among them were cited the university's Institute of International Studies, generally regarded as the finest institute of its kind in the country; the Yale Library containing 3,500,000 volumes including historical papers and intimate writings of great statesmen, and the great number of excerpts on international law, economics and politics attached to the university.

Stassen Says Education Holds Fate of the U.N.O.

Sees Teachers Bearing a Big Responsibility to World

HARRISBURG, Pa. Dec. 28 (AP).—Harold E. Stassen, former Governor of Minnesota, told Pennsylvania educators today that "the education of the children of the world will determine" the United Nations' success "in attaining their high and cherished objectives of peace and progress for mankind."

Mr. Stassen, who was discharged recently from the Navy as a captain, was a member of the United States delegation to the San Francisco conference which set up the United Nations Organization. He spoke at the closing session of the three-day convention of the Pennsylvania State Education Association.

"The public figures and diplomats will have the spotlight of the news as they move about," Mr. Stassen said, "but the teachers in the classrooms around the world will in large measure influence the future course of world relationships."

Mr. Stassen saw as principal dangers to lasting peace "ignorance, prejudice, bigotry and creed," and said "all of these are minimized by true education." He recommended that "we should commend academic freedom to all of the United Nations, not in a bombastic or patronizing attitude but in a friendly, humble manner discussing its basic values."

VAN MOOK PLANS NEW PEACE OFFER TO INDONESIANS

LONDON, Dec. 28—(AP) Acting governor-General Hubertus J. Van Mook of the Netherlands East Indies announced today that he had a plan to bring peace to Java, and declared "I feel sure the Indonesians will accept the offer."

Van Mook, speaking after a conference with British leaders would not give details, but said full independence for Indonesia now would not solve the island's problems.

The unrecognized Indonesian government of Premier Sutan Sjahrir had been insisting upon complete independence.

A British office statement, issued after conferences by Van Mook and Dutch Premier William Schermerhorn with Prime Minister Clement Attlee, said the British and Dutch governments had agreed on "a policy of promoting an understanding between leaders of the national movement and the Netherlands authorities."

The statement said the two governments "agreed that a solution of the political conflict should be regarded as an essential contribution towards the successful completion of the task entrusted to Great Britain by the supreme command of the allied powers—of liquidating the Japanese occupation of those territories."

Van Mook, in a news conference, declared "we must recognize that nationalist aspirations in the east are there to stay, and must be given help."

It is necessary that the Dutch and British supervise Indonesia and "get it back on its feet," he said, adding: "Right now, it is fairly certain that famine will come to Java in February and March. The Indonesians must have help—they can't carry on alone."

The British communique said the talks by Van Mook, Schermerhorn, Attlee, British Minister of State Philip J. Noel-Baker and other Dutch and British officials "had a satisfactory result."

"The British government reaffirmed their obligation to their Netherlands allies to establish without delay the conditions of security in which it would be possible for the government of the Netherlands East Indies to continue negotiations with representative Indonesians," the communique said.

Earlier today in Batavia, Indonesian Premier Sutan Sjahrir announced his cabinet had agreed to cooperate with the British in restoring order, provided no more Dutch troops were brought in.

Just yesterday, Lt. Gen. Sir Philip Christison, allied commander in the Indies, notified Sjahrir that he was "compelled to take more active steps to insure order," and asked the Indonesian peace preservation corps (TKR) units assist the British in policing.

Sjahrir said his government was willing to cooperate "on the basis of justice." Some details to be worked out, he added, and at present the British plan to use TKR forces only in the Batavia area.

Blaming the strife in Java on "Dutch terrorists," an Indonesian cabinet statement said "the problem faced by the occupation army, as well as the Indonesian people, is grossly disturbed by provocative action in some towns of west Java by the N.I.C.A. (Netherlands Indies Civil Administration) and duly reciprocated by our people."

"Allied troops are exempt from politics and do not pursue political aims, while political affairs are solely the concern of the Indonesians and the Dutch," the statement added.

VAN MOOK HAS NEW JAVA PEACE PLAN

London, Dec. 28 (AP)—Hubertus J. Van Mook, acting Governor General of the Netherlands East Indies, said tonight after a conference with British Prime Minister Attlee that he had a plan to bring peace to revolt-torn Java.

He declined to give details of the plan, but told a press conference that full independence for Indonesia now would not solve its problems. The Dutch statesman said he was confident his plan would be acceptable to Indonesian Nationalists, but declined to say whether the plan was devised in his consultations with Attlee.

Supervision Held Necessary

Van Mook said it was necessary for the Dutch and British to supervise Java and "get it back on its feet."

"Right now it is fairly certain that famine will come to Java in February or March," Van Mook said. "The Indonese must have help; they can't carry on alone."

"We must recognize that Nationalist aspirations in the East are there to stay and must be given help," Van Mook said.

"I am not in a position to say what line I will take for reaching a settlement, but I am optimistic and feel sure the Indonesians will accept the offer I am prepared to make.

Settlement Soon Seen

"A settlement soon is not only possible but probable."

He added there was "no difference of opinion between me and my Government on the Indonesian question."

A British Foreign Office statement on the conference said the two Governments were "agreed that a solution of the political conflict should be regarded as an essential contribution" toward the British task of liquidating Japanese occupation of the Netherlands East Indies, and therefore concurred in a policy of promoting a Dutch-Indonesian understanding.

The British reaffirmed their obligation to establish security in the islands, the statement said, and further steps will be taken to assure the safety of prisoners of war and internees.

Natives To Work With British In Quelling Java's Disorders

Batavia, Java, Dec. 28 (AP)—The unrecognized Indonesian Government agreed today to co-operate with the British in restoring order in Java, on the condition that no more Dutch troops be brought into the strife-torn island.

The Indonesian position was set forth in a statement after the cabinet had considered a request by Lieut. Gen. Sir Philip Christison, Allied commander in the East Indies, that units of the peace preservation corps (TKR) be assigned to assist the British.

"We are prepared to co-operate on the basis of justice," the statement said, "to speed the accomplishment of tasks assigned to British forces by the United Nations, and to maintain peace."

Details Not Settled

Sutan Sjahrir, Indonesian premier, elaborating on the prepared statement, said details of Indonesian co-operation, such as the arming of Indonesian police on the same basis as other police, still were to be worked out.

Some units of the TKR, however, already were being equipped by the British as auxiliary military police.

Sjahrir said the British at present planned to use TKR units only in the Batavia area. Use of the TKR in the interior, he added, probably would be arranged at later meetings.

"Dutch Terrorists"

The prepared statement declared that most of the unrest in Java was brought about by "Dutch terrorists."

Christison's declaration was described as being in full agreement with the recent United States Department statement that the function of British troops in Java was solely to remove Japanese troops and to recover internees and Allied prisoners of war.

"Allied troops will not pursue political aims," the Indonesian statement said. "Political affairs are solely the concern of the Indonesians and the Dutch."

Vehicles Checked

Meanwhile, British military police, spurred by "approximately 500 kidnappings of Dutch and Indonesian moderates in recent weeks, intensified their search for illegal vehicles.

Thirty automobiles were impounded, according to British Brig. Alastair MacLean, who said the police cordon thrown around Batavia yesterday had concentrated on oriental drivers. British and Americans are to be checked next, he said, to prevent unauthorized use of vehicles.

MacLean said that "by January 15 this should be a safe city, which it certainly is not now."

HURRICANES HALTS 14 FOOD SHIPS

Storm Does Much Damage to English Coast

London, Dec. 28 (AP).—A 90-mile-an-hour hurricane subsided tonight after giant waves had swept the decks of 14 food ships anchored off Dover and impeded efforts to fight a fire on a British ammunition ship off the southeast coast.

At its height the fierce gale tore mines loose and swept them dangerously near flooded coastal towns. Foreign Minister Bevin's plane was forced to detour widely on its return trip from Moscow.

Most of the crew of the munition ship, the Empire Gatehouse, were rescued by lifeboat. Some crewmen remained aboard and succeeded in extinguishing the fire. The food ships rode out the storm on extra cable and double anchor.

A dispatch from Lille, France, reported that the northwestern section of France along the Channel Coast was lashed by violent winds of hurricane velocity, even forcing coastal trains to halt until auxiliary locomotives could be dispatched to reestablish the railroad service. The dispatch added that fishing boats were either forced back into the harbors or cast on the shores.

London, Dec. 28 (AP)—A violent 90-mile-an-hour hurricane swept the south and southeast coasts of England today, washing mines ashore and making the Channel impassable.

A British ship, the Empire Gatehouse, with arms and ammunition aboard, caught fire in the gale-churned waters five miles off the southeast coast. A lifeboat rescued most of the crew members, but others stayed aboard in an effort to save the vessel.

Deportation of Ex-GI Blasted

British Officials Hit for Not Letting Lamoreaux See His Bride

London, Dec. 28 (AP).—Sentimental Britons voiced indignation today about the deportation of Herbert John Lamoreaux, who is at sea bound for his home in Fitchburg, Mass.

The 22-year-old former U. S. soldier was ordered sent back to the United States last Sunday because he lacked a British visa after he had made an unsuccessful attempt to swim ashore from a merchant ship to spend Christmas with his English wife and their one-month-old child. He was serving as a member of the ship's crew in order to return to England.

Lamoreaux did not even get a chance to see his family, and for that, British officialdom was criticized in letters to London newspapers as "stony-hearted" and unimaginative creatures who—as Lord Esher of Oxford put it—would have asked "the returning Ulysses to produce his identity card on the shores of Ithaca."

"I am ashamed of England," wrote Lord Esher, and of the "unimaginative officials who never rise to an occasion, never make an exception."

A woman writer called the incident shocking, and demanded that England make it possible for foreigners to arrive "without being made to feel wholly alien and probably undesirable."

Army Builds GI Brides' Camp in England

London, Dec. 28 (AP)—The London Daily Mail said tonight the Army has started building a "GI Brides' Camp" in Southwest England to house thousands of American soldiers' wives and children while they go through the formalities preliminary to sailing for the United States.

"The U. S. Army will provide food, medical attention and even entertainment during the stay there," the newspaper said, adding that "the stay may not be longer than two weeks."

The Army is expected to begin shipping brides in January, with thousands leaving in February and March.

Beatings Of GI's 'News'

London, Dec. 28 (AP)—A United States Army major who was inspecting officers at the 10th Replacement Depot testified today he had no knowledge of a soldier being shot or of mistreatment of other prisoners by the depot guards.

The witness, Major Herbert W. Bluhm, was brought back from Chicago to testify in the court-martial of Sergt. Judson Smith, of Cumberland, Ky. Smith is the first of eleven guards charged with brutal treatment of prisoners.

Beatings Inflicted

A score of enlisted men have testified that beating and strenuous, unusual punishments were commonplace at the depot at Lichfield, in Staffordshire, during 1944 and 1945.

Capt. Earl J. Carroll, of San Francisco, assistant trial judge advocate, asked Bluhm if he saw any prisoners who "looked as if they might have received a bump or a knock." Bluhm replied:

"They may have had blemishes on their faces, but there was nothing out of the ordinary." He said he did not recall any inquiry into the death of a soldier, whom the prosecution identified as one Robert G. Thomas.

Eight Units on High Seas

PARIS, Dec. 28 (AP)—Personnel of eight American Army units were on the high seas today en route home.

The units, which sailed yesterday, according to the European Theatre Service Forces headquarters, were the 179th General Hospital, the First Traffic Regulating Group, Tenth Traffic Regulating Group, 313th Field Artillery Battalion, 305th Engineers Combat Battalion, 214th Field Artillery Battalion, 315th Field Artillery Battalion and part of the Eightieth Infantry Division.

Five thousand others of the Eightieth Division will leave for the United States Dec. 29.

Members of the Eighty-second Airborne Division were being shuttled to England for embarkation for home the end of this month, while first elements of the Twenty-ninth Infantry Division were moving into Bremerhaven staging area.

The Second Armored Division was in the Calais staging area, near Marseille, awaiting passage. Advance detachments of the Eighty-fourth Infantry Division were in Camp Philip Morris, with the division's main body scheduled to arrive at this staging camp between Jan. 29 and 31.

Status of other units in redeployment was:

On the high seas: The Twenty-sixth, Thirty-sixth, Eighty-ninth and Ninetieth Infantry Divisions.

First elements on the high seas: One Hundredth Infantry Division.

Alerted for shipment home: Ninety-fourth Infantry Division and Twenty-second Corps Headquarters.

Leuna, frequent target of United States Flying Fortresses, was bombed twenty-two times from May, 1944, to March, 1945. The title of Leuna, formerly owned by I. G. Farben Industry, now rests with the Allied Control Council for Germany.

Berlin Wrecks Kill 24

Berlin, Dec. 28 (AP)—Two holiday railroad accidents in the Berlin area resulted in 24 deaths and 40 injuries. In one accident, a freight crashed into a passenger train in the Russian sector, killing fourteen, mostly refugees from east of the Oder river.

GI Saves German Boy

Berlin, Dec. 28 (AP)—Pvt. Philip Cass of Chester, Pa., plunged into an icy reservoir today and rescued an eight-year-old German boy. He is being recommended for the Soldier's Medal, most honored of the non-combat awards for bravery.

REICH INDUSTRIAL RECOVERY IS SLOW

FRANKFURT, Germany, Dec. 28—(AP) Gen. Joseph T. McNarney reported today that Germany was making slow industrial recovery, but that restoration of a minimum sustaining economy was virtually impossible so long as the French hold out against treating the Reich as a single economic unit.

McNarney, commanding general for U. S. forces in the European theater, said resumption of industrial production has been authorized in about 30 per cent of the plants in the American zone, but shortages of transportation, coal and power limited production to from five to 10 per cent of normal capacity.

In his first report as new military governor for the zone, McNarney said the Allied Control Authority was still deadlocked in the basic matter of establishing administrative agencies for Germany.

McNarney said incidents reflecting hostility towards the occupation forces were continuing "as is to be expected," but that "such incidents and activity were still localized and largely unorganized and did not yet constitute a serious and present danger."

The four powers are making good progress in listing industrial capital equipment for reparations, with 84 plants in the three western zones already declared available, he said. They include 25 in the U. S. zone, 42 in the British and 17 in the French zone.

McNarney Sees French Stand As Obstacle

Frankfurt, Dec. 28 (AP)—Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, chief of the United States occupation forces in Germany, expressed belief today that it would be virtually impossible to restore a minimum sustaining economy for Germany so long as the French hold out against treating the country as a single economic unit.

McNarney's view was set forth in his first monthly report as United States military governor, which reflected an attitude of tempered confidence.

Now Deadlocked

Further progress has been made in de-Nazification, breaking up of German cartels, and laying the machinery for reparations, and there are no immediate threats of epidemics or revolt, he said.

But in the basic matter of establishing administrative agencies for Germany, McNarney conceded, Allied control authority is deadlocked.

"Restoration of a minimum sustaining economy is most difficult if not impossible as long as artificial zonal boundaries restrict legitimate movement and trade," he asserted.

While elections in the United States occupation zone are only a month off, McNarney said, it is apparent that the "German masses still remain aloof from formal political life."

More Law And Order

A more stabilized situation is developing in the maintenance of law and order, he said, especially in the orderliness of displaced persons, who have been blamed for most of the crimes.

Incidents reflecting hostility toward occupation forces on the part of the German populace have continued, "as is to be expected," McNarney declared. "However, such incidents and activity were still localized and largely unorganized and did not yet constitute a serious and present danger," he added.

The German people were reported eating fairly well, but McNarney emphasized that food imports from the United States provided the only way a 1,500 daily caloric diet could be maintained, as crops in 1945 were lower than the six-year average for 1939-44. A survey revealed, however, that during November most people were able to supplement the official ration, so that the normal consumer was getting about 1,900 calories on the average.

Industrial Recovery

Industrially, Germany was reported making slow recovery. Through December 1 about 33 per cent of the plants in the United States zone were authorized to resume production, but shortages in transportation, coal and power limited industrial production to from 5 to 10 per cent of normal capacity.

The four occupying powers are making good progress in listing industrial capital equipment for reparations, McNarney said. One of the main issues, he declared, was establishing an assumed standard of living in postwar Germany and the level of industry required to maintain that standard.

Eighty-four plants in the three Western zones have already been declared available for reparations—25 in the United States zone, 42 in the British zone and seventeen in the French.

SS GEN. MEYER SENTENCED TO DIE

Aurich, Germany, Dec. 28 (A. P.).—Major-Gen. Kurt Meyer, former SS regimental and divisional commander, was sentenced today to be shot after being convicted by a Canadian military court on three of five charges in connection with the death of forty-eight Canadian prisoners of war.

The court found that Meyer incited his troops to deny quarter to Allied troops; and that he was responsible for the killing of eighteen Canadian prisoners of war by his troops at his headquarters, the ancient Abbey of Ardennes.

G. I. SLAIN IN ITALY

ROME, Dec. 28 (A. P.).—An 18-year-old American soldier was fatally shot by an unknown assailant on Christmas Eve while checking communications wires near Gorizia, in the disputed Venezia Giulia region, dispatches from Gorizia reported today.

The dispatches said that the Yugoslav Army, assisting in the occupation of the disputed area, has been asked to co-operate in the search for the slayer of the soldier, who was a member of the Eighty-eighth Infantry Division stationed at Gorizia, but who was not further identified, pending notification of next of kin.

Pope Expresses Pity For German Women

Vatican City, Dec. 28 (A. P.).—Pope Pius has expressed sorrow at the "calamities and injuries which many German women have suffered" in the war, it was disclosed today.

His remarks were contained in a letter, dated November 1, addressed to Cardinal von Faulhaber at the conclusion of the Congress of Fulda, Germany. An informant in the Vatican said that the letter was read in all Catholic churches in Germany during November.

Far Rockaway Man To Defend SS Killers

Leghorn, Italy, Dec. 28 (A. P.).—The trial of four SS underlings charged with killing seven Allied officers at Bolzano, Italy, are scheduled to begin at Naples on January 7 with Col. Herbert V. Scanlan of Dallas, Tex., presiding as head of a military commission. The defendants are accused of killing a British major, an American captain, three American lieutenants, one American non-commissioned officer and one British non-commissioned officer, all of whose names are being withheld for the time being.

On the defense staff will be Capt. David Spiegel of Far Rockaway, L. I.

NEW YORKER HONORED

Florence, Italy, Dec. 14 (By Mail) (A. P.).—Florence officials and music lovers have invited an American soldier, T/4 Robert Lawrence of 535 West 110th street, New York, former music critic of the New York Herald Tribune, to return in May to direct the orchestra in the month-long Maggio Musicale Fiorentino.

Lawrence is known to music enthusiasts throughout Italy today. In Naples he organized the Mediterranean Symphony Orchestra. In Rome last winter he was the first soldier invited to direct the opera at the Royal Theater. He also directed the orchestra of the famous St. Cecilia Academy.

The Maggio Musicale Fiorentino is one of the outstanding musical festivals of Europe. The tentative program includes American works which the Mussolini regime barred as barbaric.

SPAIN DEFENDS POLICY IN 'REPLY' TO ALLIES

MADRID, Spain, Saturday, Dec. 29 (AP)—The Spanish Government issued a statement early today defending Spain's foreign policies and threatening to "solate" Spain from countries which, it said, were trying to make the Franco regime "a lightning rod" to draw off their own internal storms.

The statement, issued after a long Cabinet meeting, apparently was a reply to the projected meeting of the United States, Britain and France for re-examination of their relations with Spain.

The Government asserted that Spain maintained strict neutrality throughout the war and by her "able" foreign policy kept German armies from passing across Spanish territory to attack the Allies.

Both the Axis and the Allies, the statement said, had plans to violate Spain's neutrality and make the country a victim of aggression, but it added, these "machinations" were defeated by the Franco Government's firm policy.

Position Of Belgian Franc To Be Defended

Brussels, Dec. 28 (AP)—Frans Devoghel, Belgian Finance Minister, told the Senate today that the Belgian franc would be "defended in the strong position it now occupies."

"Thanks to our present financial policy, we can face the effects of the French devaluation without fear," he added.

Turks Stress Freedom

Ankara, Dec. 27 [AP—Delayed]. Premier Sukru Saraco Glu told the National Assembly tonight that Turkey would pursue her policy of international independence unswervingly.

His declaration followed by several days the unofficial Russian proposal that Turkey cede 12,500 square miles of Black Sea territory to the Russians, and fell into a pattern of growing Turkish hostility toward territorial demands.

"The road we have followed in our foreign policy," said the Premier, "is always the same as the one we have been pursuing since our war of independence—the road of freedom of peoples, of independence, the road of liberty and independence, for all peoples."

There was no official reaction here to the Foreign Ministers' conference communiqué, which ignored Turkey.

British Arrest 2,000 Persons In Palestine

Roundup Follows Deaths of 10 Persons in Explosions

MUCH AMMUNITION REPORTED FOUND

DEC 29 1945

Jerusalem and Tel Aviv Patrolled by Troops in Battle Dress

Jerusalem, Dec. 28 (AP).—Nearly 2,000 persons were rounded up for questioning today in the biggest mass arrest in Palestine's history after 10 persons were killed and 13 wounded last night by explosions in Jerusalem and Tel Aviv.

Trucks rumbled through Jerusalem's streets throughout the day bringing civilians to detention barracks. An official announcement said nearly 2,000 had been detained. Police said a sizeable amount of arms, ammunition and explosives—including two land mines and 22 anti-personnel bombs—had been found and confiscated.

Last night's blasts wrecked the Criminal Investigation Department building here, and incidents were reported in Jaffa as well.

British troops in full battle dress patrolled Jerusalem and Tel Aviv streets, emptied of civilians by strict curfews, while police authorities searched for persons responsible for the disturbances.

Police combed the entire "Bezalel" section of Jerusalem—where Assistant Superintendent of Police D. J. Flanagan was machinegunned to death—arresting every male under 60 years of age.

The first hours of search jammed all jails and prisons, and many persons were sent to military camps for questioning.

An official casualty list released by the Palestine public information office said the dead were:

Two assistant superintendents of police, Flanagan and G. F. Smith; British Constables H. Nicholson and E. Hyde; British Lance Corp. R. Symons, Jaffa telephone operator Costandi Elissa Ghanneim, and four Basutos—troops from Basutoland, South Africa.

An official statement said attacks were made on a British military camp at Levant Fair, Tel Aviv, by persons wearing "steel helmets, British battle dress or khaki shirts" who launched the assault by shooting down "in cold blood" an "unarmed British soldier leaving the wash house."

"The Jews," the statement continued, "then lobbed a grenade through the window of a room in which a number of men were asleep. An explosive charge was next laid against the door of a store containing an armory. While attempting to enter the armory the Jews were repulsed by one British soldier single-handedly with a tommy gun.

Gen. Sir Alan Cunningham, high commissioner for Palestine, meanwhile conferred with David Ben-Gurion, chairman of the Jewish Agencys executive committee, and Moses Shertok, director of the agency's political department.

After the conference, an informant said that the Jewish agency had "completely disassociated" itself from last night's disorders, but that the agency representatives had told Sir Alan that their "capacity to cooperate in combatting these excesses" had been "reduced to futility by the Palestine policy pursued at present by the British government."

An underground radio which calls itself "the Jewish resistance movement" declared that "it is assumed" yesterday's disturbances were caused by the Irgun Zvai Leumi (National Military Orgahization) which the radio termed an "illegal" Jewish group.

In Jerusalem squads of workmen dug through the piles of rubble at the bomb shattered police headquarters, where seven persons were officially reported dead and 11 wounded. Truckloads of civilians were brought to the detention barracks for questioning. A three block area in the center of the city was heavily damaged by the explosions.

Eyewitnesses said six young men —some carrying pistols, others bomb-filled haversacks—shot their way to the gates of the police building, and then placed the explosives.

The simultaneous attack at Tel Aviv, where terrorists stormed district police headquarters and attempted a raid on a royal engineers arms store caused the death of an Arab telephone operator and a British soldier, an official announcement said.

The explosions in Jerusalem, the communique said, killed a British assistant police superintendent, two British constables and four Basutoland (South African) military policemen.

Reds Stall Off U.S. Official in Iran

Tehran, Dec. 28 (A. P.).—Harold B. Minor, chief of the United States State Department's Near East Section, said today that he had given up after a sixteen-day wait for Russian permission to visit Azerbaijan, where an autonomous government recently was formed.

Yanks Going To Iraq

Tehran, Dec. 28 (AP)—All American troops in Iran will be moved to a camp at Basra, Iraq, to fulfill an agreement with the Iranian Government for United States forces to leave the country by January 1. The last American troops left Tehran two weeks ago.

Double Transfer Carried Out Without a Hitch

KAZVIN, Iran, Dec. 2* (delayed) (AP). — "Camp Stalingrad," northern terminus of the American lend-lease life line to Russia, was transfered twice in half an hour today.

The Russians, who had occupied it as their North Iranian headquarters, quietly turned the camp over to a United States military mission headed by Colonel John B. Stetson jr. The Americans immediately transferred title and possession to the Iranian National Police.

The camp is at the gateway to troubled Azerbaijan Province. The transfers, however, were carried out without a hitch, and the camp and equipment were reported "in perfect condition."

The Russians had held the camp for a year on a lease with a thirty-day cancellation clause. Stetson said notice to vacate was handed to the Russians Nov. 27.

CHIANG STUDYING TRUCE PROPOSAL

Chungking, Dec. 28 (A. P.).—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek is considering Chinese Communists' proposal for an unconditional truce and an official reply probably will be issued at a formal meeting of Government and Communist representatives tomorrow, a Government spokesman announced today.

The Communist offer was termed "really a second reply" to the Government's November 31 suggestion that hostilities cease and Communists withdraw six miles from all railroads. Communists rejected that proposal.

the Reds since have changed their attitude because of "crushing defeats" they have suffered, the spokesman contended.

From Yenan, far north headquarters of the Communists, the Associated Press reported today that party leaders feel strongly that the Chungking unity talks can end China's two decades of civil strife without any aid from the United Nations Organization.

Marshall Ends Week at Chungking

CHUNGKING, Dec. 28 (AP).—General George C. Marshall, American envoy to China, ended his first week in Chungking today.

He entertained foreign correspondents at lunch—off the record—and afterward received separately the French and British charges d'affaires.

At Communist headquarters in Yenan General Chu Teh, Communist military commander, said he felt the forthcoming unity talks in Chungking could lead China out of civil strife without the assistance of the United Nations and that democracy could be achieved quickly.

Speaking to Associated Press correspondent John Roderick, Chu contended that the United States precipitated the conflict in North China by transporting Chinese government troops and asserted that without American support the government could not afford to continue the struggle.

B-29 Sets Record To Honolulu

Honolulu, T.H., Dec. 28 (AP)—Jimmy Doolittle's B-29, the Challenger, set a new official trans-Pacific record by streaking from Long Beach, Cal., to Honolulu in 9 hours 36 minutes and 10 seconds yesterday against strong headwinds.

Commanded by Col. C. S. Irvine, of St. Paul, Neb., and piloted by Major J. R. Dale, of Wise, Va., the challenger took off from Long Beach at 9.22 A.M. (P.S.T.) and arrived at Honolulu's John Rodgers Field at 4.28 P.M. (Honolulu time), 6.58 P.M. (P.S.T.) covering the 2,590 statute miles at an average of 270 miles an hour.

The plane, formerly used by Lieut. Gen. James H. Doolittle, is en route to Guam. Col. Cecil H. Childre, of San Antonio, Texas, authenticated its Long Beach-Honolulu record.

Irvine on November 20 brought the B-29 Dreamboat into Washington, D.C., from Guam, to set a non-stop flight record.

MalariaPreventiveHailed by Australian Scientists

Paludrine Said to Make Disease as Harmless as a Cold

CANBERRA, Australia, Dec. 28 (AP).—A group of Australian scientists who allowed themselves to be bitten repeatedly by malarial mosquitoes announced today that a new drug, paludrine, renders malaria no more harmful than the common cold.

Members of the group, including physicians, pathologists and entomologists, remained fit despite repeated infection by taking doses of a tablet of one and one-half grains of the drug, they said. Some of the members were bitten 200 times by mosquitoes carrying the parasite of tertiary malaria.

The scientists said results of their study indicated that the taking of one or two paludrine tablets each week end would give complete freedom from malarial attacks. Paludrine in therapeutic doses also controls malarial fever and cures malignant malaria, they added.

Jap Women Form First Party As Occupation Election Nears

TOKYO, Saturday, Dec. 29 (AP) The first Japanese women's political party was inaugurated formally today and its leaders announced plans to participate in the forthcoming election.

Known as the "New Japan Women's party," the organization will offer several candidates for office, one of them a party organizer, Miss Katsuko Miyato, head of a Tokyo medical institute. No platform was announced.

Although proclaiming themselves a political party, the women of this group and of some 30 other assorted societies are more like small political organizations of varied influence.

Major parties, meanwhile, are making varied overtures for the women's vote. The Social Democrats have the most definite program, organized by wives of party leaders. The program advocates equal rights for work, wages and education, the abolition of all laws and customs restricting women's rights and the prohibition of prostitution.

Japanese sources said today that Finance Ministry officials have completed a draft of a war profits tax measure calculated to raise one hundred billion yen (more than $6,500,000,000). The proposal will be presented Dec. 31 for approval of General MacArthur's headquarters, the sources said.

Meanwhile, Japanese legal experts took steps to bolster Emperor Hirohito's tottering throne after a statement by MacArthur's Press Relations officer that the emperor system is in the process of being destroyed through Allied directives.

A private group of authorities on constitutional law submitted to the government a series of proposed constitutional revisions which would strip the emperor of all political power but at least leave the monarchy intact.

Throne Seen Near Extinction

Under the impact of the Moscow Big-Three creation of a four-pow control council for Japan, howev many Japanese saw the throne t tering inevitably toward extinctio They recalled that both Russia a China previously had proposed elimination of the emperor system —and the new four-power council includes both Russia and China.

The statement from MacArthur's headquarters concerning the throne was issued by Brig. Gen. Frayne Banker. It summarized the series of MacArthur directives which have torn the reins of imperial power.

The compromise proposed by a private group of Japanese legal experts would eliminate the emperor's political authority, but would leave him on the throne with his activities limited to "ceremonial functions of the state."

The experts' recommendations, prominently displayed in Tokyo newspapers, proposed transfer of the emperor's political prerogatives to the diet and specified that final responsibility for state administration should rest with the cabinet. The diet would be dissolved only by plebiscite, and new premiers would be recommended by the speaker of the house of representatives and the president of the house of peers.

Council Surprises Many

The decision creating a four-power occupation council for Japan drew expressions of surprise and dismay from Japanese, many of whom regarded it as a Russian victory in the diplomatic bargaining at Moscow.

Government officials declined comment, but did not conceal their anxiety. The typical reaction seemed to be:

"Aren't things going all right now? What is the need for an occupation council?"

General MacArthur made no immediate comment on the Moscow agreement, but observers here noted with interest that it left him "the sole executive authority" for the four-power council and specified that he would continue to issue orders.

Jap Educators Suggest Changes In Constitution

Tokyo, Dec. 28 (AP)—Proposed constitutional revisions stripping the Emperor of all political power and limiting his activities to "ceremonial functions of the state" were submitted to the Government today by a private group of Japanese constitutional experts.

The move followed by a few hours a statement by General MacArthur's press relations officer that Japan's all-powerful emperor system "is being destroyed—wiped out of existence" and that it is up to the Nipponese to found a democratic government.

Proposals Published

Tokyo newspapers prominently displayed the experts' six-point recommendations, formulated by educators and publicists. Their proposals are far more extensive than any made heretofore on limitation of imperial prerogatives.

The revision would transfer the prerogatives to the Diet and specify that final responsibility for state administration rests with the Cabinet. Diet approval would be necessary for the Emperor's ascension to the throne or appointment of a regency emperor. The Diet could be dissolved only by decision of a plebiscite. Premiers would be recommended by the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the president of the House of Peers.

"Duties Clearly Defined"

The draft stated "the rights and duties of the people are to be clearly defined in the constitution in order to insure freedom of the people."

Under the present constitution, sovereignty rests solely in the emperor, who has authority to summon or dissolve the Diet and to appoint cabinets. Heretofore, the matter of ascensions to the regency and such other affairs as the imperial purse have been removed from Diet control and governed by an intricate imperial household law.

Baker Gives Summary

Earlier today, Brig. Gen. Frayne Baker, MacArthur's press relations officer, summarized the Allied commander's directives.

"All of the controls now removed or destroyed, when exercised through the feudal bureaus, combined to constitute the tenno (emperor) system. With their removal, the system will be destroyed and wiped out of existence," he said.

"The project now before the Japanese, therefore, is to found a government on horizontal planes (the people and the government on the same level) in place of the vertical lines (power stemming downward from the emperor) previously known. It is a major operation which must be guided and closely supervised."

Civilians Due Soon In Japan

Tokyo, Dec. 28 (AP) — The first civilians employed through civil service by the United States Army of occupation are expected here soon—about 120 engineer specialists, all American residents of Hawaii. All but one speak Japanese.

2 Trials In Session In Yokohama

Yokohama, Dec. 28 (AP)—Allied prisoners of war in the Fukuoka camp in Japan were tortured horribly, it was testified today at the war-crime trial of Japanese Lieut. Chotaro Furushima, the camp commander.

Lieut. N. E. Churchill, of Toledo, Ohio, one of the officers who liberated the prisoners, testified before the second United States military commission established in Japan. Furushima is charged with responsibility in starving one prisoner to death and brutalities against others.

Starvation Case On Trial

In an adjoining courtroom, the trial of Lieut. Kel Yuri, former commander of the Omuta camp on Kyushu Island, proceeded with a series of affidavits describing the starvation death of Marine Corporal James G. Pavlokos, of Chicago, and the bayoneting of army Private Noah E. Heard, of Salinas, California.

Churchill told of examining thirteen men at the Fukuoka camp last September. The prisoners had been burned on the stomach, ears, neck and elbows.

Burning Punk On Bodies

"They must have suffered horribly as Japanese guards placed burning punks on their bodies," he said, adding that the burns were brought to his attention by First Sergeant John G. Pace, of Georgetown, Del.

In the Yuri trial, Private Jerome E. Okonski, of Toledo, Ohio, testified by deposition that the Japanese camp commander was "afraid" of Pavlokos, known to his fellow prisoners as "The Mad Greek." Previous witnesses testified that Pavlokos shrank from 170 to 55 pounds before he died of starvation in a guardhouse.

Corporal Donald Raymond North, of Marion, Iowa, testified that Heard was bayoneted by a guard known to prisoners as "Smiling Jack." Yuri is charged with ordering the bayoneting of Heard after the American was beaten by guards.

Japs Launch First Ship.

Yokohama, Dec. 28 (A. P.).—The steamship Seikan Maru, the first ship launched in Japan since the end of the war, slid into the water at Uruaga today with United States Eighth Army officers attending. The 4,000-ton ferry was the first replacement in the ruined Honshu-Hokkaido coal train ferry system.

ATOM BOWL GAME IS ARRANGED IN JAPAN

Nagasaki, Dec. 28 (A. P.).—On a gridiron cleared of the scorched rubble from the atomic bomb, the world's first Atom Bowl football game New Year's Day will match two American service teams.

Marine Lieut. Angelo Bertelli of Notre Dame fame and Navy Lieut. Bill Osmanski, former Holy Cross and Chicago Bears star, will captain the two elevens from the Second Marine Division which is on occupation duty in the Kyushu Island city where the second atomic bomb was dropped.

Arrangements were completed by Marine Cpl. Paul G. Donat of 526 East 81st street, New York city, who has signed up Japanese girl cheer leaders and a Marine band.

3 G. I.'s Implicated In Manila Thefts

Manila, Dec. 28 (A. P.).—Military police said today they have uncovered a new vehicle-theft racket in which three United States soldiers were implicated and at least three Army cargo trucks stolen near Manila.

Many other types of Army property also have been stolen recently, they explained, as the result of the lure of black-market prices.

Peron Paper Move Seen

Buenos Aires, Dec. 28 (AP)—The Government was reported tonight to be preparing a decree authorizing the seizure of all newsprint in the country. The measure would assure distribution of newsprint to some of the smaller newspapers supporting the presidential candidacy of Col. Juan Perón.

Well-informed persons said the major newspapers of Buenos Aires are able to obtain newsphint abroad at about half the price paid by the small journals for domestic supplies.

Brazilian Aluminum Plant in Production

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil—(AP) Brazil's first aluminum factory has been in production since January, 1945. The factory has a current capacity of 2,000 tons annually, and was constructed so that production can be doubled within a short time.

Because of the high cost of importing necessary equipment and the initial exploiting of domestic resources for the factory, Brazilian-produced aluminum sells at higher prices than the imported product.

Although Brazilian demand for aluminum is higher because of deficits incurred during the war, the domestic product has made little headway against the sale of cheaper imported aluminum, and Brazilian papers are editorializing for some form of legal protection for the infant industry.

G-M Quits Hearing; Refuses to Discuss Ability to Boost Pay

COMPANY WILLING TO TALK DIRECT WITH AUTO UNION

Hearing of Fact Finding Board to Continue Without Auto Firm.

STATEMENT ISSUED

Union Official Denies Any Aim to Usurp Management's Rights.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28—(AP) General Motors, refusing to discuss its profits in relation to wages, walked out on a government fact-finding board today, dealing a blow to President Truman's hopes for voluntary cooperation.

The board went ahead with its studies anyway, lacking not only the corporation's data on its financial position but also on wage rates and hours which Chairman Lloyd K. Garrison said was needed. The panel hoped to complete its hearings of the union tomorrow and to report to the President by Jan. 3.

General Motors subsequently announced in Detroit that it was ready at any time to continue direct negotiations with the CIO United Auto Workers union.

At this, Walter P. Reuther, union vice president, commented to reporters here that "the union always had been willing to engage in direct negotiations and we still are—except that we'd like to talk about wages as related to economic facts."

The company declared the five-week old strike of CIO-United Automobile workers in GM plants had raised questions of national policy—beyond the scope of company-union relationships. The strike "can not be settled by fact-finding, conciliation or arbitration," the company asserted.

As the president's fact-finding panel resumed its hearing after a holiday recess, the company served notice it would withdraw if the board included company profits as a factor in considering the union's demand for a 30 per cent wage increase.

Board chairman Lloyd K. Garrison rejected the company's ultimatum and the panel went ahead with its work.

Walter Gordon Merritt, New York labor attorney, who appeared for General Motors, informed the board of the company's position in a 10-page statement, concluding:

"General Motors corporation feels that it has no choice but to withdraw from these proceedings, unless and until the board, on further consideration, should decide that, under the peculiar circumstances of this case, ability to pay is not a proper factor for its consideration."

Subsequently, Merritt told reporters he was leaving immediately for New York. When the fact-finders reconvened after a mid-day recess, the union chairs were filled but the company side of the hearing table was empty.

Merritt, made it clear that GM would not cooperate with federal fact-finding unless Congress ordered admission of evidence on wages, prices and profits together. Fact-finding boards now are operating without the legal authority which Mr. Truman has asked from Congress.

Merritt contended the CIO, in pressing the profits and prices issue, was trying to infringe on management's rights.

"To yield to such a demand would mean the end of free enterprise," he said. "General Motors does not propose voluntarily to blaze a trail in this direction."

The issue, he said, was "not one of arithmetic or facts. There is nothing in the books of the corporation to settle it. It is an issue of national policy."

Union Denies Charge

Walter P. Reuther, UAW vice president, immediately accused Merritt of "deliberately misstating the facts" and denied the union had sought to usurp management rights or privileges.

Merritt argued that General Motors prices, profits and ability to pay were "not facts but forecasts and estimates of the future" and were not "proper factors in determining wages as applied to an individual business."

Merritt argued that, were national unions permitted to bargain with employers on prices or profit margins, room for competition and consumer protection would be eliminated. The U.A.W. program, operating on an industry-wide basis, would mean "management and labor could jointly parcel out the extent of the benefits to be shared by the public," he contended.

"Combinations of this character between labor and management which undertake to control wages, profits and prices and marketing problems on the basis of mutual advantage have been recently condemned by the Supreme court," Merritt continued.

He declared that either the nation's anti-trust laws forbidding collusive combinations between labor and management must fall or national unions must abandon attempts "to regulate prices and profits."

In announcing the board's decision to proceed, Garrison said GM's withdrawal had left two courses—a report to the President that the board could not proceed or "to do the very best we can on the basis of evidence that is or will be available to us."

"The responsibility placed upon us by the President is so definite that we must follow the second alternative," Garrison explained. He emphasized that the fact-finders were not concerned with fixing profits and would decide only the question of a fair wage.

Withhold Information

He disclosed that, in addition to withdrawing from the hearings, General Motors had refused to supply the board with information as to wage rates and hours which Garrison said were necessary. He explained the union's 30 per cent wage demand was derived from calculations relating to loss of take-home pay and "the board's first task is to inquire into these calculations."

"It is regrettable" he continued, "that the company has stated that even this information will not be submitted to the board."

Garrison said the panel would reach its findings and recommendations on the basis of all available evidence including government information, transcripts of the company-union negotiations, and the various briefs and statements presented by the company and the union.

At the opening of the afternoon hearings, Reuther told the board the GM decision to withdraw "clearly indicates that a small group of Wall street financiers" controls GM and its policies.

DEC 29 1945

He said the union had run up against this "absentee control" before and that "you people have gotten a small taste of what we've been up against for 100 days."

Fact Panel Statement on G. M.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28 (AP).—Following is the complete text of the statement issued by the three-man fact-finding board in the General Motors strike case today on the withdrawal of the General Motors Corporation from the hearings:

1. The obligation of the fact-finding board is to develop, to the best of its ability, the facts relevant to the General Motors-U. A. W. dispute, and to submit these facts to the President, with such recommendations as the board may deem appropriate. To do this as thoroughly and reliably as the President and the public have a right to expect, the board needs the wholehearted co-operation of both parties to the dispute. Without the co-operation of both sides, the board has only two alternatives—either to report to the President that they were unable to proceed, or to do the very best we can on the basis of evidence that is or will be available to us. The responsibility placed upon us by the President is so definite that we must follow the second alternative.

2. The company has given as one of its reasons for withdrawing from these proceedings the fact that the union has made ability to pay the "prime issue." Whether or not this is in fact the union's position, the board has made clear its own position on this point. In its statement of Dec. 21, 1945, the board said: "Ability to pay will not be regarded as the only or controlling factor in determining the amount of a fair and equitable wage adjustment." This will continue to be the position of the board. The board is not concerned with fixing profits but only with the question of what is a fair wage.

3. In its statement of December 21, 1945, the board further said: "Ability to pay will be regarded as one of the factors relevant to the issue of an increase in wages, to be given such weight, along with other factors, as the board may deem appropriate after considering all of the evidence." This also will continue to be the position of the board. This position is in accordance with the President's statement of Dec. 20, 1945, in which he said that "since wages are paid out of earnings, the question of earnings is relevant." The same position is implicit in the President's address of Oct. 30, 1945. There is nothing new in this position. In a number of leading War Labor Board cases, evidence was freely admitted and discussed by both sides regarding the earning capacity of employers, regardless of whether or not the employers were pleading inability to pay. This practice with regard to the introduction of evidence has long been followed in arbitration proceedings, and the evidence has been given as much or as little weight, in conjunction with other factors, as the nature of the case warranted. Finally, the board is obliged by the President's wage-price policy, as announced Oct. 30, 1945, to satisfy itself that any wage adjustment which it may recommend will not, if adopted, have inflationary price consequences. The board cannot exercise this duty without a reasonably adequate picture of the company's financial situation. In exercising this duty the board has made it clear in its statement of Dec. 21, 1945, that it "will not undertake to assume the functions of O. P. A. or to suggest that the company be precluded from exercising any rights to seek price relief which existing regulations may permit."

4. The union's figure of 30 per cent is derived from calculations relating to loss of take-home pay. The board's first task is to inquire into these calculations. To do this the board, as explained in its statement of Dec. 21,1045, "will require exact and detailed information" and "will shortly submit to the parties a request for particular information relevant to these matters." On Dec. 23, 1945, the board made its request for such information—information regarding wage-rates and hours, which had nothing to do with the question of ability to pay. It is regrettable that the company, in now withdrawing from the proceedings, has stated that even this information will not be submitted to the board.

5. No question of the examination of the company books is now at issue. In its statement of Dec. 21, 1945, the board said that it would determine later, as the case developed, whether or not the board would ask to examine particular books or records in accordance with the President's statement of Dec. 20, 1945. The board could not say whether such an examination would be needed until it had heard all the evidence. If such an examination were requested, the information would be kept confidential in accordance with the President's statement. However, the board has had no intention of considering confidential evidence unless two conditions prevail: First, that such evidence is indispensible to the findings of the board and, second, that the party other than the one from whom the confidential information is obtaained agrees in advance to its confidential use by the board.

6. The board's duty to proceed with the case is clear. It will sift as carefully and objectively as possible the available evidence, including governmental data, the transcript of the extensive negotiations between the parties and the various reply briefs and memoranda presented by the company to the union, and heretofore submitted by the company to this board. The board expects to conclude the public hearings by Sunday of this week at the latest, in view of the President's request for a report within twenty days (from Dec. 14, 1945) if possible.

General Motors Statement

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28—lowing are the statements of General Motors Corporation, gi to the Truman Fact-Finding Bo by Walter Gordon Merritt, c pany lawyer, and of Walter Reuther, of the UAW and of Fact-Finding Board itself, hea by Lloyd K. Garrison:

The Statement by GM

On Dec. 21 your Fact Findin Board issued a statement to th parties as to the rules and policie which would govern the board i finding facts and making recom mendations, and declared tha "ability to pay will be regarde as one of the factors relevant t the issue of an increase i wages."

The corporation appears here today for the purpose of publicly stating its position, and the reasons for its position, in respect to this issue of ability to pay. Under the special circumstances of this case, the corporation feels that it should not participate in these fact-finding proceedings, so long as ability to pay is to be treated as a subject of investigation, fact-finding and recommendations.

The union has made all too clear the nature of its objectives in making prices and ability to pay its prime issue. The corporation cannot now approach that question as a mere academic or economic theory but with due regard to the radical ideology which the union has expounded in support of its argument on this phase of the case and which it seeks to apply in practice.

As the stand now taken by the corporation is important not only to those here present but also to an important part of the American public, I am asking your indulgence while I give some of the reasons which support its conclusion.

Ability to Pay as an Issue

1. The company does not and will not plead inability to pay as a reason for rejecting any wage recommendation based on the customary tests applied to determine what is a fair and equitable wage. Or to put it in other words the company will not put in issue any question of ability to pay a level of wages which is determined without regard to prices profits or ability to pay. Ability to pay or inability to pay is a defense which employers have often advanced to keep down wage increases and a defense which unions have consistently opposed as not a proper factor for consideration.

It is a defense which the War Labor Board in World War I and the War Labor Board in World War II regarded with disfavor. In this case, since there is no such defense, we believe that ability to pay should not be considered.

2. The question of profits and prices for the future, which are the factors by which the union proposes to measure ability to pay, involves forecasts, assumptions, consumer demand both foreign and domestic, and uncertain variables as to material and labor costs, upon which this Fact-Finding Board could not competently pass.

It involves judgment by those familiar with the business, and that judgment is in the minds of men and not in books and documents. Facts and figures as to wage rates and earnings, facts and figures as to probable take-home pay, facts and figures which deal with the question as to whether wage increases have kept pace with the increased cost of living, facts and figures showing at least equal pay for equal work in this industry and in the areas in which the corporation operates—all this and equally pertinent information will be made available if we are assured that the scope of the board's investigation will be so limited.

But the corporation is not willing to proceed further if this board of short duration is to undertake the impossible task of calculating future costs and profits and the effect of the expenditure of hundreds of millions of dollars for expansion.

Question Posed for the OPA

3. The question of prices and profits which is involved in the union demand that no applications be made for price relief, must rest alone with OPA.

4. Since it has been ruled that information as to prices, profits and ability to pay must be confidential, we submit that any investigation in the field would lead to the indefensible result that neither party would be made aware of the evidence and calculations upon which the board predicated its findings—a result not likely to promote confidence in the minds of the parties.

But beyond all of these and other detailed considerations it is well for the board to remember that this issue as expanded by the union reflects, not a mere issue of wages, as between the corporation and this union, but a broad attack on American industry and free enterprise. The corporation must deal with this fundamental issue as it is portrayed by the union and not as an abstraction. On this point we turn to a short review of the official record.

People wonder why an agreement has not been reached between General Motors Corporation and the United Automobile Workers. Or why the disagreement cannot be settled by fact-finding, conciliation or arbitration.

Issue Put on National Policy

The answer is clear. The issue is not one of arithmetic or facts. There is nothing in the books of the corporation to settle it. It is an issue of national policy.

There is no question of good wages, since the average will be $63.44 for 45.6 hours a week under the company proposal. Nor is there any real issue of reduced take-home, for under the company's forecasts there would be an increase of 10 per cent in take-home. Nor is there any issue as to wages keeping pace with the increased cost of living. Putting aside these and other tests of what is a proper wage, the union demands a 30 per cent increase based solely on claimed ability to pay.

The issue is not primarily one of wages as between General Motors and its employes. It is an issue of ideology and national policy which really belongs to Congress.

The union has issued its ultimatum, both to the company and the Fact Finding Board, that it will settle on no other basis than its ideology. The union spokesman says:

"The union has stated time after time that this issue is bigger than just an ordinary wage argument, that it is bigger than the corporation or bigger than the union . . ."

"We believe," says the union, "that the current issue between the General Motors Corporation and our union is one that transcends the narrow economic interest of labor and management in this particular case and gets to the very heart of the basic economic problem facing this nation . . .

In other words the real issue is not one of wages between General Motors and its employes. The employes are being made pawns in a larger game.

The UAW, a national union dealing with the entire automotive industry, seeks collectively to bargain as to "wages, profits, prices."

"That is the economic equation," it says, "that we are talking about. You can't take one figure from that equation . . ."

Monopolistic Action Charged

One big monopoly union—a million strong—dealing with substantially all production in the industry, asserts as its future policy that it aims to settle the problems of wages, prices and profits for the entire industry around the bargaining table.

Such a national policy—and the union says it will settle on no other basis—leads to this inescapable alternative:

a. Either our anti-trust laws, which require competition and forbid collusive combinations between labor and management, must fall,

b. Or national unionism monopolizing collective bargaining with all competing units must abandon efforts to regulate prices and profits.

The union policy also claims the right to bargain over the calculation of profits and the selection of top management.

It declares that occasion might arise where it might be necessary for it to consider whether the company is "paying the president too much money"—whether the directors "who aren't doing anything might be getting too much money"—whether "the engineers ought to be sweeping the shop up instead of designing their products"—whether "the managerial personnel has gone to seed."

By this demand the union seeks to enter the very heart of management judgment and discretion in private industry and would persuade the Fact-Finding Board to do likewise. Heretofore such encroachment upon management has been exercised only by such regulatory bodies as the Interstate Commerce and Public Service Commissions when dealing with public utilities. To yield to such a demand would mean the end of free enterprise with efficient management, and since the new arrangements would become industry-wide, legislative regulation would inevitably ensue.

Enterprise Called at Stake

General Motors does not propose voluntarily to blaze a trail in this direction. If our system of free enterprise, of competition under our anti-trust laws, and of rewards for efficiency, productivity, invention and progress is to be abandoned, it must be by act of Congress and not by act of General Motors Corporation.

DEC 29 1945

30.24-32695

Under our competitive system the public received the benefits of industrial progress. Under the union program, operating on an industry-wide basis, management and labor could jointly parcel out the extent of the benefits to be shared with the public.

Under our present system of free enterprise, unions when acting alone, are exempt from anti-trust laws and as a labor monopoly may bargain the labor standards for an entire industry. Witness the United Mine Workers and the coal mining industry. With labor rates fixed by nation-wide bargaining, individual producers, competing on the basis of other factors of cost, strive to market their products. Between the floor of labor rates fixed by collective bargaining and the consumer's price, there is still room for competition to protect the public.

If national unions are permitted to bargain with employers on prices or profit margins, this area of competition and consumer protection will be removed. Combinations of this character between labor and management which undertake to control wages, profits and prices and marketing problems on the basis of mutual advantage have been recently condemned by the Supreme Court of the United States.

Union Ultimatum—The union has served notice on the Fact-Finding Board that no action by the board short of adoption of its position will be accepted. The union says:

"So we say we are fighting this for keeps. This fight is being made for keeps because unless we win this fight to get a proper relationship between wages and prices and profit and ability to pay we can't hope to win the peace. * * *

"The boys walking the streets know the score on this issue. They know what wages and prices are both their problem. * * *

"We will make no compromise. That is it, and we stand on that position."

The union says its demand for a 30 per cent increase subject to ability to pay must stand, even though wages measure up to the increased cost of living and even though there be no reduction in take-home, and it makes no claim that present wages are not fair or, in general, as high as any ever paid to any such large group of workers. The demand is for a 30 per cent increase if it can be supported on prospective prices and profits.

"If the arithmetic shows that we can't get 30 per cent without increasing prices, then we will back down on the 30 per cent. Otherwise it is there and will not be compromised on any other basis."

The problem of fixing a fair return on the investment was sidestepped.

The test of fairness and equity is rejected by the union. The union says the board "should not weigh the question of equity."

"You have nothing to do with equity," it told the board.

"We are only saying you take our standard. You accept no moral responsibility at all—it is a very convenient arrangement—you accept no moral responsibility, your conscience needn't bother you at all."

Questions Over Fact-Finding

How then can fact-finding function? The union begins by refusing the request of the President of the United States to resume work pending fact-finding—an essential part of the President's fact-finding program—and of any fact-finding program designed to avoid stoppages.

The union now serves notice on the Fact-Finding Board that, come what will, it will accept no compromise of its position. It will tolerate no other result.

The union insists that the Fact-Finding Board, which exists without legislative support, shall write a new charter for industry and the nation which would be both revolutionary and impracticable.

The corporation believes that collective bargaining, mediation, arbitration or fact-finding are not geared to handle fundamental questions of national policy.

The union, in no uncertain terms, announces in advance that whatever the Fact-Finding Board does, its position as to the fundamentals of its demand will be unaltered and unalterable. In the face of such an ultimatum, the company cannot in good faith proceed with fact-finding based on a condition which it cannot accept.

It is not a question of facts and figures. It is not a question of examining books and records. All information necessary to the investigation of the subjects properly under inquiry should be available to the board. The issue is far different from all this. We repeat, the union states as its ultimatum that the determination of its wage demands must be based on the determination of prices and profits in a manner heretofore never tried, and in a manner which would inevitably lead to conflict with our anti-trust laws.

With this background and the revolutionary and uncompromising character of the union's proposals in mind, the corporation is unwilling to participate in the proceedings of this Fact-Finding Board so long as its prices, profits and ability to pay—which are not facts but forecasts and estimates for the future—are to be regarded as proper factors in determining wages as applied to an individual business.

The company makes no claim of inability to pay any level of wages based on customary standards, but it is unwilling to accept a super-wage above that applicable to its competitors or other employers of like types of labor in the respective areas in which the corporation operates.

For the reasons outlined the General Motors Corporation feels that it has no choice but to withdraw from these proceedings, unless and until the board, on further consideration, should decide, that under the peculiar circumstances of this case, ability to pay is not a proper factor for its consideration.

C. I. O. TO CHECK UP ON CONGRESSMEN

Washington, Dec. 28 (A. P.).—The C. I. O. has asked members of its local units to find out how their Congressmen stand on proposed labor legislation and other issues in which the union is interested. In setting up the poll, an established C. I. O. practice during congressional recesses, Nathan Cowan, legislative director, wrote the locals that the reaction of Congressmen "will determine our attitude toward them in the forthcoming election."

The locals were supplied with a questionnaire for use in checking the legislators. The lawmakers will be asked whether they will support a 65-cent hourly wage minimum, low-cost housing, the Wagner-Murray health bill, and the anti-poll tax measure.

They also will be asked to state their position on President Truman's proposal for fact-finding in labor disputes, the Hobbs anti-racketeering bill, and the C. I. O.'s demand for a 30 per cent wage increase.

New Pay Raise Rules Listed

Wage Board to Consider Increases on Bargaining Unit Basis

Washington, Dec. 28 (AP)—The Wage Stabilization Board, getting ready to take over the only remaining duties of the expiring War Labor Board January 1, detailed its regulations today for approving wage increases which affect prices.

Following the general rules laid down by Stabilization Administrator John C. Collet on December 5, in which he said cost of living increases would be approved up to 33 per cent above January, 1941, rates, the board said it would consider such raises on a plant or bargaining unit basis, rather than on the pay of individuals.

The board said the amount due any group of employes as a "maladjustment allowance" will be computed on the basis of changes in the earnings average since the base date rather than by permitting a percentage increase in job rates, as was the practice under the Little Steel Formula.

The board said the 33 per cent is not to be figured on the basis of an individual employe's earnings, but would be based on the average earnings of the appropriate unit—the collective bargaining unit or some other appropriate group of workers.

UAW Head Sees Prices Rising

Thomas Predicts Tax Cut Will Find Production

DEC 29 1945

Shooting Upward

Detroit, Dec. 28 (AP)—Calling attention to the forthcoming 55 per cent cut in Federal excess profits taxes on January 1, President R. J. Thomas of the United Automobile Workers (CIO) charged today the national government has been subsidizing an industry-wide offensive to cut labor's wage standard and to skyrocket prices for consumers.

He predicted that the tax drop would find production of automobiles and other consumer goods "shooting upward."

"Under the present tax laws," Thomas said in a statement, "the United States Treasury is paying employers for locking out workers or for refusing to produce at OPA prices. For the auto industry alone two billion dollars of the nation's money is available to offset any loss or to compensate for profits which may be less than 'excessive' in 1945 and 1946.

"This is an industry strike fund provided at the expense of the nation's taxpayers." He said the tax cut has given industry a "direct financial stake in postponing production until next year."

Thomas added:

January 1 will not see an end, however, to the carry-back, carry-forward provisions of the Revenue Act. It will still be possible for auto companies to dip into a two billion dollar profit-insurance fund.

"In view of this situation the UAW-CIO pledges support to action already being discussed by national legislators looking toward the denial of carry-back or carry-forward privileges to profit-swollen corporations.

"The corporate grab at the United States Treasury must be stopped. The American tax payer must not be clipped for the cost of industry's campaign against American workers and consumers."

Bus Strikers To Begin Talks

Conciliation Service Sponsors Parley in Cleveland Today

Cleveland, Dec. 28 (AP) — Under Conciliation Service sponsorship, union and company officials will resume discussions here tomorrow and Sunday on the 18-State Greyhound bus strike.

The meeting was called by Howard T. Colvin, assistant director of the Conciliation Service, and will be attended by President R. W. Budd of Central Greyhound Lines, President S. R. Sunistrom of Pennsylvania Greyhound, and representatives of the AFL Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes Union, which began a strike November 1 over wage demands for drivers, maintenance and terminal employes.

The union's joint council met here today to discuss a proposal made December 19 by Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach, who appointed a fact-finding board to investigate the dispute, with the stipulations that operations be resumed, that there be no discrimination against strikers, and that any wage concessions be retroactive to October 31.

The strike, affecting about 4,000 employes in Eastern States, followed a breakdown of negotiations between the company and the union over a contract to replace one which expired October 31. Under the old contract, drivers east of Pittsburgh received five cents per mile, western drivers 4.85 cents and maintenance men an hourly minimum of 48 cents. The union asked 5.75 cents, 5.65 cents, and a 30 per cent increase for maintenance personnel. The company has offered 5.4 cents, 5.3 cents and 10 per cent.

AFL UNION THREATENS ITS OWN GLASS STRIKE

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Dec. 28 (AP)—The AFL Window Glass Cutters League of America threatened today to call a strike among its workers in plants of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company and Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Company, where a CIO union is already on strike.

A. U. Debrueque, national president of the AFL union, said a strike notice had been filed with the National Labor Relations Board against the two companies in a dispute over wage increases.

He said the union had 600 skilled workers in Libbey-Owens plants in Charleston, W. Va., and Shreveport, La., and in Pittsburgh Plate Glass plants in Henryetta, Okla.; Clarksburg, W. Va., and Mount Vernon, Ohio.

The CIO Federation of Glass, Ceramic and Silica Sand Workers has stated that 15,000 workers in twelve plants of the two companies in seven States have been on strike since Oct. 22 after negotiations for a new contract failed. The strike closed all twelve plants, leaving AFL workers idle.

Besides the plants already named, others made idle by the CIO strike are in Ford City and Creighton, Pa.; Toledo; Ottawa, Ill., and Crystal City, Mo.

Mr. Debrueque said the AFL union had been negotiating with the companies since last April over demands for a 15 per cent increase in piecework rates. He said that the War Labor Board last Dec. 14 allowed a 7.25 per cent increase but said that the companies refused to start retroactive pay on back bonuses to last March 8.

He contended that company refusal to make the payments constituted a "breach of good faith." He added that although the WLB now was "impotent," the union felt its decisions should be recognized.

The CIO federation's wage committee met here today to consider a company proposal designed to end its strike, but no decision was reached, Lewis McCracken, federation secretary-treasurer, reported.

BUILDING TRADES STRIKE VOTE ASKED

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—(AP) The A.F.L. Building and Construction Trades council said today a strike by an estimated 200,000 building trades workers in New York city probably would be called near the end of January.

The council said the walkout would be in protest against a decision of the wage adjustment board of the U. S. Department of Labor.

Howard McSpedon, council president, said in a statement that the council executive board has voted unanimously to ask the National Labor Relations board to take a strike ballot.

The decision, he said, was made while the committee was meeting with the board of governors of the Building Trades Association, Employer group.

DEC 29 1945

He added that the employers were "understanding and sympathetic" toward the union because they too were disappointed in the wage adjustment board's decision.

The board decision failed to give the workers, represented by 125 locals organized as the council, a straight 15 per cent wage increase that the union and employers had agreed was warranted and had asked for in a mutual submission to the board.

The board also failed to decide a mutual worker-employe request for six paid holidays or the alternative of a three per cent employer-supported welfare fund.

Bowles Accuses Four Agencies Of Discrimination in Hiring

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28 (AP).—Chester Bowles, Office of Price Administration administrator, has protested to the White House and the Civil Service Commission that "certain officers in the Federal agencies have shown marked resistance to employment of Negroes."

He wrote David K. Niles, administrative assistant to President Truman, on Dec. 7 and Arthur S. Fleming, chairman of the Civil Service Commission, on Dec. 4. The O. P. A. released the letters today after they had been published in some newspapers.

The White House made public on Dec. 20 a letter from Mr. Truman to department heads saying that "it has come to my attention that a considerable number of loyal and qualified employees have been refused transfer and re-employment . . . solely because of race and creed."

The President directed the department chiefs to "make careful analysis of your personnel policies, procedures and practices in order that you can assure me" that no discrimination is practiced.

Mr. Bowles wrote Mr. Fleming of "a few specific instances" where, he said, Negroes released by the O. P. A. met discrimination when they applied for new jobs at the State Department, the Weather Bureau, the Naval Research Laboratory and the Civil Aeronautics Administration.

"I am confident," Mr. Bowles added, "that the heads of these departments and agencies are not aware of these practices and would not approve them."

Mr. Bowles cited these details:

"Our officer in charge of outplacement, for example, found that although the State Department needed several messengers, they must be young, male, white and gentile.

"In the Weather Bureau, Department of Commerce, he was asked whether the applicants were of light complexion and told that they would not be interested in interviewing any colored applicants.

"The Naval Research Laboratory indicated that they had no Negro employees and did not have facilities for them. The Civil Aeronautics Administration, when considering an applicant, asked what university she attended.

"When she replied Howard University (a school for Negroes), she was informed that they did not anticipate any vacancies for which she might qualify."

Mr. Bowles urged the Civil Service Commission "to take whatever steps are necessary to keep open employment opportunities for our Negro employees when they are no longer needed by the O. P. A." He said that about 13 per cent of O. P. A.'s national office staff are Negroes.

Theodore P. Wright, administrator of the Civil Aeronautics Administration, said "This is the first time I have heard of the protest." He added there "must be some mistake, for that is not our policy."

A State Department spokesman said there was no line drawn as to race, color or creed in that branch of the government. "We have plenty of Negroes employed," he added.

W. F. MacDonald, assistant director of the Weather Bureau, said "It is not our policy to discriminate in any way at all. We have colored persons working for us and they are very much respected."

Bendix Aviation Plans To Spend $25,000,000

DETROIT, Dec. 28 (AP).—Expenditure of approximately $25,000,000 is anticipated by Bendix Aviation Corp. to purchase and modernize plants and facilities needed for its peace-time operations, Ernest R. Breech, president, said today in a letter to stockholders.

Noting that because of war demands on Bendix engineers only a few new products could be prepared for output prior to the war's end, Mr. Breech said that when other new products are ready to be introduced "capital will be required not only for plants and facilities but for usual working capital items."

Mr. Breech said contract cancellations and the problems and delays of reconversion had materially changed the corporation's profit picture. Directors in November reduced the dividend rate from 75 cents to 50 cents a share.

Bendix employment, he said, has been reduced from a war-time peak of more than 70,000 to approximately 22,000, with further reductions anticipated. He cited the need for supporting large-scale development programs, and said profits and stockholders were "squeezed in the middle" between government price-fixing policies and "very large" wage demands on the part of the unions.

WLB Accuses 29 Shipping Firms

Washington, Dec. 28 (A. P.).—The War Labor Board has found that twenty-nine shipping companies failed to comply with its wartime order to sign a collective bargaining contract with a C. I. O. union, the American Communications Association.

The board, which is going out of business, issued its order on May 25 last and announced its finding of non-compliance last night. The union and the companies agreed that all terms of the order were fulfilled with the exception of the contract provision.

The companies contended that the workers were not their employees, but were employed by the Government. They asserted the shippers could sign a collective agreement only as "general agents for the War Shipping Administration."

Rejects Lumber Markup

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28 (AP).—The Office of Price Administration turned down for the second time a request by wholesalers or commission men for establishment of a markup for direct mill lumber shipments.

Truman Is Back; To Speak On Thursday

Washington, Dec. 28 (AP)—President Truman returned by plane at 2.28 P.M. today after a 4-hour and 51-minute flight through cloudy weather from Kansas City.

The weather delayed the arrival from 1.32 P.M.

The President's big C-54 took off from icy runways at Kansas City at 9.37 A.M. Weather conditions dictated the cancellation of a planned en-route stop at St. Louis to pick up Reconversion Director John W. Snyder. Mrs. Snyder and their daughter Drusi. The Snyders flew with Mr. Truman as far as St. Louis when he made the trip out on Christmas Day.

First One Out

The Chief Executive, hands in his topcoat pocket and slouch hat pulled down over his eyes, was the first one to step down from the plane.

The presidential plane came in on instruments through a 900-foot ceiling to make the landing.

A crowd of several hundred, including service men waiting at National Airport for planes, gathered to see the President's arrival.

Very Pleasant Trip

The President told waiting reporters that he had a very pleasant trip and that he did not regard it as rough in any way.

"A lot of people were worried about your flight Mr. President," a reporter said.

"They need not have been," the President replied. He said he had sunshine for much of the way and only saw fog in taking off and landing.

The President's C-54 evidently flew above the overcast weather which caused drab low ceilings on the ground.

Visibility 1½ Miles

Army transport officers reported visibility here at 1½ miles and a ceiling of 700 feet when the transport landed.

The ground mist was quite heavy. Commercial planes were operating out of the field and had been all day.

Lieut. Gen. Harold L. George, chief of the Army Transport Command, and White House officials met Mr. Truman.

After the short pause to talk with reporters, he got into his car and motored to the White House.

Speaking At 10 P.M.

The President's radio report to the nation will be made between 10 and 10.30 P.M. (E.S.T.) next Thursday.

The White House made this announcement and said the speech will be carried on all networks from the first-floor Oval Room of the White House.

"As the President announced in Independence, it will be sort of a report to the people on his over-all program," said Charles G. Ross, press secretary.

Talk To Congress Later

"It is not to be confused, of course, with the state of nation message to Congress some time after January 14," Ross said, mentioning the date Congress is to reconvene.

It has yet to be decided definitely whether Mr. Truman will deliver the message to Congress in person.

Ross said that when the President returns to the White House this afternoon, he will act on some pending bills.

Going On Cruise

Then the Chief Executive plans to depart on the yacht Williamsburg for a five-night cruise down the Potomac River to Chesapeake Bay. He will return to the White House Wednesday.

The President will work on both his radio speech and his message to Congress while aboard the yacht, Ross added.

Keeping Close To Capital

At no time will the President be more than 100 miles from the Capital, Ross said. He will be in touch with the White House at all times by telephone and teletype.

Arrangements are expected to be made for the President to see Secretary of State Byrnes after his arrival from the Moscow Foreign Ministers' Conference some time tomorrow. It is probable that Byrnes will be driven to near-by Quantico, Va., to see the President on his yacht there.

The cruise will be pretty much of a working trip, Ross said, and these members of the White House staff are listed to be taken along:

John W. Snyder, Reconversion Director; Secretaries Ross, William D. Hassett and Matthew J. Connelly; Special Assistant Samuel I. Rosenman; Advisor George E. Allen; Administrative Assistant John R. Steelman, labor dispute specialist; Brig. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, military aide, and Commander Clark M. Clifford, acting naval aide.

No Newsmen Going

No newsmen will be on the cruise, but Ross said he will make a daily report to the White House on any developments.

There will be not set course. The yacht will anchor each night and cruise in the daytime. Mr. Truman will not go ashore anywhere except in case of emergency.

CAR TRUMAN USED HITS OIL TRUCK

Kansas City, Dec. 28 (A. P.).—A secret service man, driving the White House limousine back to Independence after President Truman's departure for Washington today, slid on icy streets and hit an oil truck. The front of the President's car was damaged slightly, but no one was injured.

The limousine, built originally for President Roosevelt and sent here for Mr. Truman's use during his Christmas visit at Independence, was traveling over the same route taken by the President earlier today in his trip to the airport. Streets here have been snow and ice covered for two weeks.

Truman Lands In Washington. Signs 64 Bills

President Sails on 4-Day Speech-Writing Cruise on Icy Potomac

Washington, Dec. 28 (AP)—President Truman flew back from his Christmas in Missouri today, signed 64 bills and saw several callers in three busy hours at the White House, and departed again for a four-day cruise on the icy Potomac River.

Aboard his yacht, he will draft a half-hour radio report to the nation to be made at 10 p. m. (Eastern Standard Time) January 3 over all networks. He also will work on his message on the State of the Union for Congress which reconvenes January 14.

Mr. Truman boarded his yacht, the Williamsburg, at the Navy Yard here in a wintry rain and it sailed at 6:05 p. m. (Eastern Standard Time). The yacht of Admiral Ernest J. King, moored alongside, had a Christmas tree on the forecastle and a figure of Santa Claus atop the funnel, but the Williamsburg had no decorations.

The Chief Executive pooh-poohed any concern over his Christmas Day flight in bad weather when he returned here this afternoon.

The President told newsmen on the airport runway as he alighted in a heavy mist that he had had a very pleasant flight both to and from his home in Independence, Mo., where he went for Christmas.

In reply to a reporter who said that "a great many people were worried" over the outward trip in ice and fog Christmas Day, the President said:

"They need not have been. We had a very pleasant trip—both ways."

"Did you have a very rough trip today?" he was asked.

"No, it was a pleasant trip—sunshine all the way, and only fog in taking off and landing."

He told a Secretary en route to the White House that he flew at 7,200 feet most of the way and averaged 230 miles an hour. He took off from ice covered runways at Kansas City at 9:37 a. m. (EST), and landed here at 2:30 p. m.

Visibility at the airport here was given by ATC officers as one and a half miles; ceiling, 700 feet. The President's C54, The Sacred Cow, could be heard over the field, but was not visible until it dropped through the mist a few hundred feet up. Commercial planes were not grounded today as they were when the President took off Tuesday.

Back in the White House the President went to work on several bills passed in the closing days of Congress. He also received Agriculture Secretary Anderson, Dean Acheson, Acting Secretary of State, and Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich), an American delegate to the United Nations General Assembly meeting in London next month. The latter two saw the President together.

The White House said arrangements would be made for Secretary of State Byrnes to report to the President tomorrow after the Secretary arrives by plane from the Moscow Foreign Ministers meeting. Byrnes probably will go to nearby Quantico, Va., to see Mr. Truman aboard his yacht, the Williamsburg.

Invited to accompany the President were Secretaries William D. Hassett, Matthew J. Connelly and Charles G. Ross; Judge Samuel I. Rosenman, special counsel; George E. Allen, unofficial adviser; and Dr. John R. Steelman, Administrative Assistant who deals especially with labor matters.

Reconversion Chief John W. Snyder was to go along, but bad weather delayed his departure from St. Louis and he is expected to join the party over the week end. Military and Navy aides also were in the party.

Truman Signs New GI Bill

Washington, Dec. 28 (AP).—President Truman late today signed a bill liberalizing the GI Bill of Rights, especially as they related to loans and education for veterans.

He signed the measure along with about 50 others passed in the closing days of Congress.

Highlights of the new veterans act include:

Increase in subsistence allowance for GI students from $50 to $65 monthly to those unmarried and $75 to $90 for those married.

The new law also does these things:

(1) Repeals a requirement of the original law deducting from any future bonus payment benefits received by a serviceman through the GI bill.

(2) Eases the heretofore stringent control of the Veterans' Administration over GI loans and raises the maximum government loan guarantee from $2,000 to $4,000 on real estate.

(3) Makes loans easier to obtain by making the "reasonable value" of property the basis of the loan rather than the "normal reasonable value."

(4) Broadens the purposes for which loans may be made and increases the period of repayment on real estate loans.

Huge Foreign Information Service Urged

Bureau Would Tell Foreigners About Americans and U. S. Policy

Washington, Dec. 28 (AP)—Assistant Secretary of State William Benton disclosed today that he had submitted plans for a multi-million dollar foreign information service employing 2,648 persons to the President and the Bureau of the Budget for approval.

At a news conference Benton declined to estimate the cost of the program at this stage but told reporters the government information specialists would staff American embassies and consular offices in at least 60 foreign countries.

Stressing that his plans had not been approved yet by Secretary of State Byrnes, he nevertheless outlined a nine-point platform which would combine the major activities of the government's two wartime information agencies, the Office of War Information and the Office of Inter-American Affairs.

The new office will be known as the Office of International Information and Cultural Affairs and will be charged with giving foreign peoples "a full and fair picture of American life and of the aims and policies of the United States government."

About 850 of the division's employes will be connected with short wave broadcasting activities, 400 will be United States public affairs officers serving with American missions aboard. About 500 more will be assigned to special information work in Germany, Austria and Japan, the remainder plus an additional 158 persons will staff the United States home offices.

Benton said this represented a "substantial reduction" over the total of 5,782 persons employed by OWI and OIAA last July. Purpose of the permanent information service, whose organization must be approved by Congress before June 30, 1946, will be to:

1. Exchange students, technicians and other experts with foreign countries while coordinating activities of 26 government departments and bureaus interested in foreign programs.

2. Maintain and service American libraries of information in 60 countries.

3. Publish an expanded 7,000-word daily wireless bulletin for transmission to American diplomatic posts abroad and later distribution to foreign nationals desiring it. This bulletin would contain full texts and excerpts of "important official pronouncements."

4. Send a "documentary service" abroad featuring background material, biographical sketches and other factual material about the United States plus a small number of photographs.

5. Prepare photo-exhibits and film strips for showing in foreign countries.

6. Continue publication of the bi-monthly Russian-language illustrated magazine and discontinue three other similar publications, Victory, USA, and En Guardia.

7. Acquire, adapt and score in foreign languages weekly news reels and documentary films about the United States. Benton said American newsreel companies assisting in the program had agreed to bear a $100,000,000 loss in order to make this feature possible.

8. Maintain a 400 United States public affairs officers in at least 62 countries who would "provide information about the United States through all media and especially through personal contacts."

9. Operate short-wave broadcasting programs either with or without assistance of public or private corporations, using 18 languages instead of the 40 used during war-time. Benton said he already had worked out an arrangement with private corporations who participated in this program during war-time to carry on this work until June 30, 1947, or until Congress approved the peacetime setup.

Commerce Department Backs U. S. on Argentina

Reports 'Complete Accord' With Braden's Position

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28 (AP).—Arthur Paul, assistant to the Secretary of Commerce and director of the Office of International Trade, said today the Department of Commerce "fully supports" the State Department's policy regarding Argentina.

In a formal statement Mr. Paul said: "The Office of International Trade, as well as its predecessor agency, the Foreign Economic Administration, also has been in complete accord with Assistant Secretary of State Spruille Braden's position in connection with United States policy toward Argentina, and his handling of these affairs while Ambassador in Buenos Aires.

"There have been conversations with the State Department regarding the application of this policy to the export licensing of specific commodities. These discussions have led to agreement on these particular points."

COURT CURBS REDS IN BUENOS AIRES

Buenos Aires, Dec. 28 (A. P.).—The Argentine Communist party was barred today by a Federal court ruling from listing its candidates on official ballots and holding political meetings in the province of Buenos Aires, largest voting unit in Argentina. Although the Communists are expected to appeal the decision, the Supreme Court begins a month's recess January 1 and national elections take place February 24, which means the Communists would have little time to campaign even if the ban is overruled.

Tonight the Government was reported preparing a decree to authorize the seizure of all newsprint in the country. The measure would assure distribution of newsprint to some of the smaller newspapers supporting the presidential candidacy of Col. Juan Peron. Well-informed persons said the major newspapers of Buenos Aires are able to obtain newsprint abroad at about half the price paid by the small journals for domestic supplies.

U. S. Protests to Paraguay

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28 (AP).—The United States, it was learned today, has protested formally to Paraguay that references to this nation in a book written by the Paraguayan Army chief of staff are objectionable and offensive. The book was written by Colonel Bernardo Aranda and is entitled "The Armed Forces and National Problems."

U. S. Shipments Abroad Decline 12% in October

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28 (AP).—With continued decreases in Lend-Lease exports, United States shipments abroad declined again in October to $455,000,000, 12 per cent below September exports of $515,000,000.

Lend-Lease exports dropped to $75,000,000 from $158,000,000 in September and $413,000,000 in August. Most Lend-Lease exports in October represented shipments for which arrangements for repayment were completed prior to the exportation of the merchandise. Much of it was already in procurement "pipe lines" at the cessation of hostilities with Japan.

TO SEIZE AXIS PROPERTY

Custodian Moves to Take German, Japanese Holdings Feb. 28

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28 (AP)—James E. Markham, alien property custodian, moved today to seize all property in the United States or the territories owned by Japanese or German nationals.

He issued an order requiring reports on such property and said that it would be confiscated as soon as the reports—due Feb. 28—were received.

Mr. Markham described the action as part of the Government's program to wipe out Japanese and German economic power in this country. He recalled that President Truman authorized him last summer to take over Japanese and German cash and securities.

Under the order, a national of Germany or Japan is defined as any person who on, or since, June 14, 1941, has been a resident or a subject of either country. The order. Mr. Markham said, also applied to any person who had custody, control or possession of enemy-owned property or had reason to believe that property or interest in property might be owned by an enemy national.

TOWERS TO LEAD PACIFIC FLEET

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28—(AP) Admiral John H. Towers today was named commander in chief of the Pacific fleet, succeeding Admiral Raymond A. Spruance, who was ordered to duty as president of the Naval War College at Newport, R.I.

Admiral Richard S. Edwards, vice chief of naval operations, was assigned duty as commander of the western sea frontier, succeeding Admiral Royal E. Ingersoll, whose new assignment has not been announced.

Other orders announced by the Navy today named Rear Admiral Arthur W. Radford as deputy chief of naval operations for air, succeeding Vice Admiral Marc A. Mitscher, who was assigned duty as commander of the 8th fleet.

Vice Admiral Bernhard H. Bieri, succeeded yesterday as deputy chief of naval operations for administration by Rear Admiral Richard L. Conolly, was named commander of the 10th fleet.

The 8th and 10th fleets are combat task forces, assigned to the Atlantic fleet.

Admiral Towers was relieved as commander of the 5th fleet by Vice Admiral Frederick C. Sherman, in orders announced yesterday.

Today's shift in commands completed a previously announced program giving additional emphasis to aviation in the Navy's military organization. Admiral Towers, the Navy's current number one aviator, becomes the first flying officer to hold the top command in the Pacific.

Lemnitzer on Joint Strategic Committee

Washington, Dec. 28 (AP).—Maj. Gen. Lyman Louis Lemnitzer, former deputy chief of staff of the Allied Force Headquarters at Caserta, Italy, today is serving on the U. S. Joint Strategic Committee, appointed by Secretary of War Patterson to represent the Army. He succeeds Lt. Gen. Stanley D. Embick.

Gen. Lemnitzer, a native of Honesdale, Pa., is a graduate of the U. S. Military Academy, class of 1920. His first commission was in a coast artillery corps. He has served at various coast defense stations in the United States and in the Philippines prior to the second World War.

In July 1941 he came to Washington as an assistant to the War Department's operations and training officer. The following March he was transferred to Headquarters, the Ground Forces. In June, 1942, he took command of the 34th Coast Artillery Brigade and went overseas with the unit in August.

He commanded the 15th Army group in the North African Theater. In December 1944 he was assigned as deputy Chief of Staff of the Headquarters of the Allied Forces.

HALSEY MAY HEAD MARITIME BOARD

Washington, Dec. 28 (A. P.).—Admiral William F. Halsey may become chairman of the Maritime Commission after he retires from the Navy, it was reported today by industry officials. Halsey, former Third fleet commander, could not be reached for comment. He is on temporary duty at the Navy Department prior to leaving the service.

The commission chairmanship is expected to be vacant after January 1, when Vice-Admiral

DEC 29 1945

Emory S. Land becomes president of the Air Transport Association. Land's resignation has not been announced, but aviation officials have said he was offered the association presidency and probably would be permitted to leave Government service at the end of the year.

The prospective moves, with a naval aviator holding the top spot in commercial shipping, and a lifelong Navy surface man heading the airlines, have led to speculation that facilities of surface and air carriers may be coordinated in some areas to avoid duplication of costs.

Gen. Noce Gets New Post

He Is Named Deputy Commander of Army Service Forces

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28 (AP).—Appointment of Major General Daniel Noce as deputy commander and chief of staff of the Army Service Forces was announced today by the War Department.

General Noce, a native of Denver, succeeds Lieutenant Genera LeRoy Lutes, who has been appointed chief of the A. S. F.

Atom Bomb Test at Sea Poses Question of Alien Observers

Washington, Dec. 28 (A. P.)—The forthcoming Army-Navy test of atomic bombs at sea poses a military-diplomatic question for the United States: Should the precedent of the 1923 airpower-vs.-warships experiments be followed to permit foreign observers to attend?

The co-possessors of the bomb secret—the United States, Britain and Canada—apparently made no commitment at the Moscow Foreign Ministers conference to share the secret with any other Power at this time. This, however, does not necessarily preclude the possibility that some foreign observers might witness phases of the ocean tests if visual observation is possible.

On the other historic occasion—when the Army Air Corps' Brig.-Gen. William Mitchell bombed and sank German and American warships off Cape Hatteras—world Powers had their representatives there to learn what lessons they could.

They were aboard the Navy transport Henderson, anchored well away from the target ships. They were able to report only what they saw, however. The American Navy and Army withheld detailed, technical data, especially that concerning tests against the uncompleted United States battleship Washington.

Difference in Tests.

There is this difference between the 1923 tests and those of the A-bomb: the Mitchell experiment involved no truly secret weapon.

Whatever the decision on other observers, it is assumed that Britain and Canada will be invited to the atomic bomb tests.

Britain particularly will share this country's keen interest in the outcome. She, like the United States, is a great naval Power, confronted with the problem of deciding now what changes the atom bomb will dictate in the character of future fleets.

Russia, never a top-ranking naval Power, will not have the same high stakes. But she has expanded her naval strength during and since the war.

Whether or not Russian observers see the tests on naval craft, the Soviet Government already is in a position to know the destruction wrought by atomic bombs on land structures and people. Russian military missions were in Japan after the atom bomb attacks on Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

Russia Not Represented.

The 1923 naval experiments were conducted about sixty miles off the Virginia Capes, on ships bombed by planes from Langley Field under the command of Mitchell. Among vessels used for targets were the old American battleships New Jersey and Virginia and the German capital ship Ostfriesland. Foreign representatives aboard the observation ship included naval and military experts from Britain, France and Japan, the latter a world war I allied power. Russia was not represented.

Atomic bomb experts say it is doubtful any surface observation of the forthcoming tests against warships can be made close enough to be of any real worth. It is expected that reliance will be placed chiefly on observation from airplanes, including photography and instruments aboard unmanned vessels to record shock, heat, radio-activity and other factors.

A-Bomb Worker Sues; Injured By 'Fumes'

Knoxville, Tenn., Dec. 28 (AP)—Walter Edwards, of Cumberland county, Tennessee, has filed suit here for $20,000 damages he contends is due him for injuries from poisonous fumes at the atomic-bomb works at Oak Ridge.

In his Circuit Court suit against Carbide and Carbon Chemicals Corporation, Edwards declares he "inhaled poisonous fumes and contracted chemical irritation of the respiratory system" as a result of his duties of cleaning "certain equipment" in which "gasses and chemicals were used" in "a gaseous diffusion method employed to split the atom."

The bill says Edwards has been under a physician's care since last March.

LUCAS FINDS NO WAR COMMITMENT

Washington, Dec. 28 (A. P.).—Senator Lucas (D.-Ill.) contended today that evidence before the Pearl Harbor committee has established that President Roosevelt made no pre-war commitments to fight Japan.

"The evidence up to this time has definitely disclosed that not a single secret commitment was made by President Roosevelt with Great Britain or any other country to go into the war before Pearl Harbor was attacked," Lucas told a reporter.

Republican members of the investigating committee said they want to hear more testimony before they pass judgment. Senator Ferguson (R.-Mich.) said this was his attitude* as did Representative Gearhart (R.-Cal.).

Gearhart previously told a reporter he did not think any point had been proved in regard to what he termed possible promises by Mr. Roosevelt to former Prime Minister Churchill of Great Britain.

"Mr. Welles certainly gave us some indications that some definite commitments of one kind or another were made at the Atlantic Conference," Gearhart said.

GOVERNMENT HAS 'MONEY IN BANK'

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28 — (AP) The government has more money "in the bank" to work with today than it has ever had before.

Today's "working balance" — money the government uses to pay current costs and which parallels an individual's checking account—now amounts to $26,241,455,062.42. It may go as high as $28,000,000,000.

Here's the picture in round numbers:

In the government's "checking account": $26,000,000,000.

Interest cost to the government on this amount, at about 2 per cent: Approximately $520,000,000.

The cash came from two sources: 1—sales of victory loan bonds. 2—higher receipts from taxes. (Unemployment did not develop as had been expected so national income and tax receipts were higher than expected.)

Secretary Vinson recently said he believed in a "safe" working balance but declined to name the safety margin. Fiscal experts believe that either the government will move to reduce the present balance or there'll be a demand from Congress for a reduction.

The working balance, it was explained, represents borrowed money on which the United States must pay interest. This, in turn, puts a heavier drain on the taxpayer's pocketbook—since he eventually foots the bill.

Reduction of the working balance could be accomplished in several ways of which these two are most probable, according to these fiscal experts:

1. Use the money to finance the deficit—the excess of payments over receipts—instead of selling new paper for securities and thus increasing, or at least maintaining the public debt.

2. Redeem or pay off to some degree those securities which will mature in the near future, instead of re-funding the securities and continuing the debt.

Michigan Plan Gives Veterans Care at Home

Veterans Administration Contracts With Doctors; May Include Other States

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28 (AP).—Establishing a new policy to relieve its crowded facilities, the Veterans Administration today announced a contract with Michigan physicians to treat ex-soldiers at home.

The contract is with the Michigan State Medical Society. It provides for its member doctors to treat war veterans whose disabilities are service-connected but do not require hospitalization.

Another plan nearing final approval would permit veterans to be hospitalized in their own community hospital instead of a Veterans Administration institution. The Veterans Administration would pay the bill.

Major General Paul R. Hawley, acting surgeon general of the Veterans Administration, said that if the Michigan plan is successful it will be used in other states.

First State-wide Contract

A Veteran Administration statement said that this is the first time a contract has been signed on a state-wide basis for care of veterans by private physicians.

It added that the plan might increase the medical care and hospital space available for veterans with non-service connected disabilities. Federal law requires hospitalization of veterans with non-service-connected disabilities only if Veterans Administration facilities are available.

The Michigan plan will operate like a Blue Cross project. A veteran may apply to his family physician or to the Veterans Administration in his own community. The Veterans Administration decides if the injury is a result of military service. If it is, the veteran's physician may treat him; the bill is sent to Michigan Medical Service, a non-profit, pre-payment medical organization. The Medical Service collects the physician's fee from the Veterans Administration and forwards it to him.

If the hospital plan is approved, it will operate in a similar manner.

List of Fees Specified

A list of 400 fees for various treatments is specified. As a sample, the price of an appendectomy or a hernia operation is $80.25. The fee for examination of heart or lungs is $5.35.

The fees are based on physicians' charges in Michigan and were approved by the Medical Society and the Veterans Administration.

General Hawley called it a "stop gap" plan until Veterans Administration hospitals, with a capacity of 44,000 beds, can be constructed and more hospitals can be obtained from the Army and Navy. This plan is expected to take two years to complete.

Monmouth County Plan

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Dec. 28 (AP).—A Monmouth County veterans' medical-care plan has been operating successfully for two months with private physicians donating services free during an experimental three-month period.

The Monmouth County Medical Society set up a system whereby a veteran with service-connected disability first visits his family physician who refers the case to a screening board, if necessary. The board determines whether a specialist is required to handle the case and decides on the treatment.

Clinics have been opened in the Monmouth Memorial Hospital, Long Branch, and the Fitkin Memorial Hospital, in Neptune, where cases may be considered every ten days.

The Veterans' Administration and the medical society agreed upon the plan and its experimental stage with the understanding the Veterans' Administration would assume the costs if the trial period proved successful.

Thomas Appoints Group to Draft Merger of Services

Three Senators, a General and an Admiral to Work Out Truman Plan Details

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28 (AP).—Senator Elbert D. Thomas, Democrat, of Utah, announced today that legislation "to carry out all of President Truman's recommendations for unification of the armed forces will be ready for action by Jan. 14."

At the same time Senator Thomas, chairman of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, announced appointment of a special small committee of three Senators, an Army general, and a Navy admiral to work out all details.

Members of this group are Senators Thomas, and Lester Hill, Democrat, of Alabama; and Warren R. Austin, Republican, of Vermont; Major General Lauris Norstad, of the A. A. F. headquarters plans staff, and Rear Admiral Arthur Radford, new deputy chief of naval operations for air.

President Truman has asked Congress for a single Department of National Defense to replace the present War and Navy Departments. He asked that land, sea and air forces be placed on a coordinated basis under this single Cabinet member.

Appointment of Admiral Radford to the group working on unification legislation attracted attention because in lengthy hearings before the Senate committee all Navy witnesses had opposed any plan that involved merger of the present separate Navy Department.

"I asked Secretary Forrestal to send up an officer to represent the Navy," Chairman Thomas said. "As usual, the Navy co-operated."

Reminded that all previous Navy Department representatives had opposed unification, Chairman Thomas said the President as commander in chief has asked for the single department and added: "I don't suppose the Navy will oppose him."

GI Wives to Be Admitted

Washington, Dec. 28 (AP)—President Truman signed into law today legislation to expedite admission into the United States of foreign born wives, husbands and children of members of the American armed forces. The legislation would relax immigration laws for this purpose.

Youths Interned by Enemy Are Exempted

Washington, Dec. 28 (AP)—Selective Service today ordered draft exemptions for youths who were interned as civilians by enemy nations during the war.

State directors were told in telegrams to advise local boards not to process induction any youths who were interned, on or after December 7, 1941.

Selective Service did not estimate the number affected. However, the office of Senator Millikin (R-Colo), who had requested the order, put the number at about 50.

Among these were three Denver, Colo., youths whose impending induction had brought protests from the American Legion there. They had been interned by the Japanese.

asked to assume about $267,000,000 of the subsidies in the form of slightly higher prices. In that event, producers will be required to assume the remaining $343,000,000 in the form of lower prices for their meat animals.

The Government several weeks ago announced that $1,785,000,000 in food subsidies would be eliminated by June 30, 1946.

Started During The War

The subsidies were started during the war for the dual purpose of preventing undue advances in consumer prices and to encourage greater production.

Price stabilization and food officials are conferring on detailed plans for elimination of the subsidies. An announcement on the meat phase is expected soon because cattlemen have been promised a six months' notice on price changes.

The meat subsidies have been saving consumers all the way from 8.5 cents a pound for sliced ham to 3.7 cents on salt pork.

The question facing the Government is how much of this saving should be taken away from the consumer and how much shifted to the farmers.

Some Government circles suggest that farmers assume the full loss of production incentive subsidies, of which there are two. One is 50 cents a hundred on the top two grades of beef cattle. The other ranges from $1 to $3.15 a hundred for sheep and lamb. These subsidies cost the Government $76,000,000 yearly.

It also has been suggested that the loss effect of slaughterer subsidies totaling about $535,000,000 annually be divided equally between consumers and producers.

Aided Slaughterers

Most of these subsidies were started in June, 1943, when the Government reduced prices on meats ten per cent. The subsidies were designed to enable slaughterers to keep paying the same price for meat animals.

Officials estimate that should this plan be put into effect ceiling prices on meats would be increased about as follows:

Round steak, 4 cents a pound; rib roasts, 3.5 cents; chuck roast, 2.5 cents; hamburger, 2.8 cents; veal cutlets, 2.5 cents; pork chops, 3 cents; bacon, 3.4 cents; salt pork, 2 cents, and sliced ham, 3.4 cents.

Depends On Demand

These higher prices would prevail, however, only if the demand continued sufficient to push them to the ceiling limits.

Farmers would tend to get about 80 cents a hundred less for their hogs, 55 cents less for veal calves, $1 to $3.15 for sheep and lambs, and from 65 cents to $1.50 less for their cattle, depending on grade.

Meat-Price Increase Considered Possible

Washington, Dec. 28 (AP)—The Government is expected to announce by January 1 whether ceiling prices on meats are to be increased when some $610,000,000 in yearly subsidies are withdrawn by next June 30.

Under present indications, it is possible that consumers will be

O. P. A. Grants Price Rises on Brick and Tile

Acts to Spur Flow of Home Building Material; Pi mo Levels Set by the Agency

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28 (AP).—The Office of Price Administration granted today price increases, effective Jan. 2, on brick and tile produced in ten Western states as a step toward speeding the flow of materials into home building.

The boost was provided in one of a series of pricing orders on items ranging from pianos to domestic swiss cheese, as follows:

BRICK AND TILE: An increase of $2 a thousand in manufacturers' plant ceiling prices for clay and shale building brick, both common and face, and an 80 cents a ton increase on hollow and clay drain tile were authorized. This applies to products produced in California, Idaho, Nevada, Wyoming, Utah, New Mexico, Washington, Arizona, Oregon and Montana. The increases may be passed on to the consumer. Similar boosts previously had been authorized for producers east of the Rocky Mountains.

OILCLOTH: Effective Jan. 2 manufacturers received a 15 per cent increase over October, 1941, levels to compensate them for higher production and labor costs. Wholesalers were allowed a 9.1 per cent increase over March 1, 1942, prices, except on wall oilcloth. Retail prices remain the same, pending an O. P. A. study to find out how much of the wholesalers' increase retailers can absorb.

PIANOS: Piano and piano-parts manufacturers, now resuming production for the first time since the war, will be allowed to calculate ceiling prices on the basis of estimated total production costs and sales during the three months after they file their reports. The prices will remain in force for four months and then will be subject to revision on the basis of profits and losses.

DOMESTIC SWISS CHEESE: Cents-a-pound ceilings were established at all levels, with the exception of retail. O. P. A. said retail prices will continue on about the same basis. Effective Jan. 3, typical new prices for sales in Wisconsin by processors will be 40¼ cents for a half-pound package, and 41.05 cents on sales by primary wholesalers.

NEW CARS WILL LACK SPARE TIRE

Motorists Will Be Allowed to Buy 5th Tire

Washington, Dec. 28 (AP).—New cars will lack spare tires in 1946, but there will be nothing to prevent a motorist from buying a fifth tire from a dealer.

Civilian Production Administration officials acknowledged this today in announcing that the ban against putting spare tires on new automobiles at the factory will be incorporated in CPA rubber regulations after January 1, when tire rationing ends. At present the order is on OPA's books.

The prohibition applies to trucks, trailers and tractors, as well as passenger cars.

"Tires will not be in plentiful supply for several months," a CPA official said, "but there will be enough to allow all vehicles to remain in operation if owners do not hoard or 'hog' tires."

GROUP STARTS FOR JAPAN

Members of Old Far Eastern Board Go Under 'Original Orders'

HAMILTON FIELD, Calif., Dec. 28 (AP)—Delegates of the ten-nation Far Eastern Commission, although uncertain of the board's future status, left here at 9 A. M., Pacific standard time, today in two Air Transport Command planes for Honolulu for its inspection tour of Japan.

The chairman of the group, Maj. Gen. Frank R. McCoy, USA, said last night he did not know whether the commission would be replaced by a new one as a result of the Big Three announcement from Moscow of the agreement to form a revised Far Eastern Commission.

At Washington an official concerned with policy-making machinery for Japan said as a practical matter the original body probably would remain intact, the change being in the addition of Russian representation.

The McCoy group is made up of delegates from the United States, New Zealand, Britain, the Netherlands, China, France, Canada, the Philippines, Australia and India. General McCoy said the group was "proceeding on our original orders."

NAVY 'REVOLT' WINS REPAIRS ON TRAIN

Pacific Veterans Travel East After Fort Wayne Protest at Lack of Heat, Water

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 28 (AP)—Nearly 600 Navy combat men, riding a troop train which many of them had refused to reboard last night in Fort Wayne, Ind., until "bad conditions" were remedied, stopped briefly in Pittsburgh today, en route to separation centers in Maryland and New York.

The sailors, veterans of the victorious Third and Fifth Fleets, had only five minutes here before the train resumed its eastward trek, but some of them found time to renew grievances against their transportation.

One of them waved at a converted baggage car in which the men were fed and grumbled:

"Look at this pig-sty we have to eat in."

Another added:

"Yesterday we ate just twice. And the food: We've gone broke buying our own food along the way."

The commander of the seamen, a lieutenant junior grade who asked anonymity, said he would file an official protest upon arrival on the East Coast. He stated that sixteen trains had passed his train between Chicago and Fort Wayne.

At Fort Wayne, Chief Petty Officer John Hunter, who said he spoke for the seamen, declared none of the train's eleven coaches had any water for twenty-five hours and that three of the coaches had no lights.

During two hours' delay, which resulted when some of the sailors refused to reboard the train, water was put in and broken windows in the coaches repaired. Two wooden coaches were taken off.

Several inscriptions had been chalked on the sides of the coaches by the sailors, including:

"Nothing is too good for the returning veteran."

"For pigs and sailors only. Refrigerator cars."

"This coach brought by grandpappy back from the Civil War. It brought my dad back in 1918. I'm going to get out and walk."

The train started from the West Coast Sunday morning. Hunter said the trip from Chicago to Fort Wayne, 150 miles, took fourteen hours. The train was carrying men for the Navy stations at Lido Beach, N. Y., and Bainbridge, Md.

6 Coaches Reach Long Beach, L. I.

The troop train was split yesterday afternoon at Harrisburg, Pa., five coaches going to Bainbridge, Md., and six to Long Beach, L. I. The Long Beach train arrived there at 11:45 o'clock last night with 300 men, all of whom were taken by buses to the near-by naval separation center at Lido Beach.

In an effort to make up for lost time, the Pennsylvania Railroad cleared all tracks for the Long Beach-bound special, the train making a seventy-six-mile run from a point outside of Philadelphia to the Pennsylvania Station here in sixty-seven minutes. The train passed through the city terminal at 10:33 P. M.

Pennsylvania Railroad officials issued a statement here saying the lack of water on the train was "in part due to the fact that the cars were delivered to the Pennsylvania at Chicago by an Illinois Central locomotive not equipped for heating cars, thereby causing freezing of plumbing facilities."

Pennsylvania officials said their information was that the train was side-tracked and passed by only six other trains between Chicago and Fort Wayne, and that one of these was a troop-train while the others were regular passenger trains carrying a large percentage of service men.

Hull Cracked, Ship Makes Port

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 28 (AP).—Buffeted by an Atlantic storm for sixteen days, the steamship Monte Orduna was forced to put into port here today, its hull cracked in nine places and its propeller damaged. The Monte Orduna, a lightly loaded 5,529-ton vessel, was bound for Canada from Seville, Spain.

FORMER G.I. HELD, WED FOUR GIRLS

ELYRIA, O., Dec. 28—(AP) Ex-serviceman Leonard E. Smith, 25, who admitted marrying four 17-year-old girls within three years, was charged with bigamy today.

Justice of the Peace Otto K. Mischka, who bound the former Army physical instructor over to the Grand Jury under $5,000 bond, said the discharged veteran was arrested on complaint of wife No. 3, the former Helen Edgington of nearby Willard, who filed the charge after Smith's fourth marriage here Nov. 23.

Wife No. 4, the former Donna Mae Duffield of Lorain, O., declared at Smith's arraignment, Mischka reported, that she was disappointed in him because he was not a good husband and he said he would be."

Justice Mischka gave this account of Smith's marital career:

His first wife was the former Bonnie Tucker of Ashland, O., but Smith said he was divorced from her shortly after the marriage.

He then married Agnes Fritsch of Bellevue, O., but Smith contended the marriage to wife No. 2 was annulled.

Wife No. 3 said Smith showed her a copy of his certificate of divorce from wife No. 1 but that she was unable to find court verification of the annullment from wife No. 2.

Smith contended he thought he had been divorced from wife No. 3 but Common Pleas Judge Edgar Martin of Norwalk refused to grant a decree last Oct. 29.

British Bride Meets Husband

Baltimore, Dec. 28 (AP)—The case of the stowaway British bride untangled itself a little today.

Still, some more time must elapse before 19-year-old Brenda Grandfield Morgan can know for certain that she can stay in the United States.

The waiting period will be a happy one, though, for the pretty English girl was paroled in custody of her husband, 26-year-old John William (Bill) Morgan, who flew in this morning from Wichita Falls, Texas.

Brenda, who arrived off Baltimore Christmas Eve on a British freighter, was ordered excluded by an immigration special board of inquiry, but officials admitted it was largely a technicality.

Morgan and his wife appealed immediately to the Board of Immigration Appeals in Washington. But they probably won't have to wait for that to go through the slow mills of the law. President Truman signed into law today legislation to expedite admission of wives of GI's. The law dispenses with the usual formalities for immigrants.

Reunion for the couple came in the stodgy immigration offices.

"Oh, it was so wonderful to see him again,' breathed Brenda as she related how impatient she had become in her Bristol, England, home and decided to do her own red-tape cutting by just getting on a boat.

Brenda and Bill met at a dance in November, 1943, when he was a sergeant of coast artillery. On V-E Day he was in Weimar, Germany. He obtained a five-day pass and flew to Bristol for his wedding.

Bill went home soon afterward. He wrote from Texas, where he is in the insurance business, saying he would arrange for passage. There were delays, so after Brenda waited as long as she could she just stowed away on the freighter, Empire Chamois.

Said both Bill and Brenda as they left the hearing room, arm in arm, "Everything will come out all right."

There was just a tiny speck of darkness in all the light which was breaking over them. Said Brenda:

"My first American food on shore was just a little disappointing. They gave me some turkey—and I've heard about it so often—but they put it between two pieces of bread and spoiled the taste."

Doctors Despair of Restoring Sight to GI Aided Youngster

By CHARLES WHITEFORD

BALTIMORE, Dec. 28—(AP) He doesn't know it yet, but eight-year-old Gianfranco Cabbia's GI-sponsored trip from Italy to America in search of the sight he lost when kicked by a German cavalryman's horse probably will end in failure.

Gianfranco came to the Johns Hopkins hospital tonight with "Gugliamo," his term for Pfc. Howard W. Gorgas of Montpelier, Ohio, an 88th division infantryman. He accompanied the boy from Italy after the division personnel had chipped in $3,500 for expenses. Two other divisions also aided Gianfranco.

Dr. Alan C. Woods, director of the Wilmer Eye Institute at Hopkins, made a preliminary examination and said the sight in Gianfranco's left eye is irreparably damaged, and there is extensive damage to the other.

"There doesn't seem to be much of a chance to help the lad," he said, "but we'll try.

"Incidentally, the cost of the operation won't come out of the soldiers' fund—we'll take care of that."

Dressed in an army uniform complete with the insignia of three divisions—the 85th, 88th and 34th—Gianfranco was a tired little boy on his arrival at the hospital, but was cheerful and, with Gorgas as interpreter, told of the trip.

One of his biggest thrills was the train ride from New York. Despite his years, he is an accomplished accordionist, and composed a little piece of his own on the way down.

"At first I thought I would call it 'The Horse,'" he said, "but now I think I'll name it 'Boy on A Train.'"

Gorgas said the child had two audiences with Pope Pius XII, the last time just a day or two before they started for the United States.

"The Pope said he would ask the people of Italy to pray that the operation will be successful when the time came," he said.

"I am going to send a cable to his Holiness tonight, asking for his prayers and blessing."

Destroyer Named for Hop Bottom Officer

Orange, Tex., Dec. 28 (AP)—The Destroyer USS Carpenter, named in honor of the late Lt. Comdr. Donald Marshall Carpenter, USN, of Hop Bottom, Pa., was launched here today.

Mrs. Donald M. Carpenter, Coronado, Calif., widow of Lt. Comdr. Carpenter, christened the vessel as it slipped into the waters of the Sabine River.

H. C. Cranfill, vice president of the Consolidated Steel Corporation, was master of ceremonies and gave a brief history of Lt. Comdr. Carpenter.

He was born in Hop Bottom, Pa., March 6, 1894, and died April 4, 1940, in San Diego, Calif. He was awarded the Victory Medal and the Grand Fleet Clasp.

Lt. Comdr. Carpenter attended schools in Scranton, Pa., graduated from McKeesport (Pa.) High School and was appointed to the U. S. Naval Academy from district 13 in 1912.

Irate Sailors Delay Own Troop Train, Insist on Repairs

Say Cars Lacked Water and Lights; P.R.R. Tells of Mix-Up in Equipment

FORT WAYNE, Ind., Dec. 28 (AP).—An eastbound Pennsylvania Railroad troop train carrying 573 Navy veterans of the Pacific war was delayed here nearly two hours last night when many of the seamen got off during a stop and refused to board it again until what they described as "bad" conditions were remedied.

Chief Petty Officer John Hunter, who said he was a Navy combat correspondent and spokesman for the group, said none of the eleven coaches on the train had any water for sanitary or drinking purposes for more than twenty-five hours. He said three of the coaches had no lights.

Local officials of the Pennsylvania Railroad said the train was being serviced here because it needed service and not because any protest had been filed. Water was put in and broken windows were repaired. Two wooden coaches were taken off the train.

Hunter said the 150-mile trip here from Chicago had taken fourteen hours. He said the speed of the train had been limited to forty miles an hour and that it had been sidetracked for both passenger and freight trains.

SAVAGE ATLANTIC STORM BATTERED TROOP TRANSPORT

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—(AP) The cruiser Portland arrived here today with troops and sailors telling of terrific gales on the Atlantic which took a toll of two soldiers dead, one missing and 22 injured.

The 20,000 ton vessel, which saw 15 engagements in three years of Pacific warfare, docked with her radar antenna bent back against her foremast and her starboard hangar bulkheads riped off by the storms. She carried 1,159 troops.

The rtland's captain, Lowe H. Bibby, of Alexandria, Va., described the weather as "the worst storms I have seen in 28 years of naval seafaring."

Echoing the Portland's captain was the skipper of the light cruiser Boise, Capt. Charles C. Hartman of Santa Monica, Calif., who said it was "certainly the worst crossing I ever made."

The Boise originally due to arrive by Christmas, docked today with 1,189 servicemen. No casualties from the storms were reported aboard it.

The Portland's two dead, killed when a giant wav hit the starboard hangar, wer Sgt. Noah L. Daniels of Amity, Ark., and Sgt. Louis S. Csurics, Steelton, Pa.

The missing man was Sgt. J. M. Lewis of Springfield, Col.

Capt. Bibby estimated waves 50 feet high and wind of 80 miles an hour struck the Portland. Cmdr. A. D. Jackson of Bryan, Tex., the navigator, said he believed some of the waves were more than 100 feet high and the wind "much more" than 80 miles an hour. The vessel's wind indicator broke at about 45 miles an hour.

Scenes of horror and confusion in the blackout of the starboard hangar were described by men who slept there when the mountainous wave roared in, causing the casualties.

"I was sleeping on the bottom tier just before the wave struck," said Sgt. Thomas Lancian, Everett, Mass., describing the crossing as worse than the famed Battle of the Bulge, in which he was wounded.

"Water had been seeping under the bulkhead doors, and I climbed up into the rafters to prevent being soaked. I had hardly climbed there when there was a terrible roar as the bulkhead was ripped off and the water rushed in.

"The lights went out immediately and the place was filled with moans, shrieks and cries."

"It was a hell of a lot worse than Salerno," said Pfc. John Rocciolo, East Boston, Mass., who fought in that bloody battle with the 36th Division.

A hero of the disaster was ship's cook 1/c John W. Siri, 24, San Francisco, who broke three ribs in his efforts to extricate two injured servicemen.

The troops were loud in their praise of the quick action by Navy men, and the calming speech by Capt. Bibby which quieted men who believed the vessel was "done for."

The 12-year-old Portland detoured to the Azores on Dec. 18 and the more seriously injured men were removed at Ponte Delgrada. The stop-over and the necessary zig-zagging to avoid the brunt of waves added 1,000 miles to her crossing from Le Havre.

CARGO OF BOMBS LOOSE, LIBERTY SHIP IN DANGER

NEW YORK, Dec. 28—(AP) A cargo of 5,000 tons of bombs, breaking loose in the hold, today threatened the safety of the Liberty Ship Henry D. Thoreau, with a crew of 40 aboard. The ships master radioed a distress message saying "if they give way entirely, nothing can save us."

The Navy, however, intercepting two messages from the Thoreau, said it was "very unlikely" that the bombs would explode unless there were a great shock. Bombs loaded for transport have their fuses removed, the Navy said.

The Thoreau, a 7-176-ton vessel is not carrying troops, the Navy said. The ship was out of Naples, Italy, bound for Cape May, N. J. and about 420 miles southwest of the Azores.

The bombs probably were some of those unused by American Air forces in Italy and were being returned to an ammunition depot in the United States, a Navy spokesman said.

A second message said a ship was standing by, but could do nothing immediately.

H. H. Singleton, operating manager of the Luckenbach Steamship Co., Inc., the Thoreau's agent, said he had radioed the vessel's captain, S. C. Briggs, for further information. He said Briggs' home was somewhere in Pennsylvania.

War Hero Badly Wounded in Row Over Officer's Wife

Capt. Archie Miller Held for Shooting Capt. Eugene Dale, Death March

30.24-32701

New York, Dec. 28 (AP)—In a melee over the love of an attractive, 24-year-old former Powers model, Capt. Eugene Dale, 27, war hero and survivor of the Bataan Death March, was shot and wounded critically today by bullets from a souvenir German luger pistol.

Police held the model's estranged husband, Capt. Archie B. Miller, 25, veteran of the European war, without bail on a charge of felonious assault.

Miller's pretty blonde wife, Mrs. Fay Hancock Miller, told police she fell in love with Dale and planned a divorce while her husband was overseas.

Police said Miller admitted shooting his rival.

The shooting, described by Assistant District Attorney Edward Murphy as "one of the usual triangle affairs," occurred in Mrs. Miller's West 58th Street apartment and police gave the following account of it:

Mrs. Miller, Dale, Mrs. Miller's sister and her fiance were talking in the apartment when Miller broke in on them early this morning.

He fired six shots, three striking Dale in the head, chest and abdomen.

Mrs. Miller struggled with her husband and was struck with the butt of the gun.

Then, the fiance of Mrs. Miller's sister, Arthur Gormley of College Point, N. Y., a member of the Merchant Marine, subdued Miller, wrestling the gun from him and inflicting slight head injuries.

Dale was taken to Roosevelt Hospital in critical condition. He identified Miller as his assailant.

The Millers were married 25 months ago in Florida. After they lived together seven months, he was sent overseas.

Mrs. Miller told police she realized shortly after her marriage that it was a mistake, and said she had consulted a lawyer who was beginning divorce proceedings.

"My letters to Captain Miller while he was in the service told him of how I felt about our marriage," police quoted her as saying.

Police said Mrs. Miller told them her husband had not seemed very upset by her letters.

Both Capt. and Mrs. Miller were treated for scalp injuries. Mrs. Miller, wearing a red coat and a bright yellow snood, appeared at the West 54th Street police station with her sister, Frances Hancock, and Gormley. Miss Hancock is private secretary to a magazine publisher, police said.

Dale, now stationed at Mitchell Field, N. Y., was taken prisoner by the Japanese on Bataan. He escaped from a prison ship after the infamous Death March and fought for six months with a Filipino guerrilla group.

He was recaptured and then spent three years in a Jap prison camp. Many of his experiences have been recounted in magazine articles.

NEW YORK, Dec. 28—(AP) The 12,437-ton British merchant ship Waipawa steaming toward New York harbor collided tonight with the George N. Seger off Ambrose light but the coast guard caid there apparently were no casualties.

The coast guard reported that the Waipawa was carrying troops, presumably American, from Clyde, Scotland.

Tugs and rescue vessels were dispatched immediately after the SOS signals of the two distressed ships were intercepted.

A pilot was put aboard the Waipawa, which proceeded satisfactorily, a coast guard spokesman said, but the Seger "was pretty badly damaged and requires assistance."

The Seger said in its distress signal that its bow was smashed in. The 12,437-ton Waipawa reported that its number one hold was flooded.

The coast guard said the Seger was outbound and the Waipawa inbound when the collision occurred, and that there was no indication as to the cause of the accident. Weather conditions were good, the coast guard said.

Patton's Embolism Held Unavoidable

New York, Dec. 28 (AP) — Col. R. Glen Spurling, consulting surgeon who attended General George S. Patton, Jr., after his fatal accident in Europe, said today the embolism which caused the General death could not have been prevented.

"It was inevitable," he said on his arrival at LaGuardia Field. "It could not have been foreseen or prevented." He said it was "not totally uncommon, particularly in the older age group" in cases of back injuries.

The colonel was flown to Europe from Washington by the Surgeon General's office to attend General Patton. He was preparing to return to private practice in Louisville, Ky., at the time.

Colonel Spurling left immediately for Washington to report to the Surgeon General's office. He said he expected to be released from the Army January 15.

BIG THREE

LONDON, DEC. 28-(AP)-DIPLOMATS SPECULATED TODAY ON THE POSSIBILITY OF A MEETING OF THE FOREIGN MINISTERS OF THE BIG THREE POWERS IN WASHINGTON DURING FEBRUARY OR MARCH.

THE BRITISH FOREIGN OFFICE SAID NO SUCH MEETING HAD BEEN ARRANGED, HOWEVER.

THERE WAS TALK, ALSO, THAT DEPUTIES OF SOVIET FOREIGN COMMISSAR V.M.MOLOTOV, SECRETARY OF STATE BYRNES AND FOREIGN SECRETARY ERNEST BEVIN WOULD MEET EARLY IN THE NEW YEAR TO RESUME DISCUSSIONS OF EUROPEAN PEACE TREATIES, ITALIAN COLONIES AND OTHER SUBJECTS.

UNUSUALLY WELL INFORMED PERSONS SAID A NEW MEETING OF THE FOREIGN MINISTERS WAS UNLIKELY UNTIL THE ORGANIZATION OF THE UNITED NATIONS ASSEMBLY MEETING HERE JAN. 10. WAS WELL ADVANCED.

BEVIN ARRIVED BY PLANE TONIGHT FROM MOSCOW BUT DECLINED TO COMMENT ON THE CONFERENCE.

FOREIGN MINISTERS (250)
BY REMBERT JAMES

MOSCOW, DEC. 28-(AP)-SOVIET RUSSIA'S TWO MOST INFLUENTIAL NEWSPAPERS, IZVESTIA AND PRAVDA, TODAY PRAISED THE RESULTS OF THE "BIG THREE" FOREIGN MINISTERS' CONFERENCE WHICH ENDED HERE YESTERDAY WITH AGREEMENTS ON THE ATOMIC QUESTION AND OTHER VITAL PROBLEMS.

IZVESTIA, OFFICIAL GOVERNMENT PAPER, ASSERTED THAT THE "DECISIONS OF THE MOSCOW CONFERENCE WITNESS THAT A NEW STEP HAS BEEN MADE TOWARD THE DEVELOPMENT OF COLLABORATION OF THE ALLIED STATES."

WITHOUT THIS COLLABORATION, IZVESTIA SAID, "THERE WILL BE NO FIRMNESS OF PEACE." DECLARING THAT THE THREE FOREIGN MINISTERS HAD FOUND SOLUTIONS FOR PROBLEMS WHICH SOME PEOPLE WERE READY TO SAY COULD NOT BE SOLVED, THE NEWSPAPER COMMENTED SPECIFICALLY ON THE ATOMIC AGREEMENT AND THE FORMULA FOR DRAFTING PEACE TREATIES.

THE ATOMIC AGREEMENT, IZVESTIA SAID, "DOES NOT PRESENT ANY DOUBTS" AND THE ACCORD ON TREATY PROCEDURE MEANS THAT THE MINISTE HAVE SOLVED A COMPLICATED PROBLEM AND REMOVED AN OBSTACLE DELAYIN THE REGULATION OF POST-WAR RELATIONS IN EUROPE.

PRAVDA, OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE COMMUNIST PARTY, STATED THAT THE FORMATION OF A COMMISSION FOR THE FAR EAST WAS "OF GREAT SIGNIFICANCE." THE CREATION OF A FOUR-POWER COUNCIL FOR JAPAN, PRAVDA SAID, WAS IN ANSWER TO A NECESSITY AND SHOULD CUT SHORT THE ATTEMPT OF JAPANESE IMPERIALISTS TO PRESERVE PART OF THEIR POWER.

SOFIA, DEC. 28-(AP)-THE FIRST BULGARIAN REACTION TO THE MOSCOW FOREIGN MINISTERS' COMMUNIQUE APPEARED TONIGHT IN THE LEADING ARTICLE OF THE GOVERNMENT ORGAN OF THE FATHERLAND FRONT. IT SAID:

"THE MOSCOW COMMUNIQUE IS A VICTORY OF UNITY AMONG THE GREAT DEMOCRATIC ALLIES. HOPES OF REACTIONARY AND PRO-FASCIST CIRCLES TO SEE DISORGANIZED OR DESTROYED THE HARMONIOUS COLLABORATION BETWEEN THE SOVIET UNION, ENGLAND AND THE UNITED STATES, AS WELL AS TO SEE THE WORLD DIVIDED INTO QUARRELING CAMPS, WERE IN VAIN. THE MOSCOW COMMUNIQUE CONTAINS A SPECIAL PASSAGE REGARDING THE ATTITUDE OF THE ALLIES TOWARD BULGARIA. IN THIS CASE AS WELL, REACTIONARY AND PRO-FASCIST ELEMENTS ARE BITTERLY DISAPPOINTED. THE DECISIONS OF THE GREAT DEMOCRATIC ALLIES PUT AN END TO THE CAMPAIGN AND INTRIGUES AGAINST THE FATHERLAND FRONT IN BULGARIA."

(ADVANCE) WEISSENFELS, SAXONY, GERMANY, DEC.19 (DELAYED)-

(AP)- SIX LITTLE AMERICAN ISLANDS REMAIN IN THE RUSSIAN OCCUPATION ZONE OF GERMANY.

IN THE ISLANDS ARE TELEPHONE REPEATER STATIONS MANNED BY TEAMS OF FROM FOUR TO EIGHT SOLDIERS ALONG THE LINE FROM FRANKFURT TO BERLIN. THEIR JOB IS TO HANDLE AMERICAN MAINTENANCE ALONG THIS CIRCUIT.

AMERICAN CORRESPONDENTS ON A TOUR OF THE RUSSIAN ZONE MET ONE SUCH TEAM, COMPOSED OF FOUR AMERICAN SIGNAL SERVICE TROOPS BILLETED IN A WEISSENFELS HOTEL. THEY HAD BEEN HERE SINCE THE PROVINCE OF SAXONY ORIGINALLY WAS OCCUPIED BY AMERICAN TROOPS. THEY STAYED WHEN THE AMERICANS YIELDED THE TERRITORY TO THE RUSSIANS.

THEY ARE NOT ONLY WELL AND HAPPY, BUT THEY SAY THEY ARE "IN THE CLOVER."

THREE TECHNICIANS AND AN INTERPRETER COMPOSE THE TEAM. THE INTERPRETER IS T/4 ALEX ORISTIAN, 3 MAHONEY AVE., AUBURN, N.Y. THE OTHERS ARE T/3 JOHN A.GREEN, 230 LINDWOOD AVE., ARDMORE, PA.; T/4 ROBERT STERN, 508 ROMA AVE., ALBUQUERQUE, N.M.; AND T/4 CARL WEISS, 713 CAMBRIDGE AVE., BETHLEHEM, PA.

DEC 29 1945

A SMALL NOTICE IN THE GROUND FLOOR WINDOW OF THE HOTEL SAYS: "AMERICAN COMMUNICATIONS TROOPS BILLETED HERE." THE SIGN IS CHERISHED BY THE GERMANS, BECAUSE THE AMERICANS ARE VERY POPULAR.

THE AMERICANS EAT AND SLEEP IN THE HOTEL. THEY GET AMERICAN RATIONS BY TRUCK ONCE A WEEK FROM MERSFELD, IN THE AMERICAN OCCUPATION ZONE. THE GERMAN HOTEL COOK PREPARES THEIR MEALS. THEY ARE PROVIDED POST EXCHANGE RATIONS OF CIGARETTES, CANDY AND OTHER ITEMS AND GET TWO MOVIES A WEEK FOR THEIR PROJECTOR. THEY HAVE TABLE TENNIS EQUIPMENT AND PLENTY OF READING MATERIAL.

THEY ARE ALLOWED TO FRATERNIZE WITH THE GERMANS, BUT THEY HAVE SOMETHING LESS THAN THE FREEDOM OF THE CITY BECAUSE THE RUSSIANS ALLOW THEM TO TRAVERSE ONLY CERTAIN SECTIONS. OCCASIONALLY THEY PLAY VOLLEYBALL WITH RUSSIAN SOLDIERS.

"SOME TIMES LIFE IS A LITTLE ON THE LONELY SIDE, BUT ON THE WHOLE WE FIGURE WE ARE IN CLOVER," SAID GREEN, WHO HAS BEEN HERE SINCE LAST MARCH. "WE GET ENTERTAINMENT. Wedemeyer Says 3,000 G. I.s Must Be Added to China Forces

Declares Troops Are Needed for Job of Getting Chiang's Forces North to Manchuria; Believes They Will Have to Come From Camps in U. S.

By The Associated Press

SHANGHAI, Dec. 29.—Lieutenant General Albert C. Wedemeyer said today the United States will help transport Chinese National troops into Manchuria and will have to increase American forces in China by between 3,000 and 4,000 men.

The commander of United States forces in China did not specify whether ships or planes would be used, telling a press conference that details still were "under consideration."

Wedemeyer declared, however, that American troops would go along with Central Government forces to supervise debarkation, handle supply problems and give other aid in line with America's broadened China policy.

Would Have 12,000 To 15,000

This meant, Wedemeyer continued, that the army personnel would have to be built up to 12,000 to 15,000 men even though it would require bringing in 3,000 to 4,000 more troops from the States or elsewhere.

These would be in addition to the estimated 50,000 Marines now guarding strategic ports, cities and railways in North China along the route to Manchuria.

National troops already hold one southern Manchuria port for seaborne landings (Hulutao), and last were reported at the outskirts of another, Yingkow, to the southeast.

Spencer Davis, Associated Press correspondent, said in a dispatch from Peiping that the Chinese-appointed mayor of Mukden—Manchuria's greatest city—had begun taking over the administration there in the name of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

Note Of Welcome Reported

While no National troops had entered Mukden, Davis said reports were current that the Russian authorities had sent them a note of welcome and were arranging for their formal entry in the city.

A Central News Agency dispatch said fifteen district governments of Liaoning province, in Manchuria, had reported to the new provincial headquarters at Chinhsien, ready to take up their duties.

Other Central Government administrators were in Chinhsien waiting to follow Chinese troops into Jehol, the next province to the west, from which the Russians announced yesterday they had withdrawn.

Communists Charge Drive

In this connection, Communist dispatches alleged the government had launched an offensive in western Liaoning and eastern Jehol, the latter aimed at the provincial capital, Chengteh (Jehol).

Both official Chungking and Communist quarters meanwhile approved the Moscow accords as they applied to questions involving China.

An official Government statement in Chungking declared that "we are in complete agreement with the three-power Moscow communiqué.

"Proposals submitted by the Chinese Foreign Office were embodied in the text of the communiqué concerning the control of Japan," the statement added.

John Roderick, Associated Press correspondent, reported from Yenan that Chinese Communist headquarters there hailed the declaration that a united China must include all democratic elements in the National Government.

A spokesman for the Communist Central Committee said his side was particularly pleased over the renewed determination of Russia and the United States to withdraw their troops from Chinese soil at an early date.

General Marshall began his second week in Chungking as special American envoy by meeting some of the delegates to China's forthcoming peace and unity conference.

Reports persisted that Marshall would leave next week for Peiping and Tientsin for a close-up view of the situation in North China.

May Need More U.S. Troops In China, Wedemeyer Says

Shanghai, Dec. 29 (AP)—Lieut. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer, commander of United States forces in China, said today that "plans are under consideration to move additional (Chinese) armies to Manchuria," and more American Army troops would be needed to accompany them, supervise debarkation, handle supply problems and give other aid.

This, he told a news conference, is in line with America's newly broadened policy of aid to the National Government of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek. And, he added, it is one reason why United States Army personnel in China should be built up to 12,000 or 15,000 men, even though it would mean bringing an additional 3,000 to 4,000 from America or from other military theaters.

[He used the phrase "army personnel," not mentioning an estimated 50,000 United States marines now controlling several vital centers in North China.]

Area Large As The U.S.

Asked specifically whether he thought more Chungking (National) forces would have to be transported to Manchuria, Wedemeyer said: "I do think additional forces have to be transported, in order to repatriate Japanese in Manchuria and secure rail and port facilities to make this (repatriation) possible. It is a vast area, as large as the United States."

He did not specify whether the Chinese would be carried north by sea or by air.

Other reasons for increasing the strength of United States Army personnel in China, he said, are the necessity of guarding American equipment in the theater; the organizing of a military advisory group—a permanent nonoperational body of more than 2,000 men headed initially by Wedemeyer himself; and repatriation of the Japanese.

Sees Rapid Evacuation

"Our program envisions rapid evacuation of the Japanese, and we will facilitate this repatriation," he explained. On the basis of evacuating 300,000 Japanese monthly, this task alone would keep his theater in activation eight or ten months longer, he estimated.

General Wedemeyer already has informed his troops that in view of what he termed the pro-Chiang policy of the United States, they will not be going home as soon as they had expected. He has cancelesd two troopship sailings.

Chinese forces which would be transported to Manchuria, he told newsmen, would have to be provided with equipment against subzero weather.

Two Armies Moved Already

American ships and men already have transported the Chinese 13th and 52d armies to North China by sea, landing them at Chinwangtao, whence they marched overland into Manchuria.

More recently, the headquarters of Gen. Tu Li-ming's army group, which embraces these two armies, moved aboard American ships from the Haiphong area of Indo-China to Hulutao.

No date has been set for activation of the proposed military advisory group, Wedemeyer said. Its task, he said, would be to aid China "in the creation of modern military air, ground and sea forces."

May Bring Families Over

Wedemeyer expressed the hope that wives and families of service men can join them in China by next spring.

No decision has yet been reached on this point, however, and he said he didn't "think it advisable right now anyhow" because of the housing shortage, inadequate heat, high prices and lack of sufficient schools.

When the go-ahead does come from Washington, he concluded, permits will be given wives of enlisted men "in exact proportion to those given officers' wives."

MARINE VETERANS WILL LEAVE CHINA

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29—(AP)—The Marine corps announced today that more than 10,000 Marine veterans now stationed in China will be returned to the United States early in 1946.

Brig. Gen. Gerald C. Thomas, director of the corps' division of plans and policies, made the statement in a radio interview over NBC.

Directing his remarks to the First and Sixth Marine divisions in the broadcast beamed by shortwave to overseas stations, Gen. Thomas said:

"Here is good news for you highpoint Marine veterans over there in China. We already have sent 10,000 new men out to replace you. The first draft of 1,000 should be arriving by now and two drafts of 5,000 and 4,100 respectively, are rapidly nearing China.

"They should be there any day now—and furthermore, I am pleased to tell you, the vessel carrying the draft of 5,000 will be immediately reloaded with marines and returned directly to the United States. In addition, we are going to ship more men out to replace you other veterans as rapidly as they can be gotten under way."

Gen. Thomas said that as of Dec. 21 a total of 176,334 Marines had been returned to civilian life since V-J day. The total was 47,608 ahead of schedule.

Big 5 Military Leaders May Meet In January

London, Dec. 29 (AP)—Diplomatic quarters said today they expected that a five-power meeting of military leaders would take place in January to discuss establishment of the international peace preservation force contemplated by the United Nations Charter.

A British Foreign Office spokesman neither confirmed nor denied reports that plans for a meeting of the military chiefs of the United States, Britain, Russia, France and China were under discussion through diplomatic channels on the initiative of the British Government.

Charter Provisions Cited

The spokesman, however, drew attention to provisions of the United Nations Charter which authorize establishment of a military staff committee to work with the Security Council.

The charter says this committee is to assist and advise the Security Council on all questions relating to military requirements for the maintenance of international peace and security, the employment and command of forces placed at the disposal of the United Nations and regulation of armaments and disarmament.

"This committee," said the spokesman, "will be constituted when the Security Council is established."

Early Meeing Expected

It was generally assumed in authoritative quarters that this meeting would be held at the earliest possible moment after organization of the peace agency's Security Council by the United Nations General Assembly which will hold its first session in London January 10.

General Eisenhower, United States chief of staff, may fly to London for the meeting, it was reported. This would be the first meeting of military chiefs of all the five powers, since no such wartime meetings were held.

However, dispatches from Frankfurt and Washington today announced the appointment of Lieut. Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, deputy supreme Allied commander in the Mediterranean theater, as General Eisenhower's representative on the military staff committee of the United Nations.

Ridgeway May Attend

It was possible that this meant that General Ridgway would attend in the place of Eisenhower.

One authoritative report said it was not expected that the chiefs of staff or their deputies would hold any preliminary discussions before the Security Council's military staff is established, but it seemed certain every effort would be made to get the military organization into operation as soon as possible because of the importance of its duties.

It would be logical, said this report, for the British Government, as host to the United Nationas General Assembly in January, to take the first step in seeing that the committee is constituted.

Want Estimate Of Strength

It was believed here that the Security Council would ask the military committee to estimate immediately what should be the strength of the United Nations peace-preservation force.

Once the Security Council has this information steps then could be taken to inform each member of the United Nations of the size of the force it would be asked to contribute to the international body.

Some quarters have suggested that a special atom-bomb air force be placed at the disposal of the Security Council, and this question may be brought up during the first session of the General Assembly.

Treaties May Be Delayed

Diplomats said today it might be several weeks before deputies of the five-power Council of Foreign Ministers resumed work on drafting European peace treaties under the procedure outlined at Moscow.

They said an early meeting was ruled out by the intention of France to ask for clarifications and by the time required for the United States and Russian deputies to reach London.

Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin will present a full report on the Moscow conference to Prime Minister Attlee tomorrow.

SESSION CALLED ON ARMY FOR UNO

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29. — (AP) United States military representatives will confer with Russia, Britain, France and China in London early next month on the projected United Nations armed force to preserve peace, the State department announced today.

The American delegation will include Gen. George C. Kenney, commander of the Pacific Air forces; Lt. Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, deputy supreme commander in the Mediterranean theater, and Admiral Richmond Kelley Turner of the Navy general board, as well as other officers.

The big five military delegations, the State department disclosed, will be joined in their conferences by delegations representing the six non-permanent members of the United Nations Security council when they have been selected.

In addition to announcing the personnel of the military delegation, the State department confirmed that Secretary of State Byrnes will head the American delegation to the UNO General Assembly meeting in London.

U. S. GROUP TO PUSH FREE PRESS IN UNO

Delegates Instructed to Seek Study Under the Economic and Social Council

Washington, Dec. 29 (AP)—American delegates to the United Nations Assembly meeting have been instructed by the State Department to push for a prompt international study aimed at promoting freedom of the press, Government officials disclosed tonight.

In line with the pledges Edward R. Stettinius, former Secretary of State, to the American Society of Newspaper Editors, the delegation will urge that a commission under the Economic and Social Council and not the General Assembly tackle the question.

American officials told reporters they believe that a study by a group of experts will be more fruitful than one under auspices of the assembly. American delegates will advocate that a commission for the promotion of human rights take up the study.

Promise By Stettinius

In a telegram to the newspaper society last June 16, Stettinius promised that as soon as such a United Nations commission is formed "the United States Government will urge that it should promptly study the means of promoting freedom of the press, freedom of communication and fuller flow of knowledge and of information between all peoples."

Meanwhile, the State Department said today that as the result of a protest by Reuter, British news agency, it is postponing for a week the publication of a booklet on the suggested postwar international information program for the United States.

The 135-page booklet, prepared for the State Department by Dr. Arthur W. MacMahon, Columbia University political scientist, devotes two pages to a discussion of Reuter operations.

Reuter Protest In Letter

It had been scheduled for release at 7 P. M. today. The department postponed the release date until 7 P. M. January 5 and promised to issue simultaneously any statement submitted in the meantime by Reuter.

The protest of the British news agency was made in a letter by its Washington bureau chief, Paul Scott Rankine, who said he had been instructed to do so by Christopher Chancellor, general manager of Reuter, Ltd.

Dated today, Rankine's letter said he had been instructed "to launch the strongest possible protest with you at a number of false statements regarding the activities of Reuter, Ltd.," which he said were contained in the MacMahon booklet.

Declares Statements Untrue

Rankine said the section devoted to Reuter "not only contains statements which are definitely untrue but in total effect presents a false and misleading picture."

"I am also instructed in the name of honesty, decency and fair dealing to ask that the release date of the booklet be postponed in order that Reuter, Ltd., may have time to study in further detail the allegations made by Dr. MacMahon and to present documentary evidence in refutation of them for release simultaneously with the booklet," Rankine said.

"We regard . . . some of the . . . references to Reuter as libelous and utterly untrue and we reserve full rights regarding future action following the publication of the booklet in its present form."

No Amplification

In a statement disclosing receipt of the letter from Rankine, the State Department said:

"In compliance with the request contained therein, the department has postponed the release date from 7 P.M. December 29 to 7 P.M. January 5, E.S.T., at which time any statement submitted to the Department of State by Reuter, Ltd., will also be released for publication."

Lincoln White, State Department press officer, read both the department's statement and the text of the Rankine letter to newsmen. He said he could not amplify the department announcement.

William Benton Issues Booklet

The booklet, titled "The Postwar International Information Program of the United States," was issued by William Benton, Assistant Secretary of State for Public Affairs.

Benton told a news conference yesterday that parts of the booklet were being used by him and his assistants for guidance in setting up the permanent State Department news and information organization which will incorporate much of the work carried on in wartime by the Office of War Information and the Office of Inter-American Affairs.

Hyde Park Seems In UNO Site Lead

London, Dec. 29 (AP)—The Roosevelt ancestral home at Hyde Park, N.Y., or a site near Boston appeared tonight to have the best chance of becoming the permanent home of the United Nations Organization.

Several delegates here awaiting the opening of the UNO General Assembly next month said they believed that Hyde Park was far in the lead. Some members of the British delegation were said to favor it and western European delegates were expected to follow suit.

While the race seemed to have narrowed down to the Hudson Valley locality and the Boston area, a spokesman of the site-selecting committee, which is scheduled to leave for the United States on January 3 or 4, said that several sites not previously mentioned were being considered. He declined to name them but said the committee would look them over on its United States investigation tour.

Still being mentioned by some delegates as possibilities were Concord, Mass.; Tarrytown, N.Y., possibly on the Rockefeller estate; and Princeton, N.J.

A United Nations interim committee eliminated Springfield, Mass., and Cape Cod last night. This action was taken under a decision which specified that the site must not be nearer than 25 miles or farther than 80 miles from New York or be within a 60-mile radius of Boston.

Other Sites Considered

Among the communities which extended formal invitations to the United Nations, only Hyde Park and Boston remain in the running.

However, a committee spokesman said several sites not previously mentioned were being considered. He declined to name them, adding that the committee would look them over when it begins its tour of investigation.

He mentioned specifically Princeton, N.J., as a possible site just outside the narrowed down areas.

May Suggest Two Sites

On the basis of private comment by United Nations delegates, however, it appeared that Boston or a site near Boston and the Hyde Park area would be offered to the General Assembly from which to choose the headquarters seat.

A spokesman, who asked that his name be withheld, said last night that committee members selected to visit proposed sites would leave for the United States January 3 or 4 to visit "at least fifteen places and probably more."

Hyde Park Seen As HQ For UNO

London, Dec. 29 (A. P.).—The odds tonight favored Hyde Park, ancestral home of Franklin D. Roosevelt, as the permanent home of the United Nations Organization. As a commission prepared to take a plane for the United States to inspect proposed sites, several delegates here for the opening of the UNO General Assembly on January 10 said they believed Hyde Park was far in the lead, and that the choice appeared to be between that and the Boston area.

PLANS FOR BRIDES' TRAVEL COMPLETE

First Group Alerted 'To Move On Short Notice'

London, Dec. 29 (AP)—Plans for free transportation of wives of American soldiers to the United States are "complete to the last safety pin," and the first group already has been alerted to "travel on very short notice," United Kingdom base headquarters said tonight.

The announcement, following closely President Truman's signing of legislation to speed entry of brides into the States, said the first shipment of approximately 1,200 was expected to sail by the end of January.

Three Reception Areas

The Army said 26,866 wives and children had been processed up to December 20.

All British wives and their children will be processed through the United States Army port at Southampton. Three reception areas, patterned after army recreation centers, are being set up at Tidworth, former troop-staging area; Perham Down and in Bournemouth Hotel.

Eight to ten passenger liners, as yet unnamed, and several United States Army hospital ships will be used for transporting the wives. A report that the Queen Mary might be one of the ships has not been confirmed, the Army said.

Visas No Longer Needed

None of the ships scheduled for redeployment of service men is to be used for the wives, and "every soldier will continue to go home when his time comes," the Transportation Corps said, adding that "with redeployment nearly completed we are now able to release certain ships for the return of dependents."

Under the new legislation, the wives no longer need visas or petitions for nonquota entry into the United States.

The Army will instruct them on how much baby food to prepare in advance, whom to consult on finances and on how to pack their baggage.

War Brides Told To Get Ready to Sail

London, Dec. 29 (A. P.).—United States Army base headquarters announced tonight that plans for transporting G. I. brides to the United States were complete and that the first group already had been notified to be ready to travel on short notice. The announcement followed closely President Truman's signature of legislation to speed up the entry into the United States of brides of American soldiers.

Riot Quelled On U.S. Ship Off England

Portsmouth, England, Dec. 29 (AP)—A strong detachment of harbor police broke up a knife fight between white and Chinese members of the crew of the 7,240-ton American ship Anna Dickinson last night.

An S O S from the vessel to British naval authorities brought harbor police swarming over the side on rope ladders under threatening knives and axes brandished by rioting seamen.

Anchored In Channel

The ship, registered under the United States War Shipping Administration, had anchored in the Channel between the Isle of Wight and the English mainland after taking a heavy battering by gales and rough seas.

Police said several arrests were made and the incident was reported to United States naval authorities.

Portsmouth authorities arrested three merchant seamen and left Americans in charge of the vessel. Police officials conferred with American authorities on board the ship this afternoon concerning disciplinary action.

MP's Arrive

The police, who were unarmed, restored order within an hour. Shortly afterward an American boat from Southampton arrived with a United States provost marshal and a strong detachment of American military police.

The fighting between the crew members broke out after the Anna Dickinson had dropped anchor.

Queen Mary Is on Way

SOUTHAMPTON, Dec. 29 (U.P.)—The Queen Mary sailed today for the United States with the 100,000th American soldier to clamber up her gangplank since V-J Day aboard.

As Sgt. George J. Poole, Clewiston, Fla., stepped on the huge liner's deck he wore a big wooden notice that he was the lucky 100,000th. Colonels and other high-ranking officers gave him a special farewell and all signed his board.

Civilian passengers aboard the giant liner included British Minister of Food Sir Ben Smith, who upon his arrival, will confer with officials in Washington about "specific food problems."

STOWAWAY PLAN FAILS

SOUTHAMPTON, England, Dec. 29—(AP) Pretty 18-year-old Jane Ferguson was held today on a charge of illegally purchasing a field jacket and a pair of U. S. Army trousers. Police Inspector Harold Legg said the girl planned to stow away aboard the New York-bound liner Queen Mary disguised as a soldier. She is unmarried.

U.S. Army Returning 29 Riviera Hotels

Nice, France, Dec. 29 (AP)—The United States Army will return 29 Riviera hotels formerly used as soldier recreation centers to the French January 15, Major John H. Olin, director of the Riviera Recreational Area, announced today.

Olin added that twenty other hotels would be retained and that the recreational area would maintain facilities to take care of 3,000 furloughed soldiers at a time.

Army Accused Of Pampering Farben Heads

A. M. G. Investigator Asserts Industrialists Go Free, Plant Destruction Lags

Berlin, Dec. 29 (AP)—Russell A. Nixon, deputy director of the division of investigation of cartels and external assets of the American Military Government, asserted today that military authorities in the American zone were "pampering" German industrialists.

Nixon, former instructor in the economics department at Harvard University and later CIO Washington representative for the United Electrical Workers, declared that German industries were not being destroyed and that industrialists were not being arrested as he believed they should under a directive of the joint chiefs of staff.

He also declared that "pressure" forced his division to release from jail a number of leaders of the I. G. Farbenindustrie, gigantic German chemical trust, after they had been interrogated.

"Not From Clay Office"

Lieut. Gen. Lucian D. Clay, deputy military governor of Germany, said: "I found out about the release of these Farben leaders only the other day. If any pressure was brought for their release, it certainly did not come from this office. We still have ten in custody, however."

Col. E. S. Pillsbury, control officer for the Farbenindustrie, informed Nixon that "if and when this office obtains information which provides a basis for substantive charges against these officials or any of them, such charges will be presented promptly to the war crimes authority or to the counter-intelligence department, according to the nature of the accusation."

"Unless and until such information is obtained," Pillsbury said, "this office will require the full-time services of these officials in the preparation of reports needed for the accomplishment of objectives of seizure of Farben property."

Nixon Viewpoint

Nixon, who is awaiting return home, since work of his division has been split up between the finance and economic divisions of the military government, replied that "there is a duty to place under arrest the key men in industry and finance until such time as a determination of their culpability and punishment is made by the appropriate authority."

He insisted that his department had received "pressure from the beginning in the form of inquiries and expressions of views by army officers and military government officials."

"When our questioning was completed," Nixon said, "we were told we no longer had the authority to hold the industrialists."

Directive Cited

Citing a directive by the joint chiefs of staff to the theater commanders, Nixon said, "no one has been assigned the repsonsibility of carrying out the provision for arrest of all Nazis and Nazi sympathizers holding important and key positions in industry, commerce, agriculture and finance."

Backing Senator Kilgore's recent allegations that German industries were not being destroyed, Nixon said, "Eighty-three per cent of the Farbenindustrie in the American zone existed at the end of the war, and all that they need now are raw materails and fuel to start production at an 80 per cent capacity.

"We have failed to take adequate steps to break it up, and as a result these foxy German businessmen are pulling together their staffs and forming a nucleus for operations right under the noses of control officers whose orders were to destroy it. It has become a case of the tail wagging the dog."

Among Those Released

Among the Farben czars Nixon said his department was required to release were Carl Krauch, chairman of the board of directors and former director of the division controlling all nitrogen products, synthetic fuel plants, coal mines and later the responsible official under Hermann Goering for the development and production of all of Germany's substitute materials; Paul Haefliger, general director of sales of metals.

Also Paul Dencker, director of the accounting division; J. H. Anderhub, president of the Kalle Company, wholly owned Farben subsidiary; Guenther Frank-Fahle, chief of the central finance office of Zefi, which was the main intelligence unit for Farben; Karl von Heider, general director of sales for dyestuffs in the United States, Canada and Britain; Prokurist Bachem, director of the financial secretariat; Kurt Krueger, legal adviser for the central finance office; Herbert Stein, legal adviser for the chemical and dyestuffs division.

LAND REFORM AIDS PEASANTS

Germans In Russian Zone Live In Old Manor Houses

Berlin, Dec. 29 (AP)—German peasants in the Russian zone are living in the historic manor houses of the haughty militaristic Junkers they once served, and farm children are attending kindergarten in the spacious ballrooms where the Junkers and their ladies danced.

That is Bodenreform—the great social and economic revolutionary process by which 7,000 estates of Prussian Junkers in the Russian zone of occupation, totaling more than 4,000,000 acres, were redistributed among nearly 300,000 small landholders.

Old Issue In East Germany

Land reform is an old issue in eastern Germany, and after Hitler's defeat its proponents, with the tacit approval of the Russian Military Government, brought their program into being.

Provisional governments enacted laws providing for the breaking up of every estate of more than 100 hectares (247 acres) and even smaller ones if they belonged to active Nazis. By this process they liquidated holdings of feudal families which supplied the German Army with 50 per cent of its generals and 65 per cent of its officers.

The first American correspondents to visit the Russian zone saw an example of Bodenreform on a 677-acre estate at Burgwerbe in Saxony province. It was owned formerly by Karl Reinhardt, one-time captain in the German Army.

Served Frederick The Great

The Reinhardts had lived in the place for 40 years. In 1758 it had served Frederick the Great as a headquarters during the Leipzig battles of the Seven Years War.

The Reinhardts had employed 147 permanent workers and 45 seasonal helpers in the production chiefly of grains and sugar beets.

Now the land has been sliced into 50 holdings of five hectares (about 12.4 acres) each. Most of it has been given to previously landless peasants who worked for the Reinhardts. Other portions were given to established small farmers rated as "land poor" because they held less than five to eight hectares.

Former Nazis Ineligible

The estate's live stock, poultry and implements also were divided with the big motorized machinery going into a central pool.

The farmers who received the land are required to pay for it in cash or kind to the Provincial Government. The established small farmers have ten years to pay, and the others have twenty.

The rate of payment is 1,000 to 1,500 kilograms of rye per hectare, depending upon the quality of the soil. At the current price of rye, twenty marks for 100 kilos, that averages up to 300 marks per hectare. This is the rate at which the Provincial Governmnet compensates the former owners—if they qualify. Any owner who was not a Nazi is eligible.

Told What Crops To Plant

The Government has adopted a building program to provide homes for the new farmers, but until the homes are ready the farmers live in the estate buildings and get their food partly from estate stocks and from civilian rations.

The farmer gets directions from the Government as to what crops to plant. A general plan is drawn up by the provincial president after consultation with farmer committees.

At harvest time the peasant must deliver up to 70 per cent of what he produces to central storage points, where it is sold at a fixed price. The remaining 30 per cent is left for the farmers' own food and for sale in a free market, where the price may be 100 per cent more than the fixed price.

RESTORING NAZIS' LOOT IS PROBLEM

Berlin, Dec. 29 (A. P.).—The world's greatest lost and found department is being operated here under the American Military Government restitution program, with claims ranging from entire factories seized by the Nazis to the royal train of the Queen of the Netherlands.

Several machines for making rubber, belonging to Belgium, have been found. Other looted material awaiting identification includes optical instruments, radium, automobiles, trolley buses, horses, entire laboratories, porcelain, carpets, radios, pianos and telephone installations.

Nuernberg, Dec. 29 (AP)—Adolf Hitler married his mistress, Eva Braun, on April 29 as Russian shells rained on their Reichschancellery bunker, and dictated a private will declaring that "myself and my wife choose death to escape the disgrace of being forced to resign or surrender," United States 3rd Army headquarters disclosed tonight.

The original copies of the marriage contract, the private will and a "political testament" designating a new cabinet to carry on the war—all dated April 29, 1945—were discovered in a suitcase by 3rd Army intelligence agents.

Blamed Jewry

To the last, the political testament disclosed, Hitler blamed "international Jewry" for the world conflagration, and called down upon "international Jewry and its assistants" the hatred of the German people for centuries.

The testament, dated three days before Russian troops overran the Reichschancellery, declared that Hitler himself never wanted war. He claimed he tried to induce the British to accept a solution to the German-Polish dispute, which he said was rejected by the British "partly driven by propaganda arranged by international Jewry."

Desire For Cremation

The private will directed that he and his 35-year-old bride, with whom he said he had "enjoyed many years of true friendship," be cremated together. This document seemed to eliminate doubts that Hitler perished with his Third Reich.

Simultaneously, British counter-intelligence officers announced the arrest of the man to whom the document had been entrusted—Fried-

Final Political Orders, Marriage Contract Revealed — All Papers Dated April 29, 1945—He Railed at Britain, Jews to End

erich Wilhelm Paustin, identified as adjutant to Hitler's missing deputy, Martin Bormann.

City Councillor Presides

The marriage contract showed Walter Wagner, Berlin city councillor, officiated. After listing the names of the principals and witnesses, the contract said:

"The persons mentioned under one and two state they are of pure Aryan descent and that they are not infected with inheritable diseases which would exclude them from marriage. Considering the war situation and the special circumstances, they apply for marriage under special wartime laws.

"They also ask to accept an oral publication of the banns and to disregard all legal delays.

"The application is accepted. The oral publication of the banns is checked. The findings are in order."

Goebbels Signs Document

Wagner then is quoted as reading the service thus:

"I am coming to the ceremonial act of marriage. In the presence of the witnesses mentioned, under numbers three and four, I ask you my Führer, Adolf Hitler: Are you willing to take Miss Eva Braun as your wife? If you are, answer 'I do.'"

"Now I ask you, Miss Eva Braun, are you willing to take our Führer, Adolf Hitler, as your husband? If your are, answer 'I do.'"

"After both the newlyweds stated their intentions, I declared this marriage legal before the law.

Hitler, Goebbels and Bormann signed the document. Then Eva, employing her married name for the first time, started to scrawl the letter "B" after her first name. She scratched it out and wrote in a bold hand: "Eva Hitler, geboren (born) Braun."

"Years Of Friendship Enjoyed"

In the marriage contract Hitler said he enjoyed "many years of true friendship," with Eva Braun, who was born in Munich February 6, 1910.

This political will, to which headquarters said he "scrawled a contracted and feeble signature," named Germans he described as "honorable men as members of a new cabinet to continue the war with all means."

To direct the already hopelessly lost war, Hitler designated Grand Admiral Karl Doenitz as president and Paul Joseph Goebbels, Propaganda Minister, as chancellor. Goebbels's charred body was identified in the ruins by Red Army men a few days later.

Letter Scrawled By Bormann

British intelligence officers already have concluded that Hitler and Eva died together in the ruins of the Reichschancellery April 30, two days before the Red Army announced capture of Berlin after a flaming battle in which the capital was reduced to rubble.

Third Army intelligence officers also seized a letter of transmittal, written by Bormann and intended to accompany the two testaments. It was addressed to Doenitz, now a defendant at the Nuernberg trials, where Bormann himself is being tried in absentia.

This letter, scrawled hastily in ink by Bormann, said: "Since all divisions failed, our situation seems to be beyond hope. The Führer dictated the attached political testament last night. Heil Hitler."

Documents In A Suitcase

All the documents were found in one of Paustin's suitcases, hidden in the home of a friend in the village of Tergensee near 3rd Army headquarters. With them was a travel pass issued May 16, 1945, to Paustin by the Burgomeister of Seinbeck.

Paustin had been in Tergensee under the alias of Wilhelm Zander, but fled before United States agents, acting on a tip from the British, began searching the town. The British agents arrested Paustin later at the home of a woman in Vilshofen, 85 miles northeast of Munich.

Hitler's political testament, apparently one of the last documents he signed, was witnessed by Bormann, Gauleiter Hans Krebs, one Wilhelm Bergdorf and Goebbels.

Three Photographs Found

Bormann and Goebbels witnessed the marriage contract, and the private testament was witnessed by Bormann, Goebbels and Nicolaus von Below.

With the documents the Americans found three photographs, two probably of Eva, the third of an unidentified boy of about 12—another mystery child in the Hitler story. Last month discovery of Eva's belongings disclosed the existence of a small girl, identified only as "Uschi."

The discovery of these documents lends credence to the reports that Hitler and Eva killed themselves even as Russian guns pounded the Chancellery, and that their bodies were saturated with gasoline and burned.

It recalled the dramatic testimony of Capt. Hanna Reitsch, German aviatrix who claimed to have been present at Hitler's last hours, when the Führer, pale and sagging, a raving madman, alternately rehearsed his suicide and directed a phantom rescue army which days before had been wiped out.

Proposed Cabinet

Besides Doenitz and Goebbels in the cabinet to carry on the war, the political testament also designated:

Party Minister, Bormann; Foreign Minister, Arthur Seyss-Inquart, gauleiter for The Netherlands; Interior Minister, Gauleiter Giesler of Munich; War Minister, Doenitz; Commander of the Army, Col. Gen. Ferdinand Schoener, commander in chief on the Russian front at the time; Navy Commander, Doenitz; Air Force Commander, Col. Gen. Ritter von Grein, later a suicide; Reichsleiter, chief of SS and police chief, Gauleiter Karl Hanke of Silesia; Minister of Economics, Walter Funk; Minister of Agriculture, Herbert Backe, who was Berlin's Food Minister; Justice, Georg Otto Thierack.

Church and Education, SS Obergruppenführer Dr. Gustav Scheel; Finance, Count Lutz von Schwerin-Krosigk, who later was Doenitz's Foreign Minister; Labor, Dr. Huppfauer, an assistant to former Interior Minister Albert Speer; Armaments, Saur, who was arrested later by the United States 7th Army; Labor Front Leader, Dr. Robert Ley, who later killed himself in his cell at Nuernberg while waiting trial.

The testament, signed "A Hitler," said, in part:

"It is not true that I or anybody else in Germany wanted the war in 1939. It was desired and provoked entirely by those international statesmen who were either of Jewish origin or who worked in Jewish interests. I have made too many offers for the reduction and limitation of armaments, which posterity cannot explain away for all eternity.

"Therefore, the responsibility for the outbreak of this war cannot rest upon me. Furthermore, I never desired that after the first terrible World War a second war should arise against England or even against America.

"... Centuries may pass, but out of the ruins of our cities and monuments in the end hatred will arise and be constantly renewed against the people (responsible): International Jewry and its assistants.

Hitler Assailed Propaganda

"As late as three days before the outbreak of the German-Polish war I proposed a solution of the German-Polish problem to the British Ambassador in Berlin, similar to the case of the Saar area, under international control.

"This offer cannot be explained away either. It was only rejected because responsible circles in English politics wanted war, partly because of expected business, partly driven by propaganda arranged by international Jewry.

"But I left no doubt about the fact that the real culprit in this murderous struggle — Jewry — would also have to pay for it, if the peoples of Europe would again be treated as so many packages of shares by those international money and finance conspirators.

Recalls World War I

"Furthermore I left no doubt that it would not be tolerated this time that millions of European children of Aryan peoples would starve to death, that millions of grown men would suffer death and that hundreds of thousands of women and children would be burned and bombed to death in the cities, without the real culprit suffering his due punishment, even though through more humane methods."

The document said World War I "was forced upon the Reich," and that in that conflict "I employed my modest powers as a volunteer in 1914." Hitler was a corporal in World War I.

British Agent Gives Tip

It was learned that Paustin, delegated by Bormann to deliver the two testaments to Doenitz, sucessfully concealed himself as a German soldier in an American prisoner-of-war hospital and camp, and was released without anyone suspecting his identity.

A British counterintelligence agent visited 3rd Army headquarters December 26 and gave the American counterintelligence corps the tip that Paustin had been hiding in the area under the alias of Zander. It had been known that Paustin, Bormann's trusted adjutant, had left Berlin immediately before the Russian entry into the city, and that he was carrying a number of documents relating to the last days of the Nazi regime.

Hitler's Wedding Contract Is Seized

Nuernberg, Germany, Dec. 29 (AP)—United States 3d Army headquarters announced today the seizure of the original marriage contract between Hitler and Eva Braun.

The marriage contract and a political and private testimony of Hitler were reported seized coincidentally with the arrest by British counterintelligence agents of Friedrich Wilhelm Paustin, adjutant to the missing Martin Bormann, at Vilshofen.

Dated April 29

The documents were dated April 29, 1945. British intelligence officers announced recently they had concluded that Hitler and Eva Braun committed suicide in Berlin April 30, one day after they were married.

Lieut. Gen. Lucian K. Truscott, Jr., commander of the 3d Army, said Hitler's testaments and a letter of transmittal intended to accompany them from Bormann, Hitler's aide, to Grand Admiral Karl Doenitz, were found in a suitcase of Paustin hidden at the village of Tegrensee, near 3d Army headquarters.

Doenitz On Trial

Doenitz, who succeeded Hitler as head of the German Government in the last days of the European war, is one of the defendants at the Nuernberg war crimes trial, now in a holiday recess. Bormann is being tried in absentia at the same hearing.

The Hitler-Braun marriage contract was witnessed by Bormann and Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels, who later poisoned himself.

Bormann, Goebbels Witnesses

The political testament was witnessed by Bormann, Goebbels, Gauleiter Hans Krebs and Wilhelm Bergdorf. The private testament was witnessed by Bormann, Goebbels and Nicolaus von Below.

With the documents American agents found three photographs, two of which they believed to be of Eva Braun. The other is of a boy about 12 years old, unidentified.

Paustin's suitcase was traced by United States agents on a tip from the British counterintelligence. The announcement said Paustin was arrested by the British at the home of a woman in Vilshofen, 85 miles northeast of Munich.

"Situation Beyond Hope"

In the note writen to accompany the testaments as Russian assault forces closed in on Berlin, Bormann had scrawled:

"Since all divisions failed, our situation seems beyond hope. The Führer dictated the attached political testament last night. Heil Hitler."

In what he described as "my private will," Hitler expressed a wish that he and Eva Braun, who chose the opportunity to marry and die with him, both be cremated immediately after death "at the place I have done the greatest part of my works during twelve years of service to my people."

"Myself and my wife choose death to escape the disgrace of being forced to resign or to surrender," he said.

Streicher's Wife Arrested.

Nuernberg, Dec. 29 (A. P.).—A military government officer today announced the arrest of Mrs. Julius Streicher, whose husband is one of the Nazi leaders now on trial on war crimes charges. The nature of the charge was not revealed.

Lee Succeeds Ridgway In Mediterranean Area

Frankfurt, Germany, Dec. 29 (AP). Lieut. Gen. John C. H. Lee has been appointed to succeed Lieut. Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway as deputy supreme Allied commander in the Mediterranean theater, it was announced today.

Ridgway was named as representative of the United States Army general staff on the Military Staff Committee of the United Nations Organization.

Maj. Gen. Carter B. Magruder was named to succeed Lee as commanding general of the services of supply in the European theater. Magruder has been Lee's chief of staff.

Home for Orphans of Belsen

HAMBURG, Germany, Dec. 29 (AP).—A special home for all orphaned children from the Belsen Concentration Camp will be opened early in January in the Hamburg suburb of Blankensee, David Rothman, of the American Joint Distribution Committee, said today.

German Named 'Gossip Monger'

Bad Kissengen, Germany, Dec. 29 (AP)—Capt. Merle A. Potter, American military governor of Bad Kissengen and a former Minneapolis newspaper men, has arranged the appointment of a German woman as the "official gossip monger' for this once fashionable spa.

When Magdalene Schoel spread rumors concerning the military government and the German city administration, Potter invited the burgomaster and other dignitaries to a court session where the rumors were disproved. A few hours later bulletin boards carried this announcement:

"Special appointment. On account of her poisonous tongue and especially on account of her ability as a snooper, Fraulein Magdalene Schoel, of No. 19 Erhard street, is on orders of the military government, declared to be the official gossip monger of Bad Kissengen."

The bulletin was signed by the burgomaster.

DIPLOMATS ACT ON BIG 3 ACCORD

Steps Already Taken to Follow Up Decisions.

Moscow, Dec. 29 (A. P.).—Steps already were underway today to implement agreements reached at the conference of "Big Three" foreign ministers which ended on Thursday.

Informed quarters reported the following developments within forty-eight hours after the conclusion of the meeting:

1. Departure of representatives of the United States, Soviet Russia and Great Britain for Bucharest to carry out the agreement pertaining to Romania.

2. Transmission of advice to Bulgaria by the Soviet Government on proposed cabinet changes.

30.24-32713

3. Dispatch of orders to American and Russian commanders in Korea to set up their joint commission in conformity with the three-power decisions.

4. Transmission of official documents on the atomic agreement to the United Nations Organization.

Romania and Bulgaria.

The three-man commission on Romania—Deputy Foreign Commissar Andrei J. Vishinsky, British Ambassador Sir Archibald Clark Kerr and United States Ambassador W. Averell Harriman—was authorized to consult with King Mihai on broadening the present Romanian Government and holding free elections.

Bulgaria was advised by Russia to include in the Fatherland Front Cabinet two members of parties not now represented. If this is done, it was said here, recognition by the United States and Britain will be forthcoming shortly.

Informed quarters said the only one of the "Big Three" agreements on which action was being delayed was the accord for drafting European peace treaties. Progress on this was held up pending France's adherence to the agreement, it was said.

Sofia Agrees to Broaden Party Representations

Also Pledges Full Loyalty to Decisions at Moscow

SOFIA, Dec. 28 (Delayed) (AP).—Foreign Minister Petko Stainov told Parliament yesterday that the Bulgarian government "accepts the suggestions" of the Soviet Union for a wider representation of parties in the government, and "will fulfill loyally" the decisions of the Big Three Foreign Ministers' Conference at Moscow.

Stainov spoke after Premier Kimon Georgieff told applauding members that Great Britain and the United States had agreed to recognize the Bulgarian government if representation was broadened to make the government more democratic.

"There is no time for hesitation," Stainov added. "Peace will be signed within the next four months."

Bulgaria is among the European states yet to conclude a peace

MACARTHUR SILENT ON 'BIG 3' ACTIONS

DEC 30 1945

TOKYO, Sunday, Dec. 30—(AP) General MacArthur and his headquarters are maintaining silence on the creation of a four-power council to run Japan. His spokesman said today there is no comment of any kind.

The spokesman, who generally will obtain comment from headquarters or speak for the general himself, said he was not at liberty to comment on the developments of the Moscow conference of the Big Three foreign ministers.

There was no reason to believe that MacArthur had changed his mind since Dec. 21 when he stated: "I am here to serve and not to hinder or obstruct American government. It is my full purpose to see the thing through. The question of Russian participation in the occupation is a matter for other decision than my own."

His statement at that time was in reply to questions about a broadcast from Tokyo which suggested MacArthur had had conversations with Russian authorities on occupation troops and policies.

Jap Reds Support 4-Power Rule

Tokyo, Dec. 29 (AP)—Japanese Communist leaders today praised the Allies' decision to establish a four-power occupation council as a development which "will wipe out the emperor system" and permit the creation of a "real democratic and peaceful nation."

Two of the party's principal leaders, Kyuichi Tokuda and Yoshio Shiga, said in a statement that the council "will contribute to stabilization and betterment of living of all the people of Japan."

"The real power will rest with the council," said the statement, adding that the change, therefore, is "an extremely national and a fair one."

Future World Role

"The new organization carries through the basic conditions to permit Japan eventually to take part in a world federation."

The statement, which Tokuda and Shiga said was approved by the party, did not mention Russia.

Russians Try 11 Nazis For Leningrad Crimes

Moscow, Dec. 29 (AP)—Another Russian trial of war criminals began at Leningrad yesterday with eleven Germans, including Maj. Gen. Hendrik Roemmlinger, in the dock before a military tribunal.

Five Russian lawyers are defending the Germans against charges which include the hanging and torturing of 52,355 civilians in the Leningrad area, driving 404,230 into Germany and firing and looting Russian cities, towns and villages.

SPAIN ASSAILS COMMUNISTS

Statement, Approved By Cortes, Also Attacks Mexico

West

Madrid, Dec. 29 (AP)—The Spanish Government charged today that Communists were responsible for a "campaign of defamation" against Spain, and, in a bitterly worded statement, announced that the nation was ready to isolate itself from "whoever maintains such an impaired concept of international relations between peoples."

It said attempts were being made to throw over the reputation of our fatherland the unpopularity of a black legend."

The 800-word statement was issued after a long Cabinet meeting presided over by Generalissimo Francisco Franco himself, and was considered a reply to the projected meeting of the United States, Great Britain and France for reexamination of relations with Franco's Spain.

Cortes Accepts Statement

With applause and shouts of "Franco," the Spanish Cortes (Parliament) roared its hearty acceptance of the statement without taking a vote.

"Spain does not accept the role frequently attributed to it of being a lightning rod to draw off internal storms of other countries," the statement said. "Spain considers that campaigns of this sort injure the sovereign rights of independent peoples and establishes regrettable precedents for relations among them which may come to the point of counteracting the pacific intentions which generally are being put forward for the stability and peace of the world.

"Spain, finally, will maintain its rights and is ready to isolate itself from whoever maintains such an impaired concept of international relations between peoples."

Mexico Attacked Bitterly

The statement struck out bitterly at Mexico, but in the main it appeared to have been directed at a recent move initiated by the French, seeking simultaneous rupture of relations with the Franco regime by the United States, Britain and France.

"At the end of our war of liberation all countries of the universe hurried to recognize the new Spanish state and its regime, with the sole exception of two—Russia, which since the 1918 revolution never had relations with Spain, and Mexico, of which the Spanish Government required as a prerequisite the return of treasure despoiled by the Reds, which was brought to that country and taken in custody by the Mexican Government."

Blaming "Communists" for "the campaign of defamation" against Spain, the statement continued:

"Spain once more rejects with all her energy the insidious campaign to discredit her which her enemies maintain with impunity with Spain's own treasur, the 1,800 millions of pesetas, gold and jewels, of which the Reds despoiled Spain, and rejects those who help with teir propaganda the political passings of the Communists and extremists of other countries."

Defending Spain's role in the war, the statement said ints sympathies with the United Staes was shown by a rupure of relations with Japan.

Break With Japan In April, 1945

[Spain broke relations with Japan in April, 1945, three and one-half years after Pearl Harbor, charging mistreatment of Spanish nationals in the Philippines.]

Evidently referring to testimony at the Nuernberg war trials, the note said "it is being discovered by official statements of chancellories and published documents that . . . there existed projects on both belligerent sides to violate the neutrality of Spain. . . . Spain in its turn serenely faced these situations and succeeded in upsetting these machinations. . . ."

Spain Hits Outside 'Interference'

West

Madrid, Dec. 29 (AP)—The Spanish Government asserted today that Spain would not tolerate "interference of the foreigner in its internal affairs."

The statement, issued by Francisco Franco's Council of Ministers, apparently was in answer to a projected meeting of the United States, France and Britain to review their relations with Spain.

The communiqué said that Spain stood "ready to isolate itself" from countries which have used her as a "lightning rod to draw off internal storms," and accused Communists of waging a "campaign of defamation" to smear the Franco Government.

"Planned To Violate Neutrality"

Both the Allies and the Axis had planned during the war to violate Spain's neutrality, the statement said, but these "machinations" were defeated by her "firm, genuinely" foreign policy.

"It is being discovered by official statements of chancellories and published documents that not withstanding the Pacific and neutral position of Spain there existed projects on both belligerent sides to violate the neutrality of Spain, making it an object of aggression," the statement said.

Break With Japan Cited

The communiqué said Spain had shown its sympathy for the United States by breaking diplomatic relations with Japan after the Pearl Harbor attack.

[Spain maintained relations with Japan until April 11, 1945. Then she broke off diplomatic contact with the official explanation that the action was taken because Japanese soldiers had murdered Spanish nationals and destroyed Spanish property in Manila.]

Extremist sectors of the foreign press were accused of promoting a "new campaign of snares and calumnies" against Spain, and the Cabinet said it "regrets that political sectarianism predominating certain countries makes some official elements of those states appear as participants in that campaign, forgetful of the most elementary rules of international courtesy."

Greeks Seek British Aid; Strikes Grow

Athens, Dec. 29 (AP)—Vice Premier Emmanuel Tsouderos left for London to seek financial aid today as a growing wave of strikes swept Greece in portest against high living costs.

His departure was marked by a 24-hour token strike by telegraph clerks, a work stoppage by bus drivers in Athens and nearby Piraeus, and by announcement of a general strike of bus and autocars federation employés to start tomorrow.

Italian Blast Kills 23

Rome, Dec. 29 (AP)—The Italian news agency Ansa said 23 persons were killed and 30 injured yesterday in an explosion of an ammunition dump near Codroipa, twelve miles southwest of Udine.

U. S. GENERAL KILLED IN AUSTRIA MOUNTAINS

VIENNA, Sunday, Dec. 30—(AP) Maj. Gen. Donald W. Brann, deputy commander of United States forces in Austria, was killed yesterday in the Tyrol when he fell over a cliff while hunting, Gen. Mark W. Clark announced today.

DEC 30 1945

Brann, whose home was at San Antonio, Tex., fell approximately a hundred feet in the rugged mountain country of Kitzbuehel ranges while hunting with Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress and two guides.

The accident occurred just before noon Saturday.

Danes May Sell Reich-Plant Share

Copenhagen, Dec. 29 (AP)—Denmark may transfer to another nation her share of German industrial plants allotted at the reparations conference in Paris, V. Villadsen, head of a department in the Board of Trade and member of the Danish delegation to the conference, said today.

Asserting that the 0.35 per cent of German plants allotted to Denmark would probably be of no use to Danish industry, Villadsen said Denmark would sell her allotment if permission could be obtained.

Illegal P. W. Delay Charged

BRUSSELS, Dec. 29 (AP).—The newspaper "Le Quotidien" said today hundreds of Belgian, French and Luxembourg prisoners of war and deportees still are being detained in internment camps in Poland and the Soviet Union.

AREA ISOLATED IN HOLY LAND

Hunt For Tel Aviv Terrorists Pressed By British

Ramat Gan, Palestine, Dec. 29 (AP). British 6th Division Airborne troops, armored cars and RAF planes isolated this little community today while police and military authorities sought persons responsible for the explosions and shootings in near-by Tel Aviv Thurday night.

Thirty - eight persons were detained for questioning after all male inhabitants between the ages of 16 and 40 were taken from their homes and herded into a barred-wire cage in an open field during a six-hour search.

This community of about 6,000 is situated amid orange groves 2 miles northeast of Tel Aviv. It was selected for the search because authorities "had reason to believe terrorists who attacked the British military camp at the north end of Tel Aviv might have come here," Police Superintendent Hadingham said.

Cordon Around Ramat

Meanwhile, British troops were patrolling the streets of tense Jerusalem in full battle dress, and the total number of persons rounded up in the wake of disorders which resulted in ten deaths in Jerusalem and Tel Aviv reached almost 2,700.

One British soldier was killed at the camp near Tel Aviv when Jews tried to force their way into an armory, a communiqué said.

A cordon was flung around Ramat Gan while the citizens slept. Heavy army trucks blocked all roads.

While the men of the town marched to the cage, women watched silently from the houses.

Curfew Lifted In Tel Aviv

The curfew had been lifted in Tel Aviv, where 682 persons had been questioned my noon, but it still remained in effect in Jerusalem from 4 P.M. until 8 A.M. In large parts of Jerusalem private telephones remained out of operation as the result of what police called security precautions.

Suspects seized in Jerusalem and lodged in detention barracks included every male under 60 from the Belazel section and the entire guest list of the Eden Hotel.

Jerusalem police announced they had discovered additional weapons which they said were left behind by terrorists. These included eight land mines.

38 Are Arrested In Palestine

Jerusalem, Dec. 29 (AP)—Thirty-eight persons suspected of participating in shootings and bombings Thursday night which resulted in ten deaths in Jerusalem and Tel Aviv, were under arrest today. The arrests were the initial result of a police and military dragnet which rounded up nearly 2,700 persons for questioning.

The 38 were arrested in Ramth Gan, a village near the all-Jewish town of Tel Aviv, where 682 persons were questioned. The remainder rounded up in Palestine's biggest man hunt were seized here.

30 Break Curfew

In addition, 30 persons were arrested for breaking a curfew imposed on Ramth Gan.

An official statement said "there is evidence that some of those engaged in the outrages had taken refuge" in Ramth Gan.

Those seized in Jerusalem were lodged in detention barracks after being picked up throughout yesterday. Every male under 60, including the entire guest list of the Eden Hotel, was arrested in the Bezalel section of Jerusalem.

Tel Aviv Curfew Lifted

The curfew was lifted in Tel Aviv today, but remained in effect in Jerusalem. Private telephones still were not operating in large parts of the city because of security regulations.

British Tommies in full battle dress patrolled streets in Jerusalem and Tel Aviv.

Workmen dug through wreckage at the police headquarters building in Jerusalem, where desperadoes caused a series of heavy explosions.

Simultaneous attacks were made on the district police headquarters at Tel Aviv and on the British military camp at Levant Fair, Tel Aviv.

British Blame Jews

A British statement blamed Jews for the attack at the military camp. The attack was launched by shooting down an unarmed British soldier "in cold blood," the statement said, and "the Jews then lobbed a grenade through the window of a room in which a number of men were asleep."

The attackers were finally repulsed by a lance corporal who single-handedly routed them with a tommy gun, inflicting some casualties, the statement said.

BRITISH DISARM INDONESIAN POLICE IN JAVA CAPITAL

BATAVIA, Java, Dec. 29—(AP) British troops in a series of swift, synchronized raids rounded up and disarmed all Indonesian police in Batavia today, disbanded the force, and informed its members the step was taken because some police actively cooperated with "lawless elements."

At the same time British troops throughout strife-torn western Java occupied public utilities and searched native compounds for arms, against minor opposition. Telephone exchanges and police stations in Batavia were occupied without incident, but sniper fire opposed the occupation of the power station at Buitenzorg, and there was some resistance elsewhere.

New Force Organized

A new police force took over in the capital, made up of British, Dutch and Indonesian personnel. British military police, including Indians, were made responsible for the overall city area; Dutch police for protested areas, and such Indonesian police as were retained, for the Indonesian quarter.

The raids began suddenly at 11 a. m. British military police and paratroops quickly rounded up all the capital's members of the Indonesian peace preservation corps (T.K.P.) and assembled them at police headquarters.

This statement was read to the Indonesians:

"The reason for taking this step is that indisputable proof now exists not only of the inability of the civil police to maintain law and order, but also of the fact that some police members have actively cooperated with extreme and lawless elements in the city and have assisted in kidnaping innocent people and looting their possessions.

"That there are some policemen who have tried to do their duty in this difficult situation is well appreciated by the Allied authorities. Such men will undoubtedly be given an opportunity to serve in the newly-formed police force. In the meantime we are compelled to confine you all in this police headquarters and disarm you. From now on it will be illegal to wear the present uniform outside police headquarters. Your confinement will be of short duration. Arrangements are in hand to provide you with food."

The new police force will wear a uniform consisting of khaki shirt, khaki trousers, khaki side-cap, and a black armband with the letters C.P. (civilian police) in white. The men will be armed with pistols only, and will be commanded by the deputy provost marshal of Australian forces in the Netherlands East Indies.

Officials of the unrecognized Indonesian government and other leaders were informed of the measure shortly before the operation was carried out, a British spokesman said.

There was no official Indonesian opposition to this move nor to the occupation of the public utilities plants, which, the British spokesman said, were merely "placed under Allied supervision." Personnel of the plants in Batavia remained on their jobs.

Correspondents Protest

The only public utility not yet put under Allied supervision was the railways. However, a feeder line between Batavia and Tanjongpriok, its port, has been under British control for several weeks.

The British reported Batavia generally quiet. At Semarang there was some opposition during a search of native compounds for illegal arms, and at Buitenzorg, where there was some sniper fire, one automobile carrying snipers was captured, the communiqué said.

In Batavia, an order cancelling war correspondents' late permits was withdrawn when the newsmen protested they often had to work beyond the 10 P.M. curfew. But the correspondents were warned that sentries were instructed to fire on cars failing to halt after curfew.

The guard at headquarters of Lieutenant General Sir Philip Christison, Allied commander in the NEI, has been strengthened since the disappearance of two Gurkha sentries who, a British officer said, may have been kidnapped by Indonesians.

JAVA POLICE HELD BY BRITISH TROOPS

Batavia, Dec. 29 (AP)—British troops took over telephone exchanges and police stations in Buitenzorg and Batavia today, and launched a drive throughout western Java to wipe out resistance in native settlements.

Sniper fire was met by troops who occupied a power station at Buitenzorg. No resistance was encountered, however, by paratroopers who marched into the telephone and police buildings in Batavia.

Also Electric And Water

Aneta, Dutch news agency, said the British also took over the electric power station and water supply system in Batavia, and the only utility not placed under supervision was the railways.

The British reported minor opposition in the Semarang area during a search of native settlements for weapons.

After occupying Batavian police stations, the British disbanded the Indonesian police force and replaced it by a composite force of British, Indonesian and Dutch personnel. The new policemen will wear khaki uniforms with black armbands and will carry pistols.

In Temporary Custody

The former Indonesian policemen were disarmed and held in temporary custody at their headquarters.

Under new plans, British and Indian military police will patrol the native quarters and the Dutch will be responsible for especially assigned areas.

The Indonesian Government agreed yesterday to co-operate with the British in restoring order in Java, providing that no additional Dutch troops were brought in.

Bodyguards Hunted

The British, meanwhile, were investigating the mysterious disappearance of two Indian soldiers assigned as bodyguards to Lieut. Gen. Sir Philip Christison, Allied commander in the East Indies.

Brigadier Alastair McLean said Indonesian extremists were suspected of kidnapping them and that Christison's guard had been strengthened.

Russians Welcome Chiang Troops

Chungking, Dec. 29 (AP)—While Communist leaders here awaited a reply today to their truce proposal, Peiping reports said that Russians sent a message of welcome to Chinese Government troops moving toward Mukden, leading industrial city of turbulent Manchuria.

The Central Chinese News Agency reported Gen. Tu Li-ming's army about 70 miles from Mukden, but said he dispatched officers to rendezvous with Russian officers to arrange for entry of the Chinese forces into the city.

From Peiping, Associated Press Correspondent Spencer Davis reported that the Chinese-appointed mayor of Mukden had arrived and was taking over administration of the big city in the name of the National Government.

Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's troops also are planning early assaults against Red-held Kalgan, capital of Chahar, and Chengteh, capital of Jehol, Communist dispatches alleged.

Report Continuing Attacks

The dispatches also reported:

The Government troops are continuing attacks against Communist positions in northern Honan, both east and west of the important Pieping-Hankow railroad, and Nationist reinforcements were swarming into the North-Honan railroad town of Anyang to support these offensives.

That the National Government is utilizing in western Liaoning forces carried to the Manchurian port of Hulutao by United States 7th Fleet transports.

The Communists captured Shaopo and Kaoyu, on the Grand Canal northeast of Nanking, on Christmas Day, killing "a great number of Japanese and puppet troops and seizing a large quantity of war materials."

Possible Blow At Railroad

Nationalist sources here said the attacks on Shaopo and Kaoyu indicated a possible Communist attempt to cut Nanking-Shanghai communications.

Government quarters reiterated "no comment" today to repeated reports that Chiang Chung-kuo, elder son of Generalissimo Chiang, had resigned as Commissioner of Foreign Affairs in Manchuria and had gone to Moscow as a special envoy.

'Rowdyism', Army Court

Shanghai, Dec. 29 (AP)—The United States Army is setting up its own court police court for quick punishment of "anti-Soviet" rowdyism and traffic violations in Shanghai.

Lieut. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer, United States commander in China, said that reports of "anti-Soviet rowdyism" had reached him, and that thorough investigations were being made with a view to stamping out such activity immediately.

Soviet newspapers in Shanghai have reported that American officers struck a civilian who wore a red star in his buttonhole, and tore down a Soviet flag from a Russian shop.

Wedemeyer said he was certain that if such reports were true the actions had "no political connotation."

The Army has been seriously concerned with traffic violations since an army truck, whose driver has still not been identified, killed four Chinese December 9.

Cocktail Party Delays Peace Meeting in China

By The Associated Press.

CHUNGKING, Sunday, Dec. 30 — The formal negotiation meeting of Government and Communist delegates, scheduled for today, has been postponed because it conflicted with a cocktail party given by Foreign Minister Wang Shih-chieh for Gen. George C. Marshall, President Truman's envoy to China.

The date for the next meeting, at which the Government may present its reply to a Communist proposal for a truce in the civil war, has not been fixed. It may be held within the next few days.

Peiping Noses Lift At Opium-Fire Plan

Peiping, Dec. 29 (AP)—Critics have arisen to berate the proposed burning of 800,000 ounces of opium in Peiping's forbidden city on New Year's Day, says the local press.

30.24 - 32715

Not that they object to the burning; it's just that they don't regard the accompanying stench as suitable to the historic courtyard where emperors of old once dispensed justice from their dragon throne.

And who, they also ask, is going to haul the 800,000 ounces into the courtyard? They're proposing instead that the drug bonfire be built on the Tung Tan drill field, dumping bundles of the opium into a series of 66 pits and dousing it with salt and gasoline—presumably to cut the odor as well as to speed the flames.

Japanese Women Form Own Political Party

Tokyo, Dec. 29 (AP)—These were the newest signs of the times in the changeover of Japan:

Women, for centuries in the background, came out today with a political party of their own.

The Government completed the draft of a measure aimed at lifting 100,000,000,000 yen (more than $6,500,000,000) from those who profited by the war.

Jap Vets Arrested

Men who fought that losing war for Japan were among more than 300 persons arrested during the last 24 hours for petty crimes in Tokyo. They said they robbed because they were homeless and desperate.

The Welfare Ministry prepared instructions that nationality, religion and social status henceforth will not affect employment, wages or working conditions of workers.

A fresh insight into American justice—first manifest at Yokohoma's opening war crimes trial when the defendant was given life imprisonment rather than the death penalty for his atrocities—was provided there today by the War Crimes Commission. It ordered the American prosecutors to cable key witnesses in the United States for complete affidavits and to quit introducing incomplete evidence.

Women's Party Is Small

The formally organized "New Japan Women's Party," which intends to have some members run for office at the forthcoming election, admittedly was small. But it was a start. And the Social Democrats have come out for equal rights for women.

The war profits tax measure, which will be submitted to General MacArthur for his approval before it passes through legislative processes, is far reaching. Previously a Government spokesman said it would be imposed on the Emperor and his household.

Penalties For Teaching Flying

As yet another sign of the times, an imperial ordinance was ready for issuance today providing penalties for infraction of MacArthur-dictated measures prohibiting instruction in all forms of aircraft and flying. Maximum penalties are three years imprisonment and a fine of 5,000 yen (more than $300).

The infractions of former service men extended into the staff officers of a division, including two colonels, at Shimonoseki for failure to surrender war material. Among unsurrendered equipment were 27 airplane cannon and 12,000 rounds of ammunition.

To Be Inactivated in Japan

TOKYO, Dec. 29 (AP)—The Forty-first Infantry Division of the Pacific Northwest, which battled from bloody Buna in New Guinea to Zamboanga in the Philippines, will be inactivated in Japan New Year's Eve by direction of the War Department.

Allied headquarters announced today the veteran "Jungaleers"—oldest division in the Army in point of overseas combat service—was being broken up to facilitate the early return of its remaining high-point men to the United States.

The Forty-first, commanded by Maj. Gen. Jens A. Doe, was mobilized Sept. 16, 1940, and arrived in the Pacific Theatre in April, 1942.

Rejects Loan Application

TOKYO, Dec. 29 (AP).—Allied headquarters rejected today the Mitsui Holding Company's application to lend 300,000 yen ($20,000) to the Toyo Silk Yarn Spinning Company, its Korean subsidiary, to assist in repatriation of former employees. Headquarters said the Toyo concern already is so heavily in debt that such a loan would be a gift—and gifts from holding companies are prohibited.

Jap Chart Bureau Okayed

Tokyo, Dec. 29 (AP)—The Japanese hydrographic department was authorized today to carry on its normal peacetime functions, but was banned from reproducing classified charts of other nations.

Yokohama Trial Is Held Up for Data From U.S.

Board Trying Japanese in Slaying of G. I. Expects Affidavits of Witnesses

Yokohama, Dec. 29 (AP) — The war-crime trial of the prison camp commander, Lieut. Kel Yuri, adjourned today until Wednesday. The defense asked the delay, contending that it could not open its case until affidavits of two Americans witnessing the alleged bayonet death of an army private were radioed from the United States.

Yuri is charged with responsibility for that death and one other.

The trial commission earlier rebuked the prosecution for offering only unsworn questionnaire answers from the two officers, instead of providing full, sworn statements. The witnesses are Lieut. John Henry Allen, of St. Paul, Minn., and Lieut. Owen W. Romaine, of Fort Thomas, Ky., who as prisoners saw the death of Private Noah C. Heard, of Salinas, Cal.

Prosecution Rests

The prosecution concluded its case, based chiefly upon statements of former prisoners, with the request that the Allen and Romaine affidavits be admitted as evidence when received.

In the death of Marine Corporal James G. Pavlokos, of Chicago, allegedly beaten and starved to death in Yuri's camp, Major Milton L. Kramer, of New York city, formerly a medical instructor at Cornell University, a prosecution witness, said Pavlokos could have died from his 39-day diet of a cup of rice daily.

Other Trial Off Till Monday

In an adjoining courtroom, the trial of Lieut. Chotaro Furushima, commander of another camp, also on charges of responsibility for beating and killing prisoners, was adjourned until Monday.

The statement of Corporal George S. Heath, of Charlotte, N.C., said Furushima "at least 50 times" saw prisoners beaten. The affidavit of Pfc. Leonard G. Collins, of Dayton, Ky., declared that Furushima denied medical treatment to prisoners who had been punished.

The prosecution introduced a statement by Tech. Sergt. Alfred Fred Torisi, of North Vernon, N.Y., who corroborated the report of the beating of Private James H. Smith, of North Salt Lake City, Utah. Smith, accused of trying to escape, was put in a guard house, where he remained more than 100 days until he died.

"Favorite Torture" Described

Sergt. James T. Fite, of Montgomery, Ala., described in a statement what he called the "favorite torture" of the Japanese.

He said Japanese put a gluelike substance on the arm, then jammed a short piece of punk into the substance. The punk was lighted and burned down to the substance which it ignited, thus causing painful burns. This treatment was applied on the neck, ears and other parts of the body, Fite said.

3,000 Start Home From Yokohama

Yokohama, Dec. 29 (AP)—The escort carrier Casa Blanca sailed this afternoon for San Francisco with 955 enlisted men and 45 officers aboard—half of them air forces and half replacement-depot personnel.

The escort carrier Kitkun Bay sailed for Seattle carrying 1,895 enlisted men and 105 officers.

Philippine Party Rift Called Official

Manila, Dec. 29 (AP)—Newspapers today headlined a political split between President Sergio Osmena and Manuel Roxas as "official."

The Osmena wing of the majority Nacionalista party in a caucus last night refused to accept Roxas's terms for remaining in the party and participating in the party convention, the papers said.

The split had been threatened for months. Informed quarters still believed, however, that there might be an Osmena-Roxas unity ticket in the coming election as neither side has definitely closed the door to further negotiations.

Osmena as titular head of the Nacionalistas set the party convention for January 21. Roxas left by air for Capiz, his native city, and Iloilo, where he is scheduled to speak in what some interpreters called his campaign opening.

Five-Year Control Dismays Korea

Seoul, Korea, Dec. 29 (AP)—Koreans learned with dismay that their country faces a five-year trusteeship.

Not awaiting more detailed accounts of the Moscow decision affecting this so-called "hermit" nation, Koreans heard only the words "trusteeship—five years."

Most people here impetuously concluded this meant five years longer that their independence will be denied.

No Comment

Ranking American officers of the occupation force withheld comment pending receipts of formal directives.

Particularly strong in denouncing the four-power trusteeship and the American-Russian commission were the anti-Soviet, anti-Communist leaders.

One, Dr. Syngman Rhee, former spokesman for the Provisional Government in exile in Washington, declared:

"Prefer Death"

"Regardless of our determination to obtain our freedom and independence, if there is any government that tries to force us to trusteeship we 30,000,000 Koreans would prefer death in fighting for our freedom to going under trusteeship."

Two days ago, the Leftest press boldly attacked Dr. Rhee as a Fascist.

ULITHI ABANDONED AS BASE FOR FLEET

PEARL HARBOR, Dec. 29—(AP) Ulithi atoll, a cluster of tiny coral islands 250 miles southwest of Guam which was built into a tremendous secret repair and supply base for the U. S. Pacific fleet, is returning to oblivion.

The atoll command was decommissioned two days ago, the Navy said today, and all that is left to mark one of the largest naval operations of the war is a weather observation station.

During the war few ever heard of Ulithi atoll except the men of the Navy who labored there. It was an answer to the Japanese question of how the United States Navy could operate so effectively over long supply lines.

Early in September of 1944 the Japanese abandoned Ulithi and two weeks later American landing forces took over. Within a short time the secret base was in operation.

Floating drydocks, hospital ships and large repair ships soon converted Ulithi into a valuable base. Seabees built an airfield large enough to receive two-motored transports.

The Japanese finally became aware of the fleet activities at Ulithi, however, having aircraft based on islands within extreme flying range of the atoll. In March a suicide plane crashed on the flight deck of the big carrier U. S. S. Randolph anchored at Ulithi and at various times Jap reconnaissance planes were shot down in the Ulithi area by U. S. fighter patrols.

It was from Ulithi that a major portion of the warships covering the Okinawa landing sortied for the voyage to the Ryukyus.

Chile Approves Bretton Plan

SANTIAGO, Chile, Dec. 29 (AP)—The Chamber of Deputies completed Congressional approval today of the Bretton Woods agreement. The Senate voted approval yesterday.

Storm-Damaged Ship Reaches Azores

Ponta Delgada, Azores, Dec. 29 (AP)—The American freighter James M. Wayne put into harbor here today to repair heavy deck damages suffered in an Atlantic gale in which one man was washed overboard.

Erroneously reported previously to be a troopship, the 7,176-ton James M. Wayne carried explosives and not soldiers.

Several other ships, all damaged by one of the worst winter storms in history, also put into harbor to refuel.

Secretary of State Reports to President Immediately on Return from Moscow.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29—(AP) Secretary of State Byrnes flew back from Moscow today and a short time later he was closeted with President Truman aboard the Presidential yacht giving him a full report on the foreign ministers conference.

Byrnes also will explain the Moscow communique to the people," the White House said, in a broadcast at 10 p.m. (Eastern Standard Time) Sunday night over the National and Mutual Broadcasting company network.

The two leaders discussed the broadcast in the four hours they spent on the yacht Williamsburg on which Mr. Truman is cruising and preparing two speeches of his own.

Byrnes, flying from Washington to Quantico, Va., where the yacht was anchored, arrived about 5 p.m. talked with the President and remained for dinner. Admiral Leahy, the President's chief of staff, and other members of the President's party took part in discussions, the White House said.

At 9:15, Byrnes stepped into a motor launch for Quantico and the return flight to Washington. He was invited to remain overnight, the White House reported, but he felt he should return here to work on his radio speech.

The yacht was to remain at Quantico the rest of the night. The evening was clear and cold.

Earlier, the secretary had indicated he would defer seeing the chief executive until tomorrow. State department officials were unable to say whether he had changed his plans or whether the President, eager for first-hand information on what went on in Moscow, had summoned him.

Byrnes Meets Truman, Will Broadcast Tonight

Next Meeting in Washington

Before taking off for Quantico, Byrnes authorized announcement that the next meeting of the Big Three foreign ministers would be held here.

Michael McDermott, State department press officer, relayed word to reporters that no date had been set but that the Russian and British foreign secretaries had agreed in Moscow to come to Washington next.

Under the agreement reached at Yalta among the late President Roosevelt, Generalissimo Stalin and former Prime Minister Churchill quarterly meetings of the foreign ministers were projected. If that schedule were followed, the Washington get-together would start around mid-March.

However, the three foreign ministers probably will see one another at the first meeting of the United Nations assemoly in London next month.

The Williamsburg anchored last night off Mount Vernon, Va. In his cabin, the President worked on a radio address to the people on his legislative program, set for next Thursday night, and on a "state of the union" message for Congress after it reconvenes Jan. 14.

Byrnes made a radio speech last October after another foreign ministers conference in London. Then he had little to report in the way of accomplishments.

This time he will be able to outline agreements for control of atomic power and on the governing of Japan, China, Korea, Romania and Bulgaria worked out around a conference table with Foreign Secretary Bevin of Britain and Foreign Commissar Molotov of Russia.

As he completed the 13,000-mile return trip from Moscow, Byrnes told reporters today:

"It was a most constructive conference, and equally important with the decisions reached is the fact that relations were established which should make easier decisions on other matters in the future."

Wearied by 11-Day Meeting

The secretary looked chipper and talked in a sprightly vein. But he admitted he was weary after the 11-day meeting in Moscow and a return flight on which his four-motored transport bucked snow, wind and rain much of the way.

The plane left Moscow's snow-blanketed airport Thursday morning. It came back by way of Naples, Casablanca, the Azores and Newfoundland.

Noting that "not one member of the party was sick for a day," Byrnes remarked that "we had good luck and are glad to be home."

He said he would hold a news conference as soon as possible, but he was looking first for a bit of rest and a chance to clean up.

"You fellows have had your Christmas and I haven't," he told reporters. "I want to take off this suit I have been wearing for more than two weeks and get a haircut and do a lot of other things."

So he went straight to his apartment before going to his office in the State department.

His wife met him at the airport. So did an applauding crowd which included Undersecretary of State Dean Acheson and Britain's ambassador, the Earl of Halifax, and numerous top State department and government officials. Apparently nobody was there from the Russian embassy, however.

Advisors Return Also

Trailing Byrnes out of the big transport were those who were at his side in Moscow--Dr. James B. Conant, president of Harvard University and an advisor on atomic energy; Benjamin V. Cohen, State department counsel; and Charles Bohlen, foreign service officer who has been chief translator at every major conference with Russian officials for years.

The plane was three hours behind schedule. It had run into bad weather in the Newfoundland area. Winds and rain had prevented a scheduled stop at Portland, Me.

The State department meanwhile said it has received no diplomatic letter from France asking for additional explanation of the Moscow communique.

Reports from Paris said the French cabinet had decided to send such a letter to Washington, Moscow and London, asking whether the big powers who will write the final peace treaties with Italy, the Balkan countries and Finland would be obligated to follow recommendations of the 21-nation peace conference to be held in Europe before May 1.

The reports said France also wanted an explanation as to why it was not given veto powers on the Far Eastern commission like those of the U. S., Russia, Britain and China.

Truman Writing Speech After Signing Bills

DEC 30 1945

Washington, Dec. 29 (AP)—President Truman secluded himself and a small staff of aides aboard the yacht Williamsburg today to write the straight-to-the-people speech he will broadcast next Thursday.

Secretary of State Byrnes planned to join him late today to report on the Big Three Foreign Ministers' conference at Moscow.

The President started his four-day trip down the Potomac River to Chesapeake Bay after a crammed two hours of desk work at the White House, in which he signed 64 bills and resolutions.

Foresees Continuing Shortages

He accompanied his approval of a bill extending the Second War Powers Act six months, with the assertion that there must be a further extension. It is from this act that the Chief Executive derives his rationing and priorities powers.

"We know that our economy will be plagued with major war-born shortages six months from now, and that the Government must have the means of dealing with these shortages," Mr. Truman's statement said. "There must, therefore, be further legislation to cover the period after June 30, 1946."

Bills Signed

Among other measures the President signed soon after he arrived by plane yesterday from his Christmas visit home in Missouri were these:

1. Liberalizing the loan and educational benefits in the GI Bill of Rights.

2. Appropriating $2,400,000,000 in deficiency funds for various Government agencies, including $750,000,000 for UNRRA, $191,000,000 for veterans housing, $125,000,000 for navigation and flood control projects, and $1,000,000,000 for the National Service Life Insurance Fund.

3. Relaxing immigration laws to admit foreign-born wives, husbands or children of members of the armed forces.

4. Authorizing an investigation of means of increasing the capacity and security of the Panama Canal.

Working On 2 Speeches

During the cruise on which he embarked last night Mr. Truman will work on both the half-hour radio speech set for 10 P.M. Thursday and his state-of-the-union message to Congress in mid-January. He expects to return to the White House on Wednesday morning.

The President did not wait to let the people know forcefully that he wanted rationing power for longer than six months.

Warning Of Needs

He said that a longer extension was needed at the earliest possible date "so that industry and Government will know as far in advance as possible the laws under which they are to operate, and can plan accordingly."

"In the absence of specific legislation covering the latter part of 1946," he said, "the approach of June 30 will become an unsettling factor in the nation's economy and may well be accompanied by hoarding and by a tendency to delay production and distribution until the date has passed. Any such tendency would seriously hamper reconversion and would add a new and dangerous inflationary factor to the many already existing."

The yacht anchored last night off Mount Vernon, Va., site of the George Washington estate.

The White House said the yacht was expected to resume sailing today after receiving mail and newspapers from Washington.

Point By Point Atom Checkup Truman Aim

Washington, Dec. 29—President Truman was reported today to be backing an even more cautious, step by step disclosure of atomic energy secrets than first impressions of the Moscow Big Three communiqué had indicated.

This interpretation of plans to form an international atomic control commission came from persons who talked with Mr. Truman after his return from a Christmas holiday in Missouri.

They declared it is Mr. Truman's view that the United States should always be sure there will be no misuse of a small secret before divulging a more important one.

Controls To Be Tested

They said conversations at both the White House and the State Department indicated that it would be an American policy to test out proposed inspection methods before telling any nation except Britain and Canada all the details of the atomic bomb.

Secretary of State Byrnes, due back by plane from Moscow, planned to see Mr. Truman late today on the presidential yacht Williamsburg.

Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan, chairman of the Republican Senatorial Conference, gave some indication how the wind is blowing after a conference with Mr. Truman yesterday.

"Full Security" Planned

Vandenberg said he was advised by the State Department that "full security requirements" will be met in the proposed international commission's dealings with atomic energy.

Vandenberg, a member of the special Senate committee on atomic development, is known to favor retention of the secret until it has been demonstrated that international controls to prevent its future military use are workable.

The Moscow Big Three communiqué laid down a four-point agenda for the proposed commission, which would be set up by the United Nations Organization and would be accountable to the world Security Council.

The Steps Proposed

In order, these called for:

1. Exchange of basic scientific information between nations.

2. Control of atomic energy to insure its use for peaceful purposes.

3. Elimination of atomic and other weapons capable of mass destruction.

4. Erection of "effective safeguards by way of inspection and other means to protect complying states against the hazards of violations and evasions."

Vandenberg said he was advised that the communiqué was not intended to mean "that these objectives should be taken in order indicated." Rather, he explained, "it is intended that the four shall be read together and that each should be accompanied by full security requirements—all being finally subject to congressional approval."

Commission Backed

Vanderberg said he heartily indorsed the plan for establishing a commission to explore all phases of atomic energy.

That view found general acceptance in Congress.

Senator Taylor (D., Idaho), one of a group who recently urged President Truman to arrange a conference with the Russians on the subject, said he was pleased with the outcome.

An influential Democratic member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee said he believed the commission could succeed if inspection procedures mentioned by the Moscow planners were carried out carefully.

ATOMIC BOMB BOARD NAMED

Ten-Man Army-Navy Group To Help Director Groves

Washington, Dec. 29 (AP)—A joint Army-Navy advisory board has been created to work on the atomic bomb project with its military director, Maj. Gen. Leslie R. Groves.

Creation of the ten-man body, with eqaul representation for each service, aroused interest in view of the announcement earlier this month that a joint test of atomic bombs would be made against warships.

Eisenhower's Members

General Eisenhower, Chief of Staff for the Army, chose these members for the War Department:

Maj. Gen. Curtis E. Le May, former commander of B-29 forces operating against Japan; Brig. Gen. William A. Borden, director of the new developments division of the department's special staff; Brig. Gen. George A. Lincoln, chief of the strategy and policy group of the operations division; Brig. Gen. Hobart Hewett of Army Ground Forces, and Col. Herbert W. Mansfield, Army Service Forces.

Choices Of Nimitz

Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, Chief of Naval Operations, designated the following Navy members:

Vice Admiral V. H. Blandy, assistant chief of naval operations for weapons; Rear Admiral G. F. Hussey, chief of the Bureau of Ordnance; Rear Admiral G. H. Bowen, director of research and invention; Rear Admiral W. R. Purnell, assistant chief of naval operations for material; Rear Admiral H. B. Sallada, chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics.

Attenion On Warships

Although formation of the board centered attention on the forthcoming warship tests, its membership indicated a general study of all possible uses of the bomb in warfare may be contemplated.

Among unknown possibilities is the bomb's value for tactical use against troops in fortified positions or in the open. Hewett in an infantry expert.

The appointment of Le May and Sallada indicated aviation's interest in the weapon.

No Definite Experiment Date

While no definite date has been fixed for the warship tests, it is expected that the problems of assembling personnel, ships, aircraft and technical equipment will delay the experiments until late winter or early spring.

The decision to test vulnerability of naval craft to the bombs that blasted two Japanese cities stemmed from the White House. Aides to President Truman said he had "suggested" that the tests be made.

Citizens Send Suggestions On Atomic Energy Control

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29—(AP) From scientists, schoolgirls and other Americans, suggestions on atomic energy control are streaming by every mail delivery into a little room in the basement of the Capitol.

Some are typed on corporation letterheads. Some are scrawled in pencil on ruled pulp-paper. Others bear the crests of fashionable New England girls' schools.

But every one received by the special Senate Committee on Atomic Energy is studied carefully. Even those of doubtful merit are shunted to Dr. Edward U. Condon, the committee's scientific adviser, or to James R. Newman, his assistant.

You never know. . .it could happen that one of us 140,000,000 citizens might be inspired with the answer sought so earnestly.

All See Grave Challenge

The letters are uniform in one respect—only one. All the writers are convinced of the grave challenge to civilization posed by the fantastic power of nuclear fission.

A leter from Harvard suggested that the United States and other nations not only renounce the atomic bomb but bury all existing specimens and data on how it is made in a sort of "time capsule" vault which would be under continuous military guard.

Members of a labor union local in Connecticut urged that atomic energy be kept from monopolistic development. By making its benefits widely available, the writers declared, farmers could blanket their fields year-round with rays which would keep weather from damaging their crops, and the polar regions could be turned into tropics, junior grade.

A New Yorker wrote committee chairman McMahon (D-Conn) suggesting that the government provide atomic energy to all public and private enterprises at half the cost of coal or oil, and that this price be continued "until the entire United States national debt is paid." After the budget was in perfect balance, he recommended that the energy be dispensed at the cost of production.

A Colorado correspondent forwarded a tip from "the great white lodge of Llasa, Tibet, the hierarchy of 144 masters who rule earth and all things about it." He said this gross of potentates had informed him the atom bomb was discovered 15 years ahead of its scheduled time, and that the world is about to face its final conflict, the atomic war, between now and 1956. Period.

A captain in the medical corps, stationed in California, foresaw the possibility of "a catastrophe which will make the Pearl Harbor attack seem like a visit from a friendly but mischievous neighbor."

Atomic power should be internationalized at once, he counseled, underlining "at once." Then, for its development along peaceful lines, he recommended registration of all atomic physicists, absolute control of all raw fissionable material throughout the world, and establishment of international atomic laboratories in major countries, staffed by scientists from all nations whose assignments would be rotated annually.

The committee received hundreds of letters from college students. Virtually all of them advocated international control under the United Nations.

One wistful letter from a Mount Holyoke college girl told McMahon:

"I understand that my future is in your hands—more or less. We in college are conscious of the atom bomb problem. We want to do something. This seems to be the only way—writing to you."

Reuters Protest Delays Guide to U.S.NewsPolicy

British Agency Says Some Statements About It in Booklet Are Libelous

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29 (AP).—The State Department said today that as a result of a protest by Reuters, British news agency, it is postponing for a week the publication of a booklet on a suggested post-war international information program for the United States.

The 135-page booklet, prepared for the State Department by Dr. Arthur W. MacMahon, Columbia University political scientist, devotes two pages to a discussion of Reuters' operations.

It had been scheduled for release at 7 p. m. today. The department postponed the release date until 7 p. m. Jan. 5 and promised to issue simultaneously any statement submitted in the mean time by Reuters.

The protest of the British news agency was made in a letter by its Washington bureau chief, Paul Scott Rankine, who said he had been instructed to do so by Christopher Chancellor, general manager of Reuters, Ltd.

Alleges False Statements

Dated today, Mr. Rankine's letter said he had been instructed "to launch the strongest possible protest with you at a number of false statements regarding the activities of Reuters, Ltd.," which he said were contained in the MacMahon booklet.

Mr. Rankine said the section devoted to Reuters "not only contained statements which are definitely untrue but in total effect presents a false and misleading picture."

"I am also instructed in the name of honesty, decency and fair dealing, to ask that the release date of the booklet be postponed in order that Reuters, Ltd., may have time to study in further detail the allegations made by Dr. MacMahon and to present documentary evidence in refutation of them for release simultaneously with the booklet," Rankine said.

"We regard . . . some of the . . . references to Reuters as libelous and utterly untrue, and we reserve full rights regarding future action following the publication of the booklet in its present form."

State Department Statement

In a statement disclosing receipt of the letter from Mr. Rankine, the State Department said:

"In compliance with the request contained therein, the department has postponed the release date from 7 p. m., Dec. 29, to 7 p. m., Jan. 5, E. S. T., at which time any statement submitted to the Department of State by Reuters, Ltd., will also be released for publication."

Lincoln White, State Department press officer, read both the department's statement and the text of the Rankine letter to news men. He said he could not amplify the department announcement.

The booklet, titled "The Post-war International Information Program of the United States," was issued by William Benton, Assistant Secretary of State for Public Affairs.

Mr. Benton told a news conference yesterday that parts of the booklet were being used by him and his assistants for guidance in setting up the permanent State Department news and information organization which will incorporate much of the work carried on in war-time by the Office of War Information and the Office of Inter-American Affairs.

President Orders Return Of Coast Guard To Treasury

Washington, Dec. 29 (AP)—President Turman told the Navy today to turn the Coast Guard back to the Treasury on January 1.

The shift will reconvert to almost a full peacetime basis a service that fought around the world during the war—piloting landing craft onto European and Pacific beachheads, trapping saboteurs, guiding convoys and fighting ships.

Now the Coast Guard is going to concentrate on its usual chores—watching the coasts, helping ships in trouble, spotting icebergs, maintaining navigation aids.

But the presidential executive order transferring it back to the Treasury said some of its ships and men could stay in the Navy for a while to help out with demobilization and other tasks under a plan to be worked out by the Treasury and Navy secretaries.

Air-Sea Rescue Work

Mr. Truman said, too, that the Coast Guard should keep up for the Navy, for a period to be mutually agreed on, its air-sea rescue work and the maintaining of air-sea navigational aids and mid-ocean weather stations.

In peacetime, the Coast Guard is in the Treasury Department. The late President Roosevelt transferred it to the Navy on November 1, 1941—more than a month before America went to war. It jumped from a prewar strength of 10,000 men to a wartime peak of 172,000, including women in the SPARS.

Now it is down to something under 100,000.

Ships Manned During War

While the fighting was on, the Coast Guard manned more than 280 army ships, 750 cutters and 3,500 small craft of various kinds.

To round out reconversion of the Coast Guard, the President canceled a three-year-old order directing the Navy to protect vessels, harbors, ports and water-front facilities against sabotage and other subversive acts. The Coast Guard does that in peactime.

Another presidential order, effective January 1, moves from the War Department to the Civil Aeronautics Administratior American air navigation, traffic control, airways communications and meterological facilities in Iran.

NAVY TO RELEASE BUILDING SUPPLIES

Surplus Materials, 5,000 Quonset Huts May Ease Housing Shortage.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29—(AP) The Navy moved today to provide some relief for the housing shortage by declaring surplus $56,000,000 worth of building materials and 5,000 Quonset huts located at four depots in the United States.

If used as barracks, the huts could house 70,000 persons. If converted to two-family dwellings, they could accommodate 10,000 families. Many have never been erected.

The building material includes nails, pipe, plumbing and electrical supplies. In addition, nearly 55,000,000 board feet of lumber will have been declared as surplus at naval establishments in the United States in the two months ending Dec. 31.

The surplus announced today is located as follows:

At Port Hueneme, Calif., $18,000,000 in building materials and 1,248 Quonset huts; at Tacoma, Wash., $12,000,000 in building materials 1,540 Quonset huts; at Davisville, R. I., $16,000,000 in building materials and 2,012 Quonset huts; and at Gulfport, Miss., $10,000,000 in building materials and 200 Quonset huts.

The Navy said the Port Hueneme depot had been selected by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the disposal agency for building materials, as the first station in the United States at which spot clean-up sales of all types of surplus building materials would be made. Disposal teams from the RFC, working with naval personnel, will make the actual sales. Procedure developed will be used as a pattern for the national program to be used in other Army and Navy depots which stock building materials in large quantities.

Disposal of Quonset huts also will be made through the RFC. Government agencies, including the Veterans administration, will have top priority on the used barrack-type dwellings. The huts each measure 20 by 48 feet. The majority are of the tropical type, with roof ventilation and one end screened. They may, however, be converted for use in cold climates.

Meanwhile the Producers' Council, Inc., an organization of building material manufacturers, reported that materials shortages will not permit the construction of more than 425,000 privately-built dwellings in 1946 unless the government encourages production. Its statement listed the scarce materials as "millwork, enameled plumbing fixtures, heating equipment, and possibly cast iron soil pipe."

"Production of these items," it said, "is being held down by pricing or manpower problems or raw material shortages."

BRITISH LOAN TROUBLE SEEN

Might Be Beaten If Brought To Early Vote, Backers Admit

Washington, Dec. 29 (AP)—Some friends of the Administration in Congress today foresaw trouble for the proposed British loan, and privately conceded it might be defeated if brought to an early vote.

The proposed $4,400,000,000 credit for Britain shaped up as Washington's toughest immediate international problem, following completion of the Moscow accords and activation of the Bretton Woods monetary agreements.

Chairman Spence (D., Ky.) of the House Banking Committee, which is expected to handle the loan legislation, said, "It's going to be a difficult job." It will need long study in Congress before a vote is taken, he said.

Many Votes Doubtful

A check of Banking Committee members disclosed the feeling that an early vote might be fatal. They declined, however, to speak for publication, hopeful that the case to be peresented by the Treasury Department may swing over many votes now doubtful.

Spence, while declining to take a position on the loan proposal, said its general objectives seem to be good. But, he asked, "Will the objectives be attained?"

If the loan legislation comes to his committee, he said, "we are going to have full hearings. We are going to hear all sides of the question. We would want to hear what the farm and the labor organizations have to say.

Questions Posed

"We will want the American people to know what contributions such a loan would make to an orderly world, and whether it is a good business deal. Will it abolish the dollar pool maintained by the British sterling area bloc, discourage cartels and put international trade on a fair and honest basis?

"Britain is our biggest customer. If a business man finds his best customer in trouble, he tries to get him back on his feet.

"The American people will want to know, before we pass on this loan, whether the transaction—in return for British steps to promote world trade—will work to the advantage of Americans and British alike. When the people know the facts they will know whether they want their Congress to approve the loan."

Wolcott's Stand Vital

Representative Wolcott (R., Mich.), senior Republican on the Banking Committee, declined to say what position he will take when President Truman sends up his message requesting the legislation.

There is some opposition already evident in Democratic ranks, and the position Wolcott takes might have much to do with the fate of the loan. He supported the Bretton Woods agreements and most House Republicans followed his leadership.

The result was a thumping 345 to 18 House vote for the agreement. Some congressional supporters of the Bretton Woods bank and monetary stabilization fund said they understood at the time that with the creation of these world agencies—plus Export-Import Bank operations—there would be no further need for direct loans from the American Treasury to other nations.

TRAINING PLAN BATTLE LOOMS

DEC 30 1945

Senators Express Opposition To President's Requests

Washington, Dec. 29 (AP)—Chairman Elbert Thomas (D., Utah), of the Senate Military Committee, said today his group will wait and see what the House does with President Truman's request for universal military training before taking it up.

Thomas made this known in an interview as several other senators expressed opposition to the training plan. Mr. Truman twice has asked Congress for action.

Awaits House Action

"I'm perfectly content to see what happens in the House first," said Thomas, usually a strong Administration supporter. "We won't take it up in our committee until we see what happens there."

Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D., Col.), who ranks next to the chairman among Democrats, is flatly against "any system of compulsory training no matter what it is called."

"I'm completely opposed to universal training," Johnson told a reporter. "I'm going to fight it if any attempt is made to bring it up in the Senate."

Capper Also Opposes

Senator Capper (R., Kan.) also said he disagreed with the President on the need for compulsory training.

"I don't think we are in any immediate danger of war now," he said in an interview. "I believe we'd better give our present system of voluntary enlistments a complete trial and know more about our postwar armed forces and commitments before we get into that."

Other senators who asked that their names not be used said they would not vote for the President's plan at this time.

President Wants Legislation

The House Military Committee has held long hearings on the proposal for one year's training for youths. But members have taken no action and public hearings are scheduled to resume when Congress reassembles.

Mr. Truman, in his pre-Christmas message to Congress asking a single national defense department, reminded the lawmakers that he had requested the training legislation last October.

He said his training suggestion "has met the overwhelming approval of the people" and that it should "be instituted at the earliest possible moment."

Terms Of New Veterans' Measure Are Explained

Washington, Dec. 29 (AP)—Liberalized provisions of the amended G.I. Bill of Rights signed by President Truman will go into effect next Tuesday, the Veterans Administration said today.

The bill eases the loan restrictions of the original measure, increases the student subsistence rates and broadens the educational program, and provides larger benefits for disabled veterans in vocational rehabilitation work.

Mr. Truman signed the act soon after his return to the capital yesterday from Missouri.

Companion Bill

Still on his desk was a companion bill reorganizing the medical department of the Veterans Administration. This would remove chief medical officers and their staffs from civil service, permitting the Veterans Administrator to prescribe employment regulations.

To acquaint veterans with terms of the new G.I. Bill of Rights the Veterans Administration furnished a list of questions and answers as follows:

Question—Do I have to go to school immediately after leaving the Army, to take advantage of the educational provisions?

Answer—No. The time during which the course may be started was extended, by amendments, from two years to four years after discharge, or up to four years after the end of the war, whichever is later. The time limit for completing the course is raised from seven to nine years after the end of war.

No Age Limit

Q.—Must I be under 25 years of age to qualify for education or training?

A.—No. Any eligible veteran may receive one year of education or training, plus an additional year for each year of his active military service. He need not have been under 25 when he entered service nor need he show that his education was interrupted by war.

Q.—Is the cost of a course limited to $500 per year?

A.—No. Short, intensive courses may be taken, with the total permissible cost figured on the basis of length of war service. A veteran is entitled to one course costing $500 for each year of service, and if he is eligible for several courses, all may be taken in one year.

Subsistence Setup

Q.—May I receive subsistence payments while taking a correspondence course?

A.—No. A veteran may take a correspondence course and its cost will be paid, but no subsistence. One fourth of the elapsed time used in pursuing such a course is charged against the veteran's period of eligibility. The total amount payable for a correspondence course is $500.

Q.—Does the amended bill increase subsistence allowances for schooling?

A.—Yes, from $50 a month for single men to $65; from $75 for married men to $90.

Vocational Provisions

Q.—How soon after the war's end do I have to complete vocational training? I am a disabled veteran.

A.—The amended bill extends the time to nine years after war's end. Previously it was six years.

Q.—I am a disabled veteran. What is my subsistence allowance while taking vocational rehabilitation work?

A.—Disabled veterans now will receive a minimum of $105 per month, if without dependents; $115 with a dependent plus $10 for the first child, $7 for each additional child and $15 for a dependent parent. If the veteran receives a lesser pension he will receive these amounts while in training. In no event will his pension be reduced when he enters training.

Loans Explained

Q.—May I obtain a real-estate loan, and for how much?

A.—The Government will guarantee a real estate loan for you, up to $4,000, compared with $2,000 under the original bill. The Government guarantees up to 50 per cent of the total loan against a veteran's property, but not to exceed $4,000.

Q.—May I obtain a loan for business with the Government guaranteeing it?

A.—Yes, but the limit of the Government guarantee remains at $2,000, or 50 per cent.

Q.—For loan purposes, what value is set on real estate?

A.—Phraseology is changed from 'reasonable normal value' to 'reasonable value' in the amended bill. The appraisal must be acceptable to the lender, the veteran and a Veterans Administration-designated appraiser.

No Deductions From Bonus

Q.—Will any financial benefits I receive under the GI bill be deducted from any future bonus?

A.—That portion of the law providing that any financial benefits received under the act would be deducted from a future bonus, if authorized, was repealed.

Q.—Will the Government pay my expenses in getting an artificial limb?

A.—Yes. The Veterans Administration may obtain the limb and pay any expense involved in traveling to and from a center where the appliance is fitted and the veteran is trained in the use of it.

Vickery Resigns Maritime Post

Washington, Dec. 29 (AP)—The White House today announced that the President has accepted the resignation of Vice Admiral Howard L. Vickery as vice chairman of the Maritime Commission.

Admiral Vickery asked to be relieved because of health. He was detailed by the Navy to the Maritime Commission in 1937 and since then has had supervision of the ship design and construction for the Merchant Marine.

He told the President that in the Fall of 1944 he was stricken with an illness which a year later resulted in his being placed on the Navy retired list.

Superb Merchant Fleet Cited

In agreeing to the resignation as of December 31, the President told Vickery he had earned a rest.

"Our superb merchant fleet," he told Vickery, "today bears eloquent witness to the thorough-going and efficient job which you have done."

Vickery, who joined the Maritime Commission in 1937 as assistant chairman, told a reporter he had made no definite plans for the future.

His resignation also applies to his job as deputy administrator of the War Shipping Administration.

Vickery was appointed a member of the Maritime Commission by President Roosevelt in September, 1940. He was named vice chairman in February, 1942.

Commission Chairmanship

His term as a commission member is scheduled to run until April 16, 1948.

The commission chairmanship is expected to be vacant after January 1 when Vice Admiral Emory S. Land becomes president of the Air Transport Association. Land's resignation has not yet been announced, but aviation officials have said that he was offered the Air Transport post and probably would be permitted to leave Government service for it at the end of the year.

Shipping industry officials, who would not be quoted by name, report Admiral William F. Halsey may become Maritime Commission chairman after he retires from the Navy.

Senator Connally May Visit Reich

Washington, Dec. 29 (A. P.).—Senator Connally (D.-Texas) said today that he may go to Germany after attending the United Nations meeting in London next month as a United States delegate. But he doesn't have any plans for a trip to Russia because "it's too cold over there this time of year," the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee told reporters.

F.D.Richards in F.H.A.Post

Former Utah Housing Chief to Head Field Operations

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29 (AP).—Franklin D. Richards, former Utah Housing Director, will become Assistant Federal Housing Commissioner in charge of field operations on Jan. 1.

Mr. Richards's appointment to the newly created position was announced today by Raymond M. Foley, F. H. A. Commissioner, who also made public these additional executive changes:

Walter L. Greene, formerly at Birmingham, Ala., and now executive assistant to Mr. Foley, to succeed Mr. Richards as commissioner of Zone 4, including the Pacific and Mountain states;

Commissioner Frederick A. Van Patten, transferred from Zone 3 to Zone 2, including the Southern and Southwestern states, succeeding Kent R. Mullikin, resigned.

George A. Bremer, former underwriter at Boise, Idaho, to be commissioner for Zone 3, the North Central states.

Howard Petersen Sworn

New Assistant Secretary of War a Former New York Lawyer

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29 (AP).—Howard C. Petersen was sworn in today as Assistant Secretary of War. The ceremony was in the office of Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson, with high ranking Army and Naval officials present.

Mr. Petersen, former New York lawyer, has been in the War Department since 1942. He was special assistant to Mr. Patterson while the latter was Under Secretary of War. He succeeds John J. McCloy, who resigned to return to his law practice in New York.

Trips for Patterson, Forrestal

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29 (AP).—Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson will leave tomorrow on a round-the-world flight that will include conferences with American commanders in Germany, Japan and China. Mean time, the Navy disclosed that Secretary of the Navy James Forrestal is at the Panama Canal on a flying inspection trip accompanied by four officers. No other information was given.

Priest Praises Generals' Work

DEC 31 1945

Washington, Dec. 29 (AP)—The generals who ran the war have a "thank you" note from Father McIntyre.

Secretary of War Patterson made public today a letter from the Rev. James McIntyre, of Bradenton Beach, Fla. Said he:

"I am a Catholic priest and a disabled veteran of World War I. I never write letters to public men, but I cannot let this Christmas go by without saying my thanks to our generals whose ability, patriotism and devotion to duty made our victory possible. All the more do I want to express my appreciation to them in view of the brickbats being hurled their way by a noisy, blatant minority.

"Never has a people been more ably served by its military men of high rank. And never, I am ashamed to say, has a people been more niggardly in its rewards or stingy in its praise of these same men."

Patterson, in replying to Father McIntyre, said that he knew most of the nation's military leaders personally "and I can say that patriotism and devotion to duty were their guides."

30.24-32719

Federal Housing Deputy Named By Commissioner

Washington, Dec. 29 (AP)—Franklin D. Richards, former Utah housing director, will become assistant Federal Housing Commissioner in charge of field operations on January 1.

Richards's appointment to the newly created position was made public today by Raymond M. Foley, FHA commissioner, who also announced that Walter L. Greene, formerly at Birmingham, Ala., and now executive assistant to Foley, will succeed Richards as commissioner of Zone 4, including the Pacific and Mountain States.

Commissioner Frederick A. Van Patten was transferred from Zone 3 to Zone 2, including the Southern and Southwestern States, succeeding Kent R. Mullikin, resigned.

W. S. A. Authority Extended

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29 (AP).—The Interstate Commerce Commission today extended the War Shipping Administration's authority to operate water carrier service in interstate and foreign commerce from Dec. 31, 1945, to June 30, 1946. W. S. A. was authorized Sept. 17 to operate the service through agents holding certificates previously issued by the commission. This step was taken to permit resumption of water services pending the disposition of vessels requisitioned from private operators for war service.

Justice Department Tax Chief Resigns

Washington, Dec. 29 (AP)—Attorney General Tom C. Clark today announced the resignation of Assistant Attorney General Samuel O. Clark, Jr.

Clark has been in charge of the Justice Department tax division since July, 1939, and was named Assistant Attorney General in November of that year. He will enter the private practice of law here.

FOOD SUBSIDIES MAY BE EXTENDED

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29—(AP) The Administration may ask Congress for authority to continue a part of its present $1,785,000,000 yearly food subsidies beyond June 30, it was learned tonight.

The authority expires at that time and the government has announced a time schedule for removal of the various subsidies between now and June 30.

The Administration had hoped that the subsidies, applying to a wide variety of important foods, could be ended without raising the cost of living. The subsidies were started during the war to prevent undue increases in food costs.

But most farm and food price increases have been holding at wartime levels or have moved above them during recent weeks. The Agriculture department reported today that the general level of farm prices of Dec. 15 was the highest in 25 years.

The subsidy problem was discussed at several conferences this week with officials of the Office of Price Administration, representatives of Judge John C. Collet, stabilization director, and Agriculture department officials.

A department official who requested that he not be quoted directly said Administration leaders are giving serious consideration to the suggestions for continuing some of the subsidies beyond the June 20 deadline.

When the government announced plans to end subsidies by June 30, it said it expected prices of some foods to go down, thereby offsetting any increases that might be made in prices of subsidized foods.

But with food prices tending to strengthen and with prospects of continued price strength until 1946 production becomes available, some stabilization officials are said to be pressing for continuance of the subsidies until they can be removed without boosting overall food costs.

2 Senators Flay OPA Policies

Washington, Dec. 29 (AP)—Two mid-Western Senators, Hickenlooper (R., Iowa) and Capehart (R., Ind.), declared today that OPA price policies are causing a bottleneck in postwar reconversion and prosperity.

The Republican Senators said they based their views on complaints from their home states from jobbers, manufacturers, contractors and builders. They discussed these in a joint interview.

6 Months Seen Lost

"We have already lost six months in possible production through vacillating price policies," Senator Hickenlooper said. "We will lose more until OPA adopts a rational price policy that allows small but efficient business at least a chance to make a profit."

Both senators expressed the view that the only safe way to fight inflation is to get abundant production as soon as possible. Both said that some continuation of Government wartime price controls is necessary during the reconversion period, especially on scarce and critical materials.

"I know that production of many radios, cabinet phonographs, floor lamps and similar items are being held up because OPA will not grant a 3-cent increase in the price of sockets," Capehart said.

Small Producers Hit

Hickenlooper said that OPA had adopted an industry-wide price policy for many items and materials that does not allow important smaller producers and fabricators to operate at a profit.

"A jobber telephoned me recently that he had several hundred electric refrigerators in his warehouse," Hickenlooper said. "He could not offer them for the Christmas trade because OPA had not yet fixed a price for the manufacturer or for the jobber, although they had sought one for months."

Doubts Tax-Delay Story

The Iowa Senator scoffed at suggestions by some Government officials that business is delaying production until the excess profits tax expires on December 31.

"The fact is that producers, jobbers and retailers are crazy to get back into the market and recapture their prewar outlets," the Senator said. "But no sane businessman can operate long selling at less than cost of production."

GARMENT MAKERS PENALIZED BY CPA

100 Firms Deprived of Fabrics for 'Misusing Priorities' in Low-Cost Clothing Plan

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29 (AP)—The Civilian Production Administration took action today against more than 100 garment firms which the agency said was "hampering the low-cost clothing program."

Asserting that these manufacturers, located from coast to coast, were "misusing priorities," the CPA temporarily suspended their right to any priority ratings for the purchase of textiles. It added that the suspension order would remain in effect "pending completion of an investigation and a hearing."

The CPA pointed out that manufacturers participating in the low-cost clothing program had agreed to abide by quality and sales price ceilings.

The agency said investigations by its compliance division had disclosed that the suspended manufacturers had "kited" their ratings by from 50 to 400 per cent, explaining that they obtained more materials, in some cases, than they were authorized to accept.

Balanced Fabric Flow Upset

"This practice would tend to upset the carefully computed balance by which the agency is channeling fabrics for the production of much-needed low-co clothing to the public," the CPA stated.

Manufacturers covered by the suspension were directed by telegram to cancel immediately all outstanding rated textile orders for fabrics in e ess of those authorized for the current quarter of this year. They were further directed to place no rated orders for textiles during t first three months of next year unless specifically authorized by the CPA to do so.

The agency said that, due to the tight supply of materials suitable for low and medium priced clothing, manufacturers who have violated rating regulations "will be hard pr ed to get any textiles without ratings."

Any cases which reveal willful violations will be referred to the Department of Justice for criminal action, the CPA said, adding that some cases were already in preparation.

Paper Allocation Controls Will Be Lifted Tuesday

Stocks Still To Be Limited to Minimum Inventory

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29 (AP).—Paper and paperboard allocation controls will be lifted Tuesday, the Civilian Production Administration announced today, but inventory restrictions will be retained.

The agency also announced that mining machinery will not be allocated after tomorrow.

Paper controls being revoked require mills to set aside 10 per cent of their production for government and other essential needs.

C. P. A. said its paper-conservation order M-241 would be canceled and the inventory restrictions of the measure transferred to Priorities Regulation 32. The latter limits stocks to a minimum working inventory.

With revocation of the Mining Equipment Limitation Order L-269, allocation controls will be lifted on cutting machines, loaders, conveyors, trucks (crawler type), hoists, crushers, grinding machinery, smelting and refining equipment and ore-dressing and coal-dressing equipment.

The Office of Price Administration authorized immediate increases ranging from $3 to $14 a ton in manufacturers' ceiling prices for nineteen grades of groundwood specialty papers. These papers are not sold at retail.

Reports Chief Shortages

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29 (AP)—The Producers' Council, Inc., an organization of building material manufacturers, reported today that material shortages would limit construction to not more than 452,000 privately built dwellings in 1946 unless the Government encouraged production. Its statement listed the scarce materials as "millwork, enameled plumbing fixtures, heating equipment, and possibly cast iron soil pipe."

"Production of these items," it said, "is being held down by pricing or manpower problems or raw material shortages."

Warship Transports Raise Fuel-Oil Needs

Washington, Dec. 29 (AP)—The use of combat vessels to return American troops has increased sharply the Navy's fuel-oil requirements for the first quarter of 1946.

Reporting this today, the Petroleum Administration for War estimated the required increase at 75,000 barrels daily.

West Coast refineries, which have contracts to provide the Navy with 64,000 barrels daily will be asked to increase this to 106,000 barrels daily, the PAW said.

Ralph K. Davies, deputy PAW administrator, called a meeting of representatives of the major West Coast refineries to discuss the situation in Los Angeles January 4.

Propose Squalus Memorial

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29 (AP).—The Navy v requested today to donate pa of the submarine Sailfish, formerly the Squalus, for a memorial to the men who lost their lives on the ship sank off the Atlantic coast. Governor Charles M. Dale of New Hampshire and Senator Charles W. Tobey, Republican, of New Hampshire, wrote to the Secretary of the Navy suggesting that the bridge and conning tower of the submarine be used as a memorial. Governor Dale asked that the memorial be placed in the vicinity of the Portsmouth, N. H., Navy Yard.

UnderAge, He'll Re-enlist Soon

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29 (AP).—Seventeen-year-old Isaac Bluestone, of Woodbine, N. J., discharged from the Army last June because he was under age, plans to re-enlist on Feb. 14, his eighteenth birthday. Isaac said today he wants more than anything else to get back into the Army, but lacking parents or guardian to give consent he's just marking time.

TAX REJOICING FOR 50 MILLION

New Year Brings First Cut In Sixteen Years

Washington, Dec. 29 (AP)—Fifty million Federal taxpayers can greet the New Year with rejoicing. Their tax burdens will be lightened for the first time in sixteen years. The slash will be almost $6,00,000,000 for 1946.

Monday midnight, th happens:

1. Some 12,000,00 w-income persons go off th ax rolls completely. Others making up to $50,000 a year will get tax cuts of ten per cent or more—with smaller reductions for those making over $50,000. The 1946 relief for individuals will total $2,644,000,000.

2. The war-imposed 85.5 per cent excess-profits tax on corporations will be repealed. The Administration said this levy could be justified only as a means of preventing "war profiteering." Business will get tax relief amounting to $2,136,000,000.

3. Withholdings from pay envelopes and salary checks will be reduced, to reflect the cut in taxes. For wage and salary earners this will look something like a raise. They'll take more money home on paydays.

First Slash In 1929

The first postwar tax law, enacted last fall, was designed by its sponsors to stimulate business in the reconversion period and create jobs. It is the first general tax reduction law since President Hoover put his signature to a "Christmas-present" slash in 1929.

The new law provides special income tax treatment for veterans of World War II. It erases Federal levies in wartime on service pay of enlisted men and gives officers three years to settle tax accounts with the Government.

It repeals the $5 use tax, effective next July, at a saving of $140,000,000 to automobile, truck and boat owners. It freezes the social security tax in 1946 at one per cent each on employés' and employers' pay rolls. Without the freeze this tax would have jumped January 1 to 2.5 per cent against each.

No Cut In Luxury Items

The law makes no change in levies on so-called, luxury items such as liquor, luggage, furs, jewelry and cosmetics. Congress probably will reduce them some time in 1946.

But the prospect of more cuts for individuals any time soon appears dark.

Chairman Doughton (D., N.C.) of the House Ways and Means Committee, has said he could see no justification for further general reductions until the national budget is balanced. Secretary of the Treasury Vinson said he hoped for a balance in 1948.

Fiscal experts estimate the national debt will increase another $12,000,000,000 in 1946, with revenue collections—after the tax deduction is considered—running about $26,500,000,000. Revenues hit a peak above $45,000,000,000 in 1944. Before the war they amounted to only about $5,000,000,000 annually.

Individuals To Profit

The slashes in the legislation becoming effective January 1 are heaviest for individuals in the low income class. For instance:

A married person without children making $2,500 a year now pays $360. Under the new law his tax will be $285, a reduction of 21 per cent. If he has two children his tax now is $160. Next year it will be $95, a slash of 40.6 per cent.

A married person without children making $5,000 now pays $975. In 1946 his tax will be $798, a drop of 18 per cent. If he has two children his tax now is $755. Next year it will be $589, down 22 per cent.

The new law removes from the tax rolls in 1946 those 12,000,000 persons who now pay only the three per cent normal tax, levied on all net income above $500 regardless of the number of a taxpayer's dependents.

Exemptions To Normal Tax

This is accomplished by applying the individual surtax exemptions—$500 for the taxpayer and $500 for each dependent—to the normal tax.

This means a man with a wife pays no income tax until his net earnings pass $1,000. If he has one child taxes do not begin until he earns over $1,500. The exemption increases by $500 with each dependent.

For individuals the new law also cuts three percentage points off each of the graduated surtax brackets. And when the computation is done on this basis, a further cut of five per cent on the figure thus arrived at is allowed.

In addition to repeal of the excess profits tax, corporations benefit by elimination of the capital stocks and the declared value excess profits levies, and by reductions in the combined normal and surtaxes of two to four per cent, depending on the size of earnings.

New Tax Withholdings

Washington, Dec. 29 (AP)—The reduced schedule for weekly withholdings from pay envelopes and salary checks, effective January 1, follows:

The column headed by the figure 1 represents the withholding against a single person; 2—Married couple without children; 3—Married couple with one child; 4—Couple with two children, and 5—Couple with three children; 6—Four children; 7—Five children.

SPREAD OF STRIKE TO ALL INDUSTRY SEEN BY G-M UNION

C.I.O. Prepared for Winter-Long Fight, Reuther Declares.

BOARD ENDS HEARINGS

Fact Finders Will Prepare Report Immediately for Truman.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29—(AP) The C.I.O. United Automobile Workers union declared that General Motors must negotiate a wage increase based on its ability to pay or face "a winter of industrial war that may spread to all of American industry."

The General Motors corporation at the same time said that "the idea of the ability to pay x x x is not applicable to an individual business within an industry as a basis for raising its wages beyond the going rate." It added that it refuses "to subscribe to what it believes will ultimately become x x x the death of the American system of competitive enterprise."

Public Hearings End

The statements were released as President Truman's fact-finding board ended public hearings and promised a report to the President "as near to next Thursday as is humanly possible." On Thursday night Mr. Truman is to broadcast to the nation.

Walter P. Reuther, U.A.W. vice president, declared in his statement 'that the union is ready to strike indefinitely in support of its demand for a 30 per cent wage increase.

Reuther asserted that if the fact-finding board's recommendations are based on the "arithmetic of the case"—which the union claims includes profits and ability to pay—the President and the nation "will insist that the Wall street managers of General Motors corporation honestly negotiate an agreement based on the economic facts of the case" and the "American people will be spared a winter of industrial war that may spread to all of American industry."

Will Not Accept Less

He declared the union would not accept less than a 30 per cent increase "except and to the extent that the economic facts may show that GM cannot pay that increase without increasing prices to the consumers."

The company's statement, issued in Detroit by Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., board chairman, and C. E. Wilson, president of GM, said that the corporation "is not contending that it has or has not the ability to pay."

They declared that the company withdrew from the fact-finding procedure because it appeared that findings were to be made "politically" on such economic factors as costs, prices and profits "upon which business success and progress depend."

Reuther described the Sloan-Wilson statement as a "rehash" of the position expressed when the corporation withdrew from fact-finding yesterday.

If, said Reuther, the corporation's position "represented the thinking of all American business, then we would have to say, God help the American people."

"If facts and reason fail again," Reuther asserted, "we are prepared to stay on the picket lines for the duration of this homefront war, however long it may last. This fight is for keeps."

Fear 'Regimented Economy'

Sloan and Wilson said GM would not participate in what appeared to be the ultimate end of fact-finding—"a regimented economy."

"If this is what the American people want," they said, "they must make that choice through their accredited representatives in Congress. General Motors declines for itself to take such a great responsibility."

Board Chairman Lloyd K. Garrison concluded open sessions of the fact-finding panel by introducing, for the record, a Commerce department report of last October holding that the automobile industry could absorb wage increases up to 15 per cent.

Garrison told reporters the board likewise would obtain information not regarded as confidential from the office of Price Administration and the Securities and Exchange commission which had any bearing on the GM wage dispute.

The closing session was devoted to testimony by spokesmen for the C.I.O.-United Automobile Workers as to GM's profits and ability to pay their 30 per cent wage increase demand. Injection of the profits and ability to pay issue resulted in the company's withdrawal from the proceedings yesterday.

Union Presents Data

The union presented a mass of charts and figures, with Donald Montgomery, U. A. W. consumer counsel, handling the explanations.

At one point, Garrison questioned union estimates of GM's 1946 profit position, on grounds that the strike itself, together with a steel strike—if called—would affect the corporation's production.

Montgomery had estimated that, including a 30 per cent wage increase, higher costs of materials, and 1942 prices, GM would gross $561,000,000 in 1946.

Under questioning by Garrison, Montgomery said the estimate was based on GM's announced plan to reach production of 12,000 automobiles and trucks daily in March. This figure, Montgomery conceded, would be reduced by the GM strike and would be further affected by a steel strike.

Reuther declared the strikes would not seriously delay GM's capacity output. Reuther said tooling was going on now in GM plants, that materials which were not available when the strike began now can be furnished by suppliers, and increased productivity would be achieved through improved machinery.

The GM statisticians estimated GM's capacity production at just over 3,000,000 vehicles a year. Montgomery said the automobile industry had estimated a demand for 6,000,000 automobiles a year for at least the next three years.

Montgomery described as "arithmetically absurd" what he said was a GM estimate that materials cost next year would increase 107 per cent, considering anticipated increased production. The union estimates, Montgomery declared, that this is twice too high.

Statements by G. M. and Union Leaders

General Motors Statement

DETROIT, Dec. 29 (AP).—Following is the complete text of a statement by Alfred P. Sloan jr.,

30.24-32721

chairman of General Motors, and C. E. Wilson, president, setting forth issues involved in refusal of General Motors to participate further in proceedings of the government fact-finding board:

Here is the issue: Is American business to be based on free competition or is it to become socialized, with all its activities controlled and regimented?

General Motors has faced what it believes tot be a highly critical issue. It has made its decision. It is important that the public understand the issue. The issue at stake transcends the interests of General Motors. There is involved something far more consequential—a most vital principle.

Is American business in the future, as in the past, to be conducted as a competitive system? Or is the determination of the essential economic factors such as costs, prices, profits, etc., upon which business success and progress depend, to be made politically by some governmental agency instead of by the management appointed by the owners of the business for that purpose?

See Nation at Crossroads

America is at the crossroads. It must preserve the freedom of each unit of American business to determine its own destinies. Or it must transfer to some governmental bureaucracy or agency, or to a union, the responsibility of management that has been the very keystone of American business. Shall this responsibility be surrendered? That is the decision the American people face. America must choose!

General Motors has made its choice. It refuses to subscribe to what it believes will ultimately become, through the process of evolution, the death of the American system of competitive enterprise. It will not participate voluntarily in what stands out crystal clear at the end of the road—a regimented economy. If this is what the American people want, they must make that choice through their accredited representatives in Congress. General Motors declines for itself to take such a great responsibility.

It may be said that this is an exaggeration. It is not! All business questions are interrelated. Costs, prices, wages, profits, schedules, investments must be the responsibility of management. Political determination of such relationships means regimentation.

The idea of ability to pay, whatever its validity may be, is not applicable to an individual business within an industry as a basis for raising its wages beyond the going rate.

Implications Are Cited

Consider the implications of such a principle. Who would risk money to develop or expand a business under such circumstances? Where would be the incentive to do a more efficient job? Would it be intelligent to destroy the incentive for efficiency? Would it not be more intelligent to subscribe to the principle that no one should be forced to pay more than the going rate? Should General Motors, assuming it is more efficient, be required to pay more for materials, for transportation, for services or for wages than its competition? And how much more determined by a political governmental agency?

Do you subscribe to the belief that you should pay for what you buy or the services you use on the basis of your financial resources? It is clear that this is the principle involved.

The President of the United States has appointed a fact-finding board to inquire into the circumstances involved in the demands of the U. A. W.-C. I. O. upon General Motors and to make recommendations related thereto. General Motors stood ready to supply the board with all necessary data regarding wage rates, employees' earnings, hours of employment and all other relevant information regarding wages and employment. However, the board has ruled that General Motors' ability to pay will be considered as a factor in determining an increase in wages. This would require an appraisal of costs, prices, prospective volume of business, investment factors, expenses and the entire forward operating program of the business. Thus the board would assume the most vital functions of management.

General Motors is not contending that it has or has not the ability to pay. It always has paid liberal wages. It has attempted through protracted collective bargaining sessions to determine what is fair and equitable today. It has made a fair and liberal offer to the union.

Notwithstanding the importance of re-establishing employment and resuming production at the earliest possible moment, the above reasons have made it impossible for General Motors to participate in the proceedings of the board under the procedure as now established, and it has therefore withdrawn from the hearings. It takes that position with great regret. But it does so in the sincere belief that this action is in the long-term interest of employees, consumers, investors and of the public as well —and of higher standards for all.

G. M.'S PROFITS PUT BY U. A. W. AT $561,000,000

Fact Finders Told That Figures Include 30 Per Cent Rise.

STRIKE EFFECT CONSIDERED

Board Chairman Asks if Tie-up Might Not Upset Union's Estimate of Earnings.

Washington, Dec. 29 (A. P.).—President Truman's fact finding board today asked whether the thirty-nine-day-old General Motors strike itself might not upset C. I. O. estimates of G. M.'s ability to pay a 30 per cent wage increase in 1946.

Lloyd K. Garrison, chairman, brought up the point after a spokesman for the C. I. O. United Automobile Workers testified that G. M. gross profits next year would total $561,000,000, after allowing for the 30 per cent wage boost and a 15 per cent increase in cost of materials.

Today's fact-finding testimony centered around union evidence—including a mass of charts and figures—as to General Motors' profits—the issue which yesterday led to the company's withdrawal from the hearing.

Walter P. Reuther, U. A. W. vice-president, told Garrison that the strike would delay G. M.'s arrival at full production, but not necessarily by the length the strike lasted. Tooling is continuing at G. M. plants, he said, and parts which the company could not get when the strike began now are available from suppliers.

Might Delay Increase.

Garrison commented that the effect of the G. M. strike, together with a steel strike if one is called January 14, might mean that 1946 could not be considered a normal postwar production year. On that basis, he continued, it was conceivable the fact-finders might recommend a wage increase for the first year of the union's new contract with General Motors, rather than for the first postwar production year.

Donald Montgomery, union consumer counsel, testified that G. M. expected to reach production of 12,000 automobiles and trucks daily by March, 1946. He said the strike probably would revise this figure downward.

Montgomery, in estimating G. M.'s 1946 profits had based his calculations on the 12,000-vehicle figure. He said the union believed that, at capacity production, 1942 selling prices, with materials costing 15 per cent more than 1941, and including the 30 per cent wage increase, G. M. would make $561,000,000 before taxes in 1946.

The union completed its testimony shortly after noon, and Garrison ordered a luncheon recess pending introduction of Government evidence. This, he said, would be supplied by the Commerce Department, which last October reported that industry generally could absorb a 10 per cent wage increase and that the automobile industry could absorb 15 per cent.

May Report Thursday.

Garrison told Reuther that the board would make its report as near to next Thursday as humanly possible. President Truman gave the panel twenty days from December 14 in which to study the G. M. case and make its findings of fact and recommendation for settlement of the wage dispute.

When President Truman set up the panel he gave it twenty days —until next Thursday—to finish its work.

Corporation officials in Detroit sent word that they were willing to continue negotiating with the union in the meantime, and Vice-President Walter P. Reuther of the automobile workers said the union was, too.

But Reuther added: "We'd like to talk about wages as related to economic facts."

The company, in its withdrawal from the fact-finding proceedings yesterday, contended that its prices, profits and ability to pay were "not facts but forecasts and estimates of the future" and not "proper factors in determining wages as applied to an individual business."

Ford Recalls Workers.

Windsor, Ont., Dec. 29 (A. P.).—Full employment will be resumed at the Ford Motor Company of Canada, Ltd., plant here January 2, the company announced today. All employees not yet called back to work after the end of a ninety-nine-day walkout for union security by some 8,500 production workers were instructed to report on their regular shifts on that date.

Ontario G. M. Plant Closes.

Oshawa, Ont., Dec. 29 (A. P.).—Production in the General Motors plant here will be suspended December 31 because of shortages of material available only from the United States, the company announced today.

CPA Chief Sees Steel Strike As 'Mess'

Washington, Dec. 29 (AP)—John D. Small, while reporting significant reconversion progress, says there can't be "full speed ahead" until industrial disputes are ironed out.

The chief of Civilian Production Administration asserts that when these "widespread" disputes have been settled "all-out production can be expected rapidly."

Steel Strike "Would Be Mess"

Small made these statements in reporting that even though industrial output has turned upward for the first time since victory in Europe, "the heavy demands of both consumers and producers are not being met in all cases."

In addition to work stoppages, continuing scarcity of some materials is holding up many products, Small said in a monthly review of production last night.

Questioned about the effect of a steel strike that is scheduled for next month, Small said "we would be in a mess all over the country."

He added that if the strike occurs, his agency will resrve available steel stocks for public utilities and emergency cases.

Strikes Vs. Stockpiles

Small also announced that the CPA would soon issue a regulation requiring strike-bound plants to cancel orders for materials after the tieup has lasted 30 days. They will be allowed to keep on hand a 45-day inventory to speed resumption of operations when the strike ends.

Small gave this picture of the outlook in various industries:

AUTOS—Up to December 1, only 54,000 passenger cars had been built, a total "far short of earlier forecasts." The primary obstacle is labor-management differences.

TIRES—Passenger-tire production is equivalent to 90 per cent of the prewar rate. The CPA expects output next year to set a record, but says full demand will not be satisfied for several months.

Refrigerators, Washers

REFRIGERATORS—November shipments from plants representing more than half the prewar industry totaled 77,000, compared with a prewar rate of 200,000 a month from these plants.

WASHING MACHINES—Output now at about half of the 1941 rate.

CONSTRUCTION MACHINERY—Major producers are maintaining their high wartime output.

FARM MACHINERY—Up to "comparatively high levels" in November.

Transport, Clothing

TRANSPORTATION — Delivery of railway passenger coaches will start in 1946. Bus production at about prewar rate.

TEXTILES AND CLOTHING—"No prospect production of textile products will catch up with demand in the near future." The principal problem is a labor shortage.

CONSTRUCTION — Major bottlenecks are lumber, cast iron soil pipe, brick, gypsum board and lath, clay sewer pipe, and cast iron radiators and boilers.

VIRTUALLY ALL OUTPUT OF AUTOS SUSPENDED

DETROIT, Dec. 29 (AP)—The automobile industry, plagued by strikes and parts shortages, suspended virtually all production today until Wednesday.

While the General Motors system was in the sixth week of a UAW-CIO strike shutdown, Ford, Chrysler, Packard and other automobile makers wound up production for 1945 principally because of dwindling stocks of parts and subassemblies. Ford and Chrysler will reopen on Wednesday for a resumption of limited output.

Also going back into production on Wednesday will be the Windsor (Ont.) plants of the Ford Motor Company of Canada, Ltd., which has recalled all of its 10,000 production workers involved in a ninety-nine day strike that ended late last week.

Instead of the 500,000 new model passenger automobiles the industry hoped to make in 1945, it assembled about 75,000. With General Motors and the CIO United Automobile Workers still deadlocked over the union demand for a 30 per cent wage rate increase, production in the first month of 1946 probably will not reach 100,000 units. In most industry sources early estimates had put January assemblies at more than 300,000 units.

None of the car manufacturers would venture predictions concerning January production volume. Some conceded that with early settlement of the General Motors strike over-all production could reach a rate of 5,000,000 passenger vehicles a year by June.

4% Price Drop In Used Autos Starts Tuesday

O.P.A. Says Like Reduction Is Due Every 6 Months to Cover Depreciation

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29 (AP).—A 4 per cent cut in used passenger-car ceiling prices will go into effect Tuesday.

Announcing this today, the Office of Price Administration said the price reduction is in accordance with provisions of the used-car regulation. The regulation provides for a 4 per cent price slash every six months to cover depreciation.

The reduction applies to used automobiles sold by either dealers or private owners.

Here are typical examples of new and old base ceiling prices for used cars sold on an "as is" basis:

Ford, 1940 model, V-8 de luxe Tudor sedan—in Region A, present ceiling $634, after Jan. 1 $609; in Region B, $706 and $678; in Region C, $768 and $737.

Chevrolet, 1940 model, special de luxe two-door sedan—Region A, $643 and $617; Region B, $715 and $686; Region C, $778 and $747.

Plymouth, 1940 model, de luxe two-door sedan—Region A, $629 and $604; Region B, $701 and $673; Region C, $763 and $732.

Region A is made up of Alabama, Connecticut, Delaware, District of Columbia, Florida, Georgia, Illinois except Madison, St. Claire and Rock Island Counties; Indiana, Kentucky, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Mississippi, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Tennessee, Vermont, Virginia, West Virginia and Wisconsin except Douglas County.

Region B includes Arkansas, Colorado, Madison, St. Clair and Rock Island Counties of Illinois; Iowa, Kansas, Louisiana, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oklahoma, South Dakota, Texas, Douglas County in Wisconsin and Wyoming.

Region C is made up of Arizona, California, Idaho, Nevada, Oregon, Utah and Washington.

Legislator Sees Public Backing Strike Curbs

Washington, Dec. 29 (AP)—Legislation designed to curb strikes will have more chance of passage after congressmen, at home for the holiday recess, "get the pulse of the people," Representative Wickersham (D., Okla.) predicted today.

He said he thought that legislation to outlaw jurisdictional strikes and make unions liable for breaking no-strike clauses in contracts would have a better opportunity of getting through the House.

"The public is at a point where it will not condone the stoppage of production much longer," he declared. All-out production is the cure for labor troubles, unemployment and inflation, he added.

G.M. Ontario Plant Closing On Monday

Oshawa, Ont., Dec. 29 (AP)—Production in the General Motors plant here will be suspended on Monday because of shortages of material available only from the United States, the company announced today.

Ford Back To Schedule

Windsor, Ont., Dec. 29 (AP)—Full employment will be resumed next Wednesday at the plant here of the Ford Motor Company of Canada, Ltd., the company announced today.

All employés not yet called back to work following the end of a 99-day walkout for union security were instructed to report on their regular shifts on that date.

Lack of Funds Ties Up 600 Strike Vote Petitions

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29—Some 600 union petitions for strike votes were left stranded today by the lack of funds for the National Labor Relations Board to conduct the balloting.

A decision to discontinue this function immediately was made known by the board last night soon after President Truman signed a deficiency appropriation bill which provided no funds for the purpose.

An NLRB official said the board was the only agency empowered to supervise strike votes. It spent about $1,000,000 doing so since July, 1943.

WLB HITS 'EXPLOITING' BY GE, WESTINGHOUSE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29 (U.P.)—The War Labor Board held tonight that the General Electric Company and the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company were "exploiting" women workers by paying them less than men's rates on jobs with comparable work content.

The board recommended that the companies increase women's wages at least 4 cents an hour in their seventy-six plants in forty cities and create a fund equal to 2 cents an hour a woman employe to be allocated to reduce any differentials larger than 4 cents an hour.

The board appointed William E. Simkin of Philadelphia as its special representative to make final recommendations where the companies and United Electrical Workers, CIO, cannot agree on the correction necessary to eliminate the differentials.

Lloyd K. Garrison, WLB chairman, wrote the opinion for the public and labor members. He said that the real question was whether exploitation existed in lower rates for women.

"If it does exist, as we believe that it does from the evidence in this case, it should be ended, and the fact that others practice it ought not to stand as a bar," he declared.

Industry members dissented.

PHONE PAY RISE SET FOR 11,500 IN WEST

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29 (AP)—The War Labor Board's Telephone Commission recommended wage increases today for 11,500 employes of the North Western Bell Telephone Company in Nebraska, Iowa, Minnesota, North and South Dakota.

The recommended increases, which would be retroactive to March 16, 1945, are $3 a week for traffic operators in the company's two highest paying geographical areas, and $4 in other areas. The highly paid areas include Minneapolis, St. Paul, Omaha and Des Moines.

The pay increases for traffic operators also would provide a reduction from twelve years to eight years in the length of time required to reach maximum pay levels.

In the plant department the board proposed a $4.50-a-week advance for vocational employes and proportional increases for other workers. Dining-service employes would receive the same wage increase proposal as the traffic operators.

For central office supervisors, the board proposed increases of $1 more than those of the traffic operators.

In the commercial and accounting departments, where employes are paid by the month, the increase in starting pay would be equivalent to that awarded traffic operators, with a $9-a-month increase in the maximum pay rate.

Clerical workers would receive varying increases, details of which were not announced by the board.

The case was argued for the workers by the Northwestern Union of Telephone Workers (Ind.), an affiliate of the National Federation of Telephone Workers.

Wage Increase Granted in Soil Pipe Industry

Price Rise Also Approved by Stabilization Chief; Production Need Cited

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29 (AP).—The government, seeking to crack a serious bottleneck in small-home construction, approved today wage and price increases in the cast-iron soil pipe industry.

The action, announced in a joint statement by the War Labor Board and the Office of Price Administration, was sanctioned by John C. Collet, stabilization director, in accordance with provisions of the Administration's wage-price policy.

Those provisions allow wage and price increases "to insure full production in an industry . . . which is essential to reconversion and in which existing wages or salaries are inadequate to the recruitment of needed man power.

W. L. B. has unanimously approved a collective bargaining agreement for wage increases affecting 3,000 employees of nine companies represented by the Southern Soil-Pipe Manufacturers Negotiating Committee. It also has approved wage increases for 800 employees of eight foundries, represented by the Northern Soil-Pipe Manufacturers Negotiating Committee.

The union involved is the International Molders and Foundry Workers, of the American Federation of Labor.

The Southern wage agreement, effective next Monday, provides for a general increase of 10 cents an hour. This makes the common labor rate 65 cents and the molders' day rate $1.20 an hour.

The nine companies covered by this agreement operate fourteen plants—thirteen in Alabama and one in Chattanooga, Tenn.

Under the Northern agreement, an increase of 10 per cent in hourly and piece rates is provided. The common labor rate is 75 cents an hour and the molders' day rate is $1.05 an hour. This increase was put into effect Nov. 5 and is now being approved by W. L. B. as the basis for a price increase.

The price increase authorized by O. P. A., and effective Monday, amounts to 8 per cent for sales of cast iron soil pipe and fittings. This is in addition to an increase of 4 per cent last September and a 6 per cent increase granted in June.

For cast iron soil pipe the adjustment amounts to an increase of $6 a ton. O. P. A. ruled that jobbers may pass on to customers the full amount of the increase to manufacturers.

SEEK WAY TO END GREYHOUND STRIKE

Cleveland, Dec. 29 (A. P.).—A joint meeting of company, union and Conciliation Service officials today was the latest step in the attempt to bring about a resumption of operations on Pennsylvania and Central Greyhound lines in eighteen eastern States, strike-bound since November 1.

Samuel Berrong, member of the executive board of the A. F. of L. Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employees Union, which called the strike in support of wage demands, said he would seek clarification from Howard T. Colvin, assistant director of the Conciliation Service, on certain points involving the companies' present stand.

The union's joint council, meeting here late yesterday, received a request from Gov. Gates of Indiana that drivers return to work in that State. Berrong said the council decided to ask the Governor "to use his good offices in bringing about seizure and operation of the lines by the Federal Government, which the union believes is the only answer to quick resumption of service."

U. S. Prisoners Of War Will Get Hotel Vacations

Americans to Have 2-Week Holiday Without Cost, Can Take Their Families

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Dec. 29.—The Army's 6th Service Command said today it would put into effect Thursday a project to give returning American prisoners of war two-week vacations in first-class hotels in Detroit and Milwaukee—free.

The plan, known as "project J and R," also will extend to Chicago on Jan. 10 and later to Minneapolis and eventually to most major cities.

Both officers and enlisted men are covered, receiving a ninety-day furlough at home and, in addition, either a two weeks' paid vacation at a hotel in a city of the veteran's choice or another two weeks' vacation at hom

The Army estimated the cost would be $135 to $392 a veteran, depending on how many dependents accompany him, plus all transportation. Rooms would cost $3 to $3.50 a day single and $5.50 double. Meal allotment would be $6.50 daily a person—$1 for breakfast, $2 lunch, $3.50 dinner.

"J" men and women are classified as those captured up to the fall of Corregidor, and the "R" group were taken prisoners later.

Each liberated prisoner will be permitted to take with him two family members, with the War Department likewise providing transportation, hotel rooms, and meals for them.

The command said contracts had been completed with the Book-Cadillac, Fort Shelby, Statler and Whittier hotels in Detroit; the Schroeder, Pfister and Wisconsin hotels in Milwaukee, and the Radisson in Minneapolis, but that none had been completed in Chicago yet.

Army Pilot Lands Plane On Busy Street in Detroit

Light Craft, Its Engine Dead, Shears Aerial From Car

DETROIT, Dec. 29 (AP).—Experience gained from forty-three bomber missions over Europe—and perhaps a little luck—enabled an Army pilot to make a successful emergency landing on a much-traveled Detroit street late yesterday.

Lieutenant Kenneth E. Parks, twenty-one, and his passenger, Marine Sergeant Robert N. Clark, twenty, both of Detroit, were taking a short air trip around the city when the engine in their small rented monoplane stopped at 1,000 feet.

"I looked around for some place to land and I could see a broad street with an open space in the traffic not far away," Lieutenant Parks related. "I brought it down, heading south."

The plane landed almost directly in front of a house at 14869 Dexter Boulevard.

Although a traffic light had just halted most automobiles a block away, one motorist gulped as he saw the craft coming in for a landing and speeded his car over the curb. Then he leaped out and lay on the ground, waiting for the worst.

The plane's wing clipped the radio antenna off the car and another motorist reported the craft scratched paint off one fender.

Bataan Vet, Shot In Melee Over Woman, Dies

DEC 30 1945

New York, Dec. 29 (AP)—Capt. Eugene Dale, 27-year-old survivor of the Bataan Death March, died at 8.37 A.M. today at Roosevelt Hospital as a result of bullet wounds in the head, chest and abdomen received in a melee over the love of an attractive model.

Another war veteran, Capt. Archie B. Miller, 25, who served in the European theater and who is the estranged husband of the model, had been held without bail on a charge of felonious assault as a result of the shooting early yesterday.

Assistant District Attorney Edward Murphy termed the shooting "one of the usual triangle affairs." The model, Mrs. Fay Hancock Miller, told police she fell in love with Dale and planned a divorce while her husband was overseas.

Police gave the following account of the shooting:

Because of the housing shortage, Miller had been sharing his estranged wife's West Fifty-eighth street apartment. Early yesterday morning Miller entered the apartment and found his wife, Dale, Mrs. Miller's sister Frances Hancock and her fiance sitting in the living room talking.

Miller Gets Gun

Miller stalked into the bedroom, obtained a German Luger pistol—which he had brought home as a war souvenir—and then returned to the living room.

He fired six shots at Dale, inflicting three wounds.

Mrs. Miller struggled with her husband and he struck her with the butt of the gun.

Dale Identifies Miller

Then Arthur Gormley, the merchant seaman fiance of Mrs. Miller's sister, grappled with Miller and subdued him, gaining possession of the gun and striking the captain on the head with it.

Detective John Kennedy said that before Dale died he identified Miller as his assailant. Miller admitted the shooting, police said.

GI Hurrying Homeward Unaware Wife Is Dead

Gore, Va., Dec. 29 (AP)—Somewhere between the East and West coasts is a soldier trying desperately to get home before the holidays end, not aware that the wife he is hurrying home to—Mrs. Lillian Triplett Dietz, of Gore, is dead.

Corporal Marvin Dietz arrived in the States last week after two years in the Philippines. His wife, stricken suddenly with influenza that turned into pneumonia, died Saturday, December 23. She was 22.

All efforts to get in touch with Corporal Dietz, thought to be on a troop train headed for a separation center in the East, have been futile. Funeral plans, delayed several days in hope that he might be located, finally have been set for tomorrow afternoon.

'A GI At Heart,' Major Turns Sergeant

San Bernardino, Cal., Dec. 29 (AP)—Carleton W. Hodges, who has been both, would rather be a sergeant than a major.

A veteran of 18 years in the Army, he resigned his commission to enlist as a master sergeant. After another 12 years, he expects to retire—at around $155 a month for life.

"I guess I'm just a GI at heart," Hodges smiled.

Publishers Provide Aid In Newsprint Shortage

New York, Dec. 29 (AP)—The American Newspaper Publishers Association reported today that city, state and regional associations representing daily and weekly newspapers in all sections of the country have set up machinery to insure that no paper will have to suspend publication for lack of newsprint.

The action resulted from a conference called by ANPA November 28 to consider a voluntary plan of the New England Daily Newspaper Association which provided that each newspaper pledge up to three per cent of its 1946 newsprint supply to relieve any distressed daily or weekly threatened with suspension because of inability to obtain newsprint.

Newspapers in Cincinnati, Cleveland, New York city, Philadelphia and Washington, D.C., representing a substantial proportion of newsprint consumed in the United States, have indicated suport of the plan, the ANPA said.

COLORS OF THE 27TH COMING BACK HOME

Major Havenick Will Bring Emblem of the Old New York National Guard

SEATTLE, Dec. 29 (AP)—Division colors of the deactivated Twenty-seven Division, formerly the New York State National Guard, will be carried back to New York City by Maj. Nathaniel Havenick of Bay Ridge, Brooklyn. The major, divisional adjutant general, is one of the seven remaining members out of the 25,000 who started overseas in March, 1942, in the original outfit.

The deactivated division, to revert, in name only, to its National Guard status, was Federalized in 1940. Twenty-five hundred of its high point men, including seventy-six officers and a first sergeant, spent Christmas here awaiting transportation to separation centers.

The seven, in addition to Major Havenick, are Maj. Leray S. Copp of Unadilla, N. Y., commanding the 106th Field Artillery; Lieut. Col. John H. Scott of Johnson City, N. Y., commanding the 249th Field Artillery; Lieut. Col. Harald F. Germsen of New York City, commanding the 102d Engineer Battalion; Lieut. Col. Harold F. Grier of the Bronx; Maj. Donald D. Diaz of Albany, of the 106th Infantry and First Sgt. Arthur J. Lee of 516 West 136th Street, New York City.

Lieut. Cols. Scott, Germsen and Grier and Majors Havenick and Diaz won the Bronze Star. Germsen and Grier are veterans of World War I. The high pointers arrived here on the U. S. S. Admiral Coontz Monday.

The Twenty-seventh became known as "The Flying Infantry" when it was the only non-airborne division to be flown to Atsugi Airfield, Yokohoma, as one of the first divisions to occupy Japan. It flew from Okinawa and took over a large portion of northern Honshu.

Commanded by Maj. Gen. George W. Greiner of Tuscaloosa, Ala., who returned with the deactivated outfit, the Twenty-seventh engaged in some of the Pacific theatre's bloodiest battles. It endured 6,953 battle casualties but inflicted more than 17,000 known casualties on the enemy. A total of 2,024 men gave their lives, and they rest in graves on Makin, Eniwek, Saipan and Okinawa.

Pacific Redeployment Schedule

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 29 (AP).—The 191st Field Artillery Group, originally a National Guard unit from Tennessee, is expected to reach San Francisco about Jan. 10, aboard the U. S. S. Pamino, Major General Homer M. Groniger, commander of the port of embarkation, said today. The veteran ouflt left Manila Dec. 23, but very few of the original complement were aboard the Pamino. The 191st arrived overseas at Milne Bay, New Guinea, in December, 1943, and the men fought their way to the Philippines.

The 154th Field Artillery Battalion is due about Jan. 11, from Manila, aboard the transport Rawlins, General Groniger said.

Other units on the way home include the 671st Tank Destroyer Battalion which left Tacloban, Philippines, Dec. 22, aboard the U. S. S. Santa Isabel, and is due here about Jan. 4, and the 168th Field Artillery Battalion which left Manila Dec. 21 on the U. S. S. Greenup. It should be in San Francisco about Jan. 16.

Ship In Record Run From Japan

Seattle, Dec. 29 (AP)—The Coast Guard-manned navy transport Admiral E. W. Eberle arrived today after what Coast Guard district headquarters believed was a record run of 8 days, 7¾ hours from Nagoya, Japan. Authorities could not confirm the peacetime commercial steamship record for the passage. She averaged 21.7 knots for the 4,335 miles.

4,500 Return To Japan

Portland, Ore., Dec. 29 (AP)—The largest number of Japanese to return since the war to the land of their ancestry sailed today for Yokohama on the Gen. W. H. Gordon. A crowd of 4,500 men, women, and children, about three fourths of whom have never seen Japan, were aboard the vessel.

121 SHIPS TIED UP

NEW YORK, Dec. 29—(AP) The War Shipping administration said today 121 vessels—an all-time high—were tied up in Atlantic ports due to shortage of crews. A WSA survey of east coast ports showed three ships had been added to yesterday's list.

NIGHT LEAD MILITARY CONFERENCE
BY JOHN A. PARRIS

LONDON, DEC 29-(AP)-A FIVE-POWER MILITARY MEETING HERE IN JANUARY TO DISCUSS CREATION OF AN INTERNATIONAL PEACE PRESERVATION FORCE WAS FORECAST BY DIPLOMATS TODAY.

PLANS FOR SUCH A MEETING TO DISCUSS THE SIZE AND COMPOSITION OF THE INTERNATIONAL "POLICE FORCE" WERE REPORTED ALREADY UNDER DISCUSSION IN DIPLOMATIC CHANNELS THROUGH THE INITIATIVE OF THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT.

A BRITISH FOREIGN OFFICE SPOKESMAN WOULD NEITHER CONFIRM NOR DENY THE REPORTS. HE DREW ATTENTION, HOWEVER, TO PROVISIONS OF THE UNITED NATIONS CHARTER AUTHORIZING ESTABLISHMENT OF A MILITARY STAFF COMMITTEE TO WORK WITH THE SECURITY COUNCIL, AND TO BE CONSTITUTED "WHEN THE SECURITY COUNCIL IS ESTABLISHED."

REPORTS HERE SAID GEN. EISENHOWER MIGHT FLY TO LONDON FOR THE MEETING, BUT WASHINGTON AND FRANKFURT DISPATCHES ANNOUNCED THE APPOINTMENT OF LT. GEN. MATTHEW B. RIDGWAY, DEPUTY SUPREME COMMANDER IN THE MEDITERRANEAN THEATER, AS EISENHOWER'S REPRESENTATIVE ON THE MILITARY STAFF COMMITTEE OF THE UNITED NATIONS.

THIS WOULD SUGGEST THAT RIDGWAY MIGHT REPRESENT EISENHOWER AT ANY FIVE-POWER CONFERENCE. RIDGWAY IS SCHEDULED TO LEAVE FOR ENGLAND ABOUT JAN.3.

DIPLOMATS WERE INCLINED TO ACCEPT A MEETING OF MILITARY CHIEFTAINS OF THE UNITED STATES, GREAT BRITAIN, RUSSIA, FRANCE AND CHINA IN JANUARY AS A FOREGONE CONCLUSION. THEY SAID THAT SINCE THE SECURITY COUNCIL IS THE MOST IMPORTANT ORGAN OF THE UNO, IT SEEMED CERTAIN THAT EVERY EFFORT WOULD BE MADE TO GET IT TO OPERATING AS SOON AS POSSIBLE.

ONE AUTHORITATIVE SOURCE SAID THAT THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT, AS HOST TO THE UNO GENERAL ASSEMBLY OPENING HERE JAN.10, MIGHT TAKE THE FIRST STEP TOWARD SEEING THAT THE MILITARY STAFF COMMITTEE WAS CONSTITUTED.

THIS SOURCE SAID IT WAS NOT EXPECTED THAT THE CHIEFS OF STAFF WOULD HOLD PRELIMINARY DISCUSSION BEFORE THE SECURITY COUNCIL'S MILITARY STAFF COMMITTEE WAS ESTABLISHED.

UNDER THE UNO CHARTER, THE COMMITTEE IS AUTHORIZED TO ASSIST THE SECURITY COUNCIL ON ALL QUESTIONS RELATING TO MILITARY REQUIREMENTS FOR MAINTENANCE OF PEACE AND SECURITY, THE EMPLOYMENT AND COMMAND OF FORCES PLACED AT ITS DISPOSAL AND REGULATIONS OF ARMAMENTS AND POSSIBLE DISARMAMENT.

DIPLOMATS SAID THEY BELIEVED THE SECURITY COUNCIL WOULD ASK THE CHIEFS OF STAFF IMMEDIATELY TO ESTIMATE AT WHAT STRENGTH THE UNO PEACE PRESERVATION FORCE SHOULD BE MAINTAINED.

THEY AGREED THAT THE FIVE POWERS WOULD FURNISH THE BULK OF THE NEW INTERNATIONAL POLICE FORCE, INCLUDING MEN, PLANES, SHIPS AND ARMS, BUT EACH UNO MEMBER IS EXPECTED TO BE INFORMED AS TO THE SIZE OF TH FORCE IT WILL BE ASKED TO CONTRIBUTE.

IT HAS BEEN SUGGESTED IN SOME QUARTERS THAT A SPECIAL ATOM BOMB AIR FORCE BE PLACED AT THE SECURITY COUNCIL'S DISPOSAL--A QUESTION WHICH MAY COME BEFORE THE UNO'S GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

MEANWHILE DISPATCHES FROM MOSCOW REPORTED THAT STEPS WERE ALREA UNDER WAY TO IMPLEMENT AGREEMENTS REACHED AT THE THREE POWER CONFERENCE OF FOREIGN MINISTERS.

THESE INCLUDED THE DEPARTURE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE UNITED STATES, RUSSIA AND GREAT BRITAIN FOR BUCHAREST TO CARRY OUT THE AGREEMENT AS IT PERTAINS TO ROMANIA; TRANSMISSION OF ADVICE TO BULGARIA BY THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT ON PROPOSED CABINET CHANGES; DISPATCH OF ORDERS TO AMERICAN AND RUSSIAN COMMANDERS IN KOREA TO SET UP A JOINT COMMISSION; SENDING OF OFFICIAL DOCUMENTS ON THE ATOMIC AGREEMENT TO THE UNO.

IN SOFIA, FOREIGN MINISTER PETKO STAINOV TOLD THE BULGARIAN PARLIAMENT THAT THE GOVERNMENT "ACCEPTS THE SUGGESTIONS" OF THE SOVIET UNION FOR WIDER REPRESENTATION OF ALL PARTIES IN THE GOVERNMENT AND "WILL FULFILL LOYALLY" THE DECISIONS OF THE BIG THREE.

LONDON, DEC. 29-(AP)-SELECTION OF A SITE FOR PERMANENT HEADQUARTERS OF THE UNITED NATIONS ORGANIZATION WAS NARROWED STILL FURTHER TODAY BY A SPOKESMAN FOR THE INTERIM COMMITTEE WHO SAID THAT IT "PROBABLY" WOULD BE IN THE "GENERAL AREAS" OF EITHER BOSTON OR NEW YORK CITY.

THE SPOKESMAN, WHO ASKED THAT HIS NAME BE WITHHELD, SAID LAST NIGHT THAT THE SUB-COMMITTEE TO VISIT PROPOSED SITES WOULD LEAVE FOR THE UNITED STATES JAN. 3 OR 4 TO VISIT "AT LEAST 15 PLACES AND PROBABLY MORE."

THE INTERIM COMMITTEE HAD PREVIOUSLY ISSUED A STATEMENT SAYING THE SUB-COMMITTEE HAD BEEN INSTRUCTED TO "CONSIDER POSSIBLE SITES WITHIN AN AREA 50 TO 60 MILES AROUND BOSTON AND WITHIN AN AREA EAST OF THE HUDSON RIVER IN NEW YORK STATE AND CONNECTICUT BETWEEN 25 TO 30 MILES FROM NEW YORK CITY."

HOWEVER, THE SPOKESMAN SAID THIS ANNOUNCEMENT DID NOT RULE T OTHER COMMUNITIES AND SPECIFICALLY SAID PRINCETON, N.J., WAS STILL ER CONSIDERATION.

PEIPING, DEC. 29-(AP)-HOW TO EXTRICATE NORTH CHINA FROM A RUNAWAY INFLATION THAT HAS TURNED COLLEGE PROFESSORS INTO RICKSHA COOLIES AND DRIVEN MULTITUDES OF UNEMPLOYED TO DESPAIR WAS AMONG URGENT PROBLEMS DISCUSSED TODAY AT A MEETING OF T.V.SOONG, PRESIDENT OF THE EXECUTIVE YUAN, WITH 30 HIGH OFFICIALS OF THIS AREA.

SOONG, WHO IS CHAIRMAN OF THE CENTRAL GOVERNMENT'S NEW SUPREME ECONOMIC COUNCIL, TOLD THE MEETING THAT THE MOST IMPORTANT TASK CONFRONTING THE GOVERNMENT IN 1946 WOULD BE "TO STABILIZE THE CURRENCY AND PRICES AND ALSO TO RESTORE FOREIGN TRADE WITH A VIEW TO BALANCING THE GOVERNMENT'S INCOME AND EXPENDITURE." HE ADDED:

"WITH THIS OBJECTIVE IN VIEW ACTIVE MEASURES WILL BE TAKEN FOR IMPROVEMENT OF THE NATIONAL ECONOMY, FINANCES, COMMUNICATIONS AND THE LIVELIHOOD OF THE PEOPLE."

DISPOSITION OF ENEMY AND PUPPET PROPERTY, HE SAID, WAS AN IMPORTANT MATTER STILL TO BE WORKED OUT. ANOTHER WAS THE LICENSING OF FOREIGN BUSINESS. (SINCE THE ABROGATION, BY TREATY DURING THE WAR, OF EXTRATERRITORIAL RIGHTS FORMERLY ENJOYED BY FOREIGNERS IN CHINA, THE STATUS OF FOREIGN BUSINESS MEN AND ESTABLISHMENTS HAS REMAINED UNCLARIFIED.)

THE RISING COST OF LIVING UNDOUBTEDLY HAS BEEN THE OUTSTANDING HARDSHIP OF NORTH CHINA'S MILLIONS.

MANIPULATION OF THE MONEY MARKETS BY MONEY CHANGERS AND SPECULATORS SOME OF THEM FROM CHUNGKING--HAS FURTHER DEBASED THE BUYING POWER OF LOCAL MONEY. WHEN THE EXCHANGE BETWEEN CHINA NATIONAL CURRENCY AND LOCAL PUPPET MONEY WAS STABILIZED AT FIVE-TO-ONE, SPECULATORS TURNED TO THE AMERICAN DOLLAR, AND ITS VALUE NOW RISES AND FALLS AS MUCH AS 30 PER CENT WITHIN A FORTNIGHT.

THE SALARIED CLASSES, AS USUAL, ARE HARDEST HIT BY INFLATION. THERE ARE FORMER COLLEGE PROFESSORS HERE WHO ARE PULLING RICKSHAS FOR HIRE. THEIR ACADEMIC SALARIES OF ABOUT 20,000 PUPPET DOLLARS PER MONTH (ABOUT $4 GOLD) WERE INSUFFICIENT FOR BAREST NEEDS.

THE DISCREPANCY IN PAY SCALES BETWEEN CHUNGKING-APPOINTED OFFICIALS AND LOCAL OFFICIALS HAS BEEN ANOTHER SOURCE OF DISCONTENT. THE KUOMINTANG NEWSPAPER PEIPING CHRONICLE EDITORIALLY SUGGESTED A REVISED SALARY SCALE FOR LOCAL OFFICIALS, DRAWN WITH DUE REGARD TO THE COST OF LIVING, "SO THAT THEY WILL NO LONGER LABOR UNDER A DEEP SENSE OF GRIEVANCE."

PEIPING ALONE HAS MORE THAN 100,000 UNEMPLOYED, BUT THIS FIGURE WOULD HAVE TO BE MULTIPLIED MANY TIMES TO COVER THE JOBLESS AMONG NORTH CHINA'S 100,000,000 (M) PEOPLE.

COMMENTING ON THE PLIGHT OF THE JOBLESS, THE CHRONICLE INVITED DR.SOONG TO CONSIDER THE POLITICAL IMPLICATIONS OF THIS MISERY. "THEY ARE POTENTIAL RECRUITS TO COMMUNISM," UIT SAID, "IF THEY REMAIN OUT OF EMPLOYMENT. THE GOVERNMENT SHOULD FORGIVE THEIR PAST AND GIVE THEM A NEW START."

THEY "WILL NOT BELIEVE THAT ANY CONSTRUCTIVE PEACETIME TASK CANNOT BE ACCOMPLISHED," HE SAID IN AN ADDRESS PREPARED FOR THE OMEGA PSI PHI FRATERNITY'S NATIONAL CONVENTION AT HOWARD UNIVERSITY.

"THEY BELIEVE IN WORLD PEACE," HE CONTINUED, "AND HOLD THOSE TREASONABLE WHO SAY: 'WE MUST FIGHT RUSSIA' OR SOME OTHER COUNTRY. THE PEOPLE OF THE UNITED STATES WISH TO PROMOTE PEACE BY INTERNATIONAL CONTROL OF THE ATOMIC BOMB, AND PROMOTE AN AGE OF ABUNDANCE BY SPREDING THE USE OF ATOMIC ENERGY, UNDER STRICT GOVERNMENTAL CONTROL.

"FOR WE ARE AGAINST PRIVATE ARMIES, PRIVATE ARSENALS, AND UNREGULATED USE OF ATOMIC MATERIALS. WE CAN PLAY OUR PART IN A NEW 'ERA, IN WHICH THE ENERGY OF THE ATOM WILL WORK, NOT FOR MAN'S DESTRUCTION BUT FOR HIS GREAT GOOD."

WALLACE DECLARED THAT "THE FIGHT AGAINST PLANNERS OF WORLD WAR III IS ON."

"THE BATTLE AGAINST BIGOTRY, OPPRESSION, AND GREED IS OUR BATTLE," HE SAID.

"IT WILL NOT BE WON UNTIL ALL OF THE PEOPLE OF AMERICA ARE GIVEN AN OPPORTUNITY TO SECURE EDUCATION, PROPER FOOD AND MEDICAL CARE, UNTIL THEY ARE WELL HOUSED, UNTIL OUR SONS' FARMS ARE MORE FERTILE THAN THEIR FATHERS', UNTIL RACE RIOTS ARE UGLY LEGENDS OF A DISTANT PAST, UNTIL EVERY MAN WHO WANTS A JOB CAN GET A JOB AND A CHANCE TO ADVANCE IN THE WORLD."

IN THE POST-WAR UNITED STATES, HE SAID, SOME MEN AND WOMEN "ARE DENIED OPPORTUNITIES BECAUSE THEY ARE BLACK, OR BECAUSE THEY WERE NOT BORN HERE, OR BECAUSE THEY BELONG TO A CHURCH WITH A SMALL MEMBERSHIP.

"THERE ARE DEMAGOGUES HERE SEEKING TO CONVINCE THE IGNORANT THAT THERE IS A PURE RACE IN AMERICA--THAT ALL OTHER RACES MUST BE KEPT SUBSERVIENT TO A MYTHICAL MASTER RACE."

WALLACE CITED THE WARTIME ACCOMPLISHMENTS OF AMERICANS AND ADDED: "EVERY AMERICAN HAD A STAKE IN THE WAR AND EVERY AMERICAN MUST SHARE IN THE VICTORY."

WALLACE SAID THE POLL TAX MUST NOT STAND IN THEWAY OF ANY CITIZEN EXERCISING HIS RIGHT TO VOTE.

NEGROES, HE SAID, ALSO HAVE BEEN DENIED JOBS BECAUSE THEY ARE NEGROES.

"NOT ONLY IS THIS UNFAIR, BUT IT IS DAMAGING TO THE NATION'S BUSINESS," HE REMARKED.

HE CALLED FOR CREATION OF A PERMANENT FAIR EMPLOYMENT PRACTICES COMMITTEE BECAUSE "THERE CANNOT BE FULL EMPLOYMENT WITHOUT FAIR EMPLOYMENT."

Hitler Expelled Goering, Himmler from Nazi Party

Fuehrer's Political Will Charged They Negotiated Secretly with Allies.

DEC 31 1945 DE LUCE

NUERNBERG, Dec. 30—(AP) Adolf Hitler's political testament, released in textual form today by Allied authorities, disclosed that the Fuehrer expelled Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering and Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler from the National Socialist party for attempting to seize control of the state.

"Before my death," said the document, evidently prepared as Berlin was falling in flaming ruin before the Red Army onslaught, "I expel the former Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering from the party and withdraw from him all the rights which were conferred on him."

Once Was No. 2 Nazi

Hitler once had designated Goering as his successor.

"In his place I appoint Admiral Doenitz (Grand Adm. Karl Doenitz, now, with Goering, a defendant in the war crimes trial here, as president and supreme commander of the Wehrmacht.

"Before my death I expel the former Reichsfuehrer of S.S. and Minister of the Interior Heinrich Himmler from the party and from all of his state offices. In his place I appoint Gauleiter Karl Hanke as Reichsfuehrer of SS and chief of of the German police, and Gauleiter Paul Giesler as minister of the interior.

"Apart from their disloyalty to me, Goering and Himmler have brought irreparable shame on the country and on the whole nation by secretly negotiating with the enemy without my knowledge and against my will, and also by illegally attempting to seize control of the state."

A text of Hitler's personal will also was made public. It disclosed, among other things, that Hitler planned to use the art masterworks looted from Europe for a public museum in his "home town of Linz on the Danube."

Hitler told of his plans for suicide after marrying Eva Braun, his 35-year-old mistress, in the Reichschancellery bunker as Russian bombs rained on it.

"Before the end of my life I have decided to take as my wife the woman who, after many years of true friendship, came to this city, already almost besieged, of her own free will, in order to share my fate," the will said.

"She will go to her death with me at her own wish as my wife. This will compensate us for what we have both lost through my work in the service of my people."

The will, dated "Berlin, April 29, 1945," and witnessed by Martin Bormann, Hitler's deputy; Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels ,and Nicolaus von Below, directed the cremation of Hitler and his bride.

The will named Bormann as executor, permitted him to turn over mementos and enough for "a petiti bourgeois standard" of living to Hitler relatives, and to Eva's mother. The rest, Hitler decreed, would go to the party.

"If the party no longer exists," the instrument said, his belongings would go to the state, and "if the state too is destroyed, there is no need for further instructions on my part."

"The paintings in the collection bought by me during the course of the years were never assembled for private purposes, but solely for the establishment of a picture gallery in my home town of Linz on the Danube.

"It is my most heartfelt wish that this will should be duly executed."

Duplicates Seized

British intelligence agents, meanwhile, seized another messenger who bore in his pockets a duplicate set of the Hitler documents, plus an appendix by Goebbels in which the propaganda minister said he elected to die with his Fuehrer rather than obey the command to become chancellor and carry on a new government. Goebbels' charred body and those of his wife and children were identified a few days later by Red army troops after the conquest of Berlin.

"In the nightmare of treason which surrounds the Fuehrer in these most critical days of war, there must be at least some people to stay with him unconditionally until death, even if this contradicts the formal, and from a material point of view, entirely justifiable order which he gives in his political testament," Goebbels wrote.

"I believe that I am thereby doing the best service to the future of the German people."

Feared Trial By Allies

Hitler's testament indicated he feared to stand trial before an Allied court.

"After six years of war which in spite of all setbacks will go down in history as the most glorious and heroic manifestation of the struggle for existence of a nation," the testament said, "I cannot forsake the city which is the capital of this state. As our forces are too small to withstand the enemy attack on this place any longer, and our own resistance will be worn down gradually by men who are merely blind automata, I wish to share my fate with that which millions of others have also taken upon themselves, by staying in this town.

"Further, I shall not fall into the hands of an enemy who requires a new spectacle presented by the Jews to divert their hysterical masses."

Hitler ranted at length against "international statesmen" and "international Jewry" whom he blamed for a war he said he, himself, did not want.

The Hitler documents and the appendix by Goebbel were released by the Third Army after British officials at Herford had made them public in the British zone. Earlier Third Army officers had said the political text was "political dynamite" and "weeks of investigation" would have to be made before it could be released.

Third Army headquarters also had said that the document had provided the basis for a renewed American search in Austria and Italy as well as Germany for fugitive Nazis. Tonight, however, 3d Army headquarters appeared uncertain just what kind of a search, if any, was being made or would be made.

"There will certainly be arrests," a 3d Army staff officer said. "We have leads to follow over a lot of Europe."

Fancy Stationery Used

United States intelligence men in Germany, Austria, Italy and many places in Europe have been alerted by Col. Edward M. Fieket, of the 3d Army. Their operations are expected to be co-ordinated closely with those of British intelligence.

Capt. George Ritchie, of New York, former staff member of the New York Sun, said the political testament contained, among other things, a "confession about looted art treasures."

Ritchie said the document was in two parts. The first two pages dealt with personal affairs, the remaining eight to ten with political matters.

"It is on the fanciest bond stationery I ever saw, with the name Adolf Hitler and a swastika forming a silvered crest at the top of each page," Ritchie said. "A typewriter with extra large letters was used to write it, and there are only about 100 words to each page."

Appears Authentic Replica

In contrast with the luxurious stationery used for the political testament, the marriage contract bore not even the mark of an official rubber stamp.

The two-page marriage contract was typewritten, except for biographical data supplied by Hitler, Eva and the witnesses, Bormann and Goebbels.

Hitler filled out most of the required form, but left blank the spaces after "father" and "mother." Eva gave the names of her parents, but both bride and bridegroom, after the words "marriage date of parents," scratched out in ink whatever entry had been made there.

The "A. Hitler" scrawled on the second page of the marriage document seemed an authentic replica of the thousands of Hitler signatures found on various orders.

NUERNBERG TRIALS TO REOPEN AFTER HOLIDAY RECESS

TUCKER

NUERNBERG, Germany, Dec. 30—(AP) Rested but uncheered by the Christmas recess, the 21 top Nazis at the international war crimes trial face the bleak prospect of being singled out for "individual treatment" when the court reconvenes on Wednesday.

For the first time in the trial the U. S. prosecution will attempt to tie each defendant to the conspiracy charged in the indictment, and to show the role he played.

The ailing Ernst Kaltenbrunner, former chief of the Nazi security police, will be the first to come in for special attention, when Naval Lieutenant Whitney R. Harris, Los Angeles, Calif., handles the case of the Gestapo and S. D.—security police.

Harris said he would emphasize the instance of the British-American mission in Slovakia, in which Associated Press Correspondent Joseph Morton and 13 others captured by the Nazis were brutally executed at the Mauthausen concentration camp in January, 1945, allegedly upon orders from Kaltenbrunner.

Harris said, however, that Kaltenbrunner, who suffered a brain hemorrhage two days before the trial began on Nov. 18, will not be in the court. He recovered sufficiently to enable him to attend some sessions, but later had a relapse and is now in a prison hospital where doctors have ordered a long stay.

After Harris gets through with Kaltenbrunner, Ralph G. Albrecht, New York attorney, will deal with Hermann Goering. Thereafter the defendants will be handled approximately in the order in which they appear in the indictment.

Albrecht said the procedure for the three days of court beginning Wednesday will include a special discourse by Elwyn Jones, British member of Parliament, on "Mein Kampf."

He said also that Col. Leonard Wheeler, Jr., Boston, Mass., would introduce special Vatican documents dealing with Nazi persecution of the church.

Col. Telford Taylor was scheduled to deal with the German high command, and then Albrecht will offer a statement to usher in the individual defendants.

It is considered doubtful if all members of the court and the prosecution will be on hand for the reopening. Individual members are scattered across Europe and part of Asia, and flying schedules have been wrecked by fog and high winds.

GERMANS AIM FOR COMEBACK

Workers' Units Spur Output In Soviet-Occupied Zone

Berlin, Dec. 30 (AP)—German provincial and Russian military government officials say industrial production in Soviet-occupied Germany is being spurred by workers' councils which are given a share in running industries.

The first American correspondents to tour the zone saw one of these councils functioning at the Riebeckesche Montanwerke (mining works) in Weissenfels, one of the largest coal mines in Saxony province.

This enterprise is run by a board of two directors and three workers' representatives elected from the mines and factories.

Little War Damage To Plant

The plant they operate includes one pit mine, three surface mines, two power plants, two plants for distilling brown coal into tar and eleven factories for making brown coal into fuel blocks. The plant suffered little war damage.

Gross coal diggings for October were announced as 469,896 metric tons (517,825 short tons), which is about 84 per cent of the production in the same month in 1938.

Both Russian military and German provincial officials give much credit for this quick comeback to the workers' council, which has a say in production methods as well as responsibility for employés' welfare.

Model For Other Mines

The Riebeckesche mine was discarded by the officials as a model for operating other mines in this area. Most of the stock was owned by the Rheinstahl Company, which obtained its controlling interest from I. G. Farben. Since the Rheinstahl bosses are in Western Germany and out of contact with the plant here, the board of directors has been superseded by two directors named by the provincial government.

These directors are Heinz Rudert and Assistant Director Dr. Max Schwahn. Rudert, who has been with the company since 1939, succeeded Director Fritz Koenig, who was arrested by Russian occupation authorities on undisclosed charges.

Company Sells Power

The directors attend daily meetings with the workers' council, whose members are Ernst Boetterer, for 33 years a pit miner; Otto Kiersch, a miner at 14 who now works in a factory, and Fritz Lasch, another former pit miner fifteen years with the company. All three said they were Communist party members. The directors said they belonged to no political party.

There are workers' councils in each factory and mine in this enterprise. The total membership of 105 in these councils chose the top council of three.

Railroads, industries, some small businesses and hospitals are receiving the coal output.

SLAYINGS IN BERLIN SPUR HUNT FOR GUNMEN

BERLIN, Dec. 30 — (AP) The bodies of four murder victims were found in Berlin today and American and Russian military police scoured the American sector of the city for gunmen who may have been responsible also for the slaying of two U. S. soldiers last week.

The latest victims included a Russian in the uniform of a Red Army captain, found in the Anhalter station area shot between the eyes, and another Russian whose nude body was found with the face almost blown off.

Other victims were a German civilian who was shot and killed while walking along the street and another wounded nearby. Description of the assailants fitted the pair sought in the slaying of two American sergeants in the Tempelhof airdrome district last week, police said.

In addition one other German was killed on the doorstep of a friend's home, and another was near death after he was shot in the stomach.

GERMANY TO LOSE MORE FACTORIES

BERLIN, Dec. 30 — (AP) The American military government's industry branch said today that 56 additional factories in western Germany have been declared available for reparations, making a total of 82 thus earmarked.

The new factories include a Krupp steel plant in Essen and an I. G. Farben plant in Rheinfelden.

Of the 82 plants, 26 already have been allocated with all or part of seven large plants going to Russia, Poland, France, the Netherlands, Greece, Norway, Yugoslavia, Australia, India, Egypt, Belgium and Czechoslovakia. The United States has made no claims for equipment.

The four-power council in Berlin is working now on the allocation of the 56 additional plants.

An analysis of 19 of the first 26 plants declared for reparations in the American zone shows that their removal will reduce drastically the German industrial capacity in that sector, the American military government said.

Their removal eliminated 100 per cent of the zone's ferro-nickel production, 70 per cent of the capacity for producing motorcycle engines, 40 per cent of the ball bearing potential, 40 per cent of ship building, and 38 per cent of TNT capacity, the estimates said.

NAZI SUPPORTERS FOUND IN CAMPS GETTING U. S. AID

FRANKFURT, Germany, Dec. 30 —(AP) An official military government report today said that a large percentage of Baltic nationals enjoying United Nations refuge in at least two displaced persons camp had been found to be Nazi sympathizers.

The report added that a former Polish SS man wanted for atrocities had been found heading another displaced persons group.

The American G-2 investigation pointed the finger of suspicion, too, at Nazi elements who enjoy an Allied haven by day but engage in depredations at night and who are responsible for the main source of disorder and crime in Germany.

"There is a growing belief," said the report, "that responsibility for many of the depredations attributed to displaced persons might be traced to such criminal elements."

An official spokesman of the U. S. Army in Europe said, however, that the United Nations still were pledged to feed the Balts and Poles who do not want to go home even though they have been found to be pro-Nazi.

The Army is going ahead on that basis, he said, until the issue has been decided on the governmental level. Armed guards have been placed around some displaced persons camps, however, to prevent anyone from leaving without a pass.

Russia has put forward strong requests that Latvians, Estonians and Lithuanians who fled to Germany be made to return to their Soviet-occupied homelands. Under the agreement at Yalta, however, the United States still reserves the right to recognize them under their own nationality rather than as Soviet citizens, and none has yet been forced to go home. The American intelligence investigation may determine the future U. S. policy.

"In two camps containing Baltic nationals at Mainfranken a majority of those investigated were found to consist of voluntary pro-Nazi exiles. In Regensburg, personnel questionnaires given to a group of 240 displaced persons revealed that 40 per cent of their number under denazification directives were in mandatory removal categories."

It added that "in another case a 'trusted' Polish displaced person placed in charge of a group of fellow Poles who were being repatriated was arrested upon arrival by Polish officials who possessed documentary evidence that the man in question had been a member of the SS and was wanted in connection with atrocities committed in Poland."

ARMY FOOD STOCKS DIVERTED TO GERMANS

FRANKFURT, Germany, Dec. 30 —(AP) Faced with the threat of food revolts in Germany, the U. S. military government has been compelled to divert additional emergency army food stocks to German civilians in the U. S. zone, an Army report disclosed today.

In an effort to halt threat of widespread starvation and "civil strife that might endanger occupation troops," 40,000 tons of flour have been diverted, the report said. Previously emergency supplies had been used only for civilians in Berlin.

Mihailovic Reported Still In Yugoslav Hills

Frankfurt, Dec. 30 (AP) — The United States Army newspaper Stars and Stripes said today Gen. Draja Mihailovic, the Yugoslav Chetnik leader, was still hiding in the hills of Yugoslavia and was planning to lead a revolution for the overthrow of the regime of Marshal Tito.

The newspaper said up to 70,000 troops loyal to King Peter of Yugoslavia were gathered in the mountains south of Belgrade, living under most primitive conditions. The dispatch, by Correspondent Arthur Noyes, said Mihailovic had fanatical support from these guerrilla forces, who regard him as King Peter's war minister.

Flying Fortress Crash In Germany Kills Six

Frankfurt, Germany, Dec. 30 (AP). A Flying Fortress of the 306th Bomb Group crashed into the side of a mountain 15 miles north of this city yesterday, killing five crew members and one passenger, United States Air Force headquarters said today.

There were no survivors. The plane was en route from Giebelstadt to Eschborn, near Frankfort. Names of the victims were withheld pending notification of next of kin.

GEN. CLARK LAUDS DEPUTY KILLED IN HUNTING MISHAP

VIENNA, Dec. 30—(AP) Funeral services will be held at 10 a.m. tomorrow for Maj. Gen. Donald W. Brann, 50, deputy commander of U. S. forces in Austria, killed yesterday when he toppled 100 feet from a cliff while hunting in the mountainous Austrian Tyrol.

Brann, a close associate of Gen. Mark W. Clark, commanding general of U. S. forces in Austria, is the second American general to die in Europe within 10 days. Gen. George. S. Patton, Jr., died in Germany on Dec. 21 from complications resulting from injuries in an automobile accident which occurred when he was returning from a hunting trip.

To be Buried in Italy

Brann, whose home is in San Antonio, Tex., will be buried in an American military cemetery at Castelfiorentino, Italy--selected as a fitting burial place because of the prominent part he played in the Allied operations in Italy.

Clark in a statement today praised Brann as "an able Soldier with an excellent record in both world wars," and said his death was "a deep personal blow to me, and a serious loss to the United States forces in Austria."

"His contribution to the Allies' victorious campaign in Italy in G-3 (organization and training) for the Fifth army and later the 15th army group was outstanding.

"As my deputy commander in Austria he was at all times of invaluable assistance, and earned the respect of all those with whom he was associated."

Brann's body rested tonight in a chapel at the 110th station hospital with an honor guard furnished by the 505th military police battalion.

The funeral services tomorrow will be simple, Capt. Emery I. Moshier, headquarters chaplain here, will be in charge.

Cabinet to Attend

The Austrian cabinet is expected to attend, along with high officers of the U. S. Army. After the services the body will be taken to a British railroad terminal and placed abroad Clark's special train for the trip to Italy.

Clark will be one of the honorary pall bearers at the funeral services. Others will include John G. Erhardt, U. S. political adviser in Austria; Brig. Gen. Ralph Tate, chief of staff for U. S. forces in Austria, a post formerly held by Brann; Brig. Gen. W. C. McMahon, assistant to the deputy commanding general; Brig. Gen. Joseph P. Sullivan, quartermaster; Brig. Gen. Richard B. Moran, signal officer; Brig. Gen. Thomas E. Lewis, commanding general in the Vienna area, and Brig. Gen. Charles Saltzmann, who escorted Brann's casket to Vienna from Salzburg.

A native of Rushville, Ind., Brann had become deputy commander to Clark only last Oct. 29. His decorations included the Distinguished Service Medal, awarded for his work in supervising planning of Allied landings at Salerno.

He was married to Dorothy Elizabeth Teel of Clarksville, Tex. surviving are his widow and a daughter, Mrs. D. E. McCrory.

General Clark Reviews U.S. Aid To Austrians

Vienna, Dec. 30 (AP)—Headquarters of Gen. Mark W. Clark, in a report reviewing the occupation of Austria, said today that food and other goods had been brought into Vienna by United States forces to alleviate suffering in the United States occupation zone.

During the first month and a half United States occupation food staples were imported at the rate of 500 tons a day, the report said. Since that time, fuel, clothing and medical supplies have been brought in, as well as food.

Supplementary rations have been provided for schoolchildren, sick persons and nursing and expectant mothers, the report said. Hundreds of children have been given physical examinations and 10,000 children have been moved into rural homes by Vienna welfare agencies, at the suggestion of American authorities, it added.

FOOD PRICES RISE

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Dec. 30—(AP) A sharp rise in food prices, which nearly doubled in some cases, threatens to nullify the government's recent effort to stabilize the currency by devaluing by 75 per cent all banknotes of over 100-pengo denomination.

Labor's dissatisfaction crystallized in a strike of 20,000 workers on Csepel island, in the Danube at Budapest, where is manufactured one-fourth of the goods intended to pay Hungary's reparations bill.

HUNGARY EXPELS 430,000 SWABIANS

BUDAPEST, Dec. 30 — (AP) The Hungarian government decreed today the expulsion of approximately 430,000 Swabians who declared themselves German nationals during the last census, taken during the German occupation.

30.24-32735

The decree also ordered the expulsion of persons who changed their Magyar names to Germanic, and of persons who were members of Volksbunds or German armed units. Members of the Democratic party and trade unions are exempted.

The Swabians will be required to leave behind all property unless specifically exempted by the Interior ministry. The Swabian SS organization was blamed for atrocities during the siege of Budapest.

(The Swabians are members of a group which originally migrated to Hungary from a region of southwestern Germany comprising parts of Baden, Wuerttemberg, Bavaria and Hohenzollern.

(The German minority in Hungary is not concentrated but exists principally in Budapest, along the western frontier, in the Bakony forest and the Danube-Drava angle. Hungary had a population of over 9,000,000 in 1939 of which 865,000 were Germans).

TERRORISM CHARGED TO ANDERS' FORCES

WARSAW, Dec. 24 — (Delayed) —(AP) Premier Edward B. Osubka-Morawski said today terroristic acts were being fomented in Poland by agents of Polish Gen. Wladislaw Anders, former commander-in-chief of Polish forces in Italy, who has declined to return to Poland under the present regime.

The premier blamed bands of the NSZ (National Armed Forces) and said in an interview there was "liaison between these people and those of Anders." He added: "Anders' people are backing them and they get arms and other materials by air."

The NSZ originally was formed to fight the Nazi occupation. It has been accused of directing activities against the Warsaw government.

U. S. Attache at Warsaw Believed Accident Victim

Lt. Col. Wylie Falls Into River From Bridge in Germany

WARSAW, Dec. 29 (Delayed) (AP).—Lieutenant Colonel Andrew Wylie, United States Marine Corps, Naval attache at the American Embassy here, is missing and is believed by his chauffeur to have been killed in a fall from a bridge near Stettin, in occupied Germany, the night of Dec. 26.

Wylie, whose home is at Thomas Circle, Washington, was motoring from Gdynia to Warsaw at the time of the accident. His Polish chauffeur said Wylie left the automobile to investigate the condition of the bridge and fell through the structure into the river. A three-day search for the body was unavailing.

[Wylie is a member of one of the oldest families in Washington. He is a bachelor, forty-nine, and was named to the Warsaw post last August proceding there in October. He has two sisters, Katharine, wife of the Rev. Frederick Lawrence, Cambridge, Mass., and Margaret, wife of the Rev. Mr. Strawbridge, residing in England, and a brother, Lieutenant Craig Wylie, of Katonah, N. Y.]

NAZI OFFICER HANGED AT SCENE OF ATROCITIES

MAJDANEK, Poland, Dec. 23.—(Delayed)—(AP) German SS Officer Paul Hoffman, convicted of operating a crematorium at this former Nazi concentration camp, was hanged today before a crowd of 20,000 persons.

The scaffold was erected at the crematorium where Hoffman was accused of burning many bodies of Poles and other Allied prisoners. During the war criminals trial witnesses testified they saw Hoffman on several occasions toss newly-born infants into the ovens.

Hoffman protested his innocence until the last, claiming he was confused with "another man of the same name." As the noose slipped about his neck he assumed a stance of Nazi bravado and muttered in German.

Many witnesses of the execution were relatives of his victims. State Senator Stanley Nowak of Michigan and State Representative Vincent Klien of Detroit, were among those present.

Surits Russ Envoy To Brazil

Moscow, Dec. 30 (AP)—Jakob Zakharovich Surits today was appointed as the Soviet Ambassador to Brazil by the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet. He formerly had served as Ambassador to Germany, Turkey and France.

SOVIET WRITER HAILS AGREEMENT AT MOSCOW

MOSCOW, Dec. 30 — (AP) N. Polyanov, a writer of Komsomolskaya Pravda, said today "the freedom of peoples of Eastern Asia forever should be removed from the threats of a new war" as the result of the Moscow foreign ministers conference.

"One cannot fail to note that the friendship of the great powers, born in the storms of warfare, continues to develop in the days of peace also," he wrote.

He said that 11-member Far Eastern commission and the four-power council for Japan, agreed upon by the three foreign ministers, had the task of preventing a revival of the "disgusting samurai bandit spirit so characteristic of Japan."

"The agreement on Korea also helps this cause of strengthening the postwar peace in the Far East," he said. "Korea was one of the first victims of Japanese aggression. This small country drank to the bottom all the bitterness, suffering and humiliation, but now before her open broad paths for free development."

LOCOMOTIVES FOR POLAND

WARSAW, Dec. 29 (Delayed)—(AP) Poland received 12 American locomotives today, the first direct aid for her critical railway transport problem. M. E. Havs, of Philadelphia, Pa., UNRRA director of industrial and agricultural aid for Poland, said the locomotives, part of U. S. Army surplus from Belgium, were turned over to the Poles at Katowice.

Soviet Yule Celebration To Be Gayest Since '40

Moscow, Dec. 30 (AP)—The Soviet Union's midwinter celebration—a sort of combined Christmas and New Year—will be the gayest since the Winter of 1940-41.

Despite the extreme cold, scores of workmen are building a fairy village in the heart of downtown Moscow. A 60-foot green tree has been put in the center of the village. Special holiday foods, drinks, toys, tree decorations and balloons will be sold in the many little gaily painted houses around the tree.

The Russians do not celebrate December 25 as Christmas. Under the old Russian calendar Christmas is observed in church ceremonies on January 7.

The big holiday is New Year's eve and New Year's day. Gifts are exchanged then. The Russian Santa Claus is called Grandfather Frost, and he is one of the contradictions in this country. In many other nations of the world Santa Claus is dressed in red, but in red Russia Grandfather Frost is dressed in white.

Separatists In Fight, Rome Papers Report

Rome, Dec. 30 (AP)—A Sicilian policeman was killed and four others wounded last night and early today in clashes with Separatists who want to secede from Italy, Rome newspapers reported in dispatches from Sicily. Separatist casualties could not be learned.

Dispatches from Catania said skirmishes still were in progress between Caltagirone and Niscemi. A number of university students from the Separatist ranks have been arrested.

GREECE LIMITS SIZE OF ARMY

ATHENS, Dec. 30 — (AP) The peacetime strength of the Greek army will be seven divisions totalling 100,000 men, under a new plan prepared by the general staff, it was announced today.

PALESTINE POLICE MAKE 59 ARRESTS

JERUSALEM, Dec. 30 — (AP) British authorities detained 59 persons for further questioning today as a combined police and military search through the Jewish town of Ramat Gan near Tel Aviv was concluded.

Officials said a total of 1,500 persons were questioned before a special curfew was lifted in Ramat Gan. Authorities said the search through the town was conducted because participants in Thursday night's Palestinian bombings were suspected of hiding there. Ten persons were killed in the attack on police headquarters in Jerusalem and other attacks in Tel Aviv.

A curfew still was in effect in Jerusalem where 2,000 persons were rounded up Friday for questioning.

Egypt Approves Boycott

CAIRO, Dec. 30 (AP).—The Egyptian Cabinet approved today a boycott on Zionist-produced goods from Palestine, to take effect Jan. 1. Enforcement measures were expected to be announced tomorrow.

Chiang Is Wary of Truce Proposed by Chinese Reds

CHUNGKING, Dec. 30. — (AP) Chinese government and Communist quarters each charged that the other was pushing military offensives today as the government looked for what it might consider as disadvantages in the Communist proposal that both sides stop where they are in an unconditional truce.

Government sources already have made it clear that they could accept no truce which would impede in any way restoration of railroad communications or disarmament of Japanese troops and have said that these would be the results if both sides simply halted wherever they might be.

Fear Future Claims

Fears also were expressed today that if the government were to accept the proposal without qualification, the Communists would renew some of their previous claims, such as a share in the disarmament of Japanese.

The Communist proposal has been in the hands of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek since Dec. 28 and is being given serious consideration. The government's reply might be delivered at the next formal meeting a few days hence of representatives of the two sides, who last conferred Dec. 27.

There is practically no prospect that the forthcoming unity conversations will open on New Year's day, as proposed by the Communists. Most quarters believe it unlikely this conference will start before the second week of January.

A Communist spokesman asserted that 225,000 government troops, in a drive aimed at conquest of Communist-dominated Jehol province, captured Kupehkow, Great Wall border town between China proper and Inner Mongolia, on Christmas day.

A government dispatch declared the Communists, since mid-December, have been attacking Kufow, the Shantung province birthplace of the sage Confucius. It said 50,000 Communists were attacking the sacred city, trying to isolate it from the outside world.

More than 6,000 fully armed Japanese, a Communist dispatch alleged, were sent to fronts north and south of Taiyuan, capital of Shansi province, to participate in attacks against the Communists.

The Communist spokesman said the Communists were offering virtually no resistance in Jehol but were prepared to put up a stiff fight if forced. He belittled a government spokesman's recent assertion that the Communists proposed the truce because they had suffered severe defeats in Suiyuan and Shantung provinces.

"We are sure of our strength," the Communist declared.

Control Section of Canal

Another Communist dispatch said the Communists now control a 30-mile section of the Grand Canal between Kaoyu and Nanking. It said in operations leading to the capture of Kaoyu and Shaopo the Communists killed or wounded 210 Japanese and 300 puppet troops and captured 940 Japanese and 4,550 puppets.

Communists also claimed capture of five strongpoints on the Tientsin-Pukow railroad, but admitted loss of Tsaoyang, highway center about 140 miles northwest of Hankow.

A dispatch from Associated Press Correspondent Olen Clements in Tientsin noted an absence of any incidents in North China during Christmas week coincidental with Chungking conferences of General Marshall, the U. S. envoy, with representatives of both sides.

Clements said reliable reports from Manchuria were that Gen Tu Li-Ming, commander of government troops in the north, did not expect to enter Mukden for another two weeks. Sources quoted the general as saying the Russians were responsible for the delay, the dispatch said, adding that apparently all sides were awaiting some sort of a decision before making the next move.

Chinese Press Views On Moscow Are Mixed

Nation's Exclusion Assailed but Accord Is Praised

CHUNGKING, Dec. 30 (AP).—The agreements reached at the foreign ministers' conference at Moscow drew a mixed reception in the Chinese press.

"The Central Daily News" expressed satisfaction with the agreement on Japan, because "it follows mostly China's proposals." The Communist "New China Daily News" welcomed the accord on China "because the wishes of the Big Three coincide with those of the Chinese people." It expressed hope American forces would leave China as soon as the responsibility of disarming and deporting Japanese troops is discharged or the Chinese government is in a position to do the disarming without American assistance.

"Hsin Ming Pao" said: "The improvement in Russian-American relations will help stabilize the Far Eastern situation and clear away any external stimulus to China's internal strife." The paper added, however, that the failure to invite China to the conference "shows China has lost her place as one of the Big Four."

The army medium "Ho Ping Pao," in similar vein, declared: "The fact that problems concerning the whole world were discussed and decided by only three powers is regrettable."

CHINESE EXECUTED

CHUNGKING, Dec. 30. — (AP) A Communist dispatch said today that Ko Tien-Ming, whom it identified as a onetime member of the puppet North China political affairs council, was executed Dec. 15 in Hopei province after being sentenced by a mass meeting of 10,000 persons.

NEW RAIL LINE OPENS

CHUNGKING, Dec. 30. — (AP) The first railroad line ever to penetrate the hinterland province of Kakansu in China's great northwest is to be opened to traffic Jan. 2.

It is an extension of the Lunghai railroad from Paochi, Shensi province, to Tienshui in southwestern Kansu. A test run was made Christmas day.

MARSHALL TO VISIT SHANGHAI

CHUNGKING, Dec. 30 — (AP) General Marshall is expected to pay a brief visit to Shanghai within the next few days, later possibly going to North China. Final plans have not yet been made but the U. S. envoy would be away from Chungking less than a week.

China Makes New Year's Day National Holiday

Chungking, Dec. 30 (AP)—The Government has proclaimed New Year's Day a national holiday, to be featured by a memorial service in Chungking for Dr. Sun Yat-sen, founder of the republic.

Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek is to preside at the memorial service. Chiang's usual New Year's message to the nation is expected to be delivered tomorrow.

STRIKERS RETURN

SINGAPORE, Dec. 29. — (AP) Eleven thousand employes of the British military administration at this naval base agreed today to resume work tomorrow after a three-weeks strike for higher pay. The administration agreed to pay the workers their wages for the period they were on strike. Five thousand privately employed laborers in Singapore are still on strike.

LST'S SENT TO SHANGHAI TO TRANSPORT JAPANESE

SHANGHAI, Dec. 30—(AP) The repatriation of Japanese prisoners of war from the Peiping-Tientsin area has been suspended temporarily because of the transfer of LST's to Shanghai to handle a backlog of prisoners there.

The suspension came just after the first 100,000 Japanese had been sent home from here.

Japanese civilians in the northern area, however, still will be sent home on the few Japanese ships that call at Tangku harbor. There was some speculation here that the bulk of Japanese repatriation may be shifted for the next few months to Chingwang-Tao, an all-weather port.

JINNAH SEES INDIA VOTE AS VICTORY

Contends Moslem Move Proves Separate State's Support

Bombay, Dec. 30 (AP)—Mahomed Ali Jinnah, president of the Moslem League, said today the results of recent central assembly elections constituted a "clear verdict of Moslem India in favor of the Pakistan demand."

In a statement, Jinnah said official returns showed that Moslem League candidates won all of the 30 Moslem seats in the Central Assembly election which were contested by Moslems who ran under the Congress party and other banners.

The Moslem League demands that two groups of provinces, where the Moslem population is in the majority, be divorced from the Hindu provinces and recognized as forming the independent, sovereign country of Pakistan. The Congress party opposes this demand, contending it weakens India's chances for independence.

Provincial assembly elections in the spring will constitute the next test for the Moslem League. Under Indian election law the central assembly voting was restricted to a wealthier electorate than the provincial assembly voting.

The Congress party contends that the Moslem League speaks for wealthier Moslems, and that millions of Moslems actually are loyal to the Congress party and are opposed to Pakistan.

KOREANS STONE AMERICAN TROOPS

Street Riots Break Out, Many Halt Work in Independence Plea.

SEOUL, Korea, Dec. 29—(AP) (Delayed) Koreans stoned American soldiers, fought one another in the streets and engaged in mass work stoppages today in a medley of internal political dissent and angry objection to the Big Three's five-year trusteeship program for this independence-hungry country.

American military authorities, who control the southern half of Korea, clapped on an 8 p.m. curfew, but the resentment against the program announced in Moscow, plus conflict between rightists and leftists, made it possible that more serious trouble might develop (There was no word from the northern half of Korea, occupied by Russian troops).

Lt. Gen. John R. Hodge, commander of American forces, told Korean newspapermen at a conference late today that the Moscow program of the Russian, American and British foreign ministers called for Korean independence and did not mean immediate imposition of a trusteeship.

The general, however, had not received his copy of the Moscow communique until late in the day, and the Koreans, who bristle at the word "trusteeship," already had heard something of the program and formed their own opinions.

By noon mass walkouts were in progress. Hundreds of Koreans employed by the American military government quit work and left the government palace. Policemen left their beats and banks closed.

The plan announced by the Big Three called for eventual reestablishment of Korea as an independent nation, first by creation of a provisional government, establishment of a commission by American and Russian occupation authorities to recommend further steps to the United States, Russia, Britain and China, and the working out of a four-power trusteeship for a period "up to five years" while the country develops ability to stand on its own feet.

General Hodge reiterated to the Korean reporters his opinion that there was nothing in this program which "any real patriot or nationalist need fear" and repeatedly told them that the plan was drafted for Korean's own protection.

Koreans, however, are restive after their long ordeal as a colony of Japan and, regardless of individual politics, are filled with nationalistic spirit.

Tied To Internal Politics

The outbreaks nevertheless were definitely tied up with internal politics.

By early this morning this capital cit, was plastered with huge posters charging the Communist party with responsibility for the trusteeship plan.

During the day a mob attacked a newspaper which describes itself as liberal and progressive, but which Rightist elements contend is Communist.

A Communist party spokesman charged that Rightists were responsible for all the demonstrations and outbreaks because all Leftist elements, including the Communists, had been advised to conduct "peaceful protests" against the Big Three plan.

NEW DUTCH TROOPS TO LAND ON JAVA

BATAVIA, Java, Dec. 30—(AP) Two thousand American-trained and equipped Dutch marines arrived off Batavia today, and the British said they probably would disembark within a few days.

The cabinet of the unrecognized Indonesian republic met immediately, presumably to discuss the landings.

The Indonesians had protested the movement of additional Dutch forces into the Netherlands East Indies, but in this particular case had agreed sometime ago to allow the marines to be brought in to replace Amboinese natiyes serving in the Dutch army, Premier Sutan Sjahrir said. Sjahrir was prevented by illness from attending the cabinet meeting.

In announcing the marines' arrival, Allied headquarters said they would relieve Dutch native troops "who are going outside Batavia." The British said that Indonesian leaders had been informed that the Dutch marines would help enforce order thus making possible the disarming of Dutch civilians.

Trained at Quantico, Va., Camp Eugene, N. C, and Camp Pendleton, Ore., and fully supplied with American equipment, the marines are considered among the finest troops in the Netherlands armed forces. Most of them were recruited in southern Holland. The Dutch are known to have 6,000 more marines mostly Holland trained, awaiting shipment to the Indies. British authorities announced the arrest of 91 persons in a search of Batavia. Those taken into custody included seven whom the British described as "well known Indonesian terrorist leaders."

Troops of the 23rd Indian division succeeded in gaining control of all public services in Batavia yesterday without a shot being fired, the British said. The Indonesian government, the British added had been notified in advance that the utilities were being taken over.

SHIPMENT OF RUBBER TO U. S. MEETS DELAY

SAIGON, Indochina, Dec. 30.—(AP) Lack of labor and lighterage is delaying the shipment of 113,000 tons of rubber to the United States but the first cargo from Indochina left for America last week.

The Isthmian ship Red Rover which left with the first cargo lay here for six weeks before completing the loading of its 8,000 tons, but shipping officials say gradual improvement of labor and lighterage conditions may permit realization soon of the goal of 16,000 tons that has been set for monthly shipments to the United States. The American Liberty ship Mary A. Livermore, the second U. S.—bound cargo ship, is here ready to be loaded with 8,000 tons.

Of the total of 170,000 tons of rubber available here, the United States has been allotted two-thirds and France the remainder.

PLAYED NO PART IN 'BIG 3' DECISION, SAYS MACARTHUR

Commander Filed Objections Two Months Ago to Plan Adopted for Japan.

WILL CARRY OUT TASKS

U. S. General Says He Was Not Kept Informed During Moscow Talks.

TOKYO, Dec. 30 — (AP) General MacArthur announced tonight that he objected two months in advance to the Japanese control arrangement just made at Moscow by the Big Three and was not consulted during the conference, but nevertheless intended to "try to make it work."

MacArthur issued a special, pointed denial of the assertion in Washington by Thomas Blake, press officer of the Far Eastern commission, that the supreme commander in Japan had not objected beforehand to the control plan and was "kept fully informed" throughout the Moscow conference at which it was adopted.

This was wrong on both counts, MacArthur said in a 150-word statement.

Blake Declines Comment

(Informed of the MacArthur statement, Blake in Washington declined to comment.)

The new program calls for a four-power council of the United States, Russia, Britain and China to advise MacArthur and review his actions, along with an 11-nation commission to fix policies concerning Japan.

MacArthur was made the American member and chairman of the four-power council.

While one Washington official concerned with policy-making for Japan said at the time of the agreement, "MacArthur hasn't been touched," the Big Three foreign ministers' communique of Dec. 27 did not make this entirely clear, and speculation had arisen in the United States as to whether the new system curtailed MacArthur's powers.

Blake's assertion that MacArthur was consulted and did not object and that his clear-cut right to issue and enforce orders would not be impaired, was made against this background.

MacArthur's Statement

Disagreeing flatly, MacArthur issued the following declaration:

"The statement attributed to the Far Eastern commission officer that I 'did not object to the new Japan control plan before it was approved at Moscow' is incorrect. On Oct. 31 my final disagreement was contained in my radio to the chief of staff for the Secretary of State, advising that the terms 'in my opinion are not acceptable.' Since that time my views have not been sought. Any impression which the statement might imply that I was consulted during the Moscow conference is also incorrect. I have no iota of responsibility for the decisions which were made there.

"I might add that whatever the merits or demerits of the plan, it is my firm intent within the authority entrusted to me to try to make it work. The issues involved are too vital for the future of the world to have them bog down. With good will on the part of those concerned, it is my fervent hope that there will be no insuperable obstacles. As I said before, it is 'my full purpose to see it through.'"

Dislikes Veto Powers

MacArthur's statement made no reference to any specific provisions which he had found objectionable, but it was believed here that his disagreement was primarily with the veto power given to nations sharing in the control of Japan.

The arrangement provides that if any member of the council disagrees on fundamental changes in the control structure, the Japanese constitution or the Japanese government, MacArthur must withhold orders on such matters pending agreement within the Far Eastern commission.

Two hours after MacArthur's statement, a spokesman at his headquarters reiterated:

"General MacArthur never received any information or communication whatsoever from the Moscow conference during the meeting and did not even know Japan was being discussed until he saw it announced in the daily press."

Until learning of the Blake statement, MacArthur's headquarters had maintained a resolute silence concerning the new organization for control of this conquered country.

MacArthur's reference today to his purpose "to see it through," was in connection with a statement he issued on Dec. 21. At that time, in denying a Tokyo broadcast which suggested that he had conferred and disagreed with Russian authorities on occupation forces and policies, MacArthur said:

"I am here to serve and not to hinder or obstruct American government. It is my full purpose to see the thing through. The question of Russian participation in the occupation is a matter for other decision than my own."

MACARTHUR GIVES GREETING TO JAPAN

TOKYO, Tuesday, Jan. 1.—(AP) General MacArthur in a New Year's greeting to the people of Japan today asserted "it is necessary for the masses to awaken to the fact that they now have the power to govern, and what is done must be done by themselves."

Text of his greeting:

"To the people of Japan:

"A new year has come. With it a new day dawns for Japan. No longer is the future to be settled by a few. The shackles of militarism, of feudalism, of regimentation, of body and soul have been removed. Thought control and the abuse of education are no more. All now enjoy religious freedom and the right of speech without undue restraint. Free assemblage guaranteed.

"The removal of this national enslavement means freedom for the people, but at the same time it imposes upon them the individual duty to think and to act each on his own initiative. It is necessary for the masses of Japan to awaken to the fact that they now have the power to govern and what is done must be done by themselves.

"It is my hope that the new year may be the beginning for them of 'the way and the truth and the light.'"

Japan Information Board Shut

TOKYO, Dec. 30 (AP).—The Japanese Board of Information, which trumpeted the Pan-Asiatic policy and stirred up militaristic fervor during the war, will wind up its five-year existence tomorrow.

JAPS FLY FLAG

TOKYO, Monday, Dec. 31.—(AP) The Japanese, by permission of General MacArthur, will be allowed to fly the Rising Sun flag from dawn New Year's day, the Japanese reported today. They also will be permitted to fly their flag Jan. 3 and 5.

Reports Jap Laughed At Beating Of Yank

HENRY Y

Yokohama, Monday, Dec. 31 (AP). A charge that the Japanese commander of Kamioka prison camp stood laughing while an American private mercilessly was beaten until he lost his sanity was made at the Japanese officer's war crimes trial today.

That testimony against Lieut. Ohotaro Furushima was given in an affidavit by Gerard Herman Theunissen, of Java, a Dutch officer. He said he witnessed the brutal beating of Pfc. Robert L. Robinson.

Reports Osmena Will Quit Denied

Manila, Dec. 30 (AP)—Jose S. Reyes, secretary to Philippine President Sergio Osmena, today denied a Manila Post article saying Osmena had withdrawn from the presidential race to succeed himself.

"The President has not withdrawn. He is leaving the question of his candidacy to the convention of the Nacionalista party," Reyes said.

Other Manila newspapers today speculated Brig. Gen. Carlos P. Romulo, Philippine Commissioner to the United States, might be drafted for Vice President.

"Can Best Serve in Washington"

Chicago, Dec. 30 (AP)—Brig. Gen. Carlos P. Romulo, commenting on Manila newspaper speculation that he might be drafted for vice president of the Philippine Commonwealth, said today, "I can best serve my country in Washington."

He declined to state whether he would accept the office if drafted.

"I have no political ambitions," Romulo said, adding:

"My work in Washington will be more effective if it is known here in America that the whole Philippine people are behind me, irrespective of partisan politics."

Tamborini To Oppose Peron In Argentine Vote

Buenos Aires, Dec. 30 (AP)—The Democratic Union today selected Jose P. Tamborini, Radical party leader, to oppose Col. Juan Perón in the coming presidential elections in February.

The Conservative party is expected to place a third candidate in the contest. While the Conservative party is against the candidacy of Perón it is not a member of the Democratic Union formed by the Radicals, Socialists, Communists and Progressive Democrats to fight Perón.

Enrique Mosca was selected to run with Tamborini as the Union's vice presidential nominee.

Tamborini, former senator and former Minister of the Interior, will be 60 on February 22—two days before the scheduled election.

The Democratic Union's platform calls for improved foreign relations for Argentina and a democratic domestic policy.

MINECRAFT SUNK NORTH OF KYUSHU

Navy Reports Moderate Casualties As Mine Blasts U. S. Vessel.

PEARL HARBOR, Dec. 30—(AP) The U.S.S. Minivet, a large minesweeper, struck a mine yesterday northwest of Kyushu island, Japan, with "moderate loss of life and injury" to the men aboard, the Navy announced today.

The accident occurred southeast of the island of Taushima, in Tsushima strait, 48 nautical miles northwest of Kyushu.

No exact tabulation of the dead and injured is yet possible, the Navy said. Names of the casualties would be announced by the Navy department after the next of kin are notified.

The 220-foot vessel was commissioned last July and carried a crew of approximately nine officers and 82 enlisted men. It was a unit of Task Force 52, and was supervising the sweep by Japanese vessels of a shallow minefield when it was ripped by the blast.

Aircraft and surface ships immediately began searching for missing crewmen.

The Minivet was the first American minesweeper sunk by mines since the war ended although the Japanese had sowed their home waters with thousands of mines when they feared invasion.

More than 20,000 mines have been swept since V-J day and an area of 84,000 square miles has been cleared of both Japanese and American mines. The Minivet has been engaged in minesweeping the past two months.

"The hazardous task of clearing mine fields is a risk that must be taken to insure the safe flow of supplies to occupation forces by sea and to free the Pacific shipping lanes from the menace of floating mines in peace time years to come," the Navy said.

"Although every available Japanese minesweeping craft has been put to work on this task, it still is necessary for U. S. minesweepers to perform the major portion of the job since they alone have adequate equipment and effective techniques. Where groups of Japanese sweepers are employed, U. S. naval vessels must accompany them to serve in a supervisory capacity."

'Quinea Pigs' Hunt Jap Mines

Washington, Dec. 30 (AP)—Especially equipped naval vessels, manned by volunteers, are cruising Japanese bays and channels deliberately seeking any "live" pressure mines hidden beneath the water, the Navy said tonight.

The ships have been fitted with remote controls so that engines and boilers can be operated from the main deck and flying bridge. Thus no crew members need remain below in compartments which would become steam-filled death traps in the event of a mine explosion.

Played Havoc With Jap Shipping

To cushion the shock of possible explosions, crew members stand on mattresses or raised wooden gratings, and wear tank helmets for head protection. Overheads also are padded with mattresses.

During the war, Japanese inland waters were sown with new type pressure mines which played havoc with Japanese shipping because of the difficulty of sweeping them. The mine is detonated by a change in pressure of the water surrounding it, which ordinarily is caused only by passage of a large ship over the mine.

Anticipating the invasion of Japan, the mines were set to neutralize themselves after a specific interval, but the only way to make certain that none remain dangerous is to run large ships over them.

No Explosions Under Them Yet

The "guinea pig" squadron, as the outfit is called, is doing that job, using battered ships unfit for any other service. So far, no mines have exploded under them.

The ships make their runs with skeleton crews of about 22 men each. They are the U.S.S. Marathon, a former troop transport, the Pratt Victory and the Joseph Holt, freighters taken over from the War Shipping Administration.

U. S. STILL RETAINS LEADING PLACE IN TOKYO OCCUPATION

New Controls Safeguard Commander's Administration, Says Secretary.

NO AGREEMENT ON IRAN

Atomic Energy Discussions Limited to Technical, Scientific Phases.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30. — (AP) Secretary of State Byrnes assured the nation tonight that the new policy and control machinery for beaten Japan "safeguards the efficient administration" of Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

Byrnes also disclosed, in a radio report on the Moscow conference, that the Big Three foreign ministers had not discussed "technical or scientific matters" in connection with atomic energy control and that Soviet officials had asked no questions about the atomic bomb.

Iran Problem Discussed

Amplifying remarks of British Foreign Secretary Bevin on Iran, Byrnes said the troubled affairs of that country were on the Moscow agenda and that at one stage, agreement seemed imminent for establishment of a three-power commission to study Iranian problems.

He was "not discouraged" by the failure to agree on Iran, Byrnes said. He added that it was the only important item on the agenda on which accord was not reached.

Obviously aware of widespread speculation on whether the new setup for Japan would circumscribe the policy-making powers of the U. S. and the administrative authority of MacArthur, Byrnes devoted much of his 3,500-word address to discussing the new 11-nation Far Eastern commission, to be set up in Washington, and the four-power Tokyo council.

The secretary had nothing to say about any consultation with MacArthur.

MacArthur earlier had denied a Washington statement of Thomas D. Blake, press officer for the Far Eastern commission, who said the general had not objected to the control plan before its adoption and had been informed on Moscow deliberations over the issue.

Text of Byrnes' Address Will Be Found on Page Four

U. S. in Top Role

Byrnes stressed again and again that the decisions to set up the commission and council left the U. S. in a top policy-making role for Japan and would not hamstring the administrative power of MacArthur.

The secretary said that "from the outset" the U. S. had planned to make control of Japan "an Allied responsibility."

Establishment of the 11-nation commission in Washington, with the veto power reserved for the U. S., Russia, Britain and China, assured that no basic Allied policy for Japan could be adopted without American concurrence, he said.

He cited the provision for the U. S. to issue interim directives to MacArthur "on all urgent matters," pending commission agreement, and said only these three subjects were excepted from this temporary power:

1. Changes in the control of Japan as set forth in the surrender terms.
2. Fundamental changes in the Japanese constitutional structure.
3. Changes in the Japanese government as a whole.

Byrnes pointed out that under the Moscow communique, MacArthur's administrative decisions in Tokyo—despite the presence of the four-power advisory council—also would be controlling on all but these three subjects, when commission approval would be necessary.

Cooperation is Aim

"The proposals we offered regarding Japan make it clear that we intend to cooperate with our Allies and we expect them to cooperate with us," Byrnes declared. "But at the same time our agreement safeguards the efficient administration which has been set up in Japan under the supreme Allied commander.

"It assures that the authority of Gen. MacArthur will not be obstructed by the inability of the Far Eastern commission to agree on policies or by the inability of the Allied council to agree upon the methods of carrying them cut.

DEC 31 1945

"We were determined to assure that the oustanding and efficient administration set up and executed by Gen. MacArthur should not be obstructed."

Atomic Energy Last on List

Byrnes disclosed that the subject of atomic energy control had been placed last on the Moscow agenda "at the request of the Soviet government."

These discussions, he said, were limited to the British-American proposal for establishment by the United Nations of a commission on atomic energy and related matters on the lines suggested by President Truman and Prime Ministers Attlee of Britain and Mackenzie King of Canada.

"At no time did we discuss any technical or scientific matters, nor were we asked by the Soviet government about the new weapon," he declared.

"I was happy to find that the Soviet government feels as we do that this particular weapon is of such a revolutionary nature that we should explore through a United Nations commission methods of international control."

The secretary obviously was aware that Moscow decisions on atomic energy had raised questions among congressmen and senators as to whether the U. S. might be asked to turn over any "know how" to the projected commission before safeguards were established.

In that connection, he made these points:

1. Commission powers will consist of making inquiries and recommendations but no government will be bound to act on those suggestions.

2. The matter of safeguards will apply to commission recommendations "in relation to every phase of the subject and at every stage," and lies "at the root of the whole matter."

3. Neither the U. S. nor any other Nation would be expected to share its armament secrets until it was certain that "effective safeguards had been developed to insure our mutual protection."

Russia Offered Amendments

Russia offered "only a few amendments" to the British-American proposal, and these were accepted "with some reservations," Byrnes said.

He added that the amendments went "no further than appropriate" to enable the United States Security council—under which the atomic commission will be set up—to exercise "its primary responsibility for the maintenance of peace and security."

The secretary reiterated a statement he made before leaving Moscow by asserting that the conference communique covered all subjects on which agreement was reached "apart from instructions to the representatives of the three governments to facilitate agreements in the field."

In reviewing the other conference agreements, Byrnes made these points:

1. The agreement under which a 21-nation peace conference will be called not later than May 1, 1946, meets U. S. insistence that "all states which took an active part in the war should participate in the peace."

2. He was not entirely satisfied with the agreements under which Rumania and Bulgaria will broaden their governments to gain U. S. and British recognition, but hopes they will substantially improve "the democratic character" of those regimes.

3. The arrangement to establish a Korean provisional government under a Russian-American commission reflects Allied determination to "hasten the day when Korea will become an independent member of the society of nations."

4. Russia and Britain expressed "substantial accord" with President Truman's recent policy directive to Gen. George C. Marshall on the necessity for a unified, peaceful, democratic China.

Byrnes expressed the belief that the Moscow decisions - "should bring hope to the war-weary people of many lands."

He said he had suggested the conference, fully aware of the risk of another impasse like the one which ended the London meeting of big five foreign ministers in September.

"I felt this risk had to be taken," he said. "It is just when there are genuine difficulties in reaching agreement that foreign secretaries should meet in an effort to understand each other's problems and troubles."

Text of Byrnes' Report on Decisions of Moscow Conference

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30—(AP) The text of the radio address tonight by Secretary of State Byrnes, as released by the State department, follows:

The purpose of my talk tonight is to render a report on the recent meeting of the foreign secretaries of Great Britain, the United States and the Soviet Union at Moscow.

With President Truman's approval and encouragement I had urged the calling of this meeting in fulfillment of the understanding reached at Yalta that the three foreign secretaries should meet every three or four months.

I was well aware of the risk involved in suggesting this meeting without any definite assurance that the three governments would be able to reach agreements on the points under discussion. I knew the risk of another impasse such as occurred in London. I felt this risk had to be taken.

It is just when there are genuine difficulties in reaching agreement that foreign secretaries should meet in an effort to understand each other's problems and troubles.

Modern World Requires Swift Action

In this modern world where events move with lightning speed there is not time to wait for agreement to be reached by the slow exchange of diplomatic communications.

We must realize that discussion and personal contact in international affairs are useful and helpful even though they do not at once lead to agreement. They contribute to a meeting of the minds and the reconciliation of differences.

In September the Council of Foreign Ministers at London had been unable to agree upon the procedure to be followed in drawing up the European peace treaties. The Soviet Union took the position that the treaties should be made only by the principal powers who had signed the respective armistices. The other delegations took the view that all states which took an active part in the war should be allowed to participate in the peace.

While we could not agree at London, and many referred to the London conference as a complete failure, it was, I think, the discussions at London that helped us greatly to reach agreement on peace machinery at Moscow.

The agreement at Moscow meets our insistence that all states which took an active part in the war should participate in the peace. It also frankly recognizes the responsible role of the larger powers in the making of peace.

Principal Powers Will Draft Treaties

Our agreement is that the terms of peace in the first instance should be drawn by the principal powers which were signers of the respective armistices. But it was decided that as soon as these terms were drawn up, they should be submitted to a peace conference called by the five states—the United States, the Soviet Union, Great Britain, France and China, who constitute the Council of Foreign Ministers, and are the permament members of the Security Council of the United Nations. All states which actively waged war with substantial military force against the European members of the Axis will be invited to participate in the conference.

The peace conference is to be called not later than May 1.

The conference will consider the draft treaties prepared by the states that signed the respective armistices. The peace conference will then draw up its own recommendations. After that, the states which prepared the preliminary texts will consider the recommendations of the peace conference and prepare the final texts of the treaties to be signed by all states actively at war with the enemy states in question.

I do not consider this solution ideal. But the departure from the ideal standard is more in the form than the substance. What is preserved is that the proposals of the larger powers are subjected to the judgment and public criticism of all the nations which took an active part in the war. The procedure contemplates and requires that these nations formally and publicly make their recommendations. The larger powers are not bound by these recommendations, but they must agree in order to draw up the final treaties. Certainly the United States would not agree to a final treaty which arbitrarily rejected such recommendations. Certainly the great powers which drew up the draft charter for the United Nations at Dumbarton Oaks did not ignore the changes suggested by the smaller powers at San Francisco.

The test of a successful peace is not in the form of its making, but whether it both commends itself to the nations concerned by its justice and wisdom and also commands the support of those nations whose unity is essential to preserve the peace. The method agreed upon at Moscow gives ample scope for the achievement of these essential results.

Discussed Recognition Of Axis Satellites

The question of the recognition of the ex-satellite states was discussed. Since the London conference, we have found it possible to recognize Austria and Hungary where free elections have occurred. There is still a wide divergence in our viewpoints on the governments of Romania and Bulgaria. That divergence is accentuated by the fact that in those countries democratic institutions have not functioned in accordance with traditions familiar to us.

The Soviet Union contends that the governments of those countries are satisfactory and conditions do not warrant concerted action under the Yalta agreement. And concerted action is possible only by common agreement.

Our objections to the Romanian and Bulgarian governments have been not only to the exclusion of important democratic groups from those governments, but to the oppressive way in which those governments exercise their powers. Until now our objections have been little heeded by those governments or by the Soviet government.

It must be recognized that the Soviet government has a very real interest in the character of the governments of these states. These countries are neighbors of the Soviet Union and were involved in the war against the Soviet union. It is therefore to be expected that the withdrawal of Soviet troops from these countries may depend upon the Soviet government's confidence in the peaceful character of these governments.

I urged upon Generalissimo Stalin and Foreign Minister Molotov that it was in their interest as well as ours, that the peoples of these countries, as well as their governments, should be peacefully disposed towards the Soviet Union. I stressed that it was our desire to work with the Soviet government and not against it in making these governments more representative. And for the first time since Yalta the Soviet government has agreed to cooperate with us to this end.

Tripartite Commission Will Advise King

A tripartite commission is to proceed immediately to Romania to advise the King, who has sought the advice of the three Allied governments, on broadening representation in the Romanian government. At London we asked this but were unable to secure agreement.

The British and American governments have agreed that they will recognize the Romanian government as soon as they are satisfied that the government has been broadened to include two truly representative members of two important political parties not now represented in the government and assurances have been given regarding free elections, freedom of speech, press, religion, and association. These are the terms under which we will recognize this government. It is for us to say whether the terms have been complied with.

The situation in Bulgaria is complicated by the fact that an election has already occurred there which the Soviet government regards as a free election and we do not. Nevertheless, the Soviet government has undertaken to advise the new Bulgarian government to include in the government two members truly representative of important political parties not now included. The British government and the American government have stated that as soon as they are satisfied that this has been done they will recognize the new Bulgarian government.

The agreements regarding Romania and Bulgaria do not go as far as I should have liked, but I am hopeful that they will result in a substantial improvement in the democratic character of these governments.

In the Far East, it has been our policy to work for the creation of conditions that make for lasting peace. Cooperation with our Allies is an essential part of that policy.

While the United States sustained the major burden in crushing the military power of Japan, we have always considered the war against Japan a part of the war against the Axis. From the outset we have planned to make the control of Japan an Allied responsibility.

As early as August 20 we invited the Soviet Union, Great Britain, and China to join with us in carrying out the objectives of the Potsdam declaration and the terms of surrender for Japan. The Far Eastern Advisory commission was established in October but Great Britain had reservations regarding its advisory character and the Soviet Union requested a decision regarding control machinery in Tokyo before joining the work of the commission.

China Concurs On Far East Policy

At Moscow the three governments, with the concurrence of China, agreed on a Far Eastern commission. It will consist of representatives of the Soviet Union, Great Britain, China, the United States, France, Netherlands, Australia, New Zealand, Canada, India and the Philippines.

This Far Eastern commission will have the authority to formulate principles to govern the control of Japan. It will act by a majority vote which, however, must include the concurring votes of Great Britain, the Soviet Union, China and the United States. The decisions of the commission will be incorporated into directives to the Supreme Commander by the United States government.

Under the agreement establishing the commission no basic Allied policy for Japan may be adopted without our concurrence.

Pending agreement in the Far Eastern commission in case of need we are free to give interim directives on all urgent matters. Only three questions are excepted from our authority to give interim directives. The questions reserved for action by the commission—which action requires our concurrence—are questions dealing with changes in the control of Japan as set forth in the surrender terms or with fundamental changes in the Japanese constitutional structure or with changes in the Japanese government as a whole.

These are questions which by their nature require agreement among the principal Allies if there is to be a common Allied policy. To reserve them for decision by the commission does not affect the administration of Allied control by the supreme commander.

It has not been our policy to dictate changes in the Japanese government as a whole, and in so far as it is necessary to make individual changes in the cabinet or to fill vacancies created by the resignation of individual members the authority of the supreme commander to act remains unimpaired.

Allied Council Established for Japan

The three governments also agreed, with the concurrence of China, on the establishment of an Allied council for Japan to be composed of representatives of the Soviet Union, the British commonwealth, China and the United States under the chairmanship of General MacArthur as the supreme Allied commander. The council is to advise and consult with the supreme commander in carrying out the terms of surrender. His decision will be controlling on all but the three reserved questions I have just mentioned.

If any disagreement arises in the council regarding the implementation of a policy decision of the Far Eastern commission upon any of these three points, the supreme commander will withhold action pending a clarification of its decision by the Far Eastern commission. But when necessary, as I have already explained, the supreme commander, after appropriate consultation with the council, may change individual ministers or fill vacancies.

The proposals we offered regarding Japan make it clear that we intend to cooperate with our Allies and we expect them to cooperate with us. But at the same time our agreement safeguards the efficient administration which has been set up in Japan under the supreme Allied commander.

It assures that the authority of General MacArthur will not be obstructed by the inability of the Far Eastern commission to agree on policies or by the inability of the Allied council to agree upon the methods of carrying them out.

We were determined to assure that the outstanding and efficient administration set up and executed by General MacArthur should not be obstructed.

The administration of Korea has been a trying problem since the surrender of Japan. For purposes of military operations the occupation of Korea was divided north and south of Latitude 38 into Soviet of American areas. The continuation of this division after surrender has been unsatisfactory. The movement of persons and goods and the functioning of public services on a nationwide scale has been hampered.

Joint Commission Will Aid Korea

Under our agreement at Moscow, the two military commands are to form a joint Soviet-American commission to solve immediate economic and administrative problems. They will make recommendations to the governments of the United States, the Soviet Union, Great Britain and China for the formation of a Korean provisional democratic government. They will also make proposals to these governments regarding a four-power trusteeship to prepare Korea for its independence within five years.

The joint Soviet-American commission, working with the Korean provisional democratic government may find it possible to dispense with a trusteeship. It is our goal to hasten the day when Korea will become an independent member of the society of nations.

In the various agreements and understandings reached in Moscow the interests of China were taken into full account. China is to participate in the council of foreign ministers, the Far Eastern commission, in the four-power Allied council in Tokyo, in the formation of a Korean provisional national government, and in any trusteeship for Korea.

But China divided by civil strife will not be able to take its rightful place among its Allies and discharge properly its international responsibilities.

Our policy toward China as recently announced by President Truman was discussed at Moscow. We found our Allies in substantial accord with that policy. The three governments agreed that the cessation of civil strife and broad participation throughout the national government of democratic elements are necessary to assure a unified, peaceful, and democratic China under the national government. The three governments reaffirmed adherence to the policy of non-interference in the internal affairs of China.

Mr. Molotov and I discussed the problem of Soviet and American armed forces in China. The Soviet Union, pursuant to their agreement with the national government of China, plans to remove its forces from Manchuria by February 1st. We will move our Marines from north China when Japanese troops are disarmed and deported from China or when China is able to complete the task unassisted by us.

The understanding of the three powers as to policy toward China should assist General Marshall in the mission he has undertaken.

Britain, U. S. Had Proposal on Atom

The British and ourselves came to Moscow with a very definite proposal for the establishment by the United Nations of a commission on atomic energy and related matters based on the Washington declaration of the President of the United States and the prime ministers of Great Britain and Canada on that subject. At the request of the Soviet government the discussion of our proposal was placed at the end of our agenda. Our discussions were limited to this proposal. At no time did we discuss any technical or scientific matters, nor were we asked by the Soviet government about the new weapon. I was happy to find that the Soviet government feels as we do that this particular weapon is of such a revolutionary nature that we should explore through a United Nations commission methods of international control.

It should be understood that the task of the commission is to inquire into the problems raised by the discovery of atomic energy and related matters and to make recommendations. Neither the Security council nor the commission has authority to bind any government to act on its recommendations.

The four objectives set forth in the proposed resolution establishing the commission are not intended to indicate the order in which they are to be considered. In particular, it was intended and is understood that the matter of safeguards will apply to the recommendations of the commission in relation to every phase of the subject and at every stage. Indeed, at the root of the whole matter lies the problem of providing the necessary safeguards.

Neither we nor any other nation would be expected to share our armament secrets until it was certain that effective safeguards had been developed to insure our mutual protection.

The Soviet government offered only a few amendments to the proposal submitted by us. These amendments were designed to clarify the relations of the commission to the Security council. With some revisions we accepted them.

Carefully examined, these amendments will be found to go no further than appropriate to enable the Security council to exercise its primary responsibility for the maintenance of peace and security.

The Security council can give directions to the commission, and restrain publication of reports detrimental to peace and security, but such action can be taken only with the concurrence of all its permanent members. Failure of the Security council to act cannot block the work of the commission.

The three governments have invited France, China, and Canada to join with us in submitting the proposed resolution to the Assembly of the United Nations.

Failed to Agree On Iranian Problem

The foreign ministers reached understanding on all important items placed on our agenda with the exception of Iran. At one time it looked as if we might agree on a tripartite commission to consider Iranian problems which have been accentuated by the presence of Allied troops in Iran. Unfortunately, we could not agree. I do not wish to minimize the seriousness of the problem. But I am not discouraged. I hope that the exchange of views may lead to further consideration of the grave issues involved and out of such consideration a solution may be found.

There was no subject as to which an agreement was reached that was not covered in the communique published Friday, apart from instructions to the representatives of the three governments to facilitate agreements in the field.

The agreements reached should bring hope to the war-weary people of many lands. They will facilitate the signing of peace treaties which is necessary to permit the withdrawal of troops from occupied territories. Only by the withdrawal of armies of occupation can the people have an opportunity to start on the long road to economic recovery. Only by economic recovery of other countries can we in America hope for the full employment of our labor and our capital in this interdependent world.

We must realize that international conferences are not intended to give individual statesmen the opportunity to achieve diplomatic successes. They are intended to be useful in the adjustment of delicate social and human relations between states with many common interests and many divergent interests.

In international affairs, as in national affairs, conflicting interests can be reconciled only by frank discussion and better understanding. The meeting in Moscow did serve to bring about better understanding. We must not slacken in our efforts. With patience, good will and tolerance we must strive to build and maintain a just and enduring peace.

'Why Should U.S. Yield To Russia?'

Washington, Dec. 30 (AP)—Senator Wherry (R., Neb.), commenting on General MacArthur's assertion that he had objected in advance to the Japanese control agreement just reached at Moscow, tonight told reporters he did not see "why we should give in and permit Russia to set up a veto power in Japan."

"Such a course is going to stymie General MacArthur," Wherry, the Republican whip, said. "MacArthur has done a wonderful job in Japan and I think he knows how to handle the country."

Other senators and representatives who were asked for comment said they wanted to examine MacArthur's statement before discussing it.

PROBERS TO HEAR ADMIRAL STARK

Chief of Navy Operations on Dec. 7 Will Be Witness As Hearing Reopens.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30—(AP) Admiral Harold R. Stark gets a chance to tell his story of Pearl Harbor in public tomorrow as the congressional investigating committee resumes its hearings.

Stark, chief of naval operations at the time of the attack, was criticized by Secretary of the Navy Forrestal on the basis of naval inquiries. Forrestal held that Stark and Admiral Husband E. Kimmel "failed to demonstrate the superior judgment necessary for exercising command commensurate with their rank and their assigned duties."

Kimmel, naval commander in the Pacific when the Japanese struck December 7, 1941, may follow Stark to the stand later.

Rep. Gearhart (R-Calif) said, however, that he wants to hear three important Army and Navy witnesses before the committee calls Kimmel and Lt. Gen. Walter C. Short, who was the Army commander at Pearl Harbor.

Gearhart told a reporter he believes the story should be "rounded out" in more detail before these main witnesses tell what they know of the events that led up to the naval disaster.

"We have been hop-skipping around between the State department, the War department and the Navy department without finishing any of them," the Californian declared.

He said he wants the next witnesses after Stark to be Col. R. S. Bratton, formerly chief of the Far Eastern division of Army intelligence; and Capt. L. F. Safford and Capt. A. D. Kramer, formerly of the Navy's communications division.

The committee may get from Safford and Kramer their versions of a purported Dec. 7, 1941 prediction to the late Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox that an intercepted Tokyo message meant "a sunrise attack on Pearl Harbor today and possibly a midnight attack on Manila."

The message was that in which Tokyo instructed its ambassadors here to deliver a diplomatic reply at 1 p.m. Washington time, on Dec. 7.

The committee may recess after hearing Stark, for lack of counsel. William D. Mitchell and his staff are withdrawing and to date there has been no selection of new lawyers.

Bratton is expected to be examined about the delivery of various intercepted Japanese messages to high officials in Washington. He was commended in the army board report as one of the officers who urged that additional warnings be sent to the Pearl Harbor commanders.

Points Expected From Stark

Among points committee members are expected to develop from Stark are:

1. On what did Stark base a feeling, expressed in a letter to Kimmel October 17, 1941, that "personally I do not believe the Japs are going to sail into us."

2. What comment has Stark on testimony of Gen. George C. Marshall that Stark felt at first on the morning of December 7 that additional messages to the Hawaiian commanders would "only confuse them."

PROFIT REALIZED ON FEDERAL SALE OF SURPLUS FOOD

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30—(AP) Surplus food sold thus far has brought the government a profit of $1,379,000 as a result of the recent boost in the price of butter.

The surplus Property administration reported this today in announcing that of $13,000,000,000 of all kinds of goods declared surplus through this year in the United States, less than half of one per cent was in food and agricultural products.

SPA said that of $60,000,000 of food thus far designated surplus, the Agriculture department has disposed of $17,450,000 of it for a return of $18,829,000 by November 30.

"The profitable return," SPA explained, "was due to the OPA increase in butter prices which increased the return on government-owned surplus butter."

Prices Lifted Nov. 1

Butter price ceilings were increased five to six cents a pound November 1 to compensate processors for elimination of a government subsidy.

The Agriculture department, SPA reported, expects no difficulty in disposing of the balance of the $60,000,000 of food "as promptly as it can be graded and inspected."

SPA said the largest single item of food on hand currently is $22,731,982 of frozen eggs of the type used by bakers.

Other surplus food stocks located in the country include $2,638,821 of canned pineapple, $1,721,406 of pineapple juice, $1,122,496 (without domestic tax) of cigarettes, $4,500,000 of peanuts, and about $1,000,000 of candy bars and other packaged items.

Of the total food surplus, SPA said War department declarations have amounted to about $53,000,000, the Navy's about $3,000,000, and the War Shipping administration's $3,541,000.

Surplus food stocks overseas, owned principally by the War department, "have been kept small by the Army policy of shifting food from inactive theaters to localities where it is needed," SPA said.

The agency added that only nominal amounts of food are expected to be declared surplus in the future.

All food declared surplus in foreign countries has been used for relief and rehabilitation, SPA reported. It said that "very limited amounts" which have been available in Europe have been sold to UNRRA and other relief agencies.

Two shiploads of 10,000 tons of wheat and wheat flour which were in transit to the Pacific before V-E day were sold to UNRRA for China relief, while some $12,500,000 of surplus Army field rations recently were sold for distribution in the Philippines.

WLB TO PROPOSE INCREASE IN PAY BY WESTERN UNION

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30—(AP) The War Labor board has decided to recommend a wage increase averging 12 cents an hour for 50,000 Western Union employes due to strike on Jan. 7, it was learned authoritatively today.

W. L. Allen, president of A.F.L. Commercial Telegraphers union, representing about 40,000 of the workers, said his group wanted to read the board's decision before commenting on whether the strike will be carried through or abandoned.

Allen said the reported decision was "very encouraging," however.

The decision, together with an opinion by Edwin E. Witte, public member, is expected to come down tomorrow, the board's last day before going out of existence.

The company and the union had agreed by stipulation to be bound by the board's recommendation. The union had appealed from a directive of Oct. 17 which granted the A.F.L. workers a four-cent hourly increase. The board agreed to reconsider after the A.F.L. protested that the WLB had failed to live up to its responsibilities" in the case.

The A.F.L. unions—four Federal labor unions are involved with the CTU—would benefit from the proposed recommendations, including the establishment of a 55-cent hourly minimum for messengers and others receiving as low as 40 cents.

In a companion decision affecting 7,000 members of the C.I.O.-American Communications association in the metropolitan New York area, the board revised its New York regional board's previous directive according to C.I.O. sources close to the WLB.

The regional board's order, allowing a minimum 10 cents hourly increase and setting up two schedules of adjustment by which additional wage boosts could be granted, was appealed by the company.

The national board, according to C.I.O. sources, decided to amend that order to knock out the 10-cent hourly increase and other increases permitted under schedule of the regional order.

However, Schedule A, which would be retained, would allow increases averaging more than 12 cents an hour, a C.I.O. representative said.

In New York, Ralph H. Kimball, vice president in charge of industrial relations for the Western Union, declined to comment "until I have received and read the opinion."

Joseph P. Selly, ACA international president, also speaking in New York, said if the NWLB decision was in conformity with his expectations, he did not believe the 7,000 Western Union employés in New York "will take it."

"Draw Own Conclusions"

Asked if his statement meant a strike would be called, Selly said "you can draw your own conclusions. We can's disclose our strategy now."

"We have to wait for the board's decision," he added, "but if the decision is as we learned it, I do not believe the New York workers will take it.

"We are not going to let them steal our rights from us. We will do everything and anything necessary to protect those rights."

The union voted to strike November 29, after the company appealed the regional board's decision. The union later told workers to be prepared to walk out on "15 minutes' notice."

RUBBER INDUSTRY TO HIT NEW PEAK, LEADERS PREDICT

AKRON, O., Dec. 30 — (AP) The rubber industry will hit an all-time high in production during 1946, but tires will be scarce all year, top officials of four big producers predicted today.

"Manufacture of passenger and truck tires, barring unforeseen difficulties, will reach an all-time high," declared John W. Thomas, chairman of the board of Firestone Tire & Rubber Co.

Thomas believes the industry, its reconversion completed, should be in line to hit peak production by mid-March.

"Goal of the industry in a full year of peak production is 94,000,000 tires, which is 24,000,000 units above what the industry would figure as normal demand, had it not been for the replacement backlog," the Firestone executive added.

Tires will be scarce all year, said William O'Neil, president of General Tire & Rubber Co.

His statement was echoed by James J. Newman, B. F. Goodrich Co. vice president, who predicted four out of every 10 passenger auto wheels would be rolling on recapped tires in 1946.

"Premium tires will reappear," O'Neil stated, but General will not produce one until all the materials needed are available in sufficient quantity to assure a continuous flow through General's distributors. We expect to employ more persons than we ever before have had on our payrolls."

While the industry catches up with demand it will be developing postwar potentialities of new materials "to assure maximum service and lowest cost to users of all types of rubber products," said John L. Collyer, Goodrich president.

"Technical progress will not be confined to synthetic rubber," he declared.

"Although there has been discussion of spectacular postwar products stemming from the lessons learned in synthetic rubber, it is not anticipated that any of these will reach sufficient volume in 1946, mainly because equipment for manufacturing them is not available," Collyer added.

P. W. Litchfield, board chairman of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., does not view the outlook as "at all encouraging."

Litchfield has held that America was at the crossroads of labor unrest and keyed his year-end summary to a plea for domestic unity of a like pattern to that for winning the war.

GREYHOUND BUSES WILL ROLL AGAIN AS STRIKE ENDS

CLEVELAND, Dec. 30—(AP) Approximately 4,000 employes of Pennsylvania and Central Greyhound lines who have been on strike in 18 eastern states since Nov. 1, will return to work Thursday, pending preparation of a fact finding report, Howard T. Colvin, assistant director of the U. S. Conciliation service, announced tonight.

The back-to-work movement was announced by Colvin following a two-day conference between the company and officials of the A.F.L.-Amalgamated Association of Street Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes of America.

The conciliation official said local Greyhound services would be in operation within 48 hours after the men return Thursday at 5 a. m. and longer distance runs would be operating within 72 hours after work resumption.

Colvin explained that maintenance men and mechanics would have to do considerable servicing of busses, idle since the start of the strike, and that this would necessitate the delay in return to operation.

No attempt was made to settle points at issue in the dispute, Colvin said, but all discussion was centered upon obtaining agreement of the company and union officials on a return to work in accordance with a proposal by Secretary of Labor Lewis B. Schwellenbach.

The Labor Secretary had proposed that a fact-finding committee investigate the dispute after resumption of operations, with the stipulation that wage concessions be retroactive to Oct. 31 and that there be no discrimination against strikers.

Pennsylvania and Central Greyhound officials previously had declared they could not accept the retroactive provision at this time.

Leaders Hope to End Dispute With Truman Over U.S.E.S. Bill

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30 (AP)—House leaders have decided to strive for settlement of the controversy with President Truman over the U. S. Employment Service as a No. 1 item of business when Congress comes back [illegible].

This was disclosed today by chairman Cannon (D-Mo) of the appropriations committee. He told a reporter that "we want to get this issue decided immediately, so we can push ahead with other business."

House labor committee clerks reported that Majority Leader McCormack of Massachusetts has asked that hearings on the subject start the opening day and legislation be sent to the floor within a week.

The leadership reasoning, one committee aide said, is that relations between President Truman and Congress will be improved if the differences over USES can be settled speedily.

The fight is over when administration of the employment service should be returned to state control. Congress approved legislation providing such action within 100 days, but the measure was killed when Mr. Truman refused to sign it.

In announcing the "pocket veto" on Dec. 23, the President reiterated demands that Federal control be retained until June, 1947. An earlier change, he said, would "immeasurably harm our reemployment program."

Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach reported meanwhile that the employment service, in the five months since V-J day, has placed more than 500,000 veterans in jobs.

EMPLOYMENT DROP IS TAPERING OFF

DEC 31 1945

BOSTON, Dec. 30 — (AP) A. U. S. Employment Service official tonight said that the agency provided New England industry with more than 1,000,000 workers during 1945, and added that the general decline of manufacturing employment because of reconversion had reached its lowest level during October.

Arthur C. Gernes, regional director, stated there has been evidence of a general recovery of basic employment with reporting establishments indicating further expansion through the first of the year.

He asserted that the U.S.E.S. provided an average of 54,000 workers monthly during the first half of the year in meeting the demand of the expanding labor market which was suffering from a continual loss of employes to the armed forces.

In contrast, the monthly initial claims for unemployment compensation during that time was 17,000, he said.

Following V-J day with the attendant reduction and cancellations of war contracts and reconversion problems, Gernes stated, the monthly placement by the agency dropped to an average of 30,000.

Initial claims of unemployment compensation jumped to 130,000 in August and then maintained a high monthly average of 70,000, a 200 per cent increase compared with the pre V-J day monthly average.

BENEFITS INCREASE JAN. 1

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30—(AP) The higher subsistence payments provided by new legislation for veterans going to school under the GI Bill of Rights and for disabled veterans taking vocational rehabilitation courses will take effect Jan. 1, the Veterans Administration announced today. The increase will be included in checks mailed Feb. 1.

CROWD TRAMPS ON WOUNDED GI

Veteran's Leg Broken In Rush In Washington Depot

Washington, Dec. 30 (AP)— Sergant George Timko, 23, wounded combat veteran, is in a hospital here today instead of with his folks at Perryopolis, Pa., because a throng of travelers shoving through a train gate knocked him off his crutches, broke his leg and trampled him.

Timko was bound from McGuire General Hospital in Richmond for his first visit home since his return from Europe when the incident occurred at Union Station here on Friday.

His right leg had been weakened by the removal of a piece of bone which had been grafted to his left arm to mend a wound caused by shell fragments in Germany.

Felled In Rush For Gate

He was resting on his crutches near the front of the waiting crowd when the train gate was opened, he told officers at Fort Myer Hospital. In the surge he was knocked to the concrete floor.

"People passed me by for nearly three minutes," he related. "But a sailor and a couple of civilians finally picked me up and they took me to the hospital."

In addition to the fracture of his weakened leg, he suffered body bruises.

New Sugar Ration Book To Be Issued after Jan. 1

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30—(AP) A sugar ration book consisting of a single sheet will be issued to new applicants beginning January 1, the OPA announced today.

It is only for those who do not have Ration Book Four Application forms will be available at Army separation centers and at local boards.

The agency also announced that hereafter furlough sugar rations for service personnel will be issued only on the basis of seven days' leave or more. Previously these rations were granted on the basis of meals served and for as short a time as 72 hours.

Applications for replacement of sugar books that have been lost, destroyed or stolen will continue to be available at OPA boards, but from now on they must be sent to OPA district offices. Books will be mailed.

Merchant Seamen Honored

Two From New York Are Among Four Winning the D. S. M.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30 (AP).—The Maritime Commission announced today award of four Distinguished Service Medals and five Meritorious Service Medals.

They were awarded during November, as were Mariner's Medals to sixty-six injured seamen and to the next of kin of 109 men killed in the maritime service.

Among the Distinguished Service Medal winners were:

Lieutenant Commander Ralph E. Jamieson, of 631 West 152d Street, New York, who as chief engineer on the tanker St. Mihiel when it was rammed by another tanker in convoy, remained in the engine room and secured all equipment. He later reboarded the ship and helped bring her to port.

Second Mate William R. Rudolph, 240-06 Mayda Road, Rosedale, Queens, who gave first aid to injured crewmen of the S. S. John Bascom when the ship was hit and her ammunition cargo set afire in the port of Bari, Italy.

ARMY POINT SCORE GOES DOWN TODAY

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30 — (AP) Six hundred thousand more Army men and women become eligible tomorrow for discharge. The point score will be cut from 55 to 50 for enlisted men and from 73 to 70 for officers.

The length of service required after tomorrow for separation of enlisted men will be reduced from 48 to 42 months and from 51 to 48 months for male officers except Medical department officers.

The critical score for WAC personnel will not be reduced but length of service will be computed for the first time. Enlisted WACs become eligible for discharge after two years and a half of honorable service, and WAC officers after three years and three months.

The changes, together with other new discharge rules, were announced Dec. 19.

10 Injured on Atlantic Troopship; Five Ships Dock in Pacific Ports

NEW YORK, Dec. 30. — (AP) The troopship Edmund Alexander arrived today after a stormy Atlantic crossing that injured 10 of the 4,605 veterans aboard and damaged the ship.

Col. Edward Hubbs, troop commander and former Philadelphia police chief, said on one occasion a giant wave moved 20 feet a 20,000-pound anchor lashed to the forward deck. Railings and outside ladders were ripped off and washed overboard.

Of the 10 soldiers injured, he said four were hospitalized upon docking.

Passengers included Lts. Dorothy and Rosemary Paris, 24-year-old twin daughters of Fred Paris, assistant postmaster at Dermott, Ark. The twins, Army nurses, have been in England and France and have not seen their parents for 22 months.

"Every time they separated us," they said, "we howled like the devil and put our foot down, so they gave in to us and we were never apart on any assignment."

Esther Winograd, 4, only survivor of a Polish family of 14 slain by the Germans, arrived in the custody of her uncle, Capt. Morris Goldberg of Cincinnati, O.

A brother and sister, Capt. H. O. McDonald, a military government officer in Munich, and Nurse Lt. Gene McDonald met aboard the ship by chance. They plan to visit their mother in Sturgeon Bay Wis.

Brig. Gen. Hugh W. Rowan of Chevy Chase, Md., chief chemical warfare officer for the ETO, returned after three and a half years service.

Other troopships arriving today were the Pittston Victory, 1,517; Hampton Sidney Victory, 1,515; Jacob Lukenbach, 31; Algic, 25; Spetsae, 28; Smith Victory, 1,535; Frostburg Victory, 1,591; Bret Harte, 559; Robin Sherwood, 497; Leonardo Romero, 22.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec 30.—(AP) Luck was with 9,207 veterans who arrived here today aboard five ships from Japan, the Philippines and Hawaii.

They were "home alive in '45," making reality of a slogan of Pacific fighting men. The sun was shining after a week of rain as they steamed through the Golden Gate, and they found the troop jam here was broken. They soon could be on their way homeward.

For one soldier aboard the S. S. Brazil, though, the 18-day voyage from Manila was from, not to, the person he most wanted to be with. T-5 Joseph W. Touponce of Housatonic, Mass., left a bride in the Philippines.

He had given up hope of seeing his fiancee, Lt. Virginia Marie Cassidy, Army nurse, before he returned to the United States. But as he was boarding the Brazil he was taken from line and sent to the transport chaplain's office. Lieutenant Cassidy was there. She had permission to be married, and had been waiting eight hours.

The James Kelly came in from Hawaii; the Rawlins from Manila, the Wharlton from Leyte, and the Robert Perry from Yokohama. The USS Birgit, which had been expected from Leyte with 528 Army and Navy men, was delayed but probably will arive tomorrow or New Year's day.

There were 5,051 passengers aboard the Brazil, a former luxury liner. Christmas aboard was exceptionally merry. There were 24 children among the passengers, and there were horns, rattles, toy drums, whistles, and paper hats still there from pre-war days.

With a Christmas tree, turkey, ice cream and cake, it was a real party.

MODEL'S HUSBAND HELD IN SLAYING

NEW YORK, Dec. 30—(AP) Army Capt. Archie B. Miller, 25, of Bellevue, Texas, unshaven and wearing a rumpled blue civilian suit, stood silently in felony court today and heard himself arraigned on a charge of homicide in the fatal shooting of a man police quoted his wife as saying she had hoped to marry after obtaining a divorce.

Capt. Eugene Dale, 27-year-old Enid, Okla., Army flier who had survived the Bataan death march and two and a half years of Japanese imprisonment, died in Roosevelt hospital yesterday morning, about 31 hours after being shot three times in the apartment of Mrs. Fay Hancock Miller, an attractive former model who came from Jonesboro, N. C.

Detective John Kennedy said that before Dale died he identified Miller as the assailant and that Miller admitted the shooting when arrested.

Capt. Miller, his officer's field coat thrown over his left arm, fingered the brim of his grey fedora as the charge against him was read by Harold Birns, Assistant District Attorney. He appeared keenly observant of the proceedings. There was no attorney present to represent him. Magistrate Morris Rothenberg fixed Jan. 14 for a further hearing.

Before he returned to the Tombs, a city prison where he is being held without bail, Capt. Miller conversed briefly with Army Capt. Herbert Brill, who said he was on terminal leave and formerly was stationed near Capt. Miller's home in Texas. He said that although he had not previously known Miller he wanted to help him. His offer of help was declined.

Mrs. Miller, a registered nurse, who abandoned that calling to become a photographer's model, was at Capt. Dale's side when he died. Later, exhausted from lack of rest and suffering from shock, she herself was admitted as a patient at the hospital.

Police quoted Mrs. Miller as saying she had fallen in love with Capt. Dale while her husband was in Europe and that she had hoped to marry him after obtaining a divorce.

DEC 31 1945

Her sister, Miss Frances Hancock, and the latter's fiance, Arthur Gormley, a merchant seaman, also were present in the apartment during the shooting.

NUERNBERG DEC 30-(AP)-THE FOLLOWING IS THE TEXT OF HITLER'S PERSONAL AND POLITICAL LAST TESTAMENT, RELEASED BY ALLIED AUTHORITIES TODAY:

MY PERSONAL WILL.

ALTHOUGH DURING THE YEARS OF STRUGGLE I BELIEVED THAT I COULD

3024-32743

NOT UNDERTAKE THE RESPONSIBILITY OF MARRIAGE, NOW BEFORE THE END OF MY LIFE, I HAVE DECIDED TO TAKE AS MY WIFE THE WOMAN WHO AFTER MANY YEARS OF TRUE FRIENDSHIP CAME TO THIS CITY, ALREADY ALMOST BESIEGED, OF HER OWN FREE WILL IN ORDER TO SHARE MY FATE. SHE WILL GO TO HER DEATH WITH ME AT HER OWN WISH AS MY WIFE. THIS WILL COMPENSATE US FOR WHAT WE BOTH LOST THROUGH MY WORK IN THE SERVICE OF MY PEOPLE.

DEC 31 1945

MY POSSESSIONS IN SO FAR AS THEY ARE WORTH ANYTHING, BELONG TO THE PARTY, OR IF THIS NO LONGER EXISTS TO THE STATE. IF THE STATE TOO IS DESTROYED THERE IS NO NEED FOR ANY FURTHER INSTRUCTIONS ON MY PART. THE PAINTINGS IN THE COLLECTIONS BOUGHT BY ME DURING THE COURSE OF THE YEARS WERE NEVER ASSEMBLED FOR PRIVATE PURPOSES BUT SOLELY FOR THE ESTABLISHMENT OF A PICTURE GALLERY IN MY HOME TOWN OF LINZ ON THE DANUBE.

IT IS MY MOST HEARTFELT WISH THAT THIS WILL SHOULD BE DULY EXECUTED.

AS EXECUTOR I APPOINT MY MOST FAITHFUL PARTY COMRADE, MARTIN BORMANN. HE IS GIVEN FULL LEGAL AUTHORITY TO MAKE ALL DECISIONS. HE IS PERMITTED TO HAND OVER TO MY RELATIVES EVERYTHING WHICH IS OF VALUE AS A PERSONAL MEMENTO OR IS NECESSARY FOR MAINTAINING A PETIT BOURGEOIS STANDARD OF LIVING, ESPECIALLY TO MY WIFE'S MOTHER AND MY FAITHFUL FELLOW-WORKERS OF BOTH SEXES WHO ARE WELL KNOWN TO HIM. THE CHIEF OF THESE ARE MY FORMER SECRETARIES, FRAU WINTER, ETC., WHO HELPED ME FOR MANY YEARS BY THEIR WORK.

MY WIFE AND I CHOOSE TO DIE IN ORDER TO ESCAPE THE SHAME OF OVERTHROW OR CAPITULATION, IT IS OUR WISH FOR OUR BODIES TO BE BURNT IMMEDIATELY ON THE PLACE WHERE I HAVE PERFORMED THE GREATER PART OF MY DAILY WORK DURING THE COURSE OF MY 12 YEARS SERVICE TO MY PEOPLE.

SECOND DOCUMENT:

MY POLITICAL TESTAMENT.

DEC 31 1945

MORE THAN 30 YEARS HAVE PASSED SINCE I MADE MY MODEST CONTRIBUTION AS A VOLUNTEER IN THE FIRST WORLD WAR WHICH WAS FORCED UPON THE REICH. IN THESE THREE DECADES THE LOVE OF AND LOYALTY TO MY PEOPLE ALONE HAVE GUIDED ME IN ALL MY THOUGHTS, ACTIONS AND LIFE. THEY GAVE ME THE POWER TO MAKE THE MOST DIFFICULT DECISIONS WHICH HAVE EVER CONFRONTED MORTAL MAN.

I HAVE SPENT ALL MY TIME, MY POWER AND MY HEALTH IN THESE THREE DECADES. IT IS UNTRUE THAT I, OR ANYBODY ELSE IN GERMANY, WANTED WAR IN 1939. IT WAS WANTED AND PROVOKED EXCLUSIVELY BY THOSE INTERNATIONAL STATESMEN WHO WERE EITHER OF JEWISH ORIGIN, OR WORKED FOR JEWISH INTERESTS.

I HAVE MADE TOO MANY OFFERS OF LIMITATION AND CONTROL OF ARMAMENTS WHICH POSTERITY WILL NOT FOR ALL TIME BE ABLE TO DISREGARD FOR THE RESPONSIBILITY FOR THE OUTBREAK OF THIS WAR TO BE PLACED ON ME. FURTHER, I HAVE NEVER WISHED THAT AFTER THE FIRST APPALLING WORLD WAR THERE SHOULD BE A SECOND ONE AGAINST EITHER ENGLAND OR AMERICA.

CENTURIES WILL GO BY, BUT FROM THE RUINS OF OUR TOWNS AND MONUMENTS HATRED OF THOSE ULTIMATELY RESPONSIBLE WILL ALWAYS GROW ANEW. THEY ARE THE PEOPLE WHOM WE HAVE TO THANK FOR ALL THIS: INTERNATIONAL JEWRY AND ITS HELPERS.

THREE DAYS BEFORE THE OUTBREAK OF THE GERMAN-POLISH WAR I SUGGESTED TO THE BRITISH AMBASSADOR IN BERLIN A SOLUTION OF THE GERMAN-POLISH QUESTION SIMILAR TO THAT IN THE CASE OF THE SAAR UNDER INTERNATIONAL CONTROL. THIS OFFER, TOO, CANNOT BE DENIED. IT WAS ONLY REJECTED BECAUSE THE RULING POLITICAL CLIQUE IN ENGLAND WANTED THE WAR PARTLY FOR COMMERCIAL REASONS, PARTLY BECAUSE THEY WERE INFLUENCED BY PROPAGANDA PUT OUT BY INTERNATIONAL JEWRY. I ALSO MADE IT QUITE PLAIN THAT IF THE PEOPLES OF EUROPE WERE AGAIN TO BE REGARDED MERELY AS PAWNS IN THE GAME PLAYED BY THE INTERNATIONAL CONSPIRACY OF MONEY AND FINANCE THEN THE JEWS, THE RACE WHICH IS THE REAL GUILTY PARTY IN THIS MURDEROUS STRUGGLE, WOULD BE SADDLED WITH THE RESPONSIBILITY FOR IT. I LEFT NO ONE IN DOUBT THAT THIS TIME, NOT ONLY WOULD MILLIONS OF CHILDREN OF THE EUROPEAN ARYAN RACES STARVE, NOT ONLY WOULD MILLIONS OF GROWN MEN MEET THEIR DEATH AND NOT ONLY WOULD HUNDREDS OF THOUSANDS OF WOMEN AND CHILDREN BE BURNED AND BOMBED TO DEATH IN THE CITIES, BUT THIS TIME THE REAL CULPRITS WOULD HAVE TO PAY FOR THEIR GUILT EVEN THOUGH BY MORE HUMANE MEANS THAN WAR.

AFTER A SIX YEARS WAR WHICH, IN SPITE OF ALL SETBACKS, WILL ONE DAY GO DOWN TO HISTORY AS THE MOST GLORIOUS AND HEROIC MANIFESTATION OF THE STRUGGLE FOR EXISTENCE OF A NATION, I CANNOT FORSAKE THE CITY WHICH IS THE CAPITAL OF THIS STATE. AS OUR FORCES ARE TOO SMALL TO WITHSTAND THE ENEMY ATTACK ON THIS PLACE ANY LONGER AND OUR OWN RESISTANCE WILL BE GRADUALLY WORN DOWN BY MEN WHO ARE MERELY BLIND AUTOMATA, I WISH TO SHARE MY FATE WITH THAT WHICH MILLIONS OF OTHERS HAVE ALSO TAKEN UPON THEMSELVES BY STAYING IN THIS TOWN. FURTHER, I SHALL NOT FALL INTO THE HANDS OF AN ENEMY WHO REQUIRES A NEW SPECTACLE PRESENTED BY THE JEWS TO DIVERT THEIR HYSTERICAL MASSES.

I HAVE THEREFORE DECIDED TO REMAIN IN BERLIN AND THERE TO CHOOSE DEATH VOLUNTARILY AT THAT MOMENT WHEN I BELIEVE THAT THE POSITION OF THE FUEHRER AND CHANCELLORY ITSELF CAN NO LONGER BE MAINTAINED.

I DIE WITH A JOYFUL HEART, IN MY KNOWLEDGE OF THE IMMESURABLE DEEDS AND ACHIEVEMENTS OF OUR SOLDIERS AT THE FRONT, OF OUR WOMEN AT HOME, THE ACHIEVEMENTS OF OUR PEASANTS AND WORKERS AND OF THE CONTRIBUTION UNIQUE IN THE HISTORY OF OUR YOUTH WHICH BEARS MY NAME. THAT I EXPRESS TO THEM ALL THE THANKS WHICH COME FROM THE BOTTOM OF MY HEART IS AS CLEAR AS MY WISH THAT THEY SHOULD THEREFORE NOT GIVE UP THE STRUGGLE UNDER ANY CIRCUMSTANCES, BUT CARRY IT ON WHEREVER THEY MAY BE AGAINST THE ENEMIES OF THE FATHERLAND, TRUE TO THE PRINCIPLES OF THE GREAT CAUSE IN WHICH, FROM THE SACRIFICE OF OUR SOLDIERS AND FROM MY OWN COMRADESHIP WITH THEM TO DEATH ITSELF, THE SEED HAS BEEN SOWN WHICH WILL GROW ONE DAY IN THE HISTORY OF GERMANY TO THE GLORIOUS REBIRTH OF THE NATIONAL SOCIALIST MOVEMENT AND THEREBY TO THE ESTABLISHMENT OF A TRULY UNITED NATION.

MANY BRAVE MEN AND WOMEN HAVE DECIDED TO LINK THEIR LIVES WITH MINE TO THE LAST. I HAVE ASKED AND FINALLY ORDERED THEM NOT TO DO THIS, BUT TO CONTINUE TO TAKE PART IN THE NATION'S STRUGGLE. I ASK THE COMMANDERS OF THE ARMIES, OF THE NAVY AND THE AIRFORCE TO STRENGTHEN WITH ALL POSSIBLE MEANS THE SPIRIT OF RESISTANCE OF OUR SOLDIERS IN THE NATIONAL SOCIALIST BELIEF, WITH SPECIAL EMPHASIS ON THE FACT THAT I MYSELF AS THE FOUNDER AND CREATOR OF THIS MOVE-MENT, PREFER DEATH TO COWARDLY RESIGNATION OR EVEN TO CAPITULATION. MAY IT BE IN THE FUTURE A POINT OF HONOR WITH GERMAN OFFICERS AS IT ALREADY IS IN OUR NAVY THAT THE SURRENDER OF A DISTRICT OR TOWN IS OUT OF THE QUESTION AND THAT ABOVE EVERYTHING ELSE THE COMMANDERS MUST SET A SHINING EXAMPLE OF FAITHFUL DEVOTION TO DUTY UNTIL DEATH.

BEFORE MY DEATH I EXPEL THE FORMER REICHSMARSHAL HERMANN GOERING FROM THE PARTY AND WITHDRAW FROM HIM ALL RIGHTS WHICH WERE CONFERRED ON HIM BY THE DECREE OF 29 JUN 41 AND BY MY REICHSTAG SPEECH OF 1 SEP 39. IN HIS PLACE I APPOINT ADMIRAL DOENITZ AS PRESIDENT OF THE REICH AND SUPREME COMMANDER OF THE WEHRMACHT. BEFORE MY DEATH I EXPEL THE FORMER REICHSFUHRER SS AND MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR HEINRICH HIMMLER FROM THE PARTY AND FROM ALL HIS STATE OFFICES. IN HIS PLACE I APPOINT GAULEITER KARL HANKE AS REICHSFUHRER SS AND CHIEF OF THE GERMAN POLICE AND GAULEITER PAUL GIESLER AS MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR.

APART ALTOGETHER FROM THEIR DISLOYALTY TO ME, GOERING AND HIMMLER HAVE BROUGHT IRREPARABLE SHAME ON THE COUNTRY AND THE WHOLE NATION BY SECRETLY NEGOTIATING WITH THE ENEMY, WITHOUT MY KNOWLEDGE AND AGAINST MY WILL AND ALSO BY ILLEGALLY ATTEMPTING TO SEIZE CONTROL OF THE STATE.

IN ORDER TO GIVE THE GERMAN PEOPLE A GOVERNMENT COMPOSED OF HONORABLE MEN WHO WILL FULFIL THE TASK OF CONTINUING THE WAR WITH ALL MEANS, AS LEADER OF THE NATION I APPOINT THE FOLLOWING MEMBERS OF THE NEW CABINET:

PRESIDENT: DOENITZ
CHANCELLOR: DR GOEBBELS
PARTY MINISTER: BORMANN
FOREIGN MINISTER: SEYSS-INQUART
MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR: GAULEITER GIESLER
MINISTER OF WAR: DOENITZ
SUPREME COMMANDER OF THE ARMY: SCHOENER
SUPREME COMMANDER OF THE NAVY: DOENITZ
SUPREME COMMANDER OF THE LUFTWAFFE: GREIN
REICHSFUHRER SS AND CHIF OF THE GERMAN POLICE: GAULEITER HANKE INDUSTRY: FUNK
AGRICULTURE: BACKE
JUSTICE: THIERACK
CULTURE: DR SCHEEL
PROPAGANDA: DR NAUMANN
FINANCE: SCHWERIN-CROSIGK
LABOR: DR HUPFAUER
ARMAMENTS: SAUR

LEADER OF THE GERMAN LABOR FRONT AND MEMBER OF THE CABINET: REISCHSMINISTER DR LEY

ALTHOUGH A NUMBER OF THESE MEN, SUCH AS MARTIN BORMANN, DR. GOEBBELS ETC., AS WELL AS THEIR WIVES, HAVE COME TO ME OF THEIR OWN FREE WILL, WISHING UNDER NO CIRCUMSTANCES TO LEAVE THE REICH CAPITAL, BUT INSTEAD TO FALL WITH ME HERE, I MUST NEVERTHELESS ASK THEM TO OBEY MY REQUEST AND IN THIS CASE PUT THE INTERESTS OF THE NATION ABOVE THEIR OWN FEELINGS.

DEC 31 1945

THEY WILL STAND AS NEAR TO ME THROUGH THEIR WORK AND THEIR LOYALTY AS COMRADES AFTER DEATH AS I HOPE THAT MY SPIRIT WILL REMAIN AMONG THEM AND ALWAYS BE WITH THEM. MAY THEY BE SEVERE, BUT NEVER UNJUST. MAY THEY ABOVE ALL NEVER ALLOW FEAR TO INFLUENCE THEIR ACTIONS AND MAY THEY PLACE THE HONOR OF THE NATION ABOVE EVERYTHING ON EARTH. MAY THEY FINALLY BE CONSCIOUS THAT OUR TASK, THE ESTABLISHMENT OF A NATIONAL SOCIALIST STATE, REPRESENTS THE WORK OF CENTURIES TO COME AND OBLIGES EACH INDIVIDUAL PERSON ALWAYS TO SERVE THE COMMON INTEREST BEFORE HIS OWN ADVANTAGE.

I ASK ALL GERMANS, ALL NATIONAL SOCIALIST MEN, WOMEN AND ALL SOLDIERS OF THE WEHRMACHT TO BE LOYAL AND OBEDIENT TO THE NEW GOVERNMENT AND ITS PRESIDENT UNTIL DEATH. ABOVE ALL I ENJOIN THE GOVERNMENT OF THE NATION AND THE PEOPLE TO UPHOLD THE RACIAL LAWS TO THE LIMIT AND TO RESIST MERCILESSLY THE POISONERS OF ALL NATIONS, INTERNATIONAL JEWRY.

REICHMINISTER DR.GOEBBEL'S APPENDIX TO THE FUEHRER'S POLITICAL TESTAMENT.....

THE FUEHRER HAS ORDERED ME TO LEAVE BERLIN, IF THE DEFENSE OF THE REICH CAPITAL COLLAPSES, AND TO TAKE PART AS A LEADING MEMBER IN A GOVERNMENT APPOINTED BY HIM.

FOR THE FIRST TIME IN MY LIFE I MUST CATEGORICALLY REFUSE TO OBEY AN ORDER OF THE FUEHRER. MY WIFE AND CHILDREN JOIN ME IN THIS REFUSAL.

APART FROM THE FACT THAT ON GROUNDS OF FELLOW FEELING AND PERSONAL LOYALTY, WE COULD NEVER BRING OURSELVES TO LEAVE THE FUEHRER ALONE IN HIS HOUR OF GREATEST NEED, I WOULD OTHERWISE APPEAR FOR THE REST OF MY LIFE A DISHONORABLE TRAITOR AND COMMON SCOUNDREL AND WOULD LOSE MY OWN SELF RESPECT AS WELL AS THE RESPECT OF MY FELLOW CITIZENS, A RESPECT I SHOULD NEED IN ANY FURTHER SERVICE IN THE FUTURE REBUILDING OF THE GERMAN NATION AND GERMAN STATE.

IN THE NIGHTMARE OF TREASON WHICH SURROUNDS THE FUEHRER IN THESE MOST CRITICAL DAYS OF THE WAR, THERE MUST BE AT LEAST SOME PEOPLE TO STAY WITH HIM, UNCONDITIONALLY, UNTIL DEATH, EVEN IF THIS CONTRADICTS THE FORMAL AND, FROM A MATERIAL POINT OF VIEW, ENTIRELY JUSTIFIABLE ORDER WHICH HE GIVES IN HIS POLITICAL TESTAMENT.

I BELIEVE THAT I AM THEREBY DOING THE BEST SERVICE TO THE FUTURE OF THE GERMAN PEOPLE IN THE HARD TIMES TO COME. EXAMPLES WILL BE MORE IMPORTANT THAN MEN. MEN WILL ALWAYS BE FOUND TO SHOW THE NATION THE WAY OUT OF ITS TRIBULATIONS, BUT A RECONSTRUCTION OF OUR NATIONAL LIFE WOULD BE IMPOSSIBLE IF IT WERE NOT INSPIRED BY EXAMPLES WHICH ARE CLEAR AND EASILY UNDERSTANDABLE TO ALL.

FOR THIS REASON, TOGETHER WITH MY WIFE AND ON BEHALF OF MY CHILDREN WHO ARE TOO YOUNG TO BE ABLE TO SPEAK FOR THEMSELVES, BUT WHO, IF THEY WERE SUFFICIENTLY OLD, WOULD AGREE WITH THIS DECISION WITHOUT RESERVATION, I EXPRESS MY UNALTERABLE DECISION NOT TO LEAVE THE REICH CAPITAL, EVEN IF IT FALLS AND AT THE SIDE OF THE FUEHRER TO END A LIFE WHICH, FOR ME PERSONALLY, WILL HAVE NO FURTHER VALUE IF I CANNOT SPEND IT AT THE SERVICE OF THE FUEHRER AND BY HIS SIDE.

CHUNGKING,DEC.30-(AP)-A COMMUNIST SPOKESMAN TODAY ALLEGED THAT 225,000 NATIONALIST TROOPS WERE ENGAGED IN A DRIVE AIMED AT CONQUES OF COMMUNIST DOMINATED ~~CHAHAR~~ JEHOL PROVINCE.
HE SAID THE NATIONALISTS WERE SWEEPING ALONG THE PEIPING-JEHOL RAILROAD AND HAD CAPTURED KUPEHKOW, A GREATWALL BORDER TOWN BETWEEN CHINA PROPER AND INNER MONGOLIA, ON CHRISTMAS DAY.
CHENGTEH, CAPITAL OF JEHOL, WAS DECLARED TO BE THE PRINCIPAL OBJECTIVE OF THE GOVERNMENT DRIVE.

CHUNGKING--FIRST ADD MOOSA'S COMMUNIST CHARGE XXX DRIVE.
THE SPOKESMAN ASSERTED THE CENTRAL GOVERNMENT TROOPS WERE THRUSTING TOWARDCHENGTEH IN TWO MAIN PRONGS, ONE ALONG THE PEIPING-JEHOL RAILROAD AND THE OTHER WESTWARD FROM POINTS ON THE PEIPING-MUKDEN RAILROAD IN THE MANCHURIAN PROVINCE OF LIAONING.
THE FORCE PUSHING NORTHWARD VIA KUPEHKOW WAS DESCRIBED AS CONSISTING OF 75,000 MEN AND THE ARMY ON THE PEIPING-MUKDEN ROUTE OF 150,000.
THE COMMUNISTS WERE OFFERING PRACTICALLY NO RESISTANCE BUT WERE PREPARED TO PUT UP A STIFF FIGHT IF FORCED TO DO SO, THE SPOKESMAN SAID. HE RIDICULED A GOVERNMENT SPOKESMAN'S RECENT ASSERTION THAT THE COMMUNISTS HAD PROPOSED A TRUCE BECAUSE THEY SUFFERED SEVERE DEFEATS IN SUIYUAN AND SHANTUNG PROVINCES AND "REALIZED THEIR MILITARY WEAKNESS."
"WE ARE SURE OF OUR STRENGTH," THE COMMUNIST DECLARED.
THE SPOKESMAN ALSO REPORTED FIGHTING IN SHANTUNG PROVINCE ALONG THE TIENTSIN-PUKOW RAILROAD. HE SAID THE GOVERNMENT HAD CONVERTED TUNGSHAN (SUCHOW), NORTHERN KIANGSU RAIL JUNCTION CITY, INTO A BASE FOR A COMING LARGE SCALE OFFENSIVE, FOR WHICH THEY ARE MOVING IN 134,000 REINFORCEMENTS. THIS FORCE INCLUDES 77 000 AMERICAN EQUIPPED TROOPS RAWN FROM THE 73RD, 74TH AND 100 H ARMIES, HE ASSERTED.

SEOUL,KOREA,DEC.29-(DELAYED)-(AP)-MASS WORK STOPPAGES, BITTER SPORADIC STREET BRAWLS AND THROWING OF ROCKS AT AMERICAN TROOPS OCCURRED TODAY AS INDEPENDENCE CRAVING KOREANS TRIED TO DIGEST THE DECISIONS MADE AT THE MOSCOW CONFERENCE.
AN EIGHT O'CLOCK CURFEW WAS IMPOSED ON AMERICANS TONIGHT TO PREVENT POSSIBLE INCIDENTS BUT MORE SERIOUS TROUBLE APPEARED POSSIBLE.
MOUNTING PUBLIC SENTIMENT APPEARED TO BE A CURIOUS COMBINATION OF RESENTMENT OVER THE MOSCOW ANNOUNCEMENT OF A COMMISSION AND POSSIBLE TRUSTEESHIP FOR THE NATION AND AN OUTBREAK OF KOREA'S INTERNAL STRUGGLE BETWEEN RIGHTISTS AND LEFTISTS.
LATE TODAY LT.GEN.JOHN R.HODGE, COMMANDER OF AMERICAN FORCES IN THE SOUTHERN HALF OF KOREA, EMPHASIZED REPEATEDLY IN AN INTERVIEW WITH NATIVE NEWSMEN THAT THE MOSCOW PRONOUNCEMENT DID NOT MEAN IMMEDIATE TRUSTEESHIP FOR KOREA--THE TERM TRUSTEESHIP BEING A HATED WORD HERE.
THE GENERAL'S EXPLANATION UNFORTUNATELY CAME TOO LATE--HE RECEIVED THE OFFICIAL TEXT TODAY--AND THE WIDESPREAD FEAR OF A FIVE YEAR TRUSTEESHIP HAD ALREADY BEEN AROUSED.
BY NOON KOREANS WERE WALKING OFF THEIR JOBS IN DROVES. HUNDREDS SILENTLY LEFT THE MILITARY GOVERNMENT PALACE. POLICE LEFT THEIR BEATS. BANKS CLOSED. KOREA WAS BOILING WITH ANGER AT WHAT IT THOUGHT WAS CERTAIN FIVE YEAR DOMINATION BY OTHER NATIONS INSTEAD OF SELF GOVERNMENT.
BY EARLY MORNING THE CITY WAS PLASTERED WITH LARGE POSTERS CHARGING THAT THE "TRUSTEESHIP" WAS DUE TO THE COMMUNIST PARTY. INCLUDED IN THE DEMONSTRATIONS WAS A MOB ATTACK ON ONE NEWSPAPER WHICH CLAIMS TO BE PROGRESSIVE-LIBERAL BUT WHICH RIGHTISTS CLAIM IS OUTRIGHT COMMUNIST.
A SPOKESMAN FOR THE COMMUNIST PARTY CHARGED THAT THE DEMONSTRATIONS AND OUTBREAKS WERE ARRANGED BY THE RIGHTIST'S SO-CALLED DEMOCRATIC PARTY AND THAT ALL LEFTIST ELEMENTS, INCLUEING THE COMMUNISTS, HAD BEEN ADVISED TO CONDUCT "A PEACEFUL PROTEST" TO THE MOSCOW EDICT.
A MASS MEETING APPARENTLY SPONSORED BY RIGHTIST GROUPS ADOPTED RESOLUTIONS THIS AFTERNOON OPPOSING TRUSTEESHIP. IN ADDITION RESOLUTIONS CALLED FOR IMMEDIATE RECOGNITION OF THE PROVISIONAL GOVERNMENT; A STRIKE OF ALL ALLIED MILITARY GOVERNMENT EMPLOYES; SUPPRESSION OF ALL NEWSPAPERS WHICH DISAGREE WITH THESE VIEWS; DISBANDING OF ALL POLITICAL PARTIES. PERSONS DISAGREEING WITH THESE VIEWS WERE BRANDED AS NATIONAL TRAITORS.
HODGE REPEATEDLY REITERATED IN HIS INTERVIEW THAT IN HIS OPINION THERE WAS NOTHING IN THE MOSCOW COMMUNIQUE WHICH "ANY REAL PATRIOT OR NATIONALIST NEED FEAR."

TOKYO, MONDAY DEC. 31-(AP)-INFORMED SOURCES SAID TODAY GENERAL MACARTHUR'S CHIEF OBJECTION TO THE BIG THREE'S NEW CONTROL PLAN FOR JAPAN IS THE CREATION OF AN ALLIED COUNCIL WHICH, THESE SOURCES ASSERTED, WILL COMPLICATE THE ALREADY DIFFICULT TASK OF FORCING THE JAPANESE TO CONFORM TO PROVISIONS OF THE POTSDAM AGREEMENT.
IT WAS THIS OBJECTION, THOSE SOURCES SAID, TO WHICH MACARTHUR REFERRED LAST NIGHT IN HIS STATEMENT WHICH SAID THAT "ON OCT. 31 MY FINAL DISAGREEMENT WAS CONTAINED IN A RADIO TO THE CHIEF OF STAFF FOR THE SECRETARY OF STATE, A[illegible]ING THAT THE TERMS 'IN MY OPINION ARE NOT ACCEPTABLE.'"
MACARTHUR'S OBJECTION TO A CONTROL COUNCIL WAS FIRST BROUGHT OUT EARLY IN OCTOBER WHEN RUSSIA URGED CREATION OF A FOUR-POWER BODY TO CONTROL THE ALLIED OCCUPATION OF JAPAN. ON THAT DATE A SOURCE CLOSE TO THE GENERAL TOLD T E ASSOCIATED PRESS THAT "SUCH A COUNCIL UNQUESTIONABLY WOULD CAUSE CONFUSION."
THE TASK OF WHIPPING JAPAN INTO LINE, OF FORCING HER TO ASSIMILATE DRASTIC CHANGES IN HER GOVERNMENTAL STRUCTURE AND IDEOLOGIES DATING BACK HUNDREDS OF YEARS, IS DIFFICULT ENOUGH NOW, WHEN THE JAPANESE ARE ACCUSTOMED TO TAKING ORDERS FROM ONLY ONE MAN, THE SOURCES SAID.

EVER SINCE ALLIED TROOPS FIRST LANDED IN JAPAN IT HAS BEEN MACARTHUR WHO HAS BEEN ISSUING ORDERS TO EMPEROR HIROHITO AND HIS CABINET.

THE JAPANESE HAVE NOT BEEN CONCERNED BY THE FACT THAT MACARTHUR RECEIVED HIS ORDERS FROM THE ALLIED JOINT CHIEFS OF STAFF. THEY KNEW ONLY THAT IN TOKYO THEIR ONE SOURCE OF AUTHORITY WAS MACARTHUR SUPREME COMMANDER FOR THE ALLIED POWERS.

A188FX

SHOULD THE JAPANESE GET THE IMPRESSION THAT MACARTHUR'S POWER OR AUTHORITY HAS BEEN LESSENED, THESE SOURCES CONTEND IT WOULD NOT HELP BUT WOULD CAUSE THE GENERAL TO LOSE FACE IN A COUNTRY WHERE FACE IS A MATTER OF PRIMARY CONCERN.

THERE IS NO QUESTION THAT AMONG THE JAPANESE THEMSELVES, THE NEW CONTROL PLAN ALREADY HAS CAUSED CONFUSION AND MAY RESULT IN A SLACKENING OF THEIR EFFORTS TO PUT INTO EFFECT DIRECTIVES ALREADY ISSUED.

THERE IS A GENERAL INTERPRETATION HERE THAT THE FAR EASTERN COMMISSION WILL HAVE AUTHORITY NOT ONLY TO REVIEW FUTURE DIRECTIVES BUT ANY DIRECTIVES ALREADY PUT INTO EFFECT BY THE SUPREME COMMANDER.

THUS FAR, THE JAPANESE GRUDGINGLY HAVE ACCEPTED DIRECTIVES AND HAVE ATTEMPTED SLOWLY TO PUT THEM INTO EFFECT. NOW THE JAPANESE ARE WONDERING IF THE COMMISSION WILL REVIEW ALL PAST DIRECTIVES AND WHETHER THEY WILL BE REQUIRED TO START ALL OVER AGAIN.

MACARTHUR'S SPOKESMAN ISSUED A SUPPLEMENTARY STATEMENT DECLARING THAT THE SUPREME COMMANDER OF THE ALLIED POWERS NEVER RECEIVED ANY INFORMATION OR COMMUNICATION WHATSOEVER FROM THE MOSCOW CONFERENCE DURING THE MEETING, AND DID NOT EVEN KNOW THAT JAPAN WAS BEING DISCUSSED.

ON THE DATE THE COMMUNIQUE REPORTING DECISIONS OF THE CONFERENCE WAS ISSUED, MACARTHUR RECEIVED WORD OF WHAT WAS ACCOMPLISHED FIRST FROM THE ASSOCIATED PRESS, WHICH DELIVERED TO HIM ITS REPORT ON THE COMMUNIQUE. IT WAS NOT UNTIL SOME HOURS LATER THAT THE COMPLETE TEXT WAS DELIVERED TO MACARTHUR THROUGH OTHER CHANNELS. (EDITORS: MAY BE USED AS FIRST LEAD MACARTHUR BUDGET IF DESIRED)

ROBINSON "WAS CLUBBED SENSELESS FOR SMUGGLING IN FOOD. HE WAS REVIVED EACH TIME AND THE TREATMENT CONTINUED," SAID THE AFFIDAVIT. "WE WERE FORCED TO WATCH AS THE JAPANESE STAFF STOOD AROUND LAUGHING. HE WAS BEATEN SO MUCH HE FINALLY WENT OUT OF HIS MIND. FURUSHIMA LOOKED OUT OF HIS OFFICE WINDOW AND LAUGHED AT THE AFFAIR."

AFTER THAT, THE DUTCHMAN SAID, ROBINSON WAS SUBJECTED TO THE HORRIBLE WATER TREATMENT. ADD YOKOHAMA-WAR CRIMES ... ROBINSON

THEUNISSEN SAID HE KEPT A RECORD OF ALL ATROCITIES, NAMES AND DATES. HE DECLARED THAT AT ONE TIME FURUSHIMA TOLD AMERICANS IN A HOSPITAL THEY WOULD BE BETTER OFF DEAD, BECAUSE THEY WERE USELESS AS WORKERS.

THE DUTCH OFFICER ALSO DESCRIBED IN DETAIL THE BEATING OF PVT. JAMES H.SMITH, WHO DIED LATER.

"SMITH WAS BEATEN ON THE BODY AND FACE WITH STICKS LAST WINTER. HE TOO WAS REVIVED EACH TIME HE BECAME UNCONSCIOUS. FINALLY, HE WAS PUT NAKED INTO A CELL DESPITE THE COLD AND DOCTORS WERE NOT PERMITTED TO HELP HIM.

"AMERICANS PROTESTED TO THE CAMP COMMANDER THAT IF HE WERE NOT GIVEN MEDICAL TREATMENT HE WOULD DIE. IT WAS REFUSED. HE DIED OF TUBERCULOSIS AND PNEUMONIA."

THEUNISSEN FURTHER STATED THAT IN THE LAST FEW MONTHS BEFORE THE SURRENDER, THE JAPANESE BECAME VERY JITTERY BECAUSE THEY KNEW THE WAR WAS LOST. AS A RESULT, THEY INTENSIFIED THE SEVERITY OF THEIR TORTURE AND BECAME SO INDISCRIMINATE THAT "TORTURES WERE A PART OF OUR DAILY ROUTINE. MANY OF OUR DUTCH DIED FROM THE SEVERITY OF THESE BEATINGS."

HE ALSO CHARGED THAT AMERICAN PRISONERS WERE FORCED TO STAND NUDE IN FRONT OF BARRACKS WHILE JAPANESE WOMEN SPAT ON THEM AND THREW ROCKS.

(ADVANCE)-CINCINNATI, DEC. 30-(AP)-GI JOE'S RETURN TO SCHOOL IS HELPING AMERICA'S COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES REGAIN A SEMBLANCE OF PRE-WAR ENROLLMENT.

DR.RAYMOND WALTERS, PRESIDENT OF THE UNIVERSITY OF CINCINNATI, REPORTED TODAY IN HIS 26TH ANNUAL SURVEY OF AMERICAN ENROLLMENTS THAT 78,323 RETURNED VETERANS HAD ENRTLLED AS FULL-TIME STUDENTS IN 539 COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES AS OF NOV. 1.

THESE EX-SERVICEMEN, HE DECLARED, MAKE UP ONE OUT OF EVERY EIGHT FULL-TIME COLLEGIATE CLASSES AND FORM THE CHIEF FACTOR IN RAISING THE 1945 ATTENDANCE OVER THAT OF 1944, THE FIRST SUCH INCREASE SINCE THE OUTBREAK OF WAR.

DR.WALTERS' SURVEY, CONDUCTED FOR THE EDUCATIONAL WEEKLY "SCHOOL AND SOCIETY," COVERED 645 APPROVED UNIVERSITIES AND FOUR-YEAR COLLEGES. OF THESE 106 REPORTED NO ATTENDANCE BY VETERANS.

THE 645 INSTITUTIONS, WITH 671,857 FULL-TIME STUDENTS, SHOW A 15.9 PER CENT ENROLLMENT INCREASE OVER LAST FALL, DR.WALTERS SAID, BUT THAT TOTAL STILL IS 21.8 PER CENT BELOW PEACETIME FIGURES OF 1939.

DR.WALTERS DESCRIBED THE 78,323 EX-GI'S AS THE "FIRST INFLUX OF VETERAN STUDENTS" AND ADDED THAT THEY WERE PREDOMINANTLY MEN DISCHARGED BEFORE OCT. 1.

"AN EQUAL NUMBER, OR MORE, MAY BE SEEKING MIDYEAR ADMISSION IN FEBRUARY FROM OVERSEAS TROOPS NOW BEING TRANSPORTED HOME," HE SAID.

DR.WALTERS SAID THE VETERANS "HAVE LARGELY CHOSEN URBAN AND STATE UNIVERSITIES AND, IN THE MAIN, ARE TAKING TECHNOLOGICAL, COMMERCIAL, PRE-PROFESSIONAL AND PROFESSIONAL COURSES.

"RELATIVELY FEW, THUS FAR, ARE ATTENDING INDEPENDENT COLLEGES OF ARTS AND SCIENCES," HE SAID, "ALTHOUGH A PRONOUNCED PICK-UP IS ANTICIPATED LATER; AND VERY FEW ARE ENROLLED IN INDEPENDENT TEACHERS COLLEGES."

A146CO

DR.WALTERS SAID HIS SURVEY REVEALED THAT TO DATE "VERY FEW" WOMEN VETERANS HAVE ENROLLED FOR COLLEGIATE STUDIES."

"BUT," HE ADDED, "SINCE MANY OF THE 300,000 WAVES, WACS AND OTHERS IN AUXILIARY SERVICES DUE FOR DISCHARGE BY NEXT MARCH ARE HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATES, WOMEN ULTIMATELY MAY OUTNUMBER MEN IN TAKING ADVANTAGE OF THE GI BILL OF RIGHTS."

DR.WALTERS OBSERVED THAT "THIS WOULD ADD TO THE ADMISSION PROBLEMS OF WOMEN'S COLLEGES AND CO-EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS HAVING LIMITED DORMITORY FACILITIES."

STUDENTS," DR.WALTERS SAID THAT IN ENGINEERING COLLEGES OF 67 LARGE PUBLIC AND PRIVATE UNIVERSITIES THERE ARE 58 PER CENT MORE STUDENTS THAN LAST FALL, BUT THAT NUMBER STILL IS 38 PER CENT BELOW 1939.

THIRTY-SEVEN INDEPENDENT TECHNICAL SCHOOLS SHOW A 57 PER CENT ENROLLMENT INCREASE OVER LAST FALL, HE DECLARED, BUT ARE 43 PER CENT UNDER 1939. SAMPLINGS AS TO PREMEDICAL STUDENTS, HE ADDED, REVEAL A CONTINUING DEFICIENCY IN THE SUPPLY OF ADEQUATELY PREPARED CANDIDATES FOR THE NATION'S MEDICAL SCHOOLS IN 1946, AND THE SAME IS TRUE IN PREDENTAL AND PHARMACY STUDENTS.

HIROHITO DROPS LEGEND OF DIVINITY

Disavows Myths Of People

Rescript Denies Their Destiny Is To Rule World.

CALLS ALL TO STRIVE BRAVELY

Declares Ties Of Throne, People Stand On Mutual Affection—MacArthur Applauds.

By The Associated Press

TOKYO, Tuesday, Jan. 1 (AP)—Emperor Hirohito denied today, in an Imperial rescript, that he is divine and drew from his conqueror and current boss a prompt well done.

"The emperor's New Year's statement pleases me very much," said MacArthur.

"By it he undertakes a leading part in democratization of his people. He squarely takes his stand for the future along liberal lines. His action reflects the irresistible influence of a sound idea. A sound idea can not be stopped."

Denies False Legends

The Mikado branded as false the twin legends of his own divinity and his people's destiny to rule the world as his defeated nation greeted the new year with apprehensions over the Allies' future occupation policies.

Emperor Hirohito's unprecedented rescript, with its disavowal of myths taught to his subjects since infancy, bluntly told the people the depths of their defeat and destitution and called upon them to "strive courageously" for the construction of a new, peaceful Japan.

"We stand by the people, and we wish always to share with them in their moments of joys and sorrows," said the Emperor's message.

Mutual Trust And Affection

"The ties between us and our people have always stood upon mutual trust and affection. They did not depend upon mere legends and myths. They are not predicated on the false conception that the Emperor is divine and that the Japanese people are superior to other races and fated to rule the world."

As the Emperor thus with one shove toppled an edifice that had been generations in the building, General MacArthur pointed out the foundations for a new structure. In a New Year's message he told the people "a new day dawns for Japan" in which "national enslavement" has been removed and it is only "necessary for the masses of Japan to awaken to the fact that they now have the power to govern, and what is done must be done by themselves."

Course For New Year

Behind these complementary messages from the Emperor and from the supreme Allied Commander, there were questions concerning the course the nation will be able to pursue in the new year.

Sources close to General MacArthur reported today that the new control plan arranged by the American, British and Russian foreign ministers at Moscow last week had caused confusion among the Japanese and might result in loss of "face" for MacArthur in this land where face is all-important.

MacArthur flatly stated Sunday that the control plan had been made over his protest and without

HIROHITO DROPS LEGEND OF DIVINITY

Disavows Myths Of People

Rescript Denies Their Destiny Is To Rule World.

CALLS ALL TO STRIVE BRAVELY

Declares Ties Of Throne, People Stand On Mutual Affection—MacArthur Applauds.

By The Associated Press

TOKYO, Tuesday, Jan. 1 (AP)—Emperor Hirohito denied today, in an Imperial rescript, that he is divine and drew from his conqueror and current boss a prompt well done.

"The emperor's New Year's statement pleases me very much," said MacArthur.

"By it he undertakes a leading part in democratization of his people. He squarely takes his stand for the future along liberal lines. His action reflects the irresistible influence of a sound idea. A sound idea can not be stopped."

Denies False Legends

The Mikado branded as false the twin legends of his own divinity and his people's destiny to rule the world as his defeated nation greeted the new year with apprehensions over the Allies' future occupation policies.

Emperor Hirohito's unprecedented rescript, with its disavowal of myths taught to his subjects since infancy, bluntly told the people the depths of their defeat and destitution and called upon them to "strive courageously" for the construction of a new, peaceful Japan.

"We stand by the people, and we wish always to share with them in their moments of joys and sorrows," said the Emperor's message.

Mutual Trust And Affection

"The ties between us and our people have always stood upon mutual trust and affection. They did not depend upon mere legends and myths. They are not predicated on the false conception that the Emperor is divine and that the Japanese people are superior to other races and fated to rule the world."

As the Emperor thus with one shove toppled an edifice that had been generations in the building, General MacArthur pointed out the foundations for a new structure. In a New Year's message he told the people "a new day dawns for Japan" in which "national enslavement" has been removed and it is only "necessary for the masses of Japan to awaken to the fact that they now have the power to govern, and what is done must be done by themselves."

Course For New Year

Behind these complementary messages from the Emperor and from the supreme Allied Commander, there were questions concerning the course the nation will be able to pursue in the new year.

Sources close to General MacArthur reported today that the new control plan arranged by the American, British and Russian foreign ministers at Moscow last week had caused confusion among the Japanese and might result in loss of "face" for MacArthur in this land where face is all-important.

MacArthur flatly stated Sunday that the control plan had been made over his protest and without

HIROHITO TELLS JAP PEOPLE HE IS NOT DIVINE

Declares the Throne Does Not Depend Upon That False Conception.

DISOWNS 'LEGENDS AND MYTH'

Denies His Subjects Are Superior Race Destined to Rule World—Says They Are 'Defeated.'

TOKYO, Dec. 31, (AP)—Emperor Hirohito told the Japanese people today that there was a "false conception that the emperor is divine"—something none of Japan's rulers through the centuries ever dared say before.

In a New Year's rescript that stripped all the awesome aura that long has enveloped the imperial throne, the emperor of a beaten empire likewise declared his subjects that they were not destined to rule the world.

"We stand by the people and we wish asways to share with them in their moments of joys and sorrows," the rescript said. The ties between us and our people have always stood upon mutual trust and affection.

"They do not depend upon mere legends and myth. They are not predicated on false conception that the emperor is divine and the Japanese people are superior to other races and are fated to rule the world."

The emperor also used the word "defeat" for the first time and expressed concern over what he termed spreading "radical tendencies" in Japan.

"We feel deeply concerned to note that consequent upon the protracted war ending in our defeat our people are liable to grow restless and to fall into the slough of despond," said his message made public to the foreign press through the U. S. Army public relations office.

"Radical tendencies in excess are gradually spreading and the sense of morality tends to lose its hold on the people with the result that there are signs of confusion of thoughts."

The emperor said the government should make every effort to alleviate the plight of the people.

He asserted that war's devastation had inflicted on Japan's cities "the miseries of destitution, the stagnation of trade," a food shortage and a growing number of unemployed.

Hirohito declared, however, that "if the nation is firmly united in its resolve to face the present ordeal and to seek civilization consistently in peace, a bright future undoubtedly will be our—not only for our country but for the whole of humanity."

In greeting the new year, the emperor reaffirmed the principles in the five clauses of the Japanese charter—an oath which first was taken by his grandfather, Emperor Meiji, who ruled from 1868 to 1912.

The Meiji charter provides for a public voice in government, guarantees of justice, and sets wisdom and knowledge as a goal to promote the welfare of Japan.

The charter, Hirohito said, had to be reaffirmed in order to proceed "unflinchingly toward the elimination of misguided practices of the past."

The Emperor declared that by "keeping in close touch with the desires of the people we will construct a new Japan through being thoroughly pacific."

The rescript concluded with these words: "The resolution for the year should be made at the beginning of the year. We expect our people to join us in all exertions looking to the accomplishment of this great undertaking with an indomitable spirit."

Text of Hirohito New Year Rescript

TOKYO, Tuesday, Jan. 1 (AP)—The texts of a New Year's Day rescript by Emperor Hirohito and a message by Gen. Douglas MacArthur to Japan:

Imperial Rescript

In greeting the New Year, we recall to mind that the Emperor Meiji proclaimed as the basis of our national policy the five clauses of the Charter at the beginning of the Meiji era. The Charter oath signified:

(1) Deliberative assemblies shall be established and all measures of government decided in accordance with public opinion.

(2) All classes, high and low, shall unite in vigorously carrying on the affairs of state.

(3) All common people, no less than the civil and military officials, shall be allowed to fulfill their just desires so that there may not be any discontent among them.

(4) All the observed usages of old shall be broken through and the equity and justice to be found in the workings of nature shall serve as the basis of action.

(5) Wisdom and knowledge shall be sought throughout the world for the purpose of promoting the welfare of the empire.

The proclamation is evident in its significance and high in its ideals. We wish to make this oath anew and restore the country to stand on its own feet again. We have to reaffirm the principles embodied in the Charter and proceed unflinchingly toward elimination of misguided practices of the past; and, keeping in close touch with the desires of the people, we will construct a new Japan through thoroughly being pacific, the officials and the people alike obtaining rich culture and advancing the standard of living of the people.

The devastation of the war inflicted upon our cities the miseries of the destitute, the stagnation of trade, shortage of food and the great and growing number of the unemployed [which] are indeed heartrending; but if the nation is firmly united in its resolve to face the present ordeal and to see civilization consistently in peace, a bright future will undoubtedly be ours, not only for our country but for the whole of humanity.

Love of the family and love of country are especially strong in this country. With more of this devotion should we now work toward love of mankind, and will strive courageously for the solution of their outstanding difficulties and for the development of industry and culture. Acting upon a consciousness of solidarity and of mutual aid and broad tolerance in their civic life, they will prove themselves worthy of their best tradition. By their supreme endeavours in that direction they will be able to render their substantial contribution to the welfare and advancement of mankind.

The resolution for the year should be made at the beginning of the year. We expect our people to join us in all exertions looking to accomplishment of this great undertaking with an indomitable spirit.

We feel deeply concerned to note that consequent upon the protracted war ending in our defeat our people are liable to grow restless and to fall into the slough of despond. Radical tendencies in excess are gradually spreading and the sense of morality tends to lose its hold on the people with the result that there are signs of confusion of thoughts.

We stand by the people and we wish always to share with them in their moment of joys and sorrows. The ties between us and our people have always stood upon mutual trust and affection. They do not depend upon mere legends and myths. They are not predicated on the false conception that the Emperor is divine and that the Japanese people are superior to other races and fated to rule the world.

Our Government should make every effort to alleviate their trials and tribulations. At the same time, we trust that the people will rise to the occasion and will strive courageously for the solution of their outstanding difficulties and for the development of industry and culture. Acting upon a consciousness of solidarity and of mutual aid and broad tolerance in their civic life, they will prove themselves worthy of their best tradition. By their supreme endeavours in that direction they will be able to render their substantial contribution to the welfare and advancement of mankind.

The resolution for the year should be made at the beginning of the year. We expect our people to join us in all exertions looking to accomplishment of this great undertaking with an indomitable spirit.

Gen. MacArthur's Message

To the People of Japan:

A New Year has come. With it a new day dawns for Japan. No longer is the future to be settled by a few. The shackles of militarism, of feudalism, of regimentation, of body and soul have been removed. Thought control and the abuse of education are no more. All now enjoy religious freedom and the right of speech without undue restraint. Free assembly is guaranteed.

The removal of this national enslavement means freedom for the people, but at the same time it imposes upon them the individual duty to think and to act each on his own initiative. It is necessary for the masses of Japan to awaken to the fact that they now have the power to govern and what is done must be done by themselves.

It is my hope that the New Year may be the beginning for them of "the way and the truth and the light."

Churchill Is Awarded Signal Honor by King

War Leader Receives Order of Merit in New Year List.

LONDON, Dec. 31,—(AP) Winston Churchill, who last July declined the Order of the Garter, highest British decoration of chivalry, was awarded the Order of Merit today in King George VI's new year honor list.

The Order of Merit is a distinction limited to 24 holders.

Five Made Viscounts

Five military leaders were made viscounts by the monarch in recognition of their achievements during the war, and three scientists who aided in the development of atomic energy also were honored.

The military men who were named viscounts included:

Marshal of the Air Force Lord Portal of Hungerford, who also received the Order of Merit. Lord Hungerford was chief of the air staff during the war.

Field Marshal Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, who was field commander of the 21st army group in Europe.

Field Marshal Lord Alan Brooke, chief of the Imperial staff.

Field Marshal Sir Harold R. L. G. Alexander, former supreme Allied commander in the Mediterranean theater.

Admiral of the Fleet Lord Andrew Browne Cunningham, chief of the naval staff.

The 165-page list, believed to be the longest new year honors list in British history, included five women among the many persons who made outstanding contributions to the winning of the war both in military and civilian roles.

Recognizes Colonial Services

The traditional awards to Britons who did the most for the nation during the year were increased this time to include recognition for services, both military and civilian, throughout the United Kingdom, including the colonies.

Also made a viscount was Lord Southwood, London publisher and chairman of the Red Cross penny-a-week committee.

New barons include Admiral Sir Bruce Fraser, head of the British Pacific fleet during the war; Air Chief Marshal Sir Arthur Tedder, who served as deputy supreme commander of Allied forces in Europe under Gen. Eisenhower; Admiral of the Fleet Sir John Tovey, commander-in-chief of the home fleet; Field Marshal Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, who was Allied commander-in-chief in the Mediterranean theater; Philip Inman, chairman of the Charing Cross hospital.

D. C. Bailey, inventor of the Bailey bridge, which was widely used by Allied armies, was knighted.

Also made a knight was Wallace A Akers, director of atomic bomb research, while Dr. Rudolph Ernst Peierls, scientific consultant on atomic bomb reearch, and Dr. Franz Eugen Simon, professor in thermo-dynamics at Oxford university, were awarded the rank of Commanders of the British Empire.

Among the women honored was Lady Mountbatten, wife of Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten, supreme Allied commander in southeast Asia. She was made a dame commander of the Royal Victorian Order, a rare distinction.

Three other women were made dames of the British empire. They are Edith Evans, actress, Countess of Limerick and deputy chairman of the joint Red Cross and St. John war organization; the Dutchess of Richmond and Gordon, vice chairman of Soldiers', Sailors' and Airmen's Families association; and Mrs. L. V. L. E. Whateley, chief controller of the Auxiliary Territorial service (ATS).

Consul General in N. Y. Named

LONDON, Tuesday, Jan. 1 (AP)—British subjects now in the United States who are named in the honors list include:

Companions of the Order of St. Michael and St. George—Frank Godbould Lee, deputy to the representative of the British Treasury in Washington; Harold Wilkinson, British petroleum representative in Washington; Archibald McDonald Gordon, labor attaché in the British Embassy; Robert Henry Hadow, counselor at the embassy.

Knights Commander of the Order of St. Michael and St. George—Francis Edward Evans, British Consul General in New York; Carl August Berendsen, New Zealand Minister to the United States.

Knight Commander, Order of the British Empire—John Hall Magowan, commercial minister in the Washington embassy.

Commander, Order of the British Empire—Isaiah Berlin, with the British Information Services in Washington.

Officer, Order of the British Empire—Irene Boyle, personal secretary to the British Ambassador.

Several British scientists who had a part in developing the atomic bomb are honored. Made a Knight was Wallace A. Akers, director of atomic bomb research in Britain. Dr. Rudolf Ernst Peierls, consultant on the research, and Dr. Franz Eugen Simon, professor in thermo-dynamics at Oxford University, get the rank of Commanders of the British Empire.

UNO WILL CHOOSE TWO PLACES IN U.S.

Site for Temporary Operation to Be Selected Not Far From Permanent Headquarters

LONDON, Dec. 31 (AP)—A United Nations site committee will seek a temporary headquarters seat in addition to a permanent location for the United Nations Organization when it investigates localities in the United States, it was officially disclosed tonight.

The interim headquarters will be located preferably in or near the district to be recommended for the permanent site. The committee plans to leave for the United States by plane on Friday. Huntingdon Gilchrist, American secretary, left today to make the preliminary arrangements.

Under a decision taken on Friday, the commission has agreed to consider sites only in the Boston and New York areas. Hyde Park, N. Y., the late President Roosevelt's ancestral home, appeared to have the best chance of eventual selection, it was believed in most quarters, but several undisclosed localities near Boston and New York will be investigated.

HYDE PARK, Dec. 31 (AP)—Dr. Henry Noble MacCracken, president of Vassar College in Poughkeepsie, offered the facilities of the college today to the committee attempting to have this area chosen as the UNO's seat. He offered the college buildings for use in April or August for an assembly meeting, should Hyde Park be made the permanent home.

UNO Site Finders To Fly Here Friday

London, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—The United Nations Site Committee will leave by plane on Friday for the United States to conduct an on-the-spot-investigation of localities suitable for the headquarters of the world peace organization.

Vassar Offers Facilities

HYDE PARK, N. Y., Dec. 31 (AP).—Dr. Henry Noble MacCracken, president of Vassar College at Poughkeepsie, today offered the facilities of the college to the United Nations Organization Site Committee. He offered the college buildings for use in April or Auggust for an assembly meeting, if Hyde Park should be named as the permanent home of the U. N. O.

U. N. O. Is Invited to Poconos

STROUDSBURG, Pa., Dec. 31 (AP).—A committee has been formed here to seek choice of a Pocono Mountain resort site as the permanent home of the United Nations Organization. A committee spokesman said today cables have been sent to U. N. O. officials in London asking inspection of the Pocono Mountain area by the U. N. O. committee coming to the United States next month.

U. N. O. Dinner Will Be Given By King George

1,000 Invited to Function at St. James's Palace for Delegates to Assembly

LONDON, Dec. 31 (AP).—King George VI will be host on Jan. 9 to more than 1,000 guests at a court dinner at St. James's Palace for delegates to the United Nations Assembly, it was announced officially tonight.

Newspaper reports here said the dinner on the eve of the Assembly's opening would be the gayest and most colorful social event in Britain since before the war.

Workmen already are scraping the walls of St. James's Palace and replacing its bomb-smashed windows in preparation for the event, at which all the delegates of fifty-one nations will be received.

United Nations site committee will seek a temporary headquarters seat in addition to a permanent location for the United Nations Organization when it investigates localities in the United States, it was disclosed. The interim headquarters will be situated preferably in or near the district to be recommended for the permanent site.

The committee plans to leave for the United States by plane on Friday.

Huge-Banquet Plan Report

London, Dec. 31 (AP)—London newspapers reported today that a great court banquet—the gayest and most splendid social event since prewar days—was being planned for January 9, on the eve of the convening of the United Nations General Assembly.

Buckingham Palace would not confirm the reports. The newspaper accounts said the Queen, with Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose, would attend while the King acts as host to more than 1,000 delegates from the 51 United Nations.

WORLD IN TURMOIL OPENS NEW YEAR FULL OF OPTIMISM

LONDON, Dec. 31. — (AP) On a note of cautious optimism, tempered with concern for the future, peoples around the globe tonight ushered in the first new year since 1939 free of the scourge of full-scale war.

The problems besetting the world entering its first year of peace were manifold. In many countries there was not enough food to go around. Peace-borne conflicts harried statesmen attempting to shape future security for individual nations and the world.

But 51 nations were concerned with a united effort to assure lasting peace for all men and, the preliminaries successfully completed, were ready to take up the common task. Already the representatives of these nations were on their way to the first meeting of the General Assembly of the United Nations in London on Jan. 10.

Pope Optimistic

From the Vatican came a note of hope for the long-suffering world. Pope Pius XII, in an address to papal guards yesterday, expressed himself as full of optimism for the future, and full of thankfulness that the year 1945 saw the end of the terrible world conflict.

In Britain, a public still tightening its belts because of unrelieved shortages in the wake of the war, heard a word of warning from the man who led them successfully to victory.

"We shall only win the peace as we have won the war—by character and hard work," former Prime Minister Winston Churchill told them in a New Year message. "There is no easy path to prosperity. 'Empire and liberty' still remains the call which leads us on."

De Gaulle Broadcasts

Speaking for France, President de Gaulle broadcast a New Year message of encouragement to the French people.

"In 1945 we triumphed in war. occupied the Rhine, and reestablished our domestic equilibrium," he said. "It is with ardor and with courage that we commence to live in the year 1946. We know that many obstacles remain to be surmounted but we know also that everywhere we are now making progress."

In the Soviet Union this was the happiest New Year's eve since 1940. For Russians it was somewhat of a joint celebration of Christmas and New Year, for tonight was the first time the children saw their decorated trees lighted, and this was the night they received their presents from Grandfather Frost, the Russian counterpart of Santa Claus.

There were thousands of parties in all parts of the Soviet Union. Moscow's big hotels planned special gay events.

For the Chinese the beginning of a New Year had profound meaning, after long years of sustained resistance to oppression. To the nation, still torn by internal strife, President Chiang Kai-Shek broadcast a New Year message appealing again for national unity.

Gen. George C. Marshall, new United States ambassador to China, celebrated his 65th birthday today and was the guest of honor at a New Year's eve party given by President and Mrs. Chiang at the presidential villa in Chungking's outskirts. A glittering assembly of China's great and heads of diplomatic missions attended.

In Germany, as in much of Europe, food shortages still were severe and fuel supplies were low.

BORDER PACT RATIFIED

Moscow Cites Action Taken by Polish National Council

LONDON, Dec. 31 (AP)—The Moscow radio, quoting a Tass dispatch from Warsaw, said tonight that the Polish National Council had ratified the treaty establishing the Russan-Polish frontier.

In announcing the signing of the treaty last Aug. 17, the Moscow radio said that the future boundary would be the old Curzon Line with a few deviations "in Poland's favor." The Curzon Line, established after the first World War by Lord Curzon, British Foreign Secretary, gave parts of so-called old Poland, including Vilna and Lwow, to Russia.

Girl Denies Stowaway Plan

SOUTHAMPTON, England, Dec. 31 (AP).—Jane Ferguson, eighteen-year-old former clerk at the American Embassy in London, told a court today that she was acting on a dare to visit a homebound G. I. when she attempted to board the troop-carrying liner Queen Mary last week while wearing a United States Army uniform. Miss Ferguson said she had no intention of stowing away.

CASCIARI TO TAKE BRIDE IN BRITAIN SATURDAY

NOTTINGHAM, England, Dec. 31—(AP) Dominick Casciari, 22-year-old former paratrooper who arrived in England by plane 12 days ago to ask permission to marry the girl he left behind, will complete his mission Jan. 5.

The New Canaan, Conn., youth will wed Rita Blankley, 18, at Bulwell Roman Catholic church. He has two tickets for return by plane with his bride.

Cascari met Rita while stationed here during the war but when he proposed marriage then, her father told him to return after the war.

WORKERS' COUNCIL OPERATES MINE IN RUSSIAN DISTRICT

BERLIN, Dec. 31—(AP) German provincial and Russian military government officals say industrial production in Soviet-occupied Germany is being spurred by workers' councils which are given a share in running industries.

The first American correspondents to tour the zone saw one of these councils functoning at the Riebeckesche Montanwerke (mining works) in Weissenfels, one of the largest coal mines in Saxony Province.

This enterprise is run by a board of two directors and three workers' representatives elected from the mines and factories.

The plant they operate includes one pit mine, three surface mines, two power plants, two plants for distilling brown coal into tar and 11 factories for making brown coal into fuel blocks. The plant suffered little war damage.

Nears 1938 Production

Gross coal diggings for October were announced as 469,896 metric tons (517,825 short ton), which is about 84 per cent of the production in the same month in 1933.

Both Russian military and German provincial officials give much credit for this quick comeback to the workers' council, which has a say in production methods as well as responsibility for employes' welfare.

The Reibeckesche mine was described by the officials as a model for operating other mines in this area. Most of the stock was owned by the Rheinstahl company, which obtained its controlling interest from I. G. Farben. Since the Rheinstahl bosses are in western Germany and out of contact with the plant here, the board of directors has been superceded by two directors named by the provincial government.

These directors are Heinz Rudert and Assistant Director Dr. Max Schwahn. Rudert, who has been with the company since 1939, succeeded Director Fritz Koenig, who was arrested by Russian occupation authorities on undisclosed charges.

Attend Daily Meetings

The directors attend daily meeting with the workers' council, whose members are Ernst Boetterer, for 33 years a pit miner; Otto Kiersch, a miner at 14 who now works in a factory, and Fritz Lesch, another former pit miner 15 years with the company. All three said they were Communist party members. The directors said they belonged to no political party.

There are workers' councils in each factory and mine in this enterprise. The total membership of 105 in these councils chose the top council of three.

Railroads, industries, some small businesses and hospitals are receiving the coal output. The Red army receives some for heating billets and offices. Power is also sold by the company.

The enterprises employ 5,350 persons, of whom 2,150 are miners. They work a six day, 48 hour week and are 100 per cent unionized.

In the denazification program 89 men were taken from executive jobs and some were sent into the mines. Some nominal party members were permitted to keep their jobs, while the more active Nazis among the miners were fired.

Rudert said there was no decision yet on disposition of company profits, but it may be decided in March at the end of the fiscal year whether profits will go to the government or to the known shareholders.

Hitler Definitely Perished, British Officer Maintains

By Michael Goldsmith

HERFORD, Germany, Dec. 31. (AP)—A British intelligence officer said today there could be no possible doubt that Adolf Hitler perished with his bride of 36 hours in a bunker under the bomb-blasted Reichs-Chancellery.

Positive Authenticity

The officer, who disclosed the full story of how Hitler's last documents were tracked down through the combined efforts of British and American intelligence agents, said the authenticity of the papers could not be questioned.

(A dispatch from the U. S. Third Army Headquarters at Bad Tolez said American intelligence officers there who had spent months running down every possible thread of evidence also were convinced that Hitler had died with his wife).

The documents themselves—Hitler's personal and political testaments and his marriage contract with Eva Braun—and exhaustive questioning of all persons now in British hands who were known to have witnessed the fuehrer's last hours, have disclosed a full sequence of events which the officer said is accepted as the true version of Hitler's death.

On the basis of accumulated evidence concerning events of the Third Reich's last days, Hitler and Eva Braun died in the bunker about 3 p. m. on the afternoon on April 30, after about 36 hours of married life.

Three Sets Made

Three complete sets of Hitler's documents were made. Two of the sets and all three of the trusted messengers who fled from the battered Reichschancellery with the papers now are in Allied hands, the British officer said.

One set of the documents still is missing, and the captured messenger to whom it was entrusted thus far has refused to disclose its hiding place. If it is recovered, the officer said, it will doubtless prove to be a facsimile.

The messengers now in Allied hands are Heinz Lorenz, former member of the propaganda ministry, whose set had the only copy of an appendix to Hitler's will, written by Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels; Willi Johannmeier, a Germany army major attached to Hitler's personal staff, and Friederich Wilhelm Paustin, alias Wilhelm Zander, identified as the trusted adjutant of missing Deputy Fuehrer Martin Bormann.

The officer disclosed details of how the three were captured after fleeing Hitler's hideout in the garden of the Chancellery on April 29. This is the story:

Reichschancellery Surrounded

On the night of April 27 the Reichschancellery was completely surrounded by Red army troops. All physical contact with German forces was cut off for the group in the bunker, and Hitler decided the end was near.

The fuehrer ordered Walter Wagner, a Berlin municipal official, to perform the ceremony of marriage, and Hitler is believed to have been wed to Eva on the morning of April 29, and not on April 30, as previously testified by a captured German woman flier, Capt. Hanna Reitsch.

Immediately after the marriage ceremony, performed to a thunderous accompaniment of Russian bombs and shells, Hitler dictated his personal and political testaments to his secretary.

Shortly after 10 a. m. the three trusted messengers were dispatched with their instructions. Telegrams were sent informing Doenitz to expect the documents and the messages were the first indication obtained by the British that the testaments existed.

The messengers had made their way from the bunker along the Charlottenburger Chaussee, through Russian lines and the suburb of Gruenewald to Lake Wansee in western Berlin. They crossed the lake by boat and reached German lines on the opposite bank.

According to their own testimony, they continued their journey into Allied held territory, traveling by night and hiding by day. Eventually they reached the Hanover area, and separated.

Then they realized German resistance had collapsed, and they fled to their own homes. Early this month British officers arrested a man possessing false papers and a search produced the first complete set of documents, which were sewn into the padding in his coat. This man, Lorenz, disclosed the whole story under exhaustive questioning.

BRITISH REVEAL FULL STORY OF HITLER'S WILL Say Three Messengers Got Out With Copies on Day Before Fuehrer Died.

FIRST WAS CAUGHT RECENTLY

Testament Causes Furor Among War Crime Defendants on Trial at Nuernberg

Herford, Germany, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—The full story of the escape of three messengers from Adolf Hitler's Berlin Chancellory with his last testaments was told today by a British Intelligence officer, who said that there was now no possible doubt but that the Nazi Fuehrer died in his battered bunker.

Exhaustive questioning of all captured persons known to have witnessed Hitler's last hours has disclosed the full sequence of events, which British Intelligence now accepts as the true version of Hitler's death, the officers said. It is now accepted that Hitler died at about 3 P. M. on April 30, after some thirty-six hours of married life with his ex-mistress, Evan Braun. The messengers, carrying triplicate copies of Hitler's will, had fled the day before.

When the Russians completely surrounded the bunker and all physical contact with German forces was severed, Hitler decided the end was in sight.

Ceremony At 3 A.M.

The Führer then ordered Walter Wagner, a Berlin municipal official, to solemnize his marriage to the Braun woman. The British officer said the ceremony was believed to have taken place at 3 A.M. on April 29.

Previously, the British officer said the wedding was believed to have occurred on April 30, on the basis of testimony of a woman test pilot, Hanna Reitsch.

He said it is now known that the Reitsch woman and Gen. Ritter von Greim—successor to Hermann Goering as head of the German Air Force—flew from the Charlottenburger Chaussee in the early hours of April 29, and not on April 30 as had been stated previously.

Testaments Dictated

Immediately after the marriage, the officer said, Hitler dictated his personal and political testaments to his secretary. Shortly after 10 A.M., three reliable messengers sent from the bunker with instructions to take one triplicate copy of each document to Grand Admiral Karl Doenitz in Flensburg and to Col. Gen. Ferdinand Schoener, who then was still fighting in Prague. Hitler had designated Doenitbz President of Germany and named Schoener Supreme Commander of the Army.

A third and spare copy was intended for preservation for posterity.

Telegrams were sent to Doenitz informing him of the documents and the officer said these messages were the first indications that British Intelligence found indicating the existence of the Hitler testaments.

Never Arrived

The messengers, however, never reached Flensburg or [illegible]

Until early this month, no trace had been found of any of them, despite intensive search in the British and American occupation zones.

All the messengers now are in American and British hands. They are Heinz Lorenz, Willi Johannmeier and Friedrich Wilhelm Paustin, also known as Wilhelm Zander.

Goebbels's Appendix

Lorenz was a member of the Propaganda Ministry and his set of locuments was the only one containing the appendix by Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, in which the Propaganda Minister declared he would defy Hitler's order to leave Berlin so that he could die with the Führer in the bunker.

Johannmeier was an army major attached to Hitler's personal staff. Paustin was Martin Bormann's aide de camp.

This month the British arrested a man in the British occupation zone for being in possession of false papers. When the suspect was searched, a complete set of documents was found sewn into the shoulder padding of his coat.

The man was identified as Lorenz. After exhaustive questioning, he disclosed the entire story.

Refuses To Talk

On December 20, Johannmeier was arrested as Iserlohn in the Ruhr. He has thus far refused to give up his set of documents or disclose their hiding place.

On information obtained from members of Paustin's family, British intelligence officers went to the United States 3d Army district in Bavaria, and with United States intelligence traced Paustin to a cottage near the Austro-German frontier, where he was living under the name of Zander with his mistress, who was formerly Bormann's secretary.

Accounts of the messengers' escape were told in almost identical details by Lorenz and Paustin, when questioned separately.

Johannmeier and Lorenz are being held in the British zone and still are undergoing interrgation.

as war criminals to resume on Wednesday.

The sensational charges, written by the trapped Führer in the Berlin Chancellery bunker on the eve of his suicide with his mistress-bride, Eva Braun, were learned by the prisoners during a busy morning filled with conferences with their lawyers.

No Surprise To Goering

To Goering, Hitler's condemnation came as no surprise for the SS and SA had arrested him in Berchtesgaden on April 23 while he was expecting to become the new German Führer. The ousted Reichsmarshal had not suspected, however, the full extent to which Himmler, Gestapo chief who committed suicide, also had slipped from Hitler's favor.

Virtually all the other prisoners were reported surprised at the language used in the will in actions against the two Nazis, who next to Hitler had wielded the most power:

"Altogether from their disloyalty to me, Goering and Himmler have brought irreparable shame on the country and the whole nation by secretly negotiating with the enemy without my knowledge and against my will and also by illegally attempting to seize control of the state."

A Doubtful Honor

Arthur Seyss-Inquart, named in the will as Joachim von Ribbentrop's successor as foreign minister, was understood not to have known before of such an appointment. He was reported to have received the tardy word of this dubious honor today with his usual phlegmatic calm.

Ribbentrop was said to have hid whatever disappointment he may have felt at learning the will ignored him completely. He has described himself as "the last foreign minister of defeated Germany."

Ernst Kaltenbrunner and Grand Admiral Erich Raeder still were unaware of the will. Kaltenbrunner is under treatment at the United States army hospital for cranial hemorrhage which may require another month of convalescence. Raeder, whose health has been poor, stayed in bed in his jail cell.

Hitler sought to picture himself as a martyr. He bequeathed the German people the Nazi creed of fierce loyalty to the state and hatred of the Jews.

"Plot" Against Goering

The better-informed prisoners seemed agreed that Goering had been the victim of plotting by Deputy Party Chief Martin Bormann and Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, who had worked to destroy Hitler's confidence in him. Bormann is being tried in absentia; Goebbels's body was found in the chancellery.

Himmler apparently had dealt more independently in peace negotiations with Count Folke Bernadotte, of Sweden, than had been believed. The prisoners gave this as the likeliest reason for Himmler's "disgrace."

Grand Admiral Doenitz appeared to be better informed than any of the prisoners over the contents of the Hitler document. He has explained that he was notified of his appointment as Reich President and supreme commander and, as such, started peace preliminaries on his own initiative.

Hitler's Last Will Throws High Nazis Into Furor

Nuernberg, Dec. 31 (AP)—Adolf Hitler's last will, calling Hermann Goering and Heinrich Himmler traitors, created furor today among the twenty arch Nazis waiting in the Nuernberg jail for their trials as war criminals to resume on Wednesday.

HITLER'S DEPUTY REPORTED CAUGHT

London, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—Reuters declared in a dispatch from Nuernberg today that Czecho-slovak newspapers report the arrest of Martin Bormann, Adolf Hitler's deputy Fuehrer. The report was not confirmed immediately.

The Czecho-slovak newspapers say that Bormann was seized in the British zone of Germany, Reuters asserted, adding, however, that the Allied security officers refuse to confirm or deny the report.

Later Reuters quoted a senior British Intelligence officer at Hartford, Germany, as saying that Bormann was believed to have been killed while attempting to escape from the Berlin Chancellory last spring. The dispatch added that the officer quoted was the one responsible, with American help, for tracking down Hitler's last testament.

Half Of Germans Okay U.S. Program

Frankfurt, Germany, Dec. 31 (AP). A recent military government poll showed 50 per cent of German civilians questioned were generally satisfied with the American de-Nazification program.

United States authorities said that 31 per cent, most of whom were persons in the upper social and economic groups, believed that the program was too harsh, and that it deprived Germany of specialists needed for reconstruction. Ten per cent said they felt de-Nazification was neither thorough nor sufficiently tough.

Hagenbeck Circus Comeback

HAMBURG, Germany, Dec. 31 (AP).—Among the cheeriest New Year's news for the German people was the announcement today by Lorenz Hagenbeck that he hopes to have his circus back on the road by April. The circus, with its seventy trained animals, was saved from possible destruction by performing in Sweden in 1944 when Allied air attacks were striking Germany.

France Recognizes Yugoslavia

PARIS, Dec. 31 (AP).—France officially recognized today the Republic of Yugoslavia, following similar action by the United States and Great Britain.

Verdun Honors Truman

VERDUN, France, Dec. 31 (AP)—The Municipal Council voted today to award the Medal of Verdun to President Truman as a member of the American 129th Artillery Regiment in the first World War.

HANG 2 NAZI GENERALS

Moscow, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—Two German generals and a non-commissioned officer were hanged in the public square in Bryansk four hours after a military tribunal had found them guilty of the mass torture and murder of Russian civilians and Red Army prisoners. They were Lieut.-Gen. Friedrich Gustav Bernhardt; Major-Gen. Adolf Hamman, the former commandant of Orel, Bryansk and Bo-bruisk; and Cpl. Martin Lemmler.

The atrocities occurred during the German occupation of Bryansk.

Cpl. Karl Theodor Stein, tried before the same tribunal, was sentenced to twenty years' imprisonment at hard labor.

ITALY REGAINS CONTROL OF NORTHERN REGIONS

ROME, Dec. 31—(AP) The Allies tonight handed back to Italy the administrative control of four northern regions, Piedmont, Venezia, Lombardy and Liguria.

The Mediterranean islands of Lambedusa, Pantelleria and Linosa as well as the urban areas of Livorno, Naples Pisa and Colle Salvetti simultaneously are restored to Italian jurisdiction, but the Allies hold on to the province of Udine and the Venezie Guilia territory, pending delineation of the Italian-Yugoslav border.

A decree appearing in today's Official Gazette formally reincorporated the territory while another validated the acts and decrees of Allied officials and the verdicts of tribunals since the reconquest of the area from the Germans.

Gangsters Seize Police Arms In Sicily

Palerma, Sicily, Dec. 31 (AP)—Bandits using hand grenades, dynamite, rifles and machine guns attacked a police outpost today at Monreale, overpowered and bound three guards after a gun battle and looted the place of arms.

It was the second such incident in Sicily over the week end. On Saturday night, a policeman was killed and four were wounded by attackers believed to be separationists who want to secede from Italy.

2 Priests Must Die For Slav 'Revolt'

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Dec. 31 (AP)—The newspaper Politika reported two days ago that a military court in Sarajevo sentenced two Catholic priests to death by hanging for having been prominent organizers of an illegal, anti-Government organization called "Crusaders."

The newspaper said it had been fully established that five priests and two nuns formed the highest governing body of the Crusader group in Sarajevo, and that the organization had been spreading rapidly in Bosnia and Herzegovina and parts of Croatia.

Testimony At Trial

Politika said the trial, which lasted several days, established that the priests, Ivan Tchendric and Franjo Shlafhauser, had conducted a well-planned propaganda campaign through the countryside and had aided illegal forces, while planning to attack military barracks in various parts of Bosnia.

Nineteen other defendants were sentenced to forced labor, the newspaper said, with terms ranging up to twenty years. Three others escaped prison sentences but all were deprived of civil rights and had their property confiscated.

Repatriation of Poles Up to 10,000 Per Day

WARSAW, Poland—(AP) The repatriation of an estimated four million Poles from western and eastern Europe is being stepped up to more than 10,000 per day.

Wladyslaw Wolski, vice minister of public administration, reported 4,500 Poles are entering Poland at Szczecin (Stettin) from Germany daily. Six thousand Poles are passing into their homeland from American zones of occupation. Repatriations also are being speeded from Soviet Russia.

Return of Poles to their homeland originally started on the basis of 3,000 daily. More than 200,000 have entered southern Poland in the last three months.

'NUTS!' IS MADE MOTTO OF BASTOGNE

Brussels, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—The coat of arms of the war-torn Belgian town of Bastogne will bear the word "Nuts," the caustic reply given the Germans by the American Major-Gen. Anthony C. McAuliffe when asked to surrender during the Battle of the Bulge last winter.

A year ago yesterday, Gen. Patton's Third Army tanks broke through the German lines around Bastogne, relieving its defenders. Leo Mundeleer, the Belgian Minister of War, decorated the town yesterday with the Croix de Guerre.

BRANN'S FUNERAL HELD

American General to Be Buried in Army Grave in Italy

VIENNA, Dec. 31 (AP)—Impressive funeral services for Major Gen. Donald W. Brann of San Antonio, Tex., deputy commander of American forces in Austria, were held today in a small, flower-banker chapel. Ranking Russian, British, French and American officers and officials of the Austrian Government attended.

Gen. Mark W. Clark, commanding the American forces in Austria, announced the appointment of Brig. Gen. Ralph Tait, Chief of Staff of American forces in Austria, as General Brann's successor.

General Clark headed the American mourners. He and his staff occupied the front row at the rites, after which General Brann's body was placed on General Clark's special train en route to burial in an American military cemetery at Castelfiorentino, Italy.

U. S. Ships Crash at Gibraltar

GIBRALTAR, Dec. 31 (AP).—The American ships Jesse Cottrell and R. F. Peckham collided today in theh Mediterranean, eight miles east of here. The Jesse Cottrell, bound from Delaware Capes to Marseille, was the more seriously damaged, but no casualties were reported. The R. F. Peckham was en route from Palermo to Hampton Roads.

British Comb Suspects In Jerusalem Assaults

JERUSALEM, Dec. 31—(AP)—British authorities detained 59 persons for further questioning today as a combined police and military search through the Jewish town of Ramat Gan near Tel Aviv was concluded.

Officials said a total of 1,500 persons were questioned before a special curfew was lifted in Ramat Gan. Authorities said the search through the town was conducted because participants in Thursday night's Palestinian bombings were suspected of hiding there. Ten persons were killed in the attack on police headquarters in Jerusalem and other attacks in Tel Aviv.

A curfew still was in effect in Jerusalem where 2,000 persons were rounded up Friday for questioning.

Terrorists Hunted In Jerusalem

Jerusalem, Dec. 31 (AP)—British troops today sealed off a western section of Jerusalem with armored cars and barbed wire and searched the area for terrorists wanted in last Thursday's outbreak of violence in which ten persons were killed and twelve injured.

The city was quiet during the night, but police reported that several persons were detained for breaking the curfew regulation, in effect in the Jewish quarters until today.

IRAN UNINFORMED

Tehran, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—Premier Ibrahim Hakimi said today that it was "regreetable" that Iran had not been permitted to have a representative at the recent conference of Foreign Ministers in Moscow.

Pointing out that Britain and Russia were bound by treaty to consult Iran on all matters affecting the nation's interests, Hakimi said his Government had not as yet received any communication regarding the Moscow conference, at which Britain's Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin has said Iranian affairs were discussed.

Hakimi also announced the resignation of Husein Ali Hedayat, Minister without Portfolio, who is regarded as strongly pro-British. The Premier said Hedayat would be named Ambassador to Afghanistan.

Indonesian Police Force Detained for Questioning

British Suspect Some of 743 of Part in Kidnapings

BATAVIA, Dec. 31 (AP).—The British said today they were holding the entire force of 743 Indonesian police in Batavia for questioning, as scattered incidents of continued warfare were reported.

The Indonesian police, ousted Saturday when British troops seized all police stations in the Java capital were detained in the central police station. Some are suspected by the British of collaborating with Indonesians responsible for recent kidnapings.

At Buitzenborg, south of Batavia and source of the capital's water supply, snipers today killed two Indian soldiers and wounded two Dutch internees. Indonesians shelled the airfield at Semarang, mid-Java port city, and fired upon an incoming airplane, which escaped damage.

Batavia's Indonese Police Being Held

Batavia, Dec. 31 (AP)—The British announced today they were holding for questioning all 743 members of the Indonesian police force of Batavia, ousted Saturday when British troops seized police stations here.

The Indonesians, some of whom are suspected by the British of collaborating in recent kidnappings, are being held at the Central Police Station.

Meanwhile, 2,000 Dutch marines, trained and equipped in the United States, were preparing to disembark from a ship which arrived off Batavia yesterday. A British announcement said the marines would disembark within a few days.

Replacing Amboinese

Indonesian leaders have protested against the importing of additional Dutch forces into troubled Java, but agreed some time ago, in this particular case, to allow the marines to be brought in to replace Amboinese natives serving in the Dutch Army, said Premier Sutan Sjahrir of the unrecognized Indonesian republic.

Intermittent fighting continued at Buitenzorg, where Indonesian snipers killed two British Indian soldiers and wounded two Dutch internees, and at Semarang, where the natives shelled an airfield.

Aneta, official Dutch news agency, said that 55 Indonesians suspected of terrorist activity were arrested in Batavia today, bringing to about 250 the number of persons arrested within the last several days.

Nationalists Propose Marshall As Arbiter

Chiang Invites Reds To Join His Regime On Condition They Give Up Armies.

By Spencer Moosa

CHUNGKING, Dec. 31. (AP)—The Chinese government proposed today that Gen. George C. Marshall serve as mediator for a truce between the Communist faction, which Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek invited to join his regime, provided it would relinquish its independent armies.

Calls For Unity Session

Chiang also called for Jan. 10 a two-week session of the political consultative council as part of the new bid to end this country's long, embittered civil strife.

The three-point government plan, delivered in writing to the Communist leaders now here, provided that each side immediately cease hostilities; that one representative from each side confer with the special American envoy, General Marshall, on procedures for ending hostilities and opening communications; and that impartial military observers be chosen to see that the peace is kept.

Foreign quarters here said that Americans, although not directly named, might make up this observer mission.

The main difference between the government offer and a Communist truce proposal of Dec. 27, to which it was a reply, lay in the suggestion that Marshall take a leading role.

The Communists had suggested that both sides unconditionally cease hostilities, that all problems be solved peacefully, and that a representative group send observers to the different fronts.

Would Halt Jap Roundup

Government sources already had pointed out that simply to rest on their arms would halt the roundup of Japanese troops and would hamper railway operations and the assumption by the government of control in Manchuria.

Today's program carefully provided that an acceptable truce must not interfere with surrender and repatriation of Japanese or with railways.

What the Communists thought about it was not yet known, as Gen. Chou En-Lai and other Communist leaders who are now here had gone to a series of New Year's Eve parties and were unavailable when the government proposal was announced.

Foreign quarters, however, said there was nothing in the proposal to which the Communists could raise reasonable objections and that the government must have obtained General Marshall's approval beforehand.

Marshall also was unavailable for personal comment, as he was celebrating his 65th birthday anniversary at a party given by the generalissimo at the presidential villa outside Chungking. During the day, however, Marshall was known to have conferred with his military advisors.

Prior to the party, the generalissimo, in his annual New Year's message to the people, said "We will use every possible peaceful means to solve internal conflicts."

Without naming the Communists, Chiang said that the government was prepared to enlarge the national assembly "so that leading personages of society and representatives of other political parties may also take part in its deliberations." He added that he was prepared also to have such persons participate "either in the policy-making councils or the executive branches" of his government.

The one condition to this offer, Chiang said, was that participants in the government "must not maintain autonomous armies to serve as instruments for forcible seizure of power."

Chiang stressed this point, saying: "There is nothing in matters of state that we cannot concede and discuss with an open mind, but authority to issue military and administrative orders must be unified. All troops must serve the state. The carving up of spheres of influence, the destruction of communications and obstruction of the work of returning to normalcy must be avoided."

Rival government, he said, would "create the gravest danger" and even threaten "total extinction" of the nation.

"To have the government broaden its basis and to have all troops under command of the state and obey orders of the government is what every really patriotic individual should advocate."

Chiang's Regime Urges Marshall As Arbiter

Chungking, Dec. 31 (AP) — The Chinese Central Government countered a Communist plan for a truce today by proposing that Gen. George C. Marshall act as arbiter and that a military inspection mission, possibly composed of Americans, serve as impartial observers to see that any armistice was obeyed.

The immediate reaction in foreign quarters here was that there was nothing in the Government offer to which the Communists could validly object and that General Marshall's approval must have been obtained before the suggestion was made for ending the civil conflict.

Reds Invited Into Government

The move to bring the American special envoy into the peace picture came as Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek made an outright bid to the Communists to join a government that would unify China and called a two-week meeting of the Political Consultative Council to begin January 10.

There was no immediate Communist reaction, as all leaders of the Communist delegation here were out attending a New Year's Eve party.

The three-point government plan was submitted in writing to the Communists.

Wants Concrete Understanding

As translated by the Ministry of Information, it was:

"Cessation of hostilities in the country has been the consistent wish of the National Government. In order to attain this objective it is necesary for both sides to come to a concrete understanding on procedures to be followed. Otherwise the proposal to cease hostilities cannot be effectively carried out. For this reason it is proposed:

"1. That all hostilities within the country shall cease and railway communications shall be restored;

"2. That, inasmuch as hostilities and obstructions to communications affect the discharge of China's obligations toward our allies in the acceptance of the Japanese surrender and repatriation of enemy prisoners of war, the Government and Chinese Communist party shall each appoint a representative to confer forthwith with General of the Army Marshall on the procedure to be adopted in all matters pertaining to cessation of hostilities and restoration of railway communications for submission to the Government for action;

Impartial-Observer Suggestion

"3. That the standing committee of the People's Political Council shall elect five impartial observers forming a military inspection mission to inspect the military and communications situation in areas of conflict and to look into other matters that have to do with restoration of peace to the country. The mission shall make factual reports on the situation and release such reports for publication. The military inspection mission shall invite the Political Consultative Council to send impartial observers to participate on the mission when the council is convened."

While the makeup of this group was not specified, it was regarded here as entailing the possibility that Americans would be the observers.

Shortly before the announcement that a plan had been submitted to the Communists in writing, the Generalissimo went on the air.

In a New Year's message to the Chinese people, he announced that the Government was ready to invite leaders of other political parties "to take part in the Government, either in the policy-making councils or the executive branches."

They would be welcomed into the Government, he said, before the National Assembly meets May 5 to consider a new constitution.

States One Condition

The only condition set on this arrangement by the Generalissimo was that those other representatives "must not maintain autonomous armies to serve as instruments for forcible seizure of power."

The Communists have been maintaining a separate army in North China and likewise have been holding out for a later meeting of the Assembly, claiming that otherwise it would be packed for the Kuomintang, or National party.

Assembly Increase Planned

The Generalissimo asserted, however, that the Government was prepared to increase the number of the Assembly "so that leading personages" of "other political parties may also take part."

"We will use every possible peaceful means to solve internal conflicts," he said in a radio address.

"Internally, I wish to maintain national unity. Externally, I wish to achieve world peace. I have devoted everything that I am to the country and I have banished all thoughts of life or death and success or failure. . . . Considerations of personal glory and gain are not in my thoughts."

Says Trouble Increasing

Chiang added that, with the victorious end of the war, the Chinese should celebrate the New Year's arrival with justified pride, "but as a matter of fact our country is still facing a rather difficult situation. Though foreign aggression has been repelled, internal trouble is becoming ever more serious."

He said the position of honor which the nation attained by more than eight years of bloodshed and sacrifice was being jeopardized by recent events.

Needed For Normalcy

Stressing that the first prerequisites to return to normalcy were peace and stability, he declared:

"These are not only needed by the Chinese nation—they are also the main conditions upon which world security depends. . . .

"But over and above everything else we must arrive at a common understanding vie-a-vise national problems . . .

"We must lose no time to consolidate our national unity and achieve constitutional democracy so as to put the finishing touches to national reconstruction"

Chiang's Son Greets Stalin

MOSCOW, Dec. 31 (AP).—Chiang Ching-kuo, elder son and personal representative of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, brought to Premier Stalin a personal message and greetings from the Chinese leader, it was reported in Chinese circles here today.

The man, who has been representing the Chinese central government in Manchuria, talked with Stalin last night. Informed sources said Chiang Ching-kuo's mission was concerned with Manchurian and other topics of mutual Chinese-Russian interest. It was said he probably would hold more talks with the Russians before ending his stay, which may last a week or longer.

Chiang's Son Meets Stalin.

Moscow, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—Discussions continued today between Russian officials and Chiang Chiwg-Kuo, elder son and personal representative of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, who arrived here yesterday. The Chinese envoy conferred last night with Premier Stalin, in a meeting also attended by Foreign Commissar V. M. Molotov and Chinese Ambassador Foo Peng Sheung.

U. S. to Deactivate Air Group in China

Shanghai, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—The China Air Service Command, which played an important role in supplying and servicing American aircraft in China, will be deactivated at midnight. Personnel will be sent home or transferred to other air units. Its biggest job was flying Air Force supplies over the Hump to scattered bases in China.

New Year Turkey For GI's In Shanghai

Shanghai, Dec. 31 (AP)—United States Army personnel in this area went without turkey on Christmas, but enough is available to pile each man's plate with one pound for New Year's Day feasts.

Quartermasters, unable to find turkeys in China at fair prices, sent a rush call to Washington. Some birds were flown in and the Navy supplied the balance from refrigerator ships.

The New Year's Eve curfew was extended to 2 A.M. to give Americans a couple more hours for celebration in this night-spot-studded city.

SENATE INVESTIGATORS ARRIVE AT HONOLULU

HONOLULU, Dec. 31—(AP) Members of the Senate Mead committee arrived here today on the first leg of a world tour to investigate military bases and surpluses.

The group included Senators James Tunnel (D) Delaware and William Knowland (R) California. Tunnel announced a public hearing for this afternoon on matters pertaining to surplus property, post-war Army and Navy equipment requirements and permanent bases.

The committee will look into reports that useable military supplies and equipment have been destroyed and inquire into the Navy's program for improving its investigative and disciplinary agencies.

First Indo-China Cargo Of Rubber Off for U. S.

SAIGON, Indo-China, Dec. 31 (AP).—Lack of labor and lighterage is delaying the shipment of 113,000 tons of rubber to the United States, but the first cargo from Indo-China left for America last week.

The Isthmian ship Red Rover, which left with the first cargo, lay here for six weeks before completing the loadings of its 8,000 tons, but shipping officials say gradual improvement of labor and lighterage conditions may permit realization soon of the goal of 16,000 tons that has been set for monthly shipments to the United States. The American Liberty ship Mary A. Livermore, the second United States-bound cargo ship, is here ready to be loaded with 8,000 tons. Of the total of 170,000 tons of rubber available here, the United States has been allotted two-thirds and France the remainder.

U. S. AIDS BRITAIN, INDIA CHARGES

UDAIPUR, India, Dec. 31—(AP) Jawaharlal Nehru, in an address prepared for delivery at the All-India States Peoples conference, declared today that the United States is "underwriting the British empire" in a way "fraught with the gravest consequences to all concerned."

Nehru, former president of the Indian National Congress, asserted that [illegible] and Russia are struggling for the dominant world position, and added that the United States, "anxious to have others line up with them, appears to favor continuation in some form of the British empire."

"Recent developments would seem to indicate that America is underwriting this empire," Nehru continued, "possibly with suitable minor changes. That is a big decision to take, fraught with the gravest consequences for all concerned. For it is certain x x x that the countries of Asia will not willingly submit to any empire or any domination and will revolt against it.

"It will be a continuing revolt of millions with a passion behind it which even the atom bomb will not suppress. And from that revolt will develop that terrible thing, the [illegible]d world war"

Nehru declared that Indian Nationalists have grown strong and [illegible]rned that the princes of the [illegible]tes would not be permitted to [illegible] "British fifth Columns" against [illegible]ationalism.

He attack British intervention in Indonesia and French Indo-China, declaring there is a "perilous resemblance between these wars of intervention carried on by Britain and that other war of intervention which Fascist Italy and Nazi Germany waged in Spain and which was the prelude to World War Two.

"We have watched British intervention there with growing anger, shame and helplessness that Indian troops should thus be used for doing Britain's dirty work against our friends who are fighting the same fight as we."

INDIA'S CHANCE

NEW DELHI, India, (AP)—Indian manufacturers may capture the post-war trade in cheap ready-made mosquito nets which Japan supplied in thousands of bales before the war.

HITLER RAINED OUT

JOHANNESBURG, (AP)—Basil Grey, a 45-year-old Londoner is carrying out a spiritualist revival among the African natives. Clad only in a loin cloth and living on goats' milk and roast snakes, he claims a big following among the natives of East Africa. He has now come down to Swaziland to purge it of the spirit of Hitler which, he claims, has been causing the recent severe drought. His reputation soared when heavy rains fell.

MacArthur Aides Fear A Costly Loss Of Face

Tokyo, Dec. 31 (AP)—Sources close to General MacArthur reported today that the Big Three's new control plan for Japan had already caused confusion among the Japanese and might cause the General to lose face in a country where face is all-important.

The control plan, which MacArthur bluntly stated yesterday had been made over his protest and behind his back, may result in a slackening of Japanese efforts to carry out orders already issued—and which they had accepted only grudgingly—the sources said.

MacArthur's Statement

MacArthur's 150-word statement said "the statement attributed to the Far Eastern Commission [press] officer [Thomas Blake, in Washington] that I 'did not object to the new Japan control plan before it was approved at Moscow' is incorrect. On October 31 my final disagreement was contained in my radio to the chief of staff for the Secretary of State, advising that the terms 'in my opinion are not acceptable.' Since that time my views have not been sought."

The General also denied that he had been consulted during the Moscow conferences. However, he concluded that "the issues involved are too vital for the future of the world to have them bog down. . . . It is my full purpose to see it [the plan] through."

The New Plan

The Moscow conference created a four-power council of the United States, Britain, China and Russia to advise MacArthur and review his actions, and set up an eleven-nation commission to fix policies concerning Japan. The council has power to veto his policies. Although the General did not so state, it was believed here that he objected principally to the veto power.

Although grudgingly, the Japanese have gone along with MacArthur as occupation boss. Now they are asking whether his past directives may be subject to review and whether they will be required to make a new start under the council setup.

The Matter Of "Face"

Ever since occupation troops landed, MacArthur alone has issued orders to Emperor Hirohito and to his Cabinet. It was no secret that he received his orders from the Allied joint chiefs of staff, but the Japanese knew that in Tokyo he, as supreme commander for the Allied powers, was their sole source of authority. That was sufficient to give him face.

Should the Nipponese get the impression that his power has been reduced, informed sources say he would lose face.

MacArthur Suspends 3 Jap School Courses

Tokyo, Dec. 31 (AP)—General MacArthur today ordered the suspension of three Japanese school courses utilized most effectively for spreading militaristic ultra-nationalism and the confiscation of all textbooks and teachers manuals used for them.

The order, which affects all schools in Japan, implemented recent abolition of state Shinto. It specified that Japanese history, geography and morals—roughly equivalent to American classes in ethics—will be suspended until headquarters approves their resumption.

Renovation Held Essential

Brig. Gen. Ken R. Dyke, head of MacArthur's information and education section, said these courses were so thoroughly loaded with nationalistic teachings that complete renovation is essential. He said the order was intended as "an implementation directive," providing details for previous, generalized renovation instructions.

The Education Ministry was instructed to prepare substitute courses and to submit plans for writing new textbooks covering the suspended subjects. These temporary books will be ready for the spring school term.

To Destroy Books

Confiscated textbooks will be destroyed. Pulp from them will be used for printing new books from which objectionable teachings will be eliminated.

The order also suspended the still-effective wartime Japanese laws and regulations on methods of teaching these subjects.

The suspended course in morals heavily emphasized Shinto concepts of the Emperor's divinity, Japan's "divine mission" and similar teachings upon which militarists depended for indoctrination.

Japanese history and geography long have been taught against a background of Japan's imperialistic might and the "necessity" of her leadership in East Asia.

43 Of 50 Objectionable

A headquarters announcement said occupation officials had studied 50 textbooks and manuals. Forty-three were "extensively filled with objectionable matter, two have limited sections of undesirable material, and five are relatively innocuous, dealing for the most part with ancient history."

On October 20, MacArthur had abolished military instruction in schools.

Substitute Courses

Dyke said substitute courses would include current events, international history and other subjects relating to world social, political and economic affairs.

A Japanese request to remove price and distribution controls over eleven groups of sundry essential items was denied today by General MacArthur. Headquarters said the effect would be inflationary and would result in channeling such goods into the hands of consumers "whose incomes greatly exceed the national level."

Cuts Shuttle Service.

Tokyo, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—A material reduction in the number of ships (LSTS) which have been shuttling between China, Sasebo and Korea was announced today at Allied Headquarters. This materially will reduce the number of Koreans who can be loaded at Sasebo for Korea. The action was taken to discourage Koreans congesting Sasebo for repatriation.

JAPS MAY FLY FLAG NEW YEAR'S DAY

Tokyo, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—The Japanese, by permission of Gen. MacArthur, will be allowed to fly the rising sun flag from dawn New Year's Day, the Japanese reported today. They also will be permitted to fly their flag January 3 and 5.

U.S. Officer Describes Beating By Jap On Trial

Yokohama, Dec. 31 (AP)—The ranking American officer imprisoned by the Japanese at Omuta prison camp described through an affidavit today how he was beaten by the camp commander, now on trial for alleged killings and atrocities inflicted on Allied soldiers.

Capt. Wayne C. Liles, of Clinton, Okla., said in the affidavit he and another officer were struck by the defendant, Lieut. Ohotaro Furushima, known to the prisoners as "Harry Onion." The Japanese officer held them responsible for an alleged escape attempt by Private James S. Mann, of Los Angeles, who later died in the guardhouse.

Starved To Death

After describing a merciless beating of Mann, who he said later starved to death after fourteen days in the guardhouse, Liles declared he and another officer were summoned by Furushima.

"He struck me across the face with a belt and then took a piece of sole leather and struck me repeatedly in the face and head," said Liles's affidavit.

Included in the testimony introduced at Furushima's war-crimes trial before a United States military commission was the medical report of a Captain Christison, British army doctor in the camp, who signed a death certificate saying Mann died in a cell August 6, 1945—three weeks before the surrender—from "starvation and maltreatment."

The prosecution announced a surprise Japanese eyewitness will be placed on the stand Wednesday when the trial of Lieut. Kel Yuri, another defendant, is resumed. Yuri also is charged with responsibility for beatings and the deaths of two American soldiers. His trial has been in recess since Saturday awaiting radioed affidavits of two American officers now in the United States.

The surprise witness scheduled for Wednesday "is able to identify the accused," said Major Joshua V. Davidow, of the prosecution staff.

Jap Said to Have Laughed As Yank Captive Lost Mind

Yokohama, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—A charge that the Japanese commander of Kamioka Prison Camp stood laughing while an American private mercilessly was beaten until he lost his sanity was made at the Japanese officer's war crimes trial today.

That testimony against Lieut. Ohotaro Furushima was given in an affidavit by Lieut. Gerard Herman Theunissen of Java, a Dutch officer. He said he witnessed the brutal beating of Pfc. Robert L. Robinson.

Robinson "was clubbed senseless for smuggling in food. He was revived each time and the treatment continued," said the affidavit. "We were forced to watch as the Japanese staff stood around laughing. He was beaten so much he finally went out of his mind. Furushima looked out of his office window and laughed at the affair." After that, the Dutchman said, Robinson was subjected to the horrible water treatment.

Theunissen said he kept a record of all atrocities, names and dates. He declared that at one time Furushima told Americans in a hospital they would be better off dead, because they were useless as workers.

Describes Other Beating.

The Dutch officer also described in detail the beating of Pvt. James H. Smith, who died later.

"Smith was beaten on the body and face with sticks last winter. He too was revived each time he became unconscious. Finally, he was put naked into a cell despite the cold and doctors were not permitted to help him.

"Americans protested to the camp commander that if he were not given medical treatment he would die. It was refused. He died of tuberculosis and pneumonia."

Theunissen further stated that in the last few months before the surrender, the Japanese became very jittery because they knew the war was lost. As a result, they intensified the severity of their torture and became so indiscriminate that "tortures were a part of our daily routine. Many of our Dutch died from the severity of these beatings." He also charged that American prisoners were forced to stand nude in front of barracks while Japanese women spat on them and threw rocks.

MANILA BOMB DEATH

Manila, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—Smoldering enmities between Chinese Government supporters and Communists in Manila's large Chinese community blazed today when a bomb wrapped as a holiday package exploded in a downtown cafe, killing one person and injury two. Miss Lydia Mercado, 20 years old, Filipino cashier, was killed and N. G. Young, the owner, and Eleazar G. Visenio were wounded.

Young told the police he received a note a week ago which said, "You are a well-known Chinese Nationalist, but even so you still are employing many Communists. So we invite your attention to your duty. Remove all the Communists from your restaurant. Otherwise we shall be compelled to send you a clock in a couple of days."

A second note was delivered with the bomb by a small boy who disappeared. It said, "We understand that you received our first letter and understood all that we asked you. So as a Christmas present we are sending you the clock we promised you."

The police said that at least a dozen recent Chinese deaths here were attributable to political assassinations. The dead included prominent businessmen.

Roosevelt Named 'Man Of The Year'

Manila, Dec. 31 (AP) — The late president Roosevelt was named "Man of the Year" today in a poll conducted among soldiers in the western Pacific by the Army daily, the Pacifican.

Lieut. Col. C. H. Davidson, director of operations, port of Manila, was second. He contributed to breaking a jam in shipping here and expedited movement of men to the States.

Minesweeper Toll Is Still Unknown

Pearl Harbor, Dec. 31 (AP)—Toll of casualties aboard the minesweeper U.S.S. Minivet, which struck a mine Saturday off Kyushu Island, Japan, was unknown today as aircraft and surface ships searched for missing crewmen.

The initial announcement by navy headquarters reported "moderate loss of life and injury" among the crew of nine officers and 82 enlisted men on the 220-foot vessel which was engaged in minesweeping operations in Tsushima Strait, about 50 miles northwest of Kyushu.

Navy Tabulating Loss

Navy headquarters said exact tabulation of the dead and injured was not yet possible. Names of casualties will be announced by the Navy after next of kin are notified.

Commissioned last July, the Minivet was the first American minesweeper sunk by mines since V-J day. More than 20,000 American and Japanese mines have been cleared from 84,000 square miles since the end of the war.

The Minivet, a unit of Task Force 52, was supervising a sweep by Japanese vessels of a shallow mine field when it was ripped by the blast.

Koreans Riot Against Big-3 Plan

Seoul, Korea, Dec. 29 [AP—Delayed] — Korean hotheads fought in the streets of Seoul and threw rocks at American soldiers today in violent protest against the Big Three's five-year trusteeship plan for their country.

Rightist speakers addressed a mass meeting which demanded immediate recognition of a Korean provisional government, called for a strike of Koreans employed by the American Military Government, and branded opponents to immediate independence as traitors.

Curfew Imposed

In an attempt to forestall more demonstrations against the trusteeship program, announced after the Russian - British - American conference at Moscow last week, American military authorities who control southern Korea ordered an 8 P.M. curfew.

[There was no report of the Korean reaction to the program in northern Korea, where the Russians are in control.]

Huge posters on Seoul buildings charged the Communist party with responsibility for the trusteeship plan.

Hundreds of Koreans employed by the American Military Government walked off the job; a mob attacked the office of a newspaper which Rightists declared had Communist leanings; banks closed and policemen left their posts.

A Communist party spokesman, blaming the Rightists for the outbreaks, said all Leftist groups, including the Communists, had been advised to limit their actions to peaceful protests.

Lieut.-Gen. John R. Hodge, American Commander in southern Korea, explained to Korean newspaper men that the plan did not mean that trusteeship of their country would be imposed immediately.

Seizure of Axis Firms Ruled Illegal in Argentina

Judge Says Government Must Recompense Owners

BUENOS AIRES, Dec. 31 (AP).—The Argentine military government's decree authorizing the seizure of Axis firms in compliance with hemisphere security obligations was declared unconstitutional today by Federal Judge Eduardo Ortiz Basualdo.

In a decision which threatened to invalidate intervention by the government's vigilance board against approximately 150 Japanese and German firms, the court held that the government had no right to seize property of the German-controlled "Merck Argentina S. A.," and ruled that the government must not only restore the property but recompense the company for any damages incurred since its seizure last Sept. 6.

Legal circles quickly pointed out that a decision by one Argentine Federal judge is not necessarily binding upon others and that the Attorney General would undoubtedly appeal to the Supreme Court on behalf of the government.

Basualdo said the government's seizure action violated property guaranties of the national constition, adding that there had been no reasons of urgency or military necessity to justify the action.

TAMBORINI CHOSEN TO OPPOSE PERON

Buenos Aires, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—

30.24-32757

Dr. Jose P. Tamborini, physician and Radical party leader, has been chosen by the Democratic Union as its candidate to oppose Col. Juan Peron in the presidential election in February.

The Democratic Union represents a coalition of the Radical, Socialist, Communist and Progressive Democratic parties, which have adopted a platform calling for betterment of Argentina's relations with the other nations of the Western Hemisphere.

Tamborini, a former Senator and former Minister of the Interior, will be 60 years old on February 22, two days before the election. He was a leader in formation of the coalition front against Peron, who is now campaigning in the provinces in behalf of himself and his new Labor party. The Conservative party is expected to place a third candidate in the contest.

Diplomatic Speeders Safe In Argentina

Buenos Aires Dec. 31 (AP)—Heckled State Department officials who have to worry over county cops refusing diplomatic immunity to speeding diplomats would worry less if they had one of Argentina's laws.

It provides one to six year jail sentences for any public official who "commits hostile acts, thus putting the country in danger of a declaration of war, or who changes friendly relations between the Argentine government and any foreign government."

If the act actually results in war, the penalty is increased to three to fifteen years in prison.

Forrestal Lands at Balboa

BALBOA, C. Z., Dec. 31 (AP)—Secretary Forrestal arrived at Albrook Field today for a brief inspection of the Panama Canal. Traveling in his special Navy transport plane, he probably will return to the United States tomorrow by way of Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, and Miami.

Byrnes Says Big 3 Used M'Arthur Plan

Asserts Allied Control Program Was Tailored To Fit General's Suggestions—Admits Commander Not Kept Advised From Moscow.

By Tom Reedy

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31. (AP)—Secretary of State Byrnes said today General MacArthur had suggested some revisions in the Allied control plan for Japan, that it had been tailored to embody some of them, and adopted at Moscow without substantial change.

No Voice nI Making Policy

The supreme commander was not kept advised as the Moscow talks proceeded, Byrnes told a news conference. He added that MacArthur properly had no voice in making the policy he was to administer.

But the secretary said that the agreement finally reached there was substantially the plan he had taken to the foreign ministers meeting. And he said he had the impression, from Assistant Secretary of War John J. McCloy and Major Gen. Frank R. McCoy, chairman of the Far Eastern commission, that MacArthur felt the plan would work.

MacArthur had issued a statement in Tokyo yesterday saying that he disagreed with the cntrol plan of Oct. 31 and that he had not been consulted since then.

This statement followed one made to reporters in Washington by Thomas Blake, press officer of the Far Eastern commission and a State Department press attache, who said MacArthur did not object to the control plan. MacArthur denied Blake's statement, and Byrnes said it was not authorized by the department.

Byrnes told reporters he believes MacArthur will make the plan work—and well.

In High Good Humor

In high good humor at his first news conference since he returned from Moscow, Byrnes also reported:

1. That President Truman and Cordell Hull are pleased with the results of the meeting. Hull sent "heartiest congratulations on the splendid progress made."

2. Byrnes hopes the 21-nation peace conference held before the May 1 deadline so occupation armies can be brought home sooner and countries may get their econimies started toward normal.

. Generalissimo Stalin is in good health despite the various rumors of the past six months.

. The United States has carried out its pledge to have all American troops out of Iran by Jan. 1.

Molotov will not attend the United Natons meeting at London but Byrnes saw nothing significant in that. Molotov works hard and is tired, Byrnes explained, and Vice Commissar Andrei Vyshinsky will represent him.

Byrnes said the plan adopted for Allied control of Japan was essentially the one he took to Moscow. The only difference, he said, was that a MacArthur directive now can be reviewed if it applies to a fundamental change in the Japanese constitution, in the regime of control, a change in the goverment as a whole.

Byrnes said it never had been planned to make great changes in the constitution. He added that a change in the government as a whole would not hamstring the general because he still could appoint individual ministers one at a time if the entire Japanese cabinet should quit.

MacArthur knew about the plan except for these differences, Bynes said.

The secretary emphasized that the United States and MacArthur still maintain the key role in spite of the review provisions because this nation can veto another nation's demand for a review. Thus any directive that might be questioned would continue in force.

U. S. Holds Chief Responsibility

Byrnes found, he said, that there was no dissent among the Allies that the United States should have the primary responsibility in Japan.

As the conference broke up after an hour, Byrnes left to confer again with President Truman aboard his yacht.

Congressional reaction to the Moscow agreement remained divided following Byrnes' radio report to the country.

Senator Wheeler (D-Mont.) told reporters that "our representatives seem to have achieved a complete victory at the Moscow conference by agreeing to everything that Russia really wanted. It is further proof of what Will Rogers said: That we have never lost a war nor won a conference."

Wheeler said he thought MacArthur "is doing a great job, and regardless of what anyone says about it, the agreement does take authority away from him."

On the other hand, Senator Wiley (R-Wis.) told reporters that "Jimmy Byrnes helped to take the Moscow conference one step forward in the direction of eradicating suspicion and distrust between the Allies. Secretary Byrnes went a long way in reassuring his listeners that General MacArthur's statesmanship will still be the dominant factor in Japan."

And Senator McKellar (D-Tenn.) said in Memphis that he saw no "reason for criticism" in the Japanese control agreement. He added that "every American ought to be assured from what took place at Moscow we have made a very substantial step toward the final treaty bringing about the peace of the world."

Leaving MacArthur Alone In Rule Urged

Washington, Dec. 31 (AP)—Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D., Col.) said today that Gen. Douglas MacArthur "should be left alone" in control of Japan.

The Senator commented on MacArthur's statement that he had opposed the new four-power plan for control of Japan worked out at the Moscow conference of foreign secretaries.

"We should not change MacArthur in the middle of the stream," the Colorado Senator told a reporter. "He is doing a magnificent job and should be left alone."

LAST U. S. TROOPS MOVED FROM IRAN BYRNES REVEALS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31—(AP) Secretary of State Byrnes disclosed today that the last American troops had left Iran, fulfilling an American promise to evacuate that country by Jan. 1.

At a news conference, Byrnes said he had received information that American soldiers completed their evacuation either early last night or this morning. Russian and British troops are scheduled to be withdrawn by March 2.

Despite his inability to agree with the Russian and British foreign ministers on a plan to set up a tri-partite commission to investigate the revolt in northern Iran, Byrnes said he was very hopeful that since the three powers at one stage had nearly agreed on this that something along this line could be worked out later.

He revealed that the Russians were still insisting that the revolt in Azerbaijan province was a democratic movement for which they were not responsible.

The secretary also said that a three-power delegation composed of Mr. Averell Harriman, American ambassador to Russia; Sir Archibald Clark-Kerr, British ambassador to Moscow, and Soviet deputy commissar for foreign affairs, Andrei Vishinsky, had left for Buchrarest two days ago to help King Michael broaden the Romanian government and prepare for free elections.

Byrnes also disclosed that he did not intend to publish the report on the Balkan countries prepared by Mark Ethridge, publisher of The Louisville Courier Journal and Times, because he did not want to rehash arguments contained in it.

He said he had used the contents of the report in his discussion with Soviet officials and that as far as he was concerned it had served its purpose.

Rail Equipment Going To China

Washington, Dec. 31 (AP)—Twenty American locomotives and more than 3,400 freight cars will go to China from Iran under a sale of suruplus railroad equipment to the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration.

Thomas B. McCabe, foreign liquidation commissioner, announced the $5,958,916 sale today, stating that the equipment would be used to help rebuild China's economy and "provide vital transportation for UNRRA's relief program."

The equipment originally cost the United States $8,128,106. It did service delivering equipment to United States troops in the Persian Gulf Command and lend-lease supplies to Allied Forces.

42,800 Feet Of Rail

Included in the transaction were twenty oil-burning locomotives, 1,370 boxcars, 1,548 gondola-type cars, 499 flatcars, 24 twenty-ton cabooses, 8 ballast cars and 42,800 feet of 75-pound rail.

The goods are being loaded on ten freighters and one locomotive carrier at Khorramshahr, Iran, by local civilian contractors for shipment to China.

All the locomotives and half the other items are being sent to Shanghai, the rest to the Hong Kong-Kowloon area.

Wheeler Lashes U. S. Servility To Russia

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31 (AP)—Senator Wheeler said today the Moscow meeting of foreign ministers furnished additional support for the saying that this nation never lost a war nor won a conference.

The Montana Democrat, frequent critic of administration foreign policy, told a reporter that Secretary of State Byrnes had agreed to "everything that Russia really wanted."

"Of course," he added, "it was very fine of (Generalissimo) Stalin not to insist upon doing any of those things he was not going to do anyway."

In order to maintain "much talked of" unity among the Big Three, Wheeler said, the United States is giving Stalin everything he wants.

"Russia," Wheeler added, "does not want to have war with us and we don't want to have war with Russia—and Russia knows it, so she is taking advantage of that. Our other great ally, England, of course, would go to war with Russia, provided we would furnish the men and money."

Mexico Ratifies Bretton Woods

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31 (AP)—Acting on instructions from his Government, Mexico's Ambassador to the United States, Antonio Espinosa de los Monteros, signed the Bretton Woods monetary agreements today.

WARNING OF WAR WENT TO HAWAII, STARK DECLARES

Commanders Should Have Taken All-Out Security Measure, Probers Told.

SHORT DISAGREES

Army Chief Says His Information Indicated Slight Chance of Attack.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31—(AP) Pearl Harbor investigators heard Admiral Harold R. Stark contend today that Washington's warnings should have brought "all-out security measures" in Hawaii in 1941. They received also a directly contrary view from Lt. Gen. Walter C. Short, Army commander in the islands when the Japanese attacked.

With Stark, 1941 chief of Navy operations, in the witness chair, the Senate-House committee was gven a transcript of Gen. Short's testimony in 1944 to an Army inquiry board.

In brief, the Hawaiian Army commander's contention was that he never was given any reason to anticipate an air attack and, from information supplied by the Navy in Hawaii, had felt the chance was "very slight."

Sent Unarmed Planes

Short cited that the Army dispatched 12 unarmed four-engined bombers from the west coast on a flight to Hawaii the night of Dec. 6, 1941. Four were destroyed when they arrived in Hawaii next day during the attack.

That incident alone, Short declared, demonstrated that the War department's "estimate was exactly the same as mine, that they were not expecting an air attack

Short Said Kimmel's Staff Scouted Idea of Hawaii Raid

General's Testimony to Army Board Bared —Stark Asserts He Sent Kimmel Ample Warning of War on Nov. 27.

Washington, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—Congressional investigators learned today that Lieut.-Gen. Walter C. Short told an Army inquiry board in 1944 that Admiral Husband E. Kimmel's staff thought ten days before Pearl Harbor there was no chance of a surprise air attack on Hawaii.

Short and Kimmel were the Army and Navy commanders, respectfully, at Pearl Harbor when the Japanese struck the naval base December 7, 1941.

The Senate-House committee investigating the attack received a thick, bound volume of Short's testimony before the board as Admiral Harold R. Stark, former Chief of Naval Operations, testified at length about pre-war events. Stark told the committee that Kimmel was amply warned to be on guard before the Japanese attacked.

In the Army board testimony, taken here August 11, 1944, Short contended that largely because of information he had received from Navy sources, he felt late in 1941 that the chances of an air attack on Pearl Harbor were "very slight." He told the board about a conversation with Kimmel and his Pacific Fleet staff on November 27, 1941, the day he received a war alert message from Gen. George C. Marshall, the Army Chief of Staff.

Says McMorris Replied, 'None.'

In the course of the discussion, Short testified, Kimmel asked Capt. (now Vice-Admiral Charles H.) McMorris, his operation officer, what he thought the chances of a surprise attack on Honolulu were and Capt. McMorris replied, "None." Short said he had a supporting affidavit from a Col. Momsen, who was present, as to what was said at the conference.

Stark began his testimony when the investigating committee resumed its sessions after a Christmas holiday.

Stark was called to the stand amid indications that the committee will take still another recess—possibly as long as thirty days—to find new counsel. The legal staff which has aided in the inquiry since it began in mid-November has announced its intention to quit, possibly after the examination of Stark.

In a 25,000-word statement, the white-haired naval officer declared that in early 1941 he was "struggling" for approval from President Roosevelt to increase naval personnel. He reminded the committee, too, that Congress had not approved all his earliest pleas for an increase in the fleet.

At War in Atlantic.

He also said:

1. He wrote Admiral Thomas C. Hart, commander of the Far Eastern fleet, on November 7, 1941, that "the Navy is already in the war of the Atlantic."

At the time, Stark disclosed, warships of Canada—a country officially at war with Germany—were operating under direction of American Admiral Ernest J. King in convoying merchant ships to Iceland. American ships were engaged in the same convoying.

Stark's November 7 letter said:

"Events are moving rapidly toward a real showdown, both in the Atlantic and in the Pacific. The Navy is already in the war of the Atlantic, but the country doesn't seem to realize it. Apathy, to the point of open opposition, is evident in a considerable section of the press. Meanwhile, the Senate is dragging out the debate with reference to the arming of merchantmen.

At War on November 7, 1941.

"Whether the country knows it or not, we are at war."

He gave the committee another letter to Hart, dated September 22, in which he said:

"In a nutshell, we are now escorting convoys regularly from the United States to points in the Iceland area, where these convoys are picked up by the British and escorted to the British Isles. In addition to our own escort vessels, the Canadians are participating. Both forces (Canadian and our own) are operating under King's direction."

An American garrison was then in Iceland. Stark told Hart an American troop convoy en route got "seven SS (submarine) contacts."

"We should have gotten at least one SS which was attacked under favorable circumstances," he added.

Wrote to Kimmel.

On November 25, he wrote Kimmel that he had just talked with President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull and "neither would be surprised over a Japanese surprise attack." (Stark added in the letter that he himself did not give the possibility "the weight others do.").

On the point of his earlier efforts to strengthen the fleet, Stark cited that in November, 1939, he sought to bring its complement to 100 per cent. He said it was then only 89 per cent manned and that the Budget Bureau approved increasing man power only to 90 per cent.

In January, 1941, Stark observed, he asked for a 25 per cent increase in the Navy but Congress cut it to 11 per cent.

He said that he wrote Kimmel on February 10, 1941:

"I am struggling, and I use the word advisedly, every time I get in the White House, which is rather frequent, for additional men. It should not be necessary and while I have made the case just as obvious as I possibly could, the President just has his own ideas about men."

Aware of Pearl Harbor Danger.

Stark declared in summary:

"My correspondence with the (fleet) commanders-in-chief in the Pacific during the years 1940 and 1941 indicated that for almost two years before the attack on Pearl Harbor the lack of physical resources was fully known to all Navy officers in critical positions, and that the danger of war with Japan and a possible surprise attack on Pearl Harbor and methods of meeting it had been fully considered."

Both Kimmel and Lieut.-Gen. Walter C. Short, Army commander in Hawaii, took the position during previous Army and Navy inquiries that they were not kept fully informed of developments in United States-Japan relations.

on Honolulu x x x."

Stark's view, on the other hand, was that he sent an "unequivocal war warning" to Admiral Husband E. Kimmel, Pacific commander, on Nov. 24 directing that he "execute an appropriate defensive deployment."

Under questioning from William D. Mitchell, committee counsel, Stark said he thought that as a result of this message Kimmel would take up the matter with Short and the two would "make the best disposition of the forces they had to guard against danger."

Mitchell asked what was meant by "defensive deployment."

"A defensive deployment," Stark replied, "would be to spread his forces and use them to the maximum to prevent surprise." He said Kimmel could have deployed submarines and light craft.

Questioned On Ship Positions

Mitchell asked if Stark, as chief of naval operations, had not considered that fewer ships should be in Pearl Harbor in that time of danger. The Japanese found more than 70 there and knocked out 18, including eight battleships.

"That was up to the man on the spot," Stark replied. "I would not presume, sitting at a desk in Washington, to tell him what to do with his fleet."

The release of Short's testimony marked the first time that his side of the Pearl Harbor story had ever been made public in detail. He is listed to follow Stark as a witness before the congressional committee, but there is doubt that he can testify then because of a respiratory ailment.

Like Kimmel, Short received a message Nov. 27 advising that Japanese-American relations were at a crisis. His came from Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, and was not directly labelled a "war warning" as was the Navy's.

Marshall's message instructed Short to "undertake such reconnaissance and other measures as you deem necessary."

Six Fortresses Available

Short said he had had only six Flying Fortresses available—the only planes he had capable of long range reconnaissance—and cited an agreement that the Navy was to make long-range reconnaissance.

"I saw no reason for making any change and starting with my own reconnaissance," he testified.

Short contended, too, that he had advised the War department he had altered his command only against sabotage and, in 10 days of available time, it did not tell him he should order another alert.

Lt. Gen. Leonard T. Gerow, who was chief of the War Plans division at the time, has testified he thought Short's reply was to another message relating to antisabotage measures. Marshall said he had no recollecton of seeing it.

Stark, in replay to Mitchell's questioning, said Kimmel had had about 60 planes capable of long distance reconnaissance. Mitchell observed that that was only about one-third the number which defense studies indicated were needed for a complete defensive reconnaissance patrol.

"What we did was to give them all that we felt we could give them," Stark replied.

"Which wasn't enough?" asked Mitchell.

"No sir."

Stark added that when a commander lacked enough planes to "cover everything" he should "narrow it down" and cover the most dangerous sectors.

Stark disputed the contention of Kimmel that that Pacific post was not kept adequately informed of developments. He read to the committee the communications he sent to Kimmel and to Admiral Thomas C. Hart, commander of the Far Eastern fleet, based at Manila.

In measured tones, he added, "I considered that the letters and dispatches I sent were sufficient to keep them informed on the important military and political developments in the Pacific as we knew them, and that they had received adequate information and directives to be on guard."

Documents Presented

With Stark's appearance as the first witness after a Christmas recess, the committee received from its counsel some 40-odd new documents.

They included a bulky compilation of the correspondence between Stark and Kimmel and photographed copies of naval messages and documents. In addition, there were other papers which members had requested earlier in the hearings.

Among these were British intelligence estimates in November, 1941, of Japan's probable actions. Senator Ferguson (R-Mich.) had requested them.

The British papers indicated that London's estimate agreed with Washington's that Japan's most likely point of attack was southeast Asia, and that war was probable.

A Nov. 21 estimate said, "whether or not the government at Tokyo has decided once and for all to take the chance of war with America and Great Britain is still not certain, but Japan's economic situation is making it necessary to come to such a decision."

The documents and letters shed light on the thinking of the naval high command in 1941 as well as revealing some heretofore closely-guarded secrets.

On May 22, the late President Roosevelt instructed Stark to have ready within 30 days an expedition of 25,000 men to sail for and to take the Azores. No such expedition was ever dispatched.

When Germany attacked Russia in June, Stark urged American entry into the war. Stark said in a letter to Kimmel that he had given that advice to the President. To the fleet commander, Stark expressed a personal hope that Russia and Germany "may break upon each other."

On Nov. 7, Stark wrote Hart that "whether the country knows it or not, we are at war" in the Atlantic. In that same letter, he said that warships of Canada—a country officially at war with Germany—were operating under direction of American Admiral Ernest J. King in convoying merchant ships to Icelandic waters. American warships were engaged in the same work.

Talked with Moscow

Stark wrote Kimmel Nov. 25 that he had talked with President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull and "neither would be surprised over a Japanese surprise attack." Stark said he did not give the "weight" to that possibility that others did.

Dr. Stanley K. Hornbeck, special assistant to Secretary of State Hull, in a memorandum Nov. 27 gave it as his opinion that "there is less reason today than there was a week ago for the United States to be apprehensive lest Japan make war on this country."

"Were it a matter of placing bets," Hornback added, "the undersigned would give odds of five to one that the United States and Japan will not be at war on or before Dec. 15 x x x."

Stark had prepared for the committee a 25,000-word statement reviewing his actions as chief of naval operations from Aug. 1, 1939, to March 25, 1942. After leaving the post, he commanded operations in European waters and later was assigned to a Navy department board passing on ship design. He is now on terminal leave.

Stark recalled to the committee that during the early months of his tour as chief of naval operations Congress had not been willing to build up the fleet as fast as he urged. He also said—in words he used in a letter to Kimmel—that he was "struggling" for White House approval to raise the fleet's personnel from 89 to 100 per cent of war complement.

Stark said Mr. Roosevelt's objection was that even with 89 per cent of complement there had been complaints from enlisted men of over-crowding in ships.

What Stark termed his "unequivocal war warning" to Kimmel was a despatch of Nov. 27 which said:

"This dispatch is to be considered a war warning. Negotiations with Japan looking toward stabilization of conditions in the Pacific have ceased. x x x Execute an appropriate defensive deployment preparatory to carrying out the tasks assigned in WPL-46 (War Plan 46)."

Stark directed the committee's attention to the records it had received of correspondence early in 1941 between the War and Navy departments and between the departments and Hawaiian commanders concerning the possibility of surprise attack on Pearl Harbor. He added:

"My correspondence with the commanders-in-chief in the Pacific during the years 1940 and 1941 indicate that for almost two years before the attack on Pearl Harbor the lack of physical resources was fully known to all Navy officers in critical positions, and that the danger of war with Japan and a possible surprise attack on Pearl Harbor and the methods of meeting it had been fully considered."

Coming to a mesage sent Kimmel Dec 3, advising that Japanese embassies in London and Washington were destroying their codes, Stark called it "one of the most important despatches we ever sent."

"We felt that it was just a matter of time," he added.

30.24-32759

Much of Stark's statement comprised correspondence between him and Kimmel. The bulk of this had been received by the committee from the Navy Department earlier in the hearings.

The exchanges showed that Kimmel, on his part, was concerned in the summer of 1941 lest transfer of ships from the Pacific to the Atlantic might lead Japan to undertake hostilities.

Pacific Fleet Jap Deterrent.

On September 12, Kimmel wrote:

"A strong Pacific fleet is unquestionably a deterrent to Japan—a weaker one may be an invitation."

On September 22, Stark wrote Hart, that "so far as the Atlantic is concerned, we are all but, if not actually, in it." He said he sent a copy to Kimmel.

Stark recalled that he sent the fleet commanders on November 27 a message saying "this dispatch is to be considered a war warning. Negotiations with Japan looking toward stabilization of conditions in the Pacific have ceased. . . . Execute an appropriate defensive deployment preparatory to carrying out the tasks assigned in WPL-46 (War Plan 46)."

He said that he had never used the words "war warning" in any other dispatch, and they were put in "to accentuate the extreme gravity of the situation."

Saw Danger of Attack.

"We considered the picture as we saw it and we felt that there was grave danger of Japan striking anywhere," Stark added. "We wanted our people in the Pacific to know it, and we used language which we thought would convey what we felt."

As for the decoded Japanese diplomatic message of December 6, Stark said he did not see it until the morning of December 7.

He argued that its main point was that negotiations had ended and that he had so informed Kimmel in the November 27 dispatch.

Stark related that he was discussing with aids the note and the fact that Japan's Ambassadors were instructed to present it at 1 P. M., when Gen. George C. [illegible] Army Chief of Staff, called on the telephone. Marshall wanted to know his opinion on sending an additional warning to overseas point. Stark said he suggested at first that enough had been sent, but later called Marshall back and said "I would go along."

Marshall filed a message by Army facilities shortly before noon. There was difficulty in reaching Hawaii by radio and the message was turned over to commercial facilities. It reached the Hawaiian commanders hours after the attack.

Kimmel Feared Hawaii Attack.

Stark also gave the committee a separate file of communications between himself and Kimmel during 1941. They disclosed that on February 18 Kimmel wrote, "I feel that a surprise attack (submarine, air, or combined) on Pearl Harbor is a possibility."

In other letters, Kimmel repeatedly asked for more ships, more guns, more radar and more planes. Stark's letters were filled with assurances that he was doing all he could to meet Kimmel's needs and reminders that demands from the Atlantic Fleet also were heavy.

Kimmel also frequently expressed concern over the flow of information to him. He told Stark May 26 that the commander in chief, Pacific Fleet, "is far removed from the seat of Government."

"He is, as a rule, not informed as to policy, or change of policy, reflected in current events and naval movements and, as a result, is unable to evaluate the possible effect upon his own situation," Kimmel's formal memorandum continued.

"This lack of information is disturbing and tends to create uncertainty, a condition which directly contravenes that singleness of purpose and confidence in one's own course of action so necessary to the conduct of military operations."

A Kimmel letter of July 30 disclosed that the suggestion had been made that a carrier be used to ferry lend-lease planes to Russian Siberia. Expressing vigorous opposition, Kimmel said:

"I entertain no doubt that such an operation, if discovered (as is highly probable), will be tantamount to initiation of a Japanese-American war. If we are going to take the initiative in commencing such a war, I can think of more effective ways for gaining initial advantage."

COUNSEL FOR PROBERS DISCUSSED AT SESSION

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31—(AP) The Senate-House committee investigating Pearl Harbor called in Seth Richardson, Washington attorney, today for "advice and counsel" on the question of where to get new committee lawyers.

This was announced by Chairman Barkley (D-Ky)) after an executive session.

He said Richardson "was just talking over the situation with us" and that no decision was reached on appointing new counsel.

The commitee is to lose its present staff, headed by William D. Mitchell, as soon as questioning of the current witness, Admiral Harold R. Stark, is completed.

Fact-Finding Board For Steel Dispute Named by Truman

President Truman tonight sought to head off a steel strike with the appointment of a fact-finding board and instructions to the OPA to review the possible need for price increases.

Stepping into the dispute between the industry and the steel workers organizing committee (C.I.O.) the President set up a board composed of:

Roger I. McDonough, associate justice of the Utah Supreme court.

Chief Justice James M. Douglas of the Supreme court of Missouri.

Nathan P. Feinsinger, public member of the expiring War Labor board and professor of law at the University of Wisconsin.

Price Review Ordered

The OPA was requested to review the price ceiling structure on steel products with a view to determining by not later than Feb. 1, "whether any price increases would be proper," the White House announcement said.

"In order that it may have this information from the OPA available, the fact-finding board was requested to report by Feb. 10, 1946," the brief statement continued.

The United Steel Workers union has set a nationwide strike for Jan. 14 which might involve 700,000 workers since it could embrace employes of companian industries such as aluminum and iron ore operators.

The President presumably acted tonight under authority of the war powers act, under which he proceeded in the automobile industry dispute involving General Motors. He told a recent press conference that the authority of the fact-finding boards depends mostly on cooperation from both sides pending legislation giving force to its decisions.

The President's decision to intervene in the steel case—he appealed directly to the steel workers to remain on their jobs when he asked Congress for legislation backing up the fact-finding boards—was disclosed shortly before 7 p.m. (EST) in word flashed from his temporary quarters aboard the Presidential yacht, Williamsburg, anchored off Quantico, Va.

Seeks Cooperation

The President has sought cooperation from both management and unions for the fact-finding board system, and insisted in the General Motors case upon the need for permitting examinations of management's books where earnings may be an issue in the wage controversy.

The General Motors company has taken issue with this view in the attempt of the board to find a solution to the automobile strike controversy.

Although only United States Steel Corp. was involved in the negotiations with C.I.O. which broke up in deadlock Oct. 23, the union's scheduled strike would affect more than 700 steel, iron ore and aluminum operations whose wage policies traditionally follow the U. S. Steel pattern.

Feinsinger, interviewed by telephone after the White House announcement, said he considered the panel's job "awfully tough," presenting problems not found in other recent fact-findings.

The steel firm pleads inability to pay an increase, a contention not raised in the General Motors or oil industry cases, Feinsinger noted.

Situation is Difficult

Also, he observed, a difficult situation is caused by the fact that U. S. Steel is the sole employer represented, while the C.I.O. strike vote was aimed at the entire industry and any wage determination probably would become industry-wide in effect because of U. S steel's bellwether position in the industry.

Feinsinger said he did not know the other members of the panel and could not say when they would start work. He added that he did not know he was to be appointed although he had been sounded out on his willingness to serve.

The much-feared strike, said Civilian Production Administrator John D. Small last week, would leave "reconversion in a mess all over the country." Some officials have predicted the government would seize the industry rather than permit a long strike in view of the importance of steel to peacetime production.

The corporation rejected two proposals by Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach to reopen the stalled negotiations. The corporation president, Benjamin F. Fairless, declared he felt further negotiations could "serve no useful purpose" unless the industry were granted price increases on carbon steel long requested of OPA.

Fairless not only rejected the union's $2 a day wage increase demand, but turned down President Truman's proposal to industry generally that wage increases be negotiated and that employers wait six months before requesting price relief if a hardship situation resulted from the wage boost.

Fairless said the company would wish assurance that any wage increase negotiated with the union would be accompanied by a simultaneous price boost.

Price Boost Refused

OPA some weeks ago handed down its decision: That it saw no justification for a general price boost in steel at this time, but would review the industry's profit situation after the year's end financial reports were available. Some smaller non-integrated companies, OPA said, might require price relief sooner.

Appointment of the fact-finding body was preceded by a hurried round of official conferences, with Mr. Truman participating by radio-telephone from the Presidential yacht.

Under Mr. Truman's previously outlined plan, a fact-finding panel reports to him and to the public its findings and recommendations. Its decisions are not binding on either disputant, nor is it incumbent on either party to participate. In the case of the General Motors vs. C.I.O. United Auto Workers dispute, the company withdrew last Friday but the fact-finding panel went ahead and completed its hearings in the absence of the employer.

Tonight's announcement was not accompanied by a request of the union to postpone the scheduled strike. Such a request was made by Mr. Truman on Dec. 3, when he announced that he would name fact-finding panels for the General Motors strike and the threatened steel stoppage.

It was believed possible that the request might be renewed, in order to try to keep the steel furnaces going until the OPA can rule on the price question and the fact finders can submit their settlement proposals.

TRUMAN APPOINTS NEW WAGE BOARD

Unit in Labor Dept. Replaces WLB, Abolished After Four Years.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31 — (AP) President Truman appointed a new Wage Stabilization board within the Labor department tonight in place of the War Labor board which went out of existence after handling 21,000 industrial disputes in four years.

The new board will continue the WLB panels established to adjust wage inequities within the steel, textile nad meat-packing industries. It also will appoint arbitrators when the parties in a labor dispute request it.

But it won't have the sweeping powers to force settlements that the WLB had. And any disputes in which the WLB had not taken final action will now be returned to the parties concerned except for steel, textile and meat-packing inequities.

The new board will be able to pass upon a case where workers in a steel plant, for example, might seek a wage increase to bring their wages in line with those paid elsewhere. But would not be able to handle any demand for a general wage increase such as C.I.O. steel workers have made in voting a strike Jan. 14.

Six members of the 12-man WLB, nominated by that board, were named to make up the new stabilization board. They are W. Willard Wirtz, chairman, and Sylvester Garrett, vice chairman, public members; Robert J. Wyatt fo the A.F.L. and Carl J. Shipley of the C.I.O., labor members; and R. Randall Irwin and Earl Cannon, industry members.

The board's principal work will be to pass upon voluntary wage adjustments which require government approval under the stabilization act.

GM AND CIO AGREE TO RESUME TALKS

Will Meet Tomorrow to Set a Time — Briton Eyes Strike as Trade Factor

DETROIT, Dec. 31 (AP)—The General Motors Corporation and the CIO United Automobile Workers union today expressed a willingness to resume across-the-table conferences in the dispute that has made 175,000 production workers idle for nearly six weeks.

There were indications, however, that renewed negotiations here will await the report, expected on Thursday, of President Truman's Fact-Finding Committee. This group, which was named to make settlement recommendations in the 30 per cent wage-increase fight of the UAW-CIO, finished its hearings in Washington on Saturday without the presence of representatives of General Motors.

GM management spokesmen withdrew from the Washington hearings after challenging the fact-finding panel's right to consider prices and profits in making wage recommendations in the dispute.

Walter P. Reuther, UAW-CIO vice president, following a telephone conversation today with Harry W. Anderson, General Motors vice president in charge of industrial relations, said:

"The UAW-CIO and General Motors Corporation will be in touch with each other Wednesday morning, Jan. 2, to arrange a resumption of negotiations on the union's 30 per cent wage demand and other strike issues."

A GM spokesman, affirming Mr. Reuther's statement, said:

"The corporation all along has been willing to talk over questions and issues."

In the meantime, wages lost by 175,000 General Motors production workers were estimated at $47,000,000 to $54,000,000 as their strike ended its sixth week today.

The CIO-UAW Union, which called the walkout Nov. 21, used a forty-hour work week to arrive at a loss estimate of $7,910,000 weekly, or a $47,460,000 total.

General Motors, on the other hand, basing its computations on a 45.6 hour work week, placed the loss at $8,974,000 weekly for a total of $53,844,000.

Both agree that the average earnings of the strikers were $1.13 hourly.

WESTERN UNION ORDERED TO GIVE WAGE INCREASE

JAN 1 1946

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31. — (AP) The National War Labor board today formally directed a wage increase averaging 12 cents an hour for both C.I.O. and A.F.L. employes of Western Union Telegraph company.

Announcement of the wage boost, reported first unofficially yesterday, was one of the board's last acts before going out of existence at midnight tonight.

In deciding both C.I.O. and A.F.L. cases at one time, the board reversed an action of its own as well as a previous decision by the regional board in New York. The A.F.L.'s original wage award was increased and the C.I.O.'s was reduced.

In its previous action, the National board awarded the A.F.L. an average four cents hourly increase and other concessions which amounted to about three cents an hour—making a total of an average of 7 cents hourly. In the C.I.O. case, the regional board had granted a blanket 10 cents an hour increase, plus revisions in job rates and other wage changes which amounted to an average of 12 cents an hour extra.

The 90,000 A.F.L. Western Union employes had threatened to strike Jan. 7 in protest against the board's original decisions.

A board spokesman said a factor in the A.F.L. decision was "discovery" that Western Union had "$5,000,000 more with which it could pay a wage increase" than the board had previously known.

A total of 10 cents an hour of the A.F.L. award was made retroactive to Nov. 14, 1943; the C.I.O. award was made retroactive to February, 1944.

The 12-cent average was based, board officials explained, on revisions of job rates, minimum and maximum pay and job progression.

The board set a 55-cent minimum hourly rate in both cases, provided six holidays a year, and refused union requests for three weeks vacation with pay after 15 years service.

Reconversion Delay Laid to Trade Caution

Labor Department Finds Business Policy is Cause, Not Industrial Strife

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31 (AP).—The Labor Department asserted today that business caution rather than labor disputes is the most "significant and persistent cause of delay in reconversion."

At the same time, summarizing the employment outlook for 1946, the department predicted increased economic expansion and declared that, by spring, unemployment "will not even approximate the 8,000,000 that is still widely quoted."

Current figures put present total unemployment at 3,500,000, the summary said.

The report, by A. F. Hinrichs, Acting Commissioner of Labor Statistics, said business caution, stemming from uncertainty over future costs, prices and availability of supplies, would continue during the early months of 1946. He added:

"This process of feeling out the economic situation . . . seems to be a more significant and persistent cause of delay in reconversion than either the wave of industrial disputes or the lack of interest of business men in sales during 1945." . . .

Mr. Hinrichs declared the reduction in wages and salaries as a result of industry's changeover from war to peace-time operation was less drastic than expected and "most of the shrinkage has already occurred."

"Thus, this primary potential cause of deflation has exerted nearly its full influence without producing a depression psychology," he observed.

Mr. Hinrichs disclosed the government was caught napping by the early end of the Japanese war so far as its unemployment estimates were concerned. The predictions—based on a V-J Day at the end of September rather than in August—painted a far gloomier picture than actually developed, he explained.

SAYS JULY 1 CLOSE IS AIM OF CONGRESS

Cannon Reports Agreement by Leaders—Program Fitted to Election Year

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31 (AP)—Chairman Cannon of the House Appropriations Committee said today that Congressional leaders had agreed to speed legislation next year in efforts to "close up shop" from July 1 through the November elections. The plan, he added, was in part a move to put Congress back on a peacetime basis.

He recalled that before the war the legislators sometimes were absent from Washington as long as eight months at a time.

"My opinion is that at least every other year we ought to set a definite time to get away and adhere to it," he declared.

"There are two major reasons for adopting some such schedule.

"First, we would give the Government agencies and business a breathing spell in which to operate under the laws we promulgate. As it is now we keep business on the griddle all the time. They never know when we will pass some new law completely changing their plans.

"Second, we owe it to the people to spend more time finding out what they want. Staying here in Washington all the time with our nose to the grindstone we lose our perspective."

Mr. Cannon said that in line with the speed-up program his committee had revamped its schedule of hearings on all appropriations bills. One measure, providing funds for independent Government agencies, will be ready right after the holidays, he added.

TRUMAN SIGNS HOUSING BILL

$160,000,000 Provided to Aid Vets and Families.

Washington, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—President Truman signed legislation today authorizing the expenditure of $160,000,000 to provide emergency housing for families of service men and veterans.

The measure was signed aboard the presidential yacht Williamsburg, which anchored off Quantico., Va., after encountering ice and fog on the Potomac River.

Charles G. Ross, White House Press Secretary, telephoned from the vessel that the weather was "still cold and raining" and that the forecast indicated "more of the same tomorrow." Mr. Truman, Ross said, spent most of the morning on the radio address he will make to the nation at 10:30 P. M. on Thursday.

Signs Own Bills.

The veterans housing bill, aimed primarily at providing for the immediate needs of veterans families, was among several bills approved by Mr. Truman during the day. He expects to return from the cruise on Wednesday. He has been aboard the yacht since he came back Saturday from a Christmas holiday in Missouri.

Three members of the cruising party left the yacht today to return to the capital, but all are expected to return tomorrow. They were Samuel I. Rosenman, special counsel to the President, who has been working with him on the preparation of his radio speech and his State of the Union message to Congress; Reconversion Director John W. Snyder and John R. Steelman, special assistant to the President and a labor expert.

New Service Point Cuts In Effect

Washington, Dec 31 (AP)—The lowering of point scores from 55 to 50 for enlisted men and from 73 to 70 for officers will make 600,000 more army men and women eligible for release today under changes in discharge rules announced December 19.

VETERANS REQUIRE MORE PHYSICIANS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31—(AP) A critical shortage of physicians and surgeons in the Veterans Administration was emphasized today in a report showing 4,658 beds are unoccupied in veterans hospitals "because of insufficient staff personnel."

This was an increase of 54 within a week, said the report by Maj. Gen. Paul R. Hawley, acting surgeon general.

To overcome its staff shortage, the Veterans administration has been borrowing hospital space from Army, Navy and private hospitals.

There now are 88,233 veterans receiving hospital or other care from the government. This is an increase of 266 over the previous week and again is an all-time record.

Five Veterans administration hospitals and one home were filled to capacity, without a single bed available for incoming patients, when the most recent census was taken, Dec. 13. They are the hospitals at Northampton, Mass.; Castle Point, N. Y.; Mt. Alto, Washington, D. C.; Huntington, W. Va., and Fargo, N. D., and the home at Los Angeles.

Navy's Style Note Communique Reveals Details of New Uniform

JAN 1 1946

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31 — (AP) The Navy today revealed details of its proposed new design for enlisted men's uniforms, replacing the jumper and bellbottom trousers which have been the trademark of seafaring men for six centuries.

It cautiously explained, however, that the new design is still the subject of tests and if adopted, must await depletion of present stocks of old style uniforms.

Some 2,500 "sample" uniforms have been distributed to the Atlantic and Pacific fleets and to shore stations for wearing and stowage tests under all conditions, on the basis of which commanding officers will make criticisms and recommendations. The tests are expected to require about three months.

In the new design, conventional by the British as a sign of mourntoms, and the black neckerchief which tradition says was designed by hte British as a sign of mourning for Lord Nelson will be replaced by a black fore-in-hand tie.

The body-tight jumper will give way to a jumper type shirt similar to a sport shirt, which can be worn open at the neck for "undress," or buttoned for dress.

A tailored, waist-length battle jacket is provided for dress or winter wear.

There are three separate uniforms in the new outfit—blue, grey and white—with shirts to match. The blue and white are dress uniforms, and the grey the working uniform. White trousers may be worn with the blue battle jacket in warm weather.

The white uniform may be worn in both dress and undress fashion—with a black tie for dress and open at the neck for undress. The grey uniform is composed of grey shirt and trousers, similar to those now worn by chief petty officers.

Headgear includes a blue garrison cap for the blue uniform, and the present white hat and a grey baseball type cap to be worn with the white and grey uniforms, respectively.

Slash In Taxes Expected To Encourage Business

Washington, Dec. 31 (AP)—The Government tomorrow hands the country a $6,000,000,0000 incentive to expand business activity.

30.24-32761

The 1946 tax law, providing the first general cut in taxes since 1929, was written deliberately to encourage spending for reconversion and high peacetime production.

Federal officials expressed confidence today that it would have that effect.

More Goods Expected

They forecast, too, that it would bring a modest but noticeable upturn in the flow of civilian goods into the stores, because after midnight the producers will keep more of their profit from sales, pay less of it to Uncle Sam. This results from repeal of heavy excess profits tax.

Corporations will get a total tax cut of $3,136,000,000. Individuals will benefit by a total of $2,800,000,000, through cuts ranging from 100 per cent for about 12,000,000 low income persons to 10 per cent or more for the average taxpayer. This will bolster purchasing power at a time when pay envelopes are getting thinner.

High Income Cited

The total benefit to taxpayers may be even greater than the official $6,000,000,000 estimate because of the surprisingly high rate of national income which has been maintained even after the slump in war business.

The official estimate was based on a national income of $130,000,000,000 in 1946, but the country enters the New Year at a $150,000,000,000 rate.

This means that Government, industry and the public alike will benefit: The Government from bigger revenues than anticipated under the new tax rates, business and the public from the fact that they will make more money than expected and more of it will stay in their tills and pockets.

Stabilizing Effect

Officials concede that leaving more money in consumers' hands is an inflationary move, but the Treasury Department believes the net effect of the new tax law will be a stabilizing one for these reasons:

1. The cut for corporations, especially the excess profits tax repeal, will remove major obstacles to the production of more goods, and high production is the best cure for inflation.

2. Much of the reduction goes to taxpayers in the lower income classes. In the case of the 12,000,000, most of the 100 per cent cut will be spent for food. And food will be out of the scarcity class before automobiles and washing machines.

3. While the effect may add to inflationary pressures during the first half of 1946, this may come in handy in the last half to offset deflationary tendencies.

Some Goods Held Back

The extent to which repeal of the excess profits levy will bring new goods to market is debatable. The opinion that some companies have been holding back new products until the tax was removed is almost unanimous in the Government.

However, many officials now are convinced that the "holdback" is of less importance then they originally estimated. They now believe they underestimated some of the other problems which caused delay even after production lines were set up.

These include: The desire of business men to build up stocks in inventory; the long "pipeline" from factory to store which had to be filled; industrial disputes which impeded the flow of parts to factories; dissatisfaction with price ceilings and the hope that higher ceilings would be granted.

50 Million To Benefit

About 50,000,000 taxpayers will benefit from the slash. Besides those going off the tax rolls entirely, persons making up to $50,000 a year will get reductions of ten per cent or more. Smaller reductions will apply to those making over $50,000.

The income tax relief for individuals will total $2,644,000,000.

In addition, the public will benefit to the extent of $140,000,000 from repeal of the $5 use tax on autos and trucks, effective in July. Special income tax treatment is provided for veterans.

'Hoarding' of Surpluses Laid to Federal Agencies

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31 (AP).—Cries arose on Capitol Hill today that Federal agencies are "hoarding" surplus war goods and are ignoring priority requests of veterans. The protests were coupled with demands for prompt action by Congress when it returns Jan. 14 to speed up disposal of surplus government property.

Representative Jack Z. Anderson, Republican, of California, said in a statement that "of approximately $100,000,000,000 worth of surplus property, only about $1,500,000,000 worth actually had been sold."

He asserted that the Army, Navy and other Federal departments were "hoarding" automobiles and other scarce products. He added that "the situation is becoming scandalous."

Mr. Anderson declared he would introduce a bill calling for establishment of a special committee to investigate the property disposal program.

Representative Jack Cochran, Democrat, of Missouri, asserted in a statement that veterans "have been pushed around" by Federal agencies when they tried to secure surplus goods.

Declaring that the present act governing disposal of surplus property is "a monstrosity," Mr. Cochran urged that it be revamped as soon as possible.

Commerce Chamber to Meet

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31 (AP)—The Chamber of Commerce of the United States announced today that its thirty-second annual meeting would be held in Atlantic City for three days, April 30-May 2. It will be the first annual meeting since the spring of 1943.

GI Mishap Deaths Policy Explained

Washington, Dec. 31 (AP)—Insistence of the armed forces that the military dead in plane, ship and rail accidents remain nameless until next of kin are notified is bringing a deluge of telephone calls to newspapers from anxious thousands at each disaster.

Officials agree that the policy causes worry for relatives of all military personnel known to be traveling in the area of an accident. But they say it is the obligation of the armed forces to see to it that the first word of death or injury be given a relative through official notification by telegram. Their explanation is that this avoids the shock of reading the news or hearing it broadcast.

Editors' Suggestions

Editors who have the unpleasant task of handling such news have suggested that the peace of mind of several thousand anxious relatives should be balanced against the possibility that the comparatively few next of kin would get their first information through public channels. These suggestions, however, have brought no relaxation in past procedure.

With the ending of military censorship, the press became free to report immediately accidents involving military aircraft, ships or common carriers on which military personnel were traveling.

Such reports may include identification of the carriers, departure and destination points and all other details, but military sources will not supply names or home addresses pending notification of next of kin. Names obtained from other sources may be used.

The armed forces insist that the casualty list be withheld until next of kin of all personnel killed have been notified. This frequently entails delays ranging from hours to days or weeks.

GI GETS FOUR WIVES, ALL WITH FISHHOOKS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31 (AP)—A bargain-driving Yank on a lonely Pacific isle tossed his headache into the lap of the Veterans Administration on New Year's Eve—what to do about his wives. He wrote:

"I got three or four by trading for fishhooks. I believe I could get a dozen or so more."

First, he said, he wanted to know if he could bring some of the wives home with him and take them to college. He continued:

"I intend to go to the University of Michigan or some other Midwest college and thought I might be able to collect extra money under the GI Bill of Rights. I've heard a married man gets $15 a month more than a bachelor going to college. Could I collect $15 for each wife?

"If I can collect, does it make any difference whether the wives work? My buddies told me housemaids are getting $5 a day back in the States and these women like to work. But not too hard. If I had a dozen and could collect around $5 each, I wouldn't worry the vets bureau about the money for school."

Stating his belief that he could bring the wives legally to the United States "because the trading was legal," he added:

"It's the way they do business in this tribe. The chief wanted fishhooks. I had fishhooks. He had too many women. I didn't. So we made a deal.

"Of course I didn't tell my sergeant yet."

TVA TOPS U. S. POWER OUTPUT

Net Income for 1946 Is $18,000,000.

Washington, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—The Tennessee Valley Authority reported today that in the fiscal year 1945 it produced more electric power than any other integrated system in the United States.

"The War Department," the report said, "revealed that the ability of TVA to supply abundant electric power was the major factor in locating one of the largest atomic energy plants at Oak Ridge, Tenn."

The digest of the report made available here did not say how much power was produced but said it was distributed by 130 municipal and co-operative systems to approximately 600,000 customers. Power revenues exceeded $39,000,000 and net income was nearly $18,000,000, about 27 per cent higher than the year before. About three-quarters of the power output went to war purposes.

The twelfth annual report to the President and Congress said the end of the war means less a shift in direction than a change in pace so far as the long-term objectives of resources development are concerned.

"While TVA mustered its entire energies and facilities to help win the war, its activities, more often than not, complemented the peacetime aims of river control and agricultural, forest and industrial development basic to building a stronger valley," the report said.

Produced War Maps.

The TVA produced operational and tactical military topographic maps covering more than half a million square miles of terrain in eleven countries in Europe and three in the Orient.

Two major dams, Kentucky and Fontana, were placed in operation, bringing to twenty-six the number in the integrated system to control the flow of the Tennessee.

The chemical plant at Muscle Shoals produced nearly 30,000 tons of elemental phosporus, and was a major supplier of this material to the armed forces. Amonium nitrate was produced for munitions and fertilizer and calcium carbide was produced for synthetic rubber production. The number of test-demonstration farms using TVA fertilizer increased to nearly 35,000 in eighteen States.

The report said TVA employees declined in number during the year from 21,000 to 12,350.

PRICE CEILING TO BE SET ON FRESH CITRUS FRUIT

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31—(AP) Ceiling prices on fresh citrus fruits "undoubtedly will be restored this week, probably Thursday," an Office of Price Administration spokesman said tonight.

Stabilization Administrator John C. Collet, the spokesman said, had given OPA "verbal authority" to reestablish ceilings on oranges, grapefruits, tangerines, lemons and limes.

It was estimated that control machinery could not be put in motion to restore ceiling before Thursday due to the New Year's holiday.

OPA Administrator Chester Bowles petitioned Collet for reinstatement of ceilings Dec. 15, after midwestern representatives complained in Congress that prices had jumped 50 to 100 per cent.

Collet declined OPA's petition on Dec. 17 but warned the industry that unless it reduced prices immediately of its own accord, ceilings [illegible] reinstated.

New Sugar Book

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31 (AP)—A sugar ration book consisting of a single sheet will be issued to new applicants beginning January 1, the OPA announced today.

It is only for those who do not have ration book four. Application forms will be available at army separation centers and at OPA local boards.

More Sugar Forecast For After February

New York, Dec. 31 (AP)—Sugar for the United States consumer, who got along in 1945 with the lowest supply in 40 years, should become available in progressively increasing amounts after February, trade sources predict.

Aiding the supply situation, according to Samuel Schoenfeld, statistician of Lamborn & Company, New York sugar brockers, will be reduced export demands and cuts in army and navy needs.

A probable advance in price from 5½ cents to around 6 to 7 cents a pound in March or April is indicated by B. W. Dyer, head of B. W. Dyer & Company, sugar economists and brokers. He notes that "consumers would then be paying to encourage sugar production directly rather than indirectly through taxes for Government subsidies."

Dyer foresees a continued growth in 1946 in use of liquid sugar by industrial and institutional sugar users.

UNO Delegates For U.S. Sail

New York, Dec. 31 (AP)—The British liner Queen Elizabeth sailed for England early today with 1,128 passengers, including four members of the American delegation to the General Assembly of the United Nations.

The four were Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, former Secretary of State Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., Senator Tom Connally (D., Texas), chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.). Stettinius is a permanent member of the Security Council with the rank of ambassador.

Alternates On Board

Alternate delegates among the passengers were Representative Sol Bloom (D., N.Y.), chairman of the House Foreign Relations Committee; former Postmaster General Frank C. Walker, John Foster Dulles, of New York, and former Senator John G. Townsend, of Delaware.

Also aboard were Admiral Richmond Kelley Turner, of the Navy General Board, and Gen. George C. Kenney, commander of the Pacific Air Forces. They are members of a United States military delegation that will confer with Russia, Britain, France and China in London on the projected United Nations armed force to preserve peace.

CIVIL LIBERTIES SEEN UNO PROBLEM

NEW YORK, Dec. 31. — (AP) The American Civil Liberties union predicted today that in 1946 "international problems of civil liberty will emerge as dominant with the development of the United Nations, with particular attention to freedom of communication by press, radio, and motion pictures, the civil rights of natives in colonial countries, and the protection of refugees from oppression."

In its annual review of civil liberties in the United States, the union declared that "the surprisingly favorable tendencies developed during the war" to protect civil rights must be maintained in the peace years.

International problems in 1946, the union asserted, would directly involve "the liberties of the American public and of minorities under American jurisdiction."

The union cited the necessity for upholding racial equality before the law as one of the principal U. S. tasks in the coming year. Listed as measures deserving favorable congressional action were bills for equalizing women's pay; abolition of poll taxes in federal elections; transfer of censorship powers from the post office to the courts; and settlement of long-standing property claims of Indian tribes against the United States.

Jersey G. O. P. Elects Leonard House Leader

Trenton, Dec. 31 (A. P.).—Leon Leonard of Atlantic City was elected majority leader of the 1946 Assembly today by the unanimous vote of its Republican members.

At the same time the Republican caucus selected Walter H. Jones of Bergen, former majority leader, as Speaker of the new House and re-elected Philip C. Wadsworth of Glen Rock as clerk.

Leonard's election climaxed a long fight for the position which brought about the first open break in the organization of Gov. Edge. He had been opposed by Arthur T. Vanderbilt, leader of the Essex County Clean Government Republicans, who supported Assemblyman J. Stanley Herbert of Sea Girt.

ARMY CONTRACTS SETTLED SPEEDILY

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Dec. 31—(AP) The Rochester Army ordnance district reported today it had completed settlement of a "major share" of all Army war contracts in upstate New York.

In a year-end report Col. Merle H. Davis, district chief, said only 16 contractors holding about 60 contracts have yet to file claims in connection with contract terminations. He declared steps have been taken to expedite these settlements.

Approximately 600 prime contracts were terminated V-J day, Col. Davis said. He asserted a "large number" of these involving thousands of individual sub-contractors, were settled within 90 days.

The district also has disposed of a majority of an estimated 25,000 government-owned machine tools through purchase by contractors, transfer to the RFC for sales or storage, and through donation to educational institutions. Value of tools given schools is estimated at $2,000,000.

From a wartime peak of 2,900 the number of district employes has dropped to less than 400 persons who are engaged in contract settlement work and administration of ordnance research and development contracts in the state, Col. Davis reported.

Surgeons to Operate on Blind Italian Boy Despite Slim Hope

BALTIMORE, Dec. 31. — (AP) Although they know the chances are slim, five surgeons at Johns Hopkins hospital decided today to operate in a forlorn attempt to give a GI-befriended Italian boy a New Year's present—his sight.

The eight-year-old boy, Gianfranco Cabbia, was blinded by the kick of a German cavalryman's horse, Sept. 18, 1944. The GI's in Italy found him months later and made him their friend. Soldiers of three divisions chipped in money to bring him to Hopkins for a chance to see. He arrived in Baltimore last Friday.

Dr. Alan C. Woods, head of the Wilmer Eye institute at Hopkins, said he and Dr. J. S. Guyton had examined the boy.

"We believe," he said, "he has some light perception in his one remaining eye. An operation has been decided upon, but it is extremely doubtful that it will be successful in restoring much vision."

However, he emphasized, they feel that even the small chance of giving sight back to Gianfranco is worth taking.

The boy is so excited by everything that has happened to him, Dr. Woods said, that he did not know whether or not he would operate Thursday. If the boy is quieter, he continued, he would try then to cut a new pupil through the membrane which has grown over the right, and less injured, eye.

Otherwise, the operation will be postponed for a week.

Dr. Woods said that when Gianfranco was kicked, the left eye was knocked out and the other badly damaged.

The examination showed, Dr. Woods said that injury to the right eye included a "rupture of the globe and a crushing of some of the structures in the front of the eye." As a result, the surgeons fear the retina may be detached, a condition they could not correct by the operation.

The boy's "GI daddy," Pfc. Howard W. Gorgas, of Montpelier, Ohio, said he had sent cablegrams to Pople Pius XII and to Myron Taylor, American envoy to the Vatican, asking that the prayers of Christendom be implored for the operation's success.

ABANDON 'NIAGARA,' 219-YEAR-OLD POST

Soldiers Give Last Salute to Historic Post in Use by U. S. for Almost 130 Years

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., Dec. 31 (AP)—Historic Fort Niagara will be abandoned as a United States Army post at midnight tonight after 219 years as a military establishment and 130 years of almost constant use by United States soldiers.

Col. Herbert D. Forrest, commandant, said the property will be turned over to the custody of the Army's Engineers to await final disposition. No ceremony was arranged and the last Army salute was made when the colors were hauled down at "Retreat" tonight.

Most of the land at the fort was deeded to the Army by New York State with the stipulation that if it were ever abandoned the title to it would return to the State. What eventual use will be made of the property must be decided by State officials.

Many organizations have offered suggestions for its use. These include:

Temporary use of its buildings to relieve the housing shortage; establishment of a rest center or hospital for war veterans; creation of a State university or State park, and sale of the buildings and property so it could be turned into a residential area.

At the outbreak of the first World War Fort Niagara was headquarters of the Twenty-eighth United States Infantry. Then it became, successively, a reception center for Army draftees, a replacement and refresher training center, headquarters for a military police detachment, a German prisoner-of-war camp, and a separation center.

A fort was first established at the site of Fort Niagara by the French in 1687 but later was burned and abandoned. The oldest of the buildings was erected in 1726 when the French decided to fortify the area.

The British captured it in 1759 and occupied it until 1783, when it became United States property. The fort was recaptured by the British in 1813 and turned back to the Americans in 1815.

FLIERS TOAST THE DEAD

Two of 3 Survivors of Canadian Squadron Meet in Detroit

DETROIT, Dec. 31 (AP)—The two men who are among the last survivors of a Royal Canadian Air Force squadron of fifty pilots kept a solemn rendezvous in Detroit tonight with a quiet handclasp, dinner, and a New Year's Eve toast to the others who didn't come back.

In the lobby of a hotel, garish with holiday decorations, Seth T. Parker, 26, of Richmond, Va., met Paul Forcey, 25, of Woodland, Pa., in a reunion made tragic by its size.

They, along with the rest of their comrades, had pledged in 1941 as they sailed for England to meet again in Detroit on the first New Year's Eve after the war.

"It looks like we're about the only ones left," Parker said. "We know of one Canadian boy, still in the service, who may arrive yet if he can get leave."

"But most of those we thought were alive—well, they're not."

NAVY RELEASES PIER

BOSTON, Dec. 31. — (AP) The Navy relinquished control of state-owned Commonwealth Pier, one of the largest in the country, tonight. The pier, which has been used for embarking and debarking troops since August 1941, will be taken over tomorrow by the port of Boston authority.

MODEL TO ATTEND SERVICES FOR DALE

NEW YORK, Dec. 31—(AP) Mrs. Fay Hancock Miller was granted permission today to leave New York to attend services at Enid, Okla., for Capt. Eugene Dale, 27, who died Saturday after being shot three times in her apartment.

Assistant District Attorney Alexander Herman said Mrs. Miller, an attractive model, would accompany Dale's body to his home in Enid.

She promised, according to Herman, to be available in the proceedings against her husband, Capt. Archie B. Miller, 25, who Detective John Kennedy said admitted shooting Dale.

Miller is in Tombs prison awaiting a hearing Jan. 14 on a homicide charge. Police said Mrs. Miller told them she fell in love with Dale, a flier who was a hero of the Bataan death march, while her husband was in Europe and that she had hoped to marry Dale after obtaining a divorce.

LOADED SHIPS HELD BY LACK OF CREWS

NEW YORK, Dec. 31. — (AP) About 120 loaded ships, many of them laden with relief food and coal for afflicted areas of Europe, still are tied up at Eastern ports for lack of merchant seamen and officers, the War Shipping Administration reported today.

The WSA described the situation as "extremely critical" and said it was continuing to appeal by personal telegrams and otherwise for crews to man the ships.

A spokesman for WSA said the shortage was due to insistence of the men on spending holidays at home.

Vet Jam Broken In West Ports

Los Angeles, Dec. 31 (AP)—Christmas may not have been so merry for the thousands of veterans who had to spend it far from home because transportation was unavailable to move them out of southern California, but New Year's will apparently be different.

Harassed port-of-embarkation officials discussed today that incoming vessels were being unloaded immediately upon arrival and veterans sent directly to camps for processing.

At one time shortly before Christmas, more than 30,000 vets were stranded at the processing camps of Haan and Anza, at Santa Ana Army Air Base, and aboard ships in the harbor. The 10,000 Santa Ana backlog has now been wiped out, the Army disclosed. It served for more than a week as a "hotel" for the returning vets, but did no processing.

United Nations Around the World Celebrate Peacetime New Year's.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Drinking to the future, kneeling in remembrance of the fallen, kissing strangers, singing the old songs with old friends, weeping for the wounded or shouting defiant joy into the sky of a changed world, earth's millions last night saluted a new year.

They knelt in Rome's churches, danced in Rio's streets, poured champagne in Paris glasses, met with kisses and glad cries in Hong Kong and Hollywood, or gathered with family and friends in quiet homes, and everywhere men had the knowledge that the world could never be the same after the epic year of 1945.

But the war was over, so the roar of celebration that went up from the cities of the United Nations was louder and wilder than it had been since 1939. In Germany and Japan, the defeated people hoped for better days.

Barricades in Times Square

Barricades were up in New York's Times Square, and thousands of extra policemen struggled goodnaturedly to keep riotous millions moving.

Fearful of repetition of the great destruction on Market street in the V-J day celebration, San Francisco merchants boarded up their stores and hundreds of police from city forces and military patrols rode the streets.

Down in Miami, 150,000 citizens took part in the King Orange jamboree parade. Dealers said Miamians bought $3,000,000 worth of liquor in the past few days.

Film stars crowded glittering night spots in Hollywood, and hotels in Los Angeles were jammed to the doors with throngs arriving for the Rose Bowl football game at Pasadena.

Holiday in Washington

Washington civil service employes, given three-day holidays, swarmed into dance halls and clubs in the largest, loudest and gayest celebration since the roaring 1920's. President Truman spent the evening aboard his yacht, where he was preparing two radio speeches on the State of the Union.

From Europe came the sounds of revelry in the great capitals of London, Paris and Moscow, the clinking of glasses, toasts of friendship. Chorus girls pranced across night club stages and champagne corks popped. But many of the people drinking wine, singing with some gaiety and laughter, were short on food.

In England, a word of warning came from the British war leader, Winston Churchill.

"We shall only win the peace as we have won the war—by character and hard work," Churchill told his fellow Britons. "There is no easy path to prosperity."

Speaking to France, President de Gaulle broadcast a new year message of encouragement, declaring that "in 1945 we triumphed in war, occupied the Rhine, and reestablished our domestic equilibrium. It is with ardor and with courage that we commence to live in the year 1946."

Gay Events in Russia

Thousands of parties were under way in all parts of the Soviet Union, with special gay events in Moscow's big hotels.

To the Chinese, still troubled by internal strife, President Chiang Kai-shek sent a new year statement appealing again for national unity.

Germans who had houses shivered in cold rooms because fuel supplies were low. There also was a food shortage.

Bewildered and listless, the Japanese heard their emperor admit to them in a new year rescript that he was not divine and brusquely inform them that they were not destined to rule the world. There was little gaiety in their fire-wrecked cities.

From across the oceans the earth's people looked to America as the golden land of plenty. And millions of Americans, who had worked hard and fought hard, to win a bitter war, joined millions of returned veterans to celebrate.

LONDON, DEC. 31-(AP)-WINSTON CHURCHILL TOLD THE BRITISH PEOPLE IN A NEW YEAR'S MESSAGE TODAY THAT "IN THEIR MOMENT OF TRIUMPH THEY WERE BEGUILED BY FALSE PROMISES AND NOW STAND IN DANGERS OF LOSING SOME FRUITS OF THE VICTORY."

THE MESSAGE OF THE FORMER PRIME MINISTER REFERRED TO THE LABOR PARTY'S ELECTION VICTORY LAST SUMMER. IT WAS ISSUED BY CHURCHILL AS GRAND MASTER OF THE PRIMROSE LEAGUE, A CONSERVATIVE PARTY ORGANIZATION.

"WE SHALL ONLY WIN THE PEACE AS WE HAVE WON THE WAR, BY CHARACTER AND HARD WORK," CHURCHILL SAID, "THERE IS NO EASY PATH TO PROSPERITY. EMPIRE AND LIBERTY STILL REMAIN THE CALL WHICH LEADS US ON."

NIGHT LEAD WAR CRIMES
by daniel de luce

JAN 1 1946

nuernberg, dec. 31-(ap)-hitler's last testament denunciation of his successor-apparent, hermann goering, was viewed today by the better informed among the captive nazi leaders as the result of a sustained plot by paul joseph goebbels and deputy fuehrer martin bormann to topple the german air chieftain from favor.

attorneys for the 21 nazi leaders whose trial will be resumed wednesday before the international military tribunal after a 12-day recess, informed their clients of the disclosures in hitler's last documents, and the news created a sensation among them.

propaganda minister goebbels and the crafty bormann long had plotted against the air marshal, some of the leaders indicated.

but to goering himself, hitler's denunciation came as no surprise.

SS. men had arrested goering when he was waiting in berchtesgaden april 23 for a message from hitler which would make him the new fuehrer, but instead he was arrested on hitler's orders, spirited away, and four days later notified by hitler that he was to be expelled from the party and his various offices for treason. a few hours later a message came from bormann, ordering goering's execution.

JAN 1 1946

bride of 36 hours, eva braun/.

doenitz said he was notified officially of his appointment as reichspresident and supreme commander. on his own initiative he began preliminaries to seeking peace. the preliminaries were under way at flensburg when a second message from berlin, listing a cabinet for him, informed him he must carry on the war. doenitz said he simply put the message in a drawer and proceeded with his own plans.

only adm. erich raeder and former security police chief ernst kaltenbrunner, among the defendants, still were unaware of the hitler documents. kaltenbrunner still is under treatment for the cranial hemorrhage which has kept him from the trial sessions, and raeder has been in ill health and remained abed.

the others for the most part received the news with shocked surprise.

most of them have indicated they lumped himmler with bormann and goebbels as those who retained influence with hitler to the bitter end. none could believe it possible the cold, cruel police overlord could fall so far from high nazi grace.

JAN 1946

goering himself blamed the confusion of the last battle for his fall from hitler's favor and the long distance attempt to have him executed.

"ABOVE ALL, I ENJOIN THE GOVERNMENT OF THE NATION AND THE PEOPLE TO UPHOLD THE RACIAL LAWS TO THE LIMIT AND RESIST MERCILESSLY THE POISONER OF ALL NATIONS, INTERNATIONAL JEWRY."

THE TESTAMENT, DATED APRIL 29, 1945, ALSO DISCLOSED THAT HITLER EXPELLED REICHSMARSHAL HERMANN GOERING AND GESTAPO CHIEF HEINRICH HIMMLER FROM THE NAZI RANKS FOR ATTEMPTING TO SEIZE CONTROL OF THE STATE, AND "NEGOTIATING WITH THE ENEMY WITHOUT MY KNOWLEDGE."

THE TEXT OF THE POLITICAL TESTAMENT--TOGETHER WITH TEXTS OF HITLER'S PERSONAL WILL, AN APPENDIX TO THE TESTAMENT BY PROPAGANDA MINISTER PAUL JOSEPH GOEBBELS AND A DOCUMENT RECORDING HITLER'S MARRIAGE TO EVA BRAUN- WAS RELEASED YESTERDAY BY ALLIED AUTHORITIES.

HITLER'S TESTAMENT INDICATED HE PREFERRED SUICIDE IN A REICHS-CHANCELLERY BUNKER TO TRIAL BEFORE AN ALLIED COURT.

"I SHALL NOT FALL INTO THE HANDS OF AN ENEMY WHO REQUIRES A NEW SPECTACLE PRESENTED BY THE JEWS TO DIVERT THEIR HYSTERICAL MASSES," HE SAID.

URGING GERMANS TO KEEP ALIVE THE NAZI DOCTRINE, HITLER SAID THE "ESTABLISHMENT OF A NATIONAL SOCIALIST STATE REPRESENTS THE WORK OF CENTURIES TO COME AND OBLIGES EACH INDIVIDUAL PERSON ALWAYS TO SERVE THE COMMON INTEREST BEFORE HIS OWN ADVANTAGE."

"THE SEED HAS BEEN SOWN THAT WILL GROW ONE DAY IN THE HISTORY OF GERMANY TO THE GLORIOUS REBIRTH OF THE NATIONAL SOCIALIST MOVEMENT," THE DOCUMENT ADDED.

THROUGHOUT THE TESTAMENT, HITLER BUILT HIMSELF UP AS A MARTYR WHO WISHED TO JOIN IN DEATH THE TROOPS WHO HAD FALLEN ON THE BATTLEFIELD.

"I CANNOT FORESAKE THE CITY THAT IS THE CAPITAL OF THIS STATE," HE SAID. "X X X I WISH TO SHARE MY FATE WITH THAT OF MILLIONS OF OTHERS. X X X I DIE WITH A JOYFUL HEART IN MY KNOWLEDGE OF THE IMMEASURABLE DEEDS AND ACHIEVEMENTS OF OUR SOLDIERS AT THE FRONT, OF OUR WOMEN AT HOME, THE ACHIEVEMENTS ON OUR PEASANTS AND WORKERS AND OF A CONTRIBUTION UNIQUE IN HISTORY, OF OUR YOUTH THAT BEARS MY NAME."

A29

IN HIS PERSONAL WILL, ALSO DATED APRIL 29, HITLER TOLD OF PLANS FOR SUICIDE AFTER MARRYING MISS BRAUN, HIS 35-YEAR-OLD MISTRESS.

"SHE WILL GO TO HER DEATH WITH ME AT HER OWN WISH AS MY WIFE," THE WILL SAID. "THIS WILL COMPENSATE US FOR WHAT WE HAVE BOTH LOST THROUGH MY WORK IN THE SERVICE OF MY PEOPLE."

"MY WIFE AND I CHOOSE TO DIE IN ORDER TO ESCAPE THE SHAME OF OVERTHROW OR CAPITULATION," THE WILL ADDED. "IT IS OUR WISH FOR OUR BODIES TO BE CREMATED IMMEDIATELY X X X."

HITLER LEFT HIS PERSONAL POSSESSIONS "IN SO FAR AS THEY ARE WORTH" TO THE NAZI PARTY, AND SAID THAT PAINTINGS HE HAD COLLECTED SHOULD BE PLACED IN A GALLERY "IN MY HOME TOWN OF LINZ ON THE DANUBE."

MARTIN BORMANN, HITLER'S DEPUTY, WAS NAMED EXECUTOR. BORMANN, GOEBBELS AND NICOLAUS VON BELOW WITNESSED THE WILL.

THE HITLER DOCUMENTS AND THE APPENDIX BY GOEBBELS WERE RELEASED BY THE U.S.THIRD ARMY AFTER BRITISH OFFICIALS AT HERFORD HAD MADE THEM PUBLIC IN THE BRITISH ZONE.

THE DOCUMENTS WERE RECOVERED BY AMERICAN INTELLIGENCE AGENTS. THE BRITISH ALSO SEIZED A MESSENGER WHO CARRIED A DUPLICATE SET OF THE DOCUMENTS, PLUS THE GOEBBELS APPENDIX.

THIRD ARMY OFFICERS AT FIRST DECLINED TO RELEASE THE TEXTS, SAYING THEY CONTAINED "POLITICAL DYNAMITE" AND "WEEKS OF INVESTIGATION" WOULD BE REQUIRED BEFORE THE TEXTS COULD BE MADE PUBLIC.

THE GOEBBELS APPENDIX, ALSO DATED APRIL 29, SAID THE PROPAGANDA MINISTER HAD REJECTED HITLER'S COMMAND TO LEAVE BERLIN AND BECOME CHANCELLOR OF A NEW GOVERNMENT.

"IN THE NIGHTMARE OF TREASON WHICH SURROUNDS THE FUEHRER IN THESE MOST CRITICAL DAYS OF WAR, THERE MUST BE SOME PEOPLE TO STAY WITH HIM UNCONDITIONALLY UNTIL DEATH," THE APPENDIX SAID.

BERLIN FELL THREE DAYS LATER, AND RED ARMY SOLDIERS IDENTIFIED THE CHARRED BODIES OF A MAN, WOMAN AND CHILDREN AS GOEBBELS AND HIS FAMILY.

(ADVANCE) WARSAW, DEC. 31-(AP)-MICHIGAN STATE SENATOR STANLEY NOWAK OF DETROIT SAID IN AN INTERVIEW TODAY THAT HE BELIEVED A LARGE PART OF POLAND'S ECONOMIC PROBLEMS WOULD BE SOLVED WHEN SUFFICIENT TRANSPORT BECOMES AVAILABLE.

NOWAK, A MEMBER OF A GROUP OF FIVE AMERICANS TOURING POLAND TO GET A FIRST HAND VIEW OF CONDITIONS, SAID AN ACUTE LACK OF ALL FORMS OF MECHANIZED TRANSPORT IS CONTRIBUTING TO THE NATION'S ECONOMIC ILLS AND SKYROCKETING COSTS OF LIVING.

REGARDING THE PRESENT WARSAW REGIME NOWAK COMMENTED:

"THE FACT THAT ALL POLES ARE WORKING HARD, COOPERATING WITH THE GOVERNMENT TO REORGANIZE THE COUNTRY, IS CERTAINLY AN INDICATION THAT THE PRESENT REGIME DOES HAVE THE CONFIDENCE OF A VAST NUMBER OF PEOPLE."

THE QUESTION OF WHETHER THE GOVERNMENT IS TRULY REPRESENTATIVE IS ONE WHICH MUST BE ANSWERED BY THE PEOPLE AT THE FORTHCOMING ELECTIONS, NOWAK ADDED.

A TOUR OF WARSAW CONVINCED HIM THE DESTRUCTION "WAS FAR GREATER THAN I EVER VISUALIZED," ADDING THAT THE NATION'S LOSSES WERE NOT ONLY MATERIAL BUT MORAL, RESULTING IN "A LOSS OF THE SENSE OF VALUE OF HUMAN LIFE AND VIRTUES."

NOWAK SAID HE BELIEVED POLAND "HAS HAD FAR TOO LITTLE MATERIAL ASSISTANCE FROM THE ALLIES IN PROPORTION TO HER SUFFERING. THE GOVERNMENT AND PEOPLE ARE DUE MUCH CREDIT FOR PROGRESS ALREADY MADE IN STRAIGHTENING OUT THEIR ECONOMIC LIKE."

HE DECLARED THAT MORE TRANSPORTIFACILITIES AND FOREIGN LOANS WOULD STIMULATE EMPLOYMENT AND CONTRIBUTE TOWARD A LOWERING OF THE COST OF LIVING.

NOWAK'S GROUP IS NOW COMPLETING A BROAD SWING AROUND THE COUNTRY, INCLUDING VISITS TO FACTORY AND MINING DISTRICTS.

N ACCOMPANYING HIM ARE STATE REPRESENTATIVE VINCENT KLEIN OF DETROIT, PROF. ANTHONY KARCZMARCZYK, PRESIDENT OF THE KOSCIUSZKO LEAGUE, HAMTRAMCK, MICH.; HENRY PODOLSKY, EDITOR OF THE NEWSPAPER GLOS LUDOWY, DETROIT; THADDEUS KANTOR, CORRESPONDENT FOR THE JOURNAL OUR WORLD, DETROIT.

JAN 1 1946
JAPAN IS BY NO MEANS A DEMOCRACY NOR IS IT READY NOW TO BECOME ONE. NEITHER IS IT THE SAME NATION IT WAS FOUR MONTHS AGO. CHANGES HAVE BEEN GREAT AND, IN MANY INSTANCES, FUNDAMENTAL.
FOUR MONTHS AGO, THESE OBEDIENT PEOPLE WAITED APPREHENSIVELY FOR AN IMPERIAL BROADCAST WHICH THEY THOUGHT WOULD SEND THEM INTO A FINAL SUICIDAL CAMPAIGN AGAINST ALLIED FORCES.
SURRENDER STUNNED THE NATION. MOST FANATICS, THEIR DREAMS EXPLODED, RATHER TYPICALLY CRAWLED INTO OBSCURITY. WITH EQUAL TYPICALNESS, THE PEOPLE REPUDIATED THE LEADERS THEY ONCE WERE WILLING TO FOLLOW AND GRAVITATED TOWARD POWER -- THAT OF THE CONQUERING ALLIES.
INSTEAD OF THE GUERRILLA WARFARE WHICH MIGHT HAVE BEEN EXPECTED,
THE OCCUPATION FORCES FOUND THEMSELVES GREETED ALMOST AS LIBERATORS.
THE EMPEROR ISSUED AN ORDER. THE JAPANESE DID ANOTHER OF THEIR AMAZING FLIPFLOPS. THE WAR WAS OVER. THOUSANDS OF LIVES WERE SAVEX
ANOTHER OF THEIR
AMAZING FLIPFLOPS. THE WAR WAS OVER. THOUSANDS OF LIVES WERE SAVED.
THE PEOPLE REDISCOVERED THAT THEY LIKED AMERICANS AND THE COMFORTS THEY BROUGHT. EIGHT YEARS OF DARK SEVERITY HAD MADE THEM MORE ANXIOUS TO LAUGH AND FORGET. FRATERNIZATION WAS AND IS COMMONPLACE.

30.24-3274

MORE FUNDAMENTALLY, THE PEOPLE HAVE CHANGED. THEY STILL ARE OPPOSED STRONGLY TO DETHRONEMENT OF THE EMPEROR BUT RECENTLY THEY ABSORBED WITHOUT A MURMUR THE ELIMINATION OF STATE SHINTOISM WITH ITS DIRECT ENCROACHMENT ON THE RULER'S POSITION. THE WAR ROLE AND PRESENT STATUS OF THE EMPEROR ARE DISCUSSED OPENLY. THE SUBJECT, ONCE INVIOLATE, HAS BECOME A POLITICAL ISSUE.

GENERAL MACARTHUR AND HIS ADVISORS TURNED THE DIRECTIVE CRANK WITH BEWILDERING RAPIDITY, STRIPPING AWAY MOST OF THE ARTIFICIAL STATE EDIFICE WHICH PERMITTED MILITARIST AND INDUSTRIAL POWER.

THE PEOPLE, ONLY HALF UNDERSTANDING, GENERALLY APPLAUDED. THEY LIKED THE THOUGHT OF FREEDOM, EVEN THOUGH THEY KNEW LITTLE ABOUT THEIR SUPPORT MADE GOVERNMENTAL COOPERATION MORE CERTAIN AND GUARANTEE SWIFT LEGAL REFORMATION WITH A MINIMUM OF TROUBLE.

BUT THOSE ENTRENCHED IN POWER MOVED ONLY WHEN ORDERED TO DO SO. IN THAT, THEY UNDOUBTED

Y WILL NOT CHANGE.

DO SO. IN THAT, THEY UNDOUBTEDLY WILL NOT CHANGE. THE MERE PRINTING OF DIRECTIVES IS INSUFFICIENT TO GIVE THE PEOPLE THE POWER WHICH THE ALLIES HOPE WILL RAISE THE BULWARK AGAINST FUTURE WARS OF AGGRESSION.

POLITICALLY, THE HEADS HAVE BEEN LOPPED OFF MOST TOP MEN. STILL REMAINING UNTOUCHED ARE THOUSANDS OF FANATICAL AND ONCE DETERMINED UNDERLINGS -- THE ARMY AND KEMPEI TAI OFFICERS, BUREAUCRATS, POLITICIANS, CIVILIAN CAMP FOLLOWERS AND CAREFULLY INDOCTRINATED YOUTHS. AS YET THE PEOPLE, WORRIED BY PERSONAL PROBLEMS AND UNTUTORED IN THEIR RESPONSIBILITIES, WOULD BE ONLY A SAND LEVEE AGAINST THESE.

THE PEOPLE WILL GO TO THE POLLS EARLY THIS YEAR AT A DATE TO BE DETERMINED TO MATCH THEIR UNDIRECTED STRENGTH AGAINST THE POWERFUL POLITICIANS. THINKING JAPANESE HOPE AND EXPECT HEADQUARTERS BEFOREHAND TO EVEN THE ODDS BY DISQUALIFYING THE MACHINE-MADE POLITICIANS.

ELECTION RESULTS MOST PROBABLY WILL FURTHER THE EVIDENCE THAT INGRAINED TEACHINGS OF CENTURIES -- MINIMIZING THE INDIVIDUAL, GLORIFYING THE STATE -- CANNOT BE ELIMINATED EXCEPT BY YEARS, NOT MONTHS OF PATIENT GUIDANCE #

TOKYO,DEC.31-(AP)-EMPEROR HIROHITO'S BROADCAST AUG. 15 ANNOUNCING THE END OF THE WAR TOPPED JAPAN'S 10 MAJOR NEWS STORIES OF 1945, AS COMPILED BY KYODO NEWS AGENCY.

THE BROADCAST WAS AN UNPRECEDENTED EVENT IN JAPAN'S HISTORY. THE EMPEROR'S VOICE WAS HEARD FOR THE FIRST TIME ON THE RADIO BY MILLIONS OF JAPANESE.

KYODO'S LIST OF STORIES, NUMBERED CHRONOLOGICALLY AND NOT IN ORDER OF IMPORTANCE, FOLLOWS:

1--THE TOKYO AIR RAID OF MARCH 3, WHEN 234,000 HOUSES WERE DESTROYED, 1,045,000 PERSONS MADE HOMELESS AND AN ESTIMATED 100,000 PERSONS KILLED. YODO SAID THIS RAID EQUALLED THE DESTRUCTIVENESS OF THE 1923 EARTHQUAKE AND "DECIDED THE WAR FAE OF JAPAN."

2--THE AT

DESTRUCTIVENESS OF THE 1923 EARTHQUAKE AND "DECIDED THE WAR FATE OF JAPAN."

2--THE ATOMIC BOMBING OF HIROSHIMA AUG. 6, WHICH LED JAPAN TO ASK FOR PEACE.

3--RUSSIA'S PARTICIPATION IN THE WAR AUG. 9.

4--THE EMPEROR' BROADCAST AUG. 15.

5--ARRIVAL OF AMERICAN FORCES AT ATSUGI AIRFIED TO BEGIN THE OCCUPATION OF JAPAN AUG. 28.

6--SIGNING OF THE SURRENDER DOCUMENT ABOARD THE U.S.S. MISSOURI IN TOKYO BAY SEPT. 2.

7--GENERAL MACARTHUR'S FIRST ANNOUNCEMENT OF JAPANESE TO BE TRIED ON WAR CRIMES CHARGES, SEPT. 11, AND THE SUICIDE ATTEMPT THAT DAY BY GEN.HIDEKI TOJO, PREMIER WHEN PEARL HARBOR WAS ATTACKED, WHO WAS ON THE LIST.

8--RELEASE OF JAPANESE POLITICAL PRISONERS OCT. 17 BY IMPERIAL RESCRIPT AND AMNESTY.

9--DISSOLUTION OF THE ZAIBATSU (BIG FAMILY TRUSTS) NOV. 7.

10--ABOLITION OF THE OFFICIAL PRICES ON FRESH FISH AND VEGETABLES, NOV. 20.

SEOUL, KORE, DEC. 31-(AP)-THOUSANDS OF KOREANS JOINED IN AN ORDERLY PARADE TODAY IN A MASS PROTEST AGAINST THE HIGHLY DETESTED FOUR-POWER TRUSTEESHIP SET UP BY THE MOSCOW PACT.

THE DEMONSTRATION WAS SKILLFULLY ENGINEERED BY A PROVISIONAL GOVERNMENT ORGANIZATION RECENTLY RETURNED FROM EXILE IN CHUNGKING. WHETHER IT INCLUDED MUCH REPRESENTATION OF LEFTIST GROUPS WAS HIGHLY QUESTIONABLE.

AN ESTIMATED 20,000 TO 30,000 PARADED ICE-COVERED STREETS OF THIS CAPITAL CITY, SHOUTING OUTBURSTS AGAINST ANYTHING RESEMBLING A TRUSTEESHIP. THEY DEMANDED INDEPENDENCE NOW.

PARADE MARSHALS, ARMED WITH CLUBS, NUDGED LAGGING MARCHERS BACK INTO LINE AND ON OCCASION RECRUITED NEW STRENGTH FROM SIDEWALK ONLOOKERS--AGAINST WITH PERSUASIVE BUT FIRM SHOW OF CLUBS.

A115KX

THERE WERE INDICATIONS THAT ALL WAS NOT VOLUNTARY OR ENTHUSIASTIC. SERVANTS AT THE RESIDENCE OF LT.GEN.JOHN R.HODGE, OCCUPATION COMMANDER FOR AMERICAN-OCCUPIED SOUTHERN KOREA, SAID THEY WERE CHASED HOME BY MEN ARMED WITH KNIVES LAST NIGHT AND WERE WARNED NOT TO WORK TODAY. THEY DID NOT SHOW UP.

OTHER KOREANS SAID THEY SIMILARLY WERE THREATENED TO STAY AWAY FROM WORK, AND TO PARADE. THESE INCLUDED EMPLOYES OF THE AMERICAN RED CROSS.

DEMONSTRATORS TWO DAYS AGO DEMANDED THAT ALL KOREAN EMPLOYES OF OCCAPATION FORCES QUIT THEIR JOBS IN PROTEST.

(THERE STILL IS NO REPORT OF KOREAN REACTION IN THE RUSSIAN-OCCUPIED NORTHERN HALF OF THE COUNTRY.)

A115KX

AMERICAN TROOPS REMAINED OUT OF THE PICTURE, LETTING THE KOREANS MARCH AND HOPING THEY WOULD EXHAUST THEIR ENERGY WITHOUT RESORTING TO VIOLENCE. TWO DAYS AGO, DEMONSTRATORS FOUGHT IN THE STREETS AND THREW ROCKS AT SOME AMERICAN SOLDIERS.

AS A PRECAUTION, HOWEVER, HALFTRACKS AND THREE TANK DESTROYERS WERE DRAWN UP NEAR HEADQUARTERS AND TROOPS WERE ALERTED.

WASHINGTON,DEC. 31-(AP)-THE ADVENT OF 1946 FINDS THE UNITED STATES, ONCE ALOOF FROM FOREIGN TROUBLES, NOW PLAYING AN ACTIVE PART IN SETTLING PROBLEMS IN OTHER COUNTRIES, GREAT AND SMALL, ALL OVER THE WORLD.

ONCE THE U.S. WENT TO WAR, MOST AMERICANS PROBABLY ASSUMED THEIR GOVERNMENT WOULD CONTINUE INDEFINITELY ITS ALLIANCE WITH THE MAJOR ALLIES, AND HELP PROMOTE LASTING PEACE THROUGH SOME TYPE OF WORLD ORGANIZATION.

MANY REALIZED THIS COUNTRY WOULD HAVE FOR A LONG PERIOD A VITAL INTEREST IN BEATEN GERMANY AND JAPAN. SOME WERE AWARE THAT THE U.S. HAD PLEDGED THE PHILIPPINE COMMONWEALTH COMPLETE INDEPENDENCE IN 1946.

PROBABLY FEW THOUGHT, HOWEVER, THAT WITHIN MONTHS AFTER VICTORY,

30.24-32773

THE U.S. WOULD BE GRAPPLING WITH SUCH ONCE-REMOTE PROBLEMS AS:
SETTING UP, IN COOPERATION WITH THE RUSSIANS, A NEW GOVERNMENT FOR KOREA.
THE AMOUNT OF BRITISH REPARATIONS TO BE EXACTED FROM SIAM.
HOW BEST TO HELP RESTORE PEACE AND ORDER IN AN IRANIAN PROVINCE CALLED AZERBAIJAN.
BUT THE WAR HAD BEEN A WORLD WAR AND THE U.S. HAD BECOME TIED UP FOR KEEPS WITH THE WORLD.
ASIDE FROM INTERESTS IN GERMANY AND JAPAN--AND ITS PROBLEMS IN BOTH ENEMY COUNTRIES ARE MANY--THE U.S. FINDS ITSELF AT YEAR'S END DEALING WITH THESE SITUATIONS:

A13WX
1. THE FAR EAST:
CHINA--GEN.GEORGE C.MARSHALL IS TRYING TO GET CHINESE NATIONALISTS AND COMMUNISTS TO END CIVIL STRIFE AND GET TOGETHER IN A UNIFIED, BROADLY-DEMOCRATIC GOVERNMENT. U.S. TROOPS ARE STILL IN CHINA BUT PRESIDENT TRUMAN PROMISED THEY WOULD BE REMOVED AS SOON AS ALL JAPANESE FORCES THERE HAD BEEN DISARMED AND REPATRIATED.
KOREA--THE U.S. AND RUSSIA ARE ABOUT TO FORM A JOINT COMMISSION TO HELP THE KOREANS SET UP A PROVISIONAL GOVERNMENT AFTER MANY YEARS UNDER JAPANESE DOMINATION.
SIAM--THE U.S. FINALLY HAS GIVEN THE GREEN LIGHT TO A WARENDING AGREEMENT BETWEEN BRITAIN AND SIAM AFTER PURSUADING THE BRITISH TO LOWER THEIR REPARATIONS DEMANDS ON THE COUNTRY WITH WHICH AMERICA NEVER CONSIDERED ITSELF AT WAR.
NETHERLANDS EAST INDIES--THERE IS INCREASING CONCERN IN WASHINGTON OVER THE STRIFE IN JAVA BETWEEN INDONESIAN NATIONALISTS ON ONE HAND AND THE BRITISH AND DUTCH ON THE OTHER. THE U.S. SHARED RESPONSIBILITY FOR THE ORIGINAL DECISION TO SEND IN BRITISH TROOPS TO DISARM THE JAPANESE, BUT IS TRYING TO MAKE CLEAR IT WAS NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR THE WAY IN WHICH THAT OPERATION IS BEING CARRIED OUT.
2. THE MIDDLE EAST:
PALESTINE--AFTER THE BRITISH REFUSED TO ACCEDE TO PRESIDENT TRUMAN'S REQUEST THAT 100,000 HOMELESS EUROPEAN JEWS BE PERMITTED TO IMMIGRATE IMMEDIATELY TO PALESTINE, THE TWO NATIONS SET UP A COMMITTEE TO STUDY THE SUBJECT. IT MEETS FOR THE FIRST TIME IN WASHINGTON JANUARY 5.

A14WX
IRAN--RUSSIA DECLINED A U.S. SUGGESTION THAT ALL SOVIET, BRITISH AND AMERICAN TROOPS BE REMOVED FROM THE OIL-RICH COUNTRY BY JANUARY 1. AN UPRISING IN AZERBAIJAN PROVINCE, WHICH THE U.S. BELIEVE THE RUSSIANS ASSISTED, SET UP AN AUTONOMOUS REGIME. THE FOREIGN MINISTERS TALKED AT MOSCOW ON IRANIAN PROBLEMS BUT REACHED NO AGREEMENT.
TURKEY--SOME U.S. OFFICIALS REGARD THE TURKISH-RUSSIAN SITUATION AS POTENTIALLY THE MOST CRITICAL IN THE AREA. THE U.S. IS TRYING TO BRING ABOUT A NEW PACT ON ACCESS TO THE DARDANELLED STRAITS WHICH WOULD SATISFY MOSCOW.
3. BALKANS:
THE U.S. RECOGNIZED THE NEW YOGOSLAV REPUBLIC HEADED BY MARSHAL TITO, ALTHOUGH DISAPPROVING ITS TACTICS AND THE ELECTIONS WHICH BROUGHT IT INTO EXISTENCE. THE U.S. IS PREPARING TO RECOGNIZE REGIMES IN THE FORMER ENEMY STATES OF BULGARIA AND ROMANIA WHEN THEY BROADEN THEIR REPRESENTATION.

4. THE MEDITERRANEAN:
GREECE--THE U.S. IS PREPARING TO SEND 600 OBSERVERS INTO ALL PARTS OF GREECE FOR THE MARCH ELECTIONS, HOPING FREE BALLOTING MAY RELIEVE THE EXPLOSIVE SITUATION IN THAT TRAGIC COUNTRY.
ITALY--THE U.S. IS RELAXING THE ARMISTICE TERMS IT HELPED IMPOSE ON ITALY AND SHOWING MORE SIGNS OF WANTING TO HELP THE FORMER FASCIST COUNTRY REGAIN ITS ECONOMIC FEET.

A15WX
SPAIN--THE U.S. DISAPPROVE VIGOROUSLY OF GENERALISSIMO FRANCO'S GOVERNMENT AND SEEMS HEADED FOR A DIPLOMATIC BREAK. THERE WILL BE DISCUSSIONS ON THE SUBJECT EARLY IN 1946 WITH BRITAIN AND FRANCE.
5. LATIN AMERICA:
WHAT TO DO ABOUT THE PERON-DOMINATED DICTATORSHIP IN ARGENTINA IS THE NUMBER 1 PROBLEM. THE U.S. IS SUPPORTING A URUGUAYAN PROPOSAL UNDER WHICH 20 AMERICAN REPUBLICS COULD COLLECTIVELY INTERVENE IN THE AFFAIRS OF THE 21ST, MEANING ARGENTINA, IF THAT REGIME VIOLATED BASIC FREEDOMS AND INTERNATIONAL OBLIGATIONS.

(ADVANCE) NEW YORK, DEC 31-(AP)-NINE NEWSPAPER EDITORS TONIGHT LISTED THE ATOMIC BOMB, INDUSTRIAL PEACE, REHABILITATION OF DISPLACED POPULATIONS, AND DOMESTIC HOUSING AND COMMODITY SHORTAGES AMONG ITEMS OF UNFINISHED BUSINESS FACING THE NATION AND THE WORLD IN 1946.

IN A TALK PREPARED FOR DELIVERY ON THE ANNUAL NBC PROGRAM, "THE EDITORS SPEAK," F.W. BONFILS, BUSINESS MANAGER OF THE DENVER POST, SAID THE NATION'S INDUSTRIAL FUTURE PRESENTED "ALMOST AS PERPLEXING A PROBLEM AND ONE ALMOST AS FULL OF 'DYNAMITE' AS THE ATOMIC BOMB."

FRANK AHLGREN, EDITOR OF THE MEMPHIS COMMERCIAL APPEAL, DECLARED: "THE PROBLEM OF THE ATOM AND HOW WE HANDLE IT IN 1946 MAKES ALL ELSE INSIGNIFICANT," ADDING: "THE PATTERN FOR ITS USE MUST BE MADE IN THE NEAR FUTURE OR GOD HELP US ALL."

WILLIAM S. PACKER, CHIEF EDITORIAL WRITER OF THE [illegible]ON GLOBE, DECLARED: "CAN WE WAR OFF T GRIM THREAT OF I DECLARED: "CAN WE WARD OFF THE GRIM THREAT OF INFLATION WHICH HAS SO OFTEN AT VARIOUS PLACES IN THE PAST TRANSFORMED A CURRENCY INTO NOTHING BUT SCRAPS OF PAPER?

"BY WHAT MEANS ARE ADJUSTMENTS TO BE MADE BETWEEN OWNERSHIP, MANAGERMENT AND LABOR, SO THAT THE FLOW OF CONSUMER GOODS SHALL MEET THE NEEDS OF 140 MILLIONS OF AMERICANS?"

CHARLES V. STANSELL, ASSOCIATE EDITOR OF THE KANSAS CITY STAR, SAID THE MIDDLE WEST "MUST AWAIT WITH THE REST OF THE COUNTRY THE CLARIFICATION OF OFFICIAL POLICIES ON WAGES, PRICES AND RELATED MATTERS--AND AWAIT THE ASSURANCE OF LEADERSHIP IN GOVERNMENT THAT WILL MATCH THE ENTERPRISE AND INDUSTRY OF A PEOPLE."

ALFRED E. KIRCHHOFER, MANAGING EDITOR OF THE BUFFALO EVENING NEWS, DECLARED: "OUR STATESMEN, IN THE SPIRIT OF THE PRINCE OF PEACE, MUST CARRY OUT THE PLEDGES OF THE ATLANTIC CHARTER. AMERICAN FOREIGN POLICY MUST BE DEVELOPED TO MERIT THE SUPPORT OF ALL SO THAT WE DO NOT NULLIFY OUR HOPES BY DIVISIONS AT HOME."

JOHN T.O'ROURKE, EDITOR OF THE WASHINGTON DAILY NEWS, SAID "NEXT YEAR'S FIRST BUSINESS FOR US ALL IS TO SUPPORT THE EFFORT TO EVOLVE A BODY OF JUST INTERNATIONAL LAW, TO GIVE A GREATER VOICE IN WORLD GOVERNANCE TO SMALLER NATIONS."

IN A PLEA FOR "AN ERA OF GOOD WILL" BASIL L.WALTERS, EXECUTIVE EDITOR OF THE CHICAGO DAILY NEWS, SAID: "LET'S BE DONE WITH VIOLENCE. WE HAVE LEARNED BY BITTER EXPERIENCE THAT VIOLENCE OF WORDS LEADS EVENTUALLY TO VIOLENCE OF ARMS."

OTHER PARTICIPANTS WERE NEIL MAC NEIL, ASSISTANT NIGHT MANAGING EDITOR OF THE NEW YORK TIMES, AND FRANCIS P.LOCKE, ASSOCIATE EDITOR OF THE MIAMI DAILY NEWS.

THE CHINESE CENTRAL GOVERNMENT MADE THREE SIGNIFICANT MOVES FOR EARLY SETTLEMENT OF CHINA'S UNDECLARED CIVIL WAR TODAY AS TROUBLES FLARED ELSEWHERE IN THE ORIENT.

GENERALISSIMO CHIANG KAI-SHEK IN A NEW YEAR'S DAY MESSAGE MADE AN OUTRIGHT BID TO CHINESE COMMUNISTS TO ENTER A UNIFIED GOVERNMENT AND THEN CALLED THE LONG AWAITED PEACE PARLEY OF THE POLITICAL CONSULTATIVE COUNCIL FOR JAN. 10.

AT THE SAME TIME A CHINESE COMMUNIST PROPOSAL FOR A TRUCE IN HOSTILITIES WAS COUNTERED WITH A PLAN CALLING FOR BOTH FACTIONS TO MEET WITH PRESIDENT TRUMAN'S SPECIAL ENVOY, GEN.GEORGE C.MARSHALL.

CHIANG'S NEW YEAR'S MESSAGE SAID LEADERS OF OTHER POLITICAL PARTIES WOULD BE WELCOMED INTO THE GOVERNMENT BEFORE THE NATIONAL ASSEMBLY MEETS MAY 5 TO CONSIDER A NEWW CONSTITUTION FOR CHINA.

ANGRY KOREANS RECEIVED THE BIG THREE FOREIGN MINISTERS PLAN FOR GOVERNMENT OF THEIR COUNTRY BY A COMMISSION AND A TRUSTEESHIP WITH RIOTS, WORK STOPPAGES AND BY THROWING STONES AT AMERICAN TROOPS IN SEOUL.

IN TOKYO GENERAL MACARTHUR DENIED HE HAD APPROVED THE FOREIGN MINISTERS PLANS FOR A JOINT ALLIED CONTROL COUNCIL FOR JAPAN AND SAID HE HAD NOT BEEN CONSULTED DURING THE MOSCOW SESSIONS.

SOURCES CLOSE TO MACARTHUR SAID CONFUSION ALREADY HAD BEEN CAUSED AMONG THE JAPANESE BY THE PROPOSAL, WHICH MAY CAUSE THE GENERAL TO LOSE FACE IN A COUNTRY WHERE FACE IS ALL IMPORTANT. FEARS WERE EXPRESSED THE JOINT CONTROL PLAN MAY RESULT IN A SLACKENING OF JAPANESE EFFORT TO PUT INTO EFFECT DIRECTIVES ALREADY ISSUED.

(CX)..PRESIDENT TRUMAN TOOK STEPS LAST NIGHT (MONDAY) TO HEAD OFF A NATION-WIDE STEEL STRIKE SET FOR JAN.14 BY APPOINTING A FACT-FINDING BOARD AND INSTRUCTING THE OPA TO REVIEW THE PRICE CEILING STRUCTURE ON STEEL PRODUCTS.

LAST NIGHT'S ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE PRESIDENT WAS NOT ACCOMPANIED BY A REQUEST TO THE UNITED STEEL WORKERS UNION (CIO) TO POSTPONE THE SCHEDULED STRIKE WHICH MIGHT INVOLVE 700,000 WORKERS. ALTHOUGH ONLY UNITED STATES STEEL CORPORATION WAS INVOLVED IN NEGOTIATIONS WITH THE CIO WHICH BROKE UP IN DEADLOCK OCT.23, THE UNION'S SCHEDULED STRIKE WOULD AFFECT MORE THAN 700 STEEL, IRON ORE AND ALUMINUM OPERATIONS WHOSE WAGE POLICIES TRADITIONALLY FOLLOW THE U.S.STEEL PATTERN.

APPOINTED TO THE FACT-FINDING BOARD WERE ROBERT I.MCDONOUGH, ASSOCIATE JUSTICE OF THE UTAH SUPREME COURT; CHIEF JUSTICE JAMES M. DOUGLAS OF THE MISSOURI SUPREME COURT, AND NATHAN P.FEINSINGER, PUBLIC MEMBER OF THE EXPIRING WAR LABOR BOARD AND PROFESSOR OF LAW AT THE UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN.

JAN 1 1946

THE OPA WAS INSTRUCTED TO REVIEW THE PRICE CEILING STRUCTURE ON STEEL PRODUCTS WITH A VIEW TO DETERMINING BY NOT LATER THAN FEB. 1 "WHETHER ANY PRICE INCREASES WOULD BE PROPER." THE FACT-FINDING BOARD WAS REQUESTED TO REPORT BY FEB.10.

A NEW EFFORT TO AVERT A STRIKE OF 19,000 WESTERN ELECTRIC COMPANY EMPLOYES SET FOR THURSDAY FAILED YESTERDAY. FRANK FITZSIMMONS, PRESIDENT OF THE EMPLOYES ASSOCIATION, SAID THE WALKOUT MIGHT BE FOLLOWED BY A SYMPATHY STRIKE OF 450,000 TELEPHONE WORKERS IN AN AFFILIATED UNION, THE NATIONAL FEDERATION OF TELEPHONE WORKERS.

YESTERDAY WESTERN ELECTRIC OFFICIALS MET WITH A U.S.CONCILIATOR AFTER THE EMPLOYES INDICATED WILLINGNESS TO COMPROMISE THEIR 30 PER CENT WAGE INCREASE DEMAND. THE CONCILIATOR, JACOB MANDELBAUM, SAID AFTER THE MEETING THAT THE COMPANY "IS NOT WILLING TO MAKE AN ADDITIONAL OFFER OVER WHAT HAS BEEN ALREADY PROPOSED (15PER CENT)."

IN DETROIT YESTERDAY (MONDAY) GENERAL MOTORS CORPORATION AND THE CIO UNITED AUTOMOBILE WORKERS UNION EXPRESSED A WILLINGNESS TO RESUME CONFERENCES IN A DISPUTE THAT HAS KEPT 175,000 PRODUCTION WORKERS IDLE FOR NEARLY SIX WEEKS. MEANWHILE BOTH SIDES AWAITED A REPORT OF PRESIDENT TRUMAN'S FACT-FINDING COMMITTEE, EXPECTED THURSDAY, ON RECOMMENDATIONS IN THE UNION'S 30 PER CENT WAGE INCREASE DEMAND.

WALTER P.REUTHER, UAW-CIO VICE-PRESIDENT, SAID THE UNION AND GENERAL MOTORS OFFICIALS WILL BE READY TOMORROW TO RESUME NEGOTIATIONS

RESUMPTION OF SERVICE WAS SET FOR THURSDAY BY GREYHOUND BUS LINES SERVING COMMUNITIES IN 13 EASTERN AND MIDWESTERN STATES AS 4,000 EMPLOYES VOTED TO END THEIR TWO-MONTH-OLD STRIKE.

A SPOKESMAN FOR THE STRIKERS, WHO LEFT THEIR JOBS ON NOV.1 IN A DISPUTE OVER WAGES WITH THE GREYHOUND COMPANIES, SAID, HOWEVER, ANOTHER STRIKE WOULD BE CALLED IF THE UNION DID NOT APPROVE A REPORT TO BE SUBMITTED BY A FACT-FINDING COMMITTEE STUDYING THE WAGE ISSUE.

STATES AFFECTED BY THE STOPPAGE WERE ILLINOIS, INDIANA, MICHIGAN, OHIO, MISSOURI, PENNSYLVANIA, NEW JERSEY, NEW YORK, CONNECTICUT, RHODE ISLAND, MASSACHUSETTS, VERMONT, NEW HAMPSHIRE, MAINE, KENTUCKY, DELAWARE, MARYLAND, VIRGINIA AND THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

THE END OF THE GREYHOUND WALKOUT FOLLOWED A TWO-DAY CONFERENCE OF COMPANY OFFICIALS AND REPRESENTATIVES OF THE AMALGAMATED ASSOCIATION OF STREET, ELECTRIC RAILWAY AND MOTOR COACH EMPLOYES OF AMERICA (AFL) WITH A U.S.CONCILIATOR.

JAN 1 1946

DELAY OR CANCELLATION OF A SCHEDULED STRIKE JAN.7 OF 50,000 WESTERN UNION EMPLOYES APPEARED A POSSIBILITY TODAY AS THE WAR LABOR BOARD FORMALLY DIRECTED A WAGE INCREASE AVERAGING 12 CENTS AN HOUR FOR BOTH CIO AND AFL WORKERS. ANNOUNCEMENT OF THE WAGE BOOST WAS ONE OF THE BOARD'S LAST ACTS BEFORE GOING OUT OF EXISTENCE LAST NIGHT.

IN NEW YORK SPOKESMEN FOR WESTERN UNION AND THE CIO-AMERICAN COMMUNICATIONS ASSOCIATION DECLINED TO COMMENT ON THE BOARD'S DECISION PENDING RECEIPT OF THE TEXT OF THE RULING. PREVIOUSLY, W.L.ALLEN PRESIDENT OF THE AFL-COMMERCIAL TELEGRAPHERS UNION, SAID THE DECISION, WHICH HAD BEEN REPORTED UNOFFICIALLY SUNDAY, WAS "VERY ENCOURAGING."

THE WESTERN UNION STRIKE HAD BEEN CALLED IN SUPPORT OF A DEMAND FOR HIGHER WAGES.
